That all articles known as oleomargarine, butterine, imitation butter, or imitation cheese, or any substance in the semblance of butter or cheese not the usual product of the dairy and not made exclusively of pure and unadulerated milk or cream, transported into any State or Territory, or remaining therein for use, consumption, sale, or storage therein, shall, upon arrival within the limits of such State or Territory, be subject to the operation and effect of the laws of such State or Territory enacted in the exercise of its police powers to the same extent and in the same manner as though such articles or substances had been produced in such State or Territory, and shall not be exempt therefrom by reason of being introduced therein in original packages or otherwise.

As you see, all that this bill provides is that when oleomargarine, imitation cheese, or "any substance in the semblance of butter or cheese" is transported into one State from another it shall be subject to the laws of the State into which it is taken. be subject to the laws of the State into which it is taken. Now, is there anything so very terrible about that? The bill contains no other provision, only that all these false and imitation dairy products shall be subject to the laws of the State into which they are transported. The language is unequivocal.

Mr. WILLIAMS. If the gentleman will permit an interruption. Mr. GROUT. Certainly. I yield to the gentleman.

Mr. WILLIAMS. I think you will find that you are mistaken.

I think the gentleman has not gotten the real gravity of the lan-

That all articles known as oleomargarine.

Now, if this bill stopped right there, without any disjunctive or conjuntive word following, until you came to the verb, there could be no question as to its meaning. But you have added other articles—butterine, imitation butter, "or any substance in the semblance of butter or cheese"—which changes the entire construction and meaning of the sentence.

Mr. GROUT. But the gentleman is entirely in error as to his contention. Let us read the language of the bill to which he refers. Here it is again:

That all articles known as oleomargarine, butterine, imitation butter, or imitation cheese, or any substance in the semblance of butter or cheese not the usual product of the dairy, and not made exclusively of pure and unadulterated milk or cream, transported into any State or Territory, shall be subject to the operation and effect, etc.

Now, there can be no possible question about that language. It is as clear as language can be. It simply places these imitation products under control of the law of the States into which they are taken for consumption or sale, and that is all there is to it.

Nevertheless, Mr. Speaker, if the bill is not sufficiently explicit on this point, I am entirely willing that any amendment shall be adopted to make it so.

The only object of the bill is to prevent these false and fraudulent imitations of butter and cheese from being transported from the State in which they are manufactured into a State where they are not manufactured, and there put on sale in such a way as to deceive the purchaser as to the real character of the article as could have been done under the decision known as the original-package decision, which allowed one sale while in the original package in spite of the laws of the State where the sale was made, no matter how great the fraud that may have been practiced upon those who consumed it. This, I repeat, is the only object of the bill, to make certain that when this imitation, this fraudulent substance, is taken from the State where it is manufactured into another State the police law of the State may become operative to the same extent and in the same manner as though the article had been produced in said State or Territory. That is all that the

Mr. COX. But, let me ask the gentleman, if you go that far why do you not put it within the power of the State to prohibit its coming into the State altogether?

Mr. GROUT. The bill leaves to each State the right to regulate the sale in its own way. There is nothing in it to justify the conclusion that its sale may be prohibited.

Mr. LIVINGSTON. May I ask the gentleman a question?
Mr. GROUT. Certainly.
Mr. LIVINGSTON. If I understand the purpose of the bill, it places that article—oleomargarine—when carried into a State, within the local invision of the State?

within the local jurisdiction of that State?

Mr. MORSE. That is exactly where it ought to be.

Mr. GROUT. And that is precisely what the bill does, and all

Mr. LIVINGSTON. Then the bill is a good one, and it ought

Mr. COX. It ought not to be passed.

Mr. GROUT. Well, I am very sorry that gentlemen so distinguished on this floor differ so radically.

Now, Mr. Speaker, just a word as to the history of the imitation. butter business in connection with the legislation and the decisions of the courts respecting it. It will be remembered that in 1886 the oleomargarine act was passed, and under that law the production and sale of it were checked to some extent, as you will see by the following statistics: In 1887, the year after the passage of the law, the number of manufacturers was 37, wholesale dealers 288, and retail dealers 6,977, or a total of 7,302 persons engaged in the business as manufacturers and dealers, wholesale and retail, in oleomargarine. Under that law the manufacturers and dealers went down from this total of 7,302 in 1887 to 6,035 in 1889, a reduction of over 1,000 in two years. In 1889 came the original-package decision, under which, as I have said, oleomargarine could taken from one State into another, and one sale made in spite of local laws, which put it into the hands of the retail dealer and started it on its way of cheating the purchaser, who invariably buys it for butter. Nobody buys oleomargarine for consumption except the boarding-house keeper and the restaurant and hotel keeper. The purchaser always buys butter, but often gets oleomargarine, because this stuff so closely counterfeits butter that few except experts can tell the difference between the two.

And now again, in 1887, the first year after the oleomargarine law was passed which put restrictions upon it, the total revenue from oleomargarine was but $723,904.04. But when the original-package decision came, protecting it in its transfer to the retailer, package decision came, protecting it in its transfer to the retailer, who could work it off to the unsuspecting purchaser as butter, the total receipts jumped in the following year from that figure to over a million and a half of dollars. The receipts from the tax upon it a good deal more than doubled in a single year. Now, as badly as the Government wants revenue just now, it does not want it from such fraudulent sources as this. And this was the boom which the original-package decision gave to oleomargarine throughout the country, by putting it everywhere into the hands of the

which the original-package decision gave to oleomargarine throughout the country, by putting it everywhere into the hands of the retail dealer, who really practices the fraud upon the people.

But in 1893 there came another decision of the Supreme Court, which lays down the doctrine contained in this bill. That was rendered, however, by a divided court, the opinion being given by Mr. Justice Harlan. The Chief Justice and Justices Field and Brewer dissented. Now, I want to read from that opinion, in answer to my friend the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. Will. LIAMS] and in answer to my other friend the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. Cox]. I will say, however, before doing so, that the reason for this legislation is that this decision was by a divided court, and the dairy interests of the country fear that possibly—

The court, some fine day, May hold the other way.

Mr. Speaker, the dairy interests of the country are of immense proportions in the aggregate, though made up from a vast number of small interests, many of them weak and comparatively insignificant when standing by themselves, but in their united strength they are a power in the land, and they demand this legislation. They ask that this decision of the Supreme Court be writlation. They ask that this decision of the Supreme Court be written in the statutes of the country, and not left to the possibly fluctuating opinion of the court. And now let me read from that decision of the court. By it, all the constitutional arguments and fictions of the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. WILLIAMS] and others opposing this bill are at once wiped away. It is in the case of Plumley vs. Massachusetts (155 United States Reports), in which or Flumley vs. Massachusetts (100 United States Reports), in which the plaintiff in error had been prosecuted and fined under a Massachusetts statute prohibiting the sale of oleomargarine in the guise of butter. He pleaded his constitutional right to handle this product from another State, in the absence of Federal prohibition, the Massachusetts statute to the contrary notwithstanding. But, as I say, he was convicted and fined under that statute, and, being held in jail for nonpayment of the fine, brought a writ of habeas corpus before the supreme court of Massachusetts, which decided against him and in favor of the constitutionality of the State statute. The case came to the United States Supreme Court on appeal, and the following is the closing part of the opinion by Mr. Justice Harlan:

We are of opinion that it is within the power of a State to exclude from its markets any compound manufactured in another State which has been artificially colored or adulterated so as to cause it to look like an article of food in general use, and the sale of which may, by reason of such coloration or adulteration, cheat the general public into purchasing that which they may not intend to buy. The Constitution of the United States does not secure to anyone the privilege of defrauding the public. The deception against which the statute of Massachusetts is aimed is an offense against society; and the States are as competent to protect their people against such offenses or wrongs as they are to protect them against crimes or wrongs of more serious character. And this protection may be given without violating any right secured by the National Constitution, and without infringing the authority of the General Government. A State enactment forbidding the sale of deceitful imitations of articles of food in general use among the people does not abridge any privilege secured to citizens of the United States, nor, in any just sense, interfere with the freedom of commerce among the several States. It is legislation which "can be most advantageously exercised by the States

Mr. MORSE. Massachusetts does not allow soap grease to be sold for butter.

Mr. GROUT (continuing)-

Mr. GROUT (continuing)—

We are not unmindful of the fact—indeed, this court has often had occasion to observe—that the acknowledged power of the States to protect the morals, the health, and safety of their people by appropriate legislation sometimes touches in its exercise the lines separating the respective domains of national and State authority. But in view of the complex system of government which exists in this country, "presenting," as this court, speaking by Chief Justice Marshall, has said, "the rare and difficult scheme of one General Government whose action extends over the whole, but which possesses only certain enumerated powers, and of numerous State governments, which retain and exercise all powers not delegated to the Union," the judiciary of the United States should not strike down a legislative enactment of a State—especially if it has direct connection with the social order, the health, and the morals of its people—unless such legislation plainly and palpably violates some right granted or secured by the national Constitution or encroaches upon the authority delegated to the United States for the attainment of objects of national concern.

We can not so adjudge in reference to the statute of Massachusetts, and as the court below correctly held that the plaintiff in error was not restrained of his liberty in violation of the Constitution of the United States, the judgment must be affirmed.

Now, from this opinion you will see that this bill only proposes

Now, from this opinion you will see that this bill only proposes to put this decision into statute law, and for the sole purpose of giving it greater permanency. It does not enlarge or take from the law of this decision a single iota in any particular.

Mr. MORSE. Will the gentleman from Vermont allow me to ask him a question?

Mr. GROUT. I yield to the gentleman from Massachusetts

Mr. MORSE. I want to ask the gentleman from Vermont [Mr. GROUT] if there is anything in this bill which prevents the sale of oleomargarine or any imitation of butter in States where it is allowed by law?

Mr. GROUT. Why, of course there is nothing. It simply leaves that matter to the States.

Mr. MORSE. Gentlemen here say so. Gentlemen are deluded who think that.

Mr. COOKE of Illinois. Mr. Speaker, I desire to be heard in my own time.

Mr. GROUT. What time does the gentleman desire?

Mr. COOKE of Illinois. Ten minutes.

Mr. GROUT. I will yield ten minutes to the gentleman as soon as I have concluded my remarks. I had merely concluded the reading of this opinion.

Mr. FITZGERALD. Under the operation of this law, if it should be enacted, is it not possible for the States to enact a law forbidding the sale of oleomargarine in those States?

Mr. GROUT. Not by authority of this law. The bill is drawn within the provisions of the law laid down by the court; it is drawn strictly in accordance with it; and if it admits of that view, he must argue with the court and not with myself.

he must argue with the court and not with myself.

Mr. Speaker, now a word as to another view of the matter.

Gentlemen talk about interfering with the sale of a product designed for the subsistence of the poor. Ah, Mr. Speaker, this is a mere pretense, as false as the product itself. Oleomargarine now goes in the garb of butter—"semblance of butter" in the words of the bill—to the poor and is sold as butter, not at the price for oleomargarine, but at the price butter bears; and so neither the poor nor the rich get oleomargarine except at an enormous profit. Most of the States now have laws if they are allowed to the poor nor the rich get oleomargarine except at an enormous profit. Most of the States now have laws, if they are allowed to take charge of this stuff as this bill proposes, which will secure its sale for just what it is. Then the poor will get oleomargarine at somewhere near its cost, instead of paying the price of butter for it as now. And then, too, butter will be sought by those who are able and want to pay a good price for a good article. The producer of butter will thus be benefited at the same time that producer of butter will thus be benefited at the same time that the poor man is furnished with eleomargarine at one-half or one-third what he pays now. No one will be hurt but the manufacturer and dealer in this false and fraudulent article, who, between them, now realize enormous profits in palming it off for butter. And even they will not be hurt, but will only be confined to reasonable profits; and, as we have seen, all for the benefit of those who feel themselves unable to buy butter.

Besides the fraud on the public in imposing upon them a counterfeit product of doubtful wholesomeness, the damage to the honest dairy interests of the country is immense in dragging down the price of butter by the sale of vast quantities of the cheap greases that go into eleomargarine, but which are colored for butter and so flavored by the use of buttermilk as to give the product every appearance of butter and even the taste of butter. It is one of the boasted merits of this product, but really its chief infamy, that an ordinary person can not detect the difference between the genuine and the false; and I agree that it is so disguised that it is difficult to tell. Now, nobody objects to its going on the market in its own color. The court says so expressly in the opinion which I read. It is only when it assumes the semblance of butter, and so is calculated to practice deceit and fraud, that it is proposed to make it subject to the police laws of the State where it is sold. The bill says the same thing. It is only where it goes on the market in the "semblance of butter or cheese" that this bill authorizes the police laws of the State into which it goes to take hold of it. If it goes on the market as oleomargarine, with the color of oleomargarine, and undertakes no cheat or falsehood as it goes, there is no objection to it. There is nothing in this bill that will allow any State to touch it by way of prohibition if it goes on the market for what

Mr. LIVINGSTON. Will the gentleman accept an amendment?
Mr. GROUT. In a minute. We only insist that this uncertain stuff shall not sail under false colors, so that the poor man shall have the product at a cheap price with a reasonable profit only upon it. We shall thus be helping the poor man and protecting an honest industry at the same time. Besides, it allows this product to be brought out of its disguise in every State that sees fit to do it. If a State chooses to let it be sold for butter, it can do so; but there is no State in the Union that is willing to do that; and there is no honest man in this country who is willing it should be done.

Mr. TERRY. Will the gentleman allow me to ask him a question on that point?

Mr. GROUT. Certainly.

Mr. TERRY. Does not the United States legislation already provide that the product "oleomargarine" shall be sold as oleomargarine?

Mr. GROUT. Yes; it provides that it shall be stamped and put

Mr. GROUT. Yes; it provides that it shall be stamped and pay on the market in the original package.

Mr. TERRY. How is it possible, then, to deceive anybody?

Mr. GROUT. I did not yield to the gentleman for remarks.

You asked me a question. Nowlet me answer. It is an easy matter for the retailer to slip the tub off the stuff and set it on the counter alongside of butter and sell it as butter in small lots as called for. Remember, it is so like butter that only an expert can tall the difference in appearance or taste. Frequently nothing tell the difference in appearance or taste. Frequently nothing short of the microscope can make the difference certain.

Now I yield to the gentleman from Georgia.

Mr. LIVINGSTON. Will the gentleman accept this amend-

Shall not be interfered with by the State or by State regulations in a State when sold as oleomargarine.

when sold as oleomargarine.

If you will put that amendment in, I think it will be agreed to.
Mr. GROUT. But that would defeat the express purpose of the bill, which is to give to the States the right to regulate the sale of oleomargarine. We do not ask for the power in the States to prohibit the sale of it. The Supreme Court says the States have the right to regulate its sale, and I am surprised that my friend the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. WILLIAMS], from a State-rights State, and my friend from Tennessee [Mr. Cox], from a State-rights State, and now also my friend from Louisiana [Mr. BOATNER], who, I see, is ready with a question, also from a State-rights State, are willing to stand in the way of the rights of the States under the Constitution, as determined by the Supreme Court in the opinion which I have just read.

Court in the opinion which I have just read.

Mr. BOATNER. Will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. GROUT. Certainly.
Mr. BOATNER. Does not the gentleman from Vermont think that this bill and all bills of a similar character rest on the authority of the Federal Government to regulate commerce between the States?

Mr. GROUT. The Supreme Court says not in case of articles like false butter and cheese, calculated to deceive, or at least the Supreme Court says that the States may regulate and suppress falsehoods and frauds of this character. Mr. Speaker, I do not believe the dairymen, who are intelligent men, throughout this country, having knowledge of this decision of the court, would have asked more, but they felt that it being by a divided court, it rested upon too uncertain a basis. They realize that the specious arguments which the gentlemen are suggesting in opposition to this bill now may be at some evil but more favorable time thrust upon the court, and the decision perhaps overturned. They want upon the court, and the decision perhaps overturned. They want to see this law on the statute book also—

Mr. BOATNER. But does not the gentleman from Vermont concede that this bill if enacted into law is a concession of a part of the authority and power of the Federal Government to regulate commerce between the States?

Mr. GROUT. No, it is rather an indorsement of or acquiescence on the part of Congress in the decision of the court, which is to the effect that the States may exercise this power without leave of

Mr. BOATNER. Otherwise, what necessity is there for the bill, if it takes nothing away from the power of the Federal Govon the federal Government and adds nothing to the different States?

Mr. GROUT. It does not contravene the powers of the General Government to control interstate commerce, as stated by the court in their opinion. This question lies close to the line between the authority of the General Government and of the States, but to prevent a fraud the court holds that the States may act through their police power, and I believe it is sound doctrine, and this bill simply puts into statute law the decision of the court; that is all.

Mr. COOKE of Illinois. Mr. Speaker, I desire to be recognized

Mr. GROUT. Very well; I have not yielded the floor. If the gentleman desires time, I will give it to him; but I do not propose to yield the floor. If I yield the floor I lose control of the bill.

Mr. COOKE of Illinois. Mr. Speaker, I desire ten minutes, and I understand that the gentleman from Vermont has yielded me

Mr. WILLIAMS. Mr. Speaker, I submit that the time in this discussion ought not to be controlled entirely by one side, and that some agreement on that subject ought to be arrived at. The gentleman in favor of the bill assumes to control all the time.

Mr. GROUT. Oh, gentlemen need not raise that question at all; they will have as much time as they want. There is not the least disposition to suppress discussion.

Mr. COOPER of Florida. Mr. Speaker, I rise to a point of

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman will state it.
Mr. COOPER of Florida. As I understand it, there has been no previous question ordered, nor any limitation placed upon the debate upon this bill?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. That is correct.

Mr. COOPER of Florida. Then the gentleman from Vermont has no more control of the time than any other gentleman upon this floor.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. During his hour he has control of the time.

Mr. COOPER of Florida. But when he sits down his hour ends.

Mr. GROUT. Oh, no. I am willing to yield to the gentleman from Illinois ten minutes. Mr. Speaker, I hope there will be no feeling about this matter, because there is not the slightest disposition on our side to prevent the discussion of this bill. We are perfectly willing to give the gentlemen all the time they want.

Mr. COOKE of Illinois. Mr. Speaker—

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Does the gentleman from Vermont yield to the gentleman from Illinois?

Mr. GROUT. I will first ask the gentleman from Illinois whether he intends to support or to oppose the bill.

Mr. COOKE of Illinois. I intend to oppose it.

Mr. GROUT. Well, Mr. Speaker, since gentlemen want some division of the time and are desirous of controlling the time in opposition to the bill, let us try to reach an agreement about it.

Mr. WILLIAMS. That is what I proposed a while ago, but the gentleman seemed not to understand me.

Mr. GROUT (to Mr. WILLIAMS). There was so much confu-

Mr. GROUT (to Mr. WILLIAMS). There was so much confusion I did not understand you. How much time do you want?
Mr. WILLIAMS. I suppose an hour on each side.
Mr. GROUT. Taking out of your hour the time that you have used, and out of mine the time I used?
Mr. WILLIAMS. Taking the time that I have used out of the time of the properties and taking the time that I have used out of the time of the properties and taking the time that I have used out of the time of the properties and taking the time that I have used out of the time of the properties of th time on our side, and taking the time that you have used out of the time in favor of the bill.

Mr. GROUT. Does the Chair understand the proposition of the gentleman from Mississippi?

the gentleman from Mississippi?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair does not understand that there has yet been any proposition made.

Mr. GROUT. The gentleman's proposition is that there shall be an hour allowed in favor of the bill, which I am to control, and an hour in opposition to the bill, to be controlled by the gentleman from Mississippi.

and an nour in opposition to the bill, to be controlled by the gentleman from Mississippi.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Two hours in addition to the time that has already been consumed?

Mr. GROUT. No; two hours in all, the time the gentleman from Mississippi has occupied to be deducted from his hour, and the time I have occupied to be taken out of my hour.

Mr. BOATNER. May I ask how much time the gentleman from Mississippi occupied?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair is informed that the gentleman from Mississippi occupied fifteen minutes.

Mr. GROUT. How much time did I occupy, Mr. Speaker?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Vermont occupied twenty minutes.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Now, Mr. Speaker, I yield twenty minutes to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. COOKE].

Mr. GROUT. Wait until we get an arrangement. Will the Chair take the sense of the House on the proposition?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Unanimous consent is asked that debate on this bill be limited to two hours, to be equally divided between those who favor and those who oppose the bill, the time already occupied being deducted from the two hours. Those in favor of the bill have occupied twenty minutes and those opposed

Mr. STEELE. And at the end of the time the previous ques-

The SPEAKER pro tempore. That is understood.

Mr. McEWAN. Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry. Is it in order at this time to present an amendment?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. During general debate any gentleman who has the floor will have an opportunity to present any amendment he may desire.

Mr. McEWAN. Perhaps this amendment will be accepted by the gentleman in charge of the bill.

Mr. GROUT. It is further suggested to me, Mr. Speaker, and I suggest to the gentleman on the other side, that as the attendance in the House may not be very full toward the hour of adjournment to-day, we take the vote on the bill and such amendments as may be adopted to-morrow morning, after the reading of the Journal.

Several Members. That is right.

Mr. WILLIAMS. I do not know about that. As far as I am personally concerned, I have no objection, but I have no authority to make any agreement of that kind.

Mr. GROUT. No; but I ask the gentleman to help get an agreement.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair desires now to have an understanding with regard to amendments. Inquiry has been made as to whether amendments will be in order. There is one committee amendment now pending, and if, as the Chair under-stands, the previous question is to be considered as ordered at the close of the debate, there will be no opportunity after that to offer other amendments

Mr. WILLIAMS. I do not understand that to be the agree-

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Then the Chair will say to gentlemen that there must be some definite agreement upon that Mr. GROUT. Mr. Speaker, I propose that we have all the amendments submitted to-day, and that the bill and amendments be voted upon to-morrow morning, after the reading of the Journal.

Mr. TAWNEY. The gentleman means that the vote shall be taken on the amendments then pending.

Mr. GROUT. Certainly.

Mr. WILLIAMS. And amendments may be introduced any

Mr. GROUT. Certainly.
Mr. WILLIAMS. And amendments may be introduced any time to-day

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair will state to the gentleman from Mississippi that only one amendment to the bill can be pending at a time unless by general consent.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Two can be pending; one amendment and one substitute.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Now, will the gentleman from Vermont state the proposition that he desires to have submitted to the House?

Mr. GROUT. The proposition as to amendments is, that the bill be open to amendment under the rule during the discussion this afternoon, that all amendments shall be offered this afternoon, and that to-morrow, after the reading of the Journal, the House shall proceed to vote upon the bill and amendments.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Vermont asks unanimous consent that debate on this bill be limited to two hours including the time already occupied by those who favor hours, including the time already occupied by those who favor and oppose the bill; that at the close of the debate the previous question shall be considered as ordered; that a vote be taken on the bill and such amendments as may be pending immediately after the reading of the Journal to-morrow; that pending the general debate any mambar shall have the privilege of offering and eral debate any member shall have the privilege of offering an amendment, and that the same shall be considered after the close of the debate when the bill is taken up to be voted on to-morrow. Is there objection?

Mr. McEWAN. For the purpose of understanding the matter thoroughly, I object. If this arrangement be made, would I be at liberty at any time during the debate to offer an amendment?

A MEMBER. That is a part of the agreement.

Mr. GROUT. If the gentleman had listened to the statement of the Chair I think he could not have misunderstood it. The object of the proposition is to offer an opportunity for amend-ments to the bill this afternoon, all proper amendments under the rules

Mr. DOCKERY. The amendments to be offered under the rule, as I understand.

Mr. GROUT. Certainly.

Mr. DOCKERY. That is, there may be pending at one time an amendment, an amendment to the amendment, a substitute, and an amendment to the substitute.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the arrangement proposed by the gentleman from Vermont?

Mr. COOPER of Florida. I object.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Objection is made.
Mr. GROUT. Objection is made, as I understand, to taking the vote to-morrow morning. I ask the Chair to submit the request for unanimous consent to close the debate at the time indicated.

Mr. COOPER of Florida. My objection is to the whole proposition. Let the bill take its regular course.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Does the gentleman from Vermont yield the floor?

Mr. GROUT. I do not. Unless there can be some understanding with reference to this matter, we will proceed until the hour is up, and then vote on the bill. We are perfectly willing to make any fair arrangement; but unless some agreement can be reached, we will try and get along without it.

Mr. TERRY. Go ahead, and see what you can do.
Mr. GROUT. All right. Let it be understood we are ready now to make any fair agreement.

Mr. WILLIAMS. I do not understand that the gentleman from Vermont has the control of the time of the House or can do anything except to move the previous question whenever he has the floor to do so.

Mr. GROUT. And that I shall do at the end of the hour unless an agreement is made. I so notify gentlemen.

A MEMBER. You can not do so if you give up the floor.

Mr. GROUT. Of course not. I shall do so within my hour.

Mr. BOATNER. Will not the gentleman yield a portion of his time to some of us who would like to discuss the option feature of this bill? I should like to have ten or fifteen minutes.

Mr. GROUT. Certainly. I will yield first to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. COOKE], because I have agreed to do so.

Mr. COOKE of Illinois. Mr. Speaker, I agree with the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. WILLIAMS], that if we pass this bill we shall be entering upon such changes in legislation as will be very sweeping and far-reaching in their character. It is true, as stated sweeping and far-reaching in their character. It is true, as stated in the report of the committee, that the Supreme Court of the United States has laid down a rule applying to articles of the character here in question where they enter into interstate commerce. The Supreme Court, as stated in the report of this committee, decided, in the case of Leisy vs. Hardin, known as the "original-package" decision, that where any article of commerce is manufactured in one State and transported into another State and placed on the market the sale of such article of commerce should be protected to the extent of one transfer while the goods remained in the original package, and until they became part of the commercial products of the State into which they were shipped.

Now, the object of this bill, as I understand it, is to do away

Now, the object of this bill, as I understand it, is to do away with the effect of that decision by the Supreme Court of the United with the effect of that decision by the Supreme Court of the United States, so as to place eleomargarine in the category of articles which may be prohibited from manufacture by the laws of the several States, and so that they can not be shipped from one State into another and there sold in original packages, which was recognized to be the right of shippers under the Constitution of the United States by the decision from which I have quoted and which is referred to in the report.

Mr. Speaker, I do not think it necessary to amplify the remarks made by the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. Williams] to show that this bill in its effect and tenor proposes to leave to the Soles.

the entire power to regulate the manufacture and sale of oleomargarine, butterine, and these other articles which are made in imitation of butter. In other words, it seems to be clear that this bill contemplates putting it in the power of the States, for the first time, to so regulate or prohibit the manufacture or sale, or the receipt into the States, of oleomargarine, etc., as to make a very great change in the law.

Now, I submit that I am willing to go as far as any other member on this floor in the strict regulation of the manufacture and sale of oleomargarine and butterine and other imitations of dairy products. I am willing to go as far as any other member here in the regulation of the sale, so that a purchaser shall be able to determine what he is buying, and that none shall be deceived by purchasing articles for real butter which are only imitations. But such legislation as that ought to be by a general law of the United States. I submit to the House that we ought not to permit the matter to be regulated by the several States according to the shifting and varying views that may there obtain.

Now, the United States statutes on the subject regulate the

Now, the United States statutes on the subject regulate the manner of the manufacture, exposure, and sale of these various articles. That law is now in force, and if we pass this bill we will entirely change that regulation, and thereby set aside the general statutes of the United States, which are of universal operation and effect throughout the entire Union. I refer, sir, to the act known as the "Act defining butter, and also imposing a tax upon and regulating the manufacture, sale, importation, exportation, etc., of oleomargarine," which became a law on August 2, 1886, and is printed on page 200 of the Revised Statutes. That is a very long act, and it contains minute provisions regulating the manufacture, as well as the exposure and sale, in the various States of the Union of all the articles to which the present bill refers. Among other sections is the sixth section, which provides:

refers. Among other sections is the sixth section, which provides:
Sec 6. That all oleomargarine shall be packed by the manufacturer thereof in firkins, tubs, or other wooden packages not before used for that purpose, each containing not less than 10 pounds, and marked, stamped, and branded as the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, with the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury, shall prescribe; and all sales made by manufacturers of oleomargarine and wholesale dealers in oleomargarine shall be in original stamped packages. Retail dealers in oleomargarine must sell only from original stamped packages, in quantities not exceeding 10 pounds, and shall pack the oleomargarine sold by them in suitable wooden or paper packages, which shall be marked and branded as the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, with the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury, shall prescribe. Every person who knowingly sells or offers for sale, or delivers or offers to deliver, any oleomargarine in any other form than in new wooden or paper packages as above described, or who packs in any package any oleomargarine in any manner contrary to law, or who faisely brands any package or affixes a stamp on any package denoting a less amount of tax than that required by law, shall be fined for each offense not more than $1,000, and be imprisoned not more than two years. than two years.

The act so in force thus complies with the decision of the Supreme Court of the United States on the particular point referred to by the gentleman from Vermont [Mr. Grout], as to original packages, and I will not take the time of the House to read the law in full. But I will say that that section 6, together with the preceding sections and other sections following, covering in all about four pages of the Revised Statutes, forms a complete regulation of the manufacture and sale of eleomargarine and butterine in all of the States of the Union. If we pass this bill reported from the committee by the gentleman from Vermont, we will, in effect, abrogate and nullify, set aside, and change in toto the entire law of 1886, to which I have referred, and will be authorizing the substitution for it of new laws, different in all of the States of the Union. In other words, I hold that it should be by a law of the United States and not by the acts of the particular States that we should regulate a subject of this kind, involving, as it necessarily does, articles of interstate commerce. This is upon the principle, sir, that there is nothing inherent in the character of these readacts which become the states of the states of the states. facture and sale so that the purchaser may not be deceived.

Now, an attempt has been made, by the Revised Statutes to which I have referred, to so regulate and so determine the manufacture and sale of oleomargarine, imitation butter, and so on, as to prevent deception; and if the law is not sufficiently stringent, if it does not go far enough, if it is not operative in the direction contemplated, I should favor amending it, but not in this questionable method. I refer to its being questionable in the sense of its being an unwise system of legislation, whereby we would permit the entire interstate commerce of the country, in articles of this sort, to be regulated by separate State enactments.

this sort, to be regulated by separate State enactments. We shall enter upon new and untried legislation when we open that door.

Mr. TUCKER. Will the gentleman yield to me for an inquiry?
Mr. COOKE of Illinois. Certainly.

Mr. TUCKER. If I understand the gentleman's argument, and I listened somewhat carefully to it, it is an objection to this specific bill rather than to a general bill in reference to this class of business. I desire to ask the gentleman whether he would agree to an amendment to the bill striking out in line 3 the words "that all articles known as oleomargarine, butterine, imitation butter, or imitation cheese," and so on, down to and including the word "cream," in line 6, so that it will read: "That all articles transported into any State or Territory, or remaining therein cles transported into any State or Territory, or remaining therein for use, consumption, sale, or storage therein, and so on, shall be subject to the operation and effect of the laws of such State or Territory"?
Mr. COOKE of Illinois. I ask unanimous consent to reply to the gentleman for a moment.

Mr. GROUT. I yield the gentleman a minute for that purpose. Mr. COOKE of Illinois. I would not consent to the proposition made by the gentleman from Virginia, for the reason that it would still leave the subject open to all these objections which I have mentioned, and because we ought to have the subject regulated by general law and not by the particular laws of the several States, which this act will allow

Mr. BAKER of New Hampshire. Will the gentleman answer

question?
Mr. COOKE of Illinois. I will gladly do so, if I may be allowed the time.

Mr. GROUT. I will yield to the gentleman another minute.
Mr. BAKER of New Hampshire. Will the gentleman point out the provision of the statute of 1886 which would be nullified or in any way repealed by the enactment of the proposed bill?

Mr. COOKE of Illinois. Yes; I will do so, Mr. Speaker. Every section of that act, from the beginning to the end, would be changed in every State of the Union, according to the views pertaining in

Mr. BAKER of New Hampshire. Only as they relate to oleo-margarine or butterine within that specified State.

margarine or butterine within that specified State.

Mr. COOKE of Illinois. I think so; yes.

Mr. BOATNER. It would recognize the doctrine of nullification so far as this particular subject was concerned.

Mr. BAKER of New Hampshire. It simply permits the people of a State to regulate their own affairs in their own way.

Mr. COOKE of Illinois. Yes; permitting them to do so on this subject, instead of having Congress make the regulations, as is done by the act of 1886.

Mr. TUCKER. I wish to ask whether such an amendment as I have suggested to the gentleman will be satisfactory to him, so that all articles transported into any State shall be subject to the same regulations? same regulations?

Mr. GROUT. I have not had time to look into this proposition, and I need not, for it is entirely aside from the purpose of this bill. It is too much of a load, anyway. I think if we take care of imitation butter—if we deal with that in this bill—we shall

Mr. TUCKER. My friend will find that it will relieve the load that he is now carrying to do so.

Mr. GROUT. The principle the gentleman suggests may be a good one, but it will be out of place in this bill.

Mr. BOATNER. I ask the gentleman to yield to me ten min-

Mr. GROUT. I can not yield the gentleman ten minutes. I have not sufficient time.

Mr. BOATNER. Then yield to me five minutes.

Mr. GROUT. I yield five minutes to the gentleman from

Louisiana

Mr. Speaker, I have never obtained my own Mr. BOATNER. Mr. Speaker, I have never obtained my own forgiveness for having been seduced into voting for a bill of a similar character, introduced here a few years ago under the pretense that it was in execution of the doctrine that every State should be permitted to manage its own affairs in its own way. It seems to me, Mr. Speaker, that the limits of jurisdiction defined in the Constitution should be preserved and perpetuated, and that the Federal Government should not by legislation delegate any of its authority to the States, any more than it should trench upon the jurisdiction of the States. Now, sir, it is perfectly manifest that unless the subject-matter of this bill fall under the jurisdiction of the Federal Government under that clause of the Constitution which declares that Congress shall regulate commerce tion of the Federal Government under that clause of the Consti-tution which declares that Congress shall regulate commerce between the States, the passage of the bill would be entirely unnecessary. Unless Congress properly has jurisdiction of the question, why, the State has. If the State has jurisdiction, it requires no enabling act from us to permit it to exercise it. If the State has no jurisdiction, we can not give it jurisdiction with-out taking away a part of the jurisdiction which properly belongs to the Federal Government. to the Federal Government.

Now, Mr. Speaker, as the years roll by the wisdom of that provision of the Constitution which directs that Congress shall regulate commerce between the States becomes more manifest. The framers of that instrument put that provision there to provide against the jealousies and rivalries and the local influences and the tyrannies of local majorities over minorities, which were going to arise in the development of this great Government. Hence, sir, I arise in the development of this great Government. Hence, sir, I say that this Congress ought not to abrogate any part of the jurisdiction given to it by the Constitution, and it ought not to throw upon any State the power to exercise the jurisdiction which it itself should exercise. Why, sir, this bill might be entitled "A bill to authorize the several States of the Union to nullify the law of Congress upon the question of elementaring and counterful." of Congress upon the question of oleomargarine and counterfeit butter.

Mr. BARHAM. Is not that just what it does?
Mr. BOATNER. We have a statute here which was intended Mr. BOATNER. We have a statute here which was intended to meet the very difficulties and grievances of which the gentleman from Vermont complains. It was argued that the makers of oleomargarine were palming it off on the public as genuine butter, carrying on practically a fraudulent trade. After careful consideration a statute was enacted, putting the manufacture of this commodity under the direction of an officer of the Government, providing that it should be put upon the market in certain ways, and after certain stamps had been put upon it, and that it should be sold everywhere upon its merits. Now, here comes a bill declaring that any State may prohibit or authorize the sale of this commodity, not in accordance with the provisions of the act of Congress, but in accordance with such statute as the people of that State may see fit to enact; and the very moment any State of that State may see fit to enact; and the very moment any State in the Union sees fit to enact a law upon this question, that moment the act of Congress which we have passed becomes superseded and suspended in its effect, and the State law comes into operation.

Now, Mr. Speaker, I think we violate one of the fundamental principles of constitutional law whenever we take away from Con-gress any power or jurisdiction vested in it by the Federal Constitution, as much, sir, as when we undertake to trench upon the authority of the State.

No one questions the right of the State governments, in the exercise of the police power conferred on them by the Constitution, to regulate the sale of anything which may be deleterious to the public health, which may be injurious or which may constitute a fraudulent business, and such a statute does not trench upon the authority of Congress to regulate commerce between the States; but whenever, under the pretense of exercising police power, the legislature of a State crosses the line and does interfere with the regulations of commerce between the States, that moment a Federal question arises, which can be determined by the Federal courts, and the statute of the States is set aside and annulled in so far as it trenches upon Federal authority.

For the reasons which I have given, I earnestly oppose not only this bill, but any bill of this character which interferes with the even operation of the laws under the Constitution of the United

Mr. GROUT. Mr. Speaker, how much time have I left? The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman has nine minutes emaining

Mr. GROUT. I yield to the gentleman from Virginia [Mr.

TUCKER].

Mr. TUCKER. I move to amend this bill by striking out, in
Mr. TUCKER. I move to amend this bill by striking out, in line 3, after the word "article," all down to line 6, including the word "cream;" so that it will read:

Be it enacted, etc., That all articles transported into any State or Territory, or remaining therein for use, consumption, sale, or storage therein, shall, upon arrival within the limits of such State or Territory, be subject to the operation and effect of the laws of such State, etc.

Mr. GROUT. Mr. Speaker, I raise a point of order against the gentleman's amendment. I did not yield for an amendment. I supposed the gentleman was going to submit some remarks. I said to him some time ago in open House that I did not feel like admitting that amendment; that we had enough to do to take care of the bill as it is.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair sustains the objection. The Chair thinks that the yielding of five minutes to the gentleman for discussion would not authorize him to offer an amend-man for discussion would not ment in that time.

Mr. TUCKER. Of course, I do not desire to take advantage of my friend's courtesy. If I have a right under the rules of the House, and with proper regard for that courtesy which is due from one member of the House to another, I desire to offer the month of the House to another, I desire to offer the month of the house to another, I desire to offer the month of the house to another, I desire to offer the month of the house to another the month of t amendment. If I have not the right, well and good. I am sure, however, that the proposition which I lay down by the amendment must commend itself to my friend from Vermont as substantial and correct. Why single out the article of oleomargarine, when the principle applies to all articles? My friend from Louisiana [Mr. Boatner] has well said Congress has undoubtedly, under the Constitution, the power to regulate commerce with forging patients among the expert States and with the Indian tribes. eign nations, among the several States, and with the Indian tribes, but that provision comes in conflict with another article of the Constitution, which my friend from Vermont invokes in this bill, namely, Article IV, section 2, which provides that the citizens of each State shall be entitled to all the privileges and immunities of citizens of the several States. No more, no less; all. That is, that the citizen of each State has the right to do business in a foreign State, and to do that business under the same conditions that the citizen of the State does the business under. A man comes down from the city of Baltimore to the State of Virginia to do business as a merchant. Under the decisions of the Supreme Court quoted by my friend that man has the right, under the interstate-commerce clause, to go there and do business as a merchant without paying the State tax; whereas the citizen of Virginia is compelled to pay the State tax under the State law. I say that the true policy is that no man should be permitted to enter a State to do business in that State except in accordance with the laws of the State.

Mr. COOKE of Illinois. Will the gentleman permit a question?
Mr. TUCKER. Yes, sir.
Mr. COOKE of Illinois. Suppose that the law of that State comes in conflict with some provision of the Constitution of the United States, as construed by the Supreme Court of the United States?

Mr. TUCKER. Then it must give way, and, for the very reason that it must yield to the decision of the Supreme Court, Congress is here, in the person of my friend from Vermont, trying to get rid of that difficulty.

Mr. COOPER of Florida (to Mr. Tucker). That is, you propose to do in whole what my friend from Vermont [Mr. Grout] proposes to do in part—repeal the Constitution of the United States by giving each State the power to interfere with interstate commerce

Mr. COOKE of Illinois. That is precisely what he is proposing, is it not?

Mr. TUCKER. Yes, sir.
I propose to do exactly what my amendment states. As I have said, it seems to me that there ought to be no principle better fixed and settled than that the people of each State know better than anybody else what is best for them, and when a stranger comes by courtesy to do business in a particular State, surely he ought not to claim that he is entitled to greater advantages from the State than its own citizens enjoy.

Mr. BOATNER. Does the gentleman mean to say that a man coming into a State to do business ought to be put on a par with the citizens of the State in which he proposes to do business, or does he mean that each State ought to have the right to regulate its own affairs, allowing or refusing importations of goods from other States according as its laws may prescribe?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The time of the gentleman from Virginia has expired.

Mr. TUCKER. A parliamentary inquiry, Mr. Speaker. I desire to know if it is in order to offer the amendment which I have suggested?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair rules that it is not.
Mr. TUCKER. Then I desire to know whether, under the ruling of the Chair and the understanding which was arrived at, I be-lieve, when I was not present, it will be in order to offer the amendment at any time between now and the taking of the vote on the

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair will state to the gentleman from Virginia that objection was made to the proposed arrangement, and that the gentleman from Vermont [Mr. Grout] has the floor, with the understanding that before the expiration of his hour he will demand the previous question. That is the parliamentary situation of the bill.

Mr. GROUT. How much time have I left, Mr. Speaker?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman has four minutes remaining.

Mr. CANNON. Mr. Speaker—
Mr. GROUT. I do not yield to the gentleman.
Mr. CANNON. I want to get accommodation for a little time, by unanimous consent, to represent my constituents, if I can.

Mr. GROUT. Very well; I am willing to have an arrangement made after I have asked the previous question.

Mr. CANNON. That cuts off discussion.

Mr. GROUT. Mr. Speaker, I call for the previous question, without further remarks. Let me say, while I call for the previous question now, I am still willing to make any arrangement as to time that is fair and reasonable. The other side have occupied all but twenty minutes of the hour.

Mr. WILLIAMS. A point of order.

Mr. GROUT. You can have all the time you want to discuss the bill.

Mr. CANNON. I ask unanimous consent for an extension of the time for thirty minutes, to be divided half and half, for discussion; and that will leave the gentleman in full possession of the bill, and he will still be able to call for the previous question at the expiration of that time.

Mr. GROUT. I will agree to that after I call the previous

question

Mr. TUCKER. I hope the gentleman, in that connection, will

Mr. TUCKER. I hope the gentleman, in that connection, will accept my amendment.

Mr. GROUT. Mr. Speaker, I demand the previous question.

Mr. CANNON. I ask unanimous consent that the time may be extended thirty minutes before the previous question is ordered.

Mr. GROUT. A parliamentary inquiry. If my time expires before the Chair states my call for the previous question, will I still be recognized to make that call?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Vermont has already demanded the previous question within his hour. The Chair holds that if hy upparimons consent the time for debate

Chair holds that if, by unanimous consent, the time for debate is extended, pending this, for thirty minutes, the rights of the gentleman from Vermont will be the same as they are in force

Mr. GROUT. How, if refused? The SPEAKER pro tempore. If refused, then the vote will be on ordering the previous question.

Mr. WILLIAMS. But, Mr. Speaker, he can not yield to the gentleman thirty minutes—

Mr. CANNON. I ask unanimous consent to extend the time thirty minutes.

Mr. WILLIAMS. How is the time to be controlled in the thirty minutes?

Mr. CANNON. I suppose half and half.

Mr. CANNON. I suppose half and half.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pending the motion of the gentleman from Vermont, that the previous question be ordered on the amendment, and to the engrossment, third reading, and passage of the bill, the gentleman from Illinois asks unanimous consent that the time for debate be extended thirty minutes, to be equally divided between the friends and the opponents of the bill, and that at the expiration of that time the vote be taken on the motion of the gentleman from Vermont.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Before that is submitted to the House, Mr. Speaker, under whose control is the time to be?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair would recognize the gentleman from Illinois to occupy the time in opposition to the bill and the gentleman from Vermont to control the time in favor of the bill.

Mr. TRACEY. A parliamentary inquiry, Mr. Speaker.
The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Missouri.
Mr. WILLIAMS. I want to ask a question.
Mr. TRACEY. I want to make this parliamentary inquiry:
Will there be any opportunity to offer an amendment to the bill during that time?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Not under existing conditions. Mr. CANNON. If the previous question is voted down, there will be.

Mr. TRACEY. Then let us vote it down.
Mr. CANNON. Let us have a discussion for thirty minutes.

Mr. CANNON. Let us have a discussion for thirty minutes.
The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Illinois?
Mr. WILLIAMS. I want to submit a parliamentary inquiry, and I will be excused for making it, because I am not as old and experienced as many other gentlemen around me. The gentleman from New York [Mr. WADSWORTH], chairman of the Committee on Agriculture, in control of this bill, yielded to the gentleman from Vermont. Does he yield for an hour, or does he yield the control of the bill to him?
Mr. WADSWORTH. I yielded the control of the bill to the

Mr. WADSWORTH. I yielded the control of the bill to the gentleman from Vermont.

Mr. WILLIAMS. There are other members of the Committee on Agriculture, one of whom I am, who desire to debate this bill.

Mr. STEELE. I call for the regular order.

Mr. CANNON. I hope that my friend from Indiana will not do that.

Mr. STEELE. I will yield for the purpose of discussion, but not for these side speeches. The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Illinois for an extension of the time of debate as stated by the Chair?

Mr. WILLIAMS. Provided that the previous question is not coupled with it, I will not object.

Mr. CANNON. It leaves the previous question just where it

Mr. WILLIAMS. If it is the understanding that the demand

Mr. WILLIAMS. If it is the understanding that the demand for the previous question is not coupled with the request, then I will not object. If it is, I object.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair has stated the request. Mr. DOCKERY. A parliamentary inquiry—

Mr. WILLIAMS. If it has coupled with it, according to the statement of the gentleman from Vermont—

Mr. DOCKERY (continuing). In the event the time is extended, one-half to be controlled by the gentleman from Illinois, will he have the right in his fifteen minutes to offer any amendments?

one-half to be controlled by the gentleman from Illinois, will he have the right in his fifteen minutes to offer any amendments?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair thinks not.
Mr. WILLIAMS. Understanding, Mr. Speaker, that the demand for the previous question goes with the request for the extension, I object. Now, if the gentleman from Illinois will put his request in his own way I will not object.

Mr. CANNON. My request is that the time for discussion be extended thirty minutes.

Mr. WILLIAMS. To that I do not object.
Mr. CANNON. Then at the end of the thirty minutes the previous question will be voted upon.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection?
Mr. COX. I object.

Mr. COX. I object.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Objection is made.

Mr. CANNON. I wish you would not do that.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Vermont has demanded the previous question—

Mr. CANNON. I hope the previous question will be voted

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Vermont has asked for the previous question on the amendment, and to the engrossment, third reading, and final passage of the bill.

The question was taken on ordering the previous question, and the Speaker pro tempore announced that the noes seemed to

Mr. GROUT. I call for a division.
The question being taken, there were—ayes 62, noes 66.
Mr. GROUT. I call for tellers.

Tellers were ordered; and Mr. Grout and Mr. Cannon were appointed.

Mr. CANNON. I hope the Chair will appoint some one in my

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair appoints the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. COOKE] to act as teller in place of the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. CANNON].

The House again divided; and the tellers reported—ayes 72, noes 70.

Mr. WILLIAMS. No quorum.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The point is made that no quorum

Mr. WILLIAMS. I withdraw that point, and I call for the yeas and nays.

Mr. GROUT. I hope the yeas and nays will be ordered. Let us all rise.

Crowther, Crowther, Curtis, Iowa Curtis, Kans. Danford, Daniels, Dolliver,

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The question was taken; and there were-yeas 90, nays 100, not voting 165; as follows:

Aldrich, T. H. Sabcock. Saker, Md. Saker, Md. Saker, N. H. Sarney, Sennett, Silve, Sromwell, Burrell, Burr	vans, airchild, letcher, cote, amble, aardner, illet, N. Y. tager, laterman, arris, eatwole, tenry, Conn. licks, ill, towe, tull, tullck, tull, enkins, ohnson, N. Dak. iefer, acey, eighty.	Leonard, Linton, McCleary, Minn. McLachlan, Miller, W. Va. Minner, Wis. Minor, Wis. Mitchell, Mondell, Morse, Murray, Northway, Otjen, Overstreet, Payne, Perkins, Phillips, Pitney, Poole, Pugh, Scranton, Smith, Mch. Southwick.	Spalding, Sperry, Stahle, Stephenson, Stewart, Wis. Stone, C. W. Strode, Nebr. Strong, Taft, Tawney, Tayler, Thomas, Updegraff, Van Voorhis, Wadsworth, Wanger, Warner, Warner, Wellington, Willis, Woomer, Wright.
omver, L		Southwick,

NAVS_100

MAID-104
Abbott,	Cooper, Tex.	Knox,	Richardson,
Allen, Utah	Corliss,	Kyle,	Robertson, La.
Anderson,	Cox,	Latimer,	Sayers,
Arnold, R. I.	Crisp,	Layton,	Shafroth,
Atwood,	Crowley,	Linney,	Smith, Ill.
Avery,	Culberson,	Little,	Southard,
Bailey,	Cummings,	Livingston,	Stallings,
Baker, Kans.	De Armond,	Maguire,	Stokes,
Bankhead,	Dinsmore,	Marsh.	Stone, W. A.
Barrett,	Dockery,	Martin,	Tate,
Bartlett, Ga.	Ellis,	McClellan,	Terry,
Belknap,	Erdman,	McDearmon,	Towne,
Bell, Colo.	Fitzgerald,	McEwan,	Tracey,
Berry,	Foss,	Mercer,	Treloar,
Black,	Gibson,	Money,	Tucker,
Boatner,	Grout,	Mozley,	Turner, Ga.
Bull,	Harrison,	Murphy,	Turner, Va.
Burton, Mo.	Hartman,	Neill,	Tyler,
Cannon,	Hendrick,	Ogden,	Van Horn,
Catchings,	Hopkins,	Otey,	Walker, Va.
Clardy,	Howard,	Pendleton,	Washington,
Clarke, Ala,	Jones,	Price,	White,
Connolly,	Kem,	Quigg,	Williams,
Cooke, Ill.	Kirkpatrick,	Raney,	Wood,
Cooper Fle	Wlohowe	Pagraga	Voolenm

NOT VOTING-165.

Adams,	Faris,	Lefever,	Rinaker,
Aitken,	Fenton,	Leisenring,	Robinson, Pa
Aldrich, W. F.	Fischer,	Lester,	Royse,
Aldrich, Ill.	Fowler, Gillett, Mass.	Lewis,	Rusk,
Allen, Miss.	Gillett, Mass.	Long,	Russell, Con
Andrews,	Goodwyn,	Lorimer,	Russell, Ga.
Apsley,	Graff,	Loud,	Sauerhering
Arnold, Pa.	Griffin,	Loudenslager,	Settle,
Barham,	Griswold,	Low,	Shannon,
Bartholdt,	Grosvenor,	Maddox,	Shaw,
Bartlett, N. Y.	Grow,	Mahany,	Sherman,
Beach,	Hadley, Hainer, Nebr.	Mahon,	Shuford,
Bell, Tex.	Hainer, Nebr.	McCall, Mass.	Simpkins,
Bingham,	Hall,	McCall, Tenn.	Skinner,
Boutelle,	Hanly,	McClure,	Snover,
Bowers,	Hardy,	McCormick,	Sorg,
Brewster,	Harmer,	McCreary, Ky.	Sparkman,
Brosius,	Hart,	McCulloch,	Spencer,
Brown,	Hatch,	McLaurin,	Steele,
Brumm,	Heiner, Pa.	McMillin,	Stewart, N. J
Buck,	Hemenway,	McRae,	Strait,
Calderhead,	Henderson,	Meiklejohn,	Strowd, N. C
Clark, Mo.	Henry, Ind.	Meredith,	Sulloway,
Cobb,	Hepburn,	Meyer,	Sulzer,
Cockrell,	Hermann,	Miles,	Swanson,
Coffin,	Hilborn,	Miller, Kans.	Talbert,
Colson,	Hitt,	Milliken,	Thorp,
Cook, Wis.	Hooker,	Miner, N. Y.	Tracewell,
Cousins,	Howell,	Moody,	Walker, Mas
Cowen,	Hubbard,	Moses,	Watson, Ind.
Crump, Ourtis, N. Y.	Huff,	Newlands,	Watson, Ohio
Ourtis, N. Y.	Huling,	Noonan,	Wheeler,
Dalzell,	Hurley,	Odell,	Wilber,
Dayton,	Hutcheson,	Owens,	Wilson, Idah
Denny,	Hyde,	Parker,	Wilson, N. Y.
De Witt,	Johnson, Cal.	Patterson,	Wilson, Ohio
Dingley,	Johnson, Ind.	Pearson,	Wilson, S. C.
Doolittle,	Joy,	Pickler,	Woodard,
Dovener,	Kendall,	Powers,	Woodman.
Draper,	Kerr,	Prince,
Eddy,	Kulp,	Ray,
Ellett,	Lawson,	Reyburn,

So the House refused to order the previous question.

Mr. GROUT (before the result was announced) changed his vote from "aye" to "no."

The following pairs were announced:

Until further notice:

Until further notice:
Mr. Kulp with Mr. Hutcheson.
Mr. Cousins with Mr. Cowen.
Mr. Crump with Mr. Maddox.
Mr. Hanly with Mr. Moses.
Mr. Hemenway with Mr. Miner of New York.
Mr. Woomer with Mr. Shaw.

Mr. Wilber with Mr. Sorg.

Mr. Watson of Indiana with Mr. Meyer. Mr. Hitt with Mr. McRae. Mr. Tracewell with Mr. Russell of Georgia.

For this day:

Mr. BROSIUS with Mr. COCKRELL. Mr. Bowers with Mr. Kendall. Mr. Woodard with Mr. Skinner.

Mr. WOODARD WITH Mr. SKINNER.
Mr. LEISENRING WITH Mr. STRAIT.
Mr. LOUDENSLAGER WITH Mr. TALBERT.
Mr. HULING WITH Mr. ALLEN OF Mississippi.
Mr. HENRY OF Indiana WITH Mr. STROWD OF NOrth Carolina.
Mr. GROSVENOR WITH Mr. McCreary Of Kentucky.
Mr. McCall of Massachusetts WITH Mr. HART. Mr. Stewart of New Jersey with Mr. Ellett. Mr. Pickler with Mr. Wilson of South Carolina. Mr. McCall of Tennessee with Mr. McLaurin.

Mr. Bingham with Mr. Swanson. Mr. Snover with Mr. Spencer. Mr. Reyburn with Mr. McMillin.

Mr. McClure with Mr. Meredith.
Mr. Aitken with Mr. Cobb.
Mr. Hainer of Nebraska with Mr. Lester,
Mr. Harmer with Mr. Lawson.
Mr. Cook of Wisconsin with Mr. Hall.

Mr. MILLIKEN with Mr. BELL of Texas.

Mr. SULLOWAY with Mr. SPARKMAN.

Mr. SIMPKINS with Mr. OWENS.

Mr. Lefever with Mr. Sulzer. The result of the vote was announced as above stated.

Mr. GROUT. I move to reconsider the vote just taken, and pending that-

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Vermont [Mr. Grout] moves to reconsider the vote by which the House refused to order the previous question.

Mr. WILLIAMS. I move that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

Mr. GROUT. I move that the House adjourn.
The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Vermont moves that the House adjourn. The Chair will state that if the House should now adjourn, the right to lay on the table the motion to reconsider will still remain.

The question being taken on the motion to adjourn, there were on a division (called for by Mr. WILLIAMS)—ayes 116, noes 17. So the motion to adjourn was agreed to.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED.

Before the result of the vote on the motion to adjourn was announced

Mr. HAGER, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that they had examined and found truly enrolled bills of the following titles; when the Speaker signed the same:

lowing titles; when the Speaker signed the same:
A bill (S. 2334) construing the acts of Congress in relation to the award of life-saving medals;
A bill (S. 1424) to amend an act entitled "An act to amend section 4178, Revised Statutes, in relation to marking of vessels' names at bow and stern, and also to provide for marking the draft," approved February 21, 1891;
A bill (S. 1725) authorizing the Kansas City, Watkins and Gulf Railway Company to construct and maintain a bridge across Red River at the City of Alexandria, La.; and
A bill (S. 206) to provide an American register for the steamer Kahului.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE.

By unanimous consent, leave of absence was granted as follows: To Mr. Draper, for two days, on account of important business. To Mr. Howell, for five days, on account of sickness.

REPRINTING OF A REPORT.

On motion of Mr. MILLIKEN, by unanimous consent, a reprint was ordered of House Report No. 1021.

The result of the vote on the motion to adjourn was then announced; and accordingly (at 4 o'clock and 45 minutes p. m.) the House adjourned.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES ON PUBLIC BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS.

Under clause 2 of Rule XIII, bills and resolutions were severally reported from committees, delivered to the Clerk, and referred to the several Calendars therein named, as follows:

Mr. PAYNE, from the Committee on the Merchant Marine and Fisheries, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 9734) to provide an American register for the bark E. C. Mowatt, of Philadelphia, Pa., reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 2503); which said bill and report were referred to the House Calendar.

Mr. CUMMINGS, from the Committee on Naval Affairs, to which was referred the joint resolution of the House (H. Res. 223) relative to the medal of honor authorized by the acts of December 21, 1861, and July 16, 1862, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 2504) in writing thereon; which said bill, amendment, and report were referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. LACEY, from the Committee on the Public Lands, to which

Mr. LACEY, from the Committee on the Public Lands, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 9948) to amend subdivision 10 of section 2238, and to repeal subdivision 12 of section 2238 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 2506); which said bill and report were referred to the House Calendar. Mr. BRODERICK, from the Committee on the Judiciary, to which was referred the bill of the Senate (S. 2037) entitled "An act to provide times and places for holding terms of United States courts in Utah," reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 2518); which said bill and report were referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union. the Union.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES ON PRIVATE BILLS.

Under clause 2 of Rule XIII, private bills and resolutions were severally reported from committees, delivered to the Clerk, and referred to the Committee of the Whole House, as follows:

By Mr. MOZLEY, from the Committee on Pensions: The bill (H. R. 9619) granting a pension to Mirum C. Peck. (Report No. 2005)

2505.)

By Mr. THOMAS, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions: The bill (H. R. 9689) for the relief of Daniel E. De Clute. (Report No. 2507.)

The bill (H. R. 4929) granting a pension to Mary J. Secor.

(Report No. 2508.) The bill (H. R. 8204) granting a pension to Ellen Charlton.

(Report No. 2509.)
The bill (H. R. 9943) granting a pension to Ellen Charlton.
(Report No. 2510.)

The bill (H. R. 9942) granting a pension to George Francis.

(Report No. 2511.) By Mr. TRACEY, from the Committee on Military Affairs: The bill (H. R. 9666) to correct and amend the military record of John Long, late private, Company H, Thirty-first Regiment Mis-souri Volunteers. (Report No. 2512.)

PUBLIC BILLS, MEMORIALS, AND RESOLUTIONS.

Under clause 3 of Rule XXII, bills, resolutions, and memorials of the following titles were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. BERRY: A bill (H. R. 9962) for the erection of a public building at Carrollton, Ky.—to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

By Mr. BARRETT: A bill (H.R. 9963) granting thirty days' leave of absence with pay to the employees of the Government Printing Office and the Bureau of Engraving and Printing—to the Committee on Printing.

By Mr. COCKRELL: A bill (H. R. 9964) to provide for the purchase of a site and the erection of a public building thereon at Abilene, in the State of Texas—to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

By Mr. BARRETT: A bill (H. R. 9965) for the improvement of the United States Naval Hospital at Chelsea, Mass.—to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

By Mr. BURTON of Missouri: A bill (H. R. 9966) to further define certain duties of the Sergeant-at-Arms of the House of Representatives, the same being supplementary to an act under the same caption approved October 1, 1890—to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. HILBORN: A bill (H. R. 9973) to authorize the purchase of the property known as the Corcoran Art Gallery, in the city of Washington, D. C.—to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

By Mr. BABCOCK: A bill (H. R. 9974) to define the duties of the secretary of the District of Columbia—to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

Also, a bill (H. R. 9975) to amend an act approved March 2, 1895, entitled "An act for the removal of snow and ice from the sidewalks, cross walks, and gutters in the cities of Washington and Georgetown," etc.—to the Committee on the District of Colum-

Also, a bill (H. R. 9976) to punish the impersonation of inspectors of the health and other departments of the District of Columbia—to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

By Mr. CLARKE of Alabama: A joint resolution (H. Res. 231) relative to the improvement of the waterway between Birmingham, Ala., and the Black Warrior River-to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

By Mr. OTEY: A resolution (House Res. No. 488) directing the Secretaries of War and Navy to furnish Senators and Representa-tives with copy of Rebellion Records, Army and Navy—to the Committee on Printing.

PRIVATE BILLS, ETC.

Under clause 1 of Rule XXII, private bills of the following titles were presented and referred as follows:

By Mr. BARHAM: A bill (H. R. 9967) for the relief of Daley & Zollner—to the Committee on Patents.

By Mr. CLARK of Missouri: A bill (H. R. 9968) granting a pension to Isabella Sacket—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 9969) to correct the military record of James Dutton—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. HICKS: A bill (H. R. 9970) to remove charge of desertion against James J. Fluke—to the Committee on Military

By Mr. WILLIAMS: A bill (H. R. 9971) for the relief of Miss M. O. Chapman, postmaster of Paulding, Jasper County, Miss.—to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. WOOD: A bill (H. R. 9972) granting a pension to Charles M. Layman—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

PETITIONS, ETC.

Under clause 1 of Rule XXII, the following petitions and papers were laid on the Clerk's desk and referred as follows:

By Mr. ACHESON: Petition of Col. William P. Tyler, of Wash-

By Mr. ACHESON: Petition of Col. William P. Tyler, of Washington, Pa., for the preservation of the old frigate Constitution—to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

By Mr. BARRETT: Petition of C. S. Goddard & Sons, of Worcester, Mass.; also of A. F. Cox & Son, of Portland, Me.; also of Isaac Prouty & Co., of Spencer, Mass., protesting against imposing a duty on hides—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, memorial to accompany a bill granting thirty days' leave of absence with pay to the employees of the Government Printing.

Office and the Bureau of Engraving and Printing-to the Committee on Printing.

By Mr. BREWSTER: Resolutions of E. G. Marshall Post, No. 397, Department of New York, Grand Army of the Republic, in favor of granting belligerent rights to the Cubans—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

By Mr. BROWN: Petition of John Powell, of Franklin County, Tenn., praying that his war claim be referred to the Court of Claims under the Bowman Act—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. COOKE of Illinois: Resolutions of the John A. Logan

Club, of Chicago, Ill., relative to the recognition of the independence of Cuba—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

By Mr. CURTIS of New York: Petition of Fred. W. Smith and 27 other citizens of Blue Mountain Lake, N. Y., favoring the recognition of the independence of Cuba—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

By Mr. DOLLIVER: Petition of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union of Algona, Iowa, urging the passage of House bill No. 6119, known as the Phillips bill—to the Committee on Labor.

Also, petition of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union of Algona, Iowa, praying for the passage of House bill No. 7441 and Senate bill No. 2846, for the prevention of gambling—to the Com-

Also, petition of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union of Algona, Iowa, favoring the passage of House bill No. 3203, known as the Broderick bill, and Senate bill No. 1498—to the Committee on the Judiciary

By Mr. FLETCHER: Petition of Thomas Gibson and 248 other citizens and ex-Union soldiers of the city of Minneapolis, Minn., in favor of House bill No. 9209, granting a service pension to honorably discharged officers and soldiers of the war of the rebellion—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions. By Mr. MOODY: Petition of councils of Junior Order of American Mechanics of the State of Massachusetts, urging the recognition of the Cubans as belligerents in their struggle for liberty—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

By Mr. LEISENRING: Protest of J. E. Lentz, of Packerton, Pa., representing the Lehigh Valley Railroad Company's Car Builders' Association, opposing the metric system—to the Committee on Coinage, Weights, and Measures.

By Mr. STRONG: Sundry resolutions and petitions of professors and students of the Ohio Normal University, of Ada, Ohio; Eugene Reynolds Post, Grand Army of the Republic, of Bellefontaine, Ohio; Bigelow Council, No. 342, Junior Order United American Mechanics, of Richwood, Ohio, and 140 citizens of New Richland, Ohio, urging the passage of a resolution recognizing the independence of Cuba—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

By Mr. WOOD: Evidence in support of House bill No. 2002.

By Mr. WOOD: Evidence in support of House bill No. 9959, to grant an honorable discharge to Thomas J. Goolman, of Company I, Third Indiana Cavalry—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Also, petition of Charles M. Layman, of Company D. Forty-seventh Ohio National Guard, for pension—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

SENATE.

THURSDAY, January 14, 1897.

Prayer by the Chaplain, Rev. W. H. MILBURN, D. D. The Journal of yesterday's proceedings was read and approved. CERTIFICATION OF ELECTORS

The VICE-PRESIDENT laid before the Senate two communications from the Secretary of State, transmitting, in pursuance of the provisions of the act of February 3, 1887, certified copies of the final ascertainment of the electors for President and Vice-President for the States of California and Kansas; which were ordered to lie on the table.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED.

The VICE-PRESIDENT announced his signature to the following enrolled bills; which had previously been signed by the Speaker of the House of Representatives:

A bill (S. 1646) providing for certain requirements for vessels propelled by gas, fluid, naphtha, and electric motors; and A bill (S. 1726) to approve and ratify the construction of a bridge across the Red River, between the States of Arkansas and Texas, at a point above the town of Fulton, in Arkansas, on said river, built by the Texarkana Northern Railway Company, but now owned and operated by the Texarkana and Fort Smith Railway Company, and to authorize the latter company to maintain said bridge over said waterway, subject to certain stipulations and conditions.

THOMAS POLLOCK.

The VICE-PRESIDENT laid before the Senate the amendment of the House of Representatives to the bill (S. 2176) granting a pension to Thomas Pollock.

The amendment of the House of Representatives was, in line 7, after the word "at," to strike out the words "the rate of $20 per month" and insert "such rate as the degree of his alleged disability may entitle him to."

Mr. SHOUP. I move that the Senate concur in the amendment of the House of Representatives. The motion was agreed to.

PETITIONS AND MEMORIALS.

The VICE-PRESIDENT presented a petition of sundry citizens of Philadelphia, Pa., praying Congress to recognize the independence of Cuba; which was ordered to lie on the table.

Mr. BURROWS presented a petition of the Michigan State board of health, praying for the passage of the so-called Wright bill, providing for a permanent census service; which was referred to the Committee on the Census.

He also presented a petition of state heard of health of

He also presented a memorial of the State board of health of Michigan, remonstrating against the passage of Senate bill No. 1552, for the further prevention of cruelty to animals in the District of Columbia; which was ordered to lie on the table.

Mr. JONES of Arkansas. I present a petition of certain Catawba Indians, praying that the Secretary of the Interior be directed to inform them as to the status of the tribal lands of the Catawba Indians formerly compiled by the tribe in the Carolines and the Indians formerly occupied by that tribe in the Carolinas, and to secure anything that may be due them as accruing from these lands. The petition is accompanied by a resolution. I move that the petition and accompanying resolution be referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. FRYE presented a memorial of the Boston Paper Trade on Interstate Commerce.

Association, of Boston, Mass., remonstrating against the passage of the so-called Loud bill, relating to second-class mail matter; which was referred to the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads.

Mr. ALLISON presented a petition of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union of Algona, Iowa, praying for the passage of the so-called Broderick bill, to punish the carnal and unlawful knowing of any female under the age of 18 years; which was referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

He also presented a petition of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union of Algona, Iowa, praying for the passage of Senate bill No. 2846, to protect State antigambling laws from nullification through interstate gambling by telegraph, telephone, and otherwise, etc.; which was referred to the Committee on Interstate Commerce.

Healso presented a memorial of Local Union, No. 4, International Brotherhood of Bookbinders, of Washington, D. C., remonstrating against the enactment of legislation reducing the salaries of Gov ernment employees; which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations.

Appropriations.

He also presented the memorials of Thompson & Strong, publishers of the Semi-Weekly Madisonian, of Winterset, Iowa; of S. M. & F. E. Stauffer, publishers of the Sac Sun, of Sac City, Iowa; of A. H. Rudd, publisher of the Enterprise, of Dow City, Iowa; of F. A. Gates, publisher of the Boone Valley Gazette, of Eagle Grove, Iowa; of James M. Haskins, publisher of the Republican, of Sioux Rapids, Iowa; of J. B. Swinburne, publisher of the Earlyille Phœnix, of Earlyille, Iowa; of Charles A. Joseph, publisher of the Farley Advertiser, of Farley, Iowa; of L. Gonner, publisher of the Kathalischer Wester and Luxemburger Gazette, of Dubuque, Iowa; of Will M. Narvis, of the Six Journals Printing Company. of the Kathalischer Wester and Luxemburger Gazette, of Dubuque, Iowa; of Will M. Narvis, of the Six Journals Printing Company, of Muscatine, Iowa; of S. R. Yager, publisher of the Courier, of Calmar, Iowa; of W. R. Mead, publisher of the Iowa Plain Dealer, of Cresco, Iowa; of Charles D. Brown & Co., publishers of the Chariton Herald, of Chariton, Iowa; of John J. Clark, publisher of the Daily and Weekly Times-Republican, of Bedford, Iowa; of George E. Taylor, publisher of the Negro Solicitor, of Oskaloosa, Iowa; of Ed. Madigan, publisher of the Star, of Clarksville, Iowa; of Dorcas Bros., publishers of the Mechanicsville Press, of Mechanicsville, Iowa; of Oscar A. Hoffmann, publisher of the Sioux City Volksfreund, of Sioux City, Iowa; of Boardman Cooley and Clarence Marsh, publishers of the Mail-Press, of Strawberry Point, Iowa; of C. O. Stout, publisher of the Jackson Journal, of Maquoketa, Iowa; of Dyke & Odds, publishers of the Intelligencer, of Charles City, Iowa; of E. M. Jenison, publisher of the Republican, of Ottumwa, Iowa; of John Westley Geiger, publisher of the Freemason and the Fez, of Cedar Rapids, Iowa; of George B. Boatman, publisher of the Iowa Medical Journal, of Des Moines, Iowa; of E. E. Nichols, publisher of the Register, of Manilla, Iowa; of E. E. Nichols, publisher of the Register, of Manilla, Iowa; of of E. E. Nichols, publisher of the Register, of Manilla, Iowa; of J. A. Digerness, publisher of the Chronicle, of Ellsworth, Iowa; of Snyder & Hurd, publishers of the Gazette, of Cedar Falls, Iowa; of E. A. Bryan, publisher of the Bulletin, of Perry, Iowa; of S. W. Young, publisher of the Herald, of Henderson, Iowa; of John T. Young, publisher of the Herald, of Henderson, Iowa; of John T. Thornton, publisher of the Sentinel, of Farragut, Iowa; of C. D. Baldwin, publisher of the Pioneer, of Cascade, Iowa; of Duncombe Bros., publishers of the Chronicle, of Fort Dodge, Iowa; of B. T. Holst, publisher of the Boone County Teacher, of Boonesboro, Iowa; of C. A. Warwick, publisher of the Constitutional Democrat, of Keokuk, Iowa; of A. J. Kynett, publisher of the Christianity in Earnest, of Philadelphia, Pa.; of H. R. Gregory, publisher of the Montgomery County Independent, of Iowa; of Dunlevy Bros., publishers of the Allamakee Journal, of Iowa, and of Schockley Bros. & Cook, publishers of the Saturday Globe, the Iowa Helper, the Penn Chronicle, and the Western Work, of Iowa, remonstrating against the passage of the so-called Loud bill, relating to second-class mail matter; which were referred to the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads.

Mr. CULLOM presented a petition of the Lake Seamen's Union.

Mr. CULLOM presented a petition of the Lake Seamen's Union, of Chicago, Ill., praying for the enactment of legislation giving better protection to American seamen; which was referred to the Committee on Commerce.

He also presented a petition of the Hersman Church and the Christian Endeavor Society of Hersman, Ill., praying for the enactment of legislation abolishing the saloon in the National Capitol; which was referred to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

He also presented the memorial of William C. Hollister, publisher of the Eight-Hour Herald, of Chicago, Ill., remonstrating against the passage of the so-called Loud bill, relating to second-class mail matter; which was referred to the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads.

He also presented resolutions adopted at a meeting of the Methodist ministers of Cincinnati, Ohio, favoring the passage of inter-state antigambling laws; which were referred to the Committee

Mr. HILL presented a petition of E. G. Marshall Post, No. 397, Department of New York, Grand Army of the Republic, of Rochester, N. Y., and a petition of sundry citizens of Blue Mountain Lake, N. Y., praying Congress to recognize the independence of Cuba; which were ordered to lie on the table.

Mr. BATE presented the memorials of Waters & Co., publishers of Good Reading, of South Berlin, Tenn.; of Bald Vance, publisher of Messenger-Review, of Humboldt, Tenn.; of P. J. Hanifin & Co., publishers of Cooperative Detective and Police Journal, of Nashville, Tenn., and of the Review Publishing Company, publishers of the Review, of Knoxville, Tenn., remonstrating against the passage of the so-called Loud bill, relating to second-class mail matter; which were referred to the Committee on Post-Offices mail matter; which were referred to the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads.

Mr. DAVIS presented a petition of the Trades and Labor Council of Minneapolis, Minn., praying for the establishment of postal savings banks; which was referred to the Committee on Post-

Offices and Post-Roads.

He also presented resolutions adopted by the Chamber of Commerce of St. Paul, Minn., in favor of upholding the gold standard of money; which were referred to the Committee on Finance.

He also presented a petition of Duluth Division, No. 336, Order of Railway Conductors, of Two Harbors, Minn., praying for the passage of the so-called Phillips commission bill, the arbitration bill, and the contempt bill; which was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

He also presented a memorial of 30 firms of news dealers and booksellers of St. Paul, Minn., remonstrating against the passage of the so-called Loud bill, relating to second-class mail matter; which was referred to the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-

Roads.

Mr. CHANDLER. I present the memorial of William Hale, editor of the Hickory Press, of Hickory, N. C., earnestly protesting against the passage of the so-called Loud bill, regulating the transmission of second-class matter through the mails. As the bill has come to the Senate from the House and is now before the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads, I move that the memorial be referred to that committee.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. SEWELL presented a petition of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union of Vineland, N. J., praying for the enactment of legislation to amend the postal laws relating to second-class mail matter, and also prohibiting the transportation of obscene matter through the mails; which was referred to the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads.

He also presented the memorial of Joseph A. Door transported.

on Post-Offices and Post-Roads.

He also presented the memorial of Joseph A. Dear, treasurer of the Evening Journal Company, of Jersey City, N. J., remonstrating against the passage of the so-called Loud bill, relating to second-class mail matter; which was referred to the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads.

Mr. GEAR presented a partition of the Bantist church of West

Mr. GEAR presented a petition of the Baptist church of West Union, Iowa, and a petition of the Methodist church of West Union, Iowa, praying for the enactment of legislation raising the age of protection to girls to 18 in the District of Columbia and the Territories; which were referred to the Committee on the District of

He also presented a petition of the Baptist church of West Union, Iowa, and a petition of the Methodist church of West Union, Iowa, praying for the enactment of legislation prohibiting the sale of intoxicating liquors in Government buildings; which were referred to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

Mr. WETMORE presented a petition of the Young Irelanders' Association, Clan na Gael, of Pawtucket, R. I., praying for the passage of the so-called Cameron resolution recognizing the independence of Cuba; which was ordered to lie on the table.

He also presented the memorial of John W. Tillinghast and sundry other citizens of Rhode Island, remonstrating against the passage of the so-called Loud bill, relating to second-class mail matter; which was referred to the Committee on Post-Offices and

Mr. PROCTOR presented a memorial of the Business Men's Association of Burlington, Vt., remonstrating against any interference by the United States in the Cuban-Spanish war; which was ordered to lie on the table.

He also presented a petition of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union of Addison County, Vt., praying for the passage of the so-called Broderick bill, to punish the carnal and unlawful knowing of any female under the age of 18 years; which was referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

He also presented a petition of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union of Addison County, Vt., praying for the passage of Senate bill No. 2846, to protect State antigambling laws from nullification through interstate gambling by telegraph, telephone, and otherwise, etc.; which was referred to the Committee on Interstate Commerce.
Mr. McMILLAN presented petitions of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union of Vineyard, N. J.; of the Methodist church of Okum, Okla.; of 600 citizens of Chester County, Pa.; of the Trinity Episcopal Church of Vineland, N. J., and of 14 citizens of Okum, Okla., praying for the enactment of legislation raising the age of protection of girls to 18 years in the District of Columbia and the Territories; which were referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia of Columbia.

Mr. SHERMAN presented a memorial of sundry citizens of Youngstown, Ohio, remonstrating against the privation of rights of people and lawlessness in the South; which was referred to the Committee on Education and Labor.

He also presented the memorial of the Moore Printing Company, publishers of the McComb Record, of McComb, Ohio, remonstrating against the passage of the so-called Loud bill, relating to second-class mail matter; which was referred to the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads.

Mr. THURSTON presented a petition of sundry citizens of Omaha, Nebr., praying Congress to recognize the independence of Cuba; which was ordered to lie on the table.

He also presented the memorial of George A. Payant publishers

He also presented the memorial of George A. Bryant, publisher of the Waterloo Weekly Gazette, of Waterloo, Nebr., and the memorial of Homer E. Moore, publisher of the Primitive Chrismemorial of Homer E. Moore, publisher of the Frimilive Christian, of Panama, Nebr., remonstrating against the passage of the so-called Loud bill, relating to second-class mail matter; which were referred to the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads.

Mr. McBRIDE presented a petition of sundry citizens of Oregon, praying for the passage of the so-called Dingley tariff bill; which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

Mr. CALL. I present a petition of the citizens of St. Approximation.

was referred to the Committee on Finance.

Mr. CALL. I present a petition of the citizens of St. Augustine, Fla., accompanied by a letter from Henry Marcotte, praying that an appropriation be made for the preservation of the old fort at Matanzas Inlet, now in danger of complete destruction through the washing away of the foundation. I will state that this is an old fortification of the Middle Ages. I move that the petition be referred to the Committee on Military Affairs, and I request the committee to give it special consideration.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. HOAR presented a memorial of the Boston Paper Trade

Mr. HOAR presented a memorial of the Boston Paper Trade ssociation, remonstrating against the passage of the so-called Association, remonstrating against the passage of the so-called Loud bill, relating to second-class mail matter; which was referred to the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads.

Mr. COCKRELL presented a petition of the banking institutions of St. Louis, Mo., and a petition of the Live Stock Exchange of St. Louis, Mo., praying for the passage of the bill (H. R. 8298) relating to mortgages in the Indian Territory; which were referred to the Committee on the Live Indian Territory.

Mr. GORDON presented the memorial of Bickert & Blumenthal, of Atlanta, Ga., remonstrating against the enactment of legislation allowing distillers to bottle whisky in bond; which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

referred to the Committee on Finance.

Mr. PLATT presented a memorial of the Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor of Norwich, Conn., remonstrating against the sale of intoxicating liquors in the Capitol building; which was referred to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds. He also presented a memorial of the Boston Paper Trade Association, remonstrating against the passage of the so-called Loud bill, relating to second-class mail matter; which was referred to the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads.

Mr. SMITH presented a petition of the Young Men's Club of the First Congregational Church of Newark, N. J., praying Congress to recognize the independence of Cuba; which was ordered to lie on the table.

He also presented the memorials of David Spencer, editor of the

to lie on the table.

He also presented the memorials of David Spencer, editor of the Morris Journal, of Dover; of H. J. Decker, of Hoboken; of William H. Chew, publisher of the National Standard, of Salem; of C. E. Pearsell, publisher of the Union Standard, of Westfield; of Augustus Koehler, publisher of the Orange Sonntage Blatt, of Orange; of E. Corcia, publisher of La Montagwa, of Newark; of B. H. Crosby, publisher of the Tuckerton Beacon, of Tuckerton; of Eltweid Pomeroy, publisher of the District Legislative Record, of Newark; of Hugh Collins, publisher of the Pleasantville Press, of Pleasantville; of J. J. O'Sullivan, publisher of the Pilot, of Butler; of W. W. Bugle, publisher of the Ocean Grove Times-Record, of Ocean Grove; of F. B. Hoagland, publisher of the Points, of Paterson; of E. P. Roberts, publisher of the Unionist Gazette, of Somerville; of Stanton & Wilson, publishers of the Sussex Independent, of Deckertown; of Alexander Schlesinger, publisher of the New Jersey Staats Zeitung, of Jersey City; of George D. Roe, publisher of the Times and Journal, of Lakewood; of Benjamin Patterson, publisher of the Monitor-Register, of Woodstown; of the American Sabbath Tract Society, of Plainfield; of Schultze Pilgrim, publisher of the Daily News, of Phillipsof Schultze Pilgrim, publisher of the Daily News, of Phillipsburg; of the Rising Sun Publishing Company, of Nutley; of William Stout, publisher of the Church and Home, of Rockaway, all in the State of New Jersey; and a memorial of the American Trade Press Association of New York, remonstrating against the passage of the so-called Loud bill, relating to second-class mail matter; which were referred to the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-

Roads.

Mr. COCKRELL. I present a petition from leading St. Louis banking institutions, and one from leading members of the St. Louis Live Stock Exchange, in regard to the laws governing chattel mortgages in the Indian Territory, favoring the passage of House bill 8298, which was passed on the 18th of May last by the House off Representatives, sent to the Senate, and is now pending before the Committee on the Judiciary, and urging its passage as an absolute necessity. I move that the petitions be referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

The motion was agreed to.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

Mr. FRYE, from the Committee on Commerce, to whom was referred the amendment submitted by himself on the 18th instant, intended to be proposed to the diplomatic and consular appropriation bill, reported favorably thereon, and moved that it be referred to the Committee on Appropriations; which was agreed to.

Mr. HAWLEY, from the Committee on Military Affairs, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 9710) to authorize officers who served during the war of the rebellion in the Regular Army to bear the title and, on occasions of ceremony, wear the uniform of bear the title and, on occasions of ceremony, wear the uniform of their highest rank, reported it without amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

Mr. QUAY. I am instructed by the Committee on Appropriations, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 9638) making appropriations for the support of the Army for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1898, to report it with amendments, and submit a written report theron.

I desire to give notice that after the expiration of the morning business at the next session of the Senate I shall ask the Senate to put the bill upon its passage.

Mr. WETMORE, from the Committee on the Library, to whom was referred the bill (S. 1499) to purchase a portrait of Daniel D. Tompkins, late Vice-President of the United States, painted by Jarvis in 1812, reported it without amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

Mr. COCKRELL, from the Committee on Military Affairs, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 4853) for the relief of John Duncan, reported it with an amendment, and submitted a report

He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 6143) for the relief of Peter Young, reported it with amendments, and submitted a report thereon.

He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 9593) for the relief of W. H. Wade, late captain and acting regimental quartermaster Thirty-first Ohio Volunteers, reported it without amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

reported it without amendment, and submitted a report thereon. He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred the bill (S. 3486) for the relief of W. H. Wade, late captain and acting regimental quartermaster Thirty-first Ohio Volunteers, reported adversely thereon, and the bill was postponed indefinitely.

Mr. BATE, from the Committee on Military Affairs, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 3772) to correct the muster roll of Company I of the Seventh Iowa Infantry Volunteers, reported it without amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

Mr. NELSON, from the Committee on Commerce, to whom was referred the amendment submitted by Mr. Mills December 17, 1896, intended to be proposed to the sundry civil appropriation 1896, intended to be proposed to the sundry civil appropriation bill, reported a bill (S. 3525) to provide for an examination and survey of a water route from the mouth of the jetties, at the city of Galveston, Tex., through the ship channel and up Buffalo Bayou to the city of Houston, Tex., and appropriating money therefor; which was read twice by its title.

Mr. PROCTOR, from the Committee on Military Affairs, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 1836) granting an honorable discharge to Wilson Kale, reported it without amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

Mr. BRICE, from the Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (S. 2912) increasing the pension of William C. Forsythe, reported it without amendment, and submitted a report

He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred the bill (S. 3145) to increase the pension of William Hulsizer, reported it with an amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred the bill (S. 2991) granting a pension to George G. Eakins, reported it without amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred the bill (S. 2813) granting an increase of pension to Joseph Brown, reported it without amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred the bill (S. 2097) granting a pension to Joel M. Gibson, reported it without amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

Mr. HAWLEY, from the Committee on Military Affairs, to whom was referred an amendment submitted by Mr. CLARK on the 12th instant, intended to be proposed to the sundry civil appropriation bill, reported favorably thereon, and moved that it be referred to the Committee on Appropriations and printed; which was agreed to.

ARBITRATION TREATY WITH GREAT BRITAIN.

Mr. HALE, from the Committee on Printing, reported the following resolution; which was considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to:

Resolved, That the usual number of the recent treaty between the United States and Great Britain in relation to arbitration be printed as a legislative document, and that in addition thereto there be printed 3,000 copies, 2,500 of which shall be for the use of the Senate and 500 for the use of the State Department.

RECOGNITION OF FOREIGN GOVERNMENTS.

Mr. HALE, from the Committee on Printing, reported the following resolution; which was considered by unanimous consent. and agreed to:

Resolved, That there be printed 2,500 additional copies of Senate Document No. 40, Fifty-fourth Congress, second session, being "Memorandum on the method of recognition of foreign governments and foreign states by the Government of the United States, 1789 to 1897," 2,000 of which shall be for the use of the Senate, and sent to the Senate document room, and 500 for the use of the Department of State.

BILLS INTRODUCED.

Mr. DAVIS introduced a bill (S. 3526) to provide for the naturalization of certain Indians residing upon the Annette Islands, Alaska; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Territories

He also introduced a bill (S. 3527) granting a pension to Joseph Koehler; which was read twice by its title, and, with the accompanying papers, referred to the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. CULLOM introduced a bill (S. 3528) for the classification of clerks in first and second class post-offices; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads.

Mr. QUAY introduced a bill (S. 3529) to correct the military record of William Gilfoyle; which was read twice by its title, and, with the accompanying papers, referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Mr. SHOUP (for Mr. GALLINGER) introduced a bill (S. 3530) granting a pension to Emma Francis; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Pensions.

Heales (for Mr. GALLINGER) introduced a bill (S. 2521) great.

He also (for Mr. Gallinger) introduced a bill (S. 3531) granting a pension to George Francis; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Pensions.

He also (for Mr. Gallinger) introduced a bill (S. 3532) grant-

He also (for Mr. GALLINGER) introduced a bill (S. 3532) granting a pension to Jane B. Johnston; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. PERKINS introduced a bill (S. 3533) to amend an act to permit the use of the right of way through public lands for tramroads, canals, and reservoirs, and for other purposes; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Public Lands.

Mr. THURSTON introduced a bill (S. 3534) to grant a pension to Rev. Warren Cochran, of Omaha, Nebr.; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Pensions.

He also introduced a bill (S. 3535) granting an increase of pension of Aurelius Roberts; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. SHERMAN introduced a bill (S. 3536) to remove the charge of desertion from the military record of John Percella; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Mr. MANTLE introduced a bill (S. 3537) for the relief of Mary L. Le Fevre, Mrs. Jennie G. Bell, Thomas Jefferson Green, and Hal W. Green, heirs of Hal W. Green, deceased, late of Warren County, Miss.; which was read twice by its title, and, with the accompanying paper, referred to the Committee on Claims.

Mr. HILL introduced a bill (S. 3538) to amend section 8 of the act of Congress entitled "An act to establish a court of appeals for the District of Columbia, and for other purposes," approved February 9, 1893; which was read twice by its title and referred.

February 9, 1893; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Mr. CULLOM introduced a bill (S. 3539) providing for the adjudication of certain claims by the Court of Claims; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Claims.

Mr. COCKRELL introduced a bill (S. 3540) granting a pension to Mirum C. Peck; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. BRICE introduced a bill (S. 3541) granting a pension to Jane B. Johnston; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Pensions. Mr. HILL introduced a bill (S. 3542) granting a pension to Mrs. Susan T. Pratt, wife of Maj. Gen. Calvin E. Pratt; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Pensions

Mr. VEST introduced a joint resolution (S.R. 190) for the relief of Robert L. Lindsay; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

AMENDMENTS TO BILLS.

Mr. CHANDLER submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the general deficiency appropriation bill; which was ordered to be printed, and, with the accompanying paper, referred to the Committee on Finance.

He also submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the bill (H. R. 4566) to amend the postal laws relating to second-class matter; which was referred to the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads, and ordered to be printed.

Mr. McMILLAN submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the District appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia, and ordered to be printed.

Mr. BLACKBURN submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the Military Academy appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations.

Mr. PERKINS submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the general deficiency appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Public Lands, and ordered to be printed.

THE CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION.

Mr. CULLOM submitted the following resolution; which was considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to:

Resolved, That the United States Civil Service Commission is hereby directed to report to Congress whether, in obedience to the requirements of the civil-service law of January 16, 1883, the said Commission has made to the President, for transmission to Congress, an annual report for the fiscal year 1895, and also for the fiscal year 1896. And if so, give the dates thereof, and if not, give the reasons for such failure or neglect.

INTERSTATE COMMERCE INVESTIGATION.

Mr. CHANDLER submitted the following resolution; which was considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to:

Resolved. That the Committee on Interstate Commerce be directed, in connection with its investigations under the resolution of the Senate of December 9, 1896, to inquire into the agreement recently made by the managers of the lines of steamers on the Great Lakes to maintain such rates of freight transportation as may be fixed by the managers of the rallroads constituting the Joint Traffic Association.

PACIFIC RAILROADS.

Mr. MORGAN. I submit a resolution and ask that it may be read and lie over until a later day, when I propose to make some remarks upon it.

The resolution was read, and ordered to lie over, as follows:

The resolution was read, and ordered to he over, as follows:
Whereas it is alleged that certain bonds issued by the United States in aid of the Central Pacific Railroad Company and also of the Union Pacific Railroad Company have fallen due and remain unpaid, and that by reason of the default in the payment thereof the property held and owned by each of said companies at that time became the property of the United States, and that said property of every description so held and owned by said companies at the time of such default now rightfully belongs to the United States:

Resolved, That the Committee on the Judiciary is directed to examine into and report whether such allegation is true in fact and in law, and that they report the nature and character of the right and title of the United States in and to said property, and the descriptions of or classes of property that have so inured to the United States under the law, and whether either of said railroad companies has any lawful right or equity of redemption of said property.

MRS, DAISEY JOHNSON.

Mr. COCKRELL submitted the following resolution; which was referred to the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate:

Resolved, That the Secretary of the Senate be, and hereby is, authorized and directed to pay out of the appropriation for miscellaneous items of the contingent fund of the Senate to Mrs. Daisey Johnson, widow of the late Thomas R. Johnson, deceased, a laborer and acting watchman under the Architect of the Capitol, the sum of $960, being an amount equal to six months' salary as such laborer and acting watchman, and including all funeral and other allowances.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

I move that when the Senate adjourn to-day it be Mr. HALE. to meet on Monday next.

Mr. MILLS. I hope the Senator from Maine will hold that motion and let me call up a little local bill for Texas.

Mr. HALE. This is only the usual motion.

Mr. MILLS. I understand; but there may be some opposition to it, and I should like to get the bill up now.

Mr. HALE. Very well.

ARANSAS PASS IMPROVEMENTS.

Mr. MILLS. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (S. 3494) providing for an examination of the improvements at the Pass of Aransas, Texas. The bill has been unanimously recommended by the Committee on Commerce.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill. It provides that for the purpose of ascertaining the character and value of the improvements made at the Pass of Aransas, on the Gulf coast of Texas, by the Aransas Pass Harbor Company, a board of three engineers shall be appointed by the President, as follows: One a civil engineer and the other two from the Engineer Course of the Aransas and such the other two from the Engineer Corps of the Army; and such board shall personally make examination of the work done by the company for the purpose of deepening the channel and removing the bar at or near the Pass of Aransas.

It proposes to appropriate $5,000 to pay the expenses of the board and for the services of the engineers, the amount of compensation for the services to be fixed by the Corpstant of the compensation.

for the services to be fixed by the Secretary of War.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

ADJOURNMENT TO MONDAY.

Mr. HALE. I renew my motion.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Maine, that when the Senate adjourn to-day it be to meet on Monday next.

The motion was agreed to.

COLUMBIA RIVER BRIDGE.

Mr. WILSON. I ask unanimous consent to call up the bill (S. 3375) authorizing the construction of a bridge across the Columbia River, in the State of Washington.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

INAUGURAL CEREMONIES.

Mr. BACON. Three days since, by direction of the Committee on the District of Columbia, I reported from that committee a joint resolution looking to regulations with reference to the inaugural ceremonies. Upon the request of the Senator from Kansas [Mr. Peffer], the consideration was at that time postponed until the amendments of the committee could be printed. The amendments have been printed and laid on the desks of Senators for two days. I now ask the Senate to consent to the present consideration of the joint resolution, as it is important that the parties who are to be in charge of this work should know what they can be allowed to do.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from Georgia asks for the present consideration of a joint resolution, which will be read for information.

The Secretary read the joint resolution (H. Res. 214) authorizing the Secretary of War to grant permits to the executive committee on inaugural ceremonies for use of reservations or public spaces in city of Washington on the occasion of the inauguration of the President-elect on March 4, 1897, etc., as follows:

Resolved, etc., That the Secretary of War is hereby authorized to grant permits to the executive committee on inaugural ceremonies for the use of any reservations or other public spaces in the city of Washington on the occasion of the inauguration of the President-elect on the 4th day of March, 1897, which, in his opinion, will inflict no serious or permanent injuries upon such reservations or public spaces or statuary thereon; and the Commissioners of the District of Columbia may designate for such and other purposes on the occasion aforesaid such streets, avenues, and sidewalks in said city of Washington as they may deem proper and necessary: Provided, however, That all stands or platforms that may be erected on the public spaces aforesaid shall be under the supervision of the said executive committee and in accordance with plans and designs to be approved by the Architect of the Capitol, the Commissioner of Public Buildings and Grounds, and the building inspector of the District of Columbia.

The Committee on the District of Columbia reported to amend the joint resolution by adding the following additional sections, which were read:

which were read:

SEC. 2. That the Commissioners of the District of Columbia are hereby authorized to permit the committee on illumination of the citizens' executive committee for the inaugural ceremonies, March, 1897, to stretch suitable con ductors, with sufficient supports, wherever necessary, for the purpose of effecting the said illumination: Provided, That the said conductors shall not be used for the conveying of electrical currents after March 5, 1897, and shall, with their supports, be fully and entirely removed from the streets and avenues of the said city of Washington on or before March 15, 1897. Provided further, That the stretching and removing of the said wires shall be under the supervision of the Commissioners of the District of Columbia, who shall see that the provisions of this resolution are enforced, that all needful precautions are taken for the protection of the public, and that the pavement of any street, avenue, or alley disturbed is replaced in as good condition as before entering upon the work herein authorized: Provided further. That no expense or damage on account of or due to the stretching, operation, or removing of the said temporary overhead conductors shall be incurred by the United States or the District of Columbia.

SEC. 3. That $8,200, or as much thereof as may be necessary, payable from any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated and from the revenues of the District of Columbia to maintain public order and protect life and property in said District from the 28th of February to the 9th of March, 1897, both inclusive. Said Commissioners are hereby authorized and directed to make all reasonable regulations necessary to secure such preservation of public order and protection of life and property, and fixing fares by public conveyances during said period. Any person violating any of such regulations shall be liable for each such offense to a fine not to exceed $100 in the police court of said District, and in default of payment thereof to imprisonment in the workhouse of said District for not longer than sixty days.

SEC 4. That the Secretary of War and the Secretary of the Navy be, and they are hereby, authorized to loan to the committee on inaugural ceremonies such ensigns, flags, etc. (except battle flags), that are not now in use and may be suitable and proper for decoration and may be spared without detriment to the public service; such flags to be used by said committee under such regulations and restrictions as may be prescribed by the said Secretaries, or either of them, in decorating the fronts of public buildings and other places on the line of march between the Capitol and the Executive Mansion, and the interior of the reception hall: Provided, That the said committee shall indemnify the said Department, or either of them, for any loss or damage to such flags not necessarily incident to such use.

SEC 5. That the Commissioners of the District of Columbia be, and they are hereby, authorized to permit the Western Union Telegraph Company to extend overhead wires into the Pension building and to such points along the line of parade as shall be deemed by the chief marshal convenient for use in connection with the parade and other inaugural purposes, the said wires to be taken down within ten days after the conclusion of the ceremonies on the 4th day of March, A. D. 1897.

Mr. HALE. So far as I could gather in the confusion, that is a bill somewhat regulating matters in the District connected with the inauguration ceremonies.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. It is a joint resolution,
Mr. HALE. I should like to examine it before it is acted upon.
Mr. HOAR. What is the joint resolution?
Mr. HALE. I do not think any Senator exactly knows. I could not hear it very well.

Mr. BACON. I can not hear what the Senator says. Mr. HALE. I could not get at the scope of the joint resolution

Mr. HALE. I could not get at the scope of the joint resolution from the reading; there was so much confusion in the Chamber.
Mr. BACON. I will state to the Senator that the joint resolution embraces about the ordinary provision of the joint resolutions which have been agreed to by Congress on previous occasions when a President was to be inaugurated, looking to the use of streets and squares in such manner as the Secretary of War shall direct and consent to. I have been furnished by the clerk of the committee with a number of the joint resolutions agreed to upon previous occasions, and I have compared them with the present measure. While they are not identical in all particulars, they are substantially so.

are substantially so.

I will further state to the Senator from Maine that this joint resolution was reported from the Committee on the District of Columbia by me, by the direction of that committee, several days ago, with a request for immediate consideration, as it is important that the inaugural committee charged with this work shall know what permission is to be granted in order that they may make corresponding arrangements. Upon the request of a Senator the joint resolution, for which present consideration was then asked, was allowed to lie over to be printed for the convenience of Senators. Of course if the Senator has not seen the joint resolution in print, and desires time to examine it, there will be no objection to a further delay.

Mr. HALE. I should like to do that. Some of these things that have been permitted heretofore I do not think should be permitted now. I would not be willing that everything should be done as it has been done heretofore. I should look with great scrutiny and some jealousy upon giving the Commissioners of the District of Columbia very much power in relation to this matter. I will promise the Senator that I will examine it carefully, as other Senators desire to do, so that at the next meeting of the Senate he can call it up

Mr. HOAR. I should like to be permitted to say one word at this time.

Everybody well knows that in some years we have had a very inclement day for the inauguration of the President. People come from all parts of the country and stand out in the area east of the Capitol and catch their deaths by the exposure. I suppose in the year of the second inauguration of President Grant and in the year of the inauguration of President Harrison there were hundreds of persons who got serious diseases—perhaps hundreds got fatal diseases-by exposure.

It does seem to me that it must be practical and feasible to have some shelter, which shall be erected of plain boards, which will protect the gathering from rain or high wind or severe cold, withprotect the gathering from rain or high wind or severe cold, without limiting the number who can be present to see the inaugural ceremonies, the shelter to be put up before the inauguration, the material to be sold afterwards or kept for another occasion, and taken away immediately after. It appears to me that the capacity of the architects of this country ought to be sufficient to furnish a design for such a building. Mr. Clark, the Architect of the Capitol, seemed disinclined to take up the subject four years ago when it was suggested; he was unwilling to enter upon new and doubtful experiments in the matter; but I hope the executive committee will get the aid of some skilled architect and will see whether that thing can not be accomplished.

Mr. HALE. If the joint resolution goes over, it will be printed?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The joint resolution goes over, objec-

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The joint resolution goes over, objection being interposed.

Mr. HALE. I hope it will be printed. I want Senators to examine into it very thoroughly.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. It has been printed, and is on the Calendar, the Chair will state.

Mr. HALE. The District Commissioners, in defiance of law and in, I think, an impudent manner, have permitted the streets of Washington to be torn up, so that everywhere we are confronted with work upon streets that Congress has prohibited. I do not want to give any more power or discretion to the Board of Commissioners until I look into the proposition thoroughly.

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. W. J. Browning, its Chief Clerk, announced that the House had passed the following bills:

A bill (S. 347) to remove the charge of desertion and grant an honorable discharge to Helmuth F. Seeckel; and
A bill (S. 1075) for the relief of the heirs of D. Fulford.

The message also announced that the House had passed the following bills; in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate:

A bill (H. R. 710) to remove the charge of desertion against James A. Crouch;

A bill (H. R. 989) for the relief of Cogswell & Co.;
A bill (H. R. 1628) for the relief of Dewitt Eastman;
A bill (H. R. 2253) for the relief of Barzilla C. Hudson;
A bill (H. R. 2859) granting a pension to Harriet F. Herrick;
A bill (H. R. 3623) to amend section 4 of an act entitled "An act define the jurisdiction of the police court of the District of Columbia;"

A bill (H. R. 3851) to reimburse Col. Phillip Kirshner for money paid for the services of a band for the Sixteenth Regiment of Ohio Infantry Volunteers;
A bill (H. R. 3926) to correct the war record of David Sample;
A bill (H. R. 6834) to prevent the purchasing of or speculation in claims against the Federal Government by United States officers; A bill (H. R. 6883) to incorporate the Convention of American

Instructors of the Deaf;
A bill (H. R. 9671) to detach the county of Marion from the northern division of the northern district of Alabama and attach the same to the southern division of said district;

A bill (H. R. 9752) to amend an act entitled "An act to authorize the construction of a steel bridge over the St. Louis River between the States of Wisconsin and Minnesota," approved April 24, 1894, as amended by an act approved August 4, 1894, entitled "An act to amend an act to authorize the construction of a steel bridge over the St. Louis River between the States of Minnesota and Wisconsin: and

A bill (H. R. 9901) to detach the county of Audrain from the vestern district of Missouri and to attach the same to the eastern district of said State of Missouri.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED.

The message further announced that the Speaker of the House had signed the following enrolled bills and joint resolution:

A bill (S. 206) to provide an American register for the steamer

Kahului;
A bill (S. 1424) to amend an act entitled "An act to amend section 4178, Revised Statutes, in relation to the marking of vessels' names at bow and stern, and also to provide for marking the draft," approved February 21, 1891;
A bill (S. 1725) authorizing the Kansas City, Watkins and Gulf

Railway to construct and maintain a bridge across Red River, at the city of Alexandria, La.;

A bill (S. 1741) to authorize the Muskogee, Oklahoma and Western Railroad Company to construct and operate a line of railway through Oklahoma and the Indian Territory, and for other pur-

A bill (S. 2334) construing the acts of Congress in relation to the award of life-saving medals;
A bill (H. R. 4538) for the relief of John Keefe;
A bill (H. R. 8676) to enable the town of Flagstaff, in the Territory of Arizona, to issue bonds to construct a water system; and A joint resolution (S. R. 189) providing for the erection of a Government building at the Tennessee Centennial Exposition.

FREE HOMESTEADS IN OKLAHOMA TERRITORY.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The morning business is closed, and the Chair lays before the Senate the unfinished business coming the Chair lays before the Senate the unfinished business coming over by unanimous consent from yesterday.

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, resumed the consideration of the bill (H. R. 3656) providing for free homesteads on the public lands in Oklahoma Territory for actual and bona fide settlers and reserving the public lands for that purpose.

Mr. JONES of Arkansas. Mr. President, I hope that this bill will pass. Some of the speeches made here would seem to indicate that some Senators think that the homestead laws were designed simply to fill up the Western country and to provide freight for railroads. I am one of those who believe that the purpose of the homestead law was to permit the building of American homes; and I think it would be a desirable thing if every quarter section of land in this country had a home on it.

The public domain has been set apart absolutely for the use of The public domain has been set apart absolutely for the use of homes and homesteaders. I can see no difference whether the public domain has been derived from the French or from Indians. Lands that were bought years ago from France and paid for are open to homestead settlement, and no price is required to be paid by the homesteader except the expenses of the land office. When lands are acquired from Indians for the public domain, they because the state of the public domain, they because the state of the sta come a part of the public domain just as other lands are, and I can see no reason why the settlers on lands acquired from Indians should be required to pay for their homes when settlers on other lands are not. There is no just distinction between the two. It is true that when we acquired these lands a few years ago it was done with the understanding that the Government would be reimbursed for the appropriate that the Holious for the appropriate that the Government would be reimbursed. for the amounts of money paid to the Indians for the extinguishment of their title. If farming had been reasonably prosperous, this could easily have been done, but under the conditions which exist now it is a practical impossibility for a man to do more than

make a living on his homestead.

make a living on his homestead.

These people have gone on wild land; they have built houses and fences, and have cultivated the land. They have brought it under tillage; they have spent what little money they had in erecting houses and fences, and have been unable to save money enough, ing houses and fences, and have been unable to save money enough, in addition to making a living, to pay the small debt they owe the Government. Now, Mr. President, I ask what is to be done. If the lands are not remitted to these homesteaders, what will the Government do? Will it proceed to evict these people from their homes? Will it drive them out, and confiscate the houses and the fences they have built and the labor of their hands in bringing the land under tillage? This Government, strong and mighty and reversified as it is is not strong enough for that. There is a and powerful as it is, is not strong enough for that. There is a power behind the Government which will check and restrain any power beaind the Government which will check and restrain any such act of vandalism and ruthless robbery as that would be. Public opinion will not permit the Government of the United States to deprive these people of the pittance they have paid upon their homes in an honest effort to provide a place for their wives and children simply because of the hard conditions by which they are surrounded, which make it impossible for them to pay the Government the 50 or 75 cents or the $1.25 an acre which they promised to pay for the land.

Under these circumstances, it seems to me there is but one thing for the Senate to do. That is to concur in the action of the House of Representatives and remit this small amount of money in favor of these homesteaders, that they may be allowed to live in peace and not be harried by this great Government as if it was

The exact similarity between the lands acquired from Indians and the lands acquired from the French, it seems to me, is a sufficient reason why these homesteaders should have exactly the same right on this land that they would have on other public land.

There is another feature connected with this bill that commends

I have been here for some years and I it very warmly to me. have seen bills introduced to protect manufactures, bills introduced to extend the powers and rights and privileges of national banks, of railroads, and other corporations; but this, I believe, is about the first time that I have ever seen a bill introduced in this body which was intended to be of some benefit to a handful of farmers scattered through the homes of the West. I should like to see that sort of legislation encouraged to the extent of passing to see that sort of legislation encouraged to the extent of passing this bill. We have been in the habit of just legislating in favor of those people who are able to take care of themselves, who appear represented by lobbyists and attorneys around the Halls of Congress; but these people, who are unable to send anybody to represent them, simply make a plain statement that they are unable to pay this money for their homesteads, and they think it unfair that they should be required to do so, when homesteads have been freely given to other people.

freely given to other people.

If I had no other reasons, these would seem to me to be sufficient that this bill should pass.

Mr. GRAY. How much money will the bill take out of the Treasury?

Mr. JONES of Arkansas. It does not take out any. It will put

Mr. TELLER. Mr. President, the objection that has been invariably urged to the passage of this bill is the claim that it is taking from the Government of the United States a certain amount of money. The Senator from Connecticut [Mr. Platt] who addressed the Senate on the subject some days ago, I believe placed the possible loss to the Government at $35,000,000. That was the theory that all the land embraced in all of these several grants shall be sold for the price provided for in the statute.

It is well known to those who are familiar with the country where these reservations are located that a very small percentage of the land can ever be sold at the prices named. Take the reservation in the State of Colorado called the Ute Reservation. I vation in the State of Colorado called the Ute Reservation. I think to-day that practically all the available agricultural lands in that reservation may be said to be taken up. There remains a large quantity of mountain lands, mineral lands, which are not capable of being converted into farms, undisposed of, and which never will be disposed of except in a few cases where mineral claims may be made, which are not disturbed or interfered with by this proposed legislation. If every acre of the land should be taken, the Senator from Connecticut stated that there would be received for it by the Government $35,000,000, as I recollect. I have not myself attempted to figure it. We were told by the Senator from South Dakota [Mr. Pettigrew] that while the lands had been opened in that State for some time, yet comparatively a small number of acres had been taken; and that of those that had been taken for farms a number were in danger of being abandoned.

I have some personal knowledge of a goodly portion of these reser-

I have some personal knowledge of a goodly portion of these reservations. I have been twice across the Territory of Oklahoma from north to south on different lines; I have been on its borders, and I horth to south on different lines; I have been on its borders, and I know something of the climatic conditions as well as of the geography of the country. It is true that when this purchase was being made it was stated here and elsewhere that these lands were fertile and valuable lands. They are fertile lands, as stated by the Senator from Nebraska [Mr. Allen] the other day, and there are no more fertile lands anywhere than may be found in the Territory of Oklahoma and in other sections of that Western country; but it does not follow that they are so valuable for farning purbut it does not follow that they are so valuable for farming purposes, unless there shall be a sufficient quantity of water provided for irrigating purposes, for those lands lie in what we call the "arid belt."

The Senator from Connecticut seemed to think that he had made a great point against the bill when he read the report of the governor of the Territory of Oklahoma. The Senator ought to recollect—and I suppose it could not have escaped his notice, because he is on the committee which has been dealing with this provider of the Territory of pecause he is on the committee which has been dealing with this question—that there is a considerable portion of the Territory of Oklahoma which does not fall within the provisions of the pending bill. I do not remember how many, but there are several counties at least that were purchased of the Indians by the Government years ago, long before there was any settlement in the Oklahoma country, where we have not exacted from the settlers in that section any compensation whatever for the land. In seven counties, I am told by the Delegate from that Territory, lying in the eastern part, the most valuable of all that section of country, the settlers have been allowed to make settlement under the old homestead act Again, much of the valuable land on the line of the streams was selected by the Indians in the first instance. A large number of Indian locations were made on the Canadian and other streams. On the best land, on that which was most easily cultivated, that which was lying near the streams where it might be irrigated with less expense, the Indian has already made his allotment. I can not say that he has settled on those allotments, because I think in most cases he has not. But we gave to the Indians the choice, the preference. He could take from this fertile country the best of it before the white man could go upon it. Upon the residue a large number of white people have gone; I do not know how many; but as Oklahoma cast somewhere between fifty-three and fifty-four thousand votes at the last election, there must be a very fifty-four thousand votes at the last election, there must be a very large population in that section of the country. Most of this country taken under the provision of the paid homestead lies west of what we call the arid line. It lies west of that section of country where you can not depend on timely rains for the cultivation of the crops. If that country ever becomes a successful farming country, it must depend on irrigation, and it is a country where, unfortunately, during the period when irrigation is required there is a great searcity of water. Some day when can required there is a great scarcity of water. Some day, when capital can be induced to construct reservoirs, that country will be very valuable; but it will take a long time before that can be done. It may be done to some extent by farmers combining; it may be done by capital; but it must be done by the expenditure of a large amount of money whenever it is done.

Settlers have gone there. They went there under the impression that they could pay for those lands. Their experience has demonstrated, as I understand, that it is almost, if not quite, impossible, under present conditions, to pay for those lands. I believe we have extended the time of payment. We shall be required to extend it again if we do not pass the pending bill; we shall be required to extend it again after awhile, and ultimately at some time in the future we shall come to the point when we shall give to these people this land which we ought to have given them in the first instance.

The Senator from Connecticut said that in 1880 we made a departure in our land system. Mr. President, nobody connected with this Senate, nobody connected with this Government, supposed in 1880 that we had made any departure from the established policy of the Government of the United States, and that was a policy of free homesteads. The Senator from Montana [Mr. Carter] the other day told us, and rightly, too, that the title we had extinguished to the Indian lands had cost the Government of the United States more than $400,000,000. Millions of acres of land held by the Indians were taken up in the Northwest and in the West under the homestead law and were paid for by the Gov-ernment of the United States; and yet up to 1880 it was never supposed that the settlers should pay for the land. In 1880 the Government concluded a contract with the confederated bands of Ute Indians in the State of Colorado, and acquired from them about eleven or twelve million acres of land. The agricultural land of that reservation is the best on this continent. Some of the valleys are equal in richness and natural wealth to the valley of the Wiley Land of the valley are level to the valley of the wiley are equal in richness and natural wealth to the valley of the Nile. In all those valleys there was an abundance of water. of the Nile. In all those valleys there was an abundance of water. There was no question of the paucity of water, although there was great paucity of rain. Those valleys have been taken up. They lie contiguous to a mining community, where higher prices are paid for all the products of the soil than in any other place on this continent, New York City not excepted. The agriculturist raised grain and sent it into the mountains and sold it to the mining population; the fruit grower and the vegetable grower sent their products into the mountains and sold them to the mining population. There has been no complaint from that section, and there would be none from this if the people were situ-ated as they were situated on the Ute Reservation. This bill will not materially relieve anybody in the State of Colorado, and I am not making this plea in behalf of anybody on the Ute Reserva-tion, but in the interest of the people who have gone upon less favored reservations and are there trying to make a living.

If the Senator from Connecticut and the Senators who agree with him think that a loss of $35,000,000 is a loss too great to justify the Government of the United States in inducing settlement tify the Government of the United States in inducing settlement upon these arid lands, they would not think so if they could have seen what I have seen, if they could have seen what other Senators who represent Western States have seen, the settlement of a new country. If the entire $35,000,000 were to be lost, which it never will be, because it could never be got out of these lands—if the whole $35,000,000 were in issue here, it would be a mere nothing compared with the advantage of spreading over those great plains civilization and settlement. Ultimately those plains must be settled, ultimately they will be settled. I know what it has cost those people to settle there. We are told that in the western part of Kansas, where there were 100,000 people, there are now but 40,000. What does that mean, Mr. President, to the 60,000 people who moved out of that country? How much hardship, how much deprivation, how much distress did that mean to those people who had attempted to brave a climate which was inhospitable to them, without water, and, having been unable to continue there, have without water, and, having been unable to continue there, have moved themselves to more favored sections?

I have seen the West settled. I have traversed the State of I have seen the West settled. I have traversed the State of Kansas when there was no settlement except upon the Missouri River; I have traversed the State of Nebraska when there was no settlement except on the river. Now there are two and a half or three millions of as good people in those two States as live upon the American continent. They have made them great States, not with the ease that they made the State of Iowa, not as they settled the State of Illinois and some of the more easterly of the great Western States. They went there with a climate which was not so favorable, and yet by diligent and systematic cultivation they have made those States blossom, and they are as productive and as valuable States as any in the Union. You can build ultimately in the Dakotas just such States as have been built in Kansas and Nebraska, but it will take time. It must be done by the settler by the hardest kind of methods. You can build up a State in by the hardest kind of methods. You can build up a State in Oklahoma which will support a large population; but there is no reason why you should say that the people who go there now and who have gone there within the last five years shall be subjected to hardships and demands which were never made upon people in any other portion of the country.

These people are far from markets. Even if their lands were well watered, if they could irrigate them without great expense by the natural streams which run through them, still they are under difficulties which should appeal to the charity of the great American people.

Mr. President, the farmers of this country for a few years have had hard times; they have suffered great hardships, and in no place have they suffered more than in the extreme West. Take the States which I have mentioned, or take the Territory of Oklahoma. There, with all the disadvantages of a new country and with a somewhat difficult climate on account of its aridity, those people are away from a market, they are distant from the market centers, and the corn, the wheat, and the vegetables of that section of country must be marketed at a very low price. To say that the people who go upon the arid lands of Oklahoma or those of South or North Dakota shall, in addition to all they have to encounter in settling a new country, be subjected in some in-stances to a payment of $400 in the first instance, with the inter-est which is to be attached and the interest which is to accumulate, when they are unable to pay, is practically to say to them that they must get out and leave those lands.

I submit to the Senate, if the time ever comes when it shall be demonstrated that those people can not pay for those lands, do we expect to have the spectacle of the American people evicting the settlers from those lands? Are they to be put out? If they are, where are they to go? Mr. President, there is not anybody here who would be willing to vote to put those men off those lands if they fail to pay, if they say they are unable to pay and can not pay, and that they will pay if they are able. Every man who settles down upon a quarter section of land desires to have his title. The very thing that is nearest and dearest to his heart is that he The very thing that is nearest and dearest to his heart is that he may have a title to his land. He will pay for it if he can; but if he can not, will the Senator from Connecticut say that this great Government of ours shall turn itself into an evictor and put those people off those lands? It is a difficult question to meet. If those people can not pay, you will be obliged ultimately to give them the lands. American sentiment will never submit to the eviction of a great community the members of which have made every effort to pay for the lands according to the statute. It should be our policy to increase the number of farms and to draw as many people as possible from the congested centers of population out upon those agricultural lands, if agricultural they may be called. In almost every instance, if the farmer is not compelled to pay for his land, if he can use the $400 that he would otherwise have to pay the Government, he can get a few head of cattle and a few appliances about him by which he may make a living. I remember not long since receiving a letter from a citizen of my State, who said he had been in controversy with the Government of the United States concerning the title to his land. One of those officious, intermeddling Government agents had conceived the idea that that settler had not complied with all the technical requisites of the law, and so he instituted a contest against him in the land office and compelled the settler to go to the land office, a long distance from his home, to prove affirmatively that he had complied with every technicality of the law. When he had established his title, he sat down and wrote to me that upon this title, which the Government was supposed to have given him, and under which he had then been living for a number of years, he had expended, in defense of what he had supposed to be an actual and perfect title, $400. He said, "I am without stock; I am without the needed appliances for cultivating my land; but if the Government had let me alone I should have had $400 with which I could have bought me alone I should have had $400 with which I could have bought some implements of agriculture." If you give to these people the $400 that they pay for a quarter section of land, they will use it in making themselves homes upon the land, and you will secure their adherence to the land; you will keep them there; and, Mr. President, the great threatened danger to this American Republic to-day is the content of result in the great commercial centers. Every effort gestion of people in the great commercial centers. ought to be made to spread out the people, to encourage them to go upon the public lands to make homes, to make rural settlements, rural communities, where, as we all know, virtue and patriotism reside even when it may be lost in the large gathering of men in the great commercial centers men in the great commercial centers.

Thirty-five million dollars! Mr. President, we put that much in a river and harbor bill. We put twice that much in the last river and harbor law for the promotion of commerce and trade, in which the great mass of the American people have but little interest, and in which the great West does not participate at all except as it furnishes and as it has furnished the great body of exports which go to make this country rich and great. We have no local interest in the measure, and yet you put into the last river and harbor law, either in direct appropriations or in authority to make contracts, a sum amounting, as I recollect it, to more than twice the sum involved in this bill, if it should happen to be 35,000,000, which it never will be and never can be. I am asked what I think it will be. I think at the most it will not be more than one-third of that amount. These lands can not be sold at such an extravagant price. You can find now in many sections of the country better lands than these are, better situated lands, for less money, even where the title is uncontested and unques-

Mr. President, I disclaim having for my people any special interest in this matter, but I know that there is a demand which every American Senator ought to respect. There is a demand by the people who have taken upon themselves burdens which they find they can not carry, and which we ought to have known, when we exacted the terms of them, that they could not. They were poor people who went upon these lands. They went upon the lands practically with nothing, in many cases, except their hands; built themselves sod houses, built themselves caves in the hillside, and lived there, as many settlers have lived there, hoping and hav ing reason to hope that they could better their condition ultimately. Shall the Government put a weight upon them that they can not support and can not endure? Shall it turn them out and evict from a quarter section a man and his family in order that the Government may claim from some other man three or four hundred dollars to fill up its depleted revenue?

Mr. President, we may be without revenue, but the American people is not a people that needs to oppress any class of its citizens in the interest of its revenue. We are not without untouched means of taxation. We have, as I once heard the Senator from Ineans of taxation. We have, as 1 once heart the Senator from Iowa [Mr. Allison] say, more unfouched taxable means than any other nation in the world, and if we are out of revenue we can get it in legitimate ways that will correspond with the dignity of a great people, and not take it out of the hardy pioneers of the West.

Mr. ALLISON. I desire to make an inquiry or two respecting the scope and extent of the pending bill. I have not had time to give it examination as to its details. I should like to have the Senator from South Dakota state whether the bill now applies to all Indian reservations. Is there any exception as to Indian res-

Mr. PETTIGREW. I will state, in answer to the Senator from Iowa, that there are many Indian reservations to which the bill does not apply, but they are reservations which have not yet been ceded, no negotiations having been had with the Indians. The bill simply applies to the homesteader who has taken a home upon the reservations which have been ceded by the Indians since 1889, and allows the settler to secure title after five years' residence. does not relieve the person who chooses to commute after four-teen months' residence. It does not relieve any other person than the man who has 160 acres and has resided upon it for five years and made it his exclusive home and residence.

years and made it his exclusive home and residence.

Mr. ALLISON. Now, will the Senator—

Mr. PLATT. If the Senator from Iowa will permit me, I will state that it does apply, as I understand it, to all lands where the Government has by negotiation with the Indians acquired portions of their reservations. It applies to all the lands that have been so acquired, as I understand it.

Mr. PETTIGREW. Not at all. It does not apply to those reservations which embrace mineral lands.

Mr. PLATT. Oh, of course not.

Mr. PETTIGREW. The same reservations embrace, according to the statement made by the minority, large areas of mineral lands not subject to homestead entry. The Government will still sell those lands and get revenue therefrom. The bill does not relieve anyone except the settler who has taken 160 acres and has resided upon it for five years. It relieves no one else whatever. Very large areas of these reservations are timber land, and there is special provision made for its sale. It is not subject to homestead entry. I estimate that three-fourths of the area of the reservations embraced in these treaties will never be taken under Therefore the area the provisions of the homestead law at all.

that is embraced is comparatively small.

Mr. ALLISON. I desire to ask the Senator whether or not the bill embraces timber lands, so known, in the State of Minnesota and other States where large reservations have been ceded?

Mr. PETTIGREW. I will state, so far as Minnesota is concerned, that the bill does not provide for the disposal of timber lands. There is a special provision in the treaty by which the timber land is to be appraised and sold at not less than $3 a thousand stumpage and the money deposited in the Treasury for the benefit of the Indians. Where there is no timber were the land. benefit of the Indians. Where there is no timber upon the land, where it is purely agricultural land within the Minnesota reservations, the bill does apply. But those lands are not of the best quality, and the area that is not timber is mostly swamp, and therefore the number of people affected in Minnesota is not large

Mr. ALLISON. I see by the statement of the minority report made by the Senator from Connecticut that the Chippewa Minnesota Reservation, embracing 5,000,000 acres, is included. That must certainly include a very large area of timber land.

Mr. PLATT. If the Senator from Iowa will examine the table a little more closely he will find against that statement that the proceeds are to be devoted to the Indians. The Government did proceeds are to be devoted to the Indians. The Government did not pay for the land.

Mr. PETTIGREW. The reply to that statement is that the timber land is not subject to entry under the homestead law, and therefore is not affected by this legislation.

Mr. ALLISON. I was led to this inquiry largely by the difference between the statements made by the Senator from Colorado [Mr. Teller] and the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. Platt] in reference to the actual loss to be sustained by the United States in case the bill shall pass. Of course, if the bill embraces practically all Indian reservations heretofore ceded, or which may hereafter be ceded, which, I take it, when ceded, will come within the provisions of the pending bill, unless some special arrangement is made, then the moment the remainder of the lands in the Indian Territory are ceded to the United States under some treaty already made or to be made very soon, those lands will be embraced within the provisions of the pending bill. Am I right about that?

about that?

Mr. PETTIGREW. I did not hear the Senator's question.

Mr. ALLISON. Does the bill apply to any future acquisitions?

Mr. PETTIGREW. No.

Mr. ALLISON. To none whatever?

Mr. PETTIGREW. No, sir. It leaves Congress free to make such disposition of lands hereafter acquired as it may choose. If we are to get revenue from this source, we must change our policy.

We can not get it under our present policy.
Mr. COCKRELL. Suppose we dispose of other lands as we did dispose of these; then a bill similar to this one will come in to give the land away.

Mr. PETTIGREW. I think so. It ought to.

Mr. TELLER. Will the Senator from Iowa allow me to say a word in reference to that point?

Mr. ALLISON. I am only making an inquiry, because I wish to ascertain the scope of the bill.

Mr. TELLER. The Senator from Iowa asked about the Indian Territory. I suppose he means the lands occupied by the Five Territory. I suppose he means the lands occupied by the Five Civilized Tribes, as they are called?

Mr. ALLISON. I refer to reservations not already acquired.

Mr. TELLER. We have acquired all the land we can acquire from those Indians. We shall never acquire another acre, in my judgment. What kind of an arrangement the Dawes Commission was secure for the division at a of their reports. may secure for the division, etc., of their property I am not now able to say. But it is to go to the Indians. There is no purpose and no plan, and it would be utterly impossible for the Government to buy that land; and if we did, what would be the result? On that land there are at least five white men where there is an Indian. In the Indian Territory there are at least three or four hundred thousand people, white farmers, in addition to sixty or seventy thousand Indians. That need not be a matter for future concern, because we shall expend no money to buy that land, and we shall not be called upon to donate any of it to settlers.

The difference between the Senator from Connecticut and myself in the estimate grows out of the fact that the Senator from Connecticut assumes that all of this land, every particle of it, is to be occupied at the prices—

Mr. PLATT. I did not.
Mr. TELLER. If the Senator did not, he could not make it $35,000,000.

Mr. PLATT. I never said, either in the report which I made or in my speech, that the loss would be $35,000,000. I said what had been stated by the Land Office. I stated in my report that I thought it was more than the majority report allowed it to be. According to the majority report it was thought that it would not be more than $17,500,000, but I stated that I think that is too low. When I came to speak about it, I did not put the objection upon the ground of the amount particularly that was going to be relinquished by the Government.

While I am on my feet, if the Senator from Iowa will permit me, I wish to make a single remark.

Mr. ALLISON. Certainly. I merely rose to make an inquiry.

Mr. PLATT. I did say in my report, and in the remarks which I made, that we are now proposing to establish a policy for the future; that these Indian reservations would undoubtedly be largely diminished in the future, and that if the policy was to be that the Government should pay the Indians for the lands and then donate them to settlers, it would undoubtedly be a larger amount than has been mentioned, either by the Commissioner of the Land Office or any other person in this discussion. That, I think, is true.

think, is true.

We are establishing a policy now. This very year in the Indian appropriation bill as reported to the House of Representatives there is a proposition to pay $2,000,000 to the Indians to relinquish their title to the Kiowa, Comanche, and Apache Reservation, which is west still of these semiarid lands, as they are called. That is at the rate of $1.25 per acre. So the policy of the Government is undoubtedly to be to go on and extinguish the title to more and more of the Indian reservations, and of course if we say that the land is to be given to anybody who will homestead upon it, all of that will have to be added not to the immediate expenses, but to the future expenses of the Government. the future expenses of the Government.

the future expenses of the Government.

Take the Osage Reservation. The time is coming—it may not be immediately—when those 1,500 people will undoubtedly part with a considerable portion of their reservation. I undertake to say that it is as fertile land as lies under the sun in any country. Is it to be the policy for the Government to pay the Indians for the land and then to give the land to settlers?

Now, if that is to be the policy, we may as well understand it now for the present as for the future. That is the claim which is made here—that whenever anybody desires a home, desires land to settle upon, the Government must look around and see where there is any land, buy it, pay for it, and then give it to the people who will settle upon it for five years. That is the point I have been making all along, and in the replies which have been made nobody seems to apprehend the point. Perhaps it has not been made so that it could be apprehended, and possibly it is not a good point anyway.

Mr. TELLER. I did apprehend it, but it seemed to me absurd that anybody should have made any such claim. I did not supthat anybody should have made any such claim. I did not suppose that because we relieve these people who have already demonstrated that they can not pay for their lands we would buy lands that were fertile, valuable, in the State of Kansas or somewhere else and give them to other people. I supposed that Congress had sense enough to determine each case as it arose, and I do not understand how we create any legislative precedent which you can not avoid. In fact, I never before heard of a legislative

The Senator may think that this would be dangerous—it may be that it would be somewhat persuasive—and that if you gave one piece of dry land to one man you shall give another piece of dry land to another. But by no logic with which I am familiar can it be said that if you give a piece of worthless land to one man you must give to some other man a good piece, a valuable piece like the Osage land, which, if it is ever sold, will be sold by the Indians and not by the Government.

Mr. PLATT. We opened last year the Nez Perces Reservation. We paid for it to the Indians at the rate of $3.75 an acre, and we put that price upon the lands. Now, does not the Senator from Colorado know that a large portion of those lands have been eagerly sought for at $3.75, and that they are worth it anywhere?

Mr. TELLER. I know they have been eagerly sought. In the first place, they are not worth that price and were never worth it.

Mr. PLATT. The Nez Perces lands?

Mr. TELLER. Yes. It may be that a settler thinks he can pay that price for them, and he may be willing to pay it for them, but he can not pay it for them. There is not one settler out of twenty who can pay $3 an acre. The average man who moves upon public lands in the West in these days is too poverty stricken to do that. He goes upon Government land because he can there have a place where for a time at least he can make a hone, but he can better his condition. The Senator may think that this would be dangerous—it may be have a place where for a time at least he can make a home; but he goes there hoping that in some way he can better his condition. When he finds he can not, and the Government gets after him, as the Senator from Connecticut hopes it will, with a writ of evic-tion, he will be hunting another place. If somebody offers him a place at twice that amount, he will take it and go upon it, and if he can not pay for it, and he finds after a while that he can not, he will move again, and he becomes an agricultural tramp. That is what the policy of the Senator from Connecticut would make of the people who have gone upon this land in Oklahoma.

The people who are in the far West have enough burdens upon them if they get the land for nothing. They are carrying the flag of civilization and decency and morality in the West. They are recorded for whom every decent man ought to feel sympathy and the people for whom every decent man ought to feel sympathy, and the fact that some persons may ask you later to give them other land is no answer when we say these men can not pay for their lands, when we say that those lands are not worth what the Government when we say that those lands are not worth what the Government is exacting for them, nor is it an answer when the Senator says we have paid $3 an acre for land. What right had you to pay $3 an acre for it? It was land that belonged to the people. The lands of the United States never belonged to the Indians. They belonged to the United States in trust for the people who chose to occupy them, and if, in defiance of good legislation, we have given to the Indians, as we have, millions of acres for which they had no use and to which they had no title, it is no reason why anyone should say, "We have made a bad bargain with the Indians, and we will take it out of the people of the United States."

You gave to the Indians two-thirds of the State of Colorado in the first treaty that was made by you, and not an Indian inside of the borders of the State of Colorado had the slightest title to the land or ever did have under the Government from which we derived the land. No Spanish Government or Mexican Govern-ment had recognized title in Indians to the lands, and we took the State of Colorado absolutely without any embarrassment of Indian title. Yet the Government of the United States, after we and an title. Yet the Government of the United States, after we had been organized into a Territory, by a treaty gave two-thirds of that great State to less than 5,000 Indians, and now shall the Senator say here that against the people of the United States those Indians have title? You can not give a title of that kind which in morals or in law shall estop us from saying that the great mass of people who are seeking homes shall have an opportunity to make them upon this land. tunity to make them upon this land.

You have no right to take it away, and because you made a bad bargain or a wicked trade with the Indians in an early day, say, "You shall pay now the value of this land," to which, I repeat, the Indians have no claim. The Indian title in this country has never been a title in fee except as we gave it to them. It has never been a title which has been recognized as more than an occupation. We are the only people in the world who have ever recognized the aborigines as entitled to full compensation for the land over which they roamed. It is against civilization to insist that the Indians now have such title that the Government shall pay them the full value for it, or, if they have, to say then that this land shall be held to those who are fortunate to have the most money and can buy it.

Mr. President, the policy of the Republican party in its early day, when it was the party of the people, was for free homes and free soil, and the very ticket for which the Senator voted at the last election was nominated upon a platform that declared for this identical bill. The American people declared in both of their great conventions that they intended that the people should have free homes, and if the policy to which the Senator refers was adopted, as he says it was, in 1880, the two great conventions repudiated it. The Senator said the other day that he knew that these things got through conventions. That provision of the Republican platform came into the subcommittee prepared, and it went into the whole committee. With the consent of every member of the subcommittee and every member of the whole committee, it went into the national convention and met the approval of every man there. But now the Senator says he is not obligated and that none of us is obligated to support it. The Democratic convention at Chicago declared for the same thing, the Populist convention declared for the same thing, and if it can be said that there is any one matter on which the American people have been heard, it is that they intend as long as there is any land to be occupied that it shall be free to the American citizen who is willing to go upon it and make

Mr. President, $35,000,000 is a bagatelle. You waste more than that every year on your Army. You waste more than that upon your ships that will rot in your harbors, and you do it that you may protect the great Eastern Coast. You do it at the demand of the great corporations who want to make armor and build ships, but when an American settler wants, not $400 out of the public Treasury, but to be relieved from the payment of that which he asserts, and which we who know his condition assert, he can not pay and ought not to be required to pay, then the Senator from Connecticut and the men who stand with him, who have made these great demands of us for twenty years here, to which we have responded, ask us to turn out the settler, put him afloat, and make him a tramp.

make him a tramp.

Mr. President, so far as I am concerned, I will give every acre of unoccupied land to the men who will occupy it, and I shall be doing my duty to my country when I do it. The great danger to the Republic, I repeat, is that you have not farmers enough. You have too many men in your factories and in your mines and in your mills, and not enough on farms. The fathers of the Republic saw the danger, and they said, "We do not want to have a great manufacturing people, because the manufacturers and the people who work in shops are not the men to carry liberty and law; they are not the men to be patriotic in every hour of the country's distress." Every time we have called upon the American people we have found the agricultural body responding, and there is we have found the agricultural body responding, and there is where our hope lies.

Thirty-five million dollars, Mr. President! Any Senator on this floor ought to be ashamed to talk about it, if we are correct in our statements of facts, which the Senator does not deny.

Mr. PLATT. Mr. President, I have not quarreled with the statement of facts made here, but I wish to call attention to the fact that there have been no petitions to Congress from settlers asking for this relinquishment. I wish to call attention to the fact that there has not been a memorial from any State or from the people settled upon any Indian reservation asking for this legislation. I wish to call attention to the fact that the governor of Oklahoma—and there seems to be some attempt to cast discredit upon his representation of the condition in his Territory—in his annual report does not mention that it is required.

Mr. PETTIGREW. I should like to interrupt the Senator from Connecticut for one moment. I am informed by the Delegate from Oklahoma that petitions signed by 200,000 people are on file in the Oklahoma that petitions signed by 200,000 people are on file in the House committee, requesting the passage of the pending bill.

Mr. PLATT. Possibiy. Right here, while on this subject, I wish to say a word about the people of Oklahoma. The Delegate from Oklahoma is undoubtedly responsible for the passage of the pending bill through the other House. It was by his solicitation and his earnest effort that it was passed through the other House.

I think perhaps I should see here.

I think perhaps I should say here—
Mr. PETTIGREW. Fourteen million voters voted for this proposition. Mr. PLATT. Mr. PLATT. Oh, well, 14,000,000 voters voted that we should have a Delegate in Congress from Alaska. Whom does that bind? It is to be determined on principle and by what may be supposed to be public policy when the question comes here.

But I was speaking of Oklahoma. The Delegate from Oklahoma was earnest and active in securing the passage of this legislation through the other House. He did not think of the necessities of the great Northwest, which has added three times as much to the bill as was affected by it when it came from the other House. But he became a candidate for reelection. He made this an issue before the people of Oklahoma. He asked to be reelected on that issue, and they voted him down. Neither the governor of Oklahoma asked for it, nor have the people of Oklahoma, in a direct issue made in the campaign, seconded this demand from Oklahoma.

Several days ago the question was asked by the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. Hoar] of the Senator from Kansas [Mr. Peffer] whether he thought that in any period of the world there had been any such progress made as had been made during the last forty-two years in the State of Kansas; and I believe it was agreed here practically that in the development of wealth and population and resources and all that goes to make a State great and prosperous there really had been no such development during the period of forty-two years as had taken place in Kansas. But I want to say that, from my knowledge of Oklahoma, from what the governor says about it, from some little personal observation of it, comparing the time of seven years since the establishment of the Territory of Oklahoma with the forty-two years since Kansas was first made a State, the progress, the development in wealth, in population, in resources, in ability to take care of themselves far surpass that of Kansas or any other instance in American or in the world's history.

That may be stating it pretty strongly, Mr. President, but I believe it. I believe that never in the history of civilization has there been a development within seven years' time of any portion of the globe that has resulted in the same progress, the same development, the same advancement toward wealth, which have occurred in Oklahoma, where it is asked that this law shall be

I presume there have been petitions in the House. There have been none here.

Now, Mr. President, a single other word. It is an ungracious Now, Mr. President, a single other word. It is an ungracious thing to oppose a farmer, an agriculturist, a settler, in any demand that he may make. I may repeat what I said when I was on my feet the other day, that I think I have respect for the pioneer and sympathy with the pioneer fully equal to that of some of the people who live nearer to him. I think I may go further and say that I am as proud of the development of this country which has been wroughtby the people who since its settlement have taken up the march of civilization toward the West as any man living in that part of the country.

taken up the march of civilization toward the West as any man living in that part of the country.

And I may say another thing, that while the West, or some portions of the West, or some people in the West, as frequently illustrated on this floor, think that something is to be gained for that section of the country by sneering at the East, by throwing accusations in the face of Senators and Representatives who come from the East, I have never heard any Eastern Senator making any such accusations with regard to the West. I have never known an Eastern Senator or an Eastern Representative who had any prejudice for the population of the West. We regard them as our own kith and kin. We know that the influences which built up the magnificent territory of the West, that new empire of the earth, had its home and its development in the East; and we regard the West, when we have developed the West, when when have developed the West, when we have developed the West, when we have developed the west was at least the property that the west was at least the west that the west was at least the west was at least the west than the west was at least the west than the west was at least the west than the the Western settlers, the pioneers, the men who have developed the resources and the enterprise and the wealth and the strength of the West, as members of our own family, and we are sorry to see them at any time so far forget their origin as to feel that they gain anything by taunting the people in the section from which they came. It is no use to the West to have an army or a navy; it is no object to the West to spend any money on rivers or harbors; it is all for the East.

Mr. President, I had not supposed that this was a sectional coun-y. I have never since I have been a Senator cast a vote with reference to what I supposed was a sectional measure or a measure involving sectional interest pending before the Senate. I dislike to hear this talk about sectionalism, about the West and its interests being opposed to those of the East, and the East and its interests being opposed to those of the West. I believe that I have a mind and a heart broad enough to recognize and take in every section of this country in my admiration and in my love.

It is quite time, Mr. President, that we cease taunting one another about the section of the country from which we come and in which we live. This is one country, thank God, from the Atlantic to the Pacific, and what helps the West helps the East and what helps the East helps the West. It is a common country, and a Western man can no more divorce his interest from the East than the Eastern man can payore divorce his interest from the West. The Northern man can no more divorce his interest from the West. The Northern man can no more divorce his interest from the South than the Southern man can divorce his interest from the North. There is no measure which is calculated to help any section of

Let us get rid of this sectionalism, Mr. President. Let us get rid of this sectionalism, Mr. President. Let us get rid of this sectional prejudice. For one, if I should be permitted to remain in the Senate, it will be a great provocation, to say the least, which makes me so far forget that I am a citizen of the United States and that all the citizens of the United States are my brethren as to retort in kind whenever an attack is made upon the East.

I did not intend to make any remarks beyond what I made the other day upon the pending bill. I have no doubt there are many people who have taken up land under the homestead law with the obligation to pay at the end of five years who find it difficult and who, perhaps, will find it impossible to make the payment, but there are others, Mr. President, who will achieve under their settlement what to some men seem a fortune, even if they pay for the lands the price which was stipulated. There has been no investigation; there is no discrimination. A man who has been successful is to receive this donation as much as the man who has been unfortunate.

The point I make about it is that the homestead law has nothing to do with it. These lands have been acquired upon a condition precedent, so far as the settlement is concerned. They have been acquired with the understanding that they were wanted for settlement, and that the settlers would reimburse the Govern-

Mr. ALLEN. I should like to ask the Senator a question.
Mr. PLATT. I beg pardon for a moment.
The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. CHILTON in the chair). The Senator from Connecticut declines to yield to the Senator from Nebraska

Mr. ALLEN. All right.

*
Mr. PLATT. The Senators upon this floor who have seen the Government paying out its money for these lands, who have been familiar with these lands, or who ought to have been familiar with them, never intimated that the Government was paying too much money for them. They come in now and say that the Government has squandered its money in the purchase of them because the lands were good for nothing. But during all the time these payments and purchases have been urged upon Congress there has not been an indication that the Government was paying for these lands beyond their real value. It was only in 1895 that the opening of the Nez Perces Reservation was made. We were told here that these lands were righty weeth $2.75 are accepted.

that those lands were richly worth $3.75 an acre, and now they are classed with the arid lands on which nobody can get a living.

The homestead question does not touch this. Free homes; land for the landless. Yes, as long as the Government has it to give to them, but not when the Government has got to buy it to give it to them. There is the distinction. It seems that in the desire to benefit these people that distinction is wholly lost sight of.

It was the proposition when these lands were purchased that we must buy them so as to afford an opportunity for settlement under these conditions. If the homestead act means that we must buy lands for people to settle upon as fast as the desirable lands are taken up, then the matter must go on as I suggested in reply to some inquiries of the Senator from Iowa. If it be the bounden duty of the Government to provide homes for the homeless and lands for the landless at whatever cost, then we can not stop with the Indian lands; we must buy other lands. That is the position which is taken here when you analyze it, that the Government find lands or the landless at the landless at the covernment find lands or the landless at the government find lands. ment must find lands for the landless and homes for the home-

Mr. TELLER. Nobody has taken it except the Senator himself.
Mr. PLATT. That is the logic of the position here. We bought these lands not to give away. Nobody supposed that we bought them to give them away. We bought them upon the understand-these lands not to give away. Nobody supposed that we bought them to give them away. We bought them upon the understanding that the Government was to be reimbursed.

Now, it is said that was a bad policy; that it was the Government's business to supply lands to the landless and homes to the homeless, and therefore it was perfectly proper that we should buy them and give them away. If that is the policy, if there are no limitations, no qualifications to it, it must go on to the full extent of the wildest doctrine of paternalism. The Government must support those who can not support themselves. The Government must furnish land to anyone who has not got it and who wants it and who is willing to live five years on it, and if the Government is the support of the sup wants it and who is willing to live five years on it, and if the Government has not got the land it must get it.
Mr. ALLEN. Who makes that claim?

Mr. ALLEN. Who makes that claim?
Mr. PLATT. That is the logic of the claim which is made here.
Senators talk about its being a part of the principle of the homestead law. Not at all.

I take the new case that is coming up for our consideration before we get through with the present session. Here is the Kiowa, Comanche, and Wichita Reservation. It lies west of the Chickasaw Reservation, and between that and Green County, in Oklahoma, still farther west than where it is said these arid lands are which nobody can get a living on. Now, the proposition is that we shall put out $2,000,000 more of the Government's money to get lands for the landless and homes for the homeless. Pretty soon some other Indian reservation lands will be wanted for settlers. Then the Government must buy them of the Indians and give them to people who desire to settle upon them, in order that there may be lands for the landless and homes for the homeless. There must be some limitation, Mr. President, upon that principle; otherwise we have to go into the business of buying lands from private owners and donating them to individuals.

The Senator from Colorado thinks we ought not to have paid the Indians anything; that the land belongs

Mr. TELLER. I have never made any such statement at all.
Mr. PLATT. Well, Mr. President, the Senator from Colorado, like myself, gets excited sometimes in talking.
Mr. TELLER. I never get enough excited to make that state-

Mr. PLATT. If I did not misapprehend the Senator from Colorado, I understood him to say in effect that the Indians had no title to these lands, that the Government ought not to have paid for them, that the Government could not have given them any for them, that the Government could not have given them any title which they claimed, and did not give them any title to the lands which they claimed. I heard him, I think, refer to his own State of Colorado, in which he said that although the Government paid the Indians for the title the Indians had no title; that the Government could not give them any title.

Mr. TELLER. If the Senator from Connecticut will allow me, I said that in Colorado the case was different from that in the other section. We took that country from Marica, which did not

We took that country from Mexico, which did not recognize any burden of Indian occupation. Now, what I said was that the title was in the United States, subject, of course, to the embarrassment of the Indian occupation. I never have intimated that the Government of the United States should not have paid them something. But when the Senator puts this upon the ground that we bought the land as we would buy it of him, that is not correct. The Government all the time had a title, as he

Mr. PLATT. If the Senator will look at the remarks which he made when the manuscript is handed him this evening, he will find that in his zeal-

Mr. TELLER. I will leave it just as it is.
Mr. PLATT. He will find that in his zeal he went even to the extent of saying that the public land of the United States belonged extent of saying that the public land of the United States belonged to the white people.

Mr. TELLER. No, I did not. I said "the people."

Mr. PLATT. Well, meaning the white people. He said that it belonged to the people who wanted to settle upon it; that they had a right to settle upon it; and he will find that the unmistakable inference of his language was that the white people were entitled to the lands which were occupied by the Indians if the white people wanted them for settlement; that it did the Indians no good, and that the Indians had no right to claim large tracts and hodies of land when the white people wanted them for settlement. and bodies of land when the white people wanted them for settlement. I thought as I was listening to that statement that the Senator from Colorado would hardly, in his cooler moments, abide by it.

Mr. TELLER. If the Senator will allow me, I should like to state what my theory is upon that point, and then he may dilate on it as he sees fit.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Connecticut yield to the Senator from Colorado?

Mr. PLATT. Certainly.

Mr. TELLER. My theory as to the public land is that the public land belonging to the United States nominally belongs to the people of the United States; that the Government holds it in trust; and that any man, without reference to his color or anything else, if he is a citizen of the United States, has a right to occupy a certain limited amount of the public domain under proper regulations. I do not think the Government of the United States has the legal power to set aside a great tract of country and say it shall never be occupied. I do not say that the Government should not have paid the Indians something for this shadowy title. I say they should have extinguished any title that they had recognized. If they paid too much for it, that is another question.

In my twenty years of public service I have never been for despoiling the Indian, and the Senator knows that as well as anybody on this floor; he knows I have always insisted that the Government should keep its contracts with the Indians; that if it was an unfortunate contract it still should keep it; but if it made a contract that was bad, it had no right to shoulder the unfortunate contract on the agriculturists of the country, who, in my judgment, were entitled to this land if they would occupy it.

Mr. PLATT. Well, Mr. President, I do not know whether we made had bargains or not. I have no right to speak of the representations.

made bad bargains or not. I have no right to speak of the representations made by members of the other House, but I know that Senators residing in the vicinity—perhaps in the States—where we have opened these reservations, when the proposition came here that the Government should make the appropriation came here that the Government should make the appropriations to pay for the lands, have never lifted their voices to say that it was not a fair price paid for the lands. I think even the Senator from Colorado at last acceded to the purchase of the Cherokee Outlet. I do not think that any Senator here, knowing the property, knowing what the Government was paying for it, has ever intimated that the Government was paying to the Indians any more than it ought to pay to them. ought to pay to them.

That is what I object to, Mr. President. I believe in lands for the landless and homes for the homeless, furnished under the homestead law, so far as it can be done. But I do not believe in buying lands from Indians, from individuals or syndicates, to give them away because of the homestead act.

That is all the objection I have made here. I have said that this has been perfectly understood from the first; that it was understood when these payments were made and these lands were opened that the Government was to be reimbursed; that we have had no evidence here that as to any considerable portion of the people who have taken up homesteads they can not comply with the terms upon which they were taken up; that both in the open-ing of the lands, so far as getting them from the Indians and openthem to settlement was concerned, and in the very settlement of the lands themselves, there was a contract with the Govern-ment which ought to be observed if the parties are able to observe it, and which, if it is to be relinquished, ought to be not by whole-sale, not by sweeping in all ceded reservations, whatever their character and whatever the character of their lands, but relinquished upon some wise understanding, upon evidence, upon facts as to those cases in which it is proper to relinquish it. I do not as to those cases in which it is proper to reiniquish it. I do not know why a man who under these acts acquired 160 acres of land in the eastern portion of the Cherokee Outlet, which he can sell the moment he gets his patent for from $15 to $20 an acre, should have the price that he agreed to pay relinquished to him.

Mr. PLATT. I do not say that all of them can; but I believe we were teld there were sections there that were worth $50 an acres.

we were told there were sections there that were worth $50 an acre; and I believe there are many holdings in the eastern portion of the Cherokee Outlet that could easily be sold for from $10 to $15 and $20 an acre.

That is not right, Mr. President. If it be right to extend relief to some person who has gone out to the semiarid regions, who has gone out too far and got lands that he can not pay for and that he can never get a living upon, there should be some discrimination. You can not determine whether this ought to be done by the four words "land on ceded reservations." That is not a test by which to determine it ought in justice and fairness and equity to be Referring again to the Nez Perces Reservation, I understand, and I think I am not mistaken about it, that that land is very valuable agricultural land, opened only a year ago to settlement. The proposition is that because valuable land happened to come The proposition is that because valuable land happened to come from a ceded Indian reservation the persons who have taken up that land in this way, with the understanding that they were to pay for it, shall be relieved from the payment just as much as if they were living in a sod house on the very western portion of the Great Sioux Reservation, where the rains never fall and where no human being, as it is said, can get a living by agriculture.

There is nothing in the principle of the homestead act, in the idea of land for the land loss and homestead act, in the idea of land for the landless and homes for the homeless, of sympathy with the struggling pioneer, of admiration for the character of the men who are building up the great West, or in the fact that these lands come from ceded Indian reservations purchased with the money of the Government for the sake of opening them, which justifies the enactment of this wholesale policy.

Mr. ALLISON. Mr. President, this bill, it strikes me, is too general in its character. When it came to us from the House of Representatives it related only to the lands in the Territory of Oklahoma. Now it seems to be extended to all lands that have been hitherto ceded to the United States by the Indians, and when ended hereafter without medial previous of severe its will related. ceded hereafter without special provision, of course it will apply to them.

I do not agree with the Senator from Connecticut in what is implied at least by his remarks, that when we buy lands from an Indian tribe the United States is bound to recoup the cost of the purchase price of the lands from the actual settlers.

The Senator from Connecticut says that there is no claim that The Senator from Connecticut says that there is no claim that we have paid too much for extinguishing the Indian titles. Mr. President, I believe we have paid too much for many of them, and I think the Senator from Connecticut knows of at least one or two recent purchases, including these in the Territory of Oklahoma, where we paid far beyond the amount which should have been paid to the Indian tribes which claimed the lands. But, as I understand this question of the acquisition of the Indian title, it is that we pay for them so much or so little as will enable us to acquire the territory we seek to obtain. Therefore, I think that the question of price should be segregated from the question of what we should do with those lands after they have been purchased from the Indians.

As I understand the situation as to many of these tribes, we have paid too much for the land. I undertake to say that we have paid far too much for the 9,000,000 acres which were purchased from the Sioux tribe in South Dakota. Those 9,000,000 acres of land which were acquired from the Sioux tribe are worth nothing for agricultural purposes without irrigation, and it will be difficult to irrigate them. That land may be of some value, and is of some value, for pasturage purposes; and yet it is treated in this bill as though it was agricultural land.

I made this inquiry because the Senator from Colorado seems to dwell upon the idea that it makes no difference if we are giving $35,000,000 which belongs to the Treasury by the passage of this bill. Mr. President, I do not know the character, and I regret that we have not information showing us the character, of each the reservations which are embraced within the policy of this bill. I do not find the information in the majority report

The Senator from Connecticut says that the land in the Nez Perces Reservation is worth $3.75 an acre. That is what we paid for it. I have no doubt, without any special knowledge of the subject, that that sum is less than it is worth. Many of the Indian reservations have been scaled down from time to time by the encroachments of settlements upon them from the east and from the west, and all around them. For one, I do not believe we are obliged to pay the Indians a high price for the lands, whether it be $3.75 an acre or any other sum, and then leave it open to the scramble of the men who may live near the reservations who can first get upon them and take them as homesteads. I am perfectly willing, so far as the settlers are concerned who have gone upon those lands under the authority of law, who have promised to pay for them but can not pay for them, and who wish to retain their settlement and occupation of them, to relieve them so far as we can without regard to the promise that they have made, but I do not like to go into this wholesale business of releasing all lands, whether they be in close proximity to cities or towns in Oklahoma or in other Territories or States of this Union, thereby having acquired a value of forty or fifty dollars, or it may be $500 an

I snall, however, vote for this bill. Before we have finished the I shall, however, vote for this bill. Before we have finished the discussion the Senator from Colorado will, perhaps, think I will not. But I think, as it stands, it is too general in its character, and that it ought to be so limited as that it will apply exclusively to settlers on agricultural lands who have gone there and attempted to make homes, but who have been unable to pay for their homes, and not to those who have speculated in homes within a mile or two of what may have hitherto been prosperous cities in Oklahoma or elsewhere Oklahoma or elsewhere.

Okianoma or eisewhere.

The Senator from Connecticut says that there is a policy about this bill. I am glad to hear both the Senator from South Dakota, who is in charge of the bill, and the Senator from Colorado say there is no policy in it. I want, as one Senator, if I remain in this body, and while I do remain here, to deal with each Indian reservation, the price paid for it, and what we shall do with it at the time the question properly arises, and not now bind myself by law to a policy respecting it.

As to the original policy of the homestead law, I see the venerable father of that law listening to this debate in the Senate.

What was its original scope and object, as explained in the House of Representatives? It was that the lands, which were far distant from the settled portions of our country, should be opened to those who wight such them, whother living a year our shores or coming who might seek them, whether living upon our shores or coming to us from abroad, to build up homes and communities. When the homestead law passed, in my State there was not a farmer who lived within 100 miles of the Mississippi River who could secure for his crops a sufficient price to pay for their transportation from his home to the river, which was his only way to market. Therefore our people thought the object of the homestead law and its policy at that time was that the new prairie States should be opened to settlement, thereby inducing the occupation of that vast section, and also inducing railways and other transportation companies to reach their homes to take away their products. That has been the policy of the homestead law from that time to this.

Ido not think, however, that in its proper scope that law embraces the idea that all lands of the United States which have been taken in close proximity to cities and towns, and are used and held by speculators for speculative purposes, shall be relinquished to them because of their purchase. Therefore, while I am willing for one to relinquish, so far as the United States can relinquish, to these homestead settlers the price they have agreed to pay, I dislike exceedingly to vote for a sweeping bill which is to apply to all lands acquired from Indian tribes, whether worth $50 an agree whether worth $50 an acre.

As to the provision which we are told has been inserted in the Indian appropriation bill for the purchase of certain Indian lands, I have no special knowledge; but I venture the statement that they are not worth one-half of the price named in that bill. Every man who enters upon those lands hereafter and tries to secure a homestead, unless he can secure it by means of irrigation, will only find himself, as the people of western Kansas in many instances found themselves some years ago, starving because of the impossibility territory of the United States, without accurate knowledge cer-tainly upon the part of the Senate—the committee may possessit, but they have not furnished it to us—of what is the actual value of those lands which were recently or remotely ceded to the United States.

I have said what I know of the Sioux Reservation. The lands already taken up as homesteads on the Sioux Reservation are not only unfit for homesteads, but absolutely unfit for anything except grazing purposes. Therefore it is holding out a hope to those people that we are giving them homesteads, whereas we are not giving them homesteads; and for one, I want to protest against it. giving them homesteads; and for one, I want to protest against it, I shall vote for this bill against the idea that I am voting out of the Treasury $35,000,000, or one-half of it, or more than one-third of it for those lands, but I do not like to vote, I will state frankly, for a bill so sweeping in its character. I shall therefore move to amend the bill, in line 5 of section 1, in lieu of the words stricken out, "in the Territory of Oklahoma," to insert "prior to the passage of this act." So that we at least shall know that this proposed law will not include lands hereafter acquired. not include lands hereafter acquired.

Mr. TELLER. The Senator from Iowa [Mr. Allison] will see, if he will think for a moment, that it is impossible to deal with these cases individually. You can not go to work and select from the people who are on the ground those who can and those who can not afford to pay. That would be an impracticable and an impossible thing. If you grant relief at all, you must grant it in a general way. It is very possible and very probable that some of impossible thing. If you grant relief at all, you must grant it in a general way. It is very possible and very probable that some of this land could be made profitable at the price fixed and that some this land could be made profitable at the price fixed and that some of the people who have gone upon it can pay for it. When you speak in general terms, you do not mean that there may not be exceptions; and I want to disabuse the mind of the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. Platt] who has gone out of the Chamber, or that of any other Senator, from any impression they may get from anything I have said that there can not be farms made upon this arid land. There can be farms made upon that land, and most of the men who have gone on the land and are there now will event-ually, if they are allowed to remain, make homes, and good American homes.

There is not time now to go into a discussion of what may be done upon arid land, but I may say in a moment that I live in a section of country the most arid of any in the United States; at least in my State there is a point where there is less rainfall than in any other place in the United States. I can show the Senator from Iowa one of the finest orchards he ever saw which has been made with water falling only the first year that the trees were put out; but I should have to tell the Senator that it is land that every week in the season, from early in the spring—and our springs are early and our falls late—from early in the spring until late in the fall every acre of that land has to be plowed and harrowed once a week. In that way cares on he reised went these arid leads fall every acre of that land has to be plowed and harrowed once a week. In that way crops can be raised upon these arid lands. But think of the labor of a man who raises 15 or 20 bushels of corn, who must cultivate his corn day in and day out systematically. In that way even in the arid region a man may raise a crop.

This is not an arid region of which we are speaking; it is a semi-arid region, capable of being converted into agricultural land by the industry, the diligence, the skill, and the intelligence of the settler; but it is of that character which requires the utmost labor, the utmost skill, the utmost intelligence, and the utmost diligence, and I have felt that when you attempt to build up a community in a country like that, it is unfair for the Government to exact from the settlers day in and day out the little earnings that they from the settlers day in and day out the little earnings that they could get by such diligence and such zeal. If any man will go over that country and see what it costs to settle it, he will think that the people have got the land very dearly, that they have taken it only because the better regions of the country have been settled, it only because the better regions of the country have been settled, and because the best land is now gone they are taking the inferior.

Mr. President, we did not buy these lands; we extinguished the Indian occupation and the Indian title, but the land all the time remained in the United States. I will admit with the Senator from Connecticut and the Senator from Iowa that in some instances we paid the Indians more than we should have paid; but it was better that we should have paid them than that we should stand before the public in the position of taking from them, without their consent that which we had nominally accorded to them out their consent, that which we had nominally accorded to them and recognized as belonging to them.

Take the purchase of the millions of acres of the Cherokees.

We had given to the Cherokees a title which they claimed to be an absolute title. We had made a deed, a patent, to them unlike that granted in any other section of the country. There was a title which we were bound to respect, and they were the owners in fee of that land, subject only to this limitation, that when they abandoned it, it became the property of the United States and not the property of the State in which it would have been located. They demanded of us an extortionate sum; there is no doubt about that; but I was in favor of paying it. I have said that two of raising grain or farm products upon those lands.

What I object to in this bill is its sweeping nature, By the striking out of one or two words in the bill which came to us it is made to apply not only to Oklahoma, but to sweep over the entire make you a deed." In addition to that we said to this tribe of Indians, "No settlement shall go west of your reservation; for all time we will keep that country open to you."

Mr. President, the State which I in part represent was included in that semigrant. We took that land away from the Indians, we filled it up with people, we destroyed the game, we destroyed the Indians' opportunity of living in the manner they had been living, and in the manner they desire to live. When they came here and said, "We want a dollar and a quarter an acre," I knew that price was extortionate. We did not want it for homesteaders, but I said, "It is better to pay that sum," and I would myself rather have the Government of the United States pay $20,000,000 than to have the people of the world say, "You have repudiated an honest obligation that you made with these semidependent nations." How did we pay it? We made a treaty with the Indian tribes. We have extinguished their title and paid more than the land was worth, and we will continue in all such cases to pay more because of the improvident manner in which we proceeded to legislate in the early days. It is one of the taxes and burdens put upon us because of our lack of proper care and proper attention when we recognized their title to the 2,000,000 acres that they say we are to pay for. It is better to pay the Kiowa and Comanche tion when we recognized their title to the 2,000,000 acres that they say we are to pay for. It is better to pay the Kiowa and Comanche Indians than to have the Indians and other people say we are despoiling and robbing them. There is in the Indian appropriation bill $2,000,000 to be paid to the Turtle Mountain Band of Indians, now amounting to some 2,500 or 3,000, when originally there were but 220 or 230 Indians, the number having been increased by the accretion from other tribes or sections. Those people have no title whatever to that land. Every particle of title the Chippewas ever had to that land has been extinguished, and yet all through the United States there is a great mass of our people who believe that these Indians have been despoiled. So long as that sentiment prevails it will be better for us to pay a large sum to the Indians than to have the people believe we are despoiling our wards and robbing them. ing our wards and robbing them.

We have the Indians outside of the Five Civilized Tribes practically on our hands. We made a treaty with the Ute Indians in Colorado—a most important treaty—in 1880, by which we said, "We we will support you until you become self-supporting." Mr. President, they will never be self-supporting. They are no nearer self-support now than they were sixteen years ago, and yet they are occupying the very cream of the land of that State, the very heart of it, the very best of it. I would not despoil them; I would not take it away from them; but I would pay them for it if they would cede it to us, so that the citizens of our country might go upon it and make homes.

I have noticed what the Senator from Connecticut has said about I have noticed what the Senator from Connecticut has said about an attack upon the East. His words were evidently leveled at me. Because I had said that the East received benefits from the Government that we of the West did not; because I had said that we in the West have stood for everyting that the East demanded, the Senator charges that I am making an attack upon the East. Mr. President, during twenty years of public life I have never failed to respond to any demand from any section of my country that I believed to be just and right. I have had no feeling of sectionalism, and there is none whatever in my portion of the country. As the Senator said, we are the children of the East. We have not forgotten our origin. We have left behind us more relatives and forgotten our origin. We have left behind us more relatives and friends in the neighborhoods from which we went than we have in the land to which we have gone; we are as dearly connected with the East—and the extreme East—many of us, as the people who live there. All their associations of the past are ours, all their reputation and their glory are ours, but we do feel sometimes that you in the East have not realized that we are encountering obstacles which you upon the coast do not encounter, that we are obstacles which you upon the coast do not encounter, that we are away from the great avenues of trade, and that when you ask us to appropriate money for rivers in Maine, in Massachusetts, and in other sections on the Atlantic Coast, it is not for our benefit, except, as I agree with the Senator, that whatever is for the benefit of the East is likewise for the benefit of the West.

I wish, Mr. President, that I could feel in my heart that at all times in the East that feeling was responded to as I believe we times in the East that feeling was responded to as I believe we have responded to it in the West. I wish that the East would always feel that what is the interest of the West is the interest of the East. But we have had reasons sometimes to think that the East did not appreciate that fact, and sometimes when we knew hast did not appreciate that fact, and sometimes when we knew that we had responded to every patriotic demand, and when we have seen benefits withheld from us, we have felt that it was not through prejudice, but ignorance of our condition and ignorance of our wants. That is all I meant to say. When you have asked us for coast-defense appropriations, you have found the entire West at your back; when you have asked us for ships, when you have asked us for river and harbor improvements, you have always found us noting for them.

found us voting for them.

This bill is of vast interest to the West; it is of vast interest to a class of people who ought to be entitled, I repeat, to the sympathy of the American people; it is in the interest of a class of people who lie very near at least to my heart if they do not to the hearts of other Senators; it is in the interests of the men who have carried the flag of civilization and morality and religion in the West, and who have built up those great Commonwealths. These are the men who have built up Kansas and Nebraska, and, having been unfortunate, left those States where land had become too high for them and emigrated to the newer regions. They are the pioneers; they are the men who have made farms in other States and failed. They may be failures, but they are American citizens, and they are good American citizens; and if the Government relinquishes to them a few dollars an acre it is a paltry sum, and the Government will get back thousands and thousands of dollars where it has expended one.

Mr. HOAR. I desire to ask the Senator from Colorado if he has in mind any specific instance where the Commonwealth of Massachusetts has failed to support any desire of the Western people for their adventure?

their advantage?

Mr. TELLER. Well, Mr. President, I should not care to go into any specific charge, for I am not making any. I only said that sometimes we felt that they did not appreciate our condition. I have no complaint to make of any Senator or of any section of the country beyond what I have said.

Mr. HOAR. I understood the Senator to say that when the West had done everything that the East desired in the way of rivers and harbors, and ships and coast defenses, the East had failed to understand the conditions in the West—through ignorance, he was kind enough to say, but not through malice or prej-udice—and I want to know if there is any specific instance in his mind in reference to my own State?

Mr. TELLER. I do not recall any reference to Massachusetts, and if I did, I should not care to detail it. I want to say, in explanation of that statement, which may seem peculiar, that the Senators who represent the West are, with rare exceptions, not Western born. I have served now in the Senate and in another capacity in public life for twenty years; I have known the men who represented the West, and very largely they have been men born east of the Alleghany Mountains. They are familiar with the East; they go and they come. There is not a Senator in the West who does not every year go to the East. Your coasts of Maine and Massachusetts are as familiar to us as is the interior. Not so with the Senators from the East. They rarely come to our section of the country. I have sat in this Chamber with men for years who had never been west of Chicago, who absolutely knew nothing about the great West; who have no comprehension of its great population and its great wealth; and that may be the reason—I do not pretend to say that it is owing to sectionalism or prejudice-but they are unacquainted with our wants; and as we prejudice—but they are unacquainted with our wants; and as we men from the West are pretty aggressive, active, and pushing in matters that we believe to be in the interests of our section of the country, it may be they have come to think that perhaps we are sometimes unduly making demands upon them. It is not worth while for us to bandy words. I agree with the Senator from Massachusetts that the great West and the great East are so closely linked together with the center, that what is the interest of one is the interest of all; and upon that I think I can stand upon my record in the Senate. No man can accuse me of ever having voted against any Eastern interest because it was an Eastern interest, if he can find that I ever voted against an Eastern interest all, which I think he would have a great deal of difficulty in doing.

Mr. President, I have said a great deal more about this question

Mr. President, I have said a great deal more about this question than I intended to say, but I have said it because, as I said before, the interests of these people lie very close to me. They are not in my State, but they are the class of men with whom I have been in contact now for more than a generation. For nearly forty years I have been coming in contact with the men who broke the prairie sod and made the settlement of the West. When all the history shall be written when the truth shall be told it will be sent that shall be written, when the truth shall be told, it will be seen that there was never a better class of men than the men who have done this great work and built up those great States. They may be called by hard names in political campaigns; but there is as much called by hard names in political campaigns; but there is as much patriotism, as much love of country, as much love of God and law in the West as there is in any part of this country of ours. It is for that class of men, unfortunate and now in distress, that I have appealed to the Senate in the way I have.

Mr. President, if my zeal has led me to say what I ought not to have said, I shall regret it, and yet I believe that I have not told one helf of the truth per hear I presented this ease aid careful.

told one-half of the truth, nor have I presented this case as it ought to be presented to the American people. If it could be presented we would have got the full verdict of the people, as I claim we did when the two conventions declared for this principle and for this law. I believe that if this question were submitted to the American people there would not be any question as to what they would do. They would say, "These hardy sons of toil are entitled to the mere pittance of $2.50 an acre; take it, and make your home a fit place upon which to rear American citizens, a fit place for an American citizen, an American freeman, to live."

American citizen, an American freeman, to live."

Mr. COCKRELL. Mr. President, this is a proposition to give free homes to certain classes of persons now occupying the land and to those who may hereafter occupy similar lands—necessarily so. What were the circumstances under which those lands were occupied? Before discussing that, let us see what the homestead law was intended for.

The senior Senator from Iowa [Mr. Allison] touched upon the truthful point in regard to homesteads. The homestead measure was introduced at a time when there were millions and hunure was introduced at a time when there were millions and hundreds of millions of acres of unoccupied lands in the West. Practically the whole Western country was unoccupied. Born and reared in the county in Missouri where I now reside, I have some knowledge of the Western country. I have traversed Kansas when there was scarcely a white man within its borders. Here was an invitation given to the people of the United States, to immigrants from every nation and clime, to come here and occupy those lands. They were invited to make homes on the lands, and they were told that when they had complied with those laws they should have title.

Now was that law enacted or was it ever intended to apply to

Now, was that law enacted or was it ever intended to apply to lands which were surrounded by walls of homes and firesides, as these lands are—the wall in Kansas, people living right down to the border; the wall in Missouri, people living right to the border? Was it ever intended to apply to lands which we bought, lands for which we obligated ourselves to pay, and lands for which we shall have to pay? The homestead law was never intended for any such tracts of land as these subgread in the rendired kill.

shall have to pay? The homestead law was never intended for any such tracts of land as those embraced in the pending bill. It is a perversion of the object and purpose of that law to undertake to make it applicable to such lands.

These lands were not made subject to entry and disposition under the general land laws. They were not public lands in the true sense of the word. They were not opened to settlement under the general law. They were opened to settlement under a specific law. That law was advertised. The result of it was that ten times as many people as could secure land stood there in a great wall, ready to rush over and make the grab. What was the result? I will read a letter which I have received from one of the men who made the struggle for a home and hear what he says. He is there. made the struggle for a home and hear what he says. He is there, and knows the situation:

we trust that you and Senator Vest will not vote for the unjust free-home bill. This is a good county and is settled by many Missourians. It is a fact that not more than one in five of the citizens from Missourigot a homestead. The other four either settled in towns on the "Strip" or else returned to Missouri. Any of them would have been glad to have had the chance to get a good farm for $2.50 per acre. It is this way: Some 2,500 voters from Missouri made the run for homesteads in one county in Oklahoma, but of these only 500 men got claims. The other 2,000 either settled in little towns here or returned to Missouri. Will you make a present of $400 apiece to only such of the men in this county from Missouri who obtained homes—for you do this when you pass the free-home bill—and not give one cent to the other 2,000 men who failed to get farms? They all were at great expense, and they got nothing who failed to get farms. Even the citizens here do not expect to get free homes. It is a movement of local politicians who expect to get office by this agitation. There have never been 100 voters at a free-home meeting here on the "Strip." They expect to pay for their homes. If you give aid give it to all in towns and on farms.

Mr. TELLER. Will the Senator from Missouri give the name of his correspondent?

Mr. COCKRELL. No, sir; I will not give his name. I will not subject him to the harsh criticism of the few men who are pressing this measure. It would not be just to do it. I know the gentleman personally, and he is an honorable and truthful man. The Senator from Iowa knows him, too.

Mr. President where her the demand come from? These people.

man. The Senator from Iowa knows him, too.

Mr. President, where has the demand come from? These people settled upon those lands. They made the race for them. It was a struggle, a fearful struggle, and a contest. They wanted to take the lands at the terms upon which they were offered. They were lucky; they were fortunate. Some of them have splendid homes, as good as there are in any State of this Union, for there are agricultural lands in that section of the country just as good as you will find in Iowa or Illinois. Yet those settlers got them for $2.50 an acre, and we now propose to release them from the payment of it and turn around and make the men in Missouri and elsewhere, who failed to get homes, may $2.50 an acre for these elsewhere, who failed to get homes, pay $2.50 an acre for these lands for which we are bound to reimburse the Indians. Where is the justice, where is the equality, where is the honesty in any such measure?

I have as much sympathy for those people as has any Senator upon this floor, for an immense number of them were formerly citizens of my State; but shall I vote to tax the 2,000 Missourians who tried to get homes in Oklahoma and failed, and who came back after having incurred expense and delay, and after having expended their labor, in order to give free homes to the 500 who were successful in securing them? I can not see the justice of it. I wish I could help these people. I have as much sympathy for those who are unable to pay for their homes as has anyone on this floor, and I have coval any set of the bandard statement of the second in the sec floor, and I have equal sympathy for the hundreds, at least, if not thousands, of men in Missouri who have gone to the land office and paid $1.25 an acre in cash for their homes, have settled upon them, have borrowed money for the purpose of making homes, and have been unsuccessful by reasons of failure of crops and other contingencies against which they were not able to provide, and whose homes have been sold from under them, and they have had to vacate. They have been unfortunate. Shall they be taxed to pay for homes for the comparatively few who went into Oklahoma? I can not see the justice of it. I can not see why I should let my sympathy go out to the few farmers in Oklahoma who have been unfortunate to the extent of imposing burdens for their ben-efit upon the equally meritorious and honest citizens of Missouri and other States who have been unfortunate and who have lost their homes.

You make no distinction. Where is the justice of that? There is a man who got 160 acres of land which to-day he can sell for twenty-five or thirty dollars an acre, and here is another man who got too far west, got into the semiarid region—this is not all semiarid land—got where it was probably too sandy or too rocky. He undertook to make a home, and he failed. Now, shall the man with the 160 acres of rich land, as fertile as any in the Mississippi Valley, be given the 160 acres of land and all the people of the United States be taxed to pay for it, simply because you want to benefit an unfortunate one? Discriminations can be made. If sympathy is the cause, let sympathy run only where it is deserved. You can make distinctions. I beg to say, by a proper commission. You make no distinction. Where is the justice of that? You can make distinctions, I beg to say, by a proper commission. The matter can be adjusted and there can be relief where it properly belongs, and not for the enrichment of the rich. There is an easy way. The Government has power, by a commission or otherwise, to distinguish between the meritorious, the just, and the deserving, and those who are not.

deserving, and those who are not.

There are plenty of men occupying these lands to-day who are as rich as one-third of the Senators upon this floor. Shall they be given free homes? Shall they be given this privilege and the whole people be taxed to reimburse the Indians? For reimbursement comes; it is inevitable. In addition you set a precedent which in the future will make many honest men, who have paid for their homes in cash and lost them by reason of the failure of crops and other causes of that kind, believe that they ought to have their purchase money back: that they are just as much enhave their purchase money back; that they are just as much entitled to have it refunded as these men are entitled to have the Government pay this money to the Indians and release them from their payments to the Government.

Mr. President, as I said, I wish this were a case where I could

Mr. Fresident, as I said, I wish this were a case where I could honestly and conscientiously extend to the worthy and deserving my aid, but I can not vote for the pending bill.

Mr. STEWART. Mr. President, the letter which the Senator from Missouri [Mr. COCKRELL] read does not appear to be entirely impartial. It leaves the impression that the writer is one of those who did not get any land, and he might look with some jealousy worn these who did not get any land, and he might look with some jealousy upon those who did. At all events, he does not take a broad view of the question.

It is very probable that there are a few lucky ones who went to Oklahoma and got lands on which they can live. Those who were most fortunate in that Territory, however, were the first who went there, and who went there as homestead settlers. There are seven counties so settled in the best part of the Territory. Such persons were the fortunate ones. There may be some, a very few, who went there under the late purchase—
Mr. PETTIGREW. Will the Senator allow me for one moment?

The first settlers who went to Oklahoma were not required to pay for the lands. We opened up 2,000,000 acres of the best of it to homestead entry.

Mr. STEWART. That is the way I understand it.

Mr. PETTIGREW. And those persons are not included within the provisions of this bill.

Mr. STEWART. They are not included in this bill. They have their lands as homestead settlers. It is making a very harsh dis-tinction between them and their neighbors who went farther west upon land the general character of which I know to be semiarid and requiring irrigation to get regular crops. There is an occasional year when they can get a crop, but as a rule the dry seasons far exceed the seasons of sufficient rain. Those people are in a very sad condition, as I witnessed when I was on the committee investigating the question of irrigation along the line between that country and Kansas. I have been in and across that country. It is precisely the same quality of land that is found on the Kansas side. People have great difficulty in living there.

But that is not the point about which I rose to speak. I wish again to call the attention of the Senate to the provisions of the homestead law, which have worked so beneficially, and to protest against adopting a different rule now when the best lands are all gone. There is a vast region of country within the boundaries of the United States that is unoccupied. It is called the arid region. The arid and the semiarid region comprises about two-fifths of The arid and the semiarid region comprises about two-fifths of the entire area of the United States. It would support millions of people if it could be reclaimed, but it generally requires a combination of men and capital to bring in the water. It requires a different kind of cultivation—it requires a knowledge of irrigation, which our people are learning very rapidly. The process of settlement must be slow. It is quite as important that that part of the country should be occupied as that any other part of our land should be. It is a very fertile country, and when once reclaimed it will be a great addition to the wealth of this country. It is all we have, and we ought to apply to it the most liberal rules. I have been urged by people in that region to apply to Congress for appropriations to carry out irrigation. I have declined to undertake it, because it is not the kind of appropriation that Congress has been accustomed to make. The people in that region feel that they have not had an equal chance with those who settled in the Mississippi Valley, where they could have a home. To make a discrimination now against the people who are willing to undertake the reclamation of the far West seems to me very discouraging. If anything can be done that will encourage those people, if anything can be done to lead them to open this country, which will be vastly valuable when reclaimed, Congress out to do people, if anything can be done to lead them to open this country, which will be vastly valuable when reclaimed, Congress out to do it. By this harsh discrimination against those who are trying to subsist upon the semiarid lands you will discourage others. It will prevent others from making the effort. If they believe that $1.50 or $1.25 per acre, or any other amount, is going to be demanded, they will not contemplate undertaking enterprises which they might otherwise establish. But with a liberal policy on the part of the Government there would be great progress farther west.

I think the principle of commencing now to make those who attempt to settle upon Western lands pay for their lands, when we did not make people pay for lands in the Mississippi Valley, is bad policy, and it will do great harm to the country. I think we will lose much more by discouraging them by this kind of parsimony than we would by continuing the policy that has done so much good. There can be no doubt that the best policy the Government of the property is to encourage people to occurry this wast area. ment can pursue is to encourage people to occupy this vast area of land, which, when reclaimed, will be equal to any on earth. of land, which, when reclaimed, will be equal to any on earth. The undertaking is great. It is very discouraging. Men go there and return because they are unable to construct the works necessary to make it possible to live. Do not throw any discouragements in their way. Suppose a few of the men who went on the Oklahoma lands should get good lands. They would only get what their neighbors got in greater quantities and immense abundance in the Middle States, where they were nearer the market. In these times it is very difficult for those who have lands to cultivate to raise enough money to pay for the land and support their families. It is almost an impossibility if the land is ever so good. They do not have the advantage of those living near the their families. It is almost an impossibility if the land is ever so good. They do not have the advantage of those living near the great cities, where they have a market. Transportation is high, the prices of agricultural products are extremely low, and there is no legislation pending to increase the value of agricultural products. There is no daylight in the future. These men are suffering from year to year. I say do not let us attempt to extort money where money can not be paid. It seems to me cruel and unjust, and I hope the Senate will pass the bill as it came from the committee and show that there is a feeling of generosity, at least, toward those who are attempting almost an impossibility for poor men to accomplish. But in time, as population increases, if the men to accomplish. But in time, as population increases, if the policy of the Government is liberal, there will be continual reclamations of these lands, and finally we will add vastly to the power and wealth of this country. Let us continue the policy that has made great States and see if it can be applied so as to build up other great States in the far West.

Mr. ALLEN. Mr. President, I wish to say just a word in reply to the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. Platt] and the Senator from Missouri [Mr. Cockrell]. I shall not undertake to discuss this measure at any length, because I have done that to my satisfaction.

The Senator from Connecticut, when he refused to recognize my right to interrupt him, which was proper enough, was making an assertion which I desired at that time to correct. He said that we obtained these particular lands under some condition precedent which did not apply to the contract under which the previous lands were acquired and given to homestead settlers. I do not think the Senator from Connecticut meant to assert anything of the kind. There may have been some slight difference in the terms of the contract, but we have acquired the title to every acre of land in this country which we have given to homestead settlers by extinguishing the Indian title and by purchasing the land and opening it to homestead settlement.

Now, what difference, so far as concerns the legal phase of the two transactions, is there between the method by which we acquired title to the millions of acres that were given away under the general homestead law and the manner in which we acquired title to these lands? There is no difference whatever. The truth is that this Government thirty-five years ago entered upon the policy of extinguishing the Indian title to our lands, making them a part of the public domain, and opening the land to settlers, upon the theory that the development and settlement of the country, in adding to the aggregate wealth of the nation would send the aggregate. the aggregate wealth of the nation, would amply compensate for any expense the nation was put to in the acquisition of the lands. The same reasoning that applied to the enactment and the enforcement of the general homestead law of 1862 applies now to these lands, and there is not the slightest distinction in principle between the manner in which those different lands were acquired by the Government.

I agree with the Senator from Nevada [Mr. STEWART] who has just taken his seat that the letter read by my honorable friend the Senator from Missouri [Mr. Cockrell] condemns the very witness he offers. The letter goes on to recite that twenty-five hundred Missourians undertook to rush into Oklahoma Territory and acquire homesteads, as they had a right to do. This man was one of the twenty-five hundred. His horse was not fast enough, possibly, or some misfortune may have overtaken him, and he did not succeed in getting a homestead. He was compelled to return to Missouri, or to go into one of the villages of Oklahoma, and he did not obtain the benefits of the act.

He is, therefore, slightly envious of the 500 Missourians who did succeed, and because he was unfortunate in not obtaining a homestead such as he desired he wishes that the screws shall be put upon every man who did obtain a homestead and who has been a victim of the drought which has afflicted that country for many years. I have no doubt in my own mind that if the honorable Senator's correspondent had been successful in acquiring a home-stead, and drought had overtaken him and destroyed his crops, he would have been among the most clamorous of the inhabitants of the Territory for relief from the conditions which have been imposed upon the settlers.

Of course, Mr. President, you can go into some of the little towns and cities in Oklahoma and find men who have a pecuniary interest in defeating the homestead bill. It is a money-making transaction with them. They are shrewd, sharp men. They know how to write letters, and they beseech Senators and Members to defeat this measure, putting it upon high moral grounds in their letters, but designing, in fact, to profit financially themselves by its defeat. There are not many of them, but there are some. I have received letters from Oklahoma and elsewhere, from hundreds of men whom I have known for years, some of whom I have known for thirty years or more, who are just as reliable as the correspondent of the Senator from Missouri or any other man, and they tell of conditions existing there that make it imperative upon the part of the Government to turn these lands over free to these settlers, or else it will be necessary for the Government to resume possession of the lands that the cattle kings may run their cattle over them and herd on them free of charge for generations to come.

The Senator from Missouri was much concerned about his constituents being compelled to help pay for these lands. Mr. President, we appropriate money by the millions and almost, I was going to say, by the hundreds of millions every year to subsidize steamship and railroad companies, and to throw into the rivers and harbors and creeks and obscura estnaries of this country, 75 and harbors and creeks and obscure estuaries of this country, 75 per cent of which is lost to the American people, upon the supposition that we are promoting the general welfare of the nation and the interest of all the people. We have given over $120,000,000 for the construction of railways, to bring the extreme East and West together, to hold the Union together at one time, and to develop the interior of the country, upon the supposition that the settlement of the country following the railways would bring to the national wealth infinitely more than the Government would expend in aiding in the construction of the railways. I am not prepared to say that the reasoning was altogether faulty, although I think it was faulty in some respects. We give bounties and subsidies with liberal hand upon that supposition. And yet, Mr. President, when it comes to making the American home secure, which is the starting point of all prosperity and all permanency in this country, we hesitate and dawdle and dicker over a dollar or two an acre for arid land.

What can make our institutions more secure, what can make American society more permanent and more enduring, than giving every man and every woman and child an opportunity to own and occupy a portion of the soil that they can conscientiously and truthfully say is their home? You can not make good citizens of tramps. You can not make good and permanent citizens of men who have no home. The hardships that these men and their wives and families will undergo incident to the settlement and development of this semiarid region will be a thousandfold and development of this semiarid region will be a thousandfold worse and more onerous than the loss of the money the Government would sustain by giving them the opportunity. What is to become of them? Senators say they must pay. The Senator from Connecticut, like Shylock, is demanding the pound of flesh from these settlers

Mr. President, they have not the money to give. That is all there is to it. They went into this semiarid country with a few hundred dollars, constructed sod shanties and little cabins, broke a few acres of land, and made some other structural improvements, investing in most instances all they had and more than the land itself was worth. What is to become of the money they have invested in these lands, in homes, in stables, in fencing, and in breaking, if they are driven from them by the action of the Government? All this will be lost, and the thousands and tens of thousands of persons who are inhabiting these semiarid homes will be driven from them, and will be cast as a burden upon the balance of the nation. They must live; they must have an oppor-tunity to work. If they are willing, sir, to undergo the hardships incident to pioneer life in laying the foundation of great communities that are to be, is it not wise policy for us to encourage them to the extent of giving them the land as a foundation with which to begin?

No, Mr. President; if the policy of this nation in subsidizing railways and steamship companies and giving public money to improve rivers and harbors is a wise policy, it is infinitely more wise, as it is more just, to give to those who are struggling to establish a home an opportunity to do so without exacting any money from them. Mr. CARTER. Mr. President, I should at this late hour refrain from offering further remarks on the pending mesure were it not for the fact that certain questions have arisen in the course of the discussion relative to a lack of information on the part of the

The eminent Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. VILAS] suggested that this body was not in possession of sufficient evidence upon which to base action concerning the lands included in the ceded portions of the reservations. The Senator from Iowa [Mr. Allison] to-day supplements that suggestion in a somewhat complaining manner by suggesting that it was the duty of the committee to furnish detailed information concerning each and every reservation included within the bill or to which its terms might apply.

This Government for many years has maintained and now has in operation at great expense a scientific department known as the Geological Survey, and as a subdivision of that Bureau certain learned men have been for years giving special attention to climatic conditions all over the territory of the United States. By and through investigation conducted by these capable men, we have as a net result before us in the Senate Chamber a map showing the limits of what is known and designated as the arid region of the United States. With the exception of a small portion of the ceded land in the State of Minnesota to which the bill will apply, every acre of land subject to its provisions, with an exception in Oklahoma, will be found within the limits of the arid region.

This arid region may be could within the limits of the arid region. This arid region may be cultivated; its soil is fertile and its climate very frequently conducive to the rapid growth of vegetation; but it always involves, in order to import the element of certainty into the transaction of farming, a necessity for artificial irrigation. This necessity places upon the settler the burden of reclaiming the land, at a cost of from $10 to $12 per acre upon the general average. This is a burden never before encountered by a settler on the continent prior to the approach of settlement to the borders of the arid region.

The suggestion has been further made that the reason for the

The suggestion has been further made that the reason for the passage of the homestead law has long since ceased to exist; that the original purpose of that law was to induce citizens to go out into the wilds of the far, far West, there to build up homes, subdue savages, reclaim arid plains, and level the forests. The untenable character of the position thus taken will be made quite obvious upon very slight reflection.

In 1862 the Illinois Central Railroad extended through the State of Illinois from north to south, and no part of the State of Illinois was more than 90 miles distant from the Illinois Central road. Numerous railroads traverse that State from east to west, and the and of Illinois, which to-day is worth from $20 to $150 and $200 an acre for farming purposes, was taken up by the homestead settler, and title given by the General Government as free as the summer air, save only for the burden of land-office fees attached. The same was practically true of the State of Iowa; the same was true of the State of Minnesota, and the State so ably represented by the eminent Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. VILAS].

The passage of that law in 1862 was an eminently wise act, as the sequel well shows. Never in the history of the world in any country on the habitable globe has such symmetrical, healthy, and vigorous settlement occurred as has occurred under the homestead law passed by a wise Congress in 1862.

Mr. President, we gave nothing away in giving this land. From a country from which the Government received comparatively no revenue at all in 1862, we have developed human necessities, contributing their share to the Government expense, until the internal revenue from that once uninhabited section amounts in the aggregate now, as collected between 1863 and the present date, to nearly one-half the total internal revenue collected in that period by the General Government, or $1,571,000,000 collected between 1863 and 1865 from the people of these public-land States to assist in discharging the various obligations of the General Govern-

Let this be suggested as worthy of reflection that no country under the sun has ever successfully undertaken to make a profit of the pioneers or settlers. The difference between the Spanish system, the system of the Cavalier and the Pilgrim in this country, clearly demonstrates this. The Spanish pioneers or first adventurers sought merely to extort the loose money, coin or bullion, found in the hands of the aborigines, and the whole policy proceeded thenceforward upon the theory of extortion from the settler. The policy of our forefathers, on the contrary, in this North American country was the direct opposite; it was the encouragement of settlement, the development of individual citizenship, and a home life around the settler. While the dominion of Spain, with its history of rapacity and greed, is gradually ceasing to be potential or important on this hemisphere, the theory of Anglo-Saxon government has resulted in the development of a mighty empire destined to wield a potent influence on civilization through all the years to come. all the years to come.

It is suggested, however, that the settlers in Oklahoma made contracts with the Government of the United States, and it is not within our power to waive the obligations thus assumed. The settlers did not voluntarily assume the obligations in the full The settlers did not voluntarily assume the obligations in the full knowledge of the consequences and conditions. To begin with, in all the country in Oklahoma save what is known as the Cherokee Outlet and the seven counties constituting the original Oklahoma country, by virtue of the treaty with the Indians, the members of the tribes were permitted to make selections of land prior to the opening up of the country to settlement. With what result? The Indians being permitted to go at will prior to the approach of the settler and select their allotment in 160-acre tracts, selected in each and every case the very cream of the entire country. In the one county of Blaine, in the Territory of Oklahoma, the Delegate from that Territory informs me, and I have no doubt correctly, that 1,200 Indian allotments were taken in that one county prior to the opening of the country to settlement. The 1,200 allotments embraced an area of 192,000 acres, taking up all the desirable land along the streams, taking up every available place which could be made the subject of barter and sale and profit on short notice, leaving to the settler who came and sale and profit on short notice, leaving to the settler who came in the high, rolling plains, the places without water supply or timber, and upon the high, rolling plains some of the settlers have been struggling ever since. It has been a close question, not as to their ability to pay the Government the purchase price of the land, but to live without becoming a public charge on the charity and kindly disposition of benevolent people throughout

This bill is of incidental concern only to the respective commutates surrounding these reservations. To the citizen of Wiscon-This bill is of incidental concern only to the respective communities surrounding these reservations. To the citizen of Wisconsin seeking a home it is of very great importance that the homestead law should be permitted to operate over these reservations. It is of interest and importance to the citizen of every State, of every Territory, that the homestead law should continue.

The Senator from Connecticut [Mr. Platt] suggests that we propose a new policy here. We do not propose anything in the nature of a new policy. We propose the reestablishment and continuance of an ancient policy under which the most beneficent results have been obtained for all the people of all the country.

The passage of this bill is not urged in any sectional spirit. We think it is a matter of national concern. Frequent reference to sections and States can be of no special use or benefit to any part sections and States can be of no special use of benefit to any part or portion of our common country. A generous rivalry between States and sections may conduce to the general good; invidious references can only result in general injury.

We ask for the passage of this bill because of the fact that the application of the homestead principle to these undesirable lands is an object of common justice to the settlers who reside upon them, and in view of the fact that in all the years prior to 1880 during which the homestead law was in existence, the great Commonwealths of the Mississippi Valley were filled up—broad acres of fertile land taken—we insist that the extension of the policy to the less desirable lands is an act of ordinary, plain, simple jus-

To insist upon these payments from the settlers will not result in placing $17,000,000 or $35,000,000 in the public Treasury. The people can not get the money to make the payments. To insist people can not get the money to make the payments. To insist upon the payment if collections can be made would be to place upon the pioneer homesteader on the frontier the burden of supporting the North American Indian, which is a common burden attached to the entire people represented in their Government.

From every point of view, in common justice and as wise public policy, this measure should be passed.

Mr. PETTIGREW. Mr. President, I wish to make but a few remarks at this time in connection with the bill. I want to say in the beginning that the hope of securing revenue by the defeat of the pending bill will be a disappointment. We propose by this of the pending bill will be a disappointment. We propose by this legislation to give title to 160 acres of this land to any person who will go upon it, reside for five years, make it his exclusive home and residence, and place at least 5 acres of it under cultivation.

These reservations were purchased from four to eight years ago, none of them less than four years, and some of them—those of the largest area—eight years ago; and yet the revenue of the Government from the sale of the lands has amounted to less than $500,000. Year by year Congress has been called upon to extend and has extended the time of payment on these homestead entries because the settlers could not pay for the lands. Last year we extended the time for one year; the year before we made an extension, and the year before that; so that three times we have extended the time for these people to make payment, and now we find that it is impossible for them to pay at all. The simple question is whether we shall drive these people from the land and leave it to be occupied by the grazers of cattle or give the settlers a title to the lands and let them use that as a basis of credit to secure a small herd of cattle and continue their residence in that country.

I have here a letter from Mr. Small, who resides upon one of these quarter sections in my State. He located upon the Sisseton and Wahpeton Reservation the season when it was first opened. He went there with considerable money. He makes an excellent statement. He makes a statement which answers every objection which has been made against the passage of the pending bill. ask the Secretary to read the letter so that it may appear in the

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read as indicated. The Secretary read as follows:

RECORD.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read as indicated. The Secretary read as follows:

At the time of the settling of the Sisseton Reservation the settlers apprehended no hardship in making the payment for the land, but the conditions have been such as to make it impossible. The reservation was settled on the list of April, 1892. The first summer was necessarily spent in breaking up the land and providing shelter for stock, etc., consequently no crop could be harvested that year. The majority of settlers broke up from 25 to 75 acres of land, which was put in crop in 1863. That year the hot winds in June so that fall, 1893, here, at from 45 to 46 cents per bushel, so this crop did not yield more than $4.50 per acre, and most of the settlers having but a small acrease, they did not receive enough to support them through the year. The next year, 1894, the crop was almost a total failure, wheat going from 3 to 5 bushels per acre and selling at 45 to 45 cents per bushel, hence the settlers are further in debt. The next year, 1895, the crop was from 5 to 15 bushels per acre and brought 40 to 45 cents per bushel. The crop of this year averaged about these being confined to 160 acres, were only able to put in a comparatively small crop, so that their returns have been short of enough to more than support them, and hardly that.

Now, the people who settled on this land were mostly Scandinavians from Iowa and Minnesota, and were people who had saved up from $100 to $500. Inquiry among many settlers leads me to place the average at $200. These shorts of the settlers are still due. The townships have been compelled to furnish seed several years because the people had to short the crop to live on. The crops have not been sufficient to pay up these debts for horses and any part payments on horses and stock, and depended on the crop to live on. The crops have not been sufficient to pay up these debts for horses, machinery, etc., so these debts are still due. The townships have been compelled to furnish seed severa any more.

Hoping this may give you an idea of the condition of our people,
I am, respectfully,

JOHN D.

JOHN D. SMALL

Mr. PETTIGREW. Mr. President, I spent some time this summer among the people who have settled upon these lands, and the statement made by this gentleman is a statement of the facts. The people of the Dakotas did not occupy these reservations. The inducement held out to bring settlement were made by transportation companies and by immigration agents, and the settlers came from the other great Western States. Of course the people of the Dakotas wanted the reservations opened to settlement, because, until their areas were occupied by people, they did not help to support by taxation the burdens of government; but the people of the Dakotas themselves have their homesteads; they have their lands. When a new reservation is opened, it is not our people who go upon it. The people of other States who are landless are the people who have been in advance and taken home-steads. So the settlers who came, as this gentleman says, from the other States of the Union, came induced by the rosy repre-sentations of transportation companies, immigration agents, claim sentations of transportation companies, immigration agents, claim agents, surveyors, etc., supposing that because it was an Indian reservation it must be exceedingly fertile, and therefore it would be easy to make payment. After struggling for from four to eight years, they find the crops are not more than sufficient to sustain life, to say nothing about gaining a profit with which to pay the Government for the land.

Further than that, these lands are open to settlement and settlers are required to pay $400 for a quarter section, while they can go into the Cane River Valley, adjoining this reservation, and buy land from the Eastern mortgage companies for $1.25 an acre, or $200 for a quarter section. The counties adjoining this reservation on the east from 1885 to 1890 lost 18,000 of their population. Their lands were foreclosed upon, and the parties holding the mortgages obtained the titles. Now they are willing to dispose of those lands at one-half of what the Government charges for these lands.

I contend, Mr. President, that where men with their families have resided upon land for five years, have gone forward into a new country, built up roads and schools, and established homes, they have made payment—full payment—for the value of the property, and ought to have their title deeds.

It is said we have not purchased lands for settlement. In 1872, after the Northern Pacific Railroad was built across northern Dakota, we purchased nearly half of the entire area of that State, gave every odd section, a strip 40 miles wide, to that railroad company and the remainder to homesteaders. What did we buy that land for? The road was there. Why did we extinguish the that land for? The road was there. Why did we extinguish the Indian title? So that the land might be open to settlement under the homestead law. So it is across the continent. Wherever there have been Indian lands we have extinguished the Indian title for no other purpose than to open the country to settlement under the homestead law. We never changed that policy until 1889, and the policy was changed at the instigation of a member of the House of Representatives from Indiana.

I well remember when these reservations were opened to settlement—the Great Sioux Reservation, for instance. We came here urging that the Sioux Reservation should be opened to settlement because it embraced one-third of the State of South Dakota. In 1882 I was a Delegate from the Territory of Dakota in the House of 1882 I was a Delegate from the Territory of Dakota in the House of Representatives. I secured the passage of a measure to open that territory to settlement. Mr. Holman insisted that it should be opened only under the homestead law, although the preemption law, the timber-culture law, and the town-site law were still in force as to all the other public lands in the United States. He urged that this area should alone be opened to settlement under the homestead law. I accepted the condition. Why? Because we had opened the western part of Dakota—the mineral region—for the people of the Black Hills, and we had settled the eastern portion. This reservation divided the settlements. The railroads had built to the eastern border and we wanted them to cross so as portion. This reservation divided the settlements. The railroads had built to the eastern border and we wanted them to cross, so as to unite our State. Although I secured the passage of legislation through the House of Representatives, it was defeated in the Senate at the instigation of the Indian Rights Association. So the railroads were obliged to build around Dakota to reach the settlement in the western portion of my State; and to this day the eastern and western portions of Dakota are not united by railroad, and for no other reason.

We were anxious that this reservation should be opened to settlement, that roads should be allowed to build through it, and we were willing to accept almost any condition. I came here winter after winter trying to secure the opening of the Sioux Reservation, only to be defeated by the representatives of the Indian Rights Association, who imagined, I suppose, they were doing some service to the Indians. Finally we accepted the condition which opened those lands to settlement under the homestead law, and provided that settlers should live five years on the land before they could secure title, and then pay the Indians for the land. I said before the committee of this body that that condition was unfair and unjust, that we would accept it, but we should exert every effort to remove the injustice in the future.

What has been the result, Mr. President? We opened up nearly 10,000,000 acres of land, imposing this condition, and less than 1,000,000 acres have been taken. The remainder of it to-day is open to settlement. If anyone has been cheated, if some one has had an advantage, it is the man who did not go rather than the one who went and spent his money trying to make a home upon those lands. There are 9,000,000 acres yet. If the citizens of other States feel they have been unfairly dealt with, the opportunity is open to them; they can go out upon those prairies and secure lands equally good with those secured by the people who have struggled for the last eight years to build homes in that coun-

It seems to me, Mr. President, that there has been no argument made in opposition to the passage of this bill that is not founded upon an objection to the homestead principle, that is not founded upon an objection to the homestead principle, that is not founded upon opposition to the policy of retaining the public domain for free homes to our people. These reservations are no better than and are the same in character as 600,000,000 acres of other lands now owned by the United States within the arid and the semi-arid region, and all the lands but those embraced within this reservation are subject to entry under the homestead law.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The bill is before the Senate as in Committee of the Whole, and still open to amendment.

Mr. PETTIGREW. I suggest the absence of a quorum, Mr. President.

President

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The absence of a quorum having been suggested, the Secretary will call the roll.

The Secretary called the roll, and the following Senators responded to their names:

Allen,	Clark,	McMillan,	Sherman,
Bacon,	Cockrell.	Mantle.	Shoup,
Baker.	Cullom,	Morgan,	Smith.
Bate.	Davis.	Morrill,	Stewart,
Berry,	Faulkner,	Murphy,	Teller,
Blackburn,	Frye.	Nelson,	Thurston,
Brice,	Gear,	Peffer,	Turpie,
Brown,	Gordon,	Perkins,	Vest.
Call.	Gray,	Pettigrew.	Vilas,
Cannon,	Hawley,	Platt,	Walthall.
Carter.	Hill.	Pugh,	White,
Chandler.	Hoar.	Quay,	Wilson.
Chilton,	McBride,	Sewell,	100000000000000000000000000000000000000

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Fifty-one Senators having answered to their names, a quorum is present. The pending question is on the amendment submitted by the Senator from Iowa [Mr. Allison], which will be stated.

The Secretary. After the word "tribes," in line 5 of section 1, it is proposed to insert "prior to the passage of this act."

Mr. ALLISON. I would suggest that those words be inserted after the word "acquired," in line 4, instead of after the word "tribes," in line 5, so as to read:

That all settlers under the homestead laws of the United States upon the public lands acquired prior to the passage of this act by treaty or agreement from the various Indian tribes, etc.

I think it will read better in that way.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on the amendment of the Senator from Iowa.

The amendment was agreed to.
Mr. PLATT. Have the committee amendments been agreed to, Mr. President?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The amendments reported by the committee have been agreed to as in Committee of the Whole.

Mr. PETTIGREW. I move to strike out in section 1, beginning with and including the word "Provided," in line 18, down to and including the word "Texas," in line 22. The language which I wish to strike out is this:

Provided, That the public-land laws of the United States are hereby suspended until further legislation by Congress in so far as they may affect the territory hitherto known as Green County, Tex.

I will say that Congress at this session has passed an act providing for disposing of the lands embraced within this area, and that it is now in the hands of the President, if it has not been already signed. Therefore the necessity for this legislation has been obviated.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on the amendment proposed by the Senator from South Dakota.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendments were concurred in.

The amendments were ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is, Shall the bill pass?
Mr. PLATT. Let us have the yeas and nays on that.
The yeas and nays were ordered; and the Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. BATE (when his name was called). I am paired on this vote with the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. BUTLER]. If he vote with the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. BUTLER]. If he were here, he would vote for the bill and I against it.

Mr. BERRY (when his name was called). On this question I am paired with the Senator from Wyoming [Mr. WARREN]. If he were present, he would vote "yea," and I should vote "nay."

Mr. CALL (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Vermont [Mr. PROCTOR]. If he were present, I should vote "yea," but I do not know how he would vote.

Mr. CHILTON (when his name was called). On this vote I am paired with the Senator from Washington [Mr. SQUIRE]. If he were present, he would vote "yea," and I should vote "nay."

Mr. FAULKNER (when his name was called). I desire to state that I am paired on this question with the Senator from West Virginia [Mr. Elkins]. I do not know how he would vote, if present, but I should vote "nay."

While on my feet I desire also to announce the pair of the Senator While on the senator of the Senat

While on my feet I desire also to announce the pair of the Senator from Louisiana [Mr. Blanchard] with the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. Pritchard], and also the pair of the junior Senator from Florida [Mr. Pasco] with the Senator from Washington [Mr. Wilson]. If the Senator from Florida were present, he would vote "nay."

Mr. HAWLEY (when his name was called). On this question I am paired with the Senator from Arkansas [Mr. Jones]. If he were present, he would vote "yea," and I should vote "nay."

Mr. HILL (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. Lodge]. I supposed the Senator from Massachusetts was present until a short time since, when I learned he was absent. At the request of the Senator from Nebraska [Mr. Allen], I agreed to pair on this special vote with the Senator from South Dakota [Mr. Kyle]. I inquire if any Senator knows how the Senator from Massachusetts would vote upon this question, if present? I am placed in an embarrassing Senator knows how the Senator from Massachusetts would vote upon this question, if present? I am placed in an embarrassing position, for I supposed he was present when I made the arrangement to which I have referred. Does the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. Hoar] know how his colleague would vote?

Mr. HOAR. I do not, Mr. President.

Mr. HILL. I will pass it over for the present.

Mr. McBRIDE (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. George]. If he were present, I should vote "yea."

Mr. McBRIDE (when the name of Mr. Mitchell of Oregon was called). My colleague [Mr. Mitchell of Oregon] has a general pair with the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. Vilas]. My colleague, if present, would vote "yea."

Mr. MORRILL (when his name was called). I am paired with the senior Senator from Tennessee [Mr. Harris]. I do not know how he would vote, if present, so I withhold my vote. If he were present, I should vote "nay."

Mr. PERKINS (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the Senator from North Dakota [Mr. Roach], who is detained from the Senate Chamber by sickness, but I am informed that if present he would vote in the affirmative, and I therefore vote "yea."

Mr. SEWELL (when his name was called). I am paired with

Mr. SEWELL (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. MITCHELL], who is unavoidably absent.

Mr. THURSTON (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. TILLMAN]. If he were present, I should vote "yea."

Mr. VILAS (when his name was called). I have a general pair,

If he were present, I should vote "yea."

Mr. VILAS (when his name was called). I have a general pair, as stated by the junior Senator from Oregon [Mr. McBride], with his colleague [Mr. Mitchell of Oregon], who, I understand, if present, would vote "yea." I transfer that pair to the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. Lindsay], who requested me to provide him with a pair, and will vote "nay."

Mr. WALTHALL (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the senior Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. Cameron]. If he were present, I should vote "nay."

Mr. WILSON (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the Senator from Florida [Mr. Pasco]. I think the announcement has already been made by the Senator from West Virginia [Mr. Faulkner] as to how the Senator from Florida would vote on this question.

Mr. CHANDLER (when Mr. Wolcott's name was called). I announce my pair with the junior Senator from Colorado [Mr. Wolcott]. If he were present, I should vote "nay."

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. THURSTON. I have announced my pair with the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. TILLMAN], but I understand an announcement has been made upon the floor that the Senator from North Dakota [Mr. ROACH] is absent and for the bill, and that his pair has voted. On that statement, I therefore transfer my pair to the Senator from North Dakota [Mr. ROACH], and ask to vote upon the bill. I vote "yea."

Mr. CALL. I transfer my pair with the Senator from Vermont [Mr. Proctore] to the Senator from Maryland [Mr. Gibson], and vote "yea."

Mr. McMILLAN. I announce that my colleague [Mr. Bur.

and vote "yea."

Mr. McMILLAN. I announce that my colleague [Mr. Burrows] is paired with the Senator from Louisiana [Mr. Caffery].

Mr. McBRIDE. I have announced my pair with the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. George]; but I transfer that pair to the Senator from South Dakota [Mr. Kyle], and vote "yea."

Mr. WILSON. I inquire of the Senator from West Virginia [Mr. Faulkner] if he knows how the Senator from Florida [Mr. Pasco] would vote? I think he made an announcement as to how the Senator from Florida would vote.

Mr. FAULKNER. The Senator from Florida [Mr. Pasco] requested me to state that on this question he would vote "nay."

Mr. WILSON. Then I transfer my pair, if agreeable to the

Senator from West Virginia [Mr. FAULKNER] who has charge of the matter, to his colleague [Mr. ELKINS]. Mr. FAULKNER. Very well. That will enable the Senator from Washington and me to vote.

Mr. WILSON. I vote "yea."
Mr. FAULKNER. I vote "nay."
Mr. CALL. I understand that some mistake has been made as to the position of the Senator from Maryland [Mr. Gibson] on this bill. So I transfer my pair to the Senator from Indiana [Mr.

this bill. So I transfer my pair to the Senator from Indiana [Mr. Voorhees], and will let my vote in the affirmative stand.

Mr. WALTHALL. If necessary to make a quorum, I feel at liberty to vote. I vote "nay."

Mr. BERRY. As I stated, I am paired with the Senator from Wyoming [Mr. WARREN], but I am requested by the friends of the bill and by the colleague of the Senator from Wyoming to cast my vote in order to make a quorum. I therefore vote "nay."

Mr. HILL. I do not know how the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. Lodge] would vote if present. Of course I reserve the right to vote to make a quorum, and at the request of the friends of the

Inr. Lodge] would vote if present. Of course I reserve the right to vote to make a quorum, and at the request of the friends of the bill I now vote. I vote "nay."

Mr. BATE. I am similarly situated, and agreed not to vote on account of the absence of the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. Butler]. At the request of the friends of the bill, however, I am willing to record my vote in order to make a quorum. I vote "nay."

The result

The result was announced—yeas 35, nays 11; as follows:

	Y	EAS-35.
Allen, Allison, Bacon, Baker, Blackburn, Brown, Call, Cannon, Carter,	Clark, Cullom, Davis, Frye, Gear, Gordon, McBride, McMillan, Mantle,	Morgan, Murphy, Nelson, Peffer, Perkins, Pettigrew, Pugh, Quay, Sherman,	Shoup, Smith, Stewart, Teller, Thurston, Wetmore, White, Wilson.
	N	AYS-11.
Bate, Berry, Brice,	Cockrell, Faulkner, Gray,	Hill, Platt, Vest,	Vilas, Walthall.
	NOT	VOTING-43.
Aldrich, Blanchard, Burrows, Butler, Caffery, Cameron, Chandler, Chilton, Daniel, Dubois, Elkins,	Gallinger, George, Gibson, Gorman, Hale, Hansbrough, Harris, Hawley, Hoar, Irby, Jones, Ark.	Jones, Nev. Kyle, Lindsay, Lodge, Martin, Mills, Mitchell, Oreg. Morrill, Palmer, Pasco,	Pritchard, Proctor, Roach, Sewell, Squire, Tillman, Turpie, Voorhees, Warren, Wolcott.

So the bill was passed.

Mr. PETTIGREW. I move that the title be amended so as to read: "A bill providing for free homesteads on the public lands for actual and bona fide settlers, and reserving the public lands for that purpose." that purpose.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. PETTIGREW. I move that the Senate request a conference with the House of Representatives upon the bill and amendments.

The motion was agreed to.

By unanimous consent, the Vice-President was authorized to appoint the conferees on the part of the Senate; and Mr. Petti-GREW, Mr. JONES of Arkansas, and Mr. Allen were appointed.

MARITIME CANAL COMPANY OF NICARAGUA.

Mr. MORGAN. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the bill (S. 3247) to amend an act entitled "An act to incorporate the Maritime Canal Company of Nicaragua," approved February 20, 1889.
The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the motion of the Senator from Alabama.

Mr. TURPIE. On that I ask for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered; and the Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. CALL (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Vermont [Mr. PROCTOR]. If he were present, I

Mr. GORDON (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Iowa [Mr. GEAR] who is not now in his seat.

Mr. THURSTON (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. TILLMAN].

Mr. VEST. I am paired with the Senator from Oregon [Mr. MITCHELL]. If he were present, he would vote "yea" and I should vote "nav

Mr. WALTHALL (when his name was called). I am paired with the senior Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. CAMERON].
Mr. WILSON (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the Senator from Florida [Mr. Pasco]. Iam not advised the report.

as to how he would vote upon this question. If he were present, I ould vote "yea." The roll call was concluded.

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. CALL. I am paired with the junior Senator from Vermont [Mr. Proctor], as I have announced. I am informed by the Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. Aldrich] that the junior Senator from Vermont would vote "yea" if he were present. I will therefore take the liberty of voting. I vote "yea."

Mr. McBRIDE. I have a general pair with the senior Senator from Mississippi [Mr. George]. I transfer my pair to the Senator from South Dakota [Mr. KYLE], and will vote. I vote "yea."

Mr. BATE. My colleague [Mr. Harris], who is necessarily absent, is paired with the senior Senator from Vermont [Mr. Morrill].

The result was announced—yeas 33, nays 6; as follows:

YEAS-33.

Aldrich, Allison, Bacon, Baker, Bate, Brice, Bro wn, Call, Cannon,	Carter, Chandler, Cullom, Davis, Faulkner, Frye, Gear, Hawley, Hoar,	McBride, McMillan, Mantle, Morgan, Murphy, Nelson, Peffer, Perkins,	Pugh, Quay, Sewell, Shoup, Stewart, White.
	N	AYS-6.
Berry, Blackburn,	Chilton, Cockrell,	Gray,	Teller.
	NOT	VOTING-50.
Allen, Blanchard, Burrows, Butler, Caffery, Cameron, Clark, Daniel, Dubois, Elkins, Gallinger, George, Gibson,	Gordon, Gorman, Hale, Hansbrough, Harris, Hill, Irby, Jones, Ark, Jones, Nev. Kyle, Lindsay, Lodge, Martin,	Mills, Mitchell, Oreg. Mitchell, Wis. Morrill, Palmer, Pasco, Pettigrew, Pritchard, Proctor, Roach, Sherman, Smith, Squire,	Thurston. Tillman, Turpie, Vest., Vilas, Voorhees, Walthall, Warren, Wetmore, Wilson, Wolcott.

Mr. MORGAN. I ask for a call of the Senate.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. No quorum having voted, the Secretary will call the roll.

Mr. HILL. I move that the Senate adjourn. We can not accomplish anything at this late hour.

The motion was agreed to; and (at 4 o'clock and 30 minutes p. m.) the Senate adjourned until Monday, January 18, 1897, at 12 o'clock meridian.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

THURSDAY, January 14, 1897.

The House met at 12 o'clock m. Prayer by the Chaplain, Rev. HENRY N. COUDEN

The Journal of the proceedings of yesterday was read and approved.

AMANDA WOODCOCK.

Mr. McCREARY of Kentucky. Mr. Speaker, I ask for the present consideration of House bill No. 9306, granting a pension to Amanda Woodcock.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place upon the pension roll, at the rate of $12 per month, the name of Amanda Woodcock, of Richmond, Ky., widow of Robert Woodcock, deceased, late a private in the Fourth Kentucky Volunteer Infantry, in the Mexican war.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration

There being no objection, the bill was considered, and ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed. On motion of Mr. McCREARY of Kentucky, a motion to reconsider the last vote was laid on the table.

GEORGE W. GOODMAN.

Mr. HARDY. Mr. Speaker, I desire to call up the bill (H. R. 8866) for the relief of George W. Goodman, and ask unanimous consent for its present consideration.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of War be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to remove the charge of desertion from the records of the War Department as to George W. Goodman, late a member of Company I of the Ninety-seventh Regiment of Indiana Volunteers, and to grant him an honorable discharge.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration

Mr. McCLELLAN and Mr. STEELE asked for the reading of

The report (by Mr. TRACEY) was read, as follows:

The report (by Mr. Tracey) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Military Affairs, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 3856) for the relief of George W. Goodman, report as follows:

The report of the War Department shows that George W. Goodman was enrolled August 22, 1862, to serve three years, and that he deserted October 7, 1862, from Camp Morton, Indianapolis, Ind.; that he reported voluntarily March 18, 1864, to the provost-marshal of the sixth district of Indiana, was forwarded to his regiment, and rejoined it in Alabama on March 24, 1864. He was wounded June 27, 1864, in action at Kenesaw Mountain, Georgia, was admitted to the regimental hospital the same day, and the muster-out roll of his company, dated June 4, 1865, reports him "deserted from wounded furlough March 25, 1865."

The soldier testifies that he enlisted August 22, 1862, at Linton, Greene County, Ind., and went to Indianapolis, Ind., and was there mustered into the service and was there taken sick, and by consent verbally given he returned home, but before he recovered his health sufficiently to return to his regiment he was reported as a deserter, and that from the information he received he was afraid to return to his regiment, but finally determined to report to his regiment, and did so report in March, 1864, and was put on duty and not punished in any manner and received the same treatment as his comrades received and continued to serve until he was wounded at the battle of Kenesaw Mountain, having received six buckshot in left thigh and hip, and was furloughed home, and after he recovered sufficiently he reported to Co. R. W. Thompson for duty and remained under his command until he was taken sick, and at the time the regiment was mustered out he was still unable to travel, and was not present to receive his discharge with the rest of his comrades.

Col. R. W. Thompson, late provost-marshal at Terre Haute, Ind., and later Secretary of the Navy, files his personally written letter, which his as follows:

Terre Haute, June 15, 1806.

TERRE HAUTE, June 15, 1896.

During my service as provost-marshal in this city while the war of the rebellion was in progress, George W. Goodman, who belonged to Company I, Ninety-seventh Regiment of Indiana Volunteers, reported to my office upon the sick list and was permitted by me to go to his home and recruit his health. He continued to report from time to time and was permitted by me to return until he became sufficiently well to go to the front and join his regiment. If on account of this he became marked as a deserter, it was unjust to him, and the mark should be erased. He was a good soldier and severely wounded.

R. W. THOMPSON, Late Provost-Marshal.

R. W. THOMPSON,

Late Provost-Marshal.

Josiah Stanley, late captain of Company I, Ninety-seventh Indiana Volunteers, files his affidavit, in which he says:

"I have known said George W. Goodman since he was 12 years old; that he enlisted in Company I, Ninety-seventh Indiana Volunteers, August 22, 1862, at Linton, Ind.; that said Goodman went from there with the company to Indianapolis. Ind."

Captain Stanley testifies he did not see him any more until he arrived at Scottsboro, Ala., in March, 1864. He was placed on duty then, having reported to his command, by Col. F. Catterson, commanding Ninety-seventh Indiana; that said Captain Stanley was with said Goodman in four or five hard-fought battles. Captain Stanley further says in his affidavit:

"I verily believe a braver or better soldier did not exist in the field.

"The monthly report shows him sick, wounded, in hospital from June 27 to February 28, 1865. The roll of February, 1865, shows him a deserter from furlough, which I am satisfied is an error. My reasons are these: Col. Dick Thompson, provost-marshal of Terre Haute, sent him home from Terre Haute on account of his health and wound. He reported from time to time at this man's office. The mark of desertion is unjust and should be erased."

David W. Corbin, of Linton, Greene County, Ind., also testifies "that during the spring of 1865, in March or April, George W. Goodman, of Company I, Ninety-seventh Indiana Volunteers, while acting as notifying officer for Jefferson Township, Sullivan County, Ind., gave me notice that I was drafted into the United States service."

In consideration of the fact that this soldier voluntarily returned to duty after the first charge of desertion was made against him and participated in several battles, in one of which he was severely wounded, and in view of the further fact that the evidence raises a doubt as to his actually having deserted after being wounded at the battle of Kenesaw Mountain, the committee are of the opinion that the bill should pass.

There being no objection, the bill was considered, and ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.
On motion of Mr. HARDY, a motion to reconsider the last vote was laid on the table.

RICHARD BROOKINS.

Mr. CURTIS of Kansas. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (S. 1690) granting a pen-sion to Richard Brookins.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, at the rate of §12 per month, the name of Richard Brookins, who served under that name in Troops M and H of the Ninth Regiment of the United States Cavalry from February 5, 1867, to February 5, 1867, to Tebruary 5

The SPEAKER. - Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. ERDMAN. Let us have the report read. The report (by Mr. Kirkpatrick) was read, as follows:

The report (by Mr. KIRKPATRICK) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Invalid Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (S.1690) granting a pension to Richard Brookins, having considered the same, respectfully adopt the report of the Senate Committee on Pensions, and recommend the passage of the bill after being amended as follows:

In line 5, after the word "month," insert the words "subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws."

Strike out after the word "Cavalry," in line 7, "from February 5, 1867, to February 5, 1872, and from January 2, 1882, to January 3, 1887."

Also, strike out all the printed bill after the word "Colored," in line 18, and insert in lieu thereof the word "Infautry."

[Senate Report No. 1656, Fifty-fourth Congress, first session]

[Senate Report No. 1056, Fifty-fourth Congress, first session.]
The Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (S. 1690) granting a pension to Richard Brookins, have considered the same, and submit the following report:
Bichard Brookins was enlisted on the 5th day of February, 1867, and was assigned to Company M, Ninth United States Cavalry. He was discharged on the 5th day of February, 1872, by expiration of term of service.

He enlisted again on the 12th day of January, 1882, and assigned to Company H, Ninth United States Cavalry. He was discharged on the 3d day of January 1887, at Fort McKinney, Wyo., on surgeon's certificate of disability, being unfit for duty because of chronic rheumatism.

E. D. Dimmick, captain of Company H, Ninth United States Cavalry Volunteers, who recommended the discharge of said soldier, stated that he was disabled by "chronic rheumatism contracted in the line of duty. Said soldier has been more or less unfit for duty for the past year. Has been unfit for duty for the last sixty days."

D. Weisel, acting assistant surgeon United States Army, at Fort McKinney, Wyo., states in the certificate of disability that said soldier was unfit for duty because of "chronic rheumatism of unknown duration, certainly two months, affecting more particularly the lower extremities, believed to have originated in the line of duty. Degree of disability, total."

On the 17th day of April, 1880, Mr. Brookins filed an application for pension, in which he alleged that while scouting about the 10th of May, 1871, his leg was injured by his horse falling with him, jamming his carbine against his leg. He was rejected because of his inability to prove his case.

On the 2d day of May, 1887, he filed another application for pension, in which he alleged that in June, 1884, by exposure he contracted rheumatism, and that the disease was aggravated by subsequent exposure until he became totally disabled. On the 21st day of August, 1888, he filed an affidavit, in which he claimed pension on account of disability from asthma and disease of breast. The claims were rejected by the honorable Commissioner on the ground that the claimant had sustained no ratable disability.

On the 28th day of July, 1890, Mr. Brookins filed an application for pension under the act of June 27, 1890. He based this application up nently disabled by reason of rheumatism and general debility.

This claim was also rejected on the ground that there was no ratable disability.

The various examining boards who have examined the soldier have found that he was afflicted with rheumatism in a ratable degree, and there is considerable medical and lay testimony on file to show that the claimant had been severely disabled for many years past, and that he has rheumatism and sciatica so badly in his hips and legs as to wholly incapacitate him for the performance of manual labor.

The statement of the captain of his company as officially made and the report of the acting assistant surgeon as to the soldier's physical condition are conclusive that he did suffer from chronic rheumatism, and that the disability was contracted while in the service.

There can be no doubt of the fact that the soldier did contract chronic rheumatism while in the service, and it only remains to determine whether he is disabled to a pensionable degree or not. The evidence of his comrades, the evidence of physicians who have examined him, and the statements officially made by the various examining boards are conclusive that the soldier is disabled from performing manual labor by reason of the severe attacks of rheumatism.

The evidence shows without question that the disability has increased until now he is unable to earn a support by manual labor. This colored man is absolutely without means of support except what he could earn by his daily toil, but being incapacitated by reason of his disability. In consideration of the evidence submitted, both medical and lay, and because of the eleven years fathful service rendered by this man, your committee are of the opinion that he is entitled to a pension, and that the rate stipulated in the bill is proper and just. We therefore recommend the passage of the bill without amendment.

There being no objection, the bill was considered, the amend-ments recommended by the committee were agreed to, and the bill as amended was ordered to a third reading; and being read the third time, it was passed.
On motion of Mr. CURTIS of Kansas, a motion to reconsider the last vote was laid on the table.

JOSHUA BISHOP.

Mr. BURTON of Missouri. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (S. 2338) for the relief of Joshua Bishop.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc.. That jurisdiction is hereby conferred on the Court of Claims to try and determine the claim of Joshua Bishop against the United States, for pay alleged to be due and unpaid to him as lieutenant-commander of the Navy from February 9, 1868, to February 29, 1871, as shore pay, amounting to the sum of $7.767.66; and the statute of limitations shall not apply to said claim, and the judgment of said court shall be final as to the same, subject to the right of appeal by either party.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. PAYNE. Before consent is given, I would like to hear the report read, or have some statement made in reference to this

Mr. BURTON of Missouri. Mr. Speaker, I will state that a similar bill was introduced in the House, referred to the Committee on Claims, and reported favorably by that committee, a copy of which report I hold in my hand. In the meantime this bill passed the Senate, came to the House, and was referred to the said committee, who made a favorable report upon it.

I now ask, for the information of the gentleman from New York, the reading of the report of the Committee on the House bill. The report (by Mr. Denny) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Claims, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 6137) to confer on the Court of Claims jurisdiction to hear and determine the law and the facts in the matter of the claim of Joshua Bishop, commander, United States Navy, against the United States, as set forth in his petition, have had the same under consideration, and find, from the examination of the facts, that there is involved in the same a legal question which should be passed upon by a court of competent jurisdiction for the following reasons, to wit:

The record in the case discloses serious doubts as to the correctness of the proceedings, findings, and approval of the court-martial before whom Commander Bishop was tried and sentenced.

The record does not disclose the fact that the officer (Rear-Admiral Bell) who ordered the court-martial at any time ever approved of the proceedings, findings, and sentence of said court, which said action by and on the part of said rear-admiral, it is claimed by petition, was necessary to confer jurisdiction on the Executive authority.

The record and evidence in the case does not show that the President of the United States passed upon the whole record of the proceedings, findings, and sentence of said court, but upon a memorandum or brief furnished by a clerk at that time in the service of the Navy Department, and it is contended by petitioner that the approval of the President in this behalf was not judicial (twentieth article, act July 17, 1862) and was therefore inoperative.

The record discloses the fact that Commander Bishop was suspended on May 31, 1867, from 4 to 8 o'clock a. m., by Commander Carpenter, and from 4 to 8 p. m. At 640 p. m. May 31, 1867, from at 10 s o'clock a. m., by Commander Bishop was restored to duty by order of Rear-Admiral Bell, and it is contended by Commander Bishop that at the time of the convening of the court-martial that he had already been punished for the offenses charged, and had been restored to duty.

The record shows that the dismissal of Commander Bishop from the naval service of the United States was not in the customary form in use by the Secretary of the Navy at the time of said dismissal.

The record is not full and complete in many respects, and discloses many phases of fact and law which, in our judgment, should be passed upon by the Court of Claims.

Your committee therefore recommend that the bill pass.

Senate report of March 25, 1896, is hereto attached and made a part of this report.

report.

Mr. PAYNE. I understand the purpose of this bill is to refer the claim to the Court of Claims, but with authority to enter a judgment against the United States for the amount involved in the bill—some $7,000; and from what I gather from the reading of the report the reason for sending the bill to the Court of Claims and setting aside the findings of the court-martial was because of some technical informality in the proceeding.

Now, if the gentleman will amend the bill, directing the court to report upon the facts and their opinion of the law to Congress, I shall not object. Otherwise, in its present form, I do not think the bill ought to be passed.

Mr. BURTON of Missouri. If the gentleman will permit me, the bill has this purpose: The Senate has passed the bill twice and it has been favorably reported at a preceding session of this House. There were a great many irregularities involved in the record of the court-martial. In the first place, it was never approved by the court-martial. In the first place, it was never approved by the presiding officer. In the second place, the proceedings were never submitted to President Johnson, the only paper submitted to him being a brief supplied by one of the clerks.

I hold in my hand in this record a letter of Mr. Robeson, Secretary of the Navy—who was Secretary at the time the court-martial proceedings were held—stating that he believes this officer had been done an injustice. Upon the presentation of the facts to Congress Mr. Bishop was restored to the Navy and has rendered gallant and meritorious services. He is now about to be retired by reason of age. It seems to me as an attorney—and I think every member of the committee has been impressed with that idea—that an injustice has been done to this man. If so, he is every member of the committee has been impressed with that idea—that an injustice has been done to this man. If so, he is entitled to his pay. If not, then he is not entitled to it. This bill merely provides that this claim may be submitted to a court competent and qualified to hear and determine these matters, and it seems to me that Congress ought to be willing to intrust the consideration and determination of a matter of this kind to a court of our own creation, which, under all circumstances and at all times, is expected to well and truly guard the interests of the Government. I hope my friend will not object.

Mr. LOUD. I should like to ask the gentleman if he thinks it is safe to re-review a case that has been determined by the highest naval court that could have been convened at that time? I ask him if he thinks it is safe to re-review the decision of that naval court eighteen years afterwards by a court not familiar with that class of cases?

Mr. BURTON of Missouri. I think it would be perfectly safe. The record is all there. Everything that was done is in writing and on the files of the Department, and the officers of the Navy Department themselves have recommended this proceeding, in order that this man may receive justice at the hands of the Government.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. LOUD. I will yield the right to object. Mr. PAYNE. Mr. Speaker, I shall have to object to the bill in its present form.
The SPEAKER. Objection is made.

FREDERICK LIERMAN.

Mr. DOCKERY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (H. R. 8683) granting a pension to Frederick Lierman.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Frederick Lierman, late private Company B, Johnson County Home Guards, Enrolled Missouri Militia, at the rate of $12 per month.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. DOCKERY. Let the report be read. I understand the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. ERDMAN] desires the reading of the report.

The report (by Mr. BAKER of Kansas) was read, as follows:

the report.

The report (by Mr. Baker of Kansas) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Invalid Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 8683) granting a pension to Frederick Lierman, late private, Company B, Johnson County Home Guards, Enrolled Missouri Militia, having carefully examined and considered the same, respectfully report:

The claimant enlisted at Warrensburg, Mo., and was mustered into service as private, Company B, Johnson County (Mo.) Home Guards, on July 4, 1861, and served with such organization until December, 1861, or January, 1862, when the regiment was disbanded at St. Louis, Mo., and mustered out. The regiment was also known as the Twenty-seventh Missouri Enrolled Militia. On account of sickness, he was not mustered out with his company when the regiment was disbanded. He returned to Sedalia, Mo., and was engaged as scout and guide by Lieutenant-Colonel Eads, of Georgetown, Mo., for some time, and then by Col. Dan Houston, at Lexington, Mo., and with Maj. Emory S. Foster, so that he was continuously in service, with the exception of a few days, up to and including the battle of Lonejack, Mo., August 18, 1862.

He served with his command during the siege of Lexington, Mo., as several of his comrades and Major Foster testify, and also at Lonejack, where he was seriously wounded in the left side and also in left hand during the battle.

He was confined to his bed for three or four months from the gunshot wound in left side received in battle at Lonejack.

The testimony shows that he has been disabled from the wounds ever since he received them; that he is now 76 years of age, and on account of the wounds and old age and general debility is totally unfitted for manual labor. His application for pension was rejected on the ground that the War Department records fail to show him to have been in the United States service, Major Foster and several others testify to his service, and the receipt of wounds is thoroughly established, and he, like Major Foster and several others of same regiment

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There was no objection.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

On motion of Mr. DOCKERY, a motion to reconsider the last vote was laid on the table.

MALINDA KELLY.

Mr. SMITH of Illinois. I ask unanimous consent, Mr. Speaker, for the present consideration of the bill (H. R. 5718) granting a pension to Malinda Kelly, of Jackson County, Ill.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the general pension laws, the name of Malinda Kelly, mother of Drura Baggott, deceased, late a soldier in Company M, Sixth Illinois Cavalry Volunteers, in the war of the rebellion.

The Committee on Invalid Pensions recommended the following amendments:

In line 7 strike out the word "soldier" and insert in lieu thereof the word "recruit."

And at the end of the bill add the words "and pay her a pension of $12 per month."

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. ERDMAN. Mr. Speaker, pending that, let us have the report read

The SPEAKER. The gentleman desires to have the report read. The report (by Mr. WOOD) was read, as follows:

The SPEAKER. Ine gentleman desires to have the report read. The report (by Mr. Wood) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Invalid Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 5718) granting a pension to Malinda Kelly, of Jackson County, Ill., submit the following report:

Malinda Kelly is the dependent mother of Drura (Drury) Baggott, who was a recruit in Company M. Sixth Illinois Cavalry. He was enrolled as a private November 26, 1863, and was honorably discharged February 25, 1864, laving served, according to the records of the War Department and the evidence, ninety-one days. He died about May 1, 1864, of catarrhal pneumonia. This disease was the immediate result of measles contracted and from which he suffered while in the service. His mother was allowed and received his pay up to and including February 25, 1864. August 2, 1890, the claimant applied for pension under act of June 27, 1890. On July 6, 1892, it was submitted for rejection by an examiner in the Pension Office on the ground that soldier did not serve in the Army ninety days. In order to justify this recommendation he seems to have changed one of the "important dates" by erasing the figures 25 and inserting in lieu thereof, in red ink, "22," so as to make the date of discharge "February 22, 1864," thus making his period of service only eighty-eight days. We have carefully examined the evidence to discover the ground upon which the date shown in the records of the War Department was thus overturned. We absolutely find nothing except a manifest desire to reject the claim. It is true that Dr. Frank M. Agnew, on February 13, 1893, swears "that he was called professionally to attend Drury Baggott at his home near Western Saratoga, Union County, Ill., while at home on leave of absence on account of measles, February 22, 1894; that the measles settled on his lungs, producing catarrhal pneumonia."

The committee can not accept this changing of "important dates" either. But it did adopt quite as inconsistent a finding. On May 5, 1893, it rejected the and was furloughed home February 19, 1864. It is simply absurd to say that this disease existed on enlistment—November 28, 1863. It is equally absurd to accept the conclusions of the surgeons who examined him for discharge—that he was "unfit for service by reason of tubercular diathesis, which existed prior to enlistment." The "diathesis" of a soldier, or his family history, was never considered in accepting him as a volunteer or drafted man.

The committee recommend the passage of the bill with an amendment striking out the word "soldier," in seventh line, and inserting in lieu thereof the word "recruit;" also add at end of bill the words "and pay her a pension of $12 per month."

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. ERDMAN. Mr. Speaker, I object.

HELMUTH F. SCECKEL. Mr. HENRY of Connecticut. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (S. 347) to remove the charge of desertion and grant an honorable discharge to Helmuth F. Sœckel.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of War be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to remove the charge of desertion now standing against the record of Helmuth F. Seckel, late private Company C, Sixteenth Regiment Connecticut Volunteers, and grant an honorable discharge.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration

Mr. HENRY of Connecticut. Mr. Speaker, the fact about this case is that this man died in Andersonville Prison. He was connected with a Connecticut regiment for two years. There is no nected with a Connecticut regiment for two years. There is no record of his death, and consequently he is recorded as a deserter. His friends wish to have the cloud removed from that record because of his undoubted death in Andersonville Prison.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There was no objection.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

On motion of Mr. HENRY of Connecticut, a motion to reconsider the last vote was laid on the table.

MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT.

A message in writing from the President of the United States was communicated to the House of Representatives by Mr. Pruden, one of his secretaries, who also announced that the President had approved and signed bills and joint resolutions of the following titles:

On January 13, 1897:
An act (H. R. 1891) granting a pension to Celestia R. Barry;
An act (H. R. 1890) granting a pension to Mary Martin;
An act (H. R. 1820) granting a pension to Neil McNeil;
An act (H. R. 1599) granting a pension to Phœbe M. Woolley Palmeter;

An act (H. R. 3755) to increase the pension of Mary C. Thompson; An act (H. R. 4355) to increase the pension of Theresa Peebles, of Jefferson County, Ga.;
An act (H. R. 1062) to grant a pension to Armstead M. Rawlings, of Arkansas;

lings, of Arkansas;
An act (H. R. 950) granting increase of pension to John Coombs;
An act (H. R. 4721) granting an increase of pension to Orleina
J. Clark, of Louisville, Ky.;
An act (H. R. 1874) to place the name of Robert Smalls on the pension rolls; and
An act (H. R. 2320) for the relief of Samuel Burrell.
On January 8, 1897:
An act (H. R. 6533) for the relief of A. A. Hosmer.
On January 9, 1897:

An act (H. R. 6533) for the refler of A. A. Hosmer.
On January 9, 1897:
An act (H. R. 9472) to amend chapter 111 of the acts of the third session of the Fifty-third Congress.
On January 11, 1897:
Joint resolution (H. Res. 205) authorizing the building of a telephone line in the District of Columbia.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED.

Mr. HAGER, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that they had examined and found truly enrolled bills and joint resolution of the following titles; when the Speaker signed the same:

A bill (S. 1741) to authorize the Muscogee, Oklahoma and Western Railroad Company to construct and operate a line of railway through Oklahoma and the Indian Territory, and for other

A bill (H. R. 8676) to enable the town of Flagstaff, in the Territory of Arizona, to issue bonds to construct a water system;
A bill (H. R. 4538) for the relief of John Keefe; and Joint resolution (S. R. 189) providing for the erection of a Government building at the Tennessee Centennial Exposition.

THE FRIGATE CONSTITUTION.

Mr. FITZGERALD. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the resolution which I send to the Clerk's desk.

The resolution was read, as follows:

Resolved, That the Secretary of the Navy be requested to furnish the House an estimate of the amount of money that will be required to put the frigate Constitution, now lying at the Portsmouth Navy-Yard, in proper seaworthy condition to make the journey, without danger, from Portsmouth to Washington, to be here used as a naval museum.

Mr. FITZGERALD. I ask unanimous consent that that resolution may be acted upon at this time.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman asks unanimous consent for action on the resolution.

Mr. FITZGERALD. Mr. Speaker, in connection with the resolution I present a petition of the Massachusetts Historical Society that Congress may take some action with regard to the preserva-tion of the frigate Constitution, which now lies at the Portsmouth Navy-Yard and is in such a condition as to be in danger of sinking at any time.

As every member of this House knows, there is no vessel in the American Navy that possesses the history and the record that the Constitution posses

It is my proud privilege to represent in Congress the district in which is located the wharf where this famous old frigate was built and launched. In grateful memory of her untarnished record it has been called "Constitution Wharf."

As a boy I have the pleasantest recollections of the happy days spent at the wharf where the Constitution was built over a century spent at the wharf where the Constitution was built over a century ago, and when I stand here pleading for the preservation of "Old Ironsides" my deepest sympathies are moved. The achievements of the heroic sons of Massachusetts with her have produced within my breast, as they must within the breast of every American citizen, feelings of the deepest reverence for the historic ship.

Why should it be necessary to call the attention of the Government to its duty with regard to the preservation of the Constitution, whose great victory in the naval engagement with the Guerrière in the dark days of the war of 1812 brought hope and encouragement to our people and placed the United States among the first-class powers of the world?

Why this shame of neglect toward an historic relic that typifies

Why this shame of neglect toward an historic relic that typifies the heroism of our fathers and is an inspiration to succeeding generations?

Nelson's flagship Victory is carefully perpetuated by Great Brit-ain, and in such great reverence is she held that Englishmen ain, and in such great reverence is she held that Englishmen respectfully remove their hats whenever they pass.

Who shall say that the dear old Constitution, with her unbroken line of victories, unparalleled in the history of the world, is not worthy of like respect from a grateful Republic?

In 1829, when the destruction of the Constitution was ordered, the stirring lyric poem of Oliver Wendell Holmes saved her from what would have been a disgrace to our country, and I think it proper that those inspiring words should be recalled at this time, when, through neglect, a like fate seems to be in store for her:

OLD IRONSIDES

Av, tear her tattered ensign down!
Long has it waved on high,
And many an eye has danced to see
That banner in the sky.
Beneath it rung the battle shout,
And burst the cannon's roar;
The meteor of the ocean air
Shall sweep the clouds no more!

Her deck, once red with heroes' blood,
Where knelt the vanquished foe,
When winds were hurrying o'er the flood,
And waves were white below,
No more shall feel the victor's tread,
Or know the conquered knee;
The harpies of the shore shall pluck
The eagle of the sea!

Oh, better that her shattered hulk Should sink beneath the wave; Her thunders shook the mighty deep, And there should be her grave. Nail to the mast her holy flag, Set every threadbare sail, And give her to the god of storms, The lightning and the gale!

Massachusetts asks that this grand old ship be perpetuated, and she relinquishes her claim to have her placed in the waters of the State, near where she was built and manned, that she may be placed in Washington, here to serve as a national monument of the triumphs of the American seamen during the war of 1812. Such has ever been the true, chivalrous spirit of Massachusetts.

Through the care and labor of her own Historical Society she preserves the revered relics of the Revolutionary times and of her illustrious sons; and she feels that she has the right to insist that the National Government shall no longer be unmindful of its duty the National Government shall no longer be diministrated in its duty to the flower of the American Navy, the Constitution.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the resolution? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

The question was taken; and the resolution was agreed to

W. H. L. PEPPERELL.

Mr. CALDERHEAD. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (S. 250) for the relief of W. H. L. Pepperell.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Postmaster-General be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to cause the accounts of W. H. L. Pepperell, late postmaster at Concordia, State of Kansas, to be credited with the sum of $1,545, and that he cause said credit to be certified to the Auditor of the Treasury for the Post-Office Department, being on account of the loss of $1,345 in postage stamps and $200 in postal funds stolen from said post-office on August 27, 1887, it appearing that said loss was without fault or negligence on the part of said late postmaster, and the said sum of $1,545 is hereby appropriated, out of any moneys in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to pay said claim.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. LOUD. Mr. Speaker, I want to suggest to the gentleman who presents the bill that if this measure has any merit the Department has already power to settle the claim. I do not think this House ought to settle cases of that character, when the Department of the company of $10,000, and this House ought to settle cases of that character, when the Department has power to settle them to the amount of $10,000; and therefore I shall have to object.

Mr. CALDERHEAD. The loss occurred in 1887, and was presented to the Department at that time, or some time before it had power to make the settlement.

Mr. LOUD. They have the power now, I would state, Mr. Speckers.

Speaker.

Mr. CALDERHEAD. The Department has been refusing to reverse a ruling that has been made upon the case, for the reason that the Department held that the postmaster was liable for the negligence of his clerk. Since that time a different ruling prevailed in the Department, and where it is shown that the postmaster has not been guilty of negligence, he is not chargeable with the negligence of his clerks; but still the Department is unwilling to reverse the former ruling in this case.

Mr. LOUD. I am still of the opinion, Mr. Speaker, that the House should not settle cases where the Department has power to settle them. If the Department does not hold that this case is such as should be settled, I do not think that Congress should review the action of the Post-Office Department in that direction.

Mr. CALDERHEAD. I think I have a letter from the Attorney-General of the Post-Office Department in connection with this case that I will ask to have read.

that I will ask to have read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Office of Assistant Attorney-General for the Post-Office Department, Washington, D. C., June 11, 1896.

J. L. T., A. A. G.

SIR: Referring to your verbal inquiry concerning the claim of W. H. L. Pepperill, late postmaster at Concordia, Kans., for credit on account of postage stamps and postal funds stolen from his office October 22, 1887, I have the honor to inform you that for several years it has been the practice of this office to recommend allowance of credit for losses resulting from larceny, as well as from burglary, fire, etc., when it appeared that such losses were not caused or contributed to by fault or negligence on the part of postmasters; and for some time previous to my entering upon the duties of this office it was held that postmasters were not liable for losses resulting from fault or negligence on the part of their assistants. In this ruling I have fully concurred.

Curred.

Very respectfully,

Very respectfully,

JOHN L. THOMAS,

Assistant Attorney-General for the Post-Office Department.

P. S.—If this claim was now before this Department for the first time I would recommend its allowance.

Hon. W. A. CALDERHEAD, M. C., House of Representatives.

Mr. LOUD. What is the date of that letter?
Mr. CALDERHEAD. I want to say in addition to that—
The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

I hope the gentleman will hold it over until tomorrow and I will look into it. I think that the Department still has power to settle that case.

Mr. CALDERHEAD. I want to say that $1,300 of this was in stamps and $200 of it was in money. The Department may possibly settle for the money, but are not willing that they should settle for the stamps. Mr. LOUD. I have no doubt that the gentleman will be recognized by the Speaker to-morrow.

The SPEAKER. Objection is made.

W. J. TAPP & CO.

Mr. EVANS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (H. R. 464) for the relief of W. J. Tapp & Co.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc. That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to W. J. Tapp & Co., the sum of $240.10, as a refund of duties erroneously exacted on certain machinery for the manufacture of jute, at Louisville, Ky., in the year 1876.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration

Mr. PAYNE. I hope the report will be read, Mr. Speaker.

The report (by Mr. Colson) was read, as follows:

The report (by Mr. Colson) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Claims, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 464) for the relief of W. J. Tapp & Co., report:

A bill identical in terms with this was passed by the House of Representatives of the Fifty-third Congress, but no action was taken upon it in the Senate. Similar bills were favorably reported to the House by the Committee on Claims in the Fiftieth, Fifty-first, and Fifty-second Congresses.

The report of the committee in the Fiftieth Congress, readopted in the succeeding Congresses, including the last, sets out the following facts:

In May, 1876, W. J. Tapp & Co., of Louisville, in the State of Kentucky, manufacturers of goods from jute fiber, imported certain machinery for their business, such machinery not being then made in the United States, to be used by them exclusively in the manufacture of that fiber, and which was adapted to and could be used for no other purpose. By the provisions of section 7 of the act of February 8, 1875, such machinery was entitled for two years thereafter to enter free from duty.

On the 12th of November, 1875, the Secretary of the Treasury decided that no machinery was exclusively adapted to such manufacture.

When the machinery of Tapp & Co. arrived at the port of entry, they claimed it was entitled to be admitted free under the law, but the claim was denied, and the duties and charges, amounting to $240.10, gold, were paid by them under protest. Other importers of similar machinery pursued the same course.

The Secretary of the Treasury subsequently, on the 23d of March, 1877, reversed his former decision and admitted duty free similiar machinery imported in October, November, and December, 1875, by Buchanan & Lyall, of New York.

Thereafter Tapp & Co. applied to the Department for a rebate of the duties they had paid, and were refused on the ground that they did not appeal from

of New York.

Thereafter Tapp & Co. applied to the Department for a rebate of the duties they had paid and were refused on the ground that they did not appeal from the original decision of the appraiser of customs declaring their machinery dutiable. The law provided for such appeal, but having paid the duties under protest they deemed it unnecessary, and no doubt supposed it would be unavailing to appeal to a tribunal which had then recently, as to other parties, decided the same question adversely to their claim.

In view of the fact that the Supreme Court has decided that "a payment made to a public officer in discharge of a fee or tax illegally exacted is not such a voluntary payment as will preclude the party from recovering it back" (Ill U. S., 22), your committee are of the opinion that the parties are entitled to the relief asked for, and recommend the passage of the accompanying bill.

Mr. PAYNE. Mr. Speaker, I understand that these parties had full remedy by way of appeal at the time, under the law, when the duty undoubtedly would have been refunded. There were a number of other parties exactly in the same condition of affairs, and it seems to me that we ought not to commence now to open up claims for duties that have been claimed to be illegally paid a number of years ago. It would open the door to a large class of the door was opened yesterday morning to a claim at least six times as large as this, and passed without objection.

Mr. EVANS. I want to say to the gentleman from New York

Mr. PAYNE. I did not so understand it yesterday. If I had I would have objected; but if the door is opened now, the sooner it is closed the better. I shall have to object to the bill.

The SPEAKER. Objection is made.

JAMES M. WILLBUR.

Mr. CUMMINGS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill S. 758.

The Clerk read as follows:

the present consideration of the bill S. 758.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (8. 758) authorizing the Secretary of the Treasury to adjust and settle the account of James M. Willbur with the United States, and to pay said Willbur such sum of money as he may be justly and equitably entitled to. Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury is hereby authorized to make settlement with James M. Willbur for excess in weight of material and excess in the superficial measurement of illuminated tiling, frames, and supports thereof, placed by said Willbur in, on, and around the New York City post-office and court-house building beyond what he was required to furnish by his contract with the United States, according to samples submitted and accepted, either upon the report of such excessive weight and superficial measurement furnished by the direction of the Secretary of the Treasury and Senate committee, by the experts, Solomon J. Fague and Archibald Given, of date April 21, 1886, to the Senate committee, and on file with the Senate Committee on Claims; but if not satisfied with the report of such experts, the Secretary of the Treasury shall, within thirty days from the passage of this act, appoint three competent persons, who shall be duly sworn to ascertain and report the sum, if any, which in justice and equity ought to be paid James M. Willbur for excess in weight of material and excess in the superficial measurement of illuminated tiling, frames, and supports thereof, placed by said Willbur in and around the New York City post-office and court-house building, beyond what he was required to furnish by his contract as aforesaid, such sum to be determined by the prices fixed in said contract, so far as they are applicable. The said persons so appointed shall also ascertain and report any increased or extra expense or cost incurred by said Willbur resulting from any changes and additions made in and to the weight, measurement, and character of said tiling or in the quantity thereof from that which was sp

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of this bill?

Mr. PAYNE. I should like to hear the report read, reserving the right to object.

Mr. CUMMINGS. Mr. CUMMINGS. Mr. Speaker, the report is quite long, and I think I can explain the bill to the satisfaction of the House. This claim has been pending ever since the erection of the New York post-office. The contract was taken under certain specifications.

When they came to carry out the contract, it was the opinion of the Government officers that the tiling and the framing provided for in the specifications were too light, that it would be dangerous to put them into the building, and that heavier tiling and heavier to put them into the building, and that heavier tiling and heavier framing should be used. It was, of course, supposed by the contractor that he would be paid extra for the extra material, but he has never received his pay. He has come to Congress repeatedly for relief, specifying a certain sum of money which he claims is due him. A bill for his relief passed the Houses of Congress separately several times, and finally passed through both Houses in one Congress, and was sent to President Cleveland, who vetoed it. In his veto message the President says:

In any view of the matter I regard the claimant as seeking equitable relief. He is not entitled, however, to dictate the rule by which his claim is to be adjusted, and he should be quite satisfied if the officers of the Government, charged with the settlement of such matters, are permitted by the Congress to afford equitable relief according to such rules and methods as are best calculated to reach fair results.

The present bill was drawn up in the presence of the President, for the purpose of removing his objection, and I am satisfied that if it passes it will receive his signature.

I yield now to the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. Cox] such time as he desires

Mr. COX. Mr. Speaker, I think I am familiar with this bill, as the claim has been before our committee time after time. The case presents this state of facts: In building the post-office at New York a question arose as to the tiling that should be used. New York a question arose as to the tiling that should be used. The law under which the building was constructed provided that a certain amount of money, and only that amount, should be appropriated for the erection of that post-office. The question of the kind of tiling to be used was raised with a subordinate, and they put in this extra tiling and then brought this claim against the Government. Now, I am not going to object to the consideration of the bill, but I am going to vote against it, because this man got a patent upon the tiling that was put into that building, and putting it in there was one of his modes of advertising. I concede that, probably, the tiling of this claimant was somewhat better than that which was first contemplated, but I make the point that the appropriation for the building was strictly limited by the law; that the contractor made his contract with his eyes open, and therefore is not entitled to extra compensation. therefore is not entitled to extra compensation.

Mr. CUMMINGS. Allow me right there to ask the gentleman whether it is not his opinion that the use of this tiling and this framing made the post-office far more safe than it would have been if the tiling and framing originally intended had been used?

Mr. COX. That may be true, but it was also very important to this claimant to put his tiling into that great building as a meeter of advertising.

matter of advertising.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of this bill?

Mr. LOUD. Mr. Speaker, I desire to corroborate what the gentleman from Tennessee has just said. He and I have gone over this claim several times and have come to the conclusion that even if there was benefit to the Government from the use of this tiling, the claimant was amply compensated by the advantage to him of having his special tiling put into that building—that, in fact, he was benefited more than the Government was. I therefore object.

The SPEAKER. Objection is made.

MARTHA C. CARTER.

Mr. SIMPKINS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (H. R. 6561) to increase the pension of Martha C. Carter, widow of Rear-Admiral S. P. Carter.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Martha Custis Carter, widow of the late Rear-Admiral S. P. Carter, and pay her a pension at the rate of $100 per month from and after the passage of this act, the same to be in lieu of the pension now drawn by her.

An amendment, recommended by the committee, striking out one hundred" and substituting "fifty" before the word "dollars," was adopted.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

On motion of Mr. SIMPKINS, a motion to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed was laid on the table.

D. FULFORD.

Mr. GAMBLE. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (S. 1075) for the relief of the heirs of D. Fulford.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and is hereby, instructed to redeem, in favor of the heirs at law of D. Fulford, two bonds of the United States, consols of 1887, of the denomination of $500, $100, and known as five-twenties, said bonds having been destroyed by fire the 9th day of July, 1872, and to pay to the heirs at law of said D. Fulford the amount of said bonds, together with accrued interest from July 1, 1872, to the date of the maturity of said bonds.

SEC. 2. That the said heirs of D. Fulford shall also execute and file with the Secretary of the Treasury a bond with sufficient sureties, to be approved by the Secretary of the Treasury, in the penalty of $2,000, conditioned to save harmless the United States from loss or liability on account of said bonds or the interest accrued thereon: Provided, That as it appears from the record of the Treasury Department that there are now outstanding and unpaid a one-hundred-dollar coupon bond, numbered $342, and two five-hundred-dollar coupon bonds, numbered 12792 and 34411, of the loan known as consols of 1867, of which the last coupon bears date of July 1, 1872, the Secretary of the Treasury is hereby authorized and directed to proceed against said bond of indemnity whenever said coupon bonds shall have been redeemed.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of this bill?

Mr. PAYNE. What proof is there that the bonds were destroyed?

Mr. GAMBLE. If there is any question in regard to that, I will call for the reading of the report. It is quite long, though.

will call for the reading of the report. It is quite long, though.

Mr. DOCKERY. Let it be printed in the Record.

Mr. GAMBLE. Then, Mr. Speaker, I will ask to have the report printed in the Record as a part of my remarks, and in addition I will say that a bill to give this relief was passed by the last Congress and vetoed by the President upon the ground that no indemnification was provided for the Government on account of the bonds. The bill in its present form remedies that objection, as appears by the recommendation of the Treasury Department.

The report (by Mr. GRAFF) is as follows:

The Committee on Claims, to whom was referred the bill (S. 1075) for the relief of the heirs of D. Fulford, having considered the same, respectfully recommend that the bill do pass; and submit the following report, adopting, in the main, the report of the Senate Committee on Claims accompanying recimend that the bill do pass; and submit the following report, adopting, in the main, the report of the Senate Committee on Claims accompanying said bill:

Your committee further report that the bill under consideration was passed by the Senate and House of Representatives during the second session of the Fifty-third Congress, and was vetoed by the President. The objection of the President to the measure was his belief that the Government could not be indemnified against loss in case the bonds should hereafter be presented for payment. But this objection is overcome by the amendment proposed, which was submitted in the form herein given by the Secretary of the Treasury.

It has been ascertained by your committee that D. Fulford, deceased, who is represented in this claim by his heirs, was a minister of the Methodist Church and a resident of Dekalb, N. Y., and was the owner of four Government bonds, one for $500 and one for $100 and two for $50 each. On the 9th of July, 1872, these bonds were destroyed in a fire which consumed his residence. He was unable to describe them or give their numbers, as he had failed to procure a record thereof. He had received payment of the coupons due July 1, 1872. His understanding was that all the bonds destroyed by fire were of the class known as consols of 1807. The accompanying letter of the Secretary of the Treasury confirms this understanding as to the $500 and $100 bonds, but indicates an error regarding the character of the two $50 bonds.

Your committee has concluded, upon the evidence, that Mr. Fullford was the owner of the bonds described and that the bonds were destroyed by fire as claimed. The Secretary of the Treasury answers, in his communication herewith submitted, that the outstanding $100 bond may be one of Mr. Fulford's burned bonds; but says he has no way of determining which, if either, of the two outstanding $500 bonds belonged to him. No process of investigation can bring the missing bonds any closer to identification than this. It is reasonable to presume misfortune, to present the evidence of governmental indebtedness.

The accompanying papers hereto attached are submitted as part of this report:

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, OFFICE OF THE SECRETARY, Washington, D. C., January 25, 1896.

Sir: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 18th instant, inclosing Senate bill for the relief of the heirs of D. Fulford, and requesting the opinion of the Department as to whether a bond of indemnity can be so framed as to protect the United States from loss should the bill become a law, and also desiring to know how many bonds are now outstanding and unpaid known as consols of 1867, denominations of $100 and $500, of which the last coupon paid is dated July 1, 1872.

In reply, I have to inform you that Mr. Fulford made application to this Department for the payment of $700 United States 5.26 per cent coupon bonds, known as consols of 1867, alleged to have been destroyed by fire July 9, 1872, viz: Two bonds of the denomination of $50 each, one bond of $100, and one bond of $500. He was unable to give the numbers of the bonds, and his only means of identifying them was by the date of the last matured coupons detached and sold, which he said were dated July 1, 1872, he having collected the interest on the bonds to that date. An examination of the records of the consols of 1867, of which the last coupon paid was dated July 1, 1872; and of the denominations of $100 and $500 of said loan there are found to be outstanding one bond of $100, No. 8342, and two of $500, Nos. 12792 and 34411, of which the last coupon paid was dated July 1, 1872: and of the denominations of $100 and $500 of said loan there are found to be outstanding one bond of $100 and $500 of said loan there are found to be outstanding one bond of $100, No. 8342, and two of $500, Nos. 12792 and 34411, of which the last coupon paid was dated July 1, 1872: in the series of the passage of said bill, it is respectfully suggested that Senate bill be amended so as to cover the redemption of $500 only of t

Hon. R. F. Petrigrew, United States Senate,

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of this bill?

There was no objection.

Mr. LOUD. Mr. Speaker, I would like to submit a remark or two on this bill. I want to say to the House that my attention was distracted by certain gentlemen a few moments ago who were endeavoring to convince me that I knew nothing whatever about endeavoring to convince me that I knew nothing whatever about the bill to which I had objected, while the bill just preceding this was passed, giving the widow of some rear-admiral a pension of $50 a month. Of course, $50 a month is not a great amount, but the bill would no doubt go into conference, and we should ulti-mately have a bill to pay a pension of $75 or $100 a month. My position is well known on the floor of this House—that I never would allow any pension bill to pass here giving these actions of would allow any pension bill to pass here giving these extraordinary amounts to the widows of officers of the Army or Navy. I trust that hereafter gentlemen will not distract my attention from these cases when they are coming up.

The bill was ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

On motion of Mr. GAMBLE, a motion to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed was laid on the table.

JOHN LONG.

Mr. RANEY. I ask unanimous consent for the present con-

The bill (H. R. 9666) to correct and amend the military record of John Long, late private Company H, Thirty-first Regiment Missouri Volunteers, was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the records of the War Department be, and the same are hereby, amended and corrected so as to show that John Long, late private in Company H, Thirty-first Regiment Missouri Volunteers, United States Army, was duly recruited, enlisted, and enrolled as a private soldier in said company and regiment on or about the 22d day of August, 1862, and that he was honorably discharged from said service in said company and regiment in November, 1862, on account of disabilities incurred while in line of duty in said company and regiment.

The amendment reported by the committee was read, as follows:

At the end of the bill strike out the words: "On account of disabilities incurred while in line of duty in said company and regiment."

There being no objection, the House proceeded to the consideration of the bill.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

On motion of Mr. RANEY, a motion to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed was laid on the table.

IMPROVEMENT OF GOVERNMENT RESERVATION, FORT SMITH, ARK.

I ask unanimous consent for the present consid-Mr. LITTLE. eration of the bill (S. 2923) for the better improvement of the Government reservation at the city of Fort Smith, in the State of Arkansas, and for other purposes.

The bill was read.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of this bill?

Mr. PAYNE. I object.

MARY S. HIGGINS.

Mr. HICKS. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (H. R. 4099) granting a pension to Mary S. Higgins, widow of Col. Jacob Higgins, late of Johnstown, Pa.

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place upon the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the general pension laws, the name of Mary S. Higgins, the widow of Jacob Higgins, who was a Mexican veteran of Pennsylvania and colonel of the One hundred and twenty-fifth Pennsylvania Volunteer Infantry and the Twenty-second Pennsylvania Volunteer Cavalry in the war of the rebellion.

The amendments reported by the committee were read, as fol-

After the word "rebellion," in line 10, add: "and pay her a pension of $30 per month, in lieu of that which she is now receiving."

Amend the title so as to read: "A bill to increase the pension of Mary S. Higgins."

There being no objection, the House proceeded to the considera-tion of the bill.

The amendment to the bill was agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed and read a third

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

On motion of Mr. HICKS, a motion to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed was laid on the table.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, the title of this bill will be amended as proposed by the committee.

There was no objection.

CHARLES DEAL.

Mr. FOOTE. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (H. R. 5597) for the relief of Charles Deal,

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury is hereby authorized and directed to pay to Charles Deal, late a deputy collector of customs at Champlain, N.Y., the sum of $240.04, for expenses incurred by him in the case of Hugh O'Hara against said Deal, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated.

Mr. PAYNE. I should like to hear the report. The report (by Mr. SNOVER) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Claims, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 5597) for the relief of Charles Deal, having had the same under consideration, report it back to the House with the recommendation that it do pass.

As a part of this report we print House Ex. Doc. No. 183, second session Fitty-third Congress, which fully explains this bill and contains the reasons given for our action:

[House Ex. Doc. No. 185, Fifty-third Congress, second session.]

[House Ex. Doc. No. 185, Fifty-third Congress, second session.]

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, April 7, 1894.

SIR: I have the honor to transmit herewith copy of a communication from the Commissioner of Customs of the 4th instant, submitting the account of Charles Deal, late deputy collector of customs at Champlain, N. Y., for reimbursement of expenses incurred by him in the case of Hugh O'Hara vs. said Deal, $240.04.

This account grows out of a suit brought by Hugh O'Hara to recover the value of certain goods seized and sold by said Charles Deal, deputy collector, in which suit the jury, in January, 1892, returned a verdict of no cause of action, and the fees of witnesses and other expenses to the suit, amounting to $240.04, as per sworn account submitted to the Department, were paid by the said Charles Deal.

The provision of law for the payment by the United States of costs in suits against officers of the revenue is that made by section 089 of the Revised Statutes. That provision is restricted to cases in which a recovery is had against such officer of the revenue upon conditions prescribed by statute. There having been no recovery against the deputy collector in the case against Mr. Deal, there is no authority of law for paying the costs therein.

The amount accruing to the United States by the sale of the goods referred to was $350.06.

As these facts constitute equitable ground for relief, I have to recommend that the appropriation of $240.04 asked for be granted.

Respectfully, yours,

S. WIKE,

Acting Secretary.

The SPEAKER OF THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT,

TREASURY DEPARTMENT,
OFFICE OF THE COMMISSIONER OF CUSTOMS,
Washington, D. C., April 4, 1894.

Sir: Referring to the claim of Charles Deal, late deputy collector of customs at Champlain, N. Y., for reimbursement of expenses incurred by him in the case of Hugh O'Hara vs. Charles Deal, etc., which was reported to you by me on the leth of January last, I have now to further report that he has furnished vouchers in support of said claim amounting to $240.04, being the whole amount of said claim, with the exception of the item charged by him for interest, which, in my judgment, should not be allowed. Each voucher contains a statement that the amount thereof has been paid to the person receipting therefor by Charles Deal, and is attested under oath.

This proof removes my previous objection to the recommendation of this claim to Congress for an appropriation.

The vouchers referred to are herewith transmitted.

Respectfully, yours,

WM. H. PUGH,

WM. H. PUGH, Commissioner of Customs.

The SECRETARY OF THE TREASURY.

COMMITTEE ON PUBLIC BUILDINGS AND GROUNDS,
HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, UNITED STATES,
Washington, D. C., March 29, 1894.

SIR: I have the honor to inclose herewith papers in the matter of claim of Charles Deal, late a deputy collector, against the United States, to which papers I ask your kind attention.

Yours, respectfully,

JOHN M. WEVER, M. C. Hon. J. G. Carlisle, Secretary of the Treasury, Washington, D. C.

CHAMPLAIN, N. Y., March 20, 1894. SIR: Herewith find statement, with vouchers, for full amount of claim, as requested.

In reference to the item of interest, will say, as the Government has had 350.00 net receipts from seizure since October, 1890, and it was in the execution of my duty, sustained by the court, that this money was paid, is it not but just that I should be allowed the interest thereon?

Respectfully, yours,

CHARLES DEAL.

Hon. WM. H. Pugh, Commissioner of Customs, Washington, D. C.

There being no objection, the House proceeded to the consideration of the bill, which was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed. On motion of Mr. FOOTE, a motion to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed was laid on the table.

JOHN L. JEFFERIES.

Mr. BROMWELL. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (H. R. 2308) for the relief of John L. Jefferies, late a captain in the One hundred and tenth Regiment Pennsylvania Volunteer Infantry.

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of War be, and is hereby, authorized and directed to revoke the order dishonorably discharging John L. Jefferies, late a captain of Company K, One hundred and tenth Regiment of Pennsylvania Volunteers, and to issue to him an honorable discharge, to date from the 18th day of October, 1864, the date of said order.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of this bill?

Mr. STEELE. Let us have the report read.

Mr. BROMWELL. The report is quite long. I trust I may be allowed to make an explanation. Mr. STEELE. Well, I object.

THOMAS WILLIAMS.

Mr. SHAFROTH. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (S. 517) for the relief of Thomas Williams, an employee of the Senate folding room, for injuries received while in the discharge of his duties, in the year 1892.

The bill was read.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of this bill?

From what committee does this bill come?

Mr. SHAFROTH. From the Committee on Claims.
Mr. COX. Then I demand the regular order.
The SPEAKER. The regular order being demanded, the Chair will lay before the House a communication from the Clerk of the House.

CONTESTED-ELECTION CASE-BENOIT VS. BOATNER.

The SPEAKER laid before the House the following; which was

CLERK'S OFFICE, HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,

Washington, D. C., January 9, 1897.

DEAR SIR: The contested-election case of Alexis Benoit vs. Charles J. Boatner, of the Flifth Congressional district of Louisiana, if permitted to take its usual course, and full time is used in the preparation of briefs (sixty days), can not reach the House for its action before its final adjournment.

I call your attention to the status of this case, in order that the House may take such action as it may deem best.

Yours, truly,

A. McDOWET.

A. McDOWELL, Clerk House of Representatives.

Hon. THOMAS B. REED, Speaker House of Representatives.

The SPEAKER. If there be no objection, the Chair will this case to the Committee on Elections No. 2, which has had this case to the Chair will the other Louisiana case. The Chair will state that this is done with the consent and agreement of the gentleman from Louisiana [Mr. BOATNER], the sitting member, Without objection, the papers in the case will be printed.

There was no objection.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

A message from the Senate, by Mr. Platt, one of its clerks, announced that the Senate had disagreed to the amendments of the House of Representatives to the bill (S. 1722) to approve and ratify the construction of a bridge across the Sulphur River, in the State of Arkansas, by the Texarkana and Fort Smith Railway Company, asked a conference with the House on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and had appointed Mr. Vest, Mr. NELSON, and Mr. BERRY as the conferees on the part of the Senate.

The message also announced that the Senate had agreed to the amendment of the House of Representatives to the bill (S. 2176) granting a pension to Thomas Pollock.

OLEOMARGARINE, ETC.

The SPEAKER. The regular order is the call of committees for reports. The pending question is on the motion to reconsider the vote by which the House refused to order the previous ques-tion upon the bill (H. R. 1221) to make eleomargarine and all other imitation dairy products subject to the laws of the State or Territory into which they are transported. At the time when this motion was made it was followed by a motion to adjourn; and some gentleman proposed to lay on the table the motion to reconsider, for which the Chair stated there would be opportunity to make that motion.

Mr. COOKE of Illinois. I make the motion.

Mr. COOPER of Florida. I will move to lay the motion to reconsider on the table.

Mr. GROUT. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to submit a proposition, and I think time will be saved by agreeing to it.

If this motion is laid on the table it, of course, leaves the bill open to discussion and amendment. If it should not be laid on the table and the motion is reconsidered, I should even then ask, as I did repeatedly on yesterday, for an agreement as to time for discussion and amendment.

Mr. DOCKERY. Submit your proposition.
Mr. GROUT. Now, I ask unanimous consent that an hour—
so far as I am concerned, I think that will be sufficient—that an hour be given to the discussion of the bill, and for the offering of amendments under the rule, and that a vote be taken thereafter upon the third reading of the bill.

Mr. CANNON. Why not put it in this way, if the gentleman from Vermont will allow a suggestion: That by unanimous consent the proceedings may be vacated which refused the previous question, and that after an hour has been consumed in general debate, the bill be open in the House as in Committee of the Whole for amendments under the five-minute rule. In that way, whole for amendments under the five-minute rule. In that way, of course, the gentleman will keep control of the previous question.

Mr. GROUT. That will be entirely satisfactory to me, sir.

Mr. BAILEY. I would suggest that if the motion to lay on the table were withdrawn, and the motion to reconsider the vote by which the House refused to order the previous question were withdrawn, it would still leave it open for debate. But by unanimous course is the respect to the previous of the previous question were withdrawn, it would still leave it open for debate. But by unanimous course is the respect to the previous question were withdrawn, if we have the previous question were withdrawn. mous consent, if the request is granted, and I see no objection to it, that same result would be reached.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will submit the proposition of the gentleman from Vermont to the House.

The gentleman asks unanimous consent that the proceedings under the motion for the previous question be withdrawn.

there objection?

Mr. CANNON. I think that it should be coupled with a further request for unanimous consent that time be allowed for general debate and for the consideration of the bill and the offering of amendments in the House as in Committee of the Whole under the five-minute rule.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will submit the request of the gentleman from Vermont. The gentleman asks unanimous consent that he may be allowed to withdraw the demand for the previous

question-

Mr. WILLIAMS. Mr. Speaker, if the gentleman will permit me before that request is submitted. I know of four or five gen-tlemen on this side of the House who have expressed a desire for time, and I hardly think that thirty minutes would be sufficient. I think it would require a little more time, probably forty min-

Mr. GROUT. What time would the gentleman from Mississippi suggest?

Mr. WILLIAMS. I would suggest that the gentleman ask unanimous consent for one hour and a half.

Mr. GROUT. That is entirely satisfactory to me. imous consent to withdraw the motion for the previous question, and that the House have general debate for one hour and a half on the bill, and amendments afterwards under the five-minute rule in the House as in Committee of the Whole.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Vermont?

There was no objection.

Mr. WILLIAMS. I ask unanimous consent that the time granted be equally divided between the two sides, one side to be controlled by the gentleman from Vermont and the other to be controlled by any gentleman on this side of the House whom the Speaker may name.

Mr. GROUT. I will not object to that, although I may be permitted to say that on yesterday forty minutes of the hour were consumed by the opponents of the bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the division of the time equally between the two sides?

There was no objection.
The SPEAKER. If there be no objection, the Chair will recognize the gentleman from Vermont to control the time of the affirmative and the gentleman from Mississippi in opposition to the bill.

There was no objection.

OLEOMARGARINE, ETC.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Vermont is recognized as in control of the floor.

Mr. GROUT. Will the gentleman from Mississippi proceed

Mr. WILLIAMS. Mr. Speaker, I yield ten minutes to the gentleman from Florida [Mr. COOPER].

Mr. COOPER of Florida. Mr. Speaker, I will not detain the House possibly for the ten minutes allowed me, but I do wish to call to the attention of the House and to emphasize the importance of the legislation upon which we now propose to enter. It is a matter of elementary knowledge to every man who has studied at all the formation of the Constitution of this country that one of the chief motives that induced the formation of the Union and the adoption motives that induced the formation of the Union and the adoption of that Constitution was the vesting in Congress of the control and regulation of interstate commerce. Now, this question is no party one; it is no sectional one; it is much broader than the mere question of whether or not dairy farmers in Vermont shall be authorized to discriminate against a commercial product manufactured in the State of Illinois. We stand to-day upon ground where we have boundaries and limits. We passed an act giving to the States the power to legislate, under their police powers, in matters affecting the sale of intoxicating liquors, even in the original package. original package.

Now, we can stand on that. We can say "whisky is a thing by itself, and has always been under the police power and is known to require police regulation;" but the moment we pass there and say that we will relegate to the several States the power to regulate the sale of the products of other States-admittedly not such as are necessarily injurious either to health or to morals—the moment we do that we invite constant assaults on Congress by various interests from the different States. Whenever there shall come here any article that can command votes enough, or whenever there shall come any combination of articles that can command votes enough, you will have demands that the power of Congress be relegated to the States to permit them to legislate nominally under the police power, but really to permit legislation by some States to prevent competition in trade between articles which they produce and articles produced by other States.

Now, many States would like that power as to various articles

If I could get a provision as to Chicago beef attached as an amendment to this bill, along with Chicago oleomargarine, I should like ment to this bill, along with Chicago eleomargarine, I should like to have it, for we find in Florida the pressure of those great Chicago companies, not only actually driving out of the market, but prohibiting our people from fattening or selling their own beef in their own State, saying to butchers, "If you buy Florida-fed beef, we will crush you out." But yet we have not come to Congress and asked for the power to legislate on the sale of beef from other States. If you give such power under the guise of an inspec-tion law, you put it wholly in the power of a State to regulate and to control the traffic.

Now, Mr. Speaker, here, where necessarily we exercise powers that affect material interests, we have frequent contests. We have them on the tariff, we are going to have them more and more on internal-revenue taxes, under certain precedents which we have set; but, sir, we can stop to-day in abandoning control of interstate commerce at the statute concerning intoxicating liquors. The moment we pass that threshold and declare that Congress will relegate to the States, under so-called police powers, the authority to regulate the sale of any commercial article not generally recognized and admitted to be injurious and within the interstate-commerce clause of the Constitution, that moment we have no line where we can say "thus far we will go and no farther." It is not an idle apprehension that Congress will be constantly importuned to go into this discriminating legislation. We shall have it here as certainly as we pass this bill. Why should we pass a bill of this character? The gentleman from Vermont [Mr. Grout] says that the Supreme Court of the United States has held that the States already have sufficient police power to prevent the fraudulent sale of any article in imitation of another. If this is true, and his bill proposes nothing more, then we need no further legislation. If his bill does propose something more, then we ought not to enter upon such legislation.

Mr. BOATNER. If the gentleman will allow me a suggestion right there

Mr. COOPER of Florida. With pleasure.

Mr. BOATNER. The real object of the bill is to add to the police powers of the States by enabling them to absolutely prohibit the sale of an article within their territory which is being manufactured and sold under a license issued by the United States

Mr. COOPER of Florida. Undoubtedly. I understand that.

Now, Mr. Speaker, it has been said to me, "You are a Democrat and a State-rights man. How do you oppose such legislation?" There is no party consideration in this question; but, sir, the doctrine of the Democratic party, as I understand it, is and always has been that we stand on the Constitution of our fathers, not extending it by latitudinous construction, and not undertaking to sap or to weaken any of the legitimate powers vested in the Federal Government. And this is not only a legitimate power, it is an absolutely essential power. The moment we begin to delegate to the States the power to control interstate commerce we bring about the very evils that this Union was framed to terminate. We throw all interstate commerce into confusion. One State will desire to discriminate against one thing, and another against another, and, as I have said, whoever can get votes enough here, either because one article is produced in a majority of States, and another in a minority, or because certain interests can combine and get votes to relegate to the States the power to discriminate and to prevent the sale of those articles within the States, they will do it, and Congress will be plagued with this precedent in a thousand forms. It is a new precedent which goes beyond anything we have ever done before. We are making a new precedent in constitutional legislation here. We are beginning to pull down one of the greatest bulwarks of the Constitution and to destroy one of its most beneficial features, and, sir, I for one do protest against entering on a path which I foresee will be so disastrous to the commercial interests of this whole country in the end, and will lead to infinite confusion, to continuous strife and conflict, and which will answer no good purpose in the long run, even to those who are now favoring it.

I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. GROUT. Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. NORTHWAY] ten minutes.

Mr. NORTHWAY. Mr. Speaker, it is urged against the passage of this bill that Congress would be surrendering to the various States a power which it ought not to surrender. It is claimed that we ought not to surrender to the States any power to control anything of interstate commerce. I disagree with the idea. I shall thing of interstate commerce. I disagree with the idea. I shall not have time to-day, in the short time allotted to me, to go over this subject fully. I desire to call special attention to two or three matters only. One is this: That the people of this country in the various States have entered upon a justifiable warfare against adulterated and poisonous food products. If there is one thing that the people are determined upon, it is that the food products which are sold to the people shall be pure if it is possible to make them are expecially that they shall be free from deleterious drugs. them so; especially that they shall be free from deleterious drugs, etc. So far as the States are concerned, if there be any adulterated food product produced in the State offered for sale they have full power to regulate or prohibit it. Most of the States have passed very stringent legislation in this line, and the legislation upon this subject goes further than upon most any other criminal subject known. It is provided that an act, to wit, the sale of an adulterated product, shall constitute a crime. It has been held by all the State courts passing upon the question, and is held by the Supreme Court of the United States, that "knowledge" was not a part of the ingredient of the crime, and the "fact" alone constituted the crime. They place it upon the high ground of police regulations, and the right of the people to declare that to be a crime, without knowledge, which will interfere with the health and life of the people.

Now, I would be glad to know why it is that the people of Illinois or of Kentucky, if they ship to the State of Ohio or Iowa a food product, shall not be subject to the same regulations precisely that the manufacturers of that kind of a product shall be in the State of Iowa or the State of Ohio. I see no objection.

Mr. BOATNER. Will the gentleman yield to me?
Mr. NORTHWAY. For a question.
Mr. BOATNER. Is it a fact that there can be sold in any State any product from any other State which falls within the purview of the health and inspection laws of the State where it is offered to be sold?

Mr. NORTHWAY. So far as the original-package decision of Leasey against somebody—the gentleman will remember—goes, it has been held that one sale made in the original package can not be interfered with. How far the subsequent opinion of the Supreme Court goes to modify that I am not prepared to say.

Mr. BOATNER. If the gentleman will allow me to call his attention to the fact, the decision to which he refers does not go to the extent of saying that an article can be sold in an original package one time when that article will be injurious to health and is inhibited by the inspection laws of that State and it has a bad effect upon public health and public morals.

Mr. NORTHWAY. If the people of the State have full control of this matter, then this bill will confer no power upon the State and will take none from the General Government.

and will take none from the General Government.

Mr. WILLIAMS. If the gentleman will pardon me—

Mr. NORTHWAY. I can not yield to the gentleman. I have not time to carry on a dialogue.

If the people had full control over the matter, under the given opinion of the Supreme Court or any law then existing in any State, then it will not harm us to grant the power asked for in this bill. I submit this, that so far as food products are concerned and I am not prepared to go into all interstate commerce—but so far as food product is concerned, it should be under the control of the people of the State, because they can control it better than

Now, take any law that we may pass upon the subject. How will we enforce it? Take a food-product law. If we should en-force it, it will take an army of officers, or it will not be worth anything at all. Take the article of French pease, as insignificant as they look to be. They are adulterated. They are nothing but common pease colored by a coloring matter that is highly poisonous. Every can of French pease is colored by a mineral coloring matter, and sold in the various States. It costs about $5 for each analysis, and the General Government can not control the business at all, and you can not protect the people against it. We have no power unless we create a great army of officers by law. If we confer power upon the States to enforce these regulations, we intrust the people of the States to enforce them. If the State of Ohio enters upon a warfare and determines to give the people a pure food product, I say let the people of no other State have any more power on that subject than anybody in the State of Ohio.

Take an instance that has just come to my knowledge. To-day, at the great Soldiers' Home in the city of Dayton, Ohio—and I make this assertion upon positive proof—to-day, at the great Soldiers' Home at Dayton, they are advertising for 48,000 pounds of oleomargarine, to be bought of Armour & Co., and they have bought it at 7 cents a pound, while the legislature of the State of Ohio denies to the convicts in the Ohio penitentiary the use of any such article. Why is it that the directors of that institution are to be allowed to supply our old soldiers with 7-cent truck, which is miscalled "butter," while the convicts in the Ohio penitentiary are supplied with pure butter? Why should not both institutions be under the same regulation in that respect? I have here the charge that has been made, and the admission on the part of the management of the Soldiers' Home that they are buying this oleomargarine, and they propose to buy another supply at the end of the quarter, at 7 cents a pound, to feed to the old soldiers of our country, while the convicts in the State penitentiary are supplied with pure butter.

Mr. Speaker, I submit that the people of Ohio are capable of dealing with this subject, and if there is any power that we hold that we can confer upon them in relation to it, I insist that that power should be conferred, and that it is our duty, as it should be our pleasure, to give them the full right to obtain pure food products, so that all these articles may be dealt with alike, and that the people may guard against impure and deleterious food. We should give the power to the people of the State, because we can not enforce it ourselves. As I have already said, if the Federal Government should undertake to enforce this power it would take an army of officers to do it, and then it would not be done effectually. I insist that this bill is absolutely right as a business proposition. There is no sentiment in it. There is no reason in saying that it is surrendering a power on the part of the General Government that it ought not to surrender. I submit that it is simply surrendering to the people of each State what they ought to have, the power to control in all matters relative to food products, whether to regulate them or to prohibit whatever is impure and deleterious.

Mr. BOATNER. If it will not inter like to ask him a direct question.

NORTHWAY. I will hear it. If it will not interrupt the gentleman, I would

Mr. NORTHWAY. I will hear it.
Mr. BOATNER. The gentleman thinks that the legislature of Ohio should be given the absolute right to prohibit the sale of oleomargarine within the limits of that State. Now, if the legislature of Illinois were to declare that all cattle raised in the State of Ohio were unhealthy and were to pass a sweeping statute pro-hibiting the sale of any Ohio carcasses in Illinois, would the gentleman think that statute was constitutional and ought to be

Mr. NORTHWAY. The gentleman asks half a dozen questions in one. He asks if I think the people of Ohio, or the legislature of Ohio, ought to have the right to prohibit the use of oleomargarine. I reply that I think the people of Ohio ought to have full power to determine whether the article is a pure food product or not, to determine whether it is adulterated or poisoned, and to prohibit the sale of an adulterated and poisonous article of oleomargarine, just as they ought to have, and do have, the right to prohibit the sale of an adulterated or poisonous article of butter. The State of Ohio will not permit the butter maker to color his butter with anything that is deleterious. Why, then, should it permit oleomargarine to be colored with deleterious matter and sold in Ohio as a food product? And yet to-day, under the decision of the Supreme Court, eleomargarine can be sold in original packages, and it is sold to hotels and boarding houses, and it is breaking down the farming industry of our country, it is bring-ing into use a deleterious food product, and, just as the people of Ohio have the right to prohibit the manufacture or sale of adulterated butter or adulterated cheese, so, I claim, they ought to have the same right to determine whether the manufacturer of oleomargarine is selling in original packages a pure article of oleomargarine or whether he is selling an adulterated article. I say there ought not to be any discrimination between food products, and I hold that the States should have full control in all these matters.

[Here the hammer fell.]

Mr. TUCKER. Mr. Speaker, I desire to offer an amendment

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. Blue). The Chair will say to the gentleman from Virginia that the amendment is not in order at this time unless he desires to have it read as a part of his

Mr. TUCKER. Then, Mr. Speaker, I will merely offer it to be pending, and will state to the House, as I stated yesterday, that this amendment provides for striking out all after the word "article," in line 3, down to and including the word "cream," in

Mr. GROUT. Mr. Speaker, I raise a point of order on that.
Mr. TUCKER. Mr. Speaker, I think this amendment is clearly right if the bill is right. This bill, as I read it, is practically drawn from the law which was passed by Congress on the 8th of August, 1890, in response to the "original-package" decision. As the House will remember, that law had reference to liquor, and to light of the constant of the constan the House will remember, that law had reference to liquor, and to liquor alone. Here is a bill proposed in the exact form of that law, but covering another article of commerce. My friend from Florida [Mr. Cooper] has intimated that if we pass this bill now we shall probably have a similar bill covering Chicago beef, and then we may look for another applying to the lard which is made in Chicago. If the principle of this bill is right, why should we be cutting off a few articles every year instead of declaring our will by one general statute covering the whole?

Why, Mr. Speaker, just look at this. My friend says that it is a dangerous thing, that the commerce clause of the Constitution is being invaded, and that the passage of this bill will create great trouble in the country. I can not sympathize with that feeling. Why? The bill is carefully drawn, it seems to me. It declares that this article, when it arrives within the limits of such State or Territory

Shall be subject to the operation and effect of the laws of such State or Territory—

Laws how enacted?-

enacted in the exercise of its police power.

The commerce clause can not interfere with or override the police power of the State. We admit the power and the necessity that commerce and trade between the States shall be free. is no confusion in the accepted construction of the commerce provision of the Constitution and that which is recognized as the police power of the States. I recognize that this bill is nothing in the world but a declaration of what the Constitution is. It does not propose to confer greater rights than now exist. It simply contemplates that the commerce clause shall have its full, free, active operation in every direction, except when it comes in conflict with that power which has been recognized by all decisions from time immemorial. As to any subject of commerce, either a food product or impure literature—in other words, whatever may be hurtful to the morals or the health of a people—as to those things the commerce clause yields to the police power of the State; and the power is left in the State to say, under the police power, "This thing is deleterious and hurtful to the people, and therefore the commerce clause must yield to the police power to protect the community."

Now, I appeal to my honorable friend from Vermont to join with me in stopping this chopping-up process which we have had for six years in this House. Whenever a man begins to feel the effect of the evils of this system he comes in with an individual bill to help his individual matter. I say let us stop this whole thing by one bill, which can be done by accepting the amendment I have offered.

Mr. GROUIT I was also for the stopping to the same of the stopping the stoppi

Mr. GROUT. I now yield five minutes to the gentleman from

Mr. GROUT. I now yield five minutes to the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. Morse].

Mr. Morse. Mr. Speaker, I propose to vote for this bill. I believe it is a proper and just bill. And in voting for it I represent Massachusetts. Our State has passed stringent laws against these frauds called oleomargarine, imitation butter, or imitation cheese. In the Commonwealth which I have the honor in part to represent, a boarding house that uses this vile stuff on its table must sent, a boarding house that uses this vite stuit on its table must hang up in its dining room a sign: "Imitation butter used here." The manufacturers of this product in my State are not allowed to color it in imitation of the color of butter; they are obliged to sell it white, or its natural color, so that the man who butters his bread with it can see what article he is using.

This bill proposes to protect the Commonwealth of Massachusetts from horizon brought into her borders from other States this setts from having brought into her borders from other States this imitation product and sold contrary to the laws of the State. Ever since I have been a member of the House I have consistently and persistently voted for every measure that looked to the sup-pression of oleomargarine, imitation butter, or imitation cheese. Every one of us has a personal interest in this matter. I, for one,

Every one of us has a personal interest in this matter. I, for one, do not want to butter my bread with soap grease, even if it has been chemically treated.

The board of health of Massachusetts was called upon, while I was a member of the State legislature, to pass upon the healthfulness of this product; and that board, composed of some of the most eminent men in our Commonwealth, said, among other things, that the door for the propagation of that awful disease known as "trichinosis" was thrown open to some extent at least by the manufacture of this product. And why? They explained why. They said that the oil of the hog, in order to be made into oleomargarine or butterine or any of these other products named here, could not be brought up to such a temperature that the diseased germs not be brought up to such a temperature that the diseased germs would be destroyed, because this extreme heat would break the globules and the butter could not be churned. On the strength of that report by the board of health of Massachusetts, the legislature, of which I was at the time a member, passed this very stringent measure to which I have called attention.

I have said that in my judgment this is a just and good bill, I do not understand that it adds anything to the existing law. As explained by the gentleman from Vermont [Mr. Grout] yesterday, it simply reaffirms the decision of the Supreme Court, which was delivered by a divided court, and is liable therefore to be reversed and overthrown. The manufacture of imitation butter and cheese is a fraud upon the great farming interests of this country. I have since I have been a member of this House yested uniformly. I have, since I have been a member of this House, voted uniformly, consistently, and persistently for every measure in the interests of the great farming class of our country. There are a great many tribunes of the farmers who are demagogues, who stand up and demand in the interest of the farmers things which would be against their interest—cheap money, for instance. But I do believe it to be in the interest of the farmer—I believe it to be wise, just, and proper-to legislate in behalf of the great dairy interests of this country.

I have listened to some of the constitutional arguments of the learned gentleman from Louisiana and the learned gentleman from Virginia. And when I hear some of these learned lawyers, judges, and jurists discourse upon the Constitution, I sometimes think of a minister that I heard of, of whom it was said that his principal qualification was that he could split a theological hair, and it was not so good after he had split it as it was before.

Now, Mr. Speaker, I am loyal to the Constitution of my country. I find in it a provision about interstate commerce. If there is anything in that provision that will enable us to suppress, control, or restrain the sale of this vile, dirty compound, unfit for human food, I will vote for such a measure every time, and I wish my friend from Vermont would bring in some more bills like this for me to vote for

Mr. GROUT. I now yield five minutes to the gentleman from

Mr. GROUT. I now yield live influtes to the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. LACEY].

Mr. LACEY. Mr. Speaker, the opposition to the pending bill seems to be under the control mainly of the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. WILLIAMS]. I have on my table the statutes of the State of Mississippi, which provide that a person who sells, manufactures, or exposes for sale, as an article of food consumption, oleomargarine, and so on, without being properly branded, shall be punished. I will quote the exact language of the statute:

SEC. 1242. A person who sells or manufactures, exposes or offers for sale as an article of food, any oleomargarine or other substance in imitation of any article of food, without disclosing the imitation by a suitable and plainly visible mark or brand, indicating and naming what the substance really is, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and, on conviction, shall be fined not less than $10 nor more than $100, or be imprisoned in the county jail not exceeding on month, or both.

That is the language of the statute of the State of Mississippi, and shows the views of the people of Mississippi as to the character of this product.

Up to 1890 it was understood that any State had the power to make such law with reference to intoxicating liquors, with reference to cigarettes, or anything which in the judgment of the State would seem deleterious to human health, or which in the judg-ment of the State might be used as a cheat or a fraud, to deceive ment of the State might be used as a cheat or a fraud, to deceive consumers under the guise of the genuine article; that the power to regulate or prohibit the sale of such articles within the limits of the State was unquestioned. In 1890, however, this great constitutional right, of which my friend from Florida [Mr. COOPER] has spoken, and which he clings to so tenaciously, was for the first time discovered. He did not know it before; none of us knew of the existence of that constitutional right until the Leisy case, decided in 1890, as to intoxicating liquors. So we are not limiting the ancient powers of the General Government, as stated by the gentleman. This bill proposes to prevent the use of interstate commerce so as to allow cheats and frauds upon the people.

The sale of an imitation of butter as butter is a crime at com-

The sale of an imitation of butter as butter is a crime at com-

But, Mr. Speaker, it has been suggested that if we stop the sale of this imitiation butter or "bull butter" and these other fraudulent articles which are sold in imitation of wholesome products which have been in use among mankind for thousands of years, the next step will be to interfere with the sale of Chicago beef. Chicago puts up canned beef, and so does Kansas City. Suppose the packers should put into the cans the flesh of the horse. Horse-flesh is not universally considered unwholesome; it is esteemed a good article of food by some people, and some nations prefer it even to beef. The opponents of this bill might say, "Shall you interfere with wholesome horse beef? It is true it is sold as beef; it is true that it is branded 'beef' and so sold, and the public do not know the difference; but if a man don't know what he is eating, if he can not tell the difference, what harm does it do, and why should you interfere with the right of the packers in Kansas City and Chicago to put up and sell horse meat as beef?" That is the logic of their argument, and yet, Mr. Speaker, the mere statement of such a proposition would turn the stomachs of the constituents of the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. WILLIAMS]. They would feel outraged if it was attempted to sell horse meat to them instead of beef under the protection of interstate-commerce laws. the next step will be to interfere with the sale of Chicago beef.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Will the gentleman permit me— Mr. LACEY. No; I have but a few moments and I can not vield.

An honest cow is the noblest work of God, and the best of her products is a good article of butter, and nothing will destroy the dairy business of this country, one of the very largest interests in the nation, any quicker than to tolerate by law, under the guise the nation, any quicker than to tolerate by law, under the guise of the protection of commerce, the sale of counterfeit and imitation butter made of heg's lard, cotton-seed oil, or any other spurious article, under the guise of butter.

This hill simply proposes to do with the outside products that are brought into a State for sale exactly what the State does now or may do with its own food products. When the product arrives in Mississippi or Iowa we can regulate how it shall be sold, and are enabled thereby to protect the purchaser from being imposed are enabled thereby to protect the purchaser from being imposed upon; but we have no power, except under the local laws of the State, to enable our people to know just what they are buying. If a man wants to buy 7-cent oleomargarine, he ought to be allowed to purchase it, of course. That is his right. But at the same time he ought to know what he is buying. He ought not to be imposed upon and made to buy oleomargarine under the name of butter. The national law forbids the counterfeiting of national-bank notes or coin and want it would not be held that the States and the states and the states are larger to the stat or coin, and yet it would not be held that the States could not protect themselves by local enactments on the same subject simply because the Constitution gives Congress the exclusive control of because the Constitution gives Congress the exclusive control of the subject under its general powers.

This oleomargarine act was passed as a revenue measure. It provides for taxation upon the product; it provides not only for the collection of revenue, but it provides the mode by which people engaged in commerce throughout the country, when dealing in this subject, shall be required to protect their customers. But when this article arrives within the limits of the State the Congressional enactment is no longer regarded. Fraudulent dealers arrive off the brand or marks required under the Congressional eact strip off the brand or marks required under the Congressional act to protect the innocent purchaser, and then they begin to perpetrate frauds upon the local consumers. Why, then, should not the State have power to step in and provide a remedy under its own police regulation? Why should not Mississippi, when this product is brought there, employ such methods as will enable the constituents of my friend to tell exactly what they are buying? Why should they be subjected to this fraud?

Mr. WILLIAMS. The State of Mississippi has that power, and exercises it every day.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Does the gentleman from Iowa yield to the gentleman from Mississippi?

Mr. LACEY. I can not; my time is about exhausted. The gentleman says that the State of Mississippi exercises that power; but if the article is sold as an original package, the power of the State may be undermined and destroyed.

[Here the hammer fell.] strip off the brand or marks required under the Congressional act

State may be undermined and destroyed.

[Here the hammer fell.]

Mr. WILLIAMS. I yield to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. Cannon] such time as he desires.

Mr. CANNON. Mr. Speaker, I think we had better see "where we are at" in this proposed legislation. In 1886 I voted to levy a tax of 2 cents a pound on eleomargarine. The gentleman from Iowa [Mr. Lacey] says it is a revenue measure. Yes; because only under the guise of a revenue measure-could we enact it. But we enacted it because gentlemen like the gentleman from Massa. only under the guise of a revenue measure could we enact it. But we enacted it because gentlemen, like the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. Morse] and others, took the ground that here was a food product that was masquerading in false colors. They said it was an unwholesome product, and all that kind of thing, and that people should be compelled to sell it for what it is. Now, I hold this act in my hand. What does it do? It levies a tax of hold this act in my hand. What does it do? It levies a tax of $600 a year upon every manufacturer of oleomargarine. It levies a tax of $480 a year upon every wholesale dealer and a tax of $48 a year upon every retail dealer. This is United States law. There are heavy penalties provided for nonpayment.

It also levies a tax of 2 cents upon every pound sold. What else does it do? I call the attention of my friend from Iowa [Mr. LACEY] to this because, from his remarks, it appears clearly that he does not understand the facts. It makes the manufacturer pack this product in packages so marked, and, as a part of the revenue measure, it must remain in the package. Aye, more. When it goes to the retailer in the State where it is manufactured, or out of the State where it is manufactured, no particle of it can be sold by the retailer except he puts it in a new package that is sold by the retailer except he puts it in a new package that is tattooed all over with the information that it is oleomargarine. This Federal law provides severe penalties for any violation of the act from the time this article is manufactured down to the time it goes into the heads of the consumer. Is there are no the time it goes into the hands of the consumer. Is there any complaint that that law is not enforced? The gentleman from Iowa Mr. Lacey] says that when it goes to another State thus marked it is removed from the packages, and that it is sold as butter. Now, I say to my friend from Iowa [Mr. Lacey] that he evidently does not speak with knowledge—

Mr. GROUT. It is done every day, and convictions are had

Mr. CANNON. It can not be done without fine and imprison-

Mr. LACEY. When they are caught they are punished, but

Mr. LACEY. When they are caught they are punished, but they are not caught.

Mr. CANNON. When they are caught they are punished, the gentleman says. When a man commits murder and is convicted he is hanged. The United States in enforcing its revenue laws has enforced them with more vigor and efficiency than any other laws have been enforced, and so with this.

Mr. LACEY. But the United States officers are after the revenue simply.

enue simply.

Mr. CANNON. Oh, certainly, the United States officers are after the revenue, and the protection comes in, as I understand it, in that way. They are after the revenue, just as they are after the revenue on tobacco under the law which provides that a stamp must be canceled when the cigars are sold from a box.

Now, what do we have? Here is a product which, I will say to my friend from Iowa [Mr. LACEY], his constituents and mine are more interested in than they are in the product of butter.

more interested in than they are in the product of butter.

Mr. LACEY. Oh, no.

Mr. CANNON. It is a product made of what? Leaf lard and tallow, churned through milk. A wholesome product. I speak from knowledge. It is a far more wholesome product than three-quarters of the butter that is made in the United States.

Mr. COOKE of Illinois. Far more cleanly.

Mr. CANNON. Far more cleanly and more wholesome, and where my friend from Iowa [Mr. LACEY] has one constituent interested in the butter trade, he has four constituents interested.

interested in the butter trade, he has four constituents interested in this trade.

Mr. MORSE. Will my friend allow me to ask him a question?

Mr. CANNON. If I can get any time.
Mr. MORSE. We will give you all the time you want.

Mr. CANNON. The gentleman says I can have all the time I

Mr. MORSE. I want to ask you whether you butter your bread with oleomargarine, if you use this—
Mr. CANNON. Oh, certainly I use it; and let me say to my friend, it is immensely better than three-quarters of the butter that is used as a food product. Now, here we have a product that, for the purposes of revenue, is singled out and marked from the time it is made until it reaches the consumer in pound or half-pound packages. That tells the story from beginning to end. Still this product has the merit that it is manufactured and consumed, and men who want to get rid of the competition in this product, in which my constituents are interested—and I represent an agricultural district—come and seek to do what? To shut it out of the markets entirely

Mr. NORTHWAY. Now, will the gentleman permit a question?

Mr. CANNON. Well, I would sooner go on and make my speech.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Does the gentleman from Illinois yield?

Mr. CANNON. I will yield later on. Now, what is the law? In the case of Now, what is the law? In the case of Plumley vs. Massachusetts (155 United States) this statute was sustained:

No person, by himself or agent or servant, shall render or manufacture, sell, offer for sale, expose for sale, or have in his possession with intent to sell, any article, product, or compound made wholly or partly out of any fat, oil, or oleaginous substance or compound thereof not produced from unadulterated milk or cream from the same, which shall be in initiation of yellow butter produced from pure unadulterated milk or cream from the same: Provided, That nothing in this act shall be construed to prohibit the manufacture and sale of oleomargarine in separate and distinct form, and in such manner as advise the consumer of its real character, free from coloration or ingredients that cause it to look like butter.

That is the Massachusetts statute. That statute has been sustained by the Supreme Court of the United States. Now, with tained by the Supreme Court of the United States. Now, with that statute sustained, why does the gentleman want this legislation? Because he wants the State invested with power by Congress, if it can be, to go further than the Massachusetts statute has gone. Let me say to the gentleman I have been informed, and I state it here as true, and I ask now to be challenged if it is not, that the State of New Hampshire, by legislation, declares that oleomargarine shall not be sold unless it is colored pink. Now, the gentleman's bill would validate that law upon the sale of this product-or green or blue-and the gentleman's legislation would go further than the Massachusetts statute. It would validate the law of any State that would say that this product should not be sold at all. Now, in addition—

Mr. GROUT. Will the gentleman yield to me for a moment?

Mr. CANNON. Certainly. (To Mr. WILLIAMS:) Am I taking

Mr. WILLIAMS. Just go ahead.

Mr. GROUT. The gentleman entirely misunderstands the provisions of this bill. A State law may operate under the police power by authority of the bill, upon this article when it is in "imitation of butter," and only then. The bill confers only that authority. Now, if the gentleman will read the bill carefully, he will see that his remarks on this subject are all to one side of what the bill provides. what the bill provides.

Mr. CANNON. Oh, well, I think not.

The Massachusetts

Mr. CANNON. On, well, I think not. The Massachusetts statute has been sustained. Now, then, does it not go far enough? Mr. GROUT. That is just as far as this bill goes.
Mr. CANNON. Now, what is the necessity of this legislation if that is all that the gentleman wants. The State—
The SPEAKER pro tempore. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. NORTHWAY. I would be glad if they would give the gentleman time to answer a question that I should like to ask

Mr. WILLIAMS. How much time have I left, Mr. Speaker? Mr. LACEY. I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman have five minutes in his own right.

Mr. GROUT. Outside of the time agreed to? Mr. CANNON. Oh, well, if I talk about this, I ought to have ten minutes.

Mr. GROUT. Make it ten minutes.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Vermont asks unanimous consent that the gentleman from Illinois be allowed ten minutes further time. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair Mr. TAWNEY. Mr. CANNON. Mr. TAWNEY. The Chair hears none.

I want to ask you this question.

Very well.

I would like to know what specific right the manufacturers of oleomargarine will lose by the passage of this

Mr. CANNON. I will say to my friend that it places it in the power of the State of New Hampshire to enforce that law now upon the statute books, that oleomargarine shall be colored pink before it shall be sold, under the police powers of the State of New Hampshire.

Mr. TUCKER. They have that right now.
Mr. TAWNEY. Is it not a fact under the present law, as declared by the Supreme Court of the United States, that the State has the same right that it would have under this proposed law?

Mr. CANNON. No.

Mr. TAWNEY. If they have not, then what difference is there?
Mr. CANNON. Oh. well, if the gentleman is right, what is the necessity for the legislation?
Mr. GROUT. If the gentleman will allow me—
Mr. CANNON. Now, who is going to have this ten minutes?
Mr. TAWNEY. You have asked me a question, and I would like to answer it.

Mr. GROUT. I was going to give the reason, as I have no time of my own.

Mr. CANNON. We are under the five-minute rule, and if we can have further extension I will yield; but gentlemen just coming in from lunch, without listening to what I said in the beginning, and some of them being full of questions and objections, they proand some of them being run of questions and objections, they proceed to make them. [Laughter.] Well, now, if gentlemen will just allow me to proceed for five or six minutes—

Mr. COOKE of Illinois and Mr. GROUT. You have ten minutes.

Mr. CANNON. Well, then, I will ask for order.

Mr. NORTHWAY. I should like to ask the gentleman a question.

Mr. CANNON. I have just half a dozen asked me now.
Mr. NORTHWAY. I wish to ask you one question.
Mr. CANNON. What is the question?
Mr. NORTHWAY. The question is this: If there is an imitation of butter, made by a fraudulent or bogus concern, where is there any law or where is there any power in the State to regulate that matter if it is sold in the original package?

Mr. WILLIAMS. In the sanitary and police power.

Mr. CANNON. If the gentleman will read this statute here, the Massachusetts statute, that has been sustained—and it is a

Now, then, if the State of Vermont merely wants to exercise a power that it now has under the law, under its police powers, then this legislation is not needed; but if the State of Vermont wants to absolutely prohibit the sale of oleomargarine, under any and all conditions that it sees proper in the exercise of its police powers, as it does and may prohibit the sale of spirituous liquors, then this legislation is apt.

Now, in my judgment, it is not desirable to do it. Let me show gentlemen where they are going. I say here, after investigation, that oleomargarine is more healthful and more desirable for food than three-fourths of the butter that is made in the United States.

Mr. TAWNEY. If it is made out of pure fat, it may not be unhealthful

Mr. NORTHWAY (in his seat). But suppose it is bogus oleomargarine?

Mr. CANNON. I trust that gentlemen who desire to interrupt me will do me the courtesy of rising to their feet. [Laughter.] Oleomargarine is largely a product of my own State. The material of which it is made comes from the hogs and cattle that are produced throughout the country.

Now, if we enter upon the policy of saying, in the interest of the producer of good butter or of poor butter, "We will get rid of a competitor," let us see where that will take us. The gentleman [Mr. Morse] comes from the great old Commonwealth of Massachusetts, of which he is proud and I am proud. She accommodates herself to circumstances. Falling off in agriculture, she went to dairying and to the cultivation of small products; she diversified her industries in various ways, and she stands to-day as a great Commonwealth in this country and a great force in civilization. I am proud of her. We are all proud of her.

Amongst other things, she manufactures more shoes than any other State. She splits the kip and "improves" the leather to make a "calf" shoe when it is not calf [laughter], and it takes an expert to tell the difference. That product comes to my State, and

You do not have to eat the shoes, though. WILLIS. Mr.

[Laughter.

Mr. CANNON. Oh, I do not have to eat the shoes; but I commend to the gentleman an improvement of his mind, whereby it can recognize the operation of a general principle without indulging in a little bit of demagogy. [Laughter.]

Take another illustration from Massachusetts: In her great

Take another illustration from Massachusetts: In her great woolen mills she mixes shoddy with the wool, and she sells for dress goods and as "all wool" a product that is perhaps one-fourth or one-half cotton, with shoddy interwoven. In Mississippi they have less manufactures than in Massachusetts. Now, if the principle of this bill were carried to a legitimate conclusion it would authorize Mississippi or Illinois, in the exercise of the police powers, to protect her people from being imposed upon by the sale of a "calf" shoe that is not calf, and of an "all wool" textile product of the State of Massachusetts which is not all wool; and there would be God and morality for it a great deal more than there is in this case, because the shoe that is sold for a calf shoe when it is counterfeit is not a good thing, and the dress goods that are sold as all wool when they are counterfeit are not a goods that are sold as all wool when they are counterfeit are not a good thing, whereas pure oleomargarine is a good thing.

Now, I will leave it to lawyers to wrestle about the Constitution and to split hairs. I put the case as a citizen of the great State of Illinois, representing a great agricultural district, and I say that it is better for us to recognize the spirit of the Constitution, the spirit underlying production and civilization, the spirit of commerce, and to realize that, amongst ourselves at least, with forty-five Commonwealths, making one great country, the United States of America, we can not afford, in the supposed interest of a little knot of men here or a little knot of men there, to adopt precedents which if carried to their legitimate conclusion will substantially destroy the Federal compact and make us forty-five independent governments, full of bickering, full of strife, full of jealousy, full of selfishness. [Applause.] I do not believe that this bill should be enacted into law. Furthermore, the bill itself sails under false colors and professes to accomplish that which every honest man is content to have accomplished under the law as it now is and as it has been declared by our Supreme Court. While this bill sails under false colors it seeks to go further than the law now goes, and to authorize the absolute prohibition of the importation into the several States of the products of other States.

Mr. GROUT. Mr. Speaker, I now yield five minutes to the gentleman from Nebraska [Mr. HAINER].

tleman from Nebraska [Mr. HAINER].

Mr. HAINER of Nebraska. Mr. Speaker, I am heartily in favor of this bill. I believe the principle upon which it is based is a sound one and fully justifiable. We are brought face to face with conditions which members, I believe, generally understand. The dairy interest of this country, its largest single interest, having an output of about $900,000,000 annually, finds that its legitimate domain is invaded by the basest of counterfeits, having its home, as the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. Cannon] has just told us, princi-pally in the State of Illinois. The legitimate dairy products are being crowded out of the markets by the base semblance of low cost and still lower quality. Gentlemen who contend that oleo-margarine is a wholesome food product, that it is even better than butter, are reminded that oleomargarine always masquerades in the garb of butter, while butter never imitates oleomargarine. Oleomargarine in its nomenclature, in its packages, in everything connected with its sale, imitates butter.

Mr. Speaker, the superior never imitates the inferior. It is only the inferior and false that masquerades in the garb of the true and imitates the superior and the genuine. There are produced in this country annually about 70,000,000 pounds of oleomargarine, 99 per cent of which is sold as and for butter, at butter prices, and there is no man on the floor of this House who can by inspection disis no man on the floor of this House who can by inspection distinguish oleomargarine from butter. Oleomargarine—"bull butter," as we call it out West where we know it—costing 7 cents per pound or less, is sold for genuine butter, supplanting real butter, which averages 18 cents a pound. That means a fraud upon consumers of at least 11 cents per pound at the wholesale price. At retail the fraud aggregates at least double that sum.

This bill proposes to place under the police regulation of the States this confessed imitator and fraud. The law of the United States is not sufficient to stamp out the fraud. The decision of the Supreme Court in the Plumly case does, it is true, lay down a principle which allows the States to deal with the fraud. But, Mr. Speaker, that decision was pronounced by a divided court. It overrules the decision in the case of Leisy vs. Hardin. If we knew that the later decision would stand, we would be quite content with it. But frauds are active, their arguments are specious, and the personnel as well as the opinions of judges change. We there-fore desire to give legislative approval to that decision rendered in the Plumly case and thus protect the people of the United States from this fraud which is bearing down the prices of butter, and has been militating against the health and best interests of this country for years. It is idle to say that oleo is a wholesome product. It is essentially an uncooked fat. Not one person in a hundred voluntarily purchases and uses it. Even if wholesome, its use depends upon imposition, and that alone. But no uncooked ase depends upon imposition, and that alone. But no uncooked fat is a wholesome food.

Gentlemen can not—I care not how specious may be their argument—make the people of this country understand that it is right by constitutional construction to give a status to a fraud. What the people of this country want is clean and fair dealing. We need in this land of ours three hundred and sixty-five days in the year to preach the doctrine "Thou shalt not steal." And we all understand that the worst kind of a thief is the man who holds out a food prednet to be genuine which as a matter of fact, is a out a food product to be genuine which as a matter of fact is a counterfeit and a fraud.

It is wrong for the people of Massachusetts or elsewhere, as charged by the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. Cannon], to sell their split leather for calf. That fraud, if practiced, ought to be denounced. But the gentleman from Illinois will hardly justify the sale of imitation butter as genuine by showing that somebody in Massachusetts undertakes to palm off split leather for full calf

These people, if they believe at all in the notion that oleomargarine is a wholesome product, should have no objection to a measure of this kind, for its only effect is to authorize the States by proper police regulations to compel the sale of this product for what it really is, attending every transaction connected with it from the time it comes into the State until it reaches the consumer with the proper safeguards, so that everyone may know what he is purchasing and what he is consuming. Every honest product is helped by such a law; only the dishonest suffer.

[Here the hammer fell.]

WILLIAMS. I yield five minutes to the gentleman from Louisiana [Mr. Boatner].

Mr. Boatner].

Mr. Boatner].

Mr. Speaker, gentlemen who advocate the passage of this bill all proceed on the supposition that the sale of oleomargarine is a fraudulent business, that the product itself is a cheat and a fraud, and that therefore the States under their a cheat and a fraud, and that therefore the States under their police powers ought to be allowed to suppress it. Now, sir, if the assertions of these gentlemen were well founded, they would not come to Congress for permission to the States to exercise a power which has been granted to them by the Constitution and the exercise of which has been sustained by the Supreme Court since the foundation of the Government. If oleomargarine is a fraud, if it is injurious to the public health, if it is not clean, the States do not need our authority to prohibit absolutely its manufacture and sale. But the trouble with gentlemen is that their assumption is not true and can not be proved. The trouble is in fact that oleomargarine is not a fraud; it is not unwholesome; it is not injurious; and the courts of the United States, while they is not injurious; and the courts of the United States, while they will sustain any State in the exercise of its police power, will not permit it to shelter itself behind the police power in the perpetra-tion of a fraud on the Constitution of the United States, by falsely stigmatizing a business or a product as fraudulent and injurious to the public health or public morals when, as a matter of fact, it is not

Mr. MORSE. I should like to ask the gentleman whether he practices his own preaching—whether he buys oleomargarine for his own table.

Mr. BOATNER. I do not know whether I do or not. I do not know whether I eat oleomargarine or butter when in Washing-When at home, I eat butter.

Mr. BAKER of New Hampshire. Will the gentleman yield a moment for a question?

Mr. BOATNER. If it is not too long.

Mr. BAKER of New Hampshire. If the statement which the gentleman has made is literally true, what objection can he have to the statute of New Hampshire requiring eleomargarine, before to the statute of New Hampshire requiring oleomargarine, before it can be sold within the State, to be colored pink?

Mr. BOATNER. My objection is the objection which the Supreme Court has found and sustained to innumerable statutes of the different States, violating the provisions of the interstate-commerce clause of the Constitution—seeking to draw discriminations between citizens of different States and the products of different States and the products of different States. different States. What right has the State of New Hampshire to affix a brand of that kind? What right has the legislature of the State of New Hampshire to interfere with the business of one of its citizens for the benefit of another of its citizens?

Mr. BAKER of New Hampshire. It does not discriminate between citizens. It provides that the law shall equally affect all

Mr. BOATNER. The gentleman will pardon me for declining to yield further. I have only five minutes.

Mr. Speaker, this clause of the Constitution was adopted not only for the purpose of establishing absolute free trade among all the States of the American Union, but for the purpose of securing for the citizens of each State and the products of each State all the rights and privileges in the several States accorded to citizens and the products of any other State. That was the reason for the adoption of this interstate-commerce clause of the Constitution. And we can not abandon to the States the authority thus reserved to the General Government without abandoning one of the most important functions and prerogatives of the Federal Government. As the gentleman from Illinois has so ably and eloquently shown, but for the existence and maintenance of this clause of the Constitution we would be split up into forty-five independent States, each one seeking to obtain an advantage for its citizens and its products over the citizens and products of every other State. The State of Mississippi, for instance, which until recently was not very much in love with the State of Massachusetts, might pass an act declaring that Massachusetts shoes were a fraud and a cheat and that none of them should be sold within the limits of that State unless they were painted green. [Laughter.] Another State might declare that whereas the shoes made in the State of Massachusetts frequently had paper soles, they could not be sold within the borders of that State.

[Here the hammer fell.]
Mr. MORSE. Massachusetts makes the best shoes in the world.
Mr. BOATNER. That is what Chicago says of oleomargarine.
Mr. GROUT. Mr. Speaker, I now yield ten minutes to the gentleman from Delaware [Mr. WILLIS], a member of the com-

Mr. WILLIS. Mr. Speaker, I have been in favor of most of the Mr. WILLIS. Mr. Speaker, I have been in layor of most of the laws passed with reference to eleomargarine, both by the National Legislature and in the legislatures of the States, because I think they move in the direction of justice and of right. I think this law moves in the direction of justice and right, and in so far as I can see it does not infract the rights of the States or the nation.

The history of eleomargarine, and of those who have made earnest and urgent attempts to manufacture and put it upon the American market, reminds me of a passage I have read in the prophet Amos:

When will the new moon be gone, that we may sell corn? and the Sabbath, that we may set forth wheat, making the ephah small, and the shekel great, and falsifying the balances by deceit?

ancient theocracy, but it strikes at the very animus of the decomargarine interest. If you are going to have legislation that will stand, legislation that the people in subsequent generations will approve, legislation that will be for the benefit of the great masses of the people, it must proceed and can only proceed on honest principles.

Now, nobody has undertaken or is undertaking to prevent, as I understand it, the manufacture or sale of oleomargarine, but is simply setting up a claim that oleomargarine, if it speak at all in the American markets, shall call a spade a spade; that it shall not speak with a lying tongue; that it shall not come, as the gentleman from Nebraska [Mr. HAINER] so well said, "masquerading under false colors," reminding us, so aptly as he did, that the superior never masquerades in the garb of the inferior, but the inferior in that of the superior.

Now, Mr. Speaker, a word in regard to the eloquent and glowing remarks of the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. Cannon], which have been referred to by the gentleman from Louisiana [Mr. Boatner]. I will not say that the article called oleomargarine is a deleterious compound and an unhealthy food product for some stomachs. Why, I know that a cobblestone has gone through the gizzard of an ostrich. [Laughter and appliance.]

gizzard of an ostrich. [Laughter and applause.]

Mr. TOWNE. How do you know that?

Mr. WILLIS. Because I have seen it. [Renewed laughter and applause.]

But I will undertake to say that oleomargarine is not a wholesome food product for some people. Now, ask me how I know that. [Laughter.] But I will tell you the way I know. It is because, as the colored man says, "I have proved it by 'sperience." [Laughter.] Anything that has got hog's lard in it will keep up an unpleasant memory in my stomach for half a day. [Laughter.] But anything that comes to me in the sweet and uncontaminated globules of pure cream is not only harmless, but nutritious and health inspiring.

Mr. HENDERSON. Makes you feel like dancing a hornpipe.

[Laughter.]
Mr. WILLIS. Yes—
A MEMBER. They would turn you out of church, then.
Mr. WILLIS (continuing). And the illustrations introduced in some parts of the speech of the gentleman from Illinois were somewhat amusing. In trying to illustrate, I believe, the point he was making with reference to charges against oleomargarine not being a healthful food product, he brought in the question of leather. He said that some of the leather sold in the market as calfskin was made of horse hide, but he forgot the idea that one went on the outside of the man and the other on the inside flaughter], and there is a tremendous difference. Mr. Speaker. [laughter], and there is a tremendous difference, Mr. Speaker, between that which is on the outside and that which is on the inside of a man. [Renewed laughter and applause.]

Now, if a man has a good digestion, if he has a good strong stomach, he can probably eat and digest anything in the whole category of food products, from a tough Texas mule to a quail. If he has such a stomach as that, I will not join issue with him on the category of the pright to eat eleomargarine. [Laughter.] But I his natural-born right to eat oleomargarine. [Laughter.] But I will say to you that I do not want it and will never have it, simply because it is unwholesome for me.

But I am only one of a great multitude. Now, what is the harm in having a law or many laws, in order to make the thing sure, that will give a man the opportunity to judge what he is eating and to make a safe selection? Life at heat is propertied by and to make a safe selection? Life at best is none too long. The comforts of this world are not overmultiplied, and the question of comforts of this world are not overmultiplied, and the question of dietetic products, dietetic arrangements, dietetic articles is one of the most important of all we have. All these laws proceed upon sanitary and health-giving and justice-establishing principles that this country ought always to give its hand to. I am in favor of this bill, because I believe it is a reassertion of the principle of the decision of the Supreme Court; and from the very fact that there seems to be a spirit of uprising sometimes in this country against the authority of the Supreme Court; from the very fact that some of our friends from the South and very many of them from the North, once under the ægis of the old-time Democratic party which North, once under the ægis of the old-time Democratic party which used to clamor for State rights, have forgotten that guiding star that led them and their forefathers, and under the influence and magnetism of some of these strange gods of modern times, have gone off and framed a great political platform that seems to denounce, or at least to discount, the authority of the decisions of the Supreme Court. Let Congress assert itself in this bill, and the Supreme Court. Let Congress assert itself in this bill, and let us pass it.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Mr. Speaker, I yield five minutes to the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. CLARDY].

Mr. CLARDY. Mr. Speaker, the legal aspects of this question have all been ably discussed by the able lawyers on each side of this question, and, as is usual, of course, they are about half on one side and half on the other. Upon nearly all the legal questions that we have ever discussed in this House, this, I believe, has been the state of the case. We laymen, those of us who are not lawyers, are unable to form an opinion from what they have said. So we shall have to discard that and take just a commonsense view of this question. sense view of this question.

Now, what is the real object of this bill? What is its ultimate purpose? If this bill is intended only to require the producers of a particular article to sell that article exactly for what it is, we have already a general law which provides for that. Now, if the States do not seek to go any further than simply to carry out that states do not seek to go any further than simply to carry out that law, and if the gentlemen who have this bill in charge will amend it so that it will simply apply to the stamping of this particular product and to require everybody who sells oleomargarine to sell it as oleomargarine or butterine, then I will go with them. I will agree with them on that question. But the scope of this bill far exceeds that. As I understand it, it will give the authority to the State to absolutely exclude from sale in that State any particular product that they do not raise or manufacture and do not wish sold. That is where the wrong comes in.

ticular product that they do not raise or manufacture and do not wish sold. That is where the wrong comes in.

Now, the amendment of the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. Tucker] is simply worse than the original bill, in the sense that it gives a still wider scope to this proposition. Under that bill, any particular thing, no matter what, could be excluded from any State where it was not manufactured, and where the people desired to prevent its sale. Now, for instance, take a product of the State of the gentleman from Vermont [Mr. Grout], maple sirup. Any State in this Union that does not make that product and does not desire it to be sold, could exclude it. Why? No and does not desire it to be sold, could exclude it. Why? doubt when it leaves the gentleman's State it is a pure and a very desirable and palatable food, but, my friends, when the sojourners at our hotels and boarding houses meet with it they can not tell whether it is sweetened water or watered sweetening.

Now, these are facts. Take another article largely produced in

Now, these are facts. Take another article largely produced in some States and not produced in others, which is considered a luxury, but which is denounced by many people all over the country, who say that it is a sin and almost a crime to use it. I refer to tobacco, which is produced largely in some States and not produced in others. How long will it be before some of these States, governed and ruled by fanatics on this subject, will pass a law that tobacco in any of its fabrications can not be sold in that State? This amendment of the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. Tucker] would make such a thing possible.

Now, another point. The gentleman from Ohio [Mr. Northway] stated that the law as it at present exists in his State allows oleomargarine to be sold, and that it interferes with and cripples the dairy industry of that State. This shows the purpose of this bill and what it is really intended to accomplish. It is really intended to protect this one industry, the dairy industry, and to make it more profitable, at the expense of another industry, It never has been established as a fact that oleomargarine

It never has been established as a fact that oleomargarine is not as wholesome a food as butter. Nobody has been able to prove that. My friend from Delaware [Mr. Willis] says that his stomach would repudiate anything with lard in it. Now, my friends, he is evidently a dyspeptic, and you can not rely on his stomach, because the healthiest people in the world use lard quite largely, all over the country.

[Here the hammer fell.] Mr. WILLIAMS. Will the gentleman from Vermont now consume some of his time?

Mr. GROUT. There are but ten or eleven minutes remaining on this side, and I shall yield it to one gentleman. I think we should be allowed to close.

Mr. WILLIAMS. How much time have I remaining?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Eight minutes.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Does the gentleman from Vermont prefer that I go ahead? Mr. GROUT.

Mr. GROUT. Yes; I prefer to have you occupy your time.
Mr. WILLIAMS. Mr. Speaker, a desire is expressed by the gentleman from Vermont that this side consume the balance of its time, and then he will consume his.

Mr. Speaker and gentlemen of the House, when the gentleman Mr. Speaker and gentlemen of the House, when the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. Northway] was speaking, he said that the States and the people were engaged in "a warfare against an injurious and deleterious food product." With that warfare I sympathize heartily; but the trouble with the gentleman's position is that oleomargarine, butterine, cottolene, and these various substances are not unwholesome, deleterious, or injurious food substances. If they were, they would fall now under the sanitary and police powers reserved to the States in the Constitution of the United States, as was announced by the Supreme Court of the United States on the very article of oleomargarine when it delivered lately on the oleomargarine statute of Massachusetts. What were the on the oleomargarine statute of Massachusetts. What were the facts in that case? The facts are set forth by the court, and they were agreed facts. I quote:

It is admitted that the article sold was sent by the manufacturers thereof in the State of Illinois to the petitioner, their agent in Massachusetts, and was sold by him in the original package—

I call the attention of the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. LACEY] to that fact. He said when he was on his feet that when the elecmargarine was in the original package it was not within the scope of regulation under the police powers of the State. The admitted fact in this case was that it was in the original package and that in respect to the article sold, the importers and the patitioners had complied with all the requirements of the act of Congress regulating the sale of oleomargarine, and it was marked and distinguished by all the marks, words, and stamps required of oleomargarine by the laws of this Commonwealth—

That is, the State of Massachusetts.

Now, the Supreme Court of the United States held upon that state of facts that the law of the State of Massachusetts, which does everything which my friend from Delaware [Mr. WILLIS] says he wants to do, everything that my friend from Vermont [Mr. Grout] says that the bill is intended to do, namely, forbid absolutely the sale of oleomargarine whenever sold under the guise or semblance or butter, whenever it was sold it all, unless it came within the following proviso:

That nothing in this act shall be construed to prohibit the manufacture or sale of oleomargarine in a separate and distinct form, and in such manner as will advise the consumer of its real character, free from colorations or ingredients that cause it to look like butter.

Now, the statute of Massachusetts forbade the sale of this product with that proviso. The Supreme Court of the United States under this state of facts and with this proviso held that act to be constitutional. Therefore it follows that if all the gentlemen wanted to get was what they say they want to get (and gentle-men will understand by that that I mean that if their intent in passing the law was all the effect of the proposed law), then there is no need for the law. But the trouble about the whole thing is that the law goes further than they say they want to go, and gives the State the power not only to do what Massachusetts did, and all they say they want to do, and what the Supreme Court says they can now do, but it subjects oleomargarine to any law of the States, whatever the law may be, whether on the statute books now or to be hereafter passed, and puts it within the broad scope of the police powers, which are held to be so much a part and parcel of the re-served rights of a sovereign State that the Supreme Court of the United States has held that no clause of the Constitution can invade them. Where the trouble of the gentleman from Onio comes in is this: That if he can prove what he asserts, viz, that this is an until have no need to pass wholesome and injurious product, he would have no need to pass the law; but as it is in fact, despite his assertion, a wholesome and healthful product, but as he wants to shut it out under the pretext that it is an unwholesome food product, he is in favor of the passage of this law.

Now, Mr. Speaker, the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. Lacey] said something facetious about horse beef, and said it will be absurd to compare the two things, because if people want horse beef they ought to have horse beef, and the gentleman thinks they ought to have it if it was sold as horse beef; and then he wants this product sold also, provided it shall be sold as oleomargarine, and says they are making no opposition to any law provided that it is sold

Mr. GARDNER. Will the gentleman yield to me for a ques-

Mr. WILLIAMS. Yes, sir; I have only eight minutes, and I desire you to make it brief.

Mr. GARDNER. Have you ever seen or have you ever heard any reputable person say that he has seen oleomargarine for sale in a retail store under its own name?

Mr. WILLIAMS. I am tolerable "reputable," and I have seen it scores of times, and so has everybody upon this floor who has ever entered a retail store. I have seen it branded "cottolene," I have seen it branded "butterine," and branded "cleomargaand everybody can see it if they will go down to the stores in Washington.

Mr. CANNON. I have bought it scores of times in preference to three-fourths of the article sold as butter.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Now, there is a gentleman I know my friend will admit to be "reputable," because he is from the right latitude. Now let us go on. The gentleman from Iowa says that men ought to be allowed to buy oleomargarine if they want to, but that they should know what they are doing. I agree with him; but the trouble with this bill is that if it becomes a law a man but the trouble with this bill is that if it becomes a law a man can not buy eleomargarine, whether he knows what he is doing or not, provided the State in which he wants to buy it forbids its sale. The gentleman says that he does not want "the legitimate domain of butter invaded." What is "the legitimate domain of butter"? To be butter, is it not? So that eleomargarine can not invade the legitimate domain of butter unless it goes there pretending to be butter. But the trouble with this bill is that it goes tending to be butter. But the trouble with this bill is that it goes beyond the prevention of that fraud, and provides in effect that oleomargarine, not only in the guise of butter, but in any other guise, can not be sold or bought if the State of New Hampshire, or the State of Vermont, or the State of Mississippi, or any State forbids the sale or purchase of it within the State limits.

If this bill passes, and if the Supreme Court holds that the law is constitutional, that will be its effect. I have my doubts of its constitutionality, but I am not going to include its constitutionality.

constitutionality, but I am not going to indulge in such a remark as was made by the gentleman from Nebraska [Mr. HAINER], who said that the Supreme Court having made a certain decision, the matter would be all right if the people were not afraid that the decision might be changed. In the last campaign people who referred to possible changes of Supreme Court decisions were denounced as "anarchists" [laughter], but I will not so denounce the gentleman from Nebraska.

Mr. GROUT. Mr. Speaker, I yield ten minutes to the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. GROSVENOR].

Mr. GROSVENOR. Mr. Speaker, if there is one feature of this proposed legislation more conspicuous and important than all others, it is that which provides for the exercise of what we call the police power in the States, and it is that power which this bill seeks to establish and strengthen within the jurisdiction of the States of the Union. That is, the power that is exercised in regulating the sale of intoxicating liquors. There is not a State in this Union that does not authorize its legislative body to prescribe this Union that does not authorize its legislative body to prescribe the terms upon which all kinds of intoxicating liquors may be sold within its borders. Indeed, I believe that in a number of States the power to absolutely prohibit such sale has been upheld, and it has been upheld upon the ground of the peculiarly dangerous nature of the commodity, involving the loss of the property and the character, and sometimes the life of the citizen. That power, I say, is universally recognized, and yet I hear a gentle-man on the other side of this Chamber, whom I have always recognized as a lawyer of ability and distinction [Mr. BOATNER], saying that the recognition of this police power implies a power in the State to prohibit the sale of cloth and of boots and shoes!

Why, Mr. Speaker, the very underlying principle of all legisla-tion of this kind is the recognition of the same power in the State which regulates the presence and the movements of the victim of which regulates the presence and the movements of the victim of a contagious disease, or the sale of decayed or decaying vegetables, or of impure milk. The State of Massachusetts went to the very verge and upheld a statute, to which my friend from Ohio [Mr. Northway] must have referred, which made the sale of adulterated milk a crime without proving the scienter, and the supreme court of Ohio has very recently made a like ruling, although the language of the statute neither involved in terms the guilty knowledge nor attempted to say that the crime could be committed without the guilty knowledge. I think that was going a little beyond what I should have believed to be an absolute consonance with the liberty of the citizen in this respect.

But now let us come to the sale of this commodity. A gentle-man who has just made an argument on the other side says that this is a question of practical common sense, and that is true. There is no occult question of law involved here. The State has the right to regulate the sale of a deleterious or an impure com-modity and to provide against fraud. Now, I am not going to discuss, from the standpoint of some of our friends present, this question of the character of oleomargarine. It does not make any difference in this case whether what they say about it is true or not, or whether, if I were to express an opinion, I should be compelled to modify their statements in obedience to my own knowledge and to modify their statements in obedience to my own knowledge and judgment. It is enough to say that the legislation of the country, legislation which, I believe, has been thoroughly approved by the people, has regulated, or attempted to regulate, the manufacture, branding, and sale of oleomargarine.

branding, and sale of oleomargarine.

That legislation has been upheld by the courts of the country. It is a very simple proposition, and I never had any doubt myself about the constitutionality of that law. There was never, in my mind, during the long discussion of the subject here, any question, except the question whether it was good policy to use the taxing power of the Government to thus far break down an existing industry. That industry was assailed all along the line by evidence as to the impure and deleterious and fraudulent character of the commodity produced. We have passed away from that situation, and now, in any supplemental legislation that we may enact, it seems to me that we ought not to discuss here the original question of the power of Congress to interfere to regulate original question of the power of Congress to interfere to regulate the manufacture and sale of this commodity, or the propriety of its exercise of that power. Having, therefore, passed forward from that, the next question that arises is whether this legislation from that, the next question that arises is whether this legislation is needed and whether it is proper legislation.

The gentleman from Louisiana [Mr. Boatner] says, in effect, that if it is lawful to sell a commodity in the original package in a State, made lawful by act of Congress and the law upheld by the Supreme Court, we can not undertake to interfere with the article after it gets there. Does the gentleman understand where the logic of his argument would take him? The State of Kentucky may manufacture whisky and put it into barrels and ship it to the State of Kansas. No man can prevent that traffic under the law. But can not the State of Kansas regulate what shall be done with a commodity after it comes within the borders of the State? That is this question; that is all there is of this profound question that we have here now. The law of Congress says that this commodity shall be marked and branded. The decision of the court is that the State of Kansas or the State of Kentucky, of the court is that the State of Kansas or the State of Kentucky, or any other State, may not exclude the interstate commerce that carries the package into that State. Now comes the supplemental act of Congress which says, "While that is true, we recognize the police power of the State." We have not attempted by this legislation, and the court has not undertaken by its decision, to destroy the police power of the State. Therefore, while asking legislation of Congress that remits to the State the power to regulate the

Mr. COOKE of Illinois. Would it not be wise, in view of the complex character of this question, to have this regulation made by Congress so that it shall be applicable alike to all the States?

Mr. GROSVENOR. I would not permit Congress to so far invade the independence of a State as to adopt legislation which would debar a State from exercising its police power.

Now, it is very interesting to me to hear some of the arguments which we hear made on the other side. It is a good long time to live—we have traveled a long way in the evolution of political questions in this country—when gentlemen of the old Democratic questions in this country—when gentlemen of the old Democratic school of politics, who all their lives have been proclaiming the doctrine of the rights of the States, and who in days past have carried that question to the arbitrament of war and blood, now stand up here in favor of an act of Congress that shall strike down the power of the State to regulate the sale of food products within

[Here the hammer fell at the end of five minutes.]
The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Vermont
[Mr. GROUT] has one minute remaining.
Mr. GROUT. I shall not occupy that minute. I ask that the bill be now read for amendment.
The SPEAKER was tempore. The bill will your be read for

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The lamendment under the five-minute rule.
The bill was read, as follows: The bill will now be read for

Be it enacted, etc., That all articles known as eleomargarine, butterine, imitation butter, or imitation cheese, or any substance in the semblance of butter or cheese not the usual product of the dairy and not made exclusively of pure and unadulterated milk or cream, transported into any State or Territory, or remaining therein for use, consumption, sale, or storage therein, shall, upon arrival in such State or Territory, be subject to the operation and effect of the laws of such State or Territory enacted in the exercise of its police powers to the same extent and in the same manner as though such articles or substances had been produced in such State or Territory, and shall not be exempt therefrom by reason of being introduced therein in original packages or otherwise.

Mr. TUCKER. I offer the amendment which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows: After the word "articles," in line 3, strike out "known as oleomargarine, butterine, imitation butter, or imitation cheese, or any substance in the semblance of butter or cheese not the usual product of the dairy and not made exclusively of pure and unadulterated milk or cream."

Mr. GROUT. The gentleman proposes to strike out. What does he propose to insert?
Mr. TUCKER. Nothing.
The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Virginia [Mr. TUCKER] has the floor.

Mr. TUCKER. I merely offer the amendment. I have nothing to say about it.

Mr. GROUT. Why, Mr. Speaker, that amendment would absolutely disembowel the bill.

lutely disembowel the bill.

A MEMBER. Of course; that is what it is intended for.

Mr. GROUT. I say the amendment would absolutely eviscerate the bill. If that is the gentleman's object, the same end could be reached, if he has sufficient numerical strength on his side, by voting down the bill on its third reading. It does not seem to me that we need spend any time in discussing the amendment.

Mr. TUCKER. I should like to have a vote.

Mr. MORSE. Mr. Speaker, I move to amend by striking out the last word. I make this motion for the purpose of saying a word by way of answering the attack made upon my State in some of the illustrations which have been used in the argument of gentlemen on the other side. It has been said in the course of the debate on this floor, by the way of justifying this oleomargarine fraud upon the great farming interests and the consumers of the debate of this hoor, by the way of Justifying this oleomarga-rine fraud upon the great farming interests and the consumers of this country, that the manufacturers of Massachusetts are not honorable merchants and business men and are guilty of fraud in the manufacture of leather, shoes, woolens, etc. Lest by silence I should appear to give consent to that charge, I wish to say a word here in my place.

I call the attention of the House to the fact that a distinguished Representative of Massachusetts on one occasion in antebellum times, when the dark crisis was impending and the mutterings of war and secession were heard, stood on this floor and said, in war and secession were heard, stood on this floor and said, in answer to an attack on our Commonwealth, that "he threw down her glove to the whole band of her assailants." That man was Anson Burlingame. Now I stand in my place and in behalf of the manufacturers of Massachusetts, and, measuring my words, I say that for business honor, for enterprise, for integrity, I throw down the glove of her manufacturers, bankers, and business men to the world.

down the glove of her manufacturers, bankers, and business men to the world. [Applause.]

Mr. Speaker, the manufacturers of Massachusetts sell woolen goods and shoes for what they are. There is no attempt, as in the case of oleomargarine, to palm it off for something it is not. If there is any split leather in their shoes they are sold for split leather, and for half the price of whole leather. If their clothes are made in part of cotton (as charged), it is to cheapen them and bring them in the reach of the poor, and they are sold for what they are

I say now, in this presence, that the manufacturers of Massachusetts, by their genius, enterprise, and inventive skill, have done more than any other section of the country, or perhaps of the world, to produce articles of necessity and luxury, ten thousand articles which go to adorn and embellish modern civilized life, and made cheap by the inventive genius of her sons, so as to place them in the reach of the humblest of our citizens, and so that humble people to-day enjoy comforts and luxuries that were unknown to the wealthy a few decades ago. I have in my district, at Brockton, one of the great shoe markets of the world, and they make as good shoes as are made on the face of the carth. Con make as good shoes as are made on the face of the earth. Contrast the price of shoes to-day with the price a decade or two decades ago; contrast the price of cloth and clothing and a thousand cades ago; contrast the price of cloth and clothing and a thousand things with the price a decade or two ago.

Mr. Speaker, I might go through the whole category of articles made by the manufacturers of Massachusetts and used in civilized life, and prove by statistics that our manufacturers, for honor, for enterprise, for integrity, and for success, can safely challenge the world. More than that, Mr. Speaker, when the yellow wings of a pestilence flap themselves in a Southern sky, when fire or famine or flood or pestilence overtake any section of our country or overtake humanity anywhere in the wide, wide world, in starving or flood or pestilence overtake any section of our country of overtake humanity anywhere in the wide, wide world, in starving Ireland, in famine-stricken Russia, or the far-away victims of the Sultan in Armenia—I say, who pours out its treasure like water to relieve affliction and distress? Why, these same manufacturers who have been abused and misrepresented on this floor to-day, these way who are sensed of making clothing out of "shoddy" ers who have been abused and misrepresented on this floor to-day, these men who are accused of making clothing out of "shoddy" and shoes out of "pasteboard."

Mr. Speaker, Massachusetts needs no eulogium or defense from me in these closing hours of my service here. In the language of one of her great sons, we say, "There she stands." Mr. Speaker, if this is the last word I shall speak in this House, I stand in my place and throw back to the gentlemen who made these charges against the manufacturers of the Commonwealth I have in part the honor to represent—I say I deny that her manufacturers are guilty of fraud and deception in their products. [Applause.]

Mr. TERRY. I move to strike out the last word.

Mr. BARRETT. Mr. Speaker, being desirous of having a vote on the pending amendment, I make the point of order that no other amendment is in order that does not apply to that amendment until the amendment of the gentleman from Virginia is disposed of.

Mr. TERRY. Mr. Speaker, I believe I have the floor. Mr. TUCKER. I demand a vote on my amendment, if in

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair overrules the point of order of the gentleman from Massachusetts. The Chair understood the gentleman from Arkansas, [Mr. Terry] to move a pro-forma amendment, and under the practice of the House he is recog-

Mr. BARRETT. Do I understand the Chair to rule that when an amendment is pending, another amendment which has no ref-erence to it may be offered.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. An amendment to the amendment is in order.

Mr. TERRY. I hope the Chair will not count this time against

Mr. BARRETT. I submit that an amendment to the amendment, unless it pertains to the subject-matter of the pending amendment, is not in order. The amendment to strike out the last word has no reference to the amendment of the gentleman

My poin, if the Chair please, is that the gentleman from Arkansas makes a formal amendment, and that that amendment has no reference to the pending motion. The gentleman from Virginia has moved to strike out a certain portion of this section of the bill, but not a part of the section affected by the gentleman from Arkansas. Mr. TERRY. I understood the gentleman from Massachusetts Mr. Morse] had moved a formal amendment and withdrew it. He was recognized, and made some remarks on his amendment. I made a pro forma amendment and was recognized by the Speaker, and am entitled to the floor. If the gentleman from Massachusetts did not withdraw his formal amendment of one word, I will make my amendment to strike out about three words. [Laughter.]

Mr. BARRETT. The fact that no opposition was made to the suggestion of my colleague and to his occupation of the floor on his amendment does not prevent the point of order being made against another amendment of a similar character.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair overrules the point of order, and holds that the gentleman from Arkansas is entitled to

Mr. TERRY. Mr. Speaker, I desire to call the attention of the members on both sides of the Chamber to the true question involved in the pending bill. It is a question of the interests of a few dairymen, as against the interests of the farmers of the country, North, East, South, and West. Every man whose product onters into the conversition of classification in the conversition of classification. country, North, East, South, and West. Every man whose product enters into the composition of oleomargarine, tallow or lard—every farmer who raises hogs, or sells cotton seed, every man that deals in lard or its products, or cotton seed or its products, has his interests directly assailed by the bill now pending in the interest of a few dairy associations throughout the country. It is a bill to strike down rival products and increase the price of butter.

Now, sir, when we recollect what was the original purpose—the moving number—for which the present Constitution of the United moving purpose—for which the present Constitution of the United States was formed and accepted by the States, we are enabled to form a proper understanding of the real issue involved in this bill. One of the main purposes of the Constitution was to have free trade among the States as to all products whose importation or sale was not injurious to health or public morals, and for the purpose of preventing any State from regulating, tampering with, or prohibiting the introduction of, or discriminating against, the products of any other State.

In order to secure the formation of a constitution that would accomplish these objects and grant these powers to the General Government, the people of the great North made concessions to the people of the South in the matter of representation partly based on the holding of slaves. All of these things they sacrificed. and a great many other convictions as well, in order to have a constitution that would permit this unrestricted commerce among

But now, sir, we behold the representatives of States that stood out most strenuously for this power to regulate interstate com-merce among the very first that now come up here to strike down or cripple that great power in the Federal Constitution. We upon this side of the Chamber are asked, "Have you not been Staterights men in the past?" Certainly we have been. But we have also stood by the Constitution that our fathers framed, as we understood it, and we propose to stand by it now as the palladium of our liberty and the ægis of our protection.

Now, this bill is a direct assault upon the very purpose of the interstate-commerce clause in the Constitution of the United States. I hold for one that any product the introduction or sale of which is injurious to the health or the morals of the people of any State is not within the commerce clause of the Constitution of the United States. But, unfortunately, the Supreme Court of the United States has ruled otherwise in what is known as the "original-package case," and it then became necessary for Congress, in order that the States might prohibit the sale of intoxicating liquors if they so desired-it became necessary to pass the Wilson bill. And I say, Mr. Speaker, if it becomes necessary in any case to authorize the States to prohibit the introduction of anything injurious to the health or morals of the people, Congress ought to grant it, but should not go further.

Here is a product that is not injurious to the health or the morals of the people. Whisky was, according to the contention of a great many people of the United States, and according to the almost universal consent of the world. It became, therefore, proper to take that out from under the operation of the interstate-commerce clause. But we should not go beyond that principle. Let us keep that principle in view, and whenever we are asked to make a concession to the States let us simply make concessions to prohibit those things that are injurious to public health or morals, and stop there, and then we will be standing by the Constitution as our fathers framed it.

[Here the hammer fell.] Mr. GROUT. Mr. Speaker, just a word in regard to this amendment, which is really very objectionable. It provides that

All articles transported into any State or Territory, or remaining therein for use, consumption, sale, or storage therein, shall, upon arrival within the limits of such State or Territory, be subject to the operation and effect of the laws of such State, etc.

This would be a complete surrender by Congress of the constithis would be a complete surrender by Congress of the constitutional power with which it is now vested to regulate commerce between the States. It goes far beyond any decision yet made by the Supreme Court, and far beyond the purpose contemplated in this bill. The court, in Plumley vs. Massachusetts, simply say that where a fraud is sought to be perpetrated in the sale of an article of food taken from one State into another the police power of the State into which it is transported may lay its hands appear the article and strip it of its false garb and compel its sale upon the article and strip it of its false garb and compel its sale for exactly what it is. But this amendment of the gentleman leaves all articles, whether fraudulent or otherwise, to be controlled by State legislation, which simply abrogates the constitrolled by State legislation, which simply abrogates the constitutional power of Congress to regulate interstate commerce.

Mr. TUCKER. I think my friend is entirely mistaken about that, and I think he will see it on reflection. All articles are to be subject, under the proposed bill as amended, to the police power in the State. That police power in the State refers to anything which is deleterious to health or morals; so that if oleomartics is host if lead or all entirely appropriate the constitution of the constitution garine, if beef, if lard, or all articles are amenable to that objection, the police power of the State would have the authority to act upon them.

Mr. GROUT. But still it should be remembered that the court in the Plumley case bases its decision simply upon the fraud. Where fraud is attempted to be practiced, the court says the State has the power to prevent it, and that is all this bill asks. has the power to prevent it, and that is all this bill asks. The police power of the State seizes on this article when it goes into the State in "semblance of butter or cheese," and under no other circumstances. To make the thing entirely plain, after this amendment is disposed of, and perhaps one or two others offered, I intend offering an amendment, which has been agreed upon between myself and the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. WILLIAMS], and which will make this point clear to all. He is not willing to offer it, because, even when adopted, he says he would not be willing to vote for the bill. So I propose to offer it. I hope the amendment of the gentleman from Virginia will be voted down.

Mr. TUCKER. I hope the amendment will be voted up. [Laughter.]

The question was taken on the amendment of Mr. Tucker; and on a division (demanded by Mr. Tucker) there were-ayes 23, Accordingly, the amendment was rejected.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the next amendment. The Clerk read as follows:

In line 9, after the word "arrival," strike out the word "in" and insert he words "within the limits of."

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. GIBSON. I offer the amendment which I send to the Clerk's desk.

The amendment was read, as follows:

Strike out "or," in line 7, page 1, after the word "Territory," and insert the word "and."

Mr. GROUT. I ask the Clerk to read the bill as it will be if that amendment is adopted.

The Clerk read as follows:

Transported into any State or Territory, and remaining therein for use, etc.

Mr. GIBSON. The object of that amendment is to avoid this possible construction, that under the bill as it is now framed it is probable that oleomargarine in transitu might be subject to the State police laws. The object of this is to confine it to eleomargarine transported into a State and remaining there for use, sale, Mr. GROSVENOR. The amendment is perfectly unnecessary, because this says in plain words that the law only applies to that which is transported into a State and retained there for use.

Mr. GIBSON. I wish to make it read—and remaining therein-

Instead ofor remaining therein.

Mr. GROUT. There is no objection to that amendment. I do not think it changes the bill.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. GROUT. Now, Mr. Speaker, I offer the following as a proviso to the bill, not because I think it necessary, for the bill itself, in express terms, goes upon the ground that in order to touch this product by the police power of any State it must be in "the semblance of butter or cheese." But to make it plain, so that there shall be no question as to the power of the State to prohibit it when it comes as oleomargarine, this amendment is offered, as I have stated, after a conference with the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. WILLIAMS].

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Provided, That nothing in this act shall be construed to permit any State to forbid the manufacture or sale of eleomargarine in a separate and distinct form and in such manner as will advise the customer of its real character and free from coloration or ingredient that causes it to look like butter.

Mr. HAINER of Nebraska. Mr. Speaker, I move to strike out the word "customer" and insert the word "consumer."
Mr. GROUT. I have quoted the exact language in the Massachusetts statute, which has already been adjudicated by the Supreme Court, unless I have made a mistake in transcribing. My intention is to follow the exact language of the Massachusetts statute.

Mr. TAWNEY. That particular phrase was not construed by the Supreme Court of the United States.

Mr. GROUT. It was recited in the opinion, and of course may be understood as having in a sense been construed.

Mr. TAWNEY. I am speaking of the word "customer."
Mr. GROUT. I find the word "consumer" is used in the law.
I thank the gentleman from Nebraska [Mr. HAINER] for calling attention to it. The error occurred in a second transcription.
Mr. HAINER of Nebraska. That is all right.
The SPEAKER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the gentleman from Nebraska to the amendment

ment offered by the gentleman from Nebraska to the amendment offered by the gentleman from Vermont.

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

The SPEAKER. The question recurs on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Vermont as amended.

Mr. CONNOLLY. Mr. Speaker, I desire to offer a substitute for the amendment offered by the gentleman from Vermont.

The Clerk read as follows:

Add to the bill the following:
"Provided, The sale in original packages of such articles, produced in any State or Territory, and marked as provided by the laws of the United States, shall not be prohibited by the laws of any other State or Territory."

Mr. CONNOLLY. Mr. Speaker, I understand from the advocates of this bill that the purpose of it is to prevent the sale of oleomargarine and kindred products under fraudulent names. If that be true, this amendment or proviso that I offer to attach to the bill will permit the bill to be operative to that extent; but if the purpose of the friends of this bill is to absolutely prevent the sale of oleomargarine produced in one State in any other State, then gentlemen will not support this proviso. This proviso is that where oleomargarine or kindred articles are produced in any State or Territory, and are marked as provided by the laws of the United States, then their sale shall not be prohibited by the laws of any State. The States retain in their hands the right to make just as stringent regulations as they choose to prevent laws of any State. The States retain in their hands the right to make just as stringent regulations as they choose to prevent fraud in the offering and sale of this kind of article; and when the United States shall have acted and made all the requirements they choose to make, then it provides that those States shall not by their laws override these requirements of Congress and prohibit the sale of that article. It seems to me that if the friends of this bill are in earnest in their declaration that its purpose is simply to prevent the sale of fraudulent food products, they ought to be willing to accept this proviso and retain the power in Congress to make all the limitations it may choose to make from time to time in the future and not give to the individual States the right to override this limitation made by Congress.

Mr. GROUT. Mr. Speaker, this amendment or substitute really says that the bill shall have no effect. In other words, it enacts into statute law the original-package decision and more, too, and repeals or does away with the decision of the Supreme Court in Plumley against the State of Massachusetts, on which this bill is based.

Plumley against the State of Massachusetts, on which this bill is

Mr. CONNOLLY. Will you permit me to ask you a question? Mr. GROUT. Certainly.

Mr. CONNOLLY. You desire to do something more than merely prevent the sale of a fraudulent food product?

Mr. GROUT. Nothing more, as is expressly written in the first lines of the bill, and then as added by the proviso at its close; and this for the purpose of making it so plain that "the wayfaring man, though a fool, may not err therein."

Mr. CONNOLLY. You say when oleomargarine is marked as oleomargarine and is sold in the semblance of butter, your bill prevents that sale.

Mr. GROUT. Precisely so; because they can take the tub off, as I stated yesterday, and set it alongside of butter and sell it anywhere they please as butter, and nobody can tell the difference, where they please as butter, and nobody can tell the difference, and this very thing is done in this city every day.

Mr. CONNOLLY. When the thing is sold in the original package itself? That amendment relates to the original package.

Mr. GROUT. Mr. Speaker, this amendment is all that the oleomargarine factories in Illinois or anywhere else can ask for.

Let us vote it down.

Mr. CANNON. If I may be permitted, I move to strike out the last word. I want to ask my friend if he has taken into consideration the propriety of amending the law of 1886, which reads as follows

That for the purposes of this act the word "butter" shall be understood to mean the food product usually known as butter, and which is made exclusively from milk or cream or both, with or without common salt, and with or without additional coloring matter.

Does the gentleman propose anywhere in this legislation, before he gets through with it, to get rid of that which is to him a pernicious practice of coloring butter as a food product?

Mr. GROUT. The gentleman has asked me a question, and I will try to answer it. Butter has a color of its own—the color of gold—and has had it from time immemmorial, even from the time when Jael, the wife of Heber, the Kenite, "brought forth butter in a lordly dish."

Frauently during the winter months, while the cow is on dry in a lordly dish."

Frequently during the winter months, while the cow is on dry feed, a little coloring is added, to suit the fancy of the consumer, but the article still has its own proper color. Surely there can be no offense in artificially intensifying the color of butter. Nor, in itself, is there anything intrinsically wrong in coloring oleomargarine. The wrong consists in selling the nasty fats of which it is composed, not as oleomargarine, but as butter, which could not be done if the filthy stuff had not the color of butter. Right here is the wrong, right here is the fraud, which can only be committed by this piratical product when it sails under false colors. This is my answer to the gentleman.

Mr. CANNON. Rich, creamy butter, where the animal is fed upon good clover, has a yellow color; but in the absence of such feed the butter is white.

upon good clover, has a yellow color; but in the absence of such feed the butter is white.

Mr. GROUT. No; it is never white.

Mr. CANNON. Oh, yes; substantially white. Now, does my friend propose to continue the practice of taking the white butter, or that which is substantially white, made from the milk of poor, lean cows, and coloring it with anatto or other coloring matter? Is that kind of fraud to still go on, and is that counterfeit butter to continue to demoralize the stomach of the eloquent gentleman from Delaware without rebuke by my friend from gentleman from Delaware without rebuke by my friend from Vermont? [Laughter.]

Mr. GROUT. Mr. Speaker, I compliment the gentleman on his ingenuity in undertaking to bring into this discussion in the closing moments a subject entirely foreign to the matter in issue, If the gentleman thinks there is something wrong in the coloring of butter which he talks about, I shall be glad to sit down with him and philosophize upon that subject early and late; but that has nothing whatever to do with the question now before the House. We are now called upon to say whether it is a proper thing for one State to overhaul an article of food coming from another State "in the semblance" of that which it is not, and tear off its mask and compel it to go upon the worket for wheil it really off its mask and compel it to go upon the market for what it really is; in other words, we are simply to determine the question whether the States have the power to stop a cheat and a fraud in an important article of food, even though it come from another State. This is the whole story. I hope we shall vote down this proposed substitute. The question being taken on the substitute proposed by Mr. Connolly, the Speaker declared that the noss seemed to have it. The House divided; and there were—ayes 78, noes 98.

So the substitute was rejected.

Mr. TRACEY. Mr. Speaker, I send to the desk a substitute for the amendment.

The proposed substitute was read, as follows:

Provided. That nothing herein shall be so construed as to authorize any State or Territory to prohibit the transportation and sale of such articles in original packages when transported or sold in their true character.

Mr. TRACEY. I only desire to say, in support of this amendment, that I am and have always been decidedly in favor of such regulation governing the sale of these imitations of butter as will prohibit their sale except in their true character, but I am equally opposed to legislation which will put it within the power of any State or Territory to prohibit the transportation and sale of these articles which, notwithstanding what has been said here, are not unhealthy or uncleanly. They are largely manufactured in the State in which I live, and their sale is prohibited as butter, and they are sold as oleomargarine or butterine.

Mr. TAWNEY. Is it not a fact that a State now has the power to prohibit the manufacture and sale of any commodity or food product which, in the judgment of the State legislature, is deemed to be deleterious to health?

to be deleterious to health?

Mr. TRACEY. I presume that any State legislature in this country could by law prohibit the transportation and sale within the borders of the State of any article which the legislature should allege to be poisonous or in any manner deleterious to health; but I assume, also, that there is no legislature in this country that would allege for one moment that oleomargarine and butterine, as they are now made, are poisonous or in any sense deleterious to health. I know, personally, that both of those articles are used very largely in the State in which I live, and that they have not been and are not now regarded there as in any manner deleterious to health, but, on the contrary, they are generally regarded as healthful. They constitute an important food product, and are used by a large number of people throughout the country voluntarily and knowingly. I think it is safe to say that there can not be found a place within the State of Missouri in which these articles are sold otherwise than in their true character. They are sold as "oleomargarine" and as "butterine," branded as such on every package of a pound or more, and hence nobody is being defrauded by the sale of those articles, but the people are given an opportunity to buy a substitute for butter at a less price than they would be compelled to pay for butter, and these imitations are regarded as better for consumption than a great deal of the butas they are now made, are poisonous or in any sense deleterious to would be compelled to pay for butter, and these imitations are regarded as better for consumption than a great deal of the butter offered for sale. What I have said, Mr. Speaker, is in no sense a plea for oleomargarine or butterine, but is a protestagainst the enactment of a law which, in my humble judgment, violates a sacred right of every citizen of this country—the right to make and sell without unreasonable restrictions any legitimate article of consumption.

Mr. HENDERSON. Mr. Speaker, I rise to oppose the substitute. The oleomargarine battle which was fought on the for or

Mr. HENDERSON. Mr. Speaker, I rise to oppose the substitute. The oleomargarine battle which was fought on the floor of the House some years ago was one of the hardest contests I ever saw. It lasted for many weeks—one long, continuous, ircless filibuster against the bill. The gentleman from Illinois spoke this morning of "opposition here and there." The opposition did come from "here and there;" it was located chiefly in Kansas City and in Chicago, where vast wealth is massed to make money at the expense of the agricultural interests of this country. [Applause.] The attempt has been made to have it appear that the lard and tallow interests are against the bill pending before us. I represent a district where lard, tallow, and all the dairy products form the leading articles of production: and I do not believe that there is a farmer in my district who is not against this fraud and in favor of this bill—not one. [Applause.]

I hold in my hand a telegram from the dairy commissioner of Iowa, urging the Iowa delegation to stand by and support this bill. No member of the Iowa delegation needed that telegram. A quick ear for the heart beat of the agricultural interests of Iowa was enough to instruct us as to the wishes of our constituents. We have been through this battle before; and I want to say to my distinguished friend from Illinois [Mr. CANNON], who pointed at the frauds in the manufacture of other articles, that the time is fast coming when legislative attention, State and national, must be directed to all of these frauds. And he only "points the moral and adorns the tale" when he gives those illustrations. I say wherever you find a fraud imposing upon the people—running masked batteries into the commerce and trade of this country—do not stand back and howl at the efforts that are being made to strike at the first fraud, but help us now and bring on your batteries and let us attack the others. For one I am for this bill and strike at the first fraud, but help us now and bring on your bat-teries and let us attack the others. For one I am for this bill and every bill that will unmask deception and let us have fair play among the people of this country. [Applause.]

Mr. CANNON. Mr. Speaker, I move to strike out the last word.

I have lived long enough to learn that in matters of legislation when I act on any question in the light of the facts I can very well when I act on any question in the light of the facts I can very well afford to rely for justification upon the facts. It is not necessary for me, nor as I believe for any other gentleman, to ignore the facts in order to justify ourselves upon this question.

What is proposed to be done here? What is the evil proposed to be remedied? There is a product manufactured called oleomargarine. From the place where it is manufactured till it reaches the consumer it is marked carefully, effectively. It is a wholesome product. The men who make it, whether they live in the district of the gentleman from Iowa, or in mine, or elsewhere, and those who furnish the material from which it is made, are American citizens and have the right to follow a lawful calling. And when these men do make that product, then in fairness under the Constitution they have, in my judgment, a right to find a market for it. That they have found, and not under a false pretense, not with a lie in their mouths or in the mouth or the product not with a lie in their mouths or in the mouth of the product they sell.

Now, because they do find that market and great masses of people in the United States knowingly buy that product for a food product, and because, forsooth, it interferes with the makers of other food products, gentlemen are swiftfooted to clothe them-selves with a defense of the farmer and seek to legislate in his be-half. I think that this matter when it comes to be tried upon its mostle if it ever does in the light of the approval or condemnamerits, if it ever does, in the light of the approval or condemna-merits, if it ever does, in the light of the approval or condemna-tion of the people, will not be judged by declamation. I am thank-ful to believe that such is the case.

I can not go with the gentleman who proposes this legislation, notwithstanding its eloquent approval by the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. Henderson], because the legislation (not speaking offensively) is a fraud on its face. Professing to do one thing, with a misrepresentation in its stomach, it seeks to do another thing, and is blessed by the men who deal in declaration and thing, and is blessed by the men who deal in declamation and denunciation. For that reason I shall vote against this bill, and without apology.

I have no fears but that when I am called on to meet my agricultural constituency (and it is peculiarly an agricultural constituency) they will have intelligence enough to understand that their products of tallow and leaf lard are combined and churned their products of tallow and leaf lard are combined and churned through milk and made a cheaper product than butter, going to the homes of multiplied thousands who earn their living in the sweat of their faces, who can not buy fine dairy butter at 30, 40, and 50 cents a pound, but who buy this in preference to bad butter—when they understand that, I will risk my justification. Anyhow, whether I am justified or not, my judgment is that this legislation is vicious, is fraudulent—pretending to do one thing when it in fact does another. And to retain my self-respect, and from my conviction of what is right, I shall vote "no." [Applause.]

plause.]

Mr. HENDERSON. I move to amend by striking out the last word of the substitute. Mr. Chairman, if there is anything I feel badly about it is to see my colleague from Illinois [Mr. Cannon] resorting to declamation. He is the only gentleman who has done so this afternoon. When I came upon the floor he had all the appearance of a man in a high ecstacy on this subject, and was assailing other frauds. I am not here for declamation. I am not here with any prepared speech. A man does not need much preparation when he is attacking a curse of the kind that is being attacked by this bill. The gentleman by his remarks would make it appear that I have attempted to question his motives. He knows me better than that. I attacked some of his references, but I had no intention of attacking his motives, or those of any other member of the House.

other member of the House

Every man here has a right to fight for his own constituents and their interests. But one thing I do know, Mr. Speaker. I know where the head and front of this defense is located. It is located in the great capitalized institutions of Chicago and Kansas City, with Mr. Armour and Mr. Swift and those men who have destroyed the cattle interest of the great West, including my own State, keeping down the price of every slaughtered animal and raising the price of every pound of beefsteak sold in the limits of the United States. It does not need declamation to tell God's simple truths to this House and to the people. I simply mean this, and I allude to my friend from Louisiana, who asked a short time ago why legislation in the interest of one class against another should be enacted, and who said that a State had not a Every man here has a right to fight for his own constituents another should be enacted, and who said that a State had not a another should be enacted, and who said that a State had not a right to do it. In response to him I say that a State has a right to put stripes on its convicts in the penitentiary, and I am in favor of everything in that line that will brand infamy and brand false-hood, so that it may be recognized by the people. Let the violators of law and those who are transgressing the great rights of the people in the commerce of the United States be designated so as to give fair protection to all classes in the country and could as to give fair protection to all classes in the country and equal punishment to all criminal impositions.

But, Mr. Speaker, because I am denouncing the manufacturers and sellers in a fraudulent way, I am not denouncing any gentleman who thinks proper to defend what he believes to be the interest of the tallow and lard raisers in his district. The tallow and lard raisers in my district are milk producers and butter producers as well. But they find a market for their tallow and their lard as such. All we want is fair play, so that these articles can not be reduced in price or value by forgery and fraud.

I withdraw the pro forma amendment.

Mr. MONDELL. Mr. Speaker, from the remarks of gentlemen who have just addressed the House on this subject it seems that this question has resolved itself into one of the interests of the constituents of the gentlemen who have spoken. Now as a Rep. constituents of the gentlemen who have spoken. Now, as a Representative of a constituency who have no direct interest in the manufacture of oleomargarine and who do not produce any considerable amount of dairy products, I feel that my testimony may possibly have some weight in the matter.

In my State we produce no considerable amount of dairy products. When we want to milk a cow in my part of the country, we generally have to rope her and hog-tie her [laughter], and we have no oleomargarine factories; therefore I am not influenced in this matter by considerations of local interest.

But, sir, I object to this legislation for the reason that it seems

But, sir, I object to this legislation for the reason that it seems to me it tends, as the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. Cannon] has just so forcibly stated, to prohibit or restrict, to a considerable extent at least, the sale of a food product which is not considered deleterious to health—a healthful food product—under the pretense of preventing fraud.

Mr. GROSVENOR. Will the gentleman allow an interruption?

Mr. MONDELL. Certainly.

Mr. GROSVENOR. Under the oleomargarine act the manufacture has been largely increased, and the producers are enabled to furnish a very much better quality than in the past. That is the report before the Committee on Ways and Means, sustained by abundant evidence.

by abundant evidence.

Mr. MONDELL. I judge, therefore, that the oleomargarine law was a good law.

Mr. GROSVENOR. Yes

Mr. MONDELL. And I am entirely in favor of any legislation that will prevent fraud of any character or legislation that will prevent the sale of any deleterious or adulterated food product. As I understand it, the State now has the right to provide by legislation that no article shall be sold under misrepresentation as to its true character; that food products shall be sold precisely for what they are, and that these provisions may include olsemarga-rine as well as other food products. But I deny the right of any State to say that I shall not use or purchase or manufacture or sell any healthy food product; and it has never been established either here or elsewhere that oleomargarine is not a healthy food

We are simply by this legislation opening up a vista, the limit of which no man may see, of legislation of this character in covering other articles where the seeming interest of the people on the one side may be contrary to the interest of those on the other.

Mr. NORTHWAY. Will the gentleman allow an interruption?

Mr. MONDELL. Certainly.

Mr. NORTHWAY. Had you rather trust the people of your carps State to legislate on this matter than the people of the United.

own State to legislate on this matter than the people of the United States? Do you think that we are better prepared for the enactment of such a provision than the people of the State?

Mr. MONDELL. I am in favor of allowing local legislation in all matters that do not conflict with the general good of the people of the United States, and do not conflict with the commerce of the United States; but I am opposed to any legislation that in any way prevents the manufacture and free distribution and sale, from one end of this nation to the other, under its true name and properly branded, and sold for what it really is, of any product whatever that is wholesome and not injurious. Therefore I am opposed to all legislation of this character. [Applause and cries of "Vote!" "Vote!"]

Mr. GROUT. Mr. Speaker, I believe the House is ready to vote upon this question. I shall submit no remarks, but desire to have read from the Clerk's desk a telegram which I have just received, which shows that this is not only a question in which the rural districts and agricultural States are interested, but that it is a matter in which business interests everywhere are concerned.

The Clerk read as follows:

BALTIMORE, MD., January 14, 1897.

Hon. WILLIAM W. GROUT,

House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.

Congratulations upon getting your bill up for discussion. Explain that it is a facsimile of the provisions of the Wilson law with respect to liquor, and no novelty in the way of national legislation. We wish you speedy success.

BALTIMORE CITY PRODUCE EXCHANGE.

Mr. GROUT. Now, Mr. Speaker, I ask for the previous question on the bill and amendments, unless some gentleman wishes

The previous question was ordered.

The SPEAKER. The previous question is ordered on the bill, the amendments, and the substitute for the amendments. The question is first on the substitute of the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. TRACEY] for the amendment. The Clerk will report the substitute.

The Clerk read as follows:

Provided, That nothing herein shall be so construed as to authorize any State or Territory to prohibit the transportation and sale of such articles in original packages when transported or sold in their true character.

The question being taken on the substitute, on a division (demanded by Mr. Tracer) there were—ayes 88, noes 100.

Accordingly, the substitute was rejected.

The SPEAKER. The question now is on the amendment of the gentleman from Vermont [Mr. Grout], which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Provided. That nothing in this act shall be construed to permit any State to forbid the manufacture or sale of oleomargarine in a separate and distinct form, and in such manner as will advise the consumer of its real character, free from coloration or ingredient that causes it to look like butter.

The amendment was agreed to.

The question being taken on the engrossment and third reading of the bill as amended, on a division (demanded by Mr. WILLIAMS) there were—ayes 122, noes 88.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Yeas and nays.
The yeas and nays were ordered.

The question was taken; and there were—yeas 126, nays 96, not voting 133; as follows:

YEAS-126. S—120.

Jones,
Kiefer,
Knox,
Lacey, Lefever,
Leighty,
Leisenring,
Leonard,
Lewis,
Linton,
Loudenslager,
Low,
McClure,
McClure,
McCorniek,
McEwan,
McLachlan,
Meiklejohn,
Milnes,
Miss,
McMes,
Miss,
Mi Russell, Conn. Shafroth, Sherman, Simpkins, Smith, Ill. Snover, Southwick, Spalding, Stable, Steele, Steele, Stewart, Wis. Stone, C. W. Strode, Nebr. Strong, Acheson, Aitken, Foote, Gamble, Altken, Apsley, Babcock, Baker, Md. Baker, N. H. Barham, Barney, Bartholdt, Bishon Gardner, Gibson, Gillet, N. Y. Grosvenor, Grout, Grow, Hager, Hainer, Nebr. Bishop, Blue, Boutelle, Hall, Harmer, Harris, Hatch, Heatwole, Boutelle, Bowers, Broderick, Bromwell, Bull, Bult, Dickering, Codding, Cook, Wis. Crowther, Curtis, Iowa Curtis, N. Y. Danford, Daniels, Strode, Nebr.
Strong,
Tawney,
Tayler,
Thomas,
Treloar,
Updegraff,
Van Voorhis,
Wadsworth,
Wanger,
Wellington,
Willis,
Wilson, Idaho
Wilson, N. Y.
Woomer, Heatwole, Henderson, Henry, Conn. Henry, Ind. Hepburn, Hermann, Hicks, Hilborn, Hill, Howe. Milnes, Minor, Wis. Mitchell, Moody, Morse, Northway, Payne, Pearson, Perkins, Phillips, Pitney Hill, Howe, Hubbard, Huff, Hulick, Hull, Hunter, Hurley, Jenkins, Labrage, Danford, Daniels,
De Armond,
Dolliver,
Doolittle,
Ellis,
Fairchild, Woomer, Wright. Pitney, Poole, Pugh, Royse, Fischer, Fletcher, Johnson, N. Dak.

Cooper, Fla.
Cooper, Tex.
Cooper, Tex.
Cox,
Crisp.
Crowley,
Cummings,
Dayton,
Dinsmore,
Erdman,
Goodwyn,
Halterman,
Harrison,
Hendrick,
Hopkins,
Kem Kemdall, Kirkpatrick,
Kleberg, Latimer,
Layton,
Linney,
Little,
Livingston,
Lond NAYS-96. IS-96.
Maddox,
Marsh,
McClellan,
McClellan,
McCreary, Ky.
McCulloch,
McDearmond,
McMillin,
Miller, W. Va.
Mondell,
Money,
Mozley,
Murphy,
Neill,
Ogden,
Otey,
Patterson, Pendleton,
Prince,
Quigg, Raney,
Reeves, Aldrich, T. H. Allen, Miss. Arnold, R. I. Bailey, Baker, Kans. Bankhead, Sparkman, Spencer, Stallings, Stephenson, Stokes, Stokes, Strait, Talbert, Tate, Terry, Tracey, Tracey, Turner, Ga. Turner, Va. Tyler, Van Horn, Walker, Va. Washington Barklead, Bartlett, Ga. Belknap, Bell, Colo. Bell, Tex. Berry, Black. Black, Boatner, Buck, Burrell, Burton, Mo. Calderhead, Washington, Wheeler, White, Williams, Wilson, S. C. Wood, Caldernead, Cannon, Clardy, Clarke, Ala. Cobb, Cockrell, Connolly, Cooke, Ill. Reeves, Richardson, Rinaker, livingston, Woodard, Loud, Woodman. Sayers,

NOT VOTING-133. Reyburn, Robertson, La. Robinson, Pa. Rusk, Russell, Ga. Sauerhering, Scranton, Sattle, Dingley, Dockery, Dovener, Draper, Eddy, Ellett, Abbott. Kulp, Kyle,
Lawson,
Lester,
Long,
Lorimer,
Maguire,
Mahany,
Mahany,
Mahany,
Martin,
McCall, Tenn.
McCall, Tenn.
McLaurin,
McRae,
Mercert,
Meredith,
Meyer,
Miller, Kans.
Milliken,
Miner, N. Y.
Moses,
Murray,
Newlands,
Noonan,
Odell,
Otjen, Overstreet,
Owens,
Parker,
Pickler, Powers,
Price,
Ray, Adams, Aldrich, W. F. Aldrich, Ill. Allen, Utah Allen, Utah Anderson, Andrews, Arnold, Pa. Atwood, Avery, Barriett, N. Y. Beach, Bennett, Bingham, Brewster, Brosius, Brown, Evans, Faris,
Fenton,
Fitzgerald,
Foss,
Fowler,
Gillett, Mass.
Graff,
Griffin,
Griswold,
Hadley,
Hanly,
Hart,
Hart,
Hart,
Heiner, Pa.
Hemenway,
Hitt,
Hooker,
Howard,
Howell,
Hulling, Hutcheson,
Hyde,
Johnson, Ind.
Johnson, Ind.
Joy,
Kerr, Settle, Shannon, Shaw, Shuford, Skinner, Smith, Mich. Smith, Mich.
Sorg,
Sperry,
Stewart, N. J.
Stone, W. A.
Strowd, N. C.
Sulloway,
Sulloway, Brown, Brumm. Sulloway,
Sulzer,
Swanson,
Taft,
Thorp,
Towne,
Tracewell,
Walker, Mass.
Watson, Onlo
Wilber,
Wilber,
Wilson, Ohlo
Yoakum. Catchings, Clark, Iowa Clark, Mo. Coffin, Colson, Cosson, Cooper, Wis. Corliss, Cousins, Cowen, Crump, Culberson, Curtis. Kans. Dalzell, Denny, De Witt, So the bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time. The following pairs were announced:

Until further notice:

Mr. Cousins with Mr. Cowen.

Mr. Hitt with Mr. McRae. Mr. Watson of Indiana with Mr. Meyer. Mr. Wilber with Mr. Sorg.

Mr. WILBER with Mr. SORG.
Mr. McCall of Tennessee with Mr. McLaurin.
Mr. Tracewell with Mr. Russell of Georgia.
Mr. Hemenway with Mr. Miner of New York.
Mr. Hanly with Mr. Moses.
Mr. Taft with Mr. Robertson of Louisiana.
Mr. Crump with Mr. Culberson.
Mr. Kulp with Mr. Abbott.

For this day:

Mr. Curtis of Kansas with Mr. Owens.
Mr. Corliss with Mr. Denny.
Mr. Bingham with Mr. Dockery.
Mr. Foss with Mr. Yoakum.
Mr. Milliken with Mr. Lester.

Mr. Pickler with Mr. Swanson. Mr. Sulloway with Mr. Tyler.

Mr. Scranton with Mr. Rusk. Mr. Avery with Mr. Fitzgerald. Mr. Mercer with Mr. Hart.

Mr. Faris with Mr. Kyle.
Mr. Faris with Mr. Kyle.
Mr. William A. Stone with Mr. Ellett.
Mr. Huling with Mr. Price.
Mr. Reyburn with Mr. Maguire.
Mr. Johnson of Indiana with Mr. Meredith.

On this question:

On this question:
Mr. CLARK of Iowa with Mr. SULZER.
Mr. SMITH of Michigan with Mr. TOWNE.
Mr. Long with Mr. CATCHINGS.
Mr. BROSIUS with Mr. JOY.
Mr. WATSON of Ohio with Mr. GILLETT of Massachusetts.
Mr. CURTIS of Kansas. Mr. Speaker, I desire to withdraw my vote. I find I am paired with the gentleman from Kentucky, Mr. OWENS. Were he present, I should vote "yea."
Mr. BOATNER. Mr. Speaker, my colleague, Mr. ROBERTSON, is detained from the House by illness. I do not know how he would vote.

would vote.

Mr. DOCKERY. Mr. Speaker, I am paired with the gentleman from Pennsylvania, Mr. Bingham. If he were present, the Grout amendment having been adopted, I should vote for the bill.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. Mr. Speaker, I am paired with the gentleman from Minnesota, Mr. Towne. If he were present, I would vote "yea" and he would vote "nay."

Mr. FOOTE. Mr. Speaker, my colleague, Mr. Bennett, was called out a few moments ago. If present, he would vote "yea."

Mr. BROMWELL. Mr. Speaker, my colleague, Mr. Taft, has been called home by important business. He would have voted for the bill if present.

for the bill if present.

The result of the vote was then announced as above recorded.

The bill was accordingly engrossed and read the third time.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the passage of the bill.

The question was taken; and the Speaker announced that the aves seemed to have it.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Division!

The House proceeded to divide.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Mr. Speaker, I withdraw the call for a division.

The SPEAKER. The call for a division has been withdrawn.

The ayes have it, and the bill is passed.

On motion of Mr. GROUT, a motion to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed was laid on the table.

VETO MESSAGE-EASTERN JUDICIAL DISTRICT OF TEXAS.

The SPEAKER laid before the House the following veto message of the President of the United States; which was read:

of the President of the United States; which was read:

To the House of Representatives:

I return herewith without my approval House bill No. 9489, entitled "An act to constitute a new division of the eastern judicial district of Texas, and to provide for the holding of terms of court at Beaumont, Tex., and for the appointment of a clerk for said court."

It appears that terms of court are now held at four different places within the eastern judicial district of Texas, and that parties having business in the courts are not seriously inconvenienced under present arrangements.

Both the Federal judge and district attorney in this district express themselves in opposition to the bill as unnecessary and an interruption to the transaction of the large volume of business now pending and constantly coming before the court.

I have before me certificates of the clerks of the present divisions of the courts showing that during the last five years the counties which it is proposed shall constitute the new division have contributed but forty-two cases to the calendars of the court.

Conclusive proof is also before me that the additional terms of court provided for in this bill would so interfere with the terms already appointed in the existing divisions that the proper administration of the civil as well as the criminal law would be impracticable.

The criminal docket of the terms held at Paris is so large that under present arrangements and with the utmost industry trials can not now be as promptly disposed of as the ends of justice require. This condition would be further aggravated if terms of the court should be held at Beaumont on the dates proposed in this bill, since they are fixed at such times as to necessarily curtall the period now devoted to the Paris terms.

On the grounds stated, and because I am unable to discover how the public interests can possibly be promoted by the proposed legislation, I am constrained to withhold my approval of the bill under consideration.

GROVER CLEVELAND.

EXECUTIVE MANSION, January 14, 1897.

Mr. COOPER of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I ask that the veto message, together with the bill, be referred to the Committee or the Judiciary

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Texas asks that the veto message, together with the bill, be referred to the Committee on the Judiciary. Without objection, it will be so ordered. There was no objection.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE.

By unanimous consent, leave of absence was granted as follows: To Mr. ARNOLD of Pennsylvania, for five days, on account of sickness in his family.

To Mr. Cooper of Wisconsin, indefinitely, on account of sick-

To Mr. Moses, indefinitely, on account of sickness. Mr. GROUT. I move that the House do now adjourn.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED.

Mr. HAGER, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that they had examined and found truly enrolled bills and a joint resolution of the following titles; when the Speaker signed the

A bill (S. 3050) to validate the appointments, acts, and services of certain deputy United States marshals in the Indian Territory, and for other purposes;
A bill (S. 1448) to withdraw from the Supreme Court jurisdiction of criminal cases not capital and confer the same on the cir-Cuit courts of appeals;

A bill (S. 3210) granting a pension to Anna P. Johnson; and Joint resolution (S. R. 133) authorizing Surg. P. M. Rixey, of the Navy, to accept from the King of Spain the grand cross of naval merit with the white distinction mark, in recognition of services rendered to the officer and sailors of the Santa Maria who were injured by an explosion on that ship.

INDIAN APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. SHERMAN, from the Committee on Indian Affairs, reported the bill (H. R. 10002) making appropriations for the current and contingent expenses of the Indian Department, and for fulfilling treaty stipulations with various Indian tribes, for the

Mr. DOCKERY. I desire to reserve all points of order.

The SPEAKER. All points of order are reserved. The bill will be ordered printed and referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. PAYNE. I move that the House adjourn

Mr. PAYNE. I move that the House adjourn.
The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Vermont has already moved that the House adjourn.

The motion to adjourn was then agreed to; and accordingly (at 4 o'clock and 53 minutes p. m.) the House adjourned.

EXECUTIVE COMMUNICATIONS.

Under clause 2 of Rule XXIV, the following executive com-munications were taken from the Speaker's table and referred as

A letter from the Acting Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting a copy of a communication from the Secretary of War submitting an estimate of appropriation for the Springfield Arsenal, Springfield, Mass.—to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

A letter from the Acting Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting a copy of a communication from the Attorney-General submitting an estimate of appropriation for rent of quarters for the Court of Claims—to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

A letter from the Acting Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting a copy of a communication from the Attorney-General, submitting an estimate of an appropriation for establishing a site for a penitentiary at Fort Leavenworth, Kans.-to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES ON PRIVATE BILLS.

Under clause 2 of Rule XIII, private bills and resolutions were

Under clause 2 of Rule XIII, private bills and resolutions were severally reported from committees, delivered to the Clerk, and referred to the Committee of the Whole House, as follows:

By Mr. LOUDENSLAGER, from the Committee on Pensions: The bill (H. R. 9683) granting a pension to Rachel Waddell, of Newport, Tenn. (Report No. 2514.)

By Mr. BLACK, from the Committee on Pensions: The bill (H. R. 1388) for the relief of Mrs. Isabella V. Jett. (Report No. 2515.)

2515.)

By Mr. STALLINGS, from the Committee on Pensions: The bill (H. R. 8898) to increase the pension of Elizabeth Wellons. (Report No. 2516.)

PUBLIC BILLS, MEMORIALS, AND RESOLUTIONS.

Under clause 3 of Rule XXII, bills, resolutions, and memorials of the following titles were introduced and severally referred as

By Mr. WALKER of Virginia (by request): A bill (H.R. 9977) for the incorporation of an association for the mutual protection and benefit of Government employees—to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

By Mr. WATSON of Ohio: A bill (H. R. 9978) to promote the safety of railroad employees by the blocking of frogs, etc.—to the Committee on Railways and Canals.

By Mr. SAYERS: A bill (H. R. 9979) to provide for a permanent census—to the Committee on Appropriations.

By Mr. WELLINGTON: A bill (H. R. 9980) to amend an act to regulate the practice of pharmacy in the District of Columbia—to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

By Mr. GAMBLE (by request): A bill (H. R. 9981) granting lands to the State of South Dakota to aid the construction of the Dakota Pacific Railroad Company from Sioux Falls, S. Dak., to Granger, Wyo.—to the Committee on the Public Lands.

By Mr. HENDERSON: A bill (H. R. 9982) to insure a full bench in the Court of Claims for the hearing of the cases entitled "The United States against La Abra Silver Mining Company and others," and "The United States against Alice Weil and others"—to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. MONDELL: A bill (H. R. 9983) to authorize the entry and patenting of lands containing petroleum and other mineral oils under the placer-mining laws of the United States—to the Committee on the Public Lands.

By Mr. FLYNN: A bill (H. R. 10000) for the payment of arrears of interest on Chickasaw trust funds—to the Committee on Indian of interest on Chickasaw trust funds—to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

By Mr. CURTIS of New York: A concurrent resolution (House Con. Res. No. 66) to print 8,000 copies of the chronological list of battles in which troops of the permanent establishment have participated from the organization of the Army in 1789-to the Committee on Printing.

PRIVATE BILLS, ETC.

Under clause 1 of Rule XXII, private bills of the following titles were presented and referred as follows:

By Mr. BELL of Colorado: A bill (H. R. 9984) for the relief of Thomas H. Breen—to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

By Mr. BINGHAM: A bill (H. R. 9985) for the relief of Oliver C. Bosbyshell, late superintendent of the United States mint at Philadelphia, Pa.—to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. BURRELL: A bill (H. R. 9986) for the relief of Alfred U. Whiffen—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. CLARK of Missouri: A bill (H. R. 9987) granting a pension to Edward Hownsom—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. CLARK of Missouri: A bill (H. R. 9987) granting a pension to Edward Hownsom—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. DINSMORE: A bill (H. R. 9988) for the relief of estate of Jesse Hollingshead, deceased, late of Benton County, Ark.—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. HURLEY: A bill (H. R. 9989) for the relief of Ella S. Claussen, widow of Peter J. Claussen, deceased—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. MILLER of Wort Virginia A bill (H. R. 9889).

By Mr. MILLER of West Virginia: A bill (H. R. 9990) to pension Absolom Maynard—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. SPENCER: A bill (H. R. 9991) for the relief of Mrs.
Sarah Martin, of Holly Springs, Miss.—to the Committee on War

Claims. Also, a bill (H. R. 9992) for the relief of Burwell V. McGuffee, of Hinds County, Miss.—to the Committee on War Claims.

Also, a bill (H. R. 9993) for the relief of L. D. McNair, of Hinds County, Miss.—to the Committee on War Claims.

Also, a bill (H. R. 9994) for the relief of Olivia F. Montgomery, of Hinds County, Miss.—to the Committee on War Claims.

Also, a bill (H. R. 9995) for the relief of the estate of William O. Mallor decord late of Hinds County, Miss.—to the Committee on War Claims.

Also, a bill (H. R. 9995) for the relief of the estate of William O. Moseley, deceased, late of Hinds County, Miss.—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. WALKER of Virginia (by request): A bill (H. R. 9996) to correct the military record of Capt. S. C. Means—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. WHEELER: A bill (H. R. 9997) for the relief of the heirs of A. C. Barton—to the Committee on War Claims.

Also, a bill (H. R. 9998) to reimburse Dew M. Wisdom—to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. WOOD: A bill (H. R. 9999) to grant an honorable discharge to Charles W. Hammond—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. FLYNN: A bill (H. R. 10001) for the relief of Stewart

By Mr. FLYNN: A bill (H. R. 10001) for the relief of Stewart & Co.—to the Committee on Claims.

PETITIONS, ETC.

Under clause 1 of Rule XXII, the following petitions and papers were laid on the Clerk's desk and referred as follows:

By Mr. ACHESON: Resolutions of the manufacturers of plumbers' ironware, for the passage of a law protecting free labor from the injurious effects of convict-labor competition—to the Committee on Labor.

By Mr. ADAMS: Petition of Rev. T. A. Fernley and other citizens of Philadelphia, for the passage of Senate bill No. 1675, to prohibit the interstate transportation of obscene matter by any agency—to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

agency—to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce, By Mr. AVERY: Memorial of I. Winslow Ayer, relating to his claim pending before Congress—to the Committee on Claims. By Mr. BABCOCK: Memorial of the Civic Center, of Washington, D. C., praying for a commission to investigate the contamination of Potomac River water—to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

By Mr. BELL of Colorado: Petition of the Society of the Sons of the Revolution in the State of Colorado, for the publication of the records of the Revolutionary war—to the Committee on

By Mr. BARRETT: Resolution of the New England Furniture Exchange, favoring a permanent nonpartisan tariff commission—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of Lucien Beebe & Son and 14 other leather dealers in the State of Massachusetts, protesting against an increase of duty on East India tanned skins—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. COOK of Wisconsin: Resolutions of the Board of Trade By Mr. COOK of Wisconsin: Resolutions of the Board of Trade of Baltimore, Md., protesting against the action of the Senate Committee on Foreign Relations in agreeing to report favorably a joint resolution to recognize the independence of the Republic of Cuba—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

Also, resolution of the National Guard of Wisconsin, unanimously adopted at their meeting in Milwaukee, Wis., January 8, 1897, in support of Senate bill No. 2849, to promote the efficiency of the militia—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Also, petition of the publishers of the Leader, of Waupun, Wis., protesting against the passage of House bill No. 4566, relating to second-class mail matter—to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads.

and Post-Roads.

By Mr. COUSINS: Resolutions adopted by the Iowa Academy of Science, December 29, 1896, in opposition to Senate bill No. 1552, of Science, December 29, 1896, in opposition to Senate bill No. 1552, "for the prevention of cruelty to animals in the District of Columbia."—to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

By Mr. DINSMORE: Papers relating to the claim of William H. Engles—to the Committee on War Claims.

Also, memorial of the Arkansas River Deep Water Convention of Fort Smith, Ark., for the improvement of Sabine Pass, via Port Arthur—to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

By Mr. FITZGERALD: Resolution of the Boston Merchants' Association, of Boston, Mass., disapproving of the attitude of the Senate Committee on Foreign Relations in regard to the affairs of Cuba, and protesting against interference in the contest now going on upon the island—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs, Also, resolutions of the Massachusetts State Pharmaceutical Association, relating to the tax on alcohol—to the Committee on Association, relating to the tax on alcohol—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. HARMER: Memorial of Matua Lodge, No. 160, Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, of Philadelphia, Pa., protesting against the passage of House bill No. 9120—to the Committee on against the passage of House bill No. 9120—to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

By Mr. HENDERSON: Paper from the warden of the Fort Madison (Iowa) Penitentiary, opposing House bill No. 6116, to protect free labor from competition with convict labor—to the Committee on Labor.

By Mr. HUNTER: Petition of various citizens of Bowling Green, Ky., asking for the passage of Senate bill No. 2962, for the relief of the book agents of the Methodist Episcopal Church South—to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. HURLEY: Petition of the Young Men's League of the Lafayette Avenue Presbyterian Church, Brooklyn, N. Y., against the mode of warfare prosecuted by the Spanish troops in Cuba—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

Also, petition of the Union Pearl Works, of Brooklyn, N. Y., relating to the duties on pearl goods—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

and Means.

By Mr. LOUDENSLAGER: Petition of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union of Salem, N. J., representing 100 members, urging the passage of Senate bill No. 2485, to recognize Sunday as a day of rest in the District of Columbia—to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

By Mr. MEIKLEJOHN: Report of a committee appointed at a meeting of the citizens of Omaha, Nebr., held December 30, 1896, protesting against Spanish rule in Cuba and urging speedy action on the part of the United States in behalf of Cuban independence—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

By Mr. STEWART of Wisconsin: Petition of homesteaders in Ashland and Bayfield counties, Wis., Ashland land-office district, requesting immediate action on measures now pending, and such further measures as may be necessary to relieve their condition and to do them justice—to the Committee on the Public Lands.

Also, resolutions of the Wisconsin Valley Lumbermen's Association, favoring a duty of $2 per thousand feet upon lumber—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, resolution of the Wisconsin National Guard Association, favoring the reorganization of the National Guard and the militia of the United States—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Also, resolutions of the Federated Trades Council of Wisconsin; also of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union of Ashland, Wis., in behalf of Cuban liberty and independence—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

mittee on Foreign Affairs.

Also, petition of the Chamber of Commerce of Milwaukee, Wis., deprecating the action of the Senate Committee on Foreign Relations in regard to Cuba—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

FRIDAY, January 15, 1897.

The House met at 12 o'clock m. Prayer by the Chaplain, Rev. HENRY N. COUDEN

The Journal of the proceedings of yesterday was read and approved.

UNION PACIFIC RAILWAY LANDS IN UTAH.

Mr. ALLEN of Utah. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the resolution which I send to the desk.

The resolution was read, as follows:

Whereas there are many tracts of land situate in the State of Utah which were a part of the grant made by the United States to the Union Pacific Railway Company, patents for which are withheld by the Department of the Interior; and Whereas most of these lands were sold by said railway company to bona fide purchasers who are in possession of them and who have made valuable improvements on said lands: Therefore, Resolved, That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, directed to report to this House the cause of the omission to issue patents to the lands so granted to and sold by said railway company.

The SPEAKER. In there objection to the present consideration.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of this resolution?

Mr. HALL. I should like to hear some explanation of the reso-

Mr. ALLEN of Utah. It simply asks the Secretary of the Interior to inform the House why patents are held up in the cases of lands which were granted to the Union Pacific Railway in the State of Utah and which have been sold to bona fide purchasers.

Mr. HALL. Does the resolution come from the Committee on Public Lands?

Mr. ALLEN of Utah. It has not been referred to the committee. It simply asks for information.

Mr. HALL. Mr. Speaker, a similar resolution has already been passed by the House, and the Secretary has made his return.

Mr. ALLEN of Utah. Yes; but that resolution applied only to lands in Kansas.

Mr. HALL. I do not object to the consideration of the resolu-

Mr. PAYNE. I understand the gentleman from Utah says that this resolution simply asks for information.

Mr. ALLEN of Utah. Yes, sir.
The resolution was adopted.

ELIHU JONES.

Mr. BLUE. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill which I send to the desk.

The bill (H. R. 5981) was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place the name of Elihu Jones, of Potwin, Butler County, Kans., late captain Company G. Eighth Illinois Infantry, on the pension roll, and pay him a pension of $50 per month from and after the passage of this act.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of this bill?

Mr. ERDMAN. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I would like to hear the report.

The report (by Mr. Kirkpatrick) was read, as follows:

The report (by Mr. KIRKPATRICK) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Invalid Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 5981) granting a pension to Elihu Jones, late captain Company G. Eighth Illinois Infantry Volunteers, having fully examined and considered the facts presented, respectfully report:

Elihu Jones served as a member of Battery G, Fourth Regiment United States Artillery, from December, 1853, until March, 1860, when he was discharged under general orders. He spent some months in recruiting, and entered the volunteer service in April, 1861, as a member of Company G, Eighth Illinois Volunteers, becoming captain of the company in February, 1863, and serving in that capacity until October 7, 1884. He was wounded in the right arm by a shell, and is now drawing a pension of $10 per month for that disability. His application for additional pension on account of disease of the eyes was rejected by the Pension Office because he failed to prove treatment therefor in the service, on the ground that said disease existed prior to enlistment. There is no question raised as to the claimant's having lost the sight of one eye years ago, and having almost entirely lost the use of the other. There is an abundance of testimony showing that he was a brave and faithful soldier, and a sober and temperate man, who took unusual care of his health.

ful soldier, and a sober and temperate man, who took unusual care of ms health.

His title to an increase of pension turns upon the point whether disease of eyes existed prior to enlistment. The Pension Office held that it did, basing this action upon a special investigation, which the examiner says was hurriedly made. An examination of the evidence on this point satisfies your committee that this action was erroneous, and that the disease of eyes originated in the service, as claimed. This belief is corroborated by the fact that claimant was able to perform efficient service for more than three years, and was not troubled seriously with his eyes until near the close of his service, as well as by the further fact that claimant served over seven years in the Regular Army prior to enlisting in the volunteer service, and was a sound man during that period.

Your committee believe Captain Jones equitably entitled to a higher pension, on account of his disability from his wound and his blindness, and we respectfully recommend the passage of the bill, after being amended by striking out the word "of," in line 4, by striking out "Potwin, Butler County, Kans.," in line 5, and by striking out all after the word "month." in line 7, and by striking out all after the word "Jones," in the title of the bill.

Mr. ERDMAN. Mr. Speaker—

Mr. ERDMAN. Mr. Speaker—

Mr. BLUE. Mr. Speaker, if the gentleman from Pennsylvania will permit me, I desire to say, in further explanation of the bill, that this man is represented to me to be now entirely blind and in indigent circumstances. He is so disabled as to require the constant aid of an attendant. He served several years in the Regular Army, and, in view of his condition, he would be entitled to $72 a month, but this bill grants only $50 a month.

Mr. ERDMAN. Has this bill been considered in Committee of the Whole?

Mr. BLUE. No, sir.
Mr. ERDMAN. Then I object. I intend to object to all pension bills that have not been considered in Committee of the

GEORGE H. PLANT.

Mr. SWANSON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (S. 1083) which I send to the desk.

The bill was read, as follows:

For the relief of George H. Plant, of the District of Columbia.

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and is hereby, authorized and directed to pay to George H. Plant, of the District of Columbia, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $5,218.55, the same being the amount found to be due to him by the Court of Claims for losses and damages sustained by him by reason of a collision between the U. S. S. Gettysburg and the steamboat Lady of the Lade, on the Potomac River, and to be received by him in full satisfaction of all claims and demands in consequence of said collision.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of this bill?

tion of this bill? Mr. PAYNE. Let the report be read, Mr. Speaker, subject to Mr. PAYNE. Let the report be read, Mr. Speaker, subject to the right to object.

The report (by Mr. Denny) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Claims, to whom was referred the bill (8. 1083) for the relief of George H. Plant, submit the following report:

This bill is the same as H. R. 1845, now pending in the House and previously reported by this committee with a favorable recommendation.

Your committee therefore recommend that this bill be substituted for said House bill, and that said House bill lie on the table.

The report upon House bill 1845 by Mr. DENNY was also read.

as follows:

The Committee on Claims, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 1845) for the relief of George H. Plant, have had the same under consideration, and report it back to the House with the recommendation that it do pass.

The facts in this case are fully set out in House Report No. 1808, made at the third session of the Fifty-third Congress by Mr. Loup, and said report is hereby adopted as the report of your committee, with the explanation and statement that the present bill conforms to recommendations made in said report by Mr. Loup, and should be passed as introduced. The aforesaid report is as follows:

[House Report No. 1808, Fifty-third Congress, third session.]

The Committee on Claims, to whom was referred the bill (8.429) for the relief of George H. Plant, have had the same under consideration, and report it back to the House with the recommendation that it do pass.

The facts in this case are all fully set out in Senate Report No. 210, made at the second session of the Fifty-third Congress by Mr. Pasco, which is as follows:

[Senate Report No. 210, Fifty-third Congress, second session.]

[Senate Report No. 210, Fifty-third Congress, second session.]

This claim was considered by the committee in the Fifty-second Congress, was favorably reported with amendments, and passed the Senate, but no final action was taken in the House of Representatives.

The present bill is the same introduced into the Fifty-second Congress, and the committee adopt the report made to the Senate in that Congress.

The present bill is subject to the same objections that the committee made to the former bill, and the same amendments are necessary in order to make it conform to the views heretofore expressed by the committee.

When thus amended, the committee recommend that the bill do pass.

[Senate Report No. 964, Fifth-second Congress, first session.]

The committee on Claims, to whom was referred the bill (S. 707) for the relief of George H. Plant, of the District of Columbia, have carefully considered the same, and submit the following report thereon:

The claimant in 1874 was the owner of a steamboat named the Lady of the Lake, then plying upon the waters of the Potomac River. On the 30th day of May of that year the boat was injured in a collision with the U. S. S. Getysburg. On the 9th day of June the Secretary of the Navy appointed a court of inquiry to investigate all the circumstances relating to the collision and report its causes and upon whom the blame, if any, should rest. The findings of the court will be given in full further on in this report. Though some blame was cast upon the officers of the Lady of the Lake, the court found the officers of the Gettysburg responsible for the collision. Subsequently the Treasury Department ordered an investigation to be made by the supervising inspectors of steam vessels. They reported, on the 17th day of July, 1874, that the pilot in charge of the Lady of the Lake compiled with all the rules and regulations for the government of pilots applicable to the case, and that he was exonerated from all blame in the premises.

But no relief followed the findings of the two Departments, and the claimant found that he could only receive compensation for his damage and loss by legislative action. Accordingly a bill was introduced into the Senate in his behalf in the Forty-sixth Congress, and a similar bill in each successive Congress till the Forty-eighth, when, on the 27th day of February, 1884, the claim was referred to the Court of Claims under the act of March 3, 1883.

On June 2, 1890, the court filed its findings of fact, and they were transmitted to the Senate June 6, 1890, and appear in Miscellaneous Document, Fifty-first Congress, first session, No. 159. The report of the case is here given in full:

[Court of Claims. Congressional case No. 32. George H. Plant vs. The United States.]

At a Court of Claims held in the city of Washington on the 2d day of June, A. D. 1890, the court filed the following findings of fact, to wit:

FINDINGS OF FACT.

The claim or matter in the above-entitled case was transmitted to the court by the Senate Committee on Claims on the 27th day of February, 1884.

Messrs. Goode & Goode, esqs., appeared for claimant, and the Attorney-General, by Henry M. Foote, esq., his assistant, and under his direction, appeared for the defense and protection of the interests of the United States. The case having been brought to a hearing on the 19th of May, 1890, the court, upon the evidence and after considering the briefs and arguments of counsel on both sides, finds the facts to be as follows:

About sundown on May 30, 1874, a collision occurred on the Potomac River, nearly opposite Fort Washington, between the U. S. S. Gettysburg and the Lady of the Lake, under the following circumstances:

The Lady of the Lake had been down the river with an excursion party from Washington, consisting of about 600 persons, and was on her return trip.

The Gettysburg, commanded by Lieutenant McRitchie, was going down.

When first sighted the steamers were about three-fourths of a mile apart. At that time the Lady of the Lake was on the Virginia side of the riyer and the Gettysburg on the Maryland side.

By the law of the road each steamer was required to keep to the right in passing, but the law also permitted them, by signal agreement, to keep to the left.

The officers of the Lady of the Lake preferred to hold their course on the Virginia side, because by so doing they avoided to some extent the ravid our.

passing, but the law also permitted them, by signal agreement, to keep to the left.

The officers of the Lady of the Lake preferred to hold their course on the Virginia side, because by so doing they avoided to some extent the rapid current of the ebbing tide. They also supposed the Gettysburg would prefer the Maryland side, because the channel there was deepest and the assisting current strongest.

Therefore, when the steamers were about half a mile apart, the pilot of the Lady of the Lake gave two blasts of her steam whistle, which was the proper signal to request that the steamers might pass by, each keeping to the left. The pilot of the Gettysburg immediately responded by two blasts of the whistle, which was the proper signal of assent to the proposal. Each steamer, then held her course for about a quarter of a mile. Then the Gettysburg, by order of Lieutenant McRitchie, gave one blast of her whistle, which is the proper signal for each vessel to keep to the right, and immediately ported her helm, thus directing her course to the Virginia side of the river. The Lady of the Lake immediately responded with two blasts of the whistle, thus indicating her wish to pass on the left, as already agreed, and held her course. A collision was imminent, and both steamers reversed their engines, but collision could not then be avoided.

The bow of the Gettysburg struck the Lady of the Lake on her starboard bow, crushing in the upper and lower decks. No persons were injured.

Both Lieutenant McRitchie and the claimant agree in their testimony that the signals were given and heard by the officers of each steamer, as above detailed.

The Gettysburg, by porting her helm and directing her course to the Virginia side of the river without timely warning, caused the collision.

II.

III.

June 9, 1874, the Secretary of the Navy constituted, by the following order, a naval court of inquiry:

a naval court of inquiry:

To Commander John H. Russell,
United States Navy, Rockville, Md.:

By virtue of the authority conferred by the "act for the better government of the Navy of the United States," approved July II, 1882. I hereby appoint Commander John H. Russell president, Commander Montgomery Sicard and Lieut. Commander Frederick Rodgers members, and First Lieut. George C. Reid, of the Marine Corps, judge-advocate of a court of inquiry, which is ordered to convene at the navy-yard, Washington, D. C., on Thursday, the 11th day of June, 1874, for the purpose of investigating all the circumstances relating to the collision which took place on the Potomac River, near Fort Washington, on or about the 30th day of May, 1874, between the U. S. S. Gettysburg and the steamboat Lady of the Lake. In performing this duty the court will study closely the "Rules of the road" and act of Congress relating thereto, and state the cause or causes that brought about the collision, with its opinion as to where the blame, if any, should rest.

Given under my hand at the Navy Department of the United States this 9th day of June, in the year 1874.

GEORGE M. ROBESON.

GEORGE M. ROBESON, Secretary of the Navy.

June 19, 1874, the court found as follows:

That both the U. S. S. Gettysburg and the steamboat Lady of the Lake were subject to the act of Congress, approved April 29, 1864 (page 188, Naval Laws), for preventing collisions on the water, and in addition to the above the court find that the Lady of the Lake was subject to certain rules laid down by the Board of Supervising Inspectors in pursuance of the act of Congress of February 28, 1871.

There is no conflict between these two sets of "rules," but the rules of the Board of Supervising Inspectors.

As regards the facts connected with the collision, the weight of evidence, in the opinion of the court, establishes the point that the vessels, at the time of the exchange of their first whistle signals, must be considered as coming under article 18 of the "rules" for preventing collisions on the water (Neval Laws, page 161), and also under rule 1 of the "Rules issued by the Board of Supervising Inspectors for the government of pilots;" that is, they were meeting end on, or nearly so. In this position the law requires that the helms of both vessels be put to port, and inasmuch as this course was not pursued by the Lady of the Lake, the court deem that vessel to have acted in violation of law, and find that her pilot committed an error of judgment in putting his helm to starboard.

At the same time, as the wording of the law (article 13), "end on, or nearly end on," implies a certain margin for judgment on the part of pilots, the court are of the opinion that the pilot of the Lady of the Lake, though technically in the wrong, can not in the circumstances be considered as being very censurable.

As the vessels are considered as coming within the scope of article 13 of the law for preventing collisions on the water, the court find that the Gettysburg acted in violation of law in answering the Lady of the Lake, though technically in the wrong, can not in the circumstances be considered as being done those acts renders her responsible for the collision.

The pilots of th

the Road, page 161, Naval Laws.

JOHN H. RUSSELL,

Commander, United States Navy, President Naval Court of Inquiry.

GEORGE C. REID,

First Lieutenant, United States Marine Corps, Judge Advocate.

The Treasury Department also authorized an investigation by the supervising inspectors of steam vessels, who made the following report:

OFFICE OF U. S. LOCAL INSPECTORS OF STEAM VESSELS,

Baltimore, July 17, 1874.

Baltimore, July 17, 1874.

SIR: In compliance with your instructions we proceeded to Washington, D. C., to take the testimony of witnesses in the collision between the U. S. S. Gettysburg and steamer Lady of the Lake, which occurred on the Potomac River, off Fort Washington, on the evening of 30th of May, 1874, and, after having received said testimony, both on the part of the officers of the Lady of the Lake together with a number of disinterested passengers of said steamer, we find that the pilot in charge of the Lady of the Lake complied with all the rules and regulations for the government of pilots applicable to said case, and is therefore exonerated from all blame in the premises.

(They report also their inability to get the officers of the Gettysburg to testify.)

JAMES D. LOWRY, WILLIAM O. SAVILLE, United States Local Inspectors of Steamers, Baltimore District.

JOHN HENSHAW, Esq., Supervising Inspector of Steam Vessels, Third District.

IV.

May 30, 1874, the claimant was the owner of the Lady of the Lake, except a small interest, valued at $2,500, which he had agreed to transfer to —— Partridge, the captain of the boat. This interest had not been paid for, and claimant arranged with Captain Partridge for it and took it back.

At the time of the collision the Lady of the Lake was engaged in the business of carrying freight and passengers between Washington and Norfolk and taking excursion parties up and down the river. It was the busy season of the year and her business was large and profitable.

The cost of repairing the boat amounted to $2,216.85. The loss in earnings while undergoing repairs amounted to $3,000.

After resuming her regular trips her earnings, in consequence of the interruption and loss of confidence in her safety, were much diminished. This loss can not be accurately calculated, but may be safely estimated at $1,500.

BY THE COURT.

Filed June 2, 1890.

Test, this 5th day of June, A. D. 1890. [SEAL.]

JOHN RANDOLPH, Assistant Clerk, Court of Claims.

Assistant Clerk, Court of Claims.

No action was taken upon the findings and opinion of the court during the Fifty-first Congress, except to refer the case to this committee with a bill to carry them out. During the time that the matter has been pending in the Senate and this committee and the Court of Claims various bills have been introduced into the House of Representatives for the claimant's relief, but no final action has ever been there taken.

The Court of Claims came to the same conclusion as to the responsibility for the collision that was reached in the former investigations, and it only remains to be determined whether an appropriation shall be made in favor of the claimant; and if so, in what amount.

It is true that the Government does not hold itself generally responsible for acts of wrong or negligence on the part of its subordinate officers or agents, but this rule has not always been considered as applicable to cases of maritime collisions. It has been decided by the Supreme Court in the case of The Siren (7 Wall., 152) that a claim for damages exists against a vessel of the United States guilty of a maritime tort as much as if the offending vessel belonged to a private citizen. In ordinary cases, however, such a claim can not be enforced, because, for reasons of public policy, jurisdiction is withheld from the courts.

There has been a growing disposition of late years to give a general recognition to cases of damage from collisions and to treat them as essentially different from ordinary cases of negligence and wrongdoing on the part of Government agents, servants, and officials. This arises in part from the great power and authority which is necessarily given to an officer commanding a vessel, and it is argued, too, that when the Government mingles on terms of equality with others on the high seas and navigable inland waters, the security of the citizen requires that the rules laid down for others should be observed by its own officers, commanding its own vessels, and that these rules should be enforced against all alike, and that private persons should receive reparation for any injury done by their violation by officers of the United States.

In England the present practice is to file a libel in rem, upon which the court directs a letter to be written to the lords of the admiralty requesting an appearance on behalf of the Crown. This is generally given, and the case proceeds to judgment. It is insisted that the final decrees are little more than awards, so far as the Government is concerned, but the suits are instituted and conducted on the hypothesis that claims are created against the offending vessels by the collision, and it is presumed that the Government will satisfy a decree rendered by its own tribunals in a case in which it has voluntarily appeared.

Many in our own country have favored a general law for the trial of such cases in our courts when the United States is alleged to be the offending party. Although no such law has ever been passed, the Government has in many cases, by special laws and in appropriation acts, made provision for paying damages to those who have suffered loss from collisions when the vessel causing the injury belonged to the United States.

It is true that in the present case the findings of the Court of Claims do not have the same force as a judgment, but the claims the presented his case there with the permission of the Senate and in accordance with law. The United States was represented by an assistant of the Attorney-General, and the case was duly defended, and a careful review of the findings shows that they are in accordance with the facts of the case so far as the party i was duly derended, and a care in review of the intings shows that they are in accordance with the facts of the case so far as the party in fault is concerned.

After the matter has proceeded thus far with the consent of those who represented the Government, and who had authority under the law to act, the committee think that the claimant in this particular case should receive reimbursement for the damage which has resulted directly from the collision, without waiting for the enactment of a general law. The court finds that the cost of repairing the boat was $2.216.85, and that the actual loss in earnings while she was undergoing repairs was $3,000. These sums amount in the aggregate to $5.216.85, and the committee recommend the appropriation of this sum in full satisfaction of the claim.

The court estimates a further loss of $1,500 in the earnings of the boat in consequence of the loss of public confidence in her safety after she resumed her regular trips; but the committee think that this estimated resulting damage is too remote to be considered favorably. Besides, the claimant in his petition only asks "that he be paid the amount for his time and expenses incurred in placing his steamboat in good condition for navigation." He speaks of "divers gains, profits, and advantages which would have accrued to him" from his contracts and business, but expressly states that he makes no claim except for his time and expenses as stated.

To carry out the views of the committee the following amendments are necessary:

In line 6 strike out "six" before "thousand," and "seven" before "hunnecessary:

In line 6 strike out "six" before "thousand," and "seven" before "hundred" and insert in the first place "five" and in the second place "two."
Add at the end of the bill as printed "and to be received by him in full satisfaction of all claims and demands in consequence of said colision."

I wish to

Mr. PAYNE (before the conclusion of the reading). I wish to ask the gentleman whether there is anything in the latter part of the report which changes the facts as so far shown? It appears from the report so far that while the officers of the Gettysburg were guilty of wrong, and while there is no doubt that their negligence contributed to the accident, still the officers of the Lady of the Lake were also guilty of contributory negligence. I wish the gentleman would state if there is anything further in the report which shows that the officers of the Lady of the Lake were free from negligence.

Mr. SWANSON. The gentleman from California [Mr. Loud] made the report, and I will ask him to answer the gentleman's question.

question.

Mr. LOUD. Mr. Speaker, I wish to say in relation to this case that I have given it very careful consideration in the Committee on Claims during two Congresses, and if there ever was a just claim presented to Congress I believe this to be the one. If the gentleman from New York be at all nautical—and I know that he is at the head of a committee which has something to do with nautical matters—he will understand from the facts presented that the Lade of the Lake was coming up against the stream and that the Lady of the Lake was coming up against the stream and was entitled, under the rules governing navigation, by giving notice of that fact, to take advantage of the eddy along the shore. The captain of the Lady of the Lake signaled that he desired to take that course, and the Gettysburg answered the signal and accepted it Cathalana desired for the signal and accepted it. Subsequently the Gettysburg desired, for some reason which does not appear, to take a course which she was not entitled to does not appear, to take a course which she was not entitled to take, and she signaled back to the Lady of the Lake reversing her former acceptance of the signal. The Lady of the Lake was then unable, as the whole evidence goes to show, by reason of the speed of the current, to change her first signal, so the accident became inevitable. No action on the part of the officers of the Lady of the Lake, when the later signals of the Gettysburg were made, could possibly, according to the report of the inspectors, have prevented the collision. If the case were that of a private individual against another private individual, or that of one corporation against another corporation, I do not believe there is a court in this country but would hold that the Lady of the Lake could recover damages.

court in this country but would noid that the Lady of the Lake could recover damages.

Mr. PAYNE. Mr. Speaker, it is true that at the outset the Lady of the Lake and the Gettysburg were each on the wrong side of the river according to the law. It is also true that, according to the regulations, the Lady of the Lake had the privilege of offering to continue on that side by blowing two whistles, which she did. It is further true that the Gettysburg responded with two whistles, accepting the offer of the Lady of the Lake. Afterwards the Gettysburg gave another signal, which the Lady of the Lake did not accept, but responded with two whistles, signifying that she would continue her first course.

Now, if the Lady of the Lake had obeyed the second signal or warning of the Gettysburg and instead of trying to keep on her course had changed her course, which it would have been natural course had changed her course, which it would have been natural for her to do under the rules and regulations, it does not appear from the findings either of the Court of Claims or of the court of inquiry of the Navy Department that the collision would not have been avoided. On the contrary, it does appear from the findings of the court of inquiry of the Navy Department that that court censured the officer of the Lady of the Lake, blaming him for his share of the collision. The court does not find him free from negligence, but, on the other hand, there is some language in the findings showing that he was at least guilty of contributory negligence; and, of course, if such was the fact, there could be no right of recovery. right of recovery

I think, therefore, that this bill should not come up under this order, but should take its place upon the Calendar and have ample time for further consideration by the House. I therefore object.

Mr. LOUD. I will say that the rule which the gentleman from New York undertakes to lay down might be applied to every case.
The SPEAKER. Objection is made.

CONTESTED-ELECTION CASE-BENOIT VS. BOATNER.

Mr. JOHNSON of Indiana submitted the following resolution;

Mr. JOHNSON of Indiana submitted the following resolution; which was read, considered, and adopted:

Resolved, That Committee on Elections No. 2, to which the contested-election case of Alexis Benoit against Charles J. Boatner, from the Fifth Congressional district of Louisiana, has been referred, be, and is hereby, instructed and authorized to proceed to the consideration of said case, and, having first afforded to said parties a fair opportunity to be heard as to the merits of the same, to report to the House their conclusions with respect to such case in time to afford to the House an opportunity to determine the same during the present session of Congress.

On motion of Mr. JOHNSON of Indiana, a motion to reconsider the vote by which the resolution was adopted was laid on the

WILLIAM MORGAN AND HARRISON MOORE.

Mr. HALL. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill which I send to the desk.

The bill (S. 1320) to confirm the title to certain lands in Wil-

The bill (S. 1320) to confirm the title to certain lands in William Morgan and Harrison Moore, and to require the issue of patents therefor, was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the entry on March 24, 1882, by William Morgan, of lot No. 21 of the southwest quarter of section No. 18, in township No. 16, of range No. 8 east, in the State of Kansas, under the act of March 16, 1880, for which full payment has been made and final certificates issued, be, and hereby is, confirmed, and the patent therefor shall be duly issued.

SEC. 2. That the entries by Harrison Moore on December 31, 1880, under said act of March 16, 1880, of lot No. 15 of the northwest quarter of section No. 19, and lot No. 22 of the southwest quarter of section No. 18, both in said township No. 16, of range No. 8 east, in said State, and on January 5, 1881, under the act of July 5, 1876, of lots Nos. 18 and 14 of section No. 19, in said township and range, for each of which tracts full payment has been made and final certificates issued, be, and hereby are, confirmed, and the patents therefor shall be issued.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of this bill?

Mr. PAYNE and Mr. LACEY. Let us hear the report.

Mr. PAYNE and Mr. LACEY. Let us hear the report.

The report (by Mr. Underwood) was read, as follows:

The committee on the Public Lands, to whom was referred the bill (8.1320) to confirm the title to certain lands in William Morgan and Harrison Moore and to require the issue of patents therefor, have duly considered the same and report it back and recommend its passage.

The facts in this case, as shown by the records, are as follows:
Harrison Moore, on December 31, 1880, entered, at Topeka (Kans.) land office, lots No. 15 of the northwest quarter of section 19 and No. 22 of southwest quarter of section 18, both in township 18, range 8 east, under the act of Congress of March 16, 1889, and on January 5, 1881, entered, at the same land office, lots Nos. 13 and 14 of the northwest quarter of said section 19, in same township and range; under act of July 5, 1876, made payment in full for each tract, and on July 16, 1881, received final certificates. The said Moore and his wife, after the issuance of such final receipts, conveyed said lands to Charles A. Scott, who, with his wife, on March 13, 1882, conveyed said lands to William Morgan. The said William Morgan thereafter, on March 24, 1882, entered at said land office, under the act of March 16, 1880, lot No. 21 of said southwest quarter of said section 18, in same township and range, and received final certificate on January 14, 1884; and the said William Morgan and his wife, on 11th day of September, 1883, conveyed all of said tracts to Harrison Wilcoxsen. The total area entered by Moore was 190.54 acres, and as the parties in entering these lands are restricted to 189 acres, said last entry was held for cancellation.

It clearly appears that these tracts of land were entered in good faith, full payment made to the proper land officers without objection, the proof made as required by law, and final certificates issued on each entry. It is equally clear that no harm or injury can result to anyone by confirming these entries and requiring patent to be issued.

Th

There being no objection, the House proceeded to the considera-tion of the bill; which was ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

On motion of Mr. HALL, a motion to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed was laid on the table.

PATRICK DOUGHERTY.

Mr. WADSWORTH. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (H. R. 4943) to remove the charge of desertion standing against the name of Patrick Dougherty, Company A, Thirteenth New York Volunteer Infantry.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of War be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to remove the charge of desertion standing against the name of Patrick Dougherty, late a private in Company A, Thirteenth Regiment New York Volunteer Infantry, and to issue to him an honorable discharge as of date of 27th day of April, 1863.

Mr. LOUD. Let us hear the report. Mr. WADSWORTH. I ask that the Clerk read the portions of the report which I have marked; they are the essential parts. The Clerk read as follows:

The Clerk read as follows:

The Committee on Military Affairs, to whom was referred the bill (H. R-4943) to remove the charge of desertion standing against the name of Patrick Dougherty, Company A, Thirteenth New York Volunteer Infantry, having had the same under consideration, would report thereon as follows:

It is shown by the records of the War Department that this soldier was enrolled and mustered into service January 23, 1862, as a member of the Thirteenth New York Infantry Volunteers, to serve two years; that he deserted April 27, 1863, and never returned thereafter, although he owed service until January 23, 1864; that on December 15, 1863, he enlisted, in violation of the twenty-second (now fiftleth) article of war, in Company E, Eighth New York Heavy Artillery Volunteers, to serve three years; that he appears to have served faithfully under this enlistment until June 30, 1865, when he was mustered out of service as a member of Company I, Tenth New York Infantry Volunteers, to which he had been transferred; that the charge of desertion standing against this soldier upon the records of the Thirteenth New York Infantry Volunteers can not be removed under existing law (act of Congress approved March 2, 1889) for the reason that the period of his absence from the service exceeded four months.

It appears from affidavits presented to your committee that the Thirteenth New York Infantry Volunteers was organized in April, 1861; that the beneficiary, Patrick Dougherty, enlisted in such regiment as a recruit, and was mustered into service January 23, 1862, to serve two years; that the desertion with which he is charged occurred April 27, 1863.

september 2, 1801, addressed to A. R. Cooper, springwater, N. I., which is described in a letter from Lieutenant Hess. one of the affiants, it is stated as follows:

"In reply to your communication of the 23d instant, I am directed to say that men who are being recruited to fill up the old regiments of volunteers are received for the unexpired term of service of the regiments of volunteers. This copy purports to have been signed by George D. Ruggles, Assistant Adjutant-General, and the correspondence on the part of Lieutenant Hess indicates that it has a bearing upon the enlistment of this beneficiary.

The testimony contained in the affidavits of the two comrades who served in the same regiment with the beneficiary are deemed by your committee sufficient to justify the conclusion that Dougherty returned to his command and was with it on its way to Rochester to be mustered out. The affidavits of those engaged in the recruiting service at the time Dougherty was enrolled sustains his contention that he intended only to enlist for the unexpired term of service of the regiment, and hence he should have been mustered out with the regiment.

The regiment having been mustered out in May, 1863, and the alleged desertion being charged as occurring on April 27, 1863, and said Dougherty having reenlisted December 15, 1863, in Company E, Eighth New York Heavy Artillery Volunteers, and having been transferred to Company I, Tenth New York Infantry Volunteers, and having been transferred to Company I, Tenth New York Infantry Volunteers, and having been transferred to Company I, Tenth New York Infantry Volunteers and having a been transferred to Company I, Tenth New York Infantry Volunteers in May, 1863, and the furlough which he claims to have had, and concerning which his comrades testify was actually granted, did probably cover the time from April 27 until the muster-out of the regiment on May 18, 1863.

Your committee therefore recommend that the bill do pass.

There being no objection, the House proceeded to the consideration of the bill, which was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed. On motion of Mr. WADSWORTH, a motion to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed was laid on the table.

BASIL MORELAND.

Mr. BOWERS. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (H. R. 1475) for the relief of Basil Moreland. The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That there be paid, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to Basil Moreland the sum of $2,212, in full for all claim he may have against the United States for his land and improvements in Blue Earth County, Minn., taken by the United States for the Winnebago Indians.

Mr. PAYNE. I should like to hear some explanation of this bill. Mr. BOWERS. The report will give a full explanation. The report (by Mr. FISCHER) was read, as follows:

The report (by Mr. FISCHER) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Indian Affairs, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 1475) for the relief of Basil Moreland, have had the same under consideration, and find that a bill identical with the bill under consideration was favorably reported from this committee in the last Congress on December 21, 1894, and passed the House February 13, 1895, and passed the Senate March 2, 1895. (See page 3136, CONGRESSIONAL RECORD of said date.)

This bill, with many others, passed the Senate too late to receive the Presi dent's signature.

Your committee report back the bill and recommend that it do pass.

The report of this committee, made to the House December 21, 1894, on this bill is herewith made a part of this report, and sets forth fully the merits of the case.

[House Report No. 1533, Fifty-third Congress, third session.]

[House Report No. 1533, Fifty-third Congress, third session.]

The Committee on Indian Affairs, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 4704) for the relief of Basil Moreland, having considered the same and accompanying papers, respectfully submit the following report:

That the committee find the facts to be as stated in Senate Report 575, Forty-sixth Congress, second session, which said report is hereto annexed and made a part of this report, and is as follows:

"In March, 1854, Basil Moreland settled upon the unsurveyed public lands in the Territory of Minnesota, on Blue Earth River. He built a good house and fenced and cultivated a considerable portion of said land. At the time of this settlement no right of preemption as to the unsurveyed public lands existed, but in that same year—August 4, 1854—Congress passed an act authorizing such preemption. On the 17th of March, 1856, Moreland, having continued to reside on and cultivate said land, went to the land office with his witnesses to prove his settlement and right of preemption, and offered to pay the money, which was refused by the register of the land office upon the ground that this land was embraced in the boundary recently set apart as a home reservation for the Winnebago Indians in accordance with a treaty of February 27, 1855. He continued to reside upon and cultivate said land until the fall of 1856, when he was evicted by the agent of said Indian tribe. In the fall of 1861, the Indians having been removed to another reservation, he returned to said farm, and continued to reside on and cultivate the same until it was sold for the benefit of the Winnebagoes for $1,212 in 1863.

"The treaty with the Winnebagoes did not locate the reservation, but provided it should be on Blue Earth River, and it was surveyed and located so as to include Moreland's land, after Moreland's settlement, and after the passage of the act of August 4, 1854, by which he acquired a clear vested right to preempt said land, and of which his expulsion could not divest him; and when he returned to it in 1861 his rights were as complete as when he was forcibly expelled from it.

"He made another effort to perfect his title by an appeal to the Secretary of the Interior, Hon. Caleb Smith, and offered to locate the land with a military land warrant. The Secretary, after a full examination of the case, in April, 1862, decided that Moreland was entitled to preempt said land, and directed the Commissioner of the Land Office to allow him to perfect his title by locating the same with a military land warrant, which was done, and the patent actually issued, dated April 10, 1863, but was arrested in its transmission by order of Secretary of the Interior. P. Usher, who had succeeded Caleb Smith in the Department of the Interior.

"The entry was canceled and the land warrant returned on the ground that the treaty with the Indians was the supreme law of the land. The reasoning of the Secre

There being no objection, the House proceeded to the considera-tion of the bill, which was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed. On motion of Mr. BOWERS, a motion to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed was laid on the table.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

A message from the Senate, by Mr. Platt, one of its clerks, announced that the Senate had passed bills of the following titles; in which the concurrence of the House was requested:

A bill (S. 3375) authorizing the construction of a bridge across the Columbia River in the State of Washington; and

A bill (S. 3494) providing for an examination of the improvements at the Pass of Aransas, Texas.

The message also announced that the Senate had passed with amendments the bill (H. R. 3656) providing for free homesteads on the public lands in Oklahoma, and reserving the public lands for the purpose, asked a conference with the House on the bill and amendments; and had appointed Mr. Pettigrew, Mr. Jones of Arkansas, and Mr. Allen as the conferees on the part of the Senate.

HUGH M'LAUGHLIN.

Mr. HUFF. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (H. R. 1515) for the relief of Hugh McLaughlin. The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of War be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to issue an honorable discharge to Hugh McLaughlin, late sergeant Company B, Fourth Regiment New Jersey Veteran Volunteer Infantry.

There being no objection, the House proceeded to the considera-tion of the bill, which was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

EMPLOYMENT OF ADDITIONAL FOLDERS.

Mr. THOMAS. Mr. Speaker, I demand the regular order. Mr. TRACEY. Mr. Speaker, I desire to submit a report from the Committee on Accounts. I am directed by the committee to report back the resolution which I send to the desk, accompanied by a report in writing, and recommend its passage.

The SPEAKER. The resolution will be read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved. That the Doorkeeper of the House be, and he hereby is, authorized to appoint fifteen additional folders, to serve during the session and fifteen days thereafter, and pay them a salary at the rate of $75 per month out of the contingent fund of the House.

The report was read, as follows:

The Committee on Accounts, to whom was referred the accompanying resolution, authorizing the Doorkeeper of the House to appoint fifteen additional folders to serve during the session and fifteen days thereafter, and pay them a salary at the rate of $75 per month out of the contingent fund of the House, beg to report that they respectfully recommend the passage of the same.

The committee find upon investigation that the public necessity for the appointment of this additional force grew out of the demolition of the building used heretofore, in which as large number of volumes of public documents was stored, by the storm, which made it necessary to remove all public documents to another building and rewrap about 50,000 documents, the original wrappers having been partially or wholly destroyed.

Mr. DOCKERY. Does that include the Lacey amendment that the House acted upon a short time ago?

Mr. TRACEY. Mr. Speaker, this is not new legislation; and inasmuch as this matter was thoroughly discussed on a previous occasion, I ask the previous question on the adoption of the report.
Mr. PAYNE. Before that, Mr. Speaker, I would like to ask the

Mr. PAYNE. Before that, Mr. Speaker, I would like to ask the gentleman a question. Is this substantially the same resolution that the House rejected a week or two ago?

Mr. BAKER of New Hampshire. It is substantially the same.
Mr. TRACEY. In response to the gentleman from New York, I will say that it is the same with this exception, that that amendment provided for the employment of this additional force for three or three and a half months, about, and this only allows the employment for sixty days. The committee find it to be absolutely necessary that this resolution shall be adopted.

Mr. PAYNE. How many employees are provided for?
Mr. TRACEY. Fifteen.
Mr. PAYNE. And for sixty days?
Mr. TRACEY. Yes, sir. The amount of the expenditure, I would say, is $2,250; and the committee regard the employment of these men as absolutely necessary.
Mr. PAYNE. It seems to me that the gentleman ought not to press the matter now, and that the House ought not to reverse its ress the matter now, and that the House ought not to reverse its former action on this proposition, unless there is something new presented or some additional reason given to justify such action. It will be remembered that the House rejected a similar proposi-

Mr. MILES. What is the amount involved?

A MEMBER. Something over $2,000.

Mr. TRACEY. Mr. Speaker, I demand the previous question.

The question was taken; and on a division there were—ayes 9,

So the demand for the previous question was rejected.
Mr. LACEY. Mr. Speaker, I now offer the same amendment that was adopted by the House before, with some slight modifica-

The SPEAKER. The amendment proposed by the gentleman from Iowa will be read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Add to the resolution:
"Provided, That the Doorkeeper shall select such employees from States and Territories not now represented on the Doorkeeper's roll."

Mr. LACEY. That is the same provision that was adopted before by the House, and then suddenly, for some reason, my friend lost his interest in the proceedings the moment after the amendment was adopted. Gentlemen concluded that they did not want the folders at all if this limitation was imposed on their employment. But the House adopted the amendment, and it seems to me that the House should recognize at least the justice of the appointment of these employees from those States that are of the appointment of these employees from those States that are of the appointment of these carries on the appointment of these carries on not now represented.

Mr. WILLIAM A. STONE. Mr. Speaker, if the gentleman will allow me a moment, I will ask if he does not know it to be a fact that if that amendment is adopted it will require the selection of all of these employees—every one of them—from the south

Mr. LACEY. I am not aware of that fact; but if it is true that these States are absolutely unrepresented in the employment of the House, I think it only presents a greater reason for the adoption of the amendment.

Mr. HEPBURN. Why cut out your own State?
Mr. LACEY. This does not cut out any State; it simply proposes to do justice to all of them.
Mr. TRACEY. Mr. Speaker, I desire to say a word in this con-

I confess I am somewhat surprised at the course taken by my esteemed friend from Iowa [Mr. Lacey] with reference to this resolution. When the resolution was presented the first time by the Committee on Accounts a few days ago, it met with the same reception that it now meets with. I think I can safely say from the record that has been made by the committee during this Congress that I am warranted in claiming that the committee would not authorize or indorse any unnecessary expenditure of the public money. We have been criticised frequently for refusing to authorize such expenditures in cases where members have deemed it necessary. But we have never authorized or turned down a resolution submitted to us without first making an investigation of the facts connected with it and basing our action on that investigation.

I can say to the House truthfully that the committee has endeavored to discharge the duty imposed upon it by the House faithfully and solely with a view to serving the public interests and not with a view to serving any private interests of any kind or character.

Now, Mr. Speaker, when this resolution was first presented, your committee took the trouble to investigate the facts upon which the additional force was asked, and in making that investigation your committee discovered that a public exigency had been created by an occurrence over which Congress had no control, that is, by a storm which destroyed the building that had been occupied for several years as a storage house for the folding department. That building was destroyed by the storm, and it necessitated the removal of about 400,000 public documents to another room. That necessarily took time and employed the force at the disposal of the superintendent of the folding room in a business outside of the ordinary public duties devolving on that force. It imposed upon them the performance of work that took a number of days of their time away from the duties to which they ordinarily devote themselves. they ordinarily devote themselves.

they ordinarily devote themselves.

In addition to that, the wrappings on 50,000 or more of these documents were either wholly or partially destroyed, so that the documents must be rewrapped, and yet no additional force has been provided in order to meet that new demand, a demand not created by Congress, but by the elements. Now, inasmuch as the regular force that has been employed were thrown behind in their regular work by the imposition on them of this absolutely necessary demand created by the elements, and inasmuch as the documents the wrappers of which have been destroyed must be rewrapped, the superintendent of the folding room, after careful investigation, assured the committee, in a letter which was read to this House when this proposition was before it a few weeks to this House when this proposition was before it a few weeks ago, that it would require the full and constant employment of these fifteen additional men for a period of at least sixty days to enable them to get even with the condition the department was in when the storm occurred.

Mr. BAKER of New Hampshire. What is the objection to the amendment?

Mr. TRACEY. Now, as to the amendment offered by the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. LACEY], I desire to say that the amendment is intended to destroy the virtue of the resolution, if there is any virtue in it. That is the object and purpose of it. There is not now a single State north of Mason and Dixon's line unrepresented on the Doorkeeper's roll.

Mr. BAKER of New Hampshire. May I ask the gentleman a

question?

Mr. TRACEY. Certainly.

Mr. BAKER of New Hampshire. Will the gentleman name one from the States of New Hampshire, Iowa, or Oregon?

Mr. TRACEY. Yes; there is at least one from each of those Will the gentleman name

Mr. BAKER of New Hampshire. Not a solitary one.
Mr. JOHNSON of North Dakota. Will the gentleman name one from North Dakota?

Mr. TRACEY. There is one from every State north of Mason and Dixon's line.

Mr. BAKER of New Hampshire. If they are there, they are charged to those States without authority. It is not true in any proper sense of the word.

Mr. TRACEY. Mr. Speaker, I desire to say that a large majority of the States, whether Democratic or Republican, are represented now on this roll. There may be a few of the States unrepresented. I may have made my statement too broad when I said that every one of the States north of Mason and Dixon's line was represented on that roll; but I do know, from an investigation of my own, that there can not be more than two or three of those States unrepresented north of that line. I do know that the State Now, Mr. Speaker, I desire to yield five minutes to my friend from Pennsylvania [Mr. WILLIAM A. STONE].

Mr. DOCKERY. I should like to be heard when the proper time arrives

Mr. TRACEY. Very well. Mr. WILLIAM A. STONE. Mr. Speaker, in reference to the Mr. WILLIAM A. STONE. Mr. Speaker, in reference to the merits of this resolution, it is simply a question as to whether these publications shall be properly cared for, whether this work, made necessary by a storm, shall be done or not. So far as I am personally concerned, it does not make any difference to me. The sonally concerned, it does not make any difference to me. The work of the Government ought to be done, but I do not like to see the members on this side of the House take this means of disposing of this resolution. When an amendment is made that all of the fifteen appointments shall be made from States now not represented on the Doorkeeper's roll, naturally our friends on the other side of the House will support that resolution and that amendment because they will get nearly all of those fifteen appointments. Therefore I can see how our friends on the other side of the House will help my friend from Iowa [Mr. LACEY] to amend this resolution. Now, if the employees are not necessary, let us vote the resolution down without any help from our friends on the other side. the other side.

Let us not amend it in such a manner as that we shall need their assistance to dispose of a matter that we are entirely competent to dispose of without their help.

Mr. BAKER of New Hampshire. May I ask the gentleman a

question?

Mr. WILLIAM A. STONE. Yes, sir. Mr. BAKER of New Hampshire. Is it not true that when this resolution was up for consideration some time ago that you called

mr. TAWNEY. After the amendment was adopted.

Mr. WILLIAM A. STONE. I did; and will do so again if it is so amended as to give all of the appointments to States represented by our friends on the other side of the House.

Mr. BAKER of Now Househim. But the installation

Mr. BAKER of New Hampshire. But that is not a necessary consequence.

Mr. WILLIAM A. STONE. I do not believe that our majority is so small that we ought to make these appointments from Democratic States

Mr. MILES. Will the gentleman allow me to ask him a question?

Mr. WILLIAM A. STONE. Yes.

Mr. WILLIAM A. SIONE. 168.

Mr. MILES. Do you propose to exclude "the gentlemen on the other side" practically from an opportunity to participate in legislation the purpose of which is to benefit the public service?

Mr. WILLIAM A. STONE. Not at all. I do not think it ought to be done in an amendment to a resolution that emanates from the Committee on Accounts.

Mr. TRACEY. I yield five minutes to the gentleman from

Mr. TRACEY. I yield five minutes to the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. Dockery].

Mr. Dockery. Mr. Speaker, I am obliged to the gentleman from Missouri for his courtesy in yielding me five minutes, but I do not think I will occupy that time. I regret very much that my friend from Pennsylvania [Mr. WILLIAM A. STONE] seems to be disposed to exclude this side of the House from any part in the settlement of the issue raised by the amendment of the gentleman from Lowe [Mr. Lacey]. I want to call attention Mr. Speaker. from Iowa [Mr. Lacey]. I want to call attention, Mr. Speaker, to one fact that seems to be conceded. If the evidence of the Doorkeeper and superintendent of the folding room is at all reliable, and I suppose it is, a public necessity exists for the employment of this f suppose it is, a public necessity exists for the employment of this force. The interest of the public service, according to the testimony of these officials, will be subserved by the passage of this or a similar resolution. So that the contest here resolves itself into an unseemly scramble—I trust my friends will pardon the criticism—an unseemly wrangle on the other side as to who shall distribute the fifteen places carried by this resolution.

Mr. MILES. And further, that we shall not be permitted to participate in this issue when it is for the heapfit of the rubble service.

Mr. MILES. And further, that we shall not be permitted to participate in this issue when it is for the benefit of the public service.

Mr. DOCKERY. That is one feature. My friend from Maryland says that the Democratic side will be excluded by the suggestion of the gentleman from Pennsylvania from any part in the settlement and disposition of this question.

Mr. WILLIAM A. STONE. I do not make any such suggestion as that. We do not need to be taken care of by an amendment such as that proposed by the gentleman from Iowa.

Mr. DOCKERY. I suggest to the gentleman that if it be true, as he suggested, that these employees will be appointed by this side of the House, then we ought to have something to say in the matter. But I assume that the gentleman was not serious in making the suggestion, and that no Democrat will be appointed.

Mr. WILLIAM A. STONE. I did not mean that; but if the amendment should prevail, then no State, with the exception of one or two States, can participate in the distribution except Democratic States, as nearly all the Republican States are now represented.

sented.

Mr. BAKER of New Hampshire. I do not know that it will be necessary to take any from those States.

Mr. WILLIAM A. STONE. Or else take the whole fifteen from the State of New Hampshire.

Mr. BAKER of New Hampshire. There is Oregon and half a dozen other States that have not a man on these rolls unless he was put there without authority.

was put there without authority.

Mr. MEREDITH. You need not give them to New Hampshire.
I can dispose of them in the Eighth Virginia district.
Mr. McMILLIN. Mr. Speaker—
Mr. TRACEY. I yield five minutes to the gentleman from New York [Mr. PAYNE].
Mr. McMILLIN. It strikes me—
The SPEAKER. One moment. The gentleman from Missouri statistics the floor and yields to the contleman from New York.

The SPEAKER. One moment. The gentleman from Missouri retains the floor and yields to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. PAYNE. Mr. Speaker, I do not believe we ought to hamper the officers of this House in their appointments by directing that they shall select these new employees from any particular locality. I do not believe it is best to inaugurate that precedent in the House of Representatives. I think that we ought to have confidence enough in our officers to allow them to select their subordinates without regard to locality. It may happen that there is not a man from the State of California on this roll. Does the gentleman propose to have the Doorkeeper send to California and get some one or two men to help refold these documents? If the exigency exists which the committee have reported, they exigency exists which the committee have reported, they ought to go to work at once; and the Doorkeeper ought to be allowed to select men who can perform this intricate work, even if he gets some of them from the District of Columbia; and he ought to be allowed full discretion in the matter. With all due respect to the gentleman from Iowa, I think that an amendment of this kind is ridiculous upon a motion such as has been presented by the gentleman from Missouri. I hope the amendment will be voted down. Then it will be for the House to determine whether the necessity exists for these fifteen additional employees.

If the facts are as stated by this committee, it would seem that there is a necessity for more employees to take care of these public documents, and I suppose that, although the Treasury is running behind, we can still afford to pay whatever is required to preserve the documents already printed. But let us give the officers of the House full discretion to select their own subordinates without confining them to any particular leading in the nates, without confining them to any particular locality in the United States, whether that locality be great or small.

Mr. TRACEY. Mr. Speaker, if there is no other gentleman who desires to make any remarks, I will call for the previous

Mr. McMILLIN. I ask the gentleman to yield me five minutes.
Mr. TRACEY. Very well.
Mr. McMILLIN. Mr. Speaker, it will be remembered by the House that a resolution similar to this was introduced and brought up for consideration two weeks ago or more. The amendment that is suggested now, providing the method by which the men should be selected for this work, and limiting the appointments to those States that had no patronage on the roll, was adopted, and immediately it turned out that a number of gentlemen who had been zealous supporters of the resolution turned the other way and helped to kill it. Now, it struck me at the time that that action on their part threw some light upon the probable importance of the resolution. It struck me that if there was any necessity for an increase of the force, as was represented, an objection to the mere method of the appointment of the additional employees ought not to be sufficient to influence those gentlemen to turn their backs on the resolution after that amendment had been adopted. It is not a very important matter who shall receive these appointments. The question in which the Government is specially interested is whether they are really needed; and for one I think I am within the bounds of reason when I say that there has not been furnished, during the present session of Congress, a quantity of speeches or documents to be folded as large as is usually supplied at an ordinary session. It strikes me, therefore, that we can probable of the session of t ably get along without this increase of force, and if we can we ought to do it. The gentlemen did not think we needed them before, after the method of appointment was changed. If, however, the increase is necessary, and these additional men must be employed, I see no objection to those States that have not been recognized. nized in the distribution of loaves and fishes being permitted to approach the basket.

Mr. TRACEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield one minute to the gentle-man from New York [Mr. FAIRCHILD], who desires to offer an amendment

Mr. FAIRCHILD. Mr. Speaker, I offer an amendment to the amendment.

The amendment to the amendment was read, as follows:

Strike out "States and Territories," at the end of the amendment, and insert "Congressional districts."

[Laughter.]
The question being taken on the amendment to the amendment, the Speaker declared that the ayes seemed to have it.
Mr. CHICKERING and Mr. TRACEY asked for a division.
The House divided; and there were—ayes 19, nose 75.

So the amendment to the amendment was rejected.

Mr. TRACEY. Now, Mr. Speaker, I ask for the previous question on the resolution and the amendment.

Mr. LACEY. Mr. Speaker, I make the point of order that the gentleman from Missouri can not demand the previous question.

gentleman from Missouri can not demand the previous question.

I have the right to close the debate.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Iowa was entitled to the control of the discussion after the refusal of the House to order the previous question, but the gentleman did not assume control.

Mr. LACEY. I did not care to claim it.

The SPEAKER. On the contrary, the gentleman seems to have left it in the hands of the gentleman from Missouri, who the Chair approach has the right to move the previous question, under the supposes has the right to move the previous question, under the circumstances Mr. TRACEY. Mr. Speaker, if the gentleman from Iowa desires to make any remarks I have no objection to his taking five or ten minutes.

or ten minutes.

Mr. LACEY. I shall probably not occupy more than three minutes. I trust that the House will not regard this as an unseemly scramble for office. We all understand the complaint that has been made heretofore in regard to the distribution, locally, of the patronage of the present House. If it were under the civil-service law, geography would have to be taken into consideration, and the offices would be apportioned in a general way over the country. It is well known that certain States have been ignored altogether. I am not complaining of the method by which it was done, but the House has already acted on the idea of this amendment and directed that the bmitted States should be recognized. ment and directed that the bmitted States should be recognized when additional force was required. Take the great State of Maryland. It lies south of Mason and Dixon's line, but it is a rejuvenated State, and, in a political sense, is now on the right rejuvenated State, and, in a political sense, is now on the right side of the line, or, rather, there is no longer any Mason and Dixon's line, yet that State has no representation on the Doorkeeper's roll. Now, an omission like that ought not to exist.

Mr. WILLIAM A. STONE. Does not the gentleman know the

Mr. WILLIAM A. STONE. Does not the gentleman know the fact that Maryland has two men on the roll now?

Mr. LACEY. I am informed by gentlemen from Maryland who understand the situation that she has none.

Mr. WILLIAM A. STONE. She has two.

Mr. LACEY. The House, understanding the situation in this respect, adopted this same amendment a short time ago, and I want it now to have an opportunity to do so again, because everybody will admit that a man from a State that is now unrepresented on the Doorkeeper's roll can perform these services just as well as a man from one of the previously favored States.

Mr. TRACEY. Now, Mr. Speaker, I ask for the previous ques-

The previous question was ordered.

The question being taken on the amendment of Mr. LACEY, the Speaker declared that the noes seemed to have it.

Mr. MILE's. I ask for a division.
The House divided; and there were—ayes 58, noes 84.

Mr. LINNEY. Let us have the yeas and nays, Mr. Speaker. The yeas and nays were ordered, 110 members voting in favor thereof.

The question was taken; and there were—yeas 67, nays 132, not voting 156; as follows:

	YE
Allen, Miss. Anderson, Bailey, Baker, N. H. Bell, Colo. Boatner, Buck, Burrell, Clardy, Clark, Iowa Cockrell, Connolly, Cooke, Ill. Cooper, Tex. Crowley, Gulberson, Dockery,	Ellis, Erdman, Goodwyn, Harrison, Hendrick, Hermann, Howard, Hubbard, Hunter, Johnson, N. Dak. Kleberg, Lacey, Latimer, Lawson, Lester, Lewis, Linney,	Little, Livingston, McClellan, McCreary, Ky. McCulloch, McDearmon, McLaurin, Miles, Murray, Neill, Ogden, Owens, Pendleton, Prince, Rinaker, Sayers,	Smith, III. Stokes, Strait, Sulzer, Swanson, Talbert, Tate, Terry, Thorp, Turner, Ga, Wellington, Williams, Willis, Wilson, S. C. Wood, Yoakum.

NAYS-132. Acheson, Aitken, Apsley, Arnold, R. I. Atwood, Dayton, De Witt, Doolittle, Dovener, Ellett, Evans, Fairchild, Hurley, Jenkins, Johnson, Cal. Raney, Reeves, Richardson, Robinson, Pa. Joy, Kiefer, Kirkpatrick, Knox, Royse, Russell, Conn. Avery, Babcock, Sherman, Simpkins, Smith, Mich. knox, Lefever,
Leighty,
Leisenring,
Leonard,
Linton,
Loudenslager,
Maddox,
Mahon,
Marsh,
McCall, Mass.
McCleary, Minn.
McLachian,
Metklejohn,
Mercer,
Milnes,
Minor, Wis.
Mitchell,
Morse,
Northway,
Overstreet,
Parker,
Parker, Barney, Bartholdt, Bartlett, Ga. Beach, Bennett, Faris, Fenton, Fischer, Fletcher, Foote, Foss, Gamble, Lefever, Smith, Mich.
Snover,
Spalding,
Spalding,
Stahle,
Stallings,
Steele,
Stewart, N. J.
Stewart, Wis.
Stone, W. A.
Strode, Nebr.
Tawney,
Tayler,
Thomas,
Tracewell, Berry, Bingham, Gardner, Gibson, Gillet, N. Y. Gillett, Mass. Bishop, Blue, Bromwell, Bull, Bull, Burton, Mo. Calderhead, Chickering, Clark, Mo. Cobb, Codding, Corliss, Crisp, Crowther, Cummings. Griffin, Griswold, Grosvenor, Hager, Hainer, Nebr. Hall, Halterman, Henry, Conn. Henry, Ind. Hepburn, Hicks. Tracewell. Tracey, Tracey, Treloar, Van Horn, Van Voorhis, Warner, Watson, Ind. Cummings,

Curtis, Kans.	Hicks,	Payne.	Watson, Ohi
Curtis, N. Y.	Hill, Perkins,		Wilson, Ohio
Dalzell,	Huff, Poole,		Woodman.
Danford,	Hulick,	Powers,	Woomer,
Daniels,	Hull,	Pugh,	Wright.
	NOT	VOTING-156.
Abbott,	Cannon,	Hadley,	Kerr,
Adams,	Catchings,	Hanly,	Kulp,
Aldrich, T. H.	Clarke, Ala.	Hardy,	Kyle,
Aldrich, W. F.	Coffin,	Harmer,	Layton,
Aldrich, Ill.	Colson,	Harris,	Long,
Allen, Utah	Cook, Wis.	Hart,	Lorimer,
Andrews,	Cooper, Fla.	Hartman,	Loud,
Arnold, Pa.	Cooper, Wis.	Hatch,	Low,
Baker, Kans.	Cousins,	Heatwole,	Maguire,
Baker, Md.	Cowen.	Heiner, Pa.	Mahany,
Bankhead,	Cox,	Hemenway,	Martin
Barham,	Crump,	Henderson,	McCall, Tenr
Barrett,	Curtis, Iowa	Hilborn,	McClure,
Bartlett, N. Y.	De Armond,	Hitt.	McCormick,
Belknap,	Denny,	Hooker,	McEwan,
Bell, Tex.	Dingley,	Hopkins,	McRae,
Black,	Dinsmore,	Howe,	Meredith,
Boutelle.	Dolliver,	Howell,	Meyer,
Bowers,	Draper,	Huling,	Miller, Kans.
Brewster,	Eddy,	Hutcheson,	Miller, W. Va
Broderick.	Fitzgerald,	Hyde,	Milliken.
Brosius,	Fowler,	Johnson, Ind.	Miner, N. Y.
Brown,	Graff.	Jones,	Mondell.
Brumm,	Grout,	Kem.	Money,
Burton, Ohio	Grow,	Kendall,	Moody,
Date voll, Ollio	OLUM,	acomment,	moody,

loses, fozley, furphy, ewlands, ioonan, ddell, ttey, ttjen, atterson, earson, hillips, ickler, itney, rice,	Quigg, Ray, Reyburn, Robertson, La. Rusk, Russell, Ga. Sauerhering, Scranton, Settle, Shafroth, Shannon, Shaw, Shuford, Skinner,	Sorg, Southard, Southwick, Sparkman, Spencer, Sperry, Stephenson, Stone, C.W. Strong, Strowd, N.O. Sulloway, Taft, Towne, Tucker,	Turner, Va. Tyler, Updegraff, Wadsworth, Walker, Masa, Walker, Va. Wanger, Washington, Wheeler, White, Wilson, Idaho Wilson, N. Y. Woodard.
The state of the s

So the amendment was rejected. The following pairs were announced: Until further notice:

Mr. Cousins with Mr. Cowen. Mr. HITT with Mr. MCRAE

Mr. WATSON of Indiana with Mr. Meyer.
Mr. Watson of Indiana with Mr. Meyer.
Mr. Wilber with Mr. Sorg.
Mr. Tracewell with Mr. Russell of Georgia.
Mr. Hemenway with Mr. Miner of New York.
Mr. Hanly with Mr. Moses.

Mr. TAFT with Mr. ROBERTSON of Louisiana.

Mr. KULP with Mr. ABBOTT.

For this day:

Mr. Corliss with Mr. Denny.
Mr. Scranton with Mr. Rusk.
Mr. Reyburn with Mr. Maguire.
Mr. Pickler with Mr. De Armond.

Mr. PITNEY with Mr. OTEY. Mr. Cook of Wisconsin with Mr. PATTERSON.

Mr. HENDERSON with Mr. BANKHEAD.

Mr. McCall of Tennessee with Mr. Bell of Texas.

Mr. HILL with Mr. CATCHINGS.

Mr. SOUTHWICK with Mr. CLARKE of Alabama. Mr. CHARLES W. STONE with Mr. COOPER of Florida.

Mr. CHARLES W. STONE WITH Mr. COOPER OF Florids
Mr. SULLOWAY WITH Mr. COX.
Mr. WALKER OF Virginia WITH Mr. DINSMORE.
Mr. ALDRICH OF Illinois WITH Mr. FITZGERALD.
Mr. ARNOLD OF Pennsylvania WITH Mr. HUTCHESON.
Mr. BRUMM WITH Mr. KENDALL.
Mr. HARDY WITH Mr. KYLE.

Mr. HARMER with Mr. LAYTON.

Mr. HEATWOLE with Mr. MEREDITH.

Mr. Hooker with Mr. Price. Mr. Huling with Mr. Rusk.

Mr. JOHNSON of Indiana with Mr. SPARKMAN.

Mr. Johnson of Indiana with Mr. Sparkman.
Mr. Low with Mr. Turner of Virginia.
Mr. Mulliken with Mr. Washington.
Mr. Mozley with Mr. Wheeler.
Mr. Pitney with Mr. Woodard.
Mr. Quigg with Mr. Hart.
Mr. SAYERS. Mr. Speaker, I ask that my colleagues, Judge
Abbott and Mr. Hutcheson, be excused, on account of sickness.
The SPEAKER. Without objection, the request will be granted.
There was no objection. There was no objection.

The result of the vote was announced as above stated.

The question then recurring on the adoption of the resolution, it

On motion of Mr. TRACEY, a motion to reconsider the vote by which the resolution was adopted was laid on the table.

POST-OFFICE BURGLARIES.

The SPEAKER laid before the House the following; which was read:

Office of the Postmaster-General,

Washington, D. C., January 11, 1897.

Sir: In compliance with the act of May 9, 1889 (Supplement Revised Statutes, 91,585,586), I transmitted to the Speaker of the House of Representatives various claims for credit on postal accounts of postmasters on account of burglaries from post-offices, with recommendations for the action of Congress, Congress, by an act approved June II, 1895, amended the former act by conferring power and authority upon the Postmaster-General to adjudicate claims in such cases up to the amount of $10,000, the limit having previously been $2,000. I therefore have the honor to request that the papers transmitted by me to the Speaker of the House may be returned to this Department, in order that I may take up and dispose of these claims, under the authority thus given the Postmaster-General. The following comprises a list of the cases the papers of which have been transmitted:

Postmaster.	Post-office.	Date.	Cause.	Trans- mitted.
C. P. Convery Geo. H. Tice J. M. Johnson. Bridget Lane Jas. A. Sexton Jas. C. Soape Irwin Tucker F. M. Vandling	Perth Amboy, N. J. do. Hudson, N. Y. Summit, N. J. Chicago, Ill Shreveport, La. Newport News, Va. Scranton, Pa	Aug. 31, 1892 Dec. 15, 1893	do	Jan. 3, 1895 Jan. 26, 1893 Feb. 8, 1894 Jan. 10, 1896 Apr. 25, 1894 Dec. 4, 1895 Mar. 24, 1894 Jan. 17, 1895

I have the honor to be, very respectfully, yours, WM. L. WH.SON, Postmaster-General. Hon. Thomas B. Reed, Speaker of the House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, the House will order the return of the papers, as requested in the document just read. The Chair hears no objection, and it is so ordered.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. THOMAS. I should like to inquire, Mr. Speaker, whether the regular order now is not the unfinished business on the Calendar?

The SPEAKER. The regular order is the unfinished business of last Friday, now on the House Calendar.

WILLIAM P. BUCKMASTER.

The first bill on the Calendar of unfinished private business was the bill (S. 90) for the relief of William P. Buckmaster.

The bill was read.

The SPEAKER. This bill was reported by the Committee of the Whole House with the recommendation that it be indefinitely

Mr. JOY. In the absence of the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. Otjen], who reported this bill, I ask unanimous consent that it be passed over until next private bill day, retaining its place on the Calendar.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Missouri [Mr. Joy] asks unanimous consent that the consideration of this bill be postponed until the next private-bill day. Is there objection? The Chair hears none. The Chair understands that under this permission the bill remains in the same situation, with the recommendation of the Committee of the Whole still standing.

LAURETTA S. PRINCE.

The next unfinished business on the Private Calendar was the bill (H. R. 2620) to place the name of Lauretta S. Prince on the pension rolls.

The bill was read at length.
Mr. RICHARDSON. Mr. Speaker, is this a favorable report from the Committee of the Whole on the Private Calendar?
The SPEAKER. The Chair understands the question is on the passage of this bill. There was a demand made for the reading of the engrossed bill, which has just now been read.

The bill was passed.

OFFICERS AND CREW OF GUNBOATS KINEO AND CHOCURA.

The next unfinished business on the Private Calendar was the bill (H. R. 8294) for the relief of officers and crew of the United States gunboats Kineo and Chocura, reported from the Committee of the Whole with favorable recommendation.

The bill was considered, and ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

WILLIAM B. ISAACS & CO.

The next unfinished business on the Private Calendar was the bill (H. R. 1524) to execute the findings of the Court of Claims in the matter of William B. Isaacs & Co., reported from the Committee of the Whole with favorable recommendation.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

GEORGE M'ALPIN.

The next unfinished business on the Private Calendar was the bill (H. R. 1353) for the relief of George McAlpin, to repay moneys unlawfully collected from him by the United States, reported from the Committee of the Whole with amendments.

The amendments were considered, and agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

The title of the bill was amended to conform to the recommendation of the Committee of the Whole.

MATHIAS PEDERSEN.

The next unfinished business on the Private Calendar was the bill (H. R. 4310) for the relief of Mathias Pedersen, reported from the Committee of the Whole with an amendment.

The bill was considered, the amendment recommended by the committee was agreed to, and the bill as amended ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

FANNY MOALE GIBBON.

The next unfinished business on the Private Calendar was the bill (S. 2008) granting a pension to Fanny Moale Gibbon, reported from the Committee of the Whole with favorable recommendation.
 Mr. CROWTHER. Mr. Speaker, I offer the amendment I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Strike out, in line 8, the words "one hundred" and insert in lieu thereof the word "fifty," so that the bill will read "$50 per month."

Mr. CROWTHER. I understand that this is one of the bills that inevitably causes a great deal of friction and trouble in the Committee of the Whole, as well as in the Committee on Invalid

Pensions, and also much unnecessary discussion on the floor of the House. This is a bill proposing to fix the rating of the pension of the widow of a general officer at $100 a month.

Many members on the floor have desired to get at some uniform and equitable rate for these pensions, so that they could be passed without unnecessary discussion and consumption of time. But it seems that this bill was passed without discussion in the Committee of the Whole, and I desire to make that amendment, so that the matter can be regulated as we have attempted to regulate the pensions of the widows of general officers.

I reserve the remainder of my time.

I reserve the remainder of my time.

Mr. CURTIS of New York. Mr. Speaker, I rise to oppose the amendment suggested by the gentleman from Missouri.

My friend is in error in saying that this bill passed the Committee of the Whole without debate. There was a motion made to reduce the sum fixed in the original bill to $75 a month, and a discourier was the department of the committee of the whole without debate.

discussion was had upon that, and the committee voted on the motion and sustained the report of the Committee on Pensions.

I desire to call the attention of the House to pension legislation, and also bring to its attention some considerations why there should be a difference in the pensions allowed to the widows of general officers as compared to those allowed to the widows of private soldiers. We increase the pension of the widow of a general officer above the pension given to a collisted more and it has private soldiers. We increase the pension of the widow of a general officer above the pension given to an enlisted man, and it has been the practice of the Government from its very organization. It has also been the habit of Congress to increase the pensions in proportion to the value of the services rendered by the officer. We have had pensions given to the widows of general officers, for instance, at a rate of $5,000 per annum, and we have never heard any objection because of that discrimination from the people of the country, especially when it is considered that the officers the country, especially when it is considered that the officers themselves rendered such magnificent and valuable services as to have commanded the respect not only of our own country, but of the whole world. Our friend would put this lady, the widow of Maj. Gen. John Gibbon, on the same plane on which he has offered to put other widows whose husbands were lieutenant-colonels and colonels.

This is a different case. It appeals to the judgment and the magnanimity of the people, and I am sure that there are few in this House who would withhold from the widow of John Gibbon this sum which has been voted to her by the Senate, by the Committee on Pensions, and by the Committee of the Whole of this House.

General Gibbon was a graduate of West Point, entering a cadet from the State of North Carolina. Although with Southern personal associations, he was one of the three most distinguished men of Southern origin and Southern associations who in the days of 1881 stead by the floor. George H. Thewes, Loring men of Southern origin and Southern associations who in the dark days of 1861 stood by the flag. George H. Thomas, John Gibbon, and John Newton were the names of those three distinguished men. Since the death of the other two, Congress has given consideration to their families in equal proportion to the sum asked in this bill. General Gibbon served with the volunteers and rose to the grade of major-general. In that hot contest at Gettysburg, when a corps commander was disabled, John Gibbon was selected on the spur of the moment by those who knew his capacity to take command of the corps and to continue in command throughout that battle.

But there was a greater service rendered the country by John Gibbon. In the closing days of that great struggle there was a contest between the artillery, the cavalry, and the infantry to push forward to overtake the army under the command of Lee. On the morning of the 9th of April General Lee had not come to think that an immediate surrender was necessary, and when the Confederate forces were ordered forward they supposed the cavalry was all they had to meet; but the cavalry wheeled out and uncovered all they had to meet; but the cavalry wheeled out and uncovered the infantry of the Twenty-fourth Corps, which had arrived under command of Maj. Gen. John Gibbon. That corps had marched, on the 8th of April and the night of the 8th and the morning of the 9th, 87 miles to support the cavalry. Our associate from the First district of West Virginia [Mr. DOVENER] was in that corps. And in the State of the gentleman who makes this motion there is now living one of the most distinguished men in that State, Gen. John W. Turner, who commanded one of the divisions under John Gibbon. It was the skill of John Gibbon and the magnificent work of his men which marched that corps to the place where they were of his men which marched that corps to the place where they were of his men which marched that corps to the place where they were enabled to cooperate with the cavalry and made forever memorable the 9th day of April. If that had not been done the 9th of April would not have been one of the memorable days in American history. The presence of the Twenty-fourth Corps saved slaughter and great losses, which would have continued for several days had it not been for the skillful and masterly evolution of the men under Major-General Gibbon.

Is it in the heart, the judgment, or the conviction of any member that this widow, aged 70 years, without property, blind, with a daughter in feeble health, and two grandchildren without father or mother, the children of a deceased daughter, shall be left upon this pittance proposed by the gentleman from Missouri? Will it meet the wish of any true lover of the country that these persons, especially this widow, should be left in want, as they would substantially be with the small sum proposed? This widow is without means, and I do think the House should vote down this motion and stand by the action of the House in Committee of the Whole and the Senate.

Mr. CROWTHER Mr. Speaker I desire to great a portion of

Mr. CROWTHER. Mr. Speaker, I desire to grant a portion of my time to the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. Blue].
Mr. Blue. Mr. Speaker, it has been to some extent a mooted question for a great many years as to who put down the rebellion. We have found out now that it was General Gibbon. Perhaps to that extent the gentleman's measure is meritorious. tled that question. But I apprehend that there were others who participated in that conflict, others, somewhat less pretentious oftentimes, who did their part equally well, although that part might have been the part of the humblest private of the command. It was the great common soldiery of this people who fought that conflict. While the men who led them deserve credit, they deserve it in no higher degree than the common soldiery of the Republic. The chief merit of that contest was the patriotism and heroism of the common men, and when the history of that stupendous and wonderful struggle comes to be written it will be replete with the acts of heroism of the men who carried the musket, as well as of the men of rank who bore the sword, and who chanced to be in such positions that they became famous by reason of the valor of the men who sustained them.

There can always be found in this body eloquent gentlemen who justain the claims of the widow of the officer; but who pleads for the lowly widow of the common soldier here? If an offer is made to increase her pension beyond $12 a month there are always advocates ready to object to any increase beyond that humble pittance, on the ground that the general rule should be adhered to and no greater amount should be allowed. Let us have a law of equity and justice in the application of the rule to officers of this army. I regret to say, for myself, that the vote that I cast here giving $75 a month to pension the widow of the only major-general that Kansas furnished to the service has been more criticised than any other official act of mine in this body. I here at this moment upon the floor of the House apologize to the gentlemen who have criticised that vote in the past and say that if I had an opportunity to make it $50 I should avail myself of the privilege and vote to make it $50. I think that the amendment of the gentheman from Missouri [Mr. CROWTHER] should prevail. I think that the rule ought to be $50 in these cases, and it ought not to go beyond that. Seventy-five dollars would be the limit in very beyond that. Seventy-five dollars would be the limit in very extreme cases, but there is no special extremity in this claim that demands any such pension as $100 a month.

One of the most beautiful temples upon the face of the globe is St. Paul's Cathedral. It is a temple of the living God. It was born of the intellect of a great architect, and in and about that splendid structure, among the magnificent sarcophagi that rest there, is the tomb of Sir Christopher Wrenn, the architect of the structure, and upon the marble slab that covers his tomb is a Latin inscription which contains this sentiment: "If you seek for his monument, look about you." When there shall be builded a stupendous ment, look about you." When there shall be builded a stupendous and glorious monument to the heroism of the common soldiery that saved the life of the Union and perpetuated our institutions, let there be written on that monument: "If you seek for their achievements, look about you." [Applause.] We can already see in the splendor of this the noblest and greatest of civilized nations the works that have followed the services of those heroes and realize what the patriotic common soldiery of the nation can accomplish. In deference to their heroism, in deference to the good names of their wives and children, let us apply a little of the general rule to these pensions for generals' widows and sustain this amendment. [Applause.]

Mr. CROWTHER. I yield five minutes to the gentleman from

Massachusetts

Mr. MORSE. Mr. Speaker, I want to stand up in my place and indorse the eloquent remarks of the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. Blue]. I remember that once a little boy had heard his father expatiate on his exploits in the Army at great length and very many times, who finally said, "Papa, did anybody help you to put down the rebellion?" Now, when I listen to some of the eulogies pronounced upon the officers of the Army, I am constrained to give utterance to a similar sentiment. I am not here to detract anything from the glory or patriotism of the services rendered by these men who commanded the Army whether in a minor or greater capacity; but I am here to say "Amen" to what the gentleman from Kansas has so eloquently said when he says that the real honor belongs to the men who fought in the ranks, without which the officers would have been powerless.

Now, Mr. Speaker, I am here to say further, that some votes I have cast in this House since I have been here, giving large pensions to the widows of officers, have been criticised at my home, in my district, and in my Commonwealth more than any other vote I have cast in this House. I want to ask what rhyme, wit, wisdom, or justice is there in giving a pension of $75 a month to the widow of an officer, while the widow of a private soldier, who lives in the next house, who lost her husband in the service, and who endured as much for his country as the officer—that that widow should have only $8 or $12 a month?

Mr. Speaker, that is a conundrum that I am unable to solve. Mr. Speaker, that is a conundrum that I am unable to solve. I am unable to make any satisfactory explanation of such a difference. I think it might be proper for an officer's widow to have a difference in her favor, but no such difference as this. I think that all of this kind of legislation should be covered by some general pension bill. It is manifestly very unjust for persons who have a friend in court and among members of Congress to come in here and bring in a pension bill to give a large pension to the widow of one soldier, while the widow, as I say, of an equally meritorious soldier, living next door, only gets $8 or $12 a month. Only a few are reached in this way, and it serves to make the thousands of pensioners dissatisfied with the bounty of the Government. I have since I have been a member of this House introduced very few pension bills, not over two or three. I do not duced very few pension bills, not over two or three. I do not know that I have passed a single one, because I have not believed in the justice of this special legislation. It produces great dissatisfaction among the pensioners of the country. They can not see the justice of it, and there is no justice in it. And while I have to confess to my inconsistency, while I have to confess to the fact that I have done what I ought not to have done in that I have voted several times for large pensions for the widows of officers, I am here to say that in the little time remaining to me, on the principle that "While the lamp holds out to burn," etc., I do not propose to vote for any bill giving a large pension to an officer's widow; but I shall cast my vote for this amendment or for a smaller sum

Mr. CURTIS of New York. Mr. Speaker, I do not know whether I reserved the balance of my time, but I hope, at least, I shall be allowed to say a word in reply to the argument of my friend from Massachusetts [Mr. Morse], as well as my friend from Kansas [Mr. Blue], who have entered into a discussion of the policy of the Government in discriminating in pensions between enlisted men and officers, and the widows of enlisted men and the widows of officers. That is a discrimination which has always existed. That is a discrimination which has existed in respect to their pay, their responsibility, and everything pertaining to the service.

Mr. CROWTHER. Will the gentleman permit me to ask him a question?

Mr. CURTIS of New York. Certainly.

Mr. CROWTHER. What amount of pension would the widow of a general officer, a brigadier-general, obtain under the general

Mr. CURTIS of New York. Thirty dollars a month, and a pri-

Mr. CURTIS of New York. Thirty dollars a month, and a private soldier $12 a month.

Mr. CROWTHER. Now, we propose to give this widow, not the general, $50 a month. Certainly that is sufficient.

Mr. CURTIS of New York. No. Mr. Speaker, this Congress and other Congresses, from the close of the war, have seen fit and many times to increase the pension over the statute provision for the widows of distinguished officers. They have also increased the pensions for widows of soldiers, but I do not think that question properly comes up for consideration at this time. There has been pensions for widows of soldiers, but I do not think that question properly comes up for consideration at this time. There has been no case since the close of the war when the merits of the man, the character of his services, or the needs of his family more strongly appeal to the sense of justice, generosity, and good feeling of the American people than the case now before the House. My friend speaks of the private soldiers and compliments them as they deserve, but what is the value of a single musket? The important this, is true to a sense of the private soldiers and compliments them as portant thing in war is organization, skill in maneuvering, which brings the greatest number of muskets, the greatest force of artil-lery, the greatest number of cavalry sabers to strike at the decisive time. We are not now passing upon the respective merits of the private soldier or the officer in his individual capacity; we are considering the value of the services rendered by General Gibbon, and among all the officers who performed gallant and dis-tinguished service in the last war there can not be found one more meritorious, one who showed greater capacity in the field when he had an opportunity to exhibit it, than Gen. John Gibbon.

His widow is poor. She is 70 years of age. The pension here proposed to be granted is a small sum, not greater than has been given in this very Fifty-fourth Congress to the widows of officers whose services were no more to be compared with the services of General Gibbon than a nickel is to be compared with a dollar.

Mr. CROWTHER. Mr. Speaker, I yield ten minutes to the gentleman from Nebraska [Mr. ANDREWS].

Mr. ANDREWS. Mr. Speaker, this question has been gone over frequently in committee before bills have been reported to the House. We have reviewed the arguments here pro and con at almost every Friday night session when we have been able to transact any business at those sessions. On Friday afternoons, and at other times, this House has been entertained with a review of the arguments relative to the ratings of pensions for the widows of private soldiers and the widows of officers. In order to place before the House at this time the action which the Commit-tee on Invalid Pensions has taken upon this question, and to pre-sent also in full the report which that committee has recommended to the House for passage, I send to the Clerk's desk and ask to have read as part of my remarks the action of the committee, which will be found on page 410 of the RECORD of the first session of this Congress. This report was acted upon by the Committee on Invalid Pensions, and I was instructed to report it back to the House with the recommendation that the resolutions there presented be passed.

The Clerk read as follows:

Whereas marked confusion and delay have resulted from the want of some uniform rule in the consideration of private pension bills: Therefore, Be it resolved. That it is the sense of the House that all private pension bills should be drawn according to the rates of pension indicated by the general pension laws unless the evidence should clearly show that a higher rate is justly required to relieve actual distress, the question of the soldier's rank being considered wholly immaterial in determining an exceptional rating. Resolved. That all recommendations from committees should be in harmony with the sentiment of the foregoing resolution.

Mr. Andrews, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, submitted the following report:

with the sentiment of the foregoing resolution.

Mr. Andrews, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, submitted the following report:

Your Committee on Invalid Pensions, to whom was referred the resolution (H. Res. 341) relating to private pension bills, have considered the same, and report as follows:

Said resolutions seek to economize the time and labor of the House in the consideration of private pension bills. Such bills are usually drawn at rates much higher than those indicated by general pension laws, and consequently much time is consumed by committees and oy the House in making amendments as to rates. If such bills were drawn according to rates fixed by general pension laws, and each bill were accompanied by a brief of the necessary evidence when it reaches the proper committee, many meritorious bills could be passed in the time frequently consumed by repetitions of opinions relative to exceptional ratings. It is assumed that the members of the House will readily recognize the benefits that could thus be conferred upon many deserving soldiers whose bills ought to be passed immediately.

If the rates fixed by the general pension laws are not fair and just, a bill removing unjust discriminations should be put upon its passage immediately and enacted into law.

Thus one discussion would settle the question of rates, and Congress would be relieved of a large volume of business which would be and ought to be transacted through the Pension Bureau. The adoption of the resolutions would give a rule of action to members, committees, and the House in the transaction of business relative to private pension bills; and your committee therefore recommend that said resolutions be agreed to.

Mr. ANDREWS. Mr. Speaker, it is not my desire, neither was it the desire of the Committee on Invalid Pensions in the preparation and adoption of this report, to cast any reflection whatever upon the brilliant services of any officer in the late war of the rebellion. We simply seek to suggest here a rule of business procedure whereby this miscellaneous discussion can be disposed of once for all by the passage of a general statute that will remove the question from debate. Then each successive committee from Congress to Congress will have a definite policy marked out relative to their recommendations of pension bills to the House Lative to the conductive to the first session of this Congress the Congress.

In the early part of the first session of this Congress the Committee on Invalid Pensions was very severely criticised for the mittee on Invalid Pensions was very severely criticised for the presentation of bills that were supposed to be out of harmony with the fixed provisions of general laws. Whether those criticisms were just or not we need not now debate. It is not the intention of the committee, as I understand it, by this recommendation to question what should be done or what should not be done in a general statute, but so long as there are general laws giving higher rates of pension to the widows of officers than are allowed to the widows of privates those general provisions of law should be observed; and if present ratings are unjust, a bill removing unjust discriminations should be put upon its passage and enacted into law immediately.

Now, with a provision of that character the House would have some rule of action. But here, with cases coming up from time to time ranking up to the grade of captain, it has been practically impossible to secure a recommendation of the Committee of the Whole for anything beyond $20 a month; but when you pass to an officer of higher rank than that of captain, or beyond the rank of major, it is a comparatively easy matter, on the ground of rank alone, to leap from $25 to $100 a month without stopping to ask why. I submit that a practice of this kind is wholly inconsistent, and that on this question we ought to maintain our action within proper bounds. We should come to the business side of the questions. proper bounds. We should come to the business side of the ques-tion, and say that in the ratings of pensions to the widows of officers we should hold as closely to the provisions of the general law as we do in fixing the rate of pensions for the widows of privates.

Upon these grounds I stand in supporting the amendment which is proposed for the reduction of the rate indicated in this bill.

Mr. CROWTHER. I yield five minutes to the gentleman from

Delaware [Mr. WILLIS].

Mr. WILLIS. Mr. Speaker, it has always been averse to my feelings either to offer or vote for any proposition lessening the amount of pension which is to go to an old soldier or to the widow reluctance that I have to deny the claim which the eloquence of the gentleman from New York, General Curtis, so aptly makes to my sensibilities. But in this case I am compelled to do so on attempting to make an object lesson of this bill?

this principle: You know that when a great business concern goes down, an account is taken of the assets and liabilities; and when the concern is found to be bankrupt, those who settle up the business do not make one or two or five or ten or twenty or even a hundred creditors principle of justice that divide a principle of justic they divide up what is left and pay so much on the dollar. Now, so far as concerns the debt that this country owes to the soldiery that sustained it in the hour of its peril, it can never pay that debt. It is bankrupt in money; and it is bankrupt in gratitude. The best it can do is to pay so much on the dollar; and the only way it can do that is to deny unusually large amounts to a certain class and to endeavor as much as possible to reach an equalization in the distribution of the whole amount.

Upon that principle I have to refuse to vote for $100 a month to the widow of an officer who may not be any more needy than the widow of a private. I know that there are to-day thousands and thousands of soldiers' widows who can not get even $12 per month; there are thousands that would be glad to get even $8 a month who are now getting nothing. On this principle of a somewhat just distribution of the assets in hand, I can not vote for $100 for the widow of an officer when I have to vote for $12 for the widow of a private. I shall therefore sustain the amend-

Mr. CROWTHER. I yield five minutes to the gentleman from

Mr. GROSVENOR].
Mr. GROSVENOR].
Mr. GROSVENOR. Mr. Speaker, I am very much obliged to the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. CROWTHER] for yielding time to me; but he understands that I am not going to support his amendment.

I have heard a great deal on the floor of this House for ten or twelve years in the line of the argument now used in opposition to this bill. But I have this to say: Never yet, in my contact with the private soldiers of the country, have I ever heard any ratification of the agency assumed by these gentlemen. I have been a member of the State encampment of Ohio almost ever since the I have been six times a delegate to the National Encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic; and I am elected a delegate to the State encampment of Ohio now. And never yet in any one of those meetings, nor in any of the Grand Army reunions, nor in any reunion of the great assemblages of the Army, have I ever heard a private soldier or anybody else attempt to draw the line that is here attempted to be drawn between the private soldier and the officer.

Now, let me add this: The distinctions that have been made since the war in favor of the great officers of the war have been made by the private soldiers themselves. The very spirit that gave to the Army of the Potomac their pride in such men as John Gibbon has run through the third of a century that has followed the close of the war; and to-day the men who stand by this distinction with the greatest enthusiasm are the enlisted men of the Army. Point out to me, if you can, one place where there has been an authoritative declaration against the recognition of such men as Sherman and Grant and Sheridan, and their relatives after their death. Show me the place where there was a private soldier who did not indorse the conferring of the pension upon Mrs. Sheridan.

So, Mr. Speaker, my proposition is this: While if I had the framing of the pension laws all over again, so far as the volunteer service is concerned I would make no distinction of rank—I have service is concerned I would make no distinction of rank—I have said so many a time—the same considerations do not apply in the case of an officer of the Regular Army; and our system of volunteer pensions we derive from the Regular Army system.

In the present case, General Gibbon, an officer of the Regular Army, having reached his sixty-fourth year, was retired upon a reduction of pay. He devoted his life to the service of the Government, and at his death he had accumulated nothing. He leaves behind him a wide way. hind him a widow. Now, although I never served in the Army of the Potomac. I venture to say that if every survivor of the Army of the Potomac—enlisted man or officer—could register his vote upon this proposition, ninety-nine out of every one hundred of those votes would be in the affirmative. [Applause.] That is the sentiment which those men testified upon the battlefield, and which they take pride in testifying upon every possible and proper occasion.

So, Mr. Speaker, while I will not assail this proposition made by the Committee on Invalid Pensions—while I wish it could be carried out, and that we could have something which would take these questions out of Congress—I am not willing that a man who did the service for his country that John Gibbon did in the hour of peril-greater than I ever saw in any command to which I had the honor to belong—shall be made an example of in favor of an assumed demand of a sentiment which, I say, does not exist anywhere in the United States. [Applause.] here in the United States. [Applause.] Mr. CROWTHER. Will the gentleman from Ohio permit a

Mr. GROSVENOR. Not at all. I said that this debate had

Mr. GROSVENOR. Not at all. I said that this debate had been taken advantage of for that purpose.

Mr. CROWTHER. This morning the House passed a bill granting a pension to the widow of a distinguished officer who had reached the highest rank in the Navy, and then stepped out, joined the Army, and obtained the very highest position that could be obtained there. We passed that bill at only $50 per month. And I hold in my hand the conference report, agreed to by the Senate Committee on Invalid Pensions, regarding the same question, wherein they stand by the uniformity of their action with reference to the amount I have proposed.

Mr. WATSON of Ohio. Let me ask the gentleman from Mis-

Mr. CROWTHER. A general objection. I have been fighting these bills all the way through.

Now, I desire to yield a portion of the time to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. Wood].

Mr. WOOD. Mr. Speaker, I do not wish to make any discrimination against the widow of Gen. John Gibbon; but something nation against the widow of Gen. John Gibbon; but something has been said here in regard to the policy of making a distinction between the pensions of officers and privates who have served in our Army. I recognize no such distinction and no policy of the Government except that which comes through general law. The law in a private or individual case is not a precedent, and the policy of the Government can not be founded upon or determined in the future by the passage of any private act. That is an entirely different question.

The private law is an anomaly in legislation. It is sometimes resorted to to confer privileges upon those who ought not to have them or who do not have them under the general law. In a Republic like ours it ought to be in the nature of equitable legislation, and should be based on a general principle, each case of private legislation that comes up for consideration in this body being determined by the circumstances surrounding it.

The policy of the law in regard to pensions is that where the soldier died from the effect of wounds or injuries received or disease contracted in its service, that the Government will confer upon the widow of such soldier $12 per month, and upon the widow of a general officer who performs services under similar circumstances the sum of $30 per month. The policy of this Government in reference to pensions, as shown in the public laws of the United States—and that policy has been uniform—is to give to the widow of the officer and the soldier alike a similar pension where the death did not result from wounds received in the service or from disease contracted in the line of duty. We are departing from this policy of the law, and without any good reason. The from this policy of the law, and without any good reason. The pension that comes through a private law is a gratuity pure and simple. It is not supported on any legal principle. The pensions that come through a general law, especially an act that was passed before the soldier enlisted, perhaps, or while in the service, is in the nature of a debt and an obligation on the part of the Government. We have made this distinction, although in the amount of pay and in the rank of the party the pension comes under the provisions of the general law. visions of the general law.

Now, it is proposed by this amendment to make the pension of the widow of General Gibbon $50 per month. I recognize, as we all recognize, the distinguished services of Gen. John Gibbon. I recognize the fact that he got the infantry, in that relentless pursuit, along on the same time of the cavalry. But it was the energy, it was the endurance, it was the bravery and determination of the private soldier that enabled him to do that. I do contend that there ought not to be made this distinction between the officer and the privates, both, perhaps, serving in the same corps, and both undergoing the same hardships and the same privations.

Besides that, Mr. Speaker, this officer was there for life, a place that is sought after eagerly by all the young men of the country, so many of whom wish to enter the military service. When the proper age comes, he may be retired on three-quarters of his full pay. The pension allowed to his widow is two and one-half times pay. The pension allowed to his widow is two and one-half times that allowed to the private soldier. And if the amount should be cut down to $50 per month, under the amendment pending, based on the facts set out in the report, it will still be doing full justice to the widow of this distinguished officer, and it will be very much more than has ever been granted to the widow of any private soldier under our pension laws.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the adoption of the amendment proposed by the gentleman from Missouri.

The question was taken; and upon a division (demanded by Mr.

CURTIS of New York) there were—ayes 60, noes 59.
Mr. CURTIS of New York. I call for tellers.

Tellers were ordered.
The SPEAKER pro tempore appointed Mr. Curtis of New York and Mr. Crowther as tellers.

The House divided; and the tellers reported—ayes 54, noes 82.

Mr. CROWTHER, Mr. MILNES, and others demanded the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The question was taken; and there were-yeas 68, nays 128, not voting 159; as follows:

	YE.	AS-68.
Aitken, Allen, Miss. Allen, Miss. Anderson, Andrews, Baker, N. H. Barham, Bell, Colo. Bishop, Blue, Burrell, Burton, Mo. Clardy, Clark, Iowa Clark, Mo. Codding, Connolly, Crowther,	Danford, Ellis, Ellis, Fenton, Gibson, Hager, Halterman, Hatch, Hemenway, Henry, Ind. Hicks, Howard, Hubbard, Hulbard, Hull, Hunter, Johnson, N. Dak. Kem,	Kirkpatrick, Lacey, Latimer, Lewis, Loudenslager, Marsh, McLaurin, Mines, Minor, Wis. Morse, Mozley, Northway, Ogden, Overstreet, Pendleton, Perkins, Raney,	Royse, Shafroth, Smith, Ill. Snover, Spalding, Strait, Strong, Talbert, Tate, Tracewell, Treloar, Updegraff, Willis. Wilson, Ohio. Wilson, S. O. Wood, Yoakum.
	NA	YS-128.

Acheson, Arnold, R. I. Atwood, Avery, Bankhead, Kyle, Layton, Leisenring, Leonard, Livingston, Long, Dinsmore. Dockery, Dockery, Doolittle, Dovener, Ellett, Erdman, Erdman, Evans,
Fairchild,
Fischer,
Fletcher,
Floote,
Gamble,
Gardner,
Griffin,
Griswold,
Grosvenor,
Grout,
Hardy,
Harner,
Harris, Barney, Bartlett, Ga. Maddox, Maddox, Maguire, Mahon, McCall, Mass. McClelan, Bell, Tex. Bennett, Boatner, Boutelle, Bromwell, McClellan, McCreary, Ky.
McCulloch,
McDearmon,
McLachlan,
Mercer,
Miles,
Miller, W. Va.
Mitchell,
Money,
Neill,
Newlands,
Owens,

Bronwell,
Bull,
Burton, Ohio
Catchings,
Chickering,
Clarke, Ala.
Cooke, Ill.
Cooke, Ill.
Cooper, Fla.
Corliss,
Crisp,
Crowley,
Culberson,
Cummings,
Curtis, Kans.
Curtis, N. Y.
Dalzell,
Daniels,
De Armond,

Abbott.

Abbott,
Adams,
Addrich, T. H.
Aldrich, W. F.
Aldrich, III.
Allen, Utah
Apsley,
Arnold, Pa.
Babcock,
Bailey,
Baker, Kans.
Baker, Md.
Barrholdt,
Bartholdt,
Bartlett, N. Y.
Beach,

Beach, Belknap, Berry, Black,

Bowers, Brewster, Broderick,

Brosius, Brown.

Brumm, Buck,

Buck,
Calderhead,
Cannon,
Coffin,
Colson.
Cook, Wis.
Cooper, Tex.
Cooper, Wis.
Cousins,
Cowen,
Cox,
Crump,
Curtis, Iowa
Dayton,

Dayton, Denny,

Harmer, Harris, Henry, Conn. Hill, Huff, Hurley, Jenkins, Johnson, Cal. Johnson, Ind. Joy, Klefer, Kleberg, Knox,

NO!
De Witt,
Dingley,
Dolliver,
Draper,
Eddy,
Faris,
Fitzgerald,
Foss.
Fowler,
Gillet, N.Y.
Gillett, Mass.
Goodwyn.

Goodwyn,
Graff,
Grow,
Hadley,
Hall,
Hanly,
Harlson,
Haart,
Hartman,
Heatwole,
Heiner, Pa.
Henderson,
Hendrick,
Hepburn,
Hermann,
Hilborn,
Hilborn,
Hilborn,
Hooker,
Hookins,
Howel,
Huling,
Hutcheson,
Hyde,
Jones,
Kendall,

Lefever,
Leighty,
Lester,
Linton,
Little,
Lord,
Mahany,
Martin,
McCall, Tenn,
McCall, Tenn,
McCormick,
McBwan,
McMillin,
McRae,
McMillin,
McRae,
Millin,
Meredith,
Meyer,
Miller,
Kans,
Milliken,
Miner, N. Y.
Mondell,
Moses,
Murphy,
Noonan,
Odell,
Oty,
Otjen, Parker, Patterson, Patterson Payne, Pearson, Phillips, Pickler, Pituey, Price, Onige

Quigg, Ray,

Sherman, Smith, Mich. Sparkman, Spencer, Stallings, Stallings, Steele,
Stephenson,
Stephenson,
Stewart, N. J.,
Stewart, Wis.
Stokes,
Stone, W. A.
Strode, Nebr.
Sulzer,
Tawney,
Terry,
Thomas,
Towne,
Turner, Ga.
Turner, Va.
Van Horn,
Van Yoorhis,
Wadsworth,
Wanger,
Wartson, Ohio
Wellington,
Wheeler, Weilington, Wheeler, Williams, Wilson, N. Y. Woodard, Woodman, Wright.

NOT VOTING-159.

Owens,

Poole, Powers, Prince, Pugh, Richardson,

Shannon,

Reeves, Reyburn, Rinaker, Robertson, La. Robinson, Pa. Rusk, Russell, Conn. Russell, Ga. Sauerhering, Sayers, Scranton, Scranton, Settle, Shaw, Shuford, Simpkins, Skinner, Skinner, Sorg,
Southard,
Southwick,
Sperry,
Stahle,
Stone, C. W.
Strowd, N. G.
Sulloway,
Swanson,
Taft,
Tayler,
Thorp,
Tracey,
Tucker,
Tyler,
Walker, Mass.
Walker, Va.
Washington,
Watson, Ind.
White,
Wilbor,
Wilson, Idaho.
Woomer. Woomer.

So the amendment of Mr. CROWTHER was rejected. The Clerk announced the following additional pairs: For this day:

Mr. BARRETT with Mr. TUCKER.

Kulp, Lawson,

On this question:

Mr. Leighty with Mr. Wilson of Idaho. Mr. Henderson with Mr. Coofer of Texas. Mr. Gillett of Massachusetts with Mr. Denny.

Mr. SIMPKINS with Mr. MINER of New York.

Mr. Meiklejohn with Mr. Little.

On this vote:

Mr. ALLEN of Utah with Mr. HARRISON.

The result of the vote was then announced as above recorded.

Mr. BLUE. Mr. Speaker— Mr. WOOD. Mr. Speaker, I move to amend by striking out of line 8 the words "one hundred" and inserting in lieu thereof seventy-five."

Mr. CURTIS of New York. I hope that will not be adopted. The Clerk will report the amend-The SPEAKER pro tempore.

The Clerk read as follows:

In line 8 strike out the words "one hundred" and insert in lieu thereof the ord "seventy-five."

Mr. CURTIS of New York. Mr. Speaker, is it in order to offer this amendment now in the House?

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. Hull). The Chair thinks is. The previous question has not been ordered, and the bill is open to amendment.

Mr. CURTIS of New York. I hope that amendment will be voted down.

The question being taken, the Speaker pro tempore announced that the noes seemed to have it. On a division (demanded by Mr. BLUE) there were-ayes 57, noes 86.

Accordingly the amendment was rejected. Mr. CURTIS of New York. Mr. Speaker, I now ask for the previous question.

The previous question was ordered.

The question being taken on ordering the bill to be engrossed and read a third time, Mr. Blue demanded a division.

The House divided; and there were—ayes 102, noes 13.

Mr. BLUE and Mr. CROWTHER demanded the yeas and nays. The yeas and nays were refused, not a sufficient number rising in support of the demand for the same.

Accordingly, the bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and it was read the third time, and passed.

On motion of Mr. CURTIS of New York, a motion to reconsider the last vote was laid on the table.

GRAY'S BATTALION OF ARKANSAS VOLUNTEERS.

The next unfinished business on the Private Calendar was the bill (H. R. 1061) granting pensions to Gray's Battalion of Arkansas Volunteers.

The bill was read.

Mr. THOMAS. Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question on

Mr. BLUE. Mr. Speaker, I hope that will not be ordered now. The question was taken; and the Speaker announced that the ayes appeared to have it.

Mr. BLUE. I demand a division. Let us see whether this is a private bill or a public bill.

The House divided; and there were-ayes 55, noes 40.

Accordingly, the previous question was ordered.

Mr. BLUE. Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry. Can a motion be made at this time to refer this bill to the Committee of the Whole The SPEAKER. The Chair thinks that such a motion is in

Mr. NEILL. This bill has been carefully considered in Committee of the Whole and reported to the House.

Mr. BLUE. I move that this bill be referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

The SPEAKER. The Chair thinks this is in the nature of a motion to recommit, and would be in order after the bill has been ordered to engrossment and third reading.

Mr. BLUE. Then I desire to make the motion at that time.

Mr. BLUE. The SPEAKER. The question is on the engrossment and third reading of the bill.
Mr. CROWTHER.

Has this bill been engrossed?

The SPEAKER. It has not been engrossed.
Mr. CROWTHER. I rise to a point of order, that the bill not having been engrossed, it is not properly before the House.
The SPEAKER. It has not yet been ordered to be engrossed.
Mr. CROWTHER. Then I call for the reading of the engrossed

The SPEAKER. The gentleman can do that after it has been dered to be engrossed. The question is on the motion ordering ordered to be engrossed.

the bill to be engrossed.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time. Mr. CROWTHER. Now, Mr. Speaker, I call for the reading of the engrossed bill. Mr. BLUE. Mr. S

Mr. BLUE. Mr. Speaker—
The SPEAKER. The gentleman asks for the reading of the engrossed bill, which is not present.

Mr. BLUE. Now, Mr. Speaker, I offer the motion to recommit, and before I do that, in the attitude which the bill has now assumed y reason of the action of the gentleman from Missouri [Mr.

CROWTHER], is it in order now—
The SPEAKER. The Chair thinks that when the bill comes up to be read as an engrossed bill, then it will be in order.

Mr. CROWTHER. To facilitate matters, with the consent of the House, I withdraw my motion for the reading of the engrossed bill

Mr. POOLE. I object.
The SPEAKER. Objection is made to the withdrawal, which is equivalent to a renewal of it. The Clerk will report the next

WILLIAM M. DALZELL.

The next unfinished business on the Private Calendar was the bill (H. R. 1498) to grant an honorable discharge to William M. Dalzell.

The bill was read.

Mr. STEELE. Let us have the report read. The SPEAKER. The gentleman asks for the reading of the report. If he desires to have it read as a part of his remarks, the report can be read. Mr. STEELE. Yes.

The report (by Mr. GRIFFIN) was read, as follows:

The report (by Mr. GRIFFIN) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Military Affairs, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 1488) granting an honorable discharge to William M. Dalzell, having examined and considered the same, report the bill back to the House with a recommendation that it do pass.

From a report made by the War Department in this case it appears that William M. Dalzell was enrolled May 27, 1861, for three years, as corporal of Company B, Second Iowa Infantry, and is reported on the muster roll of the company for September and October, 1861, as having been transferred to the recruiting service for the State of Iowa October 1, 1861. With the exception of the roll for July and August, 1862, on which he is similarly reported, his name is not borne on any muster roll from October, 1861, to the date of muster-out of the company on July 12, 1865.

The application for honorable discharge previously submitted was denied on December 10, 1880, on the ground that there was no evidence of the alleged transfer to the United States Navy, and that the applicant's unsupported statement did not warrant a change in the record.

An investigation, brought about by a similar application in September, 1888, elicited the following facts:

The Navy Department reported that there was no record of claimant's service in the United States Navy.

The Second Anditor reported that there were no papers on file in his office relative to the case.

On September 20, 1888, the claimant was informed that no record and been

The Navy Department reported that there was no record of claimant's service in the United States Navy.

The Second Auditor reported that there were no papers on file in his office relative to the case.

On September 20, 1888, the claimant was informed that no record had been found of him from October, 1861, to June 15, 1862, when he accepted civil employment in the Quartermaster's Department, and that no favorable action could be taken in his case except upon satisfactory evidence of his discharge from the military service prior to his employment as a civilian.

An inquiry of the adjutant-general of Iowa elicited the following reply:

"William M. Dalzell was reported transferred October 1, 1861, and also August 1, 1861. Report of transfer does not state to what organization transferred, but in remarks says to Iowa State recruiting service. He is supposed to have been transferred to Marine Brigade. There are no records in this office going to show in what organization, other than the Second Iowa Infantry, he served."

The claimant makes the following statement under oath as to his whereabouts after the transfer above referred to:

"About October 1, 1861, Capt. R. M. Littler, of Company B, Second Iowa Infantry, transferred me to the Navy Department, under command of Captain Pennock, who was then in charge of the naval station at Cairo. Having for many years previous to enlistment been a steamboat captain, I was ordered by Captain Pennock to take charge of the steamer Eugene, which Idid. I run said boat until October 1, 1862, on which date I was ordered to go with the boat to Memphis, stopping at Randolph, Tenn., to find out about the killing of a lieutenant a few days before. While ashore at Randolph I was taken prisoner, but saved the boat by calling to the pilot to back her off. Later I was paroled and released. Returning to Cairo, I was informed by Captain Pennock to go home until he got an exchange of prisoners. I afterwards learned that there had never been an exchange of naval prisoners; that I was a parole regiment, to pursue the captors, which was done. Captain Dalzell was not rescued, although the expedition returned with about twenty prisoners of the marauding party.

Abram H. Clark, of Peoria, Ill., swears that he was a member of Company B, Second Iowa Volunteers, in which company and regiment said Dalzell served until October 1, 1861, when he was transferred to the naval transport service, in which he served for one year; that he was taken prisoner while in command of the naval transport steamer Eugene, and afterwards paroled and sent home.

It also appears from the report made by the War Department that there were other affidavits in support of the statements made by said Dalzell, including the affidavit of Captain Littler, who was in command of Dalzell's company at the time the transfer is said to have been made.

So far as any record appears bearing upon the question of transfer to the marine or naval transport service, such record sustains the claim and statements of the beneficiary, and on this evidence the transfer, although perhaps not made strictly as it should have been, must be conceded to have taken place. That William M. Dalzell was in the naval transport service and was taken prisoner and paroled is sustained by the affidavits of Col. Quincy McNeil, who from May to October, 1862, was in command of Island No. 10, and Abram H. Clark, of Peoria, Ill., who was a member of the same company with said Dalzell. The soldier's affidavit shows that there never had been any exchange of naval prisoners, and that he was informed by Captain Pennock, under whom he served on the naval transport Eugene, that he could not go back to his company while a paroled prisoner.

Your committee have arrived at the conclusion that no intention to desert appears in this case, and that the charge of desertion has grown out of the peculiar circumstances surrounding the soldier, and for which, in the opinion of your committee, he should not be held accountable.

Mr. THOMAS. Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question on the bill to its passage.

The previous question was ordered, and under the operation thereof the bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the passage of

Mr. WILSON of Ohio. I want to ask if debate is not in order. The SPEAKER pro tempore. Debate is not in order, the previous question having been ordered.

Mr. WILSON of Ohio. I want to know whether it will be in order to offer an amendment to the bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. It would not, the previous question having been ordered.

Mr. WILSON of Ohio. I did not understand what stage the bill had reached.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The bill has been read a third time, and the question is now upon its passage, the previous question having been ordered by the House.

The question was taken, and the bill was passed.

GEORGE M. BROOKS.

The next unfinished business on the Private Calendar was the bill (S. 637) granting a pension to George M. Brooks.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll the name of George M. Brooks, late private in D Company of the Sixty-ninth Regiment of Indiana Infantry Volunteers, and pay to him a pension of $15 per month.

Mr. THOMAS. Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question on the bill to its passage.

Mr. RICHARDSON. I hope the gentleman will not do that until the report is read or we have some explanation of the bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Does the gentleman withdraw

The SPEARER pro tempore. Does the gentleman withdraw the demand for the previous question?

Mr. RICHARDSON. I would like to have the report read, so that we may know what we are acting on.

Mr. THOMAS. The report has been read and discussed in the Committee of the Whole, but if the gentleman is not familiar with it I shall not insist on the demand.

Mr. RICHARDSON. I would like to have the report read.

Mr. THOMAS. I withdraw the demand, so as to have the report read. The SPEAKER pro tempore. The report will be read in the time of the gentleman from Michigan. The report (by Mr. BAKER of Kansas) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Invalid Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (S. 637) granting a pension to George M. Brooks, having carefully considered the same, adopt as their own the annexed Senate report (No. 351), and recommend that the bill do pass.

[Senate Report No. 351, Fifty-fourth Congress, first session.]

[Senate Report No. 351, Fifty-fourth Congress, first session.]

The Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (S. 637) granting a pension to George M. Brooks, have examined the same, and report:
The record shows that said Brooks was enrolled on the 9th day of August, 1862, as a private in Company D, Sixty-ninth Regiment Indiana Volunteers.
Said Brooks testifies that he contracted the measles while in camp at Indianapolis, Ind., about the middle of November, 1862, which entirely destroyed his voice and induced pain in his breast, from which he is still suffering; and that during the fall of 1862 and the following winter, while he was in the service of the United States, he incurred a throat and lung trouble from which he has never been entirely clear since; that it has at times been better, and at other times worse, and sometimes very bad; that some of his physicians told him that he had bronchitis, others that it was a throat and lung trouble, and others asthma; that for years he has been troubled with dizziness and swimming in the head, glimmering in the eyes, shortness of the breath under moderate exercise or excitement, and has general disability. Surgeon Jameson testifies that said Brooks had some acute bronchitis folfowing the measles; he also had the jaundice, which was contracted while in the United States service and line of duty at Indianapolis on or about November 15, 1862.

In certificate of disability for discharge the surgeon certifies to aphonia and general debility, consequent upon measles contracted in camp.

The examining surgeon, on October 23, 1863, finds aphonia and debility, consequent upon measles; that he is still unable to labor; disability at three-fourths.

P. H. Jameson, acting surgeon United States Army, states that when sol.

The examining surgeon on October 23, 1863, finds aphonia and debility, consequent upon measles; that he is still unable to labor; disability at three-fourths.

P. H. Jameson, acting surgeon United States Army, states that when soldier was discharged "he was unfit for duty by reason of acute bronchitis following measles: he had also jaundice, which was contracted while in the service of the United States and the line of his duty at Indianapolis, Ind., on or about the 15th day of November, 1862."

Said Brooks was honorably discharged on the 29th day of April, 1863, and on his certificate of discharge it is stated that he was discharged "by reason of general disability and aphonia, consequent upon measles contracted in camp at Indianapolis."

The evidence shows that said Brooks made application for an invalid pension in 1863, which was granted to him on pension certificate No. 1863]. The pension certificate stated that said Brooks should have an annual examination in order to draw his yearly pension, but on account of his having failed to appear for his medical examination in 1884 he was dropped from the rolls as a pensioner, and has never received any pension since.

On February 27, 1891, said Brooks made application to the Pension Office for "restoration to the pension rolls on account of permanent disability from bronchial troubles, weak eyes, piles, disease of liver, and general debility." But on account of his not being able to furnish all the evidence required of him by the Pension Office he has falled to get restored to the pension rolls. Said Brooks further testifies that he is unable to furnish evidence required showing physical condition from 1834 to 1838 for the following reason, to wit: Soon after being discharged he left home on account of his health, and passed from under the care and cognizance of a family physician, going from place to place and not remaining long in any one place, and having no permanent home until the winter of 1867-68, and the time having so long since passed that he is unable to find those by whom to furnish the required evidence; also, believing that drugs would not cure him, he sought no medical treatment. George W. Mears, examining surgeon, on May 1, 1863, rated said Brooks as three-fourths incapacitated for obtaining his subsistence by manual labor from aphonia and debility.

L. D. Personett, M. D., testifies February 21, 1863, that said Brooks had been under his treatment for bronchitis and aphonia, the result of an attack of measles while in camp at Indianapolis in November, 1862.

W. P. Morrison, M. D., under date of August 20, 1831, testifies as follows:

"I have known the above George M. Brooks for the last thirteen years; that I am his family physician, and that the said George M. Brooks has suffered from aphonia and chronic liver disease; further, that he is a strictly temperate man and of good habits; that I consider him incapacitated for heavy manual labor or farm work, and has been the entire time of my acquaintance with him, by reason of the above disability."

Following is the professional statement of a reputable physician concerning the present condition of the soldier's health:

Sallina, Kans., February 18, 1896.

SALINA, KANS., February 18. 1896.

I have this day examined George M. Brooks, about 53 years of age, late a private in Company D of the Sixty-ninth Regiment Indiana Volunteers. Having been his family physician for the last two years, I am of the opinion that his disability resulted from an attack of measles which led to a chronic bronchitis, with exacerbations and remissions and attended with considerable bronchorrhea, always worse in the winter months. He also has a weak heart heart.

He is entirely unfit to perform manual labor, but does perform about onefourth that of an able-bodied man.

W. S. HARVEY, M. D.

Personally appeared before me, clerk of the district court in and for Saline County, Kans., W. S. Harvey, personally known to me to be a practicing physician, and made the foregoing affidavit.

Sworn to and subscribed before me this 20th day of February, A. D. 1896.

[SEAL.]

Clerk of the District Court of Saline County, Kans.

I, A. L. Brown, clerk of said county and State aforesaid, do hereby certify that W. S. Harvey is a practicing physician of twenty-five years' standing, as shown by the records on file in my office.

[SEAL]

The soldier himself makes oath and testifies as follows:

SALINA, KANS., February 19, 1896.

George M. Brooks, late a private in Company D, Sixty-ninth Regiment Indiana Volunteers, being duly sworn, says that he is the identical George M. Brooks above referred to; that he is now in the fifty-fourth year of his age. He further says that he is disabled from doing physical labor, and that this disability is the result of measles contracted in the fall of the year 1862 while he was in the military service of the United States, so he verily believes; that he has never been able to do regular physical labor since he was discharged from the service of the United States.

Sworn and subscribed to before me this 19th day of February, 1896.
[SEAL.]

A. L. BROWN, County Clerk.

A. L. BROWN, County Clerk.

All of which being considered, your committee recommend the passage of the bill.

Mr. THOMAS. I renew the motion for the previous question. The previous question was ordered, and under the operation thereof the bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

JOHN J. BOATWRIGHT.

The next unfinished business on the Private Calendar was the bill (H. R. 6233) granting an increase of pension to John J. Boatwright.

The bill was read at length.

Mr. THOMAS. Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question on the bill to its passage

The previous question was ordered, and under the operation thereof the amendment recommended by the Committee of the Wh le was agreed to, and the bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

CHARLES W. SENTMAN.

The next unfinished business on the Private Calendar was the bill (H. R. 1311) granting an increase of pension to Charles W. Sentman.

The bill was read. Mr. THOMAS. Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question on the bill to its passage.

The previous question was ordered, and under the operation thereof the amendment recommended by the Committee of the Whole was agreed to, and the bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

CLARA L. NICHOLS.

The next unfinished business on the Private Calendar was the bill (H. R. 6528) to increase the pension of Clara L. Nichols, widow of the late Bvt. Maj. Gen. W. A. Nichols. The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc. That the pension of Clara L. Nichols, widow of the late Bvt. Maj. Gen. W. A. Nichols, of the United States Army, be, and it is hereby, increased from $30 per month to $100 per month, and the Secretary of the Interior is hereby authorized and directed to place the name of the said Clara L. Nichols upon the pension roll at the rate of $100 per month, subject to the provisions of existing pension laws.

Mr. DALZELL. Mr. Speaker, this bill as it was originally introduced called for a pension of $100 per month. The Committee on Invalid Pensions reported the bill at $75 a month, and the Committee of the Whole on consideration of the bill amended it here.

mittee of the Whole, on consideration of the bill, amended it by inserting $50 a month. Now, I trust that this amendment will not pass; and if I may judge the temper of the House by the action taken within the last hour in the case of the widow of General Gibbon it will not pass; and measuring the sense of the House by its action in that case, it ought not to pass. There is no reason in the world why this distinction should be made between the widow of General Gibbon and the widow of this gallant officer of the Regular Army, for there was no more gallant officer in the the Regular Army, for there was no more gallant officer in the Regular Army than General Nichols. He served a period reaching from 1838 to 1866. He was a soldier, a distinguished soldier, of the Mexican war. His services in the Mexican war were many times recognized in a public way and by promotion, and upon the strength of his services alone his widow ought to have the amount that was named in the original bill. But, Mr. Speaker, outside of that altogether, this bill makes the appeal to this House upon another and a different ground. This widow, 60 years of age, has the right to come here and for her own services ask recognition at the hands of the Government.

Mr. RICHARDSON. Will the gentleman allow me to ask him

Mr. RICHARDSON. Will the gentleman allow me to ask him

a question? Mr. DALZELL.

Mr. DALZELL. Certainly. Mr. RICHARDSON. What was the actual rank of General Nichols? He was a brevet major-general, I know, but what was his actual rank?

Mr. DALZELL. I will read the gentleman his record; it is very brief:

Cadet at the United States Military Academy, July 1, 1834, to July 1, 1838, when he was graduated and promoted; brevet second lieutenant Second Artillery, July 1, 1838; second lieutenant, July 7, 1838; first lieutenant, June 1, 1844; regimental adjutant, August 18, 1846, to December 8, 1847, and September 1, 1848, to September 2, 1852; brevet captain, assistant adjutant-general, July 29, 1852; brevet major, assistant adjutant-general, March 7, 1861; lieutenant-colonel, assistant adjutant-general, August 3, 1861; colonel, assistant adjutant-general, June 1, 1864.

Brevetted captain September 23, 1846, for gallant conduct in the several conflicts at Monterey, Mexico; major, September 8, 1847, for gallant and meritorious conduct in the battle of Molino del Rey, Mexico; brigadier-general, September 24, 1864, and major-general, March 13, 1865, for meritorious and faithful services during the war.

Mr. RICHARDSON. But the gentleman does not state what General Nichols's actual rank was at the end.

Mr. DALZELL. I understand that his actual rank was major-

Mr. RICHARDSON. Brevet major-general, was it not? Mr. DALZELL. I read at the end of this record the words: And major-general, March 13, 1865, for meritorious and faithful services during the war.

Mr. RICHARDSON. I understand the report to say that he was a brevet major-general.

Mr. DALZELL. Well, I am unable to further inform the gen-

Mr. DALZELL. Well, I am unable to further morn the gen-tleman what his real rank was.

Mr. STEELE. The reading of the report shows that he was a Mr. DALZELL. I am informed that he was actually a brigadier-general. Mr. BLUE. Mr. Speaker, has the report in this case been read?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. It has not.
Mr. BLUE. The report will disclose what was the actual rank of this soldier, and I ask to have it read.
Mr. DALZELL. Oh, it is not worth while to take up time reading the report.

Mr. BLUE. It is very short, I believe.

Mr. THOMAS. It is two closely printed pages.
Mr. BLUE. Well, my recollection is that the report does not say that he was a major-general or that he ever claimed to be a major-general. The highest rank he reached, according to my recollection, was major-general by brevet.

Mr. THOMAS. But he was an actual brigadier-general.

Mr. BLUE. I am not certain about that.
Mr. THOMAS. That is my recollection, and the presumption is that he would not be brevetted a major-general unless he was

Is that he would not be brevetted a major-general unless he was previously a brigadier.

Mr. BLUE. Oh, he might be.

Mr. DALZELL. He is called at the beginning of this report "Bvt. Maj. Gen. W. A. Nichols."

Mr. BLUE. And that is what he really was.

Mr. DALZELL. Well, Mr. Speaker, I do not care whether he was a major-general or only a major, there is no reason in the world why there should he any distinction made between this case. world why there should be any distinction made between this case and the one that was passed upon less than an hour ago, and I and the one that was passed upon less than an hour ago, and I appeal to this House to say that there shall be no such distinction. When I was interrupted I was going on to say that, apart from the services of her husband, this lady herself has a right to appeal to this House upon her own merits, and in support of that statement I read from a document that was presented to the Committee on Invalid Pensions and is embodied in this report:

Unfortunately, the war of the rebellion found General Nichols serving in Texas, the adjutant-general of the arch traitor Gen. David Twiggs, and with many others he was forced to submit to the humiliation of being given over to the enemy as a "prisoner of war" without even the opportunity to draw sword in his own defense or the service of his Government, but even here General Nichols rendered good and efficient aid by thwarting the plans of Twiggs and his confederates, as will be shown by the accompanying pamphlet; Texas and Its Late Military Occupation, by Captain Phillips, U. S. A., pages 13 and 16; Extracts from General Townsend's Anecdotes of the Civil War, and the Records of the Rebellion.

In this matter I was able to assist my husband by sewing in my clothing valnable papers from the headquarters of General Twiggs, and more effectually by writing in the smallest hand upon the silk paper taken from the books on my parior table orders dictated and signed by General, then Major, Nichols, which I concealed in the center of new spools of cotton, replacing the little round label. These spools I managed to convey successfully to Major French, of the artillery, Colonel Waite, and others, thus saving to the Government the valuable "Light Battery," and preventing Colonel Waite's entire command from being intercepted by the Texan Rangers and deprived of their arms and munitions.

Upon that ground I say if upon no other, this worthy widow.

Upon that ground, I say, if upon no other, this worthy widow is entitled to recognition. She is now 66 years of age. Not until she found it impossible to rely upon her own resources did she make any appeal to the Government for aid. Upon the death of her husband in 1866, General Sheridan procured for her the position of postmistress at Fort Leavenworth. Kans., and for twenty-three years she has been supporting herself by her own labor. She is now old, needy, and helpless, and I greatly mistake the temper of this House if it shall turn out that she makes this appeal temper of this House if it shall turn out that she makes this appeal to it in vain. I hope the amendment will not prevail.

Mr. DOCKERY. I wish to ask the gentleman whether it is not true that the greater part of the services of General Nichols in the late war were rendered in the Adjutant-General's Office?

Mr. DALZELL. I have already stated that he was taken prisoner at the beginning of the war, and was thereby crippled in the service that he could otherwise have rendered.

Mr. THOMAS. Now, Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question on the bill and amendment to its passage.

The previous question was ordered.

The question being taken on the amendment reducing the amount to $50 per month, the Speaker pro tempore declared that the ayes seemed to have it.

Mr. DALZELL. I ask for a division. The House divided; and there were—ayes 43, noes 60. So the amendment was rejected.

The committee amendment striking out "one hundred" before the word "dollars" and inserting "seventy-five" was then adopted.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time.

Mr. CROWTHER called for the reading of a copy of the engrossed bill, but withdrew the demand.

The bill was accordingly read the third time, and passed.
On motion of Mr. DALZELL, a motion to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed was laid on the table.

LEROY M. BETHEA.

The next unfinished business on the Private Calendar was the bill (H. R. 7317) to increase the pension of Leroy M. Bethea. The bill was read.

Mr. THOMAS. I move the previous question on the bill to its

The previous question was ordered, and under the operation thereof the bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

JOHN J. COPLEY.

The next unfinished business on the Private Calendar was the bill (H. R. 1474) granting a pension to John J. Copley.

The bill was read.

The bill was read.

The amendment reported from the Committee of the Whole House, to strike out, in line 9, the word "twelve" and insert "eight," so as to make the rate of pension $8 per month, was read.

Mr. THOMAS. I move the previous question on the amendment and on the bill to its final passage.

The previous question was ordered.

The amendment was agreed to

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

SA AH E. COMLY.

The next unfinished business on the Private Calendar was the bill (S. 937) granting an increase of pension to Sarah E. Comly, widow of Maj. Clifton Comly. The bill was read.

Mr. THOMAS. I move the previous question on the bill to its passage.

The previous question was ordered; and under the operation thereof the bill was ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

The next business was the bill (H. R. 1810) directing the Secretary of the Interior to place Sarah E. Comly on the pension roll, etc.

Mr. THOMAS. As this House bill is equivalent in its provisions to the Senate bill just passed, I move that this bill lie on the table. The motion was agreed to.

RERNHARD STUEBER.

The next unfinished business on the Private Calendar was the bill (H. R. 537) to remove the charge of desertion from the military record of Bernhard Stueber.

The bill was read.

The amendment was read, as follows:

Strike out the two paragraphs beginning with the word "Whereas."

Mr. THOMAS. I call for the previous question on the amendment and on the bill to its passage.

Mr. WILSON of Ohio. I hope the gentleman will allow me

Mr. THOMAS. I withdraw the call for the previous question temporarily.

Mr. WILSON of Ohio. I desire to submit a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. PAYNE). The gentleman will state it.

Mr. WILSON of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, I secured the passage through this House of a bill relieving a man from the charge of desertion, but the Department refused to grant him a discharge. I want to add his name to this bill, requiring the Department to grant a discharge.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Such an amendment as that would not be germane to this bill.

Mr. WILSON of Ohio. Well, I ask that it be done by common consent. My statement is this: In the Fifty-third Congress a bill introduced by myself was passed relieving the man to whom I have referred from the charge of desertion. I failed to put in the bill a requirement that he should have an honorable discharge. The Department has refused to grant him the discharge. By adding to this bill such a provision as I have indicated, he will get his discharge, to which he is clearly entitled, because the charge of desertion has been removed. I ask unanimous consent that the amendment I have indicated be added to this bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Such an amendment would not be germane to the bill and would not be in order. The Chair does not think he ought to entertain such a proposition.

Mr. WILSON of Ohio. Not by unanimous consent?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. I suppose the Chair has the prerogative of objecting. [Laughter.] The gentleman from Michigan [Mr. Thomas] moves the previous question.

Mr. WILSON of Ohio. Do I understand that the Speaker, by virtue of his membership, makes the objection?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair declines to submit the proposition to the House because it is directly in conflict with the rule, which in this case the Chair thinks ought to be enforced, because if the precedent should be set of allowing a private bill relating to one individual to be amended by inserting the name of another, it might lead to endless confusion. For this reason the Chair declines to submit the proposition. The gentleman from Michigan moves the previous question.

Mr. LOUD. I should like to have the bill read.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Does the gentleman from Michigan withdraw the demand for the previous question?

Mr. THOMAS. No; because the bill has been read.

Mr. LOUD. Let me suggest to the gentleman that he has not votes enough here to order the previous question if opposition should be made. I only want the bill read as it now appears. That is the only request I make.

Mr. THOMAS. Very well.

Mr. LOUD. The request is perfectly reasonable.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will report the bill as it will read with the amendment.

The bill was again read as amended.

The bill was again read as amended.

Mr. LOUD. I only wanted to see the shape in which the bill was placed by the amendment. There were a number of "whereases" in the original bill. It was a perfectly reasonable request, as I understand it, to ask for the reading of the amended bill.

Mr. THOMAS. Certainly. The whereases were stricken out. I now demand the previous question, Mr. Speaker.

The previous question was ordered, under the operation of which the amendments were agreed to, and the bill as amended ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

JOSEPH H. JOHNSON.

The next unfinished business on the Private Calendar was the bill (H. R. 2364) for the relief of Joseph H. Johnson, reported from the Committee of the Whole with a favorable recommendation.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of War is hereby directed to remove the charge of desertion from the military record of Joseph H. Johnson, late a private of Company I, One hundred and fiftieth Regiment Indiana Volunteer Infantry, and to issue to him an honorable discharge as of date August 5, 1865, and that said Johnson shall be entitled to receive from the accounting officers of the Treasury all pay and allowances which may have been due him on said date of discharge, excluding therefrom the time of his absence without leave

Mr. DOCKERY. Is there not an amendment to that bill?

Mr. THOMAS. I move the previous question. Mr. DOCKERY. Mr. Speaker, I desire to ask if an amendment is recommended by the committee to that bill?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. There seems to be no amendment.

Mr. DOCKERY. If I caught the reading of the bill aright, it is an entire departure from the custom heretofore prevailing in respect to bills for the removal of charges of desertion, in that it gives to this soldier back pay and allowances to which he may have been entitled.

Mr. THOMAS. I do not understand that to be the effect of the bill. It was prepared by the Committee on Military Affairs, and as I understand the bill, it excepts the payment of all allowances to him during the time he was absent

Mr. DOCKERY. I will read the bill.

And that said Johnson shall be entitled to receive from the accounting offi-cers of the Treasury all pay and allowances which may have been due him on said date of discharge, excluding therefrom the time of his absence with-out leave.

Now, so far as I am able to recall, this is the first bill that we have undertaken to pass in this form. No such bill has passed the House heretofore. A special provision to these bills granting an honorable discharge has heretofore always excluded pay, bounty, or other allowances

Mr. LOUD. Had not we better have the report read?

Mr. DOCKERY. I ask, as I have the floor, that the report be read in my time.

The report (by Mr. TRACEY) was read, as follows:

The report (by Mr. Tracey) was read, as follows:

The committee on Military Affairs, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 2364) for the rel ef of Joseph H. Johnson, have had the same under consideration, and report thereon as follows:

Joseph H. Johnson was enrolled and mustered into service as a private in Company I of the One hundred and fifteenth Indiana Volunteers on the 25th day of February, 1865, to serve one year. He is charged with having deserted on the 14th day of July, 1865. He left the command at that date and did not return in time to be mustered out with his regiment on the 5th of August, 1865. It will be noted that the war was over when he left the command. His reason for leaving, which is fully corroborated by the testimony, was that he had been informed that his wife was very sick. He applied for a furlough and was refused. He went home and remained eight or ten days, until his wife was out of danger, and then started to return to his command. When he arrived at Lafayette, Ind., he met a number of his comrades returning home, and they informed him that the regiment had been mustered out. He then returned home with his comrades.

When he left the command in Virginia, he told his comrades that his wife was not expected to live, and that he was going home to see her and would return soon if he could leave her. He left his gun and accounterments with the ordnance sergeant.

The testimony shows that he was a man of good character and habits, and a faithful soldier. Relief was denied by the War Department for the reason that the case does not come within the provisions of the act of Congress approved March 2, 1889.

It is apparent, however, to your committee that the soldier did not intend to desert his command. He testified himself that the captain of his company gave him leave to go. His veracity appears to be unquestioned, and the fact that he started to return to his command as soon as he could safely leave his wife is conclusive proof that his conduct was not that of a deserter.

Your committee

Mr. DOCKERY. I would suggest to the gentleman in charge of this bill that even if it were proper to grant the beneficiary of the bill back pay and allowances, the language of the bill does not accomplish that purpose. It provides that

Said Johnson shall be entitled to receive from the accounting officers of the Treasury all pay and allowances, etc.

The accounting officers of the Treasury have no money for such purposes, and the bill is therefore faulty, in that it makes no appropriation.

Mr. Speaker, I will offer an amendment, to strike out all after the words "sixty-five," in line 8, down to and including the word

"leave," in line 12. Mr. THOMAS.

Mr. THOMAS. Mr. Speaker, I ask the previous question. Mr. DOCKERY. I think there has been some inadvertence in framing the bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will read the amendment proposed by the gentleman from Missouri.

The Clerk read as follows:

In line 8, after the words "sixty-five," strike out all the remainder of the bill.

Mr. THOMAS. I desire to say that the gentleman who reported this bill is now present. It comes from the Committee on Military Affairs. I know nothing personally of the facts. Mr. Tracey, the gentleman who made the report, will explain the bill.

Mr. TRACEY. Mr. Speaker, I wish to move to amend the amendment of the gentleman from Missouri by striking out the words "shall be entitled to receive from the accounting officers of the Treasury.

As I understand it, it is entirely proper that the bill shall state, in granting the discharge, and the testimony warrants the statement, that the soldier shall be entitled to receive the pay and allowances which may be found due to him and which were withheld because of the charge of desertion made against him and now on the records of the Department.

Mr. LOUD. Was he a deserter?

Mr. TRACEY. He was not. The testimony shows conclu-

Mr. TRACEY. He was not. The testimony shows conclusively that he was not a deserter.

Mr. LOUD. What is the definition of a "deserter"?

Mr. TRACEY. The gentleman will find it very carefully and accurately stated in a note appended to the Supplement to the Revised Statutes of the United States, in which it is stated that desertion must be determined by the intent of the soldier at the time he left the command.

Mr. LOUD. Can you now determine what was the intent of the soldier, what was in his mind, at this distance of time?

Mr. TRACEY. I determine the intent, as the court always determines the intent, by the actions of the party, by his conduct. That is the way a court determines what the intent of a man is. I took the actions of this man, and the committee, in its investigations, took the actions of this soldier, into consideration for the purpose of determining what his intent was; and his actions show from the beginning to the end that there was no intent whatever to desert his command, but that, on the contrary, he went home because his wife was reported to him to be sick without hope of

Mr. LOUD. How many of these wives were sick? I think this is about the ten-thousandth one that I have heard of.

Mr. TRACEY. That may be true; but I know something about this from personal experience, and perhaps the gentleman does.

Mr. LOUD. Does the gentleman think that the soldier's long and meritorious services entitle him to this consideration?

Mr. TRACEY. No; he did not have long and meritorious

Mr. LOUD. He went in after the war was over-did not enlist mtil the latter part of February, 1865.

Mr. TRACEY. No; he went in during the latter portion of the war, and he was not an old man, either. He was a young man at the time, and while it is true that his enlistment was during the last months of the war, yet his services while he remained with the Army were those of a faithful soldier, and the proof before the committee warranted the committee in saying that he returned to committee warranted the committee in saying that he returned to his home with the full intention of coming back to his command as soon as his wife recovered so that he could come; and as soon as his wife was out of danger he did start back to join his command, and on the way back to join the regiment was informed by comrades of his own regiment returning home that the regiment had been mustered out of the service. Now, it seems to me that with these facts before the committee there ought to be no question about the right of this soldier to an honorable discharge from the Army, and with the honorable discharge from the Army the right to receive whatever pay and allowances may have been due right to receive whatever pay and allowances may have been due him at that time.

Mr. LOUD. I think the gentleman should accept the very liberal amendment of his colleague from Missouri [Mr. DOCKERY].
Mr. DOCKERY. Mr. Speaker, I hope my friend will not insist on retaining this proviso in the bill.
Mr. TRACEY. I have no particular objection, Mr. Speaker, to letting the amendment go; but, at the same time, it is an act of injustice. I shall not make any further opposition to the amendment.

amendment.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Does the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. Tracey] propose an amendment?

Mr. Tracey. I propose an amendment to the amendment.

Mr. LOUD. I think you had better withdraw that.

Mr. Tracey. I desire to say, Mr. Speaker, that if there seems to be any real desire on the part of the House to affix the amendment of the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. Dockery] to the bill had not make any further objection although it will be an act. I shall not make any further objection, although it will be an act of injustice.

Mr. DOCKERY. I only want to say, Mr. Speaker, that I remember that all the bills that have passed the House in recent years have carried a provision that no pay, emoluments, or bounty shall become due by reason of the passage of the act. That provision does not appear in this bill, but, on the contrary, you allow him pay, emoluments, and bounty.

Mr. TRACEY. If I may be permitted, I will withdraw my amendment to the amendment.

amendment to the amendment.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman withdraws his amendment. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. Dockery].

The amendment of Mr. Dockery was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

The next unfinished business on the Private Calendar was the bill (H. R. 5061) to pension Ira Powers, of Henderson County,

The bill was read.

Mr. THOMAS. I move the previous question on the bill and amendments to the passage of the bill.

The previous question was ordered.

The amendments recommended by the Committee of the Whole were agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

HESTER A. BOSTWICK.

The next unfinished business on the Private Calendar was the bill (H. R. 4941) to pension Hester A. Bostwick.
The bill was read.
Mr. THOMAS. I move the previous question.
The previous question was ordered.

The amendment recommended by the Committee of the Whole was agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

JOSIAH P. HILL.

The next unfinished business on the Private Calendar was the bill (H. R. 1168) to increase the pension of Josiah P. Hill, late Company F, Eighty-first Regiment of Illinois Volunteers, in the war of the rebellion.

The bill was read.

Mr. THOMAS. I move the previous question on the bill and amendments to its passage.

The previous question was ordered, and under the operation thereof the amendments recommended by the Committee of the Whole were agreed to, and the bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

SUSAN E. CUNNINGHAM.

The next unfinished business on the Private Calendar was the bill (S. 3182) granting a pension to Susan E. Cunningham.

The bill was read.

Mr. THOMAS. I demand the previous question on the bill to its passage.

The previous question was ordered, and under the operation thereof the bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

GEORGE L. BENNER.

The next unfinished business on the Private Calendar was the bill (H. R. 6841) granting a pension to George L. Benner. The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place upon the pension roll the name of George L. Benner and grant him a pension because of a fracture of right thigh, received during the civil war while said Benner was an employee of the Quartermaster's Department; said pension to be rated according to the degree of disability existing as the result of said injury.

Mr. THOMAS. Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question on the bill to its passage.

Mr. LOUD. Mr. Speaker, I think the gentleman had better have the report read.

Mr. THOMAS. Mr. Speaker, I will withdraw the demand for

Mr. Inomas. Mr. Speaker, I will withdraw the demand for that purpose.

Mr. LOUD. Mr. Speaker, I want the report read, as this is a radical departure from the law and established custom.

The SPEAKEB. The Clerk will read the report as a part of the remarks of the gentleman from California.

The report (by Mr. Miles) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Invalid Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 6841) entitled "A bill granting a pension to George L. Benner," beg leave to submit the following report, and recommend that said bill do pass without 6841) entitled "A bill granting a pension to George L. Benner," beg leave to submit the following report, and recommend that said bill do pass without amendment:

This is a bill enacting that the Secretary of the Interior be authorized and directed to place upon the pension roll the name of George L. Benner and grant him a pension because of a fracture of the right thigh, received during the civil war while said Benner was an employee of the Quartermaster's Department, to be rated according to the degree of disability existing as the result of said injury.

George L. Benner was a teamster during the war of the rebellion, employed by the United States under Captain Dana, United States Army, an assistant quartermaster; also under a wagon master named Lyles, and was accidentally injured, while performing his duties, by being caught between the front wheel of an army wagon and a tree, about November 7, 1861, incurring a fracture of the right thigh.

Dr. N. S. Lincoln, surgeon of quartermaster's hospital, testified February 28, 1896, that George L. Benner was admitted to the quartermaster's hospital, under his (Dr. Lincoln's) charge, on the 7th of November, 1861, on account of a bad fracture of the thigh; that he suffered severely many weeks, and has never completely recovered from the effects of the injury.

Dr. James T. Young, medical assistant, quartermaster's hospital, testifies (February 29, 1890) that George L. Benner was admitted to the quartermaster's hospital, testifies of the injury.

The fracture was treated by Dr. N. S. Lincoln with Dr. Young's assistance.

Your committee believe the bill is meritorious, and precedents having been set by previous action of Congress in pensioning the employees in Quartermaster's Department for injuries received in line of duty, earnestly recommend the passage of the bill without amendment.

Mr. LOUD. Mr. Speaker, I can not understand why this gentleman is any more entitled, either by law or equity, to a pension than any man who was injured in the performance of any service to an individual, a corporation, or to the Government. This gentleman voluntarily sought employment in the Quartermaster's Department—it is true while there was a war pending, but he was in a very safe position, as everybody knows, out of range of any possibility of being killed, without some accident should happen to which he might himself contribute. I have known of teamsters that used to get too much liquor and fall off their teams. I want to suggest, in perfect fairness to the gentleman from Michigan, that he ought to withdraw this bill to-night.

Mr. THOMAS. Mr. Speaker, the gentleman from Maryland [Mr. MILES], who made the report, being present, I could not do that without his consent.

Mr. MILES It is not my bill but I did make the report.

Mr. MILES. It is not my bill, but I did make the report.
Mr. THOMAS. The gentleman from Maryland [Mr. Coffin] introduced this bill, and if he is present I would like him to defend

Mr. MILES. I did not introduce the bill, but I did make the report.

Mr. LOUD. I hope the gentleman will assume the responsibility in this case that he has in previous cases and withdraw the

Mr. THOMAS. I am willing that it should go over, remaining on the Calendar.

Mr. LOUD. Of course, if it is withdrawn it would occupy the same position it does now. I think we ought to have a little fuller

House to pass this bill.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, the bill will be considered as remaining on the Calendar without prejudice.

There was no objection, and it was so ordered.

ANNIE E. NOLAN.

The next unfinished business on the Private Calendar was the bill (S. 2129) granting an increase of pension to Annie E. Nolan. The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Annie E. Nolan, widow of Nicholas Nolan, late major Third United States Cavalry, at the rate of $50 per month, in lieu of the pension she is now receiving.

Mr. THOMAS. Mr. Speaker, I ask that the report be read in

The report (by Mr. POOLE) was read, as follows:

The report (by Mr. Poole) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Invalid Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (S. 2129) granting an increase of pension to Annie E. Nolan, adopt the following Senate report (No. 345):

"The Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (S. 2129) granting an increase of pension to Annie E. Nolan, have examined the same, and report:

"Nicholas Nolan served his country as a soldier continuously from December 9, 1852, to October 25, 1883, at which time he died from wounds and disease contracted in the service. He entered the Army as a private and was successively promoted through the several grades to that of major of the Third United States Cavalry. He was an especially brave and faithful soldier, his service during the war of the rebellion in the Shenandoah Valley, and also in Arizona, the Indian Territory, and other far western points being of the highest military order. For a considerable time before his death he was a sick man, but he remained with his command and literally died at his post of duty, after a military career of over thirty-one years.

"The following is Major Nolan's military record, as furnished by the War Department:

"War Department, Adjutant-General's Office,
"Washington, February 20, 1896.

"Statement of the military service of Nicholas Nolan, late of the United States Army, compiled from the records of this office.

"He served as private and corporal of Battery M, Fourth Artillery, from December 9, 1852, to September 1, 1858; as private, corporal, sergeant, and first sergeant of Troop K, Second Dragoons, from September 1, 1858, to September 5, 1861, and as sergeant and first sergeant of Troop B, Sixth Cavalry, from September 5, 1861, to September 22, 1862, when he was discharged, having accepted appointment as second lieutenant, Sixth Cavalry. Second lieutenant, Sixth Cavalry, July 17, 1862; first lieutenant, July 5, 1864; captain, Tenth Cavalry, July 28, 1866; major, Third Cavalry, December 19, 1882. He was brevetted first lieutenant August 1, 1863, 'for gallant and meritorious services in the battle of Brandy Station, Va.,' and captain March 31, 1865, 'for gallant and meritorious services in the battle of Dinwiddie Court-House, Va.'

"EREVICE. "SERVICE.

"He served as an officer with his regiment in the Army of the Potomac to July 11, 1863; acting assistant inspector-general, Regular Cavalry Brigade, to September, 1863, and aid-de-camp to General Pleasonton to October 14, 1863, when he was wounded in action at Auburn, Va., and was absent sick on account of his wounds to January, 1864; with his regiment in the Army of the Potomae and in the Shenandoah Valley to March 30, 1865, when taken prisoner and paroled at the battle of Dinwiddie Court-House, Va.; on parole and on leave to May, 1865; with regiment in Maryland to October, 1865, and in Texas and the Indian Territory to November 13, 1870; before a board at Washington, D. C., to January, 1871; with his regiment in the Indian Territory and in Texas to February 8, 1883; commanding the post of Fort Huachuca, Ariz., to August 14, 1883, and the post of Fort Apache, Ariz., to October 16, 1883, when he left on leave of absence for Holbrook, Ariz., where he died October 25, 1883.

"W. P. HALL, Assistant Adjutant-General

raise this above the general run of cases, and to make it exceptional, inasmuch as the only way in which the Congress can provide for this invalid son of a brave soldier who died at the post of duty is by increasing the pension of the widow who cares for him.

Your committee therefore roommend the passage of the bill.

The amendment recommended by the committee was read, as

Strike out "fifty" and insert "twenty-five."

Mr. THOMAS. Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question.
Mr. RICHARDSON. Before the gentleman moves the previous question, I want to ask him if there is not an amendment proposed there which reduces the pension from $50 to $25? I understood the Clerk to read such an amendment. She is getting $25.

Mr. THOMAS. I understand she receives only $20 a month,

Mr. RICHARDSON. The report stated that she was getting $25 a month.

Mr. TRACEY. She is only getting $20.

Mr. RICHARDSON. As I understood the Clerk, he read it $25, and I could not understand why the amendment should propose $25 when she was drawing $25 a month. I think you had better look to see if I am not correct.

look to see if I am not correct.

Mr. THOMAS. The gentleman from New York [Mr. POOLE] made the report. He can make a statement.

Mr. POOLE. Mr. Speaker, in this case the widow is now drawing $20 per month. That matter was fully looked into by the committee. I made the report, and the committee unanimously reported the bill at $25, which is an increase of $5 per month.

Mr. RICHARDSON. I was not opposing it, but I was under the impression that the report stated that she was now getting $25.

Mr. THOMAS. I think that is an error if it is so stated.

The previous question was ordered, and under the operation thereof the amendment was agreed to, and the bill as amended was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

was ordered to a tind reading, and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

Mr. THOMAS. Mr. Speaker, I move to reconsider the votes by which the several bills have been passed under the special rule, and I also move that that motion be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED.

Mr. HAGER, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that they had examined and found truly enrolled bills of the following titles; when the Speaker signed the same:

A bill (S. 2176) granting a pension to Thomas Pollock;

A bill (S. 1075) for the relief of the heirs of D. Fulford; and A bill (S. 347) to remove the charge of desertion and grant an honorable discharge to Helmuth F. Seckel.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE.

By unanimous consent, leave of absence was granted as follows: To Mr. PITNEY, on account of sickness.

To Mr. Heatwole, for this day, on account of sickness. To Mr. Johnson of California, on account of important busi-

To Mr. DAYTON, for two days, on account of important busi-

To Mr. VAN VOORHIS, for five days, on account of important

To Mr. WOODARD, for six days, on account of important busi-

To Mr. Acheson, for two days, on account of important busi-

To Mr. VAN HORN, for four days, on account of important busi-

To Mr. Stahle, for two days, on account of important business. To Mr. Hill, for five days, on account of important business. To Mr. Hart, for one day, on account of important business. To Mr. WILLIAMS (on motion of Mr. BOATNER), for this evening, on account of illness.

Mr. LACEY. Mr. Speaker, I rise to make a parliamentary inquiry as to the status of House bill No. 3656, the free-homes bill. It passed the House, went to the Senate, and now comes back with amendments enlarging the scope of the bill, and the question I wish to ask is whether it would be proper to move to nonconcur and ask for a conference, or what course the bill would take under and ask for a conference, or what course the bill would take under the ruling of the Chair.

The SPEAKER. The bill, under the ruling of the Chair, would take the course of reference to the Committee on Public Lands.

Mr. LACEY. Let me suggest, however, that the Senate asks for a conference and names the conferees.

The SPEAKER. The Chair is aware of that, and perhaps he had better state to the House now the conclusion he has arrived the coasse of that hind having acted at least one cases of that hind having acted at least one cases. died October 25, 1853.

"W. P. HALL, Assistant Adjutant-General.

"Major Nolan left a wife and one child without property of any kind. The widow is not strong, having undergone unusual hardships and privations with her husband in his campaigns. She is now receiving a pension of 25 per month and is exerting herself to earn sufficient to support herself and child, a daughter 14 years of age. The present bill asks for an increase of pension to $50 per month.

"Your committee, after a very careful examination of the case, and in view of the long and distinguished services of Major Nolan, recommend favorable action on the bill."

The SPEAKER. The Chair is aware of that, and perhaps he had better state to the House now the conclusion he has arrived at as to cases of that kind, having acted at least once recently upon a bill in a similar situation. The question has been passed upon once before in the history of the House, and in very much action on the bill."

In addition to the facts set forth in the Senate report, it is shown that this widow cares for an invalid stepson, the son of the soldier, for whose care and the same way. Mr. Carlisle, then Speaker, was at first inclined to think that the request of the Senate for a conference and names the conference.

The SPEAKER. The Chair is aware of that, and perhaps he had better state to the House now the conclusion he has arrived at as to cases of that kind, having acted at least once recently upon a bill in a similar situation. The question has been passed upon once before in the history of the House, and in very much the same way. Mr. Carlisle, then Speaker, was at first inclined to think that the request of the Senate for a conference and names the conference and names the

and so ruled; but after reflecting upon the results of that ruling he came to a different conclusion, which he announced in a decision which will be found in the RECORD. The present occupant of the chair in the Fifty-first Congress had originally the same idea that Mr. Carlisle had first entertained, and was disposed to give progress to such bills; but not having time to examine the question, he accompanied his decision with a statement that it was subject to further consideration. Upon further consideration it seemed very apparent that any other course than referring the bill to the House committee having charge of the matter would have the effect to give a preference to the Senate's request over the rights of members of the House, which could not be tolerated. Under our rule House bills with Senate amendments are to be considered without reference when the Senate amendments, if they had originated in the House, would not have to be considered in Committee of the Whole on the state of the Union; but when they would have been subject to such consideration, then it is the duty of the Chair to refer the bill with the amendments to the appropriate committee. That is the rule of the House.

Now, this bill comes before us with amendments made by the Senate which change its nature to such an extent as, in the opinion of the Chair, to bring the bill within the operation of the rule of the House which requires that Senate amendments making appropriations which have not been considered by the House shall be referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union. That being the case, this bill would be referred to the committee unless there is something in the request of the Senate for a conference to dispense with the reference. But the request committee unless there is something in the request of the Senate for a conference to dispense with the reference. But the request of the Senate for a conference, or the request of either House for a conference, in order to be binding upon the other House, in courtesy, should indicate, or should come after, an absolute disagreement between the two Houses. Then is the time when either House can obtain a conference, but either can ask for it before. I suppose that the House might pass a bill and ask for a conference upon it without the bill having gone to the Senate at all, and so the Senate might pass a bill and ask a conference upon it without the House having received the bill; and if, in that event, the measure was not subject to the rule of the House, then the Senate would have a method by which they could be more preva-Senate would have a method by which they could be more preva-lent in the House than the members of the House themselves, and dispense with a rule of the House, and that conclusion is, of course, one that would not be proper or suitable and could not be tolerated. The Senate may ask for a conference, but when the bill reaches the stage of disagreement, then that request takes effect upon the House, and the House will accede to the conference in pursuance of that courtesy which exists between the two houses of a legislative body.

Before it reaches the stage of disagreement the House has its own methods of examining questions and should not abandon them, and by its Rule No. XX has indicated its wish not to abandon them. Whatever under Rule XX goes to the Committee of the Whole must be referred to the committee having charge of the subject-matter.

The Chair has thought it worth while to state this view, although he has acted upon it at least once before without making any statement.

Mr. LACEY. Mr. Speaker, I made this inquiry because there is no record of any such decision, although I knew that such seemed

mr. PAYNE. I now renew my motion.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from New York [Mr. PAYNE] asks that the House now take its recess until 8 o'clock this evening. The Chair hears no objection. The House is accordingly in recess until 8 o'clock, at which time the gentleman from New York, Mr. PAYNE, will please take the chair as Speaker pro tempore.

EVENING SESSION.

The recess having expired, the House at 8 o'clock p. m. resumed its session, Mr. PAYNE in the chair as Speaker pro tempore.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will report clause 2 of Rule XXVI.

The Clerk read as follows:

The House shall, on each Friday at 5 o'clock p. m., take a recess until 8 o'clock, at which evening session private pension bills, bills for the removal of political disabilities, and bills removing charges of desertion only shall be considered, said evening session not to extend beyond 10 o'clock and 30 minutes.

Mr. THOMAS. I move that the House resolve itself into Committee of the Whole on the Private Calendar under the special rule.

The motion was agreed to.

The House accordingly resolved itself into Committee of the Whole on the Private Calendar, Mr. Charles W. Stone in the chair.

LENA D. SMITH.

Mr. EVANS. Mr. Chairman, before the committee proceeds with the regular order I desire to make a request—I might say an appeal—upon the facts which, with the permission of the commit-

Gen. Green Clay Smith was a soldier of the Mexican war. He enlisted also in the war of the rebellion, and reached the rank of a brigadier-general. He was twice a member of this House. After brigadier-general. He was twice a member of this House. After the close of the war he entered the ministry of the Baptist Church, and continued in it in my city and State for a number of years. Finally he came to this city, where, a year or two ago, he died, leaving a widow without means. Her son, I believe, her only son, has died since this House reconvened in December. At the last session of this Congress both Houses passed a bill giving her a pension. It so happened that the bill reached the President during the last days of the session and failed to receive his consideration. Since we reassembled the Senate has again passed the bill: tion. Since we reassembled the Senate has again passed the bill; and under these circumstances it seems to me that in making the present request, I am only asking that the bill be restored to the place of advantage it had before the adjournment deprived the President of the opportunity to consider the bill after it had passed both Houses of Congress. Under these circumstances, I ask the unanimous consent of the committee for the consideration of the bill at this time.

Mr. MILNES. What is the amount of pension proposed?
Mr. EVANS. Fifty dollars a month. The husband of the lady whom it is proposed to pension was a brigadier-general; and I believe that is about the figure at which such widows are usually pensioned by Congress.

The CHAIRMAN. Is the bill on the Calendar?

Mr. BLUE. Has there been a report in this case?
Mr. EVANS. Yes; the bill is on the Calendar. It has been assed by the Senate and considered by the committee of the House.

Mr. BLUE. Do I understand the gentleman from Kentucky to say that this man was a brigadier-general?

Mr. EVANS. He was; and he was also twice a member of this House, if that adds any weight to the case.

Mr. CROWTHER. Reserving the right to object, I ask that the bill be read.

The bill (S. 3381) granting a pension to Lena D. Smith, was read,

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place upon the pension roll the name of Lena D. Smith, widow of Green Clay Smith, late colonel Fourth Kentucky Cavalry and brigadier-general United States Volunteers, and to pay to her a pension of $50 per month from and after the date of the passage of this act.

Mr. MILNES. Let us hear the report.

The report (by Mr. Anderson) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Invalid Pensions to whom was referred the bill ($2321).

The report (by Mr. Anderson) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Invalid Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (S.3381) granting a pension to Lena D. Smith, having fully considered the facts and circumstances presented, submit the following:

Senate bill 1342, granting a pension of $50 per month to this beneficiary, passed the Senate February 19, 1896; was favorably reported from this committee at $50 per month March 17, 1896, and passed the House with an amendment fixing the rate of pension at $30 per month on May 29, 1896. The House amendment was agreed to in the Senate and the bill passed June 2, 1896, granting her a pension at $30 per month. The President failed to approve the bill, and ten days not having elapsed between the date when he received same and the adjournment of Congress, June 11, 1896, the bill failed to become a law.

In view of these facts the present bill was introduced and passed in the Senate December 14, 1896, on a verbal report of same by Senator VILAS from the Committee on Pensions.

Your committee attach hereto their former report on Senate bill 1342, and in consonance therewith recommend the passage of this bill.

[House Report No. 843, Fifty-fourth Congress, first session.]

[House Report No. 843, Fifty-fourth Congress, first session.]

House Report No. 843, Fifty-fourth Congress, first session.]

The Committee on Invalid Pensions, having carefully considered the bill (8. 1342) to pension Lena D. Smith, report as follows:

Green Clay Smith, the husband of this claimant, was mustered into service June 9, 1846, as second lieutenant Company H. First Kentucky Cavalry, Mexican War Volunteers, to serve for twelve months, and was mustered out June 8, 1847. He was mustered in as colonel Fourth Kentucky Cavalry April 4, 1862; was seriously wounded in the leg in action at Lebanon, Tenn., May 5, 1862. He was promoted to the rank of brigadier-general of volunteers June 12, 1862. In September, 1862, he was commanding the Second Division United States forces near Covington and Newport. Ky. He continued in active service, commanding a part of the time a brigade and some of the time a division, until December 1, 1863, when his resignation was accepted. He has a record of treatment for chronic diarrhea of two months' standing in 1863. He was brevetted major-general of volunteers to date March 13, 1865, for meritorious services during the war.

As is well known, General Smith died in this city a short time ago, and the evidence presented to this committee shows that he left his widow without means of support.

In view of his well-known services, he having rendered gallant and meritorious services in two wars, and of the need of the widow, your committee recommend the passage of the bill.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the present considera-

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the present consideration of this bill?

There was no objection.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is now on laying the bill aside to be reported favorably to the House.

Mr. MILNES. Does this bill provide for a pension of $50 a.

month?

Mr. EVANS. Yes, sir.
Mr. MILNES. Did it not pass before at $30 a month?
Mr. EVANS. I will say to the gentleman that that was an accident

Mr. MILNES. Well, Mr. Chairman, I move to amend the bill

Mr. MILNES. Well, Mr. Chairman, I move to amend the bill so as to make the pension $30 a month.

Mr. EVANS. I hope that amendment will be voted down. The uniform rule, I believe, has been to give at least $50 a month to the widow of a brigadier-general, and I am very sure there is no reason in this case why the House should act differently. Today we gave two widows of this class more than that amount.

Mr. CLARDY. Mr. Chairman, if the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. MILNES] had known Green Clay Smith as I knew him, he would not make this objection. To-day we passed a bill giving a pension of $100 a month to the widow of an officer of similar rank. Here is a case in which we ask for the widow of a brigadier-general a pension of only $50 a month. It does seem to me the most reasonable thing in the world that the House should accede to this proposition.

proposition.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment of the gentleman from Michigan.

Mr. CURTIS of New York. Mr. Chairman, I really believe that if my friend from Michigan could recall the services of Green Clay Smith, who was a Kentuckian in that part of the State that contributed so many men to the Southern cause, and who did so much to retain the State in the Union so far as the official action of the State was concerned—although many men went each way—my friend would hardly wish to reduce this pension to the widow of a man who was so gallant a soldier and who did so much for the Union. He rendered valuable services in the Congress of the United States aside from his services in the Army. Mr. Chairman, as to the widow of that officer—his services being of a character that rendered the name of Green Clay Smith illustrious—I would hardly think any man on this floor, even my friend from Michigan, would interpose an objection, although he is desirous of equalizing the pensions of officers and soldiers.

This pension is a small one, very small in comparison with the services rendered by General Smith, and it ought to be granted.

Mr. MILNES. Mr. Chairman, I deny that I am opposed to granting anything more to the widow of a general than to a private. I believe there is a distinction, but the trouble is that we undertake to make it too great in this House. There are thousands and tens of thousands of the widows of soldiers in this country who are just as dependent, and more dependent, perhaps, than the widow of this officer, widows of as gallant soldiers as ever carried a musket in any army on earth, and who are unable Clay Smith, who was a Kentuckian in that part of the State that than the widow of this officer, widows of as gallant soldiers as ever carried a musket in any army on earth, and who are unable to get a pension of over $8 a month. I think it wrong to grant a pension that makes such a discrimination as this, and I hope, therefore, the amendment will prevail.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment. The question was taken; and the amendment was rejected.

The bill was laid aside to be reported to the House with a favorable recommendation.

favorable recommendation.

ELIHU JONES.

Mr. BLUE. Mr. Chairman, this morning, under a request for unanimous consent, my friend from Pennsylvania interposed an objection to the consideration of a bill for a blind soldier because it had not gone through the Committee of the Whole. This is an instance of a soldier who has become, as I understand it, entirely blind. He served through a large portion of the war, served seven years in the Regular Army, and performed gallant and proficient services. This is an exceptional case. He is in very feeble health and poor circumstances; and I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (H. R. 5981) granting a pension to Elihu Jones, of Potwin, Butler County, Kans.

Mr. MILES. Did the gentleman say that he served in the late war?

war?
Mr. BLUE. Yes, sir.
Mr. MILES. How long a time?
Mr. BLUE. Well, I am not positive as to the exact time, but I think he probably served three years. He was seven years in the Regular Army.
Mr. RINAKER. Was he a general?
Mr. BLUE. No, sir; he was not. He was a captain.
The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the bill, after which the Chair will ask if there be objection to its present consideration.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place the name of Elihu Jones, of Potwin, Butler County, Kans., late captain Company G. Eighth Illinois Infantry, on the pension roll and pay him a pension of $50 per month from and after the passage of this act.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There was no objection.

Mr. ERDMAN. Let us have the report read in this connection.

The report (by Mr. KIRKPATRICK) was read, as follows:

The report (by Mr. Kirkpatrick) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Invalid Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 5881) granting a pension to Elihu Jones, late captain Company G, Eighth Illinois Infantry Volunteers, having fully examined and considered the facts presented, respectfully report:

Elihu Jones served as a member of Battery G, Fourth Regiment United States Artillery, from December, 1853, until March, 1850, when he was discharged under general orders. He spent some months in recruiting, and entered the volunteer service in April, 1861, as a member of Company G, Eighth Illinois Volunteers, becoming captain of the company in February, 1863, and serving in that capacity until October 7, 1864. He was wounded in the right arm by a shell, and is now drawing a pension of $10 per month for that disability. His application for additional pension on account of disease of the eyes was rejected by the Pension Office because he failed to prove treatment therefor in the service, on the ground that said disease existed prior to enlistment. There is no question raised as to the claimant's having lost the sight of one eye years ago, and having almost entirely lost the use of the other. There is an abundance of testimony showing that he was a brave and faithful soldier, and a sober and temperate man, who took unusual care of his health.

His title to an increase of pension turns upon the point whether disease of eyes existed prior to enlistment. The Pension Office held that it did, basing this action upon a special investigation, which the examiner says was hurriedly made. An examination of the evidence on this point satisfies your committee that this action was erroneous, and that the disease of eyes originated in the service as claimed. This belief is corroborated by the fact that claimant was able to perform efficient service for more than three years, and was not troubled seriously with his eyes until near the close of his service, as well as by the further fact that claimant served over seven years i

House with a favorable recommendation.

AMBROSE D. MANION.

AMBROSE D. MANION.

Mr. MILES. Mr. Chairman, I ask for the regular order.

The CHAIRMAN. The regular order is demanded.

Mr. LEWIS. Mr. Chairman, I ask the indulgence of the House for a moment. My term in this body is drawing to a close, and I have never yet asked the consideration of the House for a bill. I rise now to ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of a soldier's case, who is old and bedridden, helpless; lying, perhaps, upon his death bed; an old man who has two gunshot wounds, is too feeble to help himself, who is partly paralyzed, and is afflicted with a disease which requires the attention of a nurse all the time. He is perfectly helpless, in other words: and unless all the time. all the time. He is perfectly helpless, in other words; and unless he gets justice now and promptly he will never get it in this world. I hope gentlemen will allow me the privilege of asking the consideration of that bill at this time.

I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (H. R. 6215) to increase the pension of Ambrose Manion.

Mr. MILES. Mr. Chairman, I have asked for the regular order.

Mr. LEWIS. I hope the gentleman will not insist upon that.

I am satisfied if he understood the facts of this case he would not do so.

As I stated, this old man is bedridden, paralyzed, with two gunshot wounds, and suffers from a disease which requires the attention of a nurse all the time. I hope the gentleman will allow the bill to be considered at this time.

The CHAIRMAN. The bill will be read, subject to the right of objection.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to increase the pension of Ambrose D. Manion, of Munfordville, Ky., late of Company K, Fifth Kentucky Infantry, from $30 per month to $50 per month, and to issue him a certificate granting and increasing his pension to said amount, in lieu of pension certificate No. 10246 now held by said pensioner.

The Committee on Invalid Pensions recommend the adoption of the following amendment:

In line 5 strike out the words "of Munfordville, Ky.," and in line 7, after he word "month," strike out the remainder of the bill.

There being no objection, the bill was considered, and the amendments recommended by the committee were agreed to; and the bill as amended was laid aside to be reported to the House with

Mr. DOCKERY. Mr. Chairman, I have a bill—
Mr. THOMAS. Let us have the regular order.
The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Michigan [Mr. THOMAS] demands the regular order. The Clerk will report the first bill on the Calendar.

RUFUS H. PAYNE.

The first business on the Private Calendar was the bill (S. 1505) granting an increase of pension to Rufus H. Paine. The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Rufus H. Paine, late of Company A, First Regiment New Hampshire Heavy Artillery, and pay him a pension at the rate of $12 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on laying aside the bill with a favorable recommendation.

Mr. ERDMAN. Let us have the report read. The report (by Mr. Sulloway) was read, as follows:

The report (by Mr. Sulloway) was read, as follows:

The committee on Invalid Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (S. 1505) granting an increase of pension to Rufus H. Paine, having carefully considered the facts in the case, respectfully report:

The soldier enlisted July 17, 1863, as private in Company A, First New Hampshire Heavy Artillery, and was honorably discharged September II, 1865.

On July 28, 1890, he filed a declaration under the act of June 27, 1890, alleging varicose veins, loss of sight, catarrh, and injury of left hand; and on June 23, 1891, he was allowed a pension of $8 on account of rheumatism, varicose veins, and injury to left hand.

On February 2, 1895, he filed a declaration for increase, alleging aggravated disability from pensioned causes, defective sight, and hernia. April 29, 1895, the examining board reports, among other things: "Eyes are closed; nutrition poor; physical condition bad; right oblique inguinal hernia; left oblique inguinal hernia, same description as right; vision of left eye nil; right eye sees C. C. Snellen's type at 3 feet; left eye had been removed, and claimant was wearing an artificial eye."

The claim, however, was rejected on the ground of "No increase; rate covers all disabilities formerly alleged."

Under the general law the loss of an eye is rated at seventeen-eighteenths; but in addition to this infirmity the soldier has, according to the report of the examining board, a right and a left inguinal hernia, rheumatism, varicose veins, permanently injured hand, almost total loss of sight of right eye, bad physical condition; and the evidence further shows, in express terms, that he is totally incapacitated for the performance of manual labor. The man is 60 years of age. The bill passed the Senate February 19, 1896.

Your committee are of opinion that the claimant was and is entitled to the maximum rate under the act of 1890, and therefore respectfully recommend the passage of the bill.

Mr. TALBERT. Mr. Chairman, here is an application for an increase of re

Mr. TALBERT. Mr. Chairman, here is an application for an increase of pension to Rufus H. Payne. On June 28, 1891, according to the report, he was allowed a pension of $8 a month on account of rheumatism, varicose veins, and injury to left hand. On February 2, 1895, he filed a declaration for increase, alleging aggravated disability from pensioned causes, defective sight, and hernia. April 29, 1895, the examining board reports, among other things-

Eyes are closed; nutrition poor; physical condition bad; right oblique in guinal hernia; left oblique inguinal hernia, same description as right.

About the same thing that the other board reported. About the same thing that the other board reported. The Pension Bureau, after having examined the claim, rejected it on the ground of no increase that the rate covers all the disabilities formerly alleged. Now, the question is whether or not this House will overrule the decision of the Pension Bureau, whose duty it is to examine carefully into all of these claims and to report properly upon them. I think, sir, that we should stop and reflect before we go at a rapid pace and overturn the rulings of the Pension Bureau. I think this man is drawing a sufficient pension, according to all the showing, and I think this bill should not pass. I just want to call the attention of the House to this fact, that it seems to be evidently an attempt to overrule the decision of the Pension Bureau, without bringing forward any reasons whatever, according to the report of the committee.

I should be glad to hear from some member of the committee.

Possibly the committee have something more to state in regard to this matter. This is a very short report.

Mr. THOMAS. Mr. Chairman, I desire to call the attention of the gentleman from South Carolina [Mr. Talbert] to a portion of the report farther down:

And the evidence further shows, in express terms, that he is totally incapacitated for the performance of manual labor.

Therefore he would be entitled to more than $12 a month, and the bill only provides for $12. The gentleman's statement is correct, so far as the first part of the report is concerned, as to the action of the Pension Office.

Mr. TALBERT. If the gentleman will allow me, the point I make is that the Pension Bureau were in possession of all the facts stated here in the report when they filed their decision against

Mr. THOMAS. I do not understand that to be so. If they were, then they overlooked some of the facts, because the evidence is certainly sufficient to give this man $12 per month.

Mr. TALBERT. I do not propose to make any fight against the granting of a pension. I only wanted to call the attention of the House to this disposition to overrule the decisions of the Pension Bureau, which I think is wrong and setting a dangerous precedent.

The bill was ordered to be laid aside to be reported to the House with a favorable recommendation.

JARED S. CHAMBERLAIN.

The next business on the Private Calendar was the bill (S. 878) granting a pension to Jared S. Chamberlain.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Jared S. Chamberlain, late a private in Company E, Twenty-third Ohio Volunteers.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on laying aside the bill with a favorable recommendation.

Mr. ERDMAN. Mr. Chairman, let us have the report read.

The report (by Mr. PICKLER) was read, as follows:

The report (by Mr. Pickler) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Invalid Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (S. 878) granting a pension to Jared S. Chamberlain, having carefully considered the same, adopt the accompanying Senate report (No. 96) as their own, and respectfully recommend the passage of the bill.

[Senate Report No. 96, Fifty-fourth Congress, first session.]

The claimant, Jared S. Chamberlain, was enrolled as a private soldier on the 25th day of March, 1864, and served in Company E of the Twenty-third Regiment of Ohio Volunteer Infantry until honorably discharged at Cumberland, Md., on the 25th day of July, 1865. At the time of enlistment he was 31 years of age, and is consequently now 63 years old. The record shows that at the time of enlistment he was able bodied and possessed of good eyesight. The record further shows that he received a gunshot wound in the left side of the head, causing partial bilindness, at the battle of Cedar Creek, Virginia, October 19, 1864. The treatment shown was by the regimental surgeon in the hospital at Witchester, Va., October, 1804.

It appears by the proof that he returned to the service and continued with his company and regiment until the close of the war. It also appears that from the date said gunshot wound was received the sight of his right eve began to weaken, and at present it is almost gone, and that the sight of his left eye has become every greatly impaired; that before this gunshot wound was received it was not necessary for him to wear glasses, but since that time glasses have been indispensable to enable him to observe objects in his pathway. It appears by undisputed testimony that immediately after said gunshot wound, and an an another of the service in the army after the gunshot wound, and can not, therefore, furnish his testimony. The affidavit of his bunkmate, Horace A. Little, shows that Chamberlain constantly complained of his eyes during the remainder of his service in the army after the battle of Cedar Creek, and while he remained wi

Mr. THOMAS. Mr. Chairman, for the purpose of perfecting this bill, I offer an amendment.

The amendment was read, as follows:

In line 7 strike out the letter "s" in the word "volunteers," and addinfantry, and pay him a pension of $12 per month."

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be laid aside to be reported to the House with a favorable recommendation.

MARGARET O'DONNELL.

The next business on the Private Calendar was the bill (H. R. 4823) for the relief of Margaret O'Donnell, nurse, United States Volunteers.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place upon the pension roll the name of Margaret O'Donnell, and pay her at the rate of pension as provided for army nurses by the act of Congress approved August 5, 1892.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on laying aside the bill with favorable recommendation.

Mr. ERDMAN. Let us have the report. The report (by Mr. Thomas) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Invalid Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 4823) for the relief of Margaret O'Donnell, respectfully report:

The claim of this woman under the act of August 5, 1892, was rejected in the Pension Bureau February 4, 1893, on the ground that there is no record of claimant's service as nurse during the period alleged, but from a certificate filed by her it appears that she acted as a laundress. No title under said act.

of claimant's service as nurse during the period alleged, but from a certificate filed by her it appears that she acted as a laundress. No title under said act.

The Secretary of the Interior, on appeal, decided that the action of the Pension Office in rejecting the claim on the ground stated was wrong, and he directed that the claim be reopened, and suggested a special examination for the purpose of ascertaining definitely by what authority claimant rendered the services as nurse, which are admitted by the Secretary to be prima facie shown to have been rendered, or that claimant be called upon to furnish additional evidence upon that branch of her case. The only point on which the Secretary seems to have any doubt is as to whether the services shown to have been rendered were rendered by proper authority. The evidence shows that her husband was a member of the Twenty-second Battery, New York Volunteer Light Artillery, and that she was with the battery from 1862 to 1865, acting a part of the time as laundress, and when any of the members of the battery were sick nursing them.

Twenty-five surviving members of the company join in a petition that she be pensioned, saying that she was constantly with them from 1862 to 1865, never absented herself one day from her post of duty, but was ever ready to give aid and comfort to the members of the company; that she is an invalid from rheumatism contracted in the service of her country.

The testimony of the members of the company shows that she did actually nurse them when sick, and that her services were greatly needed in view of the fact that there was no surgeon or assistant surgeon with them.

In view of these facts, the committee are willing to waive the technical requirement of the law as to employment by authority recognized by the War Department, and they therefore recommend the passage of the bill.

Mr. MILNES. I am quite positive in my own mind, Mr. Chairman, that the beneficiary of this bill is dead. If that be true, there is no use in taking up any more time.

that I had something to do with last winter, and the husband of this lady has told me since this session began that his wife is dead. I am positive that that is the case.

Mr. THOMAS. This was introduced by my colleague from

Mr. Incomes. In was introduced by my coneague from Michigan [Mr. Bishop].
Mr. MILNES. I ask that the bill be passed without prejudice.
If it is laid over, we can get the necessary information.
Mr. BISHOP. Mr. Chairman, I introduced this bill by request, and know nothing in regard to its merits.

Mr. DOCKERY. The question of fact is raised as to whether the beneficiary is dead.

Mr. THOMAS. I ask that the bill be laid aside without preju-

Mr. MILNES. I make that motion.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Michigan asks unanimous consent that the bill be laid aside without prejudice, retaining its place on the Calendar. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

ISABELLA MORROW.

The next business on the Private Calendar was the bill (S. 1128) granting a pension to Isabella Morrow.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized to place upon the pension rolls the name of Isabella Morrow, widow of the late Henry A. Morrow, colonel of the Twenty-first Regiment United States Infantry, colonel and brevet major-general of the United States Army, and pay her a pension of $75 per month.

Mr. ERDMAN. Let the report be read. Mr. THOMAS. I desire to offer an amendment. The report (by Mr. THOMAS) was read, as follows:

The report (by Mr. THOMAS) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Invalid Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (S.1128) granting a pension to Isabella Morrow, adopted as their own the Senate Report No. 240, and in view of the facts therein set forth, and the further fact that evidence before this committee shows that the beneficiary of this bill was married to General Morrow before the war, that she has been ever since his death largely dependent upon others for the care and support of herself and her younger children; that she is now about 60 years of age, is not in good health, and is without property, your committee recommend the passage of the bill.

[Senate Report No. 240, Fifty-fourth Congress, first session.]

The Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (8. 1128) granting a pension to Isabella Morrow, after consideration, make a favorable report thereon, when amended, at the rate of $75 per month, which is done in com-

The Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (S. 1128) granting a pension to Isabella Morrow, after consideration, make a favorable report thereon, when amended, at the rate of $75 per month, which is done in committee.

In Virginia July 10, 1829. At the age of 17 he volunteered for service in the Mexican war, serving in the campaign of General Taylor from Camargo to Monterey, taking part in the battle of Monterey. In 1854 he began the practice of law at Detroit, and three years later he was elected to the honorable position of judge of the recorder's court of the city of Detroit for a term of six years.

The outbreak of the war of the rebellion found Judge Morrow on the bench. By July, 1882, the State of Michigan had sent to the front 72,000 men, or 6,000 more than the State's quota. The delays and reverses of McClellan had created doubt and discouragement, and in the North recruiting had practically stopped. A public meeting held at Detroit on July 15, 1820, was dispersed by an armed mob from Canada, where Southern refugees had found asylum.

The indignation that resulted from this action found expression in a great gathering, at which the venerable Gen. Lewis Cass presided. The practical outcome was the Twenty-fourth Michigan Infantry, of 1,030 men, and to command this regiment the Judge left the bench.

Assigned to the Iron Brigade of the Army of the Potomac, the Michigan recruits were but coldly received by the veterans of Wisconsin and Indiana, who made up that famous command, but a Fredericksburg the men of the Twenty-fourth were transformed into as hard metal as their comrades, and at Gettysburg they won high praise from General Doubleday.

Colonel Morrow's military history is as follows:

Volunteered May, 1864, for Mackan war, in Marand and District of Columbia Battalion. Served Marand and military in the former battle, and recommended for promotion for gallantry and good conduct. April, 1863, commanded two regiments in expedition against Port Royal, below Fredericksburg, on Rappahannock Ri into a division of Army of Tennessee. Assigned to command of this division, Mustered out of volunteer service July, 1865.

Appointed lieutenant-colonel, Thirty-sixth Infantry, July 23, 1866; accepted January 17, 1867. Joined regiment, September, 1867, at Fort Sanders, Dak. T., now Laramie City, Wyo. Command of Fort Bridger, Utah, from December, 1867, to April, 1869. In command of Fort Bridger, Utah, from December, 1867, to April, 1869. In command of Fort Bridger, Utah, from December, 1867, to April, 1869. In command of Fort Bridger, Utah, from December, 1867, to April, 1869. Command of Fort Bridger, Utah, from December, 1866, to June, 1870. Command of Fort Bred Steele, Wyo., June, 1870, to October, Command of Camp Douglas (now Fort Douglas), Salt Lake City, from October, 1870, to July, 1871. In command of regiment, October, 1870, to July, 1871. Command of Fort Fred Steele, Wyo., July, 1871, to October, 1871. By order of President United States, in command of Camp Douglas, United States, October, 1871, to September, 1874. Commanded expedition of cavalry and infantry against Ute Indians in southern Utah, 1872-78.

At request of Commissioner of Indian Affairs was ordered by Secretary of War to take control of the wandering Indians of Utah and Nevada. Command of Fort Sidney, Nebr., from September to October, 1874, when ordered with regiment to New Orleans, La. In command of regiment November, 1878, to November, 1874. In command of regiment in New Orleans winter 1874-75. On special inspection in Louisians, November and December, 1874. Command of Baton Rouge Barracks, La., May, 1875, to June, 1876. Command of Little Rock Barracks, Ark., June, 1876, to April, 1879. During riots of 1877, in command of Indianapolis, Ind., in July, and of Seranton, Pa., August, September, October, and November. Specially commended by Major-General Hancock to Secretary of Warfor good conductat Scranton. On War Department Board, Washington, D. C., for equipment of Army, November, 1878, to April, 1879. Pormoted colonel Twenty-first Infantry, April 27, 1879. Command of Vancouver Barracks, Wash., September, 1879, to January, 1881, to October, 2881, to October, 28

Colonel in Regular Army, for gallant and meritorious services in battle of Hatchers Run, Virginia, February 6, 1865.

Brigadier-general of volunteers, for gallant and distinguished services during campaign before Richmond, Va. Major-general of volunteers, for distinguished and conspicuous gallantry, and for good conduct before Petersburg Vs.

tinguished and conspicuous gallantry, and for good conduct before Petersburg, Va.

Was nominated by President and confirmed by Senate, in winter of 1869, as brevet brigadier-general in Regular Army, for gallantry at Gettysburg. Commission not issued because an act of Congress forbade conferring brevets except in time of actual war.

Honorably mentioned in reports of battles of Fredericksburg, Fitzhugh Crossing, or second battle of Fredericksburg, Chancellorsville, Gettysburg, Wilderness, and Hatchers Run; also, in Michigan in the War; Red Book of Michigan; History of Twenty-fourth Michigan Infantry; A City's Danger and Defense, Scranton, Pa., 1887; De Hubner's Promenade au Tour du monde, 1871, and Chancellorsville and Gettysburg, by Doubleday, 1882.

The passage of the bill as amended is recommended.

Mr. DA NIELS, Mr. Chairman, Livnet.

The passage of the bill as amended is recommended.

Mr. DANIELS. Mr. Chairman, I trust—
Mr. THOMAS. I desire to offer an amendment.

Mr. DANIELS. Mr. Chairman, I trust the amendment proposed by the gentleman from Michigan will not prevail.

The CHAIRMAN. The amendment has not yet been read.

Mr. THOMAS. I offer the following amendment. I desire to say that this bill passed the Senate at $75 a month, and the Committee on Invalid Pensions reported it at $50 per month. There was an error on the part of the clerk in making it $75.

The amendment was read as follows:

The amendment was read, as follows:

In line 8, strike out the words "seventy-five" and insert the word "fifty;" so as to read, "a pension of $50 per month."

Mr. DANIELS. Mr. Chairman, I trust the bill will pass as it passed the Senate, at $75 a month. The career of the distinguished soldier has been a most remarkable one, perhaps as much so as any other person who was engaged in the military service of the country. He commenced as a mere boy, at the age of 17, and encountry. He commenced as a mere boy, at the age of 17, and enlisted in the United States Army for service in the Mexican war, and was in the Mexican war under General Taylor until the war closed. Then he retired from the Army and studied law. He was elected to the office of recorder of the city of Detroit, and while he had in that office and soon after its commencement the civil was holding that office and soon after its commencement the civil was holding that office and soon after its commencement the civil war broke out, and he then enlisted at once in the service of the United States in the civil war. He served through the civil war, and while in a large portion of the battles, he remained there until the close of the war, and was then mustered out of the service, advancing from the position of private to that of an officer. He then enlisted in the Regular Army, and was brevetted major-general for distinguished services in the civil war, and also brevetted brigadier-general for services in the Regular Army. His career has been a most remarkable one, perhaps more so than that of any other officer whose case has been submitted to the consideration of this House in an application for a pension. He is now dead other officer whose case has been submitted to the consideration of this House in an application for a pension. He is now dead, and his widow, 60 years of age, has a young child to care for, and has no resources for her support or that of the child beyond that obtained by her own exertions. The case is one that is entirely and thoroughly meritorious, and I trust that the amendment will not prevail and that the bill will pass as it passed the Senate.

Mr. MILNES. Mr. Chairman, the House very well knows I have been opposed to all pensions of this dimension; but if there ever was a worthy case, this is one of them. I am well acquainted with the services of Colonel Morrow, and no more gallant man ever went into the Union Army. He was three times wounded, and every time with the colors in his hand, having taken the colors from the color bearer after being shot down. Four of them were shot down at Gettysburg. He was wounded at Gettysburg on the first day of the battle, and he was again wounded in the Wilderness and was again carrying the colors; and again at Hatchers Run, where he was carrying the United States colors in the front of his regiment. If there ever was a worthy case, this is one

Mr. MERCER. Mr. Chairman, I desire to second the remarks made by the two preceding gentlemen. Colonel Morrow was not only in the Mexican war, but he was in the civil war, and then later engaged in a great many Indian wars. His widow lives in my district, is over 60 years of age, has a son dependent on her for my district, is over 60 years of age, has a son dependent on her for support, and she is almost entirely without means. She has another son, who entered the Regular Army and is there to-day, working his way up by studious application to the duties of his position, and, I believe, is now second lieutenant by meritorious service. It shows that Colonel Morrow and his descendants are of a patriotic order. They belong to that class of citizenship which believes in protecting the American Union and the Americans of the lieuteness of the state of the s which believes in protecting the American Union and the American flag at all times and under all circumstances.

I sincerely trust, Mr. Chairman and gentlemen of this House, that you will grant this lady $75 at least, because this is a Senate bill, and if you amend it now and reduce the amount to $50, the bill would be returned to the Senate and go through another legislative ordeal. The gentleman from New York [Mr. WADSWORTH] calls my attention to the fact that one widow has received $75 and another $100 a month at the hands of this House to-day. But aside from that, the record of General Morrow would entitle his widow to at least $75 a month pension, and I trust this House will vote down the amendment of my friend [Mr. Thomas], who is simply doing his duty as instructed by his trust this House will vote down the amendment of my friend [Mr. Thomas], who is simply doing his duty as instructed by his committee, and give to this widow a pension of $75 a month, to which she is justly entitled. [Applause.]

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the gentleman from Michigan.

The question was taken; and the Chairman announced that the noes appeared to have it. Mr. BELL of Colorado. Division!

The committee divided; and there were—ayes 22, noes 68.

So the amendment was rejected.

The bill was then ordered to be laid aside with a favorable recommendation.

JOSEPH E. VANTINE.

Mr. WILLIS. Mr. Chairman, I ask the consent of this committee to hear a report read. I will not venture to ask unanimous consent for the consideration of the bill until after the committee shall have heard the report and I shall have made one or two state-

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the reading of the report?

Mr. DOCKERY. I have no objection, Mr. Chairman, but I would like a recognition myself. [Laughter.]
The report (by Mr. MILES) was read, as follows:

The report (by Mr. Miles) was read, as follows:

The committee on Invalid Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 7969) to increase the pension of Joseph E. Vantine, late first-class fireman on the U. S. S. Richmond, United States Navy, having carefully examined and fully considered the facts presented, respectfully report:

Joseph E. Vantine enlisted in the United States Navy May 19, 1857, as second-class fireman on the U. S. S. Minnesota; promoted to first-class fireman May 28, 1857, and served as such to June 10, 1859, when discharged.

He reenlisted as first-class fireman July 13, 1861, and served on the North Carolina to July 27, 1861; on the Richmond from July 28, 1861, to August 29, 1864; on the Princeton from August 30, 1864, to September 9, 1864, when honorably discharged.

Joseph E. Vantine was the first man to suggest the use of chain cables hung over the sides of vessels for protection from the enemy's missiles, and the efficiency of the device was demonstrated by Commodore Farragut's squadron on the Lower Mississippi in April, 1862, in the passage of Forts Jackson and St. Phillip, and the encounter with the Confederate ram, and it resulted in the capture of New Orleans, La. This chain armor was used afterwards on board the Kearsarge in her capture of the Alabama.

In the attack on Fort H. dson, La., March 14, 1863, a shot from the enemy's guns struck the boilers of the Richmond, and the fire room and other parts of the vessel were filled with steam, when he, under great difficulties, drew the fires from under the boilers and prevented them from exploding, thus saving the ship and perhaps many lives. While this was being done, he became exhausted from the heat and cooking steam and had to be relieved every few moments, until by his persistent intrepidity and assiduous efforts the grand work was accomplished. For this heroic act he received special complimentary mention in the Admiral's report, and was afterwards presented with a bronze "medal of honor" by act of Congress.

Joseph L. Vantine i

person.

In view of the testimony, from which it is reasonable to conclude that his paralysis is a result of his naval service, and in view of his gallant and meritorious service, your committee earnestly recommend the passage of the bill without amendment.

Mr. WILLIS. Mr. Chairman—
Mr. LOUDENSLAGER. I call for the regular order.
Mr. WILLIS. I hope the gentleman will not call for the regular order until I shall have made a remark or two.

Mr. LOUDENSLAGER. I call for the regular order, Mr.

The CHAIRMAN. The regular order is called for, and the Clerk will report the next bill.

MRS. SARAH B. LEET.

The next business on the Private Calendar was the bill (S. 1682) granting an increase of pension to Mrs. Sarah B. Leet.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Mrs. Sarah B. Leet, widow of the late Bvt. Lieut. Col. George K. Leet, United States Army, at the rate of $25 per month, which rate of $25 per month shall be in lieu of the pension she is now receiving.

Mr. McCLELLAN. Let us have the report read. The report (by Mr. Erdman) was read, as follows:

Mr. McClellan. Let us have the report read.

The report (by Mr. Erdman) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Invalid Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (S. 1682) entitled "A bill granting an increase of pension to Mrs. Sarah B. Leet," beg leave to submit the following report, and recommend that said bill do pass:

George K. Leet enlisted as a private in the Chicago Mercantile Battery. August 29, 1862, and served therewith to July 29, 1863. Served in the office of assistant adjutant-general. Headquarters Department of Tennessee, until discharged October 29, 1863, having been appointed captain and assistant adjutant-general United States Volunteers. October 3, 1863; major and assistant adjutant-general United States Volunteers. February 2, 1865; captain and assistant quartermaster United States Army, March 23, 1866 (brevetted lieutenant-colonel United States Army, March 23, 1867, for faithful and meritorious services during the war); on staff duty at General Grant's headquarters from October 29, 1863, to March 4, 1869; on duty at the War Department March 1, 1870; honorably discharged August 1, 1870.

The evidence shows that in 1862-63, while in camp near Vicksburg, Miss., George K. Leet contracted camp diarrhea and erysipelas, and was sent to hospital, but the regimental hospital records are not on file.

The soldier's mother testifies to sending him medicine for diarrhea (which had become chronic) while he was in the Army.

It appears that he continued to suffer from chronic diarrhea, and was disabled to a greater or less degree all the time from 1865 to 1869 while serving on General Grant's staff at headquarters, during which time he held the rank of major and assistant adjutant-gener disease.

The soldier only lived three or four weeks after coming under his charge. The soldier gave him a history of chronic diarrhea contracted in the Army and which had continued with greater or less severity ever since.

Mrs. Sarah B. Leet is the widow of George K. Leet. She was married to him February 18, 1894, and is now 59 years old. She has never remarried, and has no means of support except by her children.

She has one minor child dependent upon her.

She was granted a pension by special act of Congress approved July 4, 1884. The rate fixed by the Pension Bureau was $8$ per month and $2$ per month additional for each of three minor children who were not then 16 years of age. By general law (act of March 19, 1886) the pension was increased to $12$ per month, commencing from the date of the act, at which rate the claimant is now pensioned. But one child is now under 16 years of age, consequently the amount of pension actually received by claimant is $14$ per month.

Your committee therefore earnestly recommend the passage of the Senate bill, appending the report of the Senate Committee on Pensions, as follows:

[Senate Report No. 295, Fifty-fourth Congress, first session.]

Your committee therefore earnestly recommend the passage of the Senate bill, appending the report of the Senate Committee on Pensions, as follows:

[Senate Report No. 295, Fifty-fourth Congress, first session.]

The Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (S. 1882) granting an increase of pension to Mrs. Sarah B. Leet, have considered the same and report:

In this case the claimant was granted a pension by special act of Congress approved July 4, 1884. The rate fixed by the Pension Bureau was $$ permonth and $2$ a month additional for each of three minor children who were not then 16 years of age.

By general law (act of March 19, 1886) the pension was increased to $12 permonth, commencing from the date of the act, at which rate the claimant is now pensioned. But one child is now under 16 years of age, consequently the amount of pension actually received by claimant is $14 a month.

The military services of George K. Leet, husband of this claimant, as shown by the records of the Adjutant-General's Office, were continuous from August 29, 1862, to March 4, 1869, most of the time in the responsible position of assistant adjutant-general. On August 1, 1870, on his own request, he was honorably discharged. He died March 26, 1881, from chronic diarrheal troubles and diseases emanating therefrom, contracted in the line of duty.

Claimant is without means of support and is dependent wholly upon her own earnings. Under the circumstances your committee believe this to be a meritorious case for increase, and they accordingly recommend that the bill be passed with an amendment so as to provide a pension for this claimant at the rate of $25 a month.

Amend by striking out the word "thirty" wherever it occurs in line 8 of said bill, and insert in lieu thereof the word "twenty-five."

The bill was laid aside to be reported to the House with the recommendation that it do pass.

ANNIE SCHIFIRLI.

The next business on the Private Calendar was a bill (H. R. 7821) granting a pension to Annie Schifirli.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll the name of Annie Schifirli, widow of John E. Schifirli, late private, Company M. First Regiment United States Reserve Corps Missouri Volunteer Infantry, and to pay her a pension at the rate of $20 a month, subject to the provisions and limitations of the general pension laws.

Mr. ERDMAN. Let us hear the report, Mr. Chairman. The report (by Mr. Baker of Kansas) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Invalid Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (H.R. 4496) granting a pension to Annie Schifirli, beg leave to submit the following 4496) granting a pension to Annie Schifirli, beg leave to submit the following report:

John E. Schifirli served in Company M, First United States Reserve Corps Missouri Volunteer Infantry, from May 22, 1861, to August 20, 1861, when he was honorably discharged.

The widow is now pensioned at $8, under act of June 27, 1890. She was married in 1842 to the soldier, who died in the county infirmary February 22, 1885. The widow is shown to be totally blind, and so helpless as to require the regular aid and attendance of another person; that she is totally destitute, and is supported by a son-in-law. In view of her helplessness and destitution, it is recommended that the bill do pass after being amended by striking out all after the title and substituting the following:

"Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll the name of Annie Schiffril, widow of John E. Schiffril, late private Company M, First Regiment United States Reserve Corps Missouri Volunteer Infantry, and to pay her a pension at the rate of $20 a month, subject to the provisions and limitations of the general pension laws."

Mr. ERDMAN. Mr. Chairman, the House ought to understand

mr. ERDMAN. Mr. Chairman, the House ought to understand that this is pension legislation of a kind that they may not desire to approve. It is an attempt to pension the widows of soldiers according to their disabilities. If you are going to do that, do it by general legislation. There are thousands upon thousands of widows of disabled soldiers suffering from different degrees of disability, and if you are going to do justice to them all, you will either pass 10,000, or perhaps 100,000, private bills for their benefit, or you will enact some general law fixing the rate of pension for disabled widows as you do in the case of old soldiers. The question presented in this case is whether or not you are going to pension widows according to their disability.

Mr. MILES. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that this bill be laid aside without prejudice.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Maryland?

Mr. ALLEN of Utah. I object.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Maryland?

Mr. ALLEN of Utah. I object.

The CHAIRMAN. Objection is made, and the question recurs on laying the bill aside to be reported to the House with a favorable recommendation.

Mr. ERDMAN. Mr. Chairman, I desire to offer an amendment striking out "twenty" and inserting "eight" before "dollars," so as to place this widow upon an equality with other soldiers' widows

Mr. THOMAS. Mr. Chairman, I desire to call attention to the fact that this lady is now receiving $8 per month. I understand that she is totally blind. That is all that I think it necessary to say. As the gentleman from Pennsylvania says, this bill is based on the physical condition of this widow and her necessity, and it such to pass.

ought to pass. Mr. WOOD. ought to pass.

Mr. WOOD. Mr. Chairman, to-day we passed a pension bill that was based solely upon the infirmities, the age, and the need of a widow. That pension bill carried with it $100 per month. It was the widow of a good soldier in that case; it is the widow of a good soldier in the present case. The difference is that in the former case it was the widow of an officer who, when he was in the service, was allowed from four to six horses, with forage for them, and a servant to take care of them, while in this case it is the widow. a servant to take care of them, while in this case it is the widow of a private soldier who trudged along on foot. We have been passing bills here based upon the condition, the circumstances, the infirmities, and the necessities of widows, so far as the widows of officers are concerned. Why should we not do it so far as private officers are concerned. Why should we not do it so far as private soldiers are concerned?

Mr. CURTIS of New York. Do I understand that my friend from Kansas [Mr. Blue] is in favor of this bill, or has he changed his position in respect to the interest of private soldiers when their cases come before the House? On behalf of the private soldiers cases come before the House? On benair of the private soldiers of the Union Army, with whom I had the most intimate connection for more than four years, I ask that this bill may receive the generous consideration of this committee, in accord with what I trust is the wish and desire of my friend from Kansas. [Laughter.]

Mr. BLUE. Mr. Chairman, in perfect consonance with what I said this afternoon, as I understand that this widow was the wife of a soldier during the war, having married him in 1842, and as we pensioned the case of my friend from New York this afternoon at $100 a month, I am going to vote for this bill. [Laughter and applause.]

Mr. CURTIS of New York. Thank God for that! [Laughter.]
Mr. BLUE. If I understand this case correctly, if it was proper, in the case of my friend from New York, to pension the infirmities of the widow of a general at the rate of $100 a month, certainly it will not bankrupt the Treasury to pension this poor woman at $20 a month. Therefore I shall cast my vote for this bill, in line with what I said this afternoon.

Mr. TALBERT. Mr. Chairman, I voted against the proposition to give the widow of General Gibbon $100 a month, but it was carried here almost unanimously. I voted also against the pension bill for the widow of General Nichols, at I believe, the same amount.

A MEMBER. That was $75 a month.

Mr. TALBERT. I voted against those bills because I did not believe they were right, but they passed here all the same. [Laughter.] We gave a pension this evening to the widow of General Smith at the rate of $50 a month. We gave the widow of Colonel Morrow, who was only a brevet major-general, $75 a month, and I am astonished that any gentleman here, especially on the Democratic side should get up now and move to reduce month, and I am astonished that any gentleman here, especially on the Democratic side, should get up now and move to reduce the allowance for this poor and totally blind woman from $20 to $3 a month. [Applause.]

I stand here ready to give this blind widow of a private soldier as much as you gave the widow of General Gibbon or General Nichols or Colonel Morrow, or any other officer. I think she is just as much entitled to a liberal pension as the widows of those officers. I can understand why Republicans in this House do some things sometimes [laughter], but I can not understand why Democrats should walk through here like greyhounds to vote one-hundred-dollar pensions to the widows of brigadier-generals, and yet should sit quietly by when an effort is made to reduce the pension of the poor blind widow of a private soldier from $20 a month to $8. I shall support this bill with all my heart at $20 a month; and I would be willing to give this widow more in justice to the claims of the be willing to give this widow more in justice to the claims of the private soldier on account of her being totally blind, but I shall always oppose any extravagant or unjust pension claim, as I have done in the past.

Mr. MILES. Mr. Chairman, I shall support this bill very cordially; and I want to be understood as withdrawing my motion to lay it aside. I thought there would be some debate over the bill and that the measure might be endangered in the absence of bill and that the measure might be endangered in the absence of my friend from Kansas [Mr. Baker]; but I find that he is now present; and I do not believe, since the eloquent speech of my friend from South Carolina [Mr. Talbert], that the bill is in any danger at all. I shall support the bill; but I want it understood that in doing so I am following the lead of the gentleman from South Carolina, who is consistent, and not the lead of the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. Blue], who is inconsistent.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the adoption of the amendment.

amendment

Mr. THOMAS. Was not the amendment withdrawn? The CHAIRMAN. The Chair did not so understand. The question being taken, the amendment was rejected. The bill was then laid aside to be reported to the House with a favorable recommendation.

CHARLES H. TWOMEY.

The next business on the Private Calendar was the bill (H. R. 2257) to increase the pension of Charles H. Twomey. The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place the name of Charles H. Twomey, late a private of Company H, One hundred and thirty-ninth Regiment Indiana Infantry Volunteers, upon the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, and pay to him the sum of $72 per month, in lieu of any pension that may now be paid him.

The amendment was read, as follows:

In line 8, strike out "seventy-two" and insert "thirty;" so as to make the rate of pension $30 per month.

Mr. ERDMAN. Let us hear the report. The report (by Mr. Kirkpatrick) was read, as follows:

The report (by Mr. Kirkpatrick) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Invalid Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 2257) entitled "A bill to increase the pension of Charles H. Twomey," beg leave to submit the following report, and recommend that said bill do pass with an amendment:

Charles H. Twomey enlisted May 10, 1864, and was mustered out with his company as corporal Company H. One hundred and thirty-ninth Indiana Infantry Volunteers, September 29, 1864, and honorably discharged.

He filed claim for pension May 16, 1885, alleging that he incurred deafness of right ear at Mumfordsville, Ky., July 7, 1864, from firing a gun containing three charges, causing ulceration of the ears.

He was pensioned September 16, 1887, and to $10 from August 27, 1888.

He filed a claim August 3, 1892, under act of June 27, 1890, alleging deafness and blindness, and was pensioned under that act from August 3, 1892, at $12 per month for total blindness of both eyes.

The board of examining surgeons at Martinsville, Ind., who examined him June 17, 1885, certified to his total deafness of right ear and that "the tympanum of left ear was perforated, resulting in slight deafness of left ear," and each of the six boards which examined him after that date described the condition of left ear approaching more closely each year to loss of hearing in that ear. Under these examinations he should have received $20 or more per month since August 27, 1886.

He lost his eyesight in 1890 from an accident, occurring since the war, and not due to his military service, the first mention of it being made by the board of examining surgeons at Martinsville, Ind., August 6, 1890, who rated him at $25 per month for "almost total deafness of right ear and severe deafness of left ear," but the Pension Bureau then refused to give him more than $10 per month.

The applicant is now totally deaf, as your committee believe, from causes arising in his military service, and is also totally blind from an accident occurring since the war, and your committee are of opinion that he should have at least $30, the pension for total deafness of both ears, and recommend that the bill be amended by striking out the word "seventy-two," in line 8, and in place thereof insert the word "thirty," and, as amended, earnestly urge the passage of the bill.

Mr. THOMAS: Mr. Ch.

Mr. THOMAS. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment to perfect the bill.

The amendment was read, as follows:

In line 8 strike out the words "the sum" and insert "a pension."

The CHAIRMAN. The first question is on the amendment reported by the committee.

The amendment was agreed to.

The question being taken on the amendment of Mr. Thomas, it was agreed to.

The bill as amended was laid aside to be reported favorably to the House.

HENRY SLAUGHTER.

The next business on the Private Calendar was the bill (H. R. 2725) granting increase of pension to Henry Slaughter.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll the name of Henry Slaughter, late private in Company A, Fourteenth Regiment of Indiana Volunteers, and pay him a pension at the rate of $24 per month, in lieu of the pension he now receives.

The report (by Mr. KIRKPATRICK) was read, as follows:

sion he now receives.

The report (by Mr. KIRKPATRICK) was read, as follows:

Your Committee on Invalid Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 2725) entitled "A bill granting increase of pension to Henry Slaughter," beg leave to submit the following report, and recommend that said bill do pass without amendment:

Henry Slaughter enlisted June 7, 1861, as private, Company A, Fourtenth Indiana Infantry Volunteers, and was honorably discharged therefrom June 16, 1864. He reenlisted as private, Company A, Fourth United States Artillery, October 7, 1864, and was honorably discharged as sergeant October 6, 1867, having faithfully served six years and ten days.

His left arm was fractured below elbow by a gunshot wound received in battle at Antietam, Md., September 17, 1862, and received another gunshot wound on same day in same battle, the ball passing through left testicle, injuring prostate gland, and passing out under the gluteal folds of left thigh. At the battle of the Wilderness, Virginia, May 5, 1864, he received a gunshot wound of left hand, ball passing through base of second finger, and necessitating amputation at metacarpal phalangeal joint; and on same day received another gunshot wound of left arm, ball entering anterior surface at lower third, passing backward and upward, injuring both bones of forearm, and making exit at posterior surface, 2 inches above the entrance.

He filed claim for pension July 28, 1864, and his claim was allowed February 16, 1878, at 36 per month from June 17, 1864, deducting period of subsequent service. His pension was increased to $10 from April 24, 1876, and to $12 from February 24, 1888, for gunshot wounds of left arm, hand, and testicle, at whice rate he is now pensioned.

He was rated $14 per month by the board of examining surgeons at Effingham, Ill., March 17, 1875, for these wounds, and nine boards which examined him at intervals since, all rate him not less than $14, while the board at Vandalia, Ill, March 20, 1889, rated him at $15. The board at Greenville ra

Mr. THOMAS. For the purpose of perfecting the bill, I offer the amendment which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

In line 6 strike out the letter."s" at the end of "volunteers" and insert the word "infantry."

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill as amended was laid aside to be reported favorably to the House.

JANE CUNNINGHAM.

The next business on the Private Calendar was the bill (H. R. 5068) to grant a pension to Jane Cunningham, widow of James Cunningham.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he hereby is, instructed to place upon the pension roll the name of Jane Cunningham, widow of James Cunningham, late of Company B, Seventh Wisconsin Infantry, and to pay her a pension of $12 per month from and after the passage of this act.

Mr. ERDMAN. Let us hear the report. The report (by Mr. THOMAS) was read, as follows:

The report (by Mr. Thomas) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Invalid Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 508) granting a pension to Jane Cunningham, report as follows:

James Cunningham, husband of the claimant, enlisted January 25, 1864, and was discharged July 3, 1865, after serving over a year and a half. He was wounded in the thigh at the battle of the Wilderness. He was pensioned for that wound, but for disease of eyes contracted in service he had difficulty in furnishing evidence to satisfy the Pension Office. He became almost totally blind, was unable to do anything for the support of his family, felt himself a burden, his claim for disease of eyes was not acted upon, he became despondent, brooded upon his poverty and helplessness, and finally, as is believed, in an attack of at least temporary insanity, caused by his poverty and distress, resulting from the disease of eyes contracted in service and in line of duty, he committed suicide.

The widow's claim under the general law was rejected by the Pension Office, and the rejection affirmed by the Secretary of the Interior, on the ground that the evidence did not satisfactorily show that the soldier's death was due to causes arising in the service. The certificate of examination m de in June, 1886, shows that at that time he was totally blind in one eye and could not distinguish any of "Mellen's test types" with the other. When the claim was finally allowed, a short time after the soldier's death, his rate was fixed at $30 per month.

Your committee are of opinion that the soldier was so despondent on account of his condition and so discouraged because his claim was not allowed that he became mentally unbalanced, temporarily at least, and that while so mentally unbalanced, and in consequence thereof, took his own life, and the passage of the bill is therefore recommended with an amendment, striking out the word, "authorized and directed."

The amendment reported by the committee was read as followed.

The amendment reported by the committee was read, as follows: In lines 3 and 4, strike out the word "instructed" and insert the words authorized and directed."

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the amend-

Mr. ERDMAN. Mr. Chairman, the House ought to know what this bill is about. We have in this case an attempt to prove that suicide is of service origin. [Laughter.] We have done many strange things in pensioning soldiers and their widows, and I do not know that we ought to be astonished at this proposition; but not know that we ought to be astonished at this proposition; but here is a deliberate attempt to pension the widow of a soldier who committed suicide long after the war, at the rate she would have received if the soldier had died of some disease of service origin. So that, as I say, the bill practically undertakes to determine that suicide may be of service origin. I move to amend so as to make this pension $8 a month, instead of $12.

Mr. THOMAS. Mr. Chairman, I hope the amendment of the gentleman from Pennsylvania will not prevail, for several reasons. One is that this man was receiving a pension at the rate of $30 per month for injuries received in the service and in the line of duty. Had he not committed suicide the widow would have been undoubtedly pensionable under the general law at $12 a month: and doubtedly pensionable under the general law at $12 a month; and that is all the bill asks. I think it is merely an act of justice and that it should prevail.

I might add that the fact he committed suicide saves the Government the difference between $12 a month and $30 a month, if you allow that sum to the widow.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amend in line 7 by striking out "twelve" and inserting "eight;" so as to read $8 per month.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is first on agreeing to the committee amendment.

The committee amendment was agreed to.

The question was taken on the amendment proposed by Mr. ERDMAN, and it was rejected.

The bill as amended was laid aside to be reported to the House with a favorable recommendation.

LEWELLYN D. KING.

The next business on the Private Calendar was the bill (H. R. 7349) to pension Lewellyn D. King.
The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc.. That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place upon the pension roll of the United States the name of Lewellyn D. King, of Oriskany Falls, N. Y., late a private in Company E., Eighty-first New York Volunteers, at the rate of $30 per month.

Mr. ERDMAN. Let us have the report in that case. The report (by Mr. Poole) was read, as follows:

Mr. ERDMAN. Let us have the report in that case.

The report (by Mr. Poole) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Invalid Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 7349) to pension Lewellyn D. King, beg leave to submit the following report:
This soldier enlisted October 17, 1861, was treated in hospital while in service for liver complaint and general debility, and was honorably discharged June 8, 1863, on "surgeon's certificate of disability" for general debility, the result of incipient phthisis and typhoid fever.

Claim under the general law, filed September 1, 1886, was rejected April 8, 1887, on the ground that the evidence elicited on special examination, which appears to be the best obtainable, fails to show any disability from discharge to 1879, when the claimant was suddenly stricken with paralysis, and tends to show that his present condition is due to venereal disease.

Claim under act of June 27, 1890, filed October 10, 1890, was rejected October 29, 1892, on the ground of no disability except that due to venereal disease.

The soldier swears positively that he never had any venereal disease of any kind, and there is no evidence of any person who knows that he ever did have such disease. On the contrary, Drs. Frank D. Beebe and D. D. Chase, members of the board of surgeons at Oneida, N. Y., where claimant was ordered before them in 1892, reported that they had examined him and found him a helpless invalid, totally blind and bedridden, as they believed, from diseases contracted while in the United States military service.

The board of surgeons at Rome, N. Y., by whom he was examined on September 22, 1892, stated that they found claimant in bed, to which he had been confined for ten years. He was unable to sit or stand, and without perception of light. Could not button his clothes or feed himself. They carefully examined all the parts usually affected by venereal disease, and found them free from any evidence of having ever been affected thereby. In their opinion venereal disease is not a fact had venereal disease, one of whom says he examined claimant's body for that purpose but failed to find any indications thereof, while the other claims to have found an intangible, indescribable something in his eyes which he thought indicated venereal origin, but both seem to have been largely influenced by the fact that they could not find anything else to attribute it to, and they had to account for it in some way, so they charged it to an assumed venereal disease which claimant never had.

As before stated, there is no evidence of any value that this soldier ever had venereal disease, and there is very strong evidence that he did not have such disease—in his sworn statement that he did not, and in the reports of the medical examining boards, and the descriptions of all the physicians, none of whom has ever found any such disease, or any evidence that soldier ever had it. In order for venereal disease to have caused the condition now found, it must have become constitutional, and it could not have produced the present condition without leaving evidences of its presence on some of the parts usually affected. In the absence of any other discernible cause, it seems fair to presume that the paralysis resulted from the general debility and nervous prostration for which he was discharged from the service.

In view of these facts your committee believe that the Pension Office was in error in rejecting the claim on the ground that the disability was due to vicious habits, and they therefore recommend the passage of the bill.

Mr. THOMAS. Mr. Chairman, I offer the amendment I send

Mr. THOMAS. Mr. Chairman, I offer the amendment I send to the desk

The Clerk read as follows:

In lines 5 and 6 strike out the words "of Oriskany Falls, N. Y.," and in line 7 strike out "at the rate" and insert the words "and pay him a pension."

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill as amended was laid aside to be reported to the House with a recommendation that it do pass

FRANCIS BROWN.

The next business on the Private Calendar was the bill (S. 646) for the relief of Francis Brown. The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, directed to place on the pension roll the name of Francis Brown, late of Company B, Fifth Massachusetts Cavalry, subject to the limitations of the general pension laws.

Mr. ERDMAN. I ask for the reading of the report. The report (by Mr. POOLE) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Invalid Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (S. 646) for the relief of Francis Brown, have carefully examined the same and report for the relief of Francis Brown, have carefully examined the same and report as follows:

Francis Brown served in Company B, Fifth Massachusetts Volunteer Cavalry, from May 12, 1864, to October 31, 1865, when he was honorably discharged. He filed a claim for pension under the act of June 27, 1890, on August 23, 1890, which claim was rejected July 13, 1891. He filed another claim under said act, which was rejected March 3, 1894, both rejections being on the ground, as alleged, of no ratable disability under said act.

This bill has been passed by the Senate to place him on the pension rolls under the general pension laws. This is evidently an error, because he never claimed pension under the general law, and never alleged that his disabilities were of service origin. He does, however, meet the requirements of the act of June 27, 1890. He served nearly a year and a half and was honorably discharged.

were of service origin. The does, however, meet the requirements of the act of June 27, 1890. He served nearly a year and a half and was honorably discharged.

With regard to his disability, he was examined in this city December 19, 1893, by a board composed of physicians of high professional standing and great skill and experience, who state in their report as follows:

"Rheumatism.—Lumbar region and both knees slightly sensitive to pressure, and painful upon passive motion.

"Heart.—Apex beat normal, action rapid and strong, organ very irritable, sounds normal, pulse rate 90-98, no organic disease.

"On external aspect of left knee is a movable tumor, apparently of benign nature, 9 by 10 inches and measuring at base 17 inches in circumference. Is freely movable. Causes claimant to limp slightly. No evidence of victous habits. Claimant is disabled, by reason of rheumatism, irritable heart, and tumor above described, for manual labor except of a light character."

The maker of this report has seen this man and examined to some extent the above-described tumor, and knows by personal observation that claimant is greatly disabled, and your committee are constrained to be governed by the evidence of their own senses and the opinion of the three skillful and experienced surgeons who examined him carefully, taking measurements, etc., rather than by the opinion of the medical examiners, who never saw him.

Your committee therefore recommend that the Senate bill be amended by striking out all after the word "cavalry." in line 5. and adding "at $12 per striking out all after the word "cavalry." in line 5. and adding "at $12 per striking out all after the word "cavalry." in line 5. and adding "at $12 per striking out all after the word "cavalry." in line 5. and adding "at $12 per striking out all after the word "cavalry." in line 5. and adding "at $12 per striking out all after the word "cavalry." in line 5. and adding "at $12 per striking out all after the word "cavalry." in line 5. and adding "at $12 per striking out a

Your committee therefore recommend that the Senate bill be amended by striking out all after the word "cavalry," in line 5, and adding "at $12 per month," and that as amended it do pass.

The amendment recommended by the committee was agreed to.
Mr. TALBERT. Mr. Chairman, it does seem to me that this is a very questionable bill. According to the report of the commit-a very questionable bill. According to the report of the committee itself, it is a bill that ought not to pass.

It seems that this man filed a claim for pension under the act of June 27, 1890, on August 28, 1890, and the claim was rejected on the 13th of July, 1891. He filed another claim under the same act, which was rejected on the 3d of March, 1894, and, according to the language of the report:

Both rejections being on the ground, as alleged, of no ratable disability under said act.

Now, there are three distinct times that this applicant was rejected by the Pension Bureau after a thorough investigation of the facts. However, the report says here:

He does, however, meet the requirements of the act of June 27, 1890.

This statement is made, when as a matter of fact he was rejected on March 3, 1894, by the Bureau, and if he comes or came under the provisions of the general law, as a matter of course the Pension Bureau would not have rejected the claim in 1891 and again in 1894. It seems to me to be a plain case of contradictory statements. There is some mistake evidently, and this bill ought not to be passed.

I therefore move to lay it aside with an unfavorable recommen-

Mr. POOLE. Mr. Chairman, the fact is that the report was made in 1896, while this man was examined in 1891 and again in 1893, as is shown. Now, if he could be examined again at the present time, there is no doubt in my mind that he would get a pension of $12 a month. He is in a very bad condition to-day. I have seen him quite recently, and have personally examined his injuries and know that he is disabled. If the gentleman from South Carolina could see him to-night I know he would not hesi-south Carolina could see him to-night I know he would not hesitate to grant the pension which is asked here.

This bill has been passed by the Senate, but under some misapprehension it was provided that the pension should be paid "subject to the limitations of the general pension law." That, as I show in the report, is a mistake, because if he was entitled under the general law he would be entitled to about $30 a month. He is disabled now and is clearly entitled to $12 a month, and I hope he will be pensioned.

Mr. TALBERT. It seems from the report that he was in the service but a few months. Mr. POOLE. A year a

Mr. POOLE. A year and a half.
Mr. TALBERT. He had no organic disease. He had a little lump on his knee, and his pulse beat a little fast. From the report of the board there seems to be nothing serious the matter with him. I do think that it is an unjust claim and ought not to pass.

Mr. THOMAS. Will the gentleman from South Carolina [Mr. TALBERT] allow me to perfect the bill, no matter what may be done with it hereafter?

Mr. ERDMAN. Mr. Chairman, I desire to say a word or two.
The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Michigan [Mr.
THOMAS] offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.
The Clerk read as follows:

In line 3, after the word "hereby," insert "authorized and." In line 6 strike out "at" and insert "and pay him a pension of." Amend the title so as to read "A bill granting a pension to Francis Brown."

Mr. ERDMAN. Mr. Chairman, I am a member of the committee that reported this bill. From the report the House might infer that this committee had made an examination of this applicant, and had seen fit to differ from the pension board that examined him. If I were to sit here without making any objection, I might possibly be held also to have made an examination. The report says:

Your committee are constrained to be governed by the evidence of their

Well, now, I beg, as a member of the committee, to say that my own sense certainly has never been consulted in this case.

I know the members of the House are under the impression that in the committee pass upon these bills carefully and considerately; that we present reports here which have received the deliberate action and consideration of this committee. Now, I say to you that that is not so. I refer, for instance, to the committee meeting on May 28, 1896, in which we passed the following bills in the space of about an hour and a quarter. I desire the Clerk to read the statement as a part of my remarks.

The Clerk read as follows:

Number.	Name.	Date.	Amount.	Rank.
H. R. 4621	Arnett, A. J. Brown, Olive. Barlow, Blanche E	May 28, 1896	$30.00	Private.
H. R. 3903	Brown, Olive	Pension	Law.	Do.
H. R. 9157	Barlow, Blanche E	May 28, 1896	25.00	Surgeon.
H. R. 7375	Darrows, Susan I	do	Law	Private.
H. R. 7290	Benedict, C. W. Botsford, Anna E	do	17.00	Do.
H. R. 5661	Botsford, Anna E	do	25,00	Do.
H. R. 6235	Bacon, Ira. Bucklew, Mary E. Cunningham, Susan E. Crawford, J. B.	do	30,00	Do.
H. R. 6971	Bucklew, Mary E	do	12.00	Do.
8. 3182	Cunningham, Susan E	do	12.00	Do.
H. R. 7336	Crawford, J. B	do	50.00	Do.
H. R. 6755	Chapman, J. S	ob	30.00	Do.
H. R. 8463	Dixon, Milo	do	8.00	Do.
H. R. 6419	Dill, S. P	do	50.00	Major.
H. R. 3861	Dunn Rornard	do	72.00	Private.
H. R. 3482	Dunn, Bernard Donavan, Maggie	20	12.00	Do .
H. R. 4388	Kogtman E I	do	EO 00	Do
H. R. 2235	Foster I W	do	Law.
H. R. 8509	Poller T W	do	12.00	Do
H. R. 7978	Foster, J. F. Failes, J. H. Gibbons, Ann		12.00	Do
8, 2879	Untobing C A	00	20.00	Captain.
H. R. 3805	Hutchins, C. A	do	8.00	Private.
	Harrington, C. W		50.00	Do
H. R. 9093	Hayes, A. R.	do	12.00	Do
H. R. 5884	Ingram, Sarah E	do	12.00	Nurse.
H. R. 9060	Kibele, Mary A	do	12.00	Assistant sur geon.
H. R. 6604	Kidder, C. S	do	30.00	Private.
H. R. 6215	Marrion, A. D	do	50.00	Do.
H. R. 3510				Do.
3. 8133	Olin Rotsov B	do	25.00	Do.
H. R. 8524	Rica William	do	80.00	Do.
T. R. 6962	Sanford D B	do	12.00	Do.
H. R. 5307	Sweet Anna M	do	19 00	Do.
H. R. 4431	Sample Minerre	do	95.00
H. R. 7420	Cale Flireboth M	do	19.00	Surgeon.
	Purdy, Alex Olin, Betsey B. Bice, William Sanford, D. B. Sweet, Anna M. Sample, Minerva Sale, Elizabeth M. Stafer, Eliza	uo	12.00	Private.
I. R. 7687	Stater, Eliza	do	12.00	Do.
H. R. 8511				Do.
H. R. 5263	Willis, Henry Walker, Charlotte L	OD	12.00	Do.
H. R. 1942	Walker, Charlotte L	do	27.00	Major.

Mr. ERDMAN. Mr. Chairman, thirty-seven bills were considered and passed by the committee in the space of about an hour and a quarter. The reports were directed to be written. These bills carry an annual payment of about $10,000, and if you were to go into the market and purchase annuities for these people it would probably cost $150,000. The work was done by this committee in one brief hour and a quarter, and you are to vote on them without any further knowledge or consideration. If the House think that is the right thing to do, it rests with them. But they do not pass on it without having been told what the actual facts

Mr. POOLE. Mr. Chairman, in regard to the pending bill, I want to say to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. Erdman] that I will acquit him of favoring that bill, and almost every other bill that we have ever considered in the committee. In making the report, which was read a few moments ago, there was a statement read which the gentleman, in referring to the report, has omitted. I had the honor to make this report, and it contains the following vital statement. I say distinctly:

The maker of this report has seen this man, and examined, to some extent, the above-described tumor—

He has a tumor which is simply horrible-and knows by personal observation that claimant is greatly disabled, and your committee—using the usual wording in a committee reportand your committee are constrained, etc.

The gentleman omitted to read the first part, in which I expressly stated that I had personally examined the man. He is a colored man, who served a year and a half, instead of about five months, as stated by the gentleman from South Carolina [Mr.

months, as stated by the gentleman from South Carolina [Mr. Talbert]. He is a very poor man, and the case is one of very great distress. I hope the bill will pass.

Mr. Talbert. Mr. Chairman, I want to correct what I said in regard to the service of Francis Brown. I do not want to do anybody an injustice. I said he had only served five months. I find he served a year and five months. I therefore make that correction.

However, I do not think he is entitled to a pension, and, as I said, this report seems to contradict itself, from the fact that he filed a claim for a pension under the act of June 27, 1890, on August 28, 1890, which claim was rejected July 13, 1891. He filed another claim under said act, which was rejected March 3, 1894, both rejections being on the ground, as alleged, of no ratable disability under said act.

Yet a little further down the report says:

This bill has been passed by the Senate to place him on the pension rolls under the general pension laws. This is evidently an error, because he never claimed pension under the general law, and never alleged that his disabilities were of service origin. He does, however, meet the requirements of the act of June 27, 1890.

Now, he in fact made two applications under that very act, but was denied a pension; so that it seems to me that there is a discrepancy there which I can not explain.

Mr. MILES. I want to call your attention to a fact that you have overlooked, and in the line of your argument, that the rejection was made

Mr. TALBERT. Possibly so. I do not want to do the man an injustice.

Mr. MILES. It is in the line of your argument, and consistent with it.

Mr. TALBERT. What is the matter with it if it is all right?

Mr. MILES. It was rejected in March, 1894.

Mr. TALBERT. Then let it alone.

Mr. MILES. I am not favoring the bill, my friend.
Mr. TALBERT. I move, Mr. Chairman, in view of these inconsistencies, in which my friend agrees, that the bill be recommitted to the Committee on Invalid Pensions, so that they can bring it in to the Committee on Invalid Pensions, so that they can bring it in correct, and possibly the man will then get a pension.

Mr. MILES. Mr. Chairman, the gentleman from California refuses very properly to permit me to interject my speech into his remarks, but perhaps that does not matter, since he agrees with me; I hope, however, he will remember not to ask me to do the same thing for him. But I wanted to call his attention, and that of the Hoyes to the fact that the rejection was made several that of the House to the fact that the rejection was made several months after the time when this local medical board made its examination, which has been made a part of this report. The pension claim was rejected by the Pension Office in March, 1894, and the report of this local examining board was made in December, 1893. So that the man's condition as it was seen by this local medical board was surely passed upon by the Pension Office in the following year. I would like to call the attention of my friend from New York [Mr. POOLE] to the fact that, after all, this medical report does not carry with it that significance which he attaches to it. I know my friend is always fair and just, and I do not wish in this instance to unduly criticise him or his report; but I want him to notice the fact that this report from this medical board, on which he lays so much stress, states expressly that months after the time when this local medical board made its do not wish in this instance to unduly criticise him or his report; but I want him to notice the fact that this report from this medical board, on which he lays so much stress, states expressly that Pennsylvania. I have attended every Friday night session with this "is a movable tumor, apparently of a benign nature." Now, if I understand anything of medical terms, that means that this is a tumor which could have been easily removed and when removed, would have gotten rid of the only disability this soldier

That is all I desire to say. I am not given to making captious opposition to these private pension claims. I do not recollect whether I was present in the committee on the 28th of May, when so many bills were passed in so short a time; if not, perhaps I was not doing my duty in that respect; but I have since examined this case very carefully, and have also read the report very carefully; and as a member of this committee I do desire to protest against the passage of this bill. I think it is entirely devoid of merit and ought not to pass.

Mr. TALBERT. I move to recommit this bill

Mr. TALBERT. I move to recommit this bill.

The CHAIRMAN. The House is in Committee of the Whole, and the question is first on the amendment of the committee.

The amendment of the committee was agreed to.
The CHAIRMAN. The question now recurs on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Michigan.

The amendment was agreed to.

The question was taken on ordering the bill as amended to be laid aside with a favorable recommendation; and the Chairman announced that the ayes seemed to have it.

Mr. TALBERT. Division, Mr. Chairman.

The committee divided; and there were—ayes 63, noes 5.

The committee divided; and there were—ayes 63, noes 5.

Mr. TALBERT. No quorum.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from South Carolina makes the point of no quorum. The Chair will ascertain. [After counting,] One hundred and nineteen gentlemen are present; a quorum appears to be present; the ayes have it, and the bill is laid aside with a favorable recommendation.

Mr. FENTON. Mr. Speaker, I desire to call up the Senate bill 2500. [Cries of "Regular order!"] I hope there will be no objection to this, if gentlemen will hear the report. It is very short. [Cries of "Regular order!"]

IRA H. SWEATT.

The next business on the Private Calendar was the bill (H. R. 1323) for the relief of Ira H. Sweatt.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay to Ira H. Sweatt, late of Company I, Thirteenth New Hampshire Volunteers, a dependent pensioner, the amount for which he is borne upon the rolls, and in addition he receive the amount which has already accrued to him while his name was borne upon said rolls.

Mr. ERDMAN. Mr. Chairman, let us have the report read. The report (by Mr. Poole) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Invalid Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 1823) providing for the payment of a pension already granted to Ira H. Sweatt, of Company I, Thirteenth New Hampshire Volunteers, submit the following 1823) providing for the payment of a pension already granted to Ira H. Sweatt, of Company I, Thirteenth New Hampshire Volunteers, submit the following report:

Ira H. Sweatt enlisted January I, 1864, and was discharged December 19, 1865. On September 10, 1870, he applied for a pension, alleging that while in front of Petersburg, Va., in July, 1864, he contracted dumb ague and malarial fever, and that as the result he had lost the use of both legs and his right arm, and that he could not walk with crutches. The pension was allowed, and he was granted a pension at the rate of $8 a month from the date of his discharge, in 1865, to May 10, 1871, and $20 a month from that date to June 3, 1872, and $24 a month thereafter.

On the 30th of June, 1882, he was dropped from the rolls on the ground that the disability for which pension was granted was not contracted in line of duty, but while absent without leave.

On July 25, 1880, Ira H. Sweatt made application for a pension under the act of June 27, 1890, alleging paralysis, which pension was allowed October 19, 1892, at $12 per month from date of the application, with a proviso that all payments under that certificate should be withheld until the Government could be reimbursed for all payments made under the first certificate.

The evidence examined by your committee shows that Ira H. Sweatt twice appealed to the Secretary of the Interior against the order dropping him from the roll, but without success. The present disability of the claimant is beyond dispute, and is acknowledged by the Pension Bureau in granting him the largest amount of pension provided for under the act of 1890; but the trouble is that while the pension certificate says that he shall receive $12 per month, all payments will be withheld until in all probability this man will be in his grave.

The committee are satisfied that the claimant has no resources; is absolutely helpless; that all moneys heretofore received by him as a pension (and which he claims he was honestly entitled to) have been expend

Mr. KIRKPATRICK. Mr. Chairman, I am heartily in favor of the amendment, and believe that the bill as amended should pass. I desire, however, before the vote is taken, to make a brief statement. I have been a member of the Committee on Invalid Pensions ever since the convening of this Congress, and I believe that during that time I have been absent on only one occasion. The during that time I have been absent on only one occasion.

the exception of one, and when this bill is passed I shall ask as a personal favor that I be permitted to call up a bill. I have never had a unanimous consent in this Congress, and I shall now ask the had a unanimous consent in this Congress, and I shall now ask the favor of calling up a short bill in which I am much interested.

Mr. MILES. Mr. Chairman, I desire to say to my friend that I think he will find there will be no opposition to his very reasonable request upon this side of the House after this bill shall have been disposed of. I do not, however, agree with him that the pending bill is a meritorious one. I think it is entirely lacking in merit. I desire to call the attention of the House to a few facts which I think they will find bear me out in that statement. The report in this case states the facts in this case, and I hope gentlereport in this case states the facts in this case, and I hope gentle-men will bear the facts in mind when they come to vote, and if they vote in favor of the bill they will, in my judgment, vote in disregard of certain facts which ought to damn this claim for a This man applied for a pension away back in 1875 and was pensioned at the rate of $8 a month from the time of his discharge in 1865 and drew that pension down to May 10, 1871. He drew a pension of $20 a month from that date to June 3, 1872, and

Now, I never was much of a mathematician, and I have not taken the pains to calculate how much money this man drew, but These facts being borne in mind, let us see what was ascertained ultimately after he had drawn this large sum of money. On the 30th of June, 1882—which I ask gentlemen on the other side to note was long before the Democratic administration of the Pension Office began—on the 30th day of June, 1882, he was dropped from the rolls on the ground that the disability for which the pension had been granted had not been contracted in line of duty, but had been contracted while the claimant was absent from duty without been contracted while the claimant was absent from duty without leave, while he was, in other words, practically a deserter. He had drawn these different pensions, as I have stated, from 1865 to 1882, and then the Pension Office discovered that during all that time he had been drawing the money fraudulently, because the disability for which the pension had been allowed had been contracted while he was in the attitude of a deserter. These are the facts, gentlemen, as you will find them set forth in this very report. I read further from the report; report. I read further from the report;

On July 25, 1890, Ira H. Sweatt made application for a pension under the act of June 27, 1890, alleging paralysis, which pension was allowed October 19, 1892, at $12 per month from date of the application, with a proviso that all payments under that certificate should be withheld until the Government could be reimbursed for all payments made under the first certificate.

That was obviously a just and proper disposition of the case.
The man was granted a pension at the latter date, with a proviso that before he should draw it he should return to the Government the money which he had unjustly and unlawfully drawn from the

Now, I have never stood here and made factious opposition to meritorious pension claims, and I ask my friends on the Pension Committee—for I, too, shall pass out of history as an American Congressman after the 4th of March next—I ask my friends on that committee to bear witness to the fact that I have not done so. I have tried to be just. I have tried to treat Union soldiers fairly, although I am a Southern man and a Democrat, and although, as although I am a Southern man and a Democrat, and although, as I stated here on a former occasion, the people from whom I sprang were a class of people whose hopes, aspirations, and sympathies went out after the flag that was followed by Lee and Jackson rather than for the flag that was borne aloft by Grant and Sherman. But, notwithstanding all these considerations, I am here to say now that, like my friend from South Carolina [Mr. Talbert], I have always tried to be just and to do my duty on the Pensions Committee impartially and conscientiously. I hope, therefore, that the appeal which I now make will be heard in the spirit in which it is made. Do not, gentlemen, do not, I beg you, burden your pension roll, which should be a roll of honor, with cases such as this, which tend to stamp it as a roll where deserters are such as this, which tend to stamp it as a roll where deserters are

Mr. THOMAS. Mr. Chairman, there is no attempt in this bill or in the report to disguise the facts, and they are nearly as stated by the gentleman from Maryland [Mr. MILES]. This man made application and did receive a pension of $24 a month—first $10, then $20, then $24. There is no charge on the part of the Department by the person of t that it was fraudulent evidence which secured him this pension. But it was the opinion of the Department, after a review of this case, that his disabilities were not due to service in the line of duty.

Mr. MILES. Will the gentleman allow me a question?

Mr. THOMAS. Certainly.

Mr. MILES. I do not know whether the gentleman is a lawyer

Mr. THOMAS. I have had some experience with lawyers.
Mr. MILES. I think the gentleman must overlook what is certainly a legal implication from this action of the Pension Department. If it was not a moral fraud, it was at least a legal fraud, by which this man drew this money from the Treasury. He must have laid before the office some testimony upon the question whether or not his disability was contracted in the line of duty.

Somebody got up that testimony. He knew whether that testimony was true or false. It must have been false testimony or his pension of $24 a month would have been continued. He allowed that false testimony to go to the Pension Office; and he drew first $8, then $10, then $20, and then $24 a month as pension. And still the gentleman stands here and would have this House believe that this man knew nothing about the fraudulent testimony on which he drew this pension. Why, sir, it is a preposterous claim. And It is man knew nothing about the fraudthent testimony on when he drew this pension. Why, sir, it is a preposterous claim. And I always grow especially vehement when I see efforts made to dishonor the pension roll. As a Southern man I protest against it. This pension roll hereafter is to be known as an American roll, not a roll of the Northern soldiery alone. As was shown in the case of a pension claim passed this afternoon, Southern men are found on that roll. It is an American roll, Mr. Chairman, and I would have it pure and clean.

Mr. THOMAS. I believe I am entitled to the floor.

Mr. KNOX rose.

Mr. THOMAS. I yield to the gentleman from Massachusetts

Mr. KNOX. Mr. Chairman, I have no disposition to contradict the professions of fairness made by the gentleman who has just addressed the committee. I have no disposition to contradict his statements of the fidelity with which he has attended the meetings of the Committee on Invalid Pensions. The only thing that I have seen to militate against an opinion of his fairness is the earnestness of the declarations he has made in his opposition to this bill.

It is unimportant to me or to this applicant whether the gentle-man is a Southern Democrat or a Northern Republican or a Pop-ulist. That has nothing to do with the question that the Commit-tee on Invalid Pensions was called upon to decide, and the question which is now before this Committee of the Whole, a question to be decided upon the law and the evidence before us and the merits of the case. All I ask in the consideration of this case is that the House recognize the facts as they appear and the law which is applicable to them. If it is unjust that this man should receive the pension asked, I do not wish him to receive it.

But what are the facts? This man, Ira H. Sweatt, is a resident of Lowell, in my district. I know him. He is totally disabled.

Both his legs are paralyzed, one arm is paralyzed, the other he can not bend at the elbow, and when he sits at the cobbler's bench trying to eke out a living he strikes the blow with his hammer from his shoulder. He is a totally disabled man.

He served in the Army of the United States for almost one from January to December. It is the uncontradicted evidence, from the papers in the Pension Office, that while he was in the service he contracted dumb ague and malaria, which were followed by paralysis. He went home in December, 1864.

followed by paralysis. He went home in December, 1854.

Mr. MILES. Will the gentleman allow me a single suggestion?

Mr. KNOX. Certainly, if it is upon a question of fact.

Mr. MILES. The gentleman started out with a very fair statement that he proposed to discuss the law and the facts as they appeared somewhere or other; I do not know where. Now, I should like to know whence he has derived the information that the Pension Office has records to show that this man's wound was of service origin.

Mr. KNOX. He was not wounded at all. Certainly the gentleman is not familiar with the facts of the case.

Mr. MILES. I understood the gentleman to maintain that this man's injury was of service origin.

Mr. KNOX. I say that while in camp before Petersburg, in the service of his country, he was taken with dumb ague and

Mr. MILES. Why, then, did the Pension Office discontinue his pension in 1882 on the ground that his disability was not of service pension in 1882 on the ground that point in a moment. He origin?

Mr. KNOX. I was coming to that point in a moment. He contracted this disease in the service; and when he was convalescing he was allowed to go home on leave. He had resided at Holbrook, N. H., close to the Canadian line. He had left his wife living with his brother, and in his absence his brother had exchanged his farm for a farm across the line. When he went home, this disease which he had contracted at Petersburg was renewed, and he was again prostrated, so that he was unable to return to the service. Thus it did appear upon the records of the had that he was absent without leave, because it did not appear Army that he was absent without leave, because it did not appear then (as the gentleman can easily see) that after returning to his home he had had this relapse, so that he was unable to go back to the Army.

Now, from that fact of his being absent without leave, the gentleman from Maryland has seen fit to tell this committee that this man was a deserter. He was prostrated by a relapse of this very disease, contracted in the service: and the authorities of the United States, on an investigation of the circumstances, granted him an honorable discharge, as appears from the records and the report that is before you. And I ask the gentleman from Maryland if it is customary for the United States Government to give an honorable discharge to deserve from its America.

able discharge to deserters from its Army?

He is not, then, a deserter, but an honorably discharged man, who is totally disabled from a disease contracted, in my judgment, who is totally disabled from a disease contracted, in my judgment, in the line of duty while in the service of the country.

But leaving that question for a moment, on account of being entirely helpless he received a pension running finally up to $24 a month for a period extending from 1871 or 1872 up to 1882, when it was taken from him by an investigation set on foot by the Pension Office; an investigation, and I do not care who did it, or who set it on foot, that in my judgment was a contemptible, hiding, skulking investigation, behind a man's back, without giving him an experiturity to be confronted with witnesses or be permitted to an opportunity to be confronted with witnesses or be permitted to understand what character of evidence was given against him; and he was a poor man, utterly unable to make such defense as he could have made when the action of the Department was set before him. In my judgment, that pension was wrongfully taken away from a totally disabled man and he ought to have had it restored promptly.

restored promptly.

But I make no contest for that now. We give it up; he has lost it, and it has gone, perhaps never to be recovered. But under the law of 1890—the act of June 27 of that year—he applied for a pension as a disabled soldier. Is there any question on the evidence that appears of record that he is not disabled? Is there any-body who will deny, upon the evidence, that he is totally disabled? Is there anybody who will deny that he was a soldier, that he was disabled in the service, and that he had an honorable discharge? Why, then, was he not entitled to the pension accorded him?—because he was granted a pension, and had an honorable discharge to found the grant of a pension upon. What was the reason? The Pension Office said that from 1870 to 1880 he had been in receipt of a pension for total disability which was too large, and that he had received some three or four thousand dollars in all, to which they claimed he was not entitled.

which they claimed he was not entitled.

When the soldier went to Boston to get his small pension he was to receive in lieu of the larger one that had been withdrawn from him, they said, "Call around some time after you have paid the Government $3,000 or $4,000 that you have drawn improperly, and you can talk to us about the matter. Call around some time in 1915 or 1920 "—years after the man will have been in his grave—"take some fifteen or twenty years to pay back the money that you received;" and in the meantime the helpless soldier is without subsistence

Mr. MILES. Will the gentleman allow a question?

Mr. KNOX. Certainly.
Mr. MILES. Where is the evidence that the conversation you have just detailed to the House ever took place?
Mr. KNOX. I do not claim that it is the exact conversation that took place. I say it was the substance of what was done; and neither you nor anyone else can deny that this man's pension was withdrawn from him.

withdrawn from him.

Mr. MILES. I do not find any such conversation in the record.

Mr. KNOX. I do not pretend to say that that was what was said to this man. I was not trying to repeat a conversation; I was only relating the facts which took place and are not questioned.

Mr. MILES. I understood you were to discuss the law and the facts. Now, the gentleman has detailed a conversation as a part of the facts. I went to know what the facts are so that the House facts. Now, the gentleman has detailed a conversation as a part of the facts. I want to know what the facts are, so that the House can take cognizance of the matter.

Mr. KNOX. The gentleman knows that I was not undertaking to detail exactly a conversation that occurred. I was only speaking generally of the circumstances attending the taking away of this man's pension, and I say it is a fair inference from the facts that did occur. I was not present, of course, but it is a fair description of what occurred.

Mr. MILES. The House can not take cognizance of such a fact as that as that.

Mr. KNOX. I repeat, that it is a fair construction based on the

Mr. KNOX. I repeat, that it is a fair construction based on the facts as they are known.

They say to this man, "You shall receive a small payment of $12 a month after you pay back the three or four thousand that have been overpaid you." There is no law, Mr. Chairman, there is no act of Congress, which warrants any such practice as has grown up in the office of requiring these repayments. But I give that up. I do not insist upon that position. I will concede, if necessary, that there is such a law, and that the practice can be upheld by law; but the Pension Office itself, by a late decision of Assistant Secretary Reynolds—a decision rendered within three months past—has held that a pensioner could not be called on to repay a pension has held that a pensioner could not be called on to repay a pension granted to him by the office—wrongfully, inadvertently, or erroneously granted—unless there is positive proof that it was done by

Mr. ERDMAN. If that be the case, why does he not make application to have it determined by the Bureau of Pensions?

Mr. KNOX. I will answer that. When the decision of the Assistant Secretary was brought to the attention of the office, it was after the bill was pending here; and I will say to the gentle-man, in the case of this man I thought his bill could be sooner got through Congress and give him relief much quicker than to commence anew and go through the Pension Office. Mr. MILES. Mr. KNOX. Mr. MILES. Will the gentleman allow me one other question?

Mr. KNOX. Certainly.
Mr. MILES. I suppose the gentleman understands that if the claimant is in the condition in which he represents, he could have had his case made special in the Pension Office.

Mr. KNOX. Well, we could do a good many things, if they would let us. You and I have had some experience as to what we are permitted to do in the Pension Office. The man is on the rolls already. Now, I would say that there is not one scintilla of evidence in the Pension Office that there was any fraud upon the part of this man, or that, if this disease was not caused by his part of this man, or that, if this disease was not caused by his army service, there is no evidence to show that he did not honestly believe that it was so caused, and he had the right so to believe, as is shown by the testimony.

The amendment recommended by the committee was agreed to.
The question being taken upon laying aside the bill with a favorable recommendation, on a division (demanded by Mr. MILES) there were—ayes 81, noes 5. Mr. MILES. No qu

Mr. MILES. No quorum, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN (after counting the committee). One hundred and nine members are present. The ayes have it, and the bill is laid aside to be reported to the House with a favorable recommendation.

Mr. KIRKPATRICK. Mr. Chairman, I desire now to ask unanimous consent to take up the bill H. R. 9795—
Mr. LOUDENSLAGER. I call for the regular order, Mr.

Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. The regular order is called for, which is equivalent to an objection. The Clerk will report the next bill on the Calendar.

WILLIAM R. HARLESS.

The next business on the Private Calendar was the bill (H. R. 4629) granting a pension to William R. Harless.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place upon the pension roll the name of William R. Harless, of Red Bank, Douglas County, Mo., late a soldier in Companies B and E, Sixtieth Regiment Enrolled Missouri Militia, in the war for the suppression of the rebellion, and pay him a pension at the rate of $12 per month. The Committee on Invalid Pensions recommended the following

amendment:

Strike out all between the word "Harless," in line 5, and the word "and," in line 8, and insert in lieu thereof the words "late private in Companies B and E, Sixtleth Regiment Enrolled Missouri Militia."

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the committee.

Mr. MILES. Let us have the report, Mr. Chairman.

The report (by Mr. Crowther) was read, as follows:

Mr. MILES. Let us have the report, Mr. Chairman.

The report (by Mr. CROWTHER) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Invalid Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 4829) entitled "A bill granting a pension to William R. Harless," beg leave to submit the following report, and recommend that said bill do pass with amendments:

William R. Harless served as a private in Company B, Sixtieth Regiment Missouri Enrolled Militia, from July, 1862, to January, 1863, when the company was disbanded: also, he enlisted again as corporal Company the Sixtieth Missouri Enrolled Militia, under Captain Morton, in the spring of 1863, and served with it until the company was disbanded in January, 1864; he also served a short period in Capt. B. F. Cook's company of the St. Clair County Missouri Militia.

The records of the War Department do not show that either of these organizations were ever mustered into the United States service.

Claimant applied for pension June 13, 1881, for results of typhoid pneumonia contracted at Quincy, Hickory County, Mo., which settled in back and hips.

The claim was rejected on the grounds of no ratable disability from alleged causes since date of filling claim.

He filed a claim July 22, 1890, under act of June 27, 1890, for "affection of back and hip," which was rejected on ground of his not having been in the military service of the United States.

Proofs have been presented to your committee showing clearly that the claimant served, as alleged by him, in the Enrolled Missouri Militia about one and one-half years.

On the question of disability claimant filed, September 10, 1885, the affidavit of Dr. M. H. Osborn that he examined him and found a general debilitated condition. He was then suffering from varix of thigh and leg, chronic inflammation of bladder, and diseased condition had appearance of long standing and permanency. Disability three-fourths.

Dr. W. J. Gilbreath testified that claimant was afflicted with congestion of arteries and kidney disease, and the spinal column affected more.

Dr. J. T. Stewart testified March 28, 1891, that he has varicose veins in both legs and abdomen, hernia left side, injury to back and hips, and rheumatism and valvular disease of the heart, and from having eight ribs broken. All of his aliments are of long standing and of a permanent character and not aggravated from vicious habits. He had a severe cut with an ax, severing lower third of fibula of left leg.

He was examined by a board of examining surgeons April 4, 1883, who gave him no rating. He has not been examined since by a regular board.

Claimant filed with the committee a numerously signed petition, certifying to his service and the merits of his claim, and asking for him a pension of $13 per month; also the testimony of comrades, setting forth that while a member of Company B, Sixtieth Missouri Enrolled Militia, he had a bad spell of typhoid pneumonia that left him crippled in back and hips, and that in an engagement with the enemy his horse forced him astride of a small tree, which caused rupture in left side, and that from vaccination his blood was contaminated by poison, which has affected him ever since.

Your committee believe him entitled to a pension, and recommend that the bill do pass with the following amendment:

Strike out all between the word "Harless," in line 5, and the word "and," in line 8, and insert in lieu thereof the words "late private in Companies B and E, Sixtieth Regiment Enrolled Missouri Militia."

in line 8, and insert in lieu thereof the words "late private in Companies B and E, Sixtieth Regiment Enrolled Missouri Militia."

Mr. ERDMAN. Mr. Chairman, it appears that the organizations to which this applicant belonged were not in the service of the United States. The records of the War Department show that they were not in the service of the United States. I should like to know whether these organizations ever rendered any service at all, and if they did, why we should not pension them all together? Why single out this one? Why not pension them all? Mr. CROWTHER. Mr. Chairman, for the information of the gentleman, permit me to say that if he had been a constant attendant at the meetings of the Invalid Pensions Committee, he would have learned something about the Missouri Enrolled Militia.

Mr. ERDMAN. I have heard a good deal about it.

Mr. CROWTHER. There is no doubt whatever about the service of this regiment. There has been no doubt in the minds of the officials of the War Department about the service of the Missouri Enrolled Militia. The only reason why these men who performed service in these organizations have not been placed upon the pension rolls is on account of the technicality in swearing them into the service. They were not sworn in by the regular mustering officers, but by officers detailed from the general head-quarters at St. Louis. They served under the command of United States officers. They served with the United States troops, and many of these militia performed four years' service in the Army of the United States.

Mr. TALBERT. Mr. Chairman, this is a very singular thing, it seems to me. By the report here I see that this gentleman served as a private in Company B. Sixtieth Regiment Missouri Enrolled Mili-

Mr. TALBERT. Mr. Chairman, this is a very singular thing, it seems to me. By the report here I see that this gentleman served as a private in Company B, Sixtieth Regiment Missouri Enrolled Militia, from July, 1862, to January, 1863, when the company was disbanded, five or six months. It does not say what particular kind disbanded, five or six months. It does not say what particular kind of duty they were engaged in, or exactly where they were, except that they were in Missouri. The report further says that this man enlisted again as a corporal in Company E, Sixtieth Enrolled Militia, under Captain Morton, in the spring of 1863, and served with it until the company was disbanded, in January, 1864.

Mr. THOMAS. I ask the gentleman if he will yield to allow me to move that the committee rise?

Mr. TALBERT. I will yield to the gentleman, certainly. On motion of Mr. THOMAS, the committee rose; and Mr. PAYNE having resumed the chair as Speaker pro tempore, Mr. CHARLES W. STONE, chairman of the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, reported that that committee had had under consideration sundry bills, and that they had directed him to report to the House, without amendment, and with the recommendation that they do pass, the bills S. 3381, 1505, 1128, 1682; H. R. 7821; with amendments, and with the recommendation, that as amended, they do pass, the bills H. R. 5981, 6215; S. 878; H. R. 2257, 2725, 5068, 7349; S. 646; H. R. 1823; and that they had had under consideration a bill (H. R. 1469) and had come to no resolution thereon.

under consideration a bin (H. R. 1409) and had come to no resolution thereon.

Mr. THOMAS. I ask unanimous consent that the previous question may be considered as ordered on these bills, with a limit of ten minutes' debate on each bill.

Mr. ERDMAN. Mr. Speaker, I do not think we shall have any trouble about it. There are one or two bills on which we might want a longer debate. As the gentleman saw to-day, there was no factious opposition to any of the bills on the Calendar of unfinished busine

Mr. THOMAS. The greatest trouble about it was that gentlemen who were not in attendance at the Friday night sessions called for the reading of the reports.

Mr. ERDMAN. I suggest that you may cut that off by asking for the previous question. You will be recognized first. There are several bills that need considerable discussion. I therefore are several bills that need considerable discussion. I therefore suggest that we do not agree upon that. There are one or two bills that I should like to see discussed at greater length.

Mr. THOMAS. I will withdraw the request, then.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman withdraws the request. The hour of 10 o'clock and 30 minutes having arrived, the House stands adjourned until to-morrow at 12 o'clock noon.

EXECUTIVE COMMUNICATIONS, ETC.

Under clause 2 of Rule XXIV, the following executive communications were taken from the Speaker's table and referred as follows:

A letter from the president of the Washington and Great Falls Electric Railway Company, transmitting the report of the operations of the company for the year ending December 31, 1896, together with a list of the shareholders and the number of shares held by each—to the Committee on the District of Columbia, and ordered to be printed.

A letter from the Secretary of the Interior, transmitting a reply to the House resolution of the 5th instant, relating to the homestead entries on certain Union Pacific land grants in Kansas-to the Committee on the Public Lands, and ordered to be printed.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES ON PUBLIC BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS.

Under clause 2 of Rule XIII, bills and resolutions were severally reported from committees, delivered to the Clerk, and referred to the several Calendars therein named, as follows:

Mr. FLETCHER, from the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 9168) to authorize the construction of a bridge over the Monongahela River from the city of McKeesport to the township of Mifflin, Allegheny County, Pa., reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 2518); which said bill and report were referred to the House Calendar.

Mr. MILLIKEN, from the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, to which was referred the bill of the Senate (S. 105) entitled "An act for the erection of a public building at Aberdeen, S. Dak., reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 2519); which said bill and report were referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the

Mr. PARKER, from the Committee on Military Affairs, to which was referred House bill No. 9361, reported in lieu thereof a bill (H. R. 10009) to increase the efficiency of the Regular Army of the United States and to localize the recruiting of regiments in time of war, accompanied by a report (No. 2520); which said bill and report were referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. TOWNE, from the Committee on Rivers and Harbors, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 9756) to amend the river and harbor act of August 18, 1894, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 2522); which said bill and report were referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. SHERMAN, from the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 9935) to authorize the construction of a bridge across the Rio Grande River at El Paso, in the State of Texas, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 2523); which said bill and report were referred to the House Calendar.

Mr. CURTIS of Iowa, from the Committee on the District of Columbia, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 9023) to prevent the surged of contaging diseases in the District.

9023) to prevent the spread of contagious diseases in the District of Columbia, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 2524); which said bill and report were referred to the House Calendar.

He also, from the same committee, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 9099) for the regulation of cemeteries and the disposal of dead bodies in the District of Columbia, reported the disposal of dead bodies in the District of Columbia, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 2525); which said bill and report were referred to the House Calendar. He also, from the same committee, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 9142) to regulate privies in the District of Columbia, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 2526); which said bill and report were referred to the House Calendar.

Mr. WELLINGTON, from the Committee of the District of the House Calendar.

Mr. WELLINGTON, from the Committee on the District of Columbia, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 9704) to authorize the Washington and Glen Echo Railroad Company to obtain a right of way and construct tracks into the District of Columbia 600 feet, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 2527); which said bill and report were referred to the House Calendar.

Mr. HULICK, from the Committee on the District of Columbia, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 8499) in relation to taxes and tax sales in the District of Columbia, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 2529); which said bill and report were referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. SHERMAN, from the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 9841) to amend an act authorizing the West Braddock Bridge Company to construct a bridge over the Monongahela River from the borough of Rankin to Mifflin Township, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 2530); which said bill and report were referred to the House Calendar.

Mr. CORLISS, from the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 9600) to provide for aids to navigation, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 2531); which said bill and report were referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union. Mr. SHERMAN, from the Committee on Interstate and Foreign state of the Union.

He also, from the same committee, to which was referred the bill of the House (H.R. 9566) to provide for light-houses and other aids to navigation, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 2532); which said bill and report were referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES ON PRIVATE BILLS.

Under clause 2 of Rule XIII, Mr. HURLEY, from the Committee on War Claims, to which was referred the bill (H. R. 9989) for the relief of Ella S. Claussen, widow of Peter J. Claussen, deceased, reported the same (Report No. 2528); which said bill and report were referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

PUBLIC BILLS, MEMORIALS, AND RESOLUTIONS.

Under clause 3 of Rule XXII, bills, resolutions, and memorials of the following titles were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. WELLINGTON (by request): A bill (H. R. 10003) conferring the rank and pay of warrant officers in the Navy upon the three clerks on duty in the office of the Superintendent of the Naval Academy, at Annapolis, Md.—to the Committee on Naval

Also, a bill (H. R. 10004) to authorize the Chesapeake Beach Railway Company, of Maryland, to exted its line into and within the District of Columbia—to the Committee on the District of

By Mr. GILLETT of Massachusetts: A bill (H. R. 10005) fixing the age for retirement from the classified civil service—to the Com-mittee on Reform in the Civil Service.

By Mr. LINTON: A bill (H. R. 10006) to prevent the desecration of the national flag—to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. WOODMAN: A bill (H. R. 10007) to amend an act entitled "An act to incorporate the Brightwood Railway Company"—to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

By Mr. CORLISS: A bill (H. R. 10008) to improve and remodel the old post-office building and erect a bonded warehouse upon the grounds of the United States located at the corner of Larner the grounds of the United States located at the corner of Larner and Griswold streets, in the city of Detroit, Mich.—to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

By Mr. LIVINGSTON: A bill (H. R. 10010) to provide a site and erect a public building in Covington, Ga.—to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

By Mr. SPENCER: A bill (H. R. 10011) to authorize the Secretary of State to purchase the Island of Cuba—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

By Mr. FAIRCHILD: A bill (H. R. 10012) relating to the improvement of Eastchester Creek, State of New York—to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

By Mr. HILBORN: Memorial of the senate of the State of California, relative to the tariff—to the Committee on Ways and fornia, relative to the tariff-to the Committee on Ways and

PRIVATE BILLS, ETC.

Under clause 1 of Rule XXII, private bills of the following titles were presented and referred as follows:

By Mr. CATCHINGS: A bill (H. R. 10013) for the relief of John Noble, of Bolivar County, Miss.—to the Committee on War

By Mr. ELLETT: A bill (H. R. 10014) to compensate Gen. Dabney H. Maury for his cavalry tactics—to the Committee on Claims

By Mr. HILBORN: A bill (H. R. 10015) referring the claim of Hannah S. Crane et al. to the Court of Claims—to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. KIEFER: A bill (H. R. 10016) granting a pension to Jane B. Johnston—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. LORIMER: A bill (H. R. 10017) for the relief of Ellis Bigfeather—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. OGDEN: A bill (H. R. 10018) for the relief of the estate of Phillip Poete, deceased, late of Natchitoches Parish, La.—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. OVERSTREET: A bill (H. R. 10010) for the relief of

By Mr. OVERSTREET: A bill (H. R. 10019) for the relief of William H. Webster—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.
By Mr. SULLOWAY (by request): A bill (H. R. 10020) granting a pension to Louise Van Atter—to the Committee on Invalid

By Mr. WILSON of Ohio: A bill (H.R. 10021) granting a pension to John Shisler—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

PETITIONS, ETC.

Under clause 1 of Rule XXII, the following petitions and papers were laid on the Clerk's desk and referred as follows:

By Mr. AVERY: Memorial of the State board of health of Michigan, in favor of the passage of the bill to provide for a permanent census service—to the Committee on Appropriations.

Also, memorial of the Michigan State board of health, against the passage of Senate bill No. 1552, for the further prevention of mittee.

cruelty to animals in the District of Columbia-to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

By Mr. BELKNAP: Petition of L. Coatsworth, J. W. Farster, and W. C. Hawkins, all of Chicago, Ill., favoring the passage of a law requiring eight hours to constitute a legal day's work—to the Committee on Labor.

By Mr. HILBORN: Resolution of the Merchants' Association

By Mr. HILBORN: Resolution of the Merchants' Association of San Francisco, Cal., urging the completion of the Nicaragua Canal—to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce. By Mr. LORIMER: Paper to accompany House bill No. 10017, to correct the military record of Ellis Bigfeather, deceased, late of Company K, Third Regiment Indian Home Guards, Indian Territory—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. PARKER: Resolutions of the New Jersey State Horticultural Society, against the free distribution of seeds—to the Committee on Agriculture.

By Mr. ROBINSON of Pennsylvania: Petition of 600 citizens of Chester County, Pa., in favor of a bill to further protect the first day of the week as a day of rest in the District of Columbia—to the Committee on the District of Columbia. to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

By Mr. WARNER: Resolution of Homer Post, No. 263, Department of Illinois, Grand Army of the Republic, in sympathy with the Cubans—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

By Mr. WELLINGTON: Petition of Anna Anderson, widow of Jacob Anderson, late of Company B, First Regiment Maryland Cavalry, for her relief—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, petition of Levi Montgomery, late of Companies E and B, First Regiment Maryland Volunteer Cavalry, for his relief—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, petition of Wilford C. McCardell, late of Company I, First Regiment Maryland Cavalry, for his relief—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Regiment Maryland Cavalry, for his relief—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, petition of the administrator of Emanuel McCoy, a Mexican soldier, asking relief in the matter of funeral expenses, etc. to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. WILSON of Ohio: Petition of Julius L. Lust and 17 others, of Pickaway County, Ohio, favoring a pension to John Shisler, of Circleville, Ohio—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

SATURDAY, January 16, 1897.

The House met at 12 o'clock m.

The following prayer was offered by the Chaplain, Rev. HENRY

The following prayer was offered by the Chaplain, Rev. Henry N. Couden:

We come to Thee, Almighty God, our heavenly Father, with renewed faith and confidence to-day, giving Thee hearty thanks for all the blessings which Thou hast bestowed upon us. Especially do we thank Thee for those warm, life-giving currents which are ever emanating from Thy great heart, and which come sweeping through the souls of men, inspiring them to larger conceptions of Thee, of life, and its profound duties. Make us more and more susceptible to these things, that our lives may be so ordered that when we pass from this existence men shall rise up and call us blessed; and when we reach those heavenly portals we shall find our names written on the Book of Life, and hear the words, "Well done, good and faithful servant, enter thou into the joy of thy Lord." This we ask in the name of Jesus Christ, our Lord. Amen.

The Journal of the proceedings of yesterday was read and approved.

BRIDGE ACROSS THE COLUMBIA RIVER, STATE OF WASHINGTON. Mr. DOOLITTLE. Mr. Speaker, I ask that the bill S. 3375 be taken from the Speaker's table and put upon its passage. It is identical with the bill H. R. 9922.

The SPEAKER. Is the House bill on the Calendar?
Mr. DOOLITTLE. The House bill is on the Calendar, and has been reported by the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Com-

The SPEAKER. Then it would come up as a part of the regular order, if it is a Senate bill carrying no appropriation.

Mr. DOOLITTLE. It carries no appropriation.

The SPEAKER (continuing). If it is substantially the same as a House bill already reported, and if the committee wants it to come up.

Mr. DOOLITTLE. Yes, sir. It is identically the same as the House bill.

The Senate bill was reported at length.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the third reading of this

Mr. TERRY. I should like to understand exactly how this bill comes up here under the rule.

The SPEAKER. This is a Senate bill, which does not require reference to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, a bill substantially like which, not necessarily identically the same, is on file and has been reported by a House committee.

Mr. DOOLITTLE. It is identical.
Mr. TERRY. I understand that bills in that condition can be called up without a request for unanimous consent.
The SPEAKER. They can be called up without unanimous consent by the committee. The three requisites are: First, that the bill shall not require reference to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union; second, that it shall be similar, substantially the same, as one that has already received the approval of the committee having it in charge; and third, that it shall be called up at the request of the committee. There are two kinds of business which can be disposed of at once from the shall be called up at the request of the committee. There are two kinds of business which can be disposed of at once from the Speaker's table. First, House bills with Senate amendments not involving consideration by the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, where the amendments do not require that; and second, this class of Senate bills.

Mr. TERRY. I would like to ask the gentleman in charge of this bill is the constant of the committee.

this bill if it does not create a corporation as well as authorize the this bill if it does not create a corporation as well as authorize the construction of a bridge?

Mr. DOOLITTLE. Not at all. The corporation is organized. And I wish to say here that this bridge is required in order to enable the mines to ship their ores out.

Mr. TERRY. Is this a unanimous report of the committee?

Mr. DOOLITTLE. Oh, yes, sir; it is the unanimous report; and it is also recommended by the Secretary of War.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

On motion of Mr. DOOLITTLE, a motion to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed was laid on the table.

ADJUSTMENT OF ACCOUNTS OF ARMY OFFICERS, GRADUATES OF WEST POINT.

The SPEAKER. The Committee on Claims ask that the bill (S. 2570) to authorize the readjustment of the accounts of Army officers who were graduates of West Point Military Academy be transferred to the Committee on War Claims. Without objection, the change of reference will be made.

There was no objection.

SENATE BILLS REFERRED.
Under clause 2 of Rule XXIV, the following Senate bills and House bill with Senate amendments were taken from the Speaker's table and referred as follows:

A bill (S. 3494) providing for an examination of the improvements at the Pass of Aransas, Texas—to the Committee on Rivers

A bill (S. 2393) for the relief of William E. Bond—to the Committee on Claims.

A bill (H. R. 3656) providing for free homesteads on the public lands in Oklahoma Territory for actual and bona fide settlers, and reserving the public lands for that purpose—to the Committee on the Public Lands.

NATIONAL SANITARIUM FOR PULMONARY DISEASES.

Mr. CATRON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the consideration of the bill (S. 2593) granting to the American Invalid Aid Society, of Boston, Mass., the abandoned Fort Marcy Military Reservation in New Mexico for the purpose of a national sanitarium for the treatment of pulmonary diseases.

The bill was read, as follows:

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the abandoned Fort Marcy Military Reservation, and all the improvements thereon, situated in the Territory of New Mexico, be, and the same is hereby, granted to the American Invalid Aid Society, of Boston, Mass., upon the conditions that said society shall establish and maintain perpetually thereon a national sanitarium for the treatment of pulmonary diseases: Provided, That said society shall within two years from and after the passage of this act accept this grant and shall establish on said reservation a sanitarium for the purposes herein named; and whenever the said lands and buildings shall cease to be used by said society for the purposes herein provided the same shall revert to the United States.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. STEELE. Let us hear something about that.
Mr. RICHARDSON. This is subject to an objection, and I should like to have some explanation about the measure.
Mr. CATRON. The report will explain; or I can explain it easier than the report of the committee.
Mr. STEELE. Let us have the report. I would rather have

The report (by Mr. LACEY) was read, as follows:

The report (by Mr. LACEY) was read, as follows:

The Committee on the Public Lands have had under consideration Senate bill 2593, and report the same back with amendments, and as amended recommend its passage.

A charitable corporation has been organized in New England to assist pulmonary invalids to go to the mountain region of the West for treatment. In the city of Santa Fe, in New Mexico, is located the military reservation of Fort Marcy. It contains about 17½ acres of land. The reservation has been abandoned, and the city of Santa Fe desires that it may be used for a sanitarium for lung and threat diseases. The climate of New Mexico is unsurpassed for its beneficial influences in such diseases, and this reservation would be especially advantageous for the proposed purpose.

The reservation is divided into two tracts—one of about 4 acres and the other of about 13½ acres. There are several buildings on the reservation formerly used by troops that may be utilized for sanitarium purposes, but it will be necessary to erect some new and permanent buildings.

Your committee think that a portion of the grant should be permanent so long as the land is used for the purposes proposed, in order that the corporation or association may erect its permanent improvements thereon, but the remainder of the land we think should only be leased, at least until the experiment shall have been fully tried.

The purpose is a charitable one, and the amendments proposed by the committee require that the medical treatment shall be gratuitous.

It is not necessary for your committee to discuss at any length the admirable location of the proposed sanitarium. It is recognized by all medical men who have given the subject any study.

Your committee incorporate the following telegrams in its report to show the view of the matter taken by the people of Santa Fe:

SANTA FE. N. MEX., May 2, 1898.

SANTA FE, N. MEX., May 2, 1896.

Hon. T. B. CATRON, Fredonia Hotel, Washington, D. C.:

Woman's board of trade agrees with city council and board of trade about disposition Fort Marcy. Petition to Teller to withdraw amendment mailed to-day.

Mrs. IDA REVENBERG, President. SANTA FE, N. MEX., May 1, 1896.

Hon. T. B. CATRON, Fredonia Hotel, Washington, D. C.:

Every member city council Santa Fe strongly favors sanitarium, but is very antagonistic to Indian school proposition.

PEDRO DELGADO, Mayor of Santa Fe.

Hon. T. B. CATRON,

Delegate to Congress from New Mexico,

Fredonia Hotel, Washington, D. C.:

Board trade unanimous in favor of sanitarium, but against Indian school proposition. Mr. Staab will be in Washington Wednesday evening as representative Santa Fe Board Trade.

Attest:

E. T. WEBBER, President.

Attest: E. T. WEBBER, President.
GEO. W. KNAEBEL, Secretary.
The following report of the Commissioner of the General Land Office and Secretary of the Interior we incorporate in this report:

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR, GENERAL LAND OFFICE, Washington, D. C., May 4, 1896.

SIR: I am in receipt by your reference, for early report in duplicate and return of papers, of Senate bill No. 2593, to grant to the American Invalid Aid Society, of Boston, Mass., the abandoned Fort Marcy Military Reservation, N. Mex., for the purpose of a national sanitarium for the treatment of pulmonary diseases, together with a letter from Hon. T. B. CATRON, and Senate Report No. 771 on Senate bill No. 2593, all of which were submitted to you by Hon. John F. Lacey, chairman of the Committee on the Public Lands of the House of Representatives, with the request that you make any suggestions thereon that you may deem proper, and that you give the present value of the land referred to in the bill.

The bill provides that the reservation, and all improvements thereon, be granted to the society mentioned, upon condition that it shall establish and maintain perpetually thereafter a national sanitarium for the treatment of pulmonary diseases, provided that said society shall, within two years after the passage of said act, accept the grant and shall establish the proposed sanitarium; and whenever the said lands and buildings shall cease to be used by said society for the purposes intended, the same shall revert to the United States.

sanitarium; and whenever the said lands and buildings shall cease to be used by said society for the purposes intended, the same shall revert to the United States.

In reply, I have the honor to report that the Fort Marcy Reservation was established by Executive order of August 28, 1888, and was turned over to the Interior Department October 7, 1891, for disposal under the act of July 5, 1884 (23 Stat. L., 103), or as may be otherwise provided by law. This order was revoked November 12, 1891, and the reservation thereof for military purposes again declared.

Executive order of June 5, 1895, again placed the reservation under control of this Department for disposal.

Said reservation is situated in the city of Santa Fe, N. Mex., and contains an estimated area of 17 acres, 3,423 yards, and 2,656 square feet.

A list furnished by the War Department shows that there are twenty-three buildings thereon.

As no appraisal of the lands and buildings has been made, this office is unable to state what is the value thereof.

There is on file in this office a letter from Governor Thornton, of New Mexico. dated July 17, 1895, in which he says, among other things, that the claim of the city for the site of Santa Fe has been confirmed by the Court of Private Land Claims. No mandate of such court has been received, and this office has no knowledge as to whether or not the title to its site has been confirmed, nor does that question affect the disposition of this reservation, since the governor mentions in said letter that said land was excepted from the confirmation.

The records of this office also disclose that on April 13, 1874, James F. Proudfit, then United States surveyor-general for New Mexico, recommended for confirmation, under section 8 of the act of July 22, 1854 (10 Stat. L., 318), that the site of said city be confirmed, making certain exceptions of land within its boundaries, one of which was the land within the military reservation.

On July 9, 1895, Governor Thornton made application to the Interior Department t

S. W. LAMOREUX, Commissioner.

The SECRETARY OF THE INTERIOR.

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR, Washington, May 7, 1896.

Washington, May 7, 1896.

SIR: I have the honor to hand you herewith a report from the Commissioner of the General Land Office, dated the 4th instant on Senate bill No. 2598, "granting to the American Invalid Aid Society of Boston, Mass., the abandoned Fort Marcy Military Reservation, in New Mexico, for the purpose of a national sanitarium for the treatment of pulmonary diseases," etc.

For reasons stated in the Commissioner's report, in which he is of the opinion that there are no objections to the passage of the bill, I have the honor to say that I believe the bill should become law, and recommend its passage.

Very respectfully,

Hon. John. F. Lacey, Chairman Committee on the Public Lands, House of Representatives. WM. H. SIMS, Acting Secretary.

The amendments proposed by your committee are as follows:
Strike out on page 1, after the word "assembled," in line 2, all contained in lines 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, and 8, down to and including the word "diseases," in line 9, and insert in lieu thereof the following, to wit:
"All that part of the abandoned Fort Marcy Military Reservation, with all the improvements thereon, in the city of Sante Fe, Territory of New Mexico, lying between Washington avenue and Lincoln avenue, in said city, be, and the same is hereby, granted to the American Invalid Aid Society, of Boston, Mass.; and the remainder of said reservation, with all the improvements thereon, be, and the same is hereby, granted for the term of twenty-five years to said society, the said grants hereby made being upon the conditions that said society shall establish and maintain thereon a national sanitarium for the treatment of pulmonary diseases."

Amend by inserting in line 12, after the word "named," the following words, "and shall make no charge for medical treatment therein."

Mr. TERRY. Mr. Speaker, it occurs to me that this proposed measure is a violation of all the precedents of this House in regard to these reservations. If I have caught correctly the reading of the report of the Interior Department, the governor of New Mexico wanted this reservation turned over to the city of Santa Fe; and now, instead of that being done, here is a proposition to turn it over to a private corporation organized in the State of Massachysetts. If this senitarium is to be such a great the records chusetts. If this sanitarium is to be such a good thing, the people of Santa Fe ought to know it. If they are willing that this reservation in the city of Santa Fe should be appropriated for the erection of a sanitarium, then all well and proper; but we should give them a chance to say so.

Mr. CATRON. That is their statement; they have recommended this very thing.

Mr. TERRY. No; you have not submitted any expression from the citizens in that report. You have a statement that some

Mr. CATRON. No; the mayor of the city states that the board of common council of the city recommends this disposition of the reservation. That is stated in the report.

Mr. TERRY. It has been held time and again that agreements or concessions made by city officials, when they are not assembled according to law, amount to nothing. It is very easy to go to a mayor or an alderman of a city and get a letter or statement from him; but to submit a question directly to the representatives of the people and get their vote upon it after full discussion is a very different matter.

This bill does not undertake to turn this reservation over to the city of Santa Fe. If it did that, I think it would be perfectly proper, because that has always been the course pursued in regard to these abandoned military reservations. But you do not propose to do that in this case. You turn over this property, this very valuable piece of land in the city of Santa Fe, to a private corporation.

poration.

poration.

Now, I want to say to the gentleman that if he can obtain unanimous consent without my voice, I am not going to object to the consideration of the bill. But I submit to the judgment of the House whether or not we ought to pass such a bill as this. I for one will not vote to give one of these reservations to a private corporation entirely outside of the State, without the people concerned having had a chance to express themselves upon it either by their direct vote or through their immediate representatives. Where a person simply goes around and gets the statement of an alderman or a mayor that he thinks a particular proposition is a very worthy one, and everything of that sort, that, it strikes me, is not the way to do business. It is not the legal and proper way to obtain an expression from persons charged with official responsibility. I shall vote against this measure.

Mr. STEELE. Is it not a fact that when it was proposed to sibility. I shall vote against this measure.

Mr. STEELE. Is it not a fact that when it was proposed to abandon this reservation and build a new post near Santa Fe one of the reasons urged in favor of that proposition was that the land on which the old fort was located in the city of Santa Fe mind on which the old fort was located in the city of Santa Fe would sell for enough to nearly pay the expense of the new post?

Mr. CATRON. Is that question asked of me?

Mr. STEELE. Of you or any other gentleman.

Mr. CATCON. I know of no such statement ever having been

Mr. STEELE. I do not think there is any question that it was made.

Mr. CATRON. I know that if this ground were sold it would not sell for one hundredth part of enough to build a new fort.

Mr. STEELE. What I meant to say was that according to the statement made this property would sell for enough to buy new ground for another post, not enough to build the fort.

Mr. CATRON. The people of Santa Fe have offered to the Government a title free for the land on which to build the new fort. Hence there is no precessity for the prophese of new acre. If you should put it up at public, forced sale, you could not get $5,000 for the whole of it, with the improvements.

Mr. TERRY. What is the population of Santa Fe?

Mr. CATRON. Seven thousand.

Mr. BOATNER. Is it true that the proposition is to donate

Mr. BOATRER. Is it true that the proposition is to donate this property to a private corporation?

Mr. CATRON. The proposition is to donate 4 acres to a corporation organized under the laws of Massachusetts, known as the Invalid Aid Society, who propose to establish a national sanitarium, and who will be required by this bill to furnish medical treatment absolutely free; and if they fail to comply with the terms of the gift the property will revert to the Corporation. terms of the gift the property will revert to the Government.

Mr. WASHINGTON. They do not propose to furnish free board to the patients?

Mr. CATRON. No.

Mr. WASHINGTON. How many persons will the buildings accommodate?

Mr. CATRON. The expectation is to put up new buildings. These old buildings would accommodate very few—probably 40 or 50. But the intention of the company is to erect new buildings worth several hundred thousand dollars.

Mr. STEELE. There is a statement somewhere in the papers that the judge of some court has decided that this ground has reverted to the State.

Mr. CATRON. There has been no decision in New Mexico to that effect

Mr. STEELE. But that statement is made somewhere in the port. The Commissioner of the Land Office or the Secretary of the Interior says it has been claimed that such a decision has been made; but the decision is not given.

Mr. CATRON. I state most positively that there has been no decision of that kind anywhere, either in New Mexico or out of it.

Mr. STEELE. Suppose there should be a decision of that kind?

A Member. Then the land would not pass by this grant.

Mr. WASHINGTON. Mr. Speaker, this seems to be an important bill. It involves the donation of a military reservation. The facts do not seem to be fully understood. We do not know whether this reservation has been fully abandoned by the Government or not. I suggest that the bill might go over till Monday, so as to give members a chance to investigate the case. I do not hear of any report from the Secretary of War advising this transfer.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. DE ARMOND. I object.

JOHN RYAN.

Mr. DALZELL. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the resolution I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved, That the Clerk of the House of Representatives be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay, out of the contingent fund of the House of Representatives, to the widow of John Ryan, deceased, late a messenger on the soldiers' roll of the House of Representatives, who died August 10, 1896, a sum equal to his salary for six months, and the expenses of his last illness and funeral, said expenses not to exceed the sum of $250.

There being no objection, the resolution was considered and MIRUM C. PECK.

Mr. DOCKERY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (H. R. 9619) granting a pension to Mirum C. Peck.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll the name of Mirum C. Peck, widow of Hartwell B. Peck, late private Company D, Santa Fe Battalion Missouri Volunteers, in the war with Mexico, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws.

The Committee on Pensions recommend the adoption of the following amendment:

Add to the bill, "and pay him a pension rated at $8 per month."

Mr. DOCKERY. I desire to correct the committee amendment. The word "him," in line 8, should be stricken out and "her" inserted; so as to read, "and pay her a pension rated at $8 per month.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. MILNES.

Mr. MILNES. Let us have the report read. The report (by Mr. MOZLEY) was read, as follows:

Mr. CATRON. The people of Santa Fe have offered to the Government a title free for the land on which to build the new fort. Hence there is no necessity for the purchase of new ground, and there is no pretense that such purchase will ever be required.

The committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 9619) the Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 9619) the Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 9619) the Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 9619) the Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 9619) the Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 9619) the Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 9619) the Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 9619) the Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 9619) the Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 9619) the Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 9619) the Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 9619) the Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 9619) the Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 9619) the Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 9619) the Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 9619) the Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 9619) the Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 9619) the Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 9619) the Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 9619) the Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 9619) the Committee on Pensions, to will the Red was a bonow that a matter of record at the War Department, and the records also show that a matter of record at the War Department, and the records also show that a detachment of which Peck was a member while acting as society of the State on Pensions, to will the Red was a referr soldier's service during that war did not cover the sixty days' time necessary to give title under that act.

It will be observed, however, that the soldier's actual service covered a period of five months and nine days. He enlisted in good faith for the war with Mexico, and participated in an engagement with hostile Indians while protecting the property of the United States. The value of his services to the country was equally as great as a sixty-day march to Mexico would have been, and the latter would have given his widow title to pension under the general law.

The soldier died January 16, 1865, and his widow, the beneficiary, is now about 66 years old, very poor, and so much affected by lung disease as to be unable to do anything toward earning a support.

The facts are fully shown by the testimony on file at the Pension Bureau.

The passage of the bill is respectfully recommended with an amendment adding after the last word the words "and pay her a pension rated at $8 per month."

Mr. TALBERT. I would like to ask the gentleman from Missouri if that claim has been considered at a regular Friday night session?

Mr. DOCKERY. It has been considered by the Committee on Pensions, and reported unanimously. Mr. TALBERT. It has not been before the Friday night ses-

Mr. DOCKERY. And is in every way a meritorious case. I hope my friend will not object.

Mr. TALBERT. I do not object.

There being no objection, the bill was considered.

The amendment to the amendment recommended by the committee was agreed to.

The amendment as amended was agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed. On motion of Mr. DOCKERY, a motion to reconsider the last vote was laid on the table.

JOHN H. WILLIS.

Mr. DANFORD. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (H. R. 4379) for the relief of John H. Willis.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of War be, and he hereby is, directed to remove the charge of desertion now standing on the rolls against the name of John H. Willis, of Battery D, Fourth United States Artillery.

The Committee on Military Affairs recommend the adoption of the following amendment:

Add to the bill, "to date May 26, 1865: Provided, That no bounty, pay, or emoluments shall become due such soldier by virtue of this act."

Mr. DANFORD. This bill passed during the last Congress both the Senate and the House, but so late that it did not reach the President in time for his signature. This soldier served throughout the entire war—from the 26th day of April, 1861, to the 26th day of April, 1865—and then, with the feeling that the war was over, he returned home. He did not desert whilst there was an enemy in the field.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There was no objection.

The amendment recommended by the committee was agreed to.

Mr. TALBERT. I would like to have the report in that case read.

The report (by Mr. BISHOP) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Military Affairs, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 4379) entitled "A bill for the relief of John H. Willis," beg leave to submit the following report, and recommend that said bill do pass, with an amendment as follows:

At the end of the bill add the words "to date May 26, 1865. No bounty, pay, or other emoluments shall become due such soldier by virtue of this act."

This soldier enlisted April 25, 1861, and served faithfully until May 25, 1865, through the entire period of the war. He claims that it was his understanding at the date of his last enlistment that the close of the war should terminate his service. At all events your committee think said soldier has earned an honorable discharge by reason of his fidelity through the entire dangers of the whole period of the war.

RECORD AND PENSION OFFICE, WAR DEPARTMENT

RECORD AND PENSION OFFICE, WAR DEPARTMENT, Washington City, January 18, 1894.

Washington City, January 18, 1894.

DEAR SIR: In compliance with your personal request of this morning, to be furnished with the military record of John H. Willis, late a private of Company E, Thirteenth Indiana Infantry, and Battery D, Fourth United States Artillery, I have the honor to advise you as follows:

It appears from the records of this office that John H. Willis, Company E, Thirteenth Indiana Volunteer Infantry, was enrolled April 25, 1861, to serve three years. He appears to have served faithfully with his command from the date of his enlistment until October 20, 1862, when he was discharged from the volunteer service by reason of his transfer to the Regular Army.

The records of the permanent military establishment are not in this office, but a report received from the Adjutant-General of the Army, who is the custodian of those records, shows that this soldier enlisted October 21, 1862, in Battery B, Fourth United States Artillery, at Suffolk, Va.; that he was discharged January 31, 1864, at Portsmouth, Va., by reason of reenlistment; that he reenlisted in the same battery February 1, 1864, and deserted May 22, 1865, at Camp Lincoln, Va., and that on November 23, 1893, he was furnished with a deserter's release under the act of Congress approved April 11, 1890.

No information with regard to this soldier has been found upon the hospital records from 1861 to 1865, inclusive.

Very respectfully,

F. C. AINSWORTH,

F. C. AINSWORTH, Colonel, United States Army, Chief Record and Pension Office.

Hon. A. J. Pearson, House of Representatives.

ARMSTRONGS MILLS, BELMONT COUNTY, OHIO,

To the Honorable Members of Congress, U. S. A.

Dear Sirs: John H. Willis, who was a private in Company D, Fourth Regiment United States Artillery, and who will at this session of Congress have a petition presented to your honorable body for the removal of charge of desertion, is a soldier that volunteered in 1831 and followed the flag through all the exciting and stirring scenes of the war till the end, in 1865; and he was always ready for duty when called on, and his health has been greatly impaired by the excessive duty and terrible hardships which he was compelled to undergo. He being a credible citizen, and having served his country solong in the hour of her need, give his case a careful examination and I feel confident that you will do him justice.

Very respectfully,

HENRY KINNEY, Jr.

ARMSTRONGS MILLS, OHIO, November 30, 1891.

Honorable Members of Congress, U. S. A.:

Honorable Members of Congress, U.S. A.:

I have known John H. Willis, who was a soldier in Company D, Fourth United States Artillery, for the past forty years. He is a respected citizen, and having served his country from 1861 to 1865, and who is at present disabled and old and has no sustenance other than what is given him and the little that he may earn with his own hands at labor as a hand on a farm, and at no time since he came back to this neighborhood from the Army in 1865 would I consider him able to provide for his wife and family. Consider his claim carefully. I take this opportunity of thanking the members of Congress for the uniform courtesy and kindness extended to the applicants. With best wishes for your welfare, I remain, very truly, yours.

JOSIAH MCGUIRE.

THE STATE OF OHIO, County of Belmont, ss:

Before me, A. H. Caldwell, a notary public in and for said county and State, personally came Margaret A. Beckett, and makes oath in due form of law, and says that she knew John H. Willis, a private in Company D. Fourth United States Artillery, when he came home from the war, some time in the month of June, 1865, and that he was in very poor health, and was suffering with chronic diarrhea, and that he did not perform any manual labor for two months or more, and that his wife was sick, under treatment of the doctor, and that his family was in very needy circumstances, and that she had good cause to know all about them, as she lived a near neighbor to them.

MARGARET BECKETT.

Sworn to and subscribed before me this the 12th day of October, A. D. 1892.

[SEAL.]

A. H. CALDWELL, Notary Public.

THE STATE OF OHIO, County of Belmont, ss:

Personally came Morgan Powell before me, A. H. Caldwell, a notary public in and for said county and State, and makes oath in due form of law, and says that he knew John H. Willis, a private in Company D, Fourth United States Artillery, when he came home from the war, some time in the month of June, 1865, and that he was in very poor health, suffering with chronic diarrhea, and that he did not perform any manual labor for two months or more.

MORGAN POWELL.

H. C. CALDWELL.

Sworn to and subscribed by said Morgan Powell before me this 15th day of October, A. D. 1892.

[SEAL.]

A. H. CALDWELL, Notary Public.

Mr. TALBERT. I would like to ask if this bill has been considered at a Friday night session?

Mr. DANFORD. It has been considered by the Fifty-third Congress, and passed both House and Senate. The gentleman from South Carolina himself and the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. Pearson] had a colloquy on the floor in regard to the bill

Mr. TALBERT. I make no objection.

There being no objection, the bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.
On motion of Mr. DANFORD, a motion to reconsider the last vote was laid on the table.

HENRY F. THORNTON.

Mr. OWENS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (H. R. 1064) for the relief of Henry F. Thornton.
The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Commissioner of Pensions be, and is hereby, directed to issue to Henry F. Thornton, late of First Virginia Volunteers in Mexican war, a certificate of pension at the rate of $25 per month in lieu of certificate No. 9623, now held by said Thornton as a survivor of said war. SEC. 2. That this act shall take effect from December 25, 1895.

The committee recommend the adoption of the following amend-

Strike out, in line 6, the words "twenty-five" and insert "fifteen," and rike out all of section 2.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration. of the bill?

Mr. SPALDING. I ask for the reading of the report. The report (by Mr. Colson) was read, as follows:

The report (by Mr. Colson) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 1084) entitled "A bill for the relief of Henry F. Thornton," beg leave to submit the following report, and recommend that said bill do pass with amendments.

The claimant was a member of the First Virginia Volunteers, and served from December 2, 1847, to February 29, 1848, in the war with Mexico. He was granted the pension of $8 per month provided by the act of January 29, 1887, and this was subsequently increased to $12 per month under the act of January 5, 1866, upon his proving dependence and total disability.

The papers on file at the Pension Bureau show that Mr. Thornton is 71 years old, a sufferer from rheumatism and paralysis agitans, and generally in such a condition physically as to be wholly incapacitated for earning a support by manual labor. It is further shown that he has absolutely no property or source of income aside from his pension.

There are several precedents for the allowance of an increased rating to the wholly disabled and dependent pensioners of the Mexican war, and your committee believe that such precedents may be followed with propriety and commerce believe that such precedents may be followed with propriety and justice in this case.

The following amendments are recommended: Strike out the word "twenty-five," in line 6, and substitute therefor the word "fifteen." Strike out the second section of the bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There was no objection.

Mr. OWENS. Mr. Speaker, according to that report, this veteran is now on the pension roll at the rate of $12 per month. The bill asks $25 a month.

This man is some 70 years of age, bedridden, helpless, and without means of support, and his wife is nearly as old as he is and as helpless to earn a living as he. The committee having conceded the necessity of some increase in his pension, I can not believe that they would insist on the amendment of $15 a month, an increase of but $3, which of course amounts to nothing. I hope the committee will not insist on the amendment, but that the House will pass the bill as originally proposed, at $25 a month.

Mr. STELLE. Mr. Speaker, I notice that it directs the "Commissioner of Pengions" missioner of Pensions.

Mr. OWENS. Yes, I noticed that. I want to move to amend that by striking out the words "Commissioner of Pensions" and inserting the words "Secretary of the Interior."

Mr. STEELE. How long did this man serve?

Mr. OWENS. I do not remember; not very long. It was during the Mariane verse recommendation.

ing the Mexican war.

Mr. STEELE. I understood from the reading of the report that he must have served as much as sixty days.

Mr. OWENS. More than that. Mr. STEELE. Sixty-two days. Mr. STEELE. Sixty-two days. I believe the committee considered the bill very carefully, and it seems to me the gentleman should be satisfied with the recommendation of the committee.

should be satisfied with the recommendation of the committee.

Mr. OWENS. It is in just this shape, that the man and his family are helpless and without any means of support whatever. He is confined to his bed and unable to do anything, and his wife is in nearly as helpless a condition. The question presents itself to the House whether the granting of an increase of $3 a month amounts to anything as a substantial increase. The beneficiary is an old man, not likely to live very long, and has been entirely unable to leave his bed for some time.

The SPEAKER. The question is on agreeing to the first committee amendment.

The question being taken, on a division (demanded by Mr. Owens) there were—ayes 22, noes 57.

Accordingly the amendment was rejected.

The SPEAKER. The question now is on the second committee amendment, which the Clerk will report.

Mr. STEELE. Mr. Speaker, before that amendment is acted upon, I move to strike out "twenty-five" and to insert "twenty."

The SPEAKER. The question is on the amendment to strike out "twenty-five" and insert "twenty."

The question being taken, on a division (demanded by Mr. STEELE) there were—ayes 28, noes 52.

Accordingly the amendment was rejected. Mr. STEELE. I move to make it $16 a month.

THE LATE REPRESENTATIVE CHARLES F. CRISP.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the special order. The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved, That Saturday, January 16, 1897, beginning at 1 o'clock p. m., be set apart for paying a tribute to the memory of the Hon. CHARLES F. CRISP, late a member of the House of Representatives from the State of Georgia.

Mr. TURNER of Georgia. Mr. Speaker, I offer the resolutions which I send to the Clerk's desk.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Georgia [Mr. TURNER] offers the following resolutions, which will be reported by the Clerk of the House. The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved, That the business of the House be now suspended, that opportunity may be given for tributes to the memory of Hon. CHARLES F. CRISP, late a Representative from the State of Georgia.

Resolved, That as a mark of respect to the memory of the deceased, and in recognition of his eminent abilities as a distinguished public servant, the House, at the conclusion of these memorial proceedings, shall stand adjourned.

Resolved, That the Clerk communicate these resolutions to the Senate.

Resolved, That the Clerk be instructed to communicate a copy of these resolutions to the family of the deceased.

Mr. TURNER of Georgia. Mr. Speaker, Mr. Crisp was born on the 29th of January, 1845. In the month of May, 1861, while he was still but a lad, he enlisted in the army of the Confederate States, and his service was thenceforth rendered in the State of Virginia. At the end of the war he studied law, and was admitted to the bar in 1866. Soon thereafter he became solicitor-general of his judicial circuit, was reappointed to that honorable station, and then became judge of the superior court, in which high station he served for five years, and was then nominated for Appearing on this floor during the Forty-eighth Congress, he was reelected consecutively six times. He became Speaker of the House of Representatives during two terms, and during the present Congress, by the nomination of his party associates, he became leader of his party.

During a prior Congress, and while he was Speaker, the governor of Congress, and while he was Speaker.

nor of Georgia tendered to him an ad interim appointment to the Senate of the United States, to fill the vacancy caused by the death of the late General Colquitt. That honorable position he declined. During the present Congress he became a candidate for a regular term in the Senate, to begin on the 4th day of March next, and in the early part of October last a general assembly was chosen in Georgia, which would in a few weeks, with practical unanimity, have elected him to the Senate. He died on the 23d day of October last, a few weeks after his last great success.

The remarkable eminence which he attained seems greater when

The remarkable eminence which he attained seems greater when contrasted with his humble beginning. His training in the schools was limited. While yet a youth he joined the Confederate Army and had not reached his majority when the war ceased. From a military prison he went forth to the struggle of life, without education and without resources, amid a people prostrated by a great defeat in war and impoverished by its desolating consequences. He was the foster child of adversity. In the camp on the march and defeat in war and impoverished by its desolating consequences. He was the foster child of adversity. In the camp, on the march, and in battle he learned lessons more difficult than those taught in the schools. There is not in all the varied round of human experience a more pathetic trial than that of a tender youth suddenly subjected to the horrors of war. But the lad who can bear strain, and endure privation, and face danger and death, may in peace climb the dizzy heights to an elevation next to the highest in the world! His great career ended in his prime. His bright day closed at its noontide. He left this last field of honor without the sting of defeat, and amid the cheers of victory. But, sir, between my late colleague and myself there was a wide difference of opinion. I leave to others the pleasant task of delineating the traits of character which endeared him to his friends, and of recounting character which endeared him to his friends, and of recounting the steps by which he rose to the highest places of power and responsibility.

Mr. HENDERSON. Mr. Speaker, a sad duty engages our attention to-day. We are here to review the life, services, and character of our distinguished colleague and ex-Speaker of this House, Hon. Charles F. Crisp, of Georgia.

To his own delegation will be assigned the sacred duty of pointing out historically the leading actions of his life. I will briefly consider Judge Crisp from the standpoint of my personal acquaintance and relationship with him as a member of this body.

This House presents in a marked degree evidence of the great law of change affecting all the relations of life. Judge Crisp commenced his service as a member of this body in the Forty-reighth menced his service as a member of this body in the Forty-eighth Congress. When he died, October 23, 1896, there were only twelve members in the Fifty-fourth Congress who had served continuously with Judge Crisp from the time that he entered Congress, and twenty in the same Congress who served with him in the Forty-eighth.

He was one of seven elected to the Fifty-fourth Congress who were removed by death.

These facts suggest the uncertainty of all life's positions and of life itself.

My relations with Judge CRISP have been somewhat singular. He was the first member of Congress with whom I held heated debate, and I believe I was the last with whom he had debate developing some of the feeling so often incident to our legislative life, but leaving no scar. Our relations always, saving our first experience, were of the most friendly character, and our first sharp encounter taught us, I believe, to respect each other.

Though never intimate with Judge CRISP in that sense which means comradeship, so necessary to my life, we were always good friends, enjoying thoroughly cordial relations and mutual respect.

I soon learned that his word once given to me was sacredly kept.

He was a man of high honor, and self-respect was a dominating element in his character.

He was truly a strong, deep, and earnest character.

He was never a trifler.

He was kind and gentle in his manner, so much so in ordinary relations that one often wondered at the high and intense feeling which at times he was capable of swiftly reaching.

Some are constituted so as to move through life on a dead, cold level; others sound all the notes of life, reveling in its sunlight, suffering in its shadows. The greatest lives know both storm and rest. The Pacific Ocean can woo to its waters, but can drive in terror to its shores.

These thoughts come from a study of Judge CRISP in my four-teen years' relationship with him on this floor. He had in his na-ture the sunlight and the shadow, the tempest and the calm.

Entering the Confederate army as a mere boy of about 16, he soon learned how very serious a matter life was. It tempered the good metal until it was capable of great work, and the boy without a boyhood was soon a powerful and aggressive man. His strength and ability invited the confidence of the people, who soon elevated him, step after step, until, in this body, he reached a position of power second only to that of the Chief Executive.

When death took him he had not yet attained the fullest stature

The great Georgian sleeps—after a hard, active, tireless summer's work and before the autumn's harvest had come.

Mr. CATCHINGS. Mr. Speaker, it has long been a custom with the House of Representatives, upon the death of one of its members, to set apart a day upon which addresses may be delivered for the purpose of placing upon its records in suitable form evidence of the esteem in which he was held. It is exceedingly difficult to prepare remarks for such purpose which shall be in all particulars appropriate. We are prone to indulge in fulsome eulogy, or, in the effort to avoid that, to fall short of paying just tribute. On this occasion, to me the task is peculiarly trying. The relations between Hon. CHARLES F. CRISP and myself were so intimate, my affection for him was so great, and my estimate of his character affection for him was so great, and my estimate of his character and abilities so high, that I shrink from speaking of him as they would naturally prompt me to do. The strong qualities which enabled him to grasp and retain the unchallenged leadership of his enabled him to grasp and retain the unchallenged leadership of his party in the House of Representatives, and which twice gave him its Speakership, manifested themselves in his boyhood, and steadily grew in potency and brilliancy up to the very hour of his death. He entered the Confederate army when a slender lad but 16 years of age. Notwithstanding his extreme youth, he was soon elected to a lieutenancy of his company. Had he not been made a prisoner of war in May, 1864, and confined as such until hostilities had ended, there can be little doubt that he would have earned and achieved still higher and more responsible rank. Within five years from his admission to the bar he was appointed solicitorgeneral for one of the judicial circuits of his State, and in 1873 was reappointed for a term of four years.

was reappointed for a term of four years.

His advancement in his profession was so rapid that in 1877 he was appointed judge of the superior court of the same circuit, and he was afterwards twice elected to that office. In 1882 he was elected a Representative in Congress, and was six times successively reelected. Almost from the day of his entrance into the House of Representatives he was recognized as one of its foremost House of Representatives he was recognized as one of its foremost members. In the Forty-ninth Congress, as a member of the Committee on Commerce, in the absence of its distinguished chairman, he had in charge the bill to create the Interstate Commerce Commission and define its jurisdiction and powers. That measure elicited prolonged, earnest, and serious debate, and the great skill and ability displayed by him in defending it and securing its passage gave him rank among the strongest and most useful Representatives. He had already, in the Forty-eighth Congress, given evidence of that remarkable grasp and perception of parliamentary evidence of that remarkable grasp and perception of parliamentary law which was speedily to develop until he became one of its ac-knowledged masters. It will be remembered that the seat of Hon.

knowledged masters. It will be remembered that the seat of Hon. John G. Carlisle, the Speaker of the Fiftieth Congress, was contested. This made it improper that the members of the Committee on Elections, which would be charged with the duty of examining into and reporting upon this contest, should be appointed by him. It was therefore provided that the committee should be chosen directly by the House of Representatives.

Hon. Henry G. Turner, of Georgia, then, as now, an honored Representative, had been chairman of that committee in the Forty-ninth Congress, and in that capacity had rendered most useful and distinguished service. He declined to serve longer on that committee. Judge Crisp's power in debate, professional acquirements, and aptitude for parliamentary management had been so notable that, as by one impulse, his Democratic colleagues, though against his will, selected him for the chairmanship of the committee. His work in connection with it was of such high order that when the Fiftieth Congress ended he had greatly advanced himself in public estimation as well as in the regard of his colleagues. In the Fifty-first Congress, which had passed under leagues. In the Fifty-first Congress, which had passed under Republican control, he was the senior member of the Democratic minority of the Committee on Elections. Though not holding a committee assignment of such character as according to the precedents invested him with the highest rank, yet, immediately upon Mr. Carlisle's retirement from this body to occupy the seat in the Senate to which he had been elected, by sheer force of his remarkable fitness he immediately forged to the front and seized the actual, substantial leadership of his party, which was never wrested from him until he had closed his eyes in his last and eternal sleep. No good purpose can be subserved by recalling the fierce and frequent struggles which marked the stormy career of that Congres

It is sufficient to say that this gallant and courageous leader was ever in the thick of the fight, battling bravely for the right as he saw it, and that amidst all the heat and fury of the turbulent scenes then enacted his mind was ever clear, his aims definite, his purpose unfaltering, and his poise of character so magnificent and superb as to challenge the respect and admiration of the whole country. When it became known that the Fifty-second Congress would have a Democratic majority, he was at once a candidate for the Speakership. His candidacy was not of his own making. It came about upon the insistence of a large number of his party colleagues, who, witnessing his steady growth, the wonderful versatility he had displayed in the discharge of every duty to which he had been assigned, and, above all, the masterful qualities which had distinguished his conduct amidst the trying events of the Fifty-first Congress, desired that he should be elevated to the Fifty-first Congress, desired that he should be elevated to the Speakership and charged with the grave responsibilities pertaining to that exalted office. The contest over the Speakership of the Fifty-second Congress was one of the most memorable in the annals of the House of Representatives. With no external influences to aid him, victory came to him through the sheer force of his strong and attractive personality and the profound admiration excited by the eminent services he had rendered his party under circumstances which displayed to advantage his great and forceful qualities. During this contest hitter attacks were made forceful qualities. During this contest bitter attacks were made upon him from many sources, but his character was so lofty and his qualifications so conspicuous that the shafts of misrepresentation and calumny fell harmless at his feet. He did not regard his election as in any sense a personal triumph, and I know that he entered upon the duties of the office of Speaker with as pure and patriotic emotions as ever animated the human breast.

The difficulties and responsibilities attendant upon that office are known to few outside of this Chamber, and in all their details they are not fully appreciated by many of us here. Speaker appoints all the committees of the House. This pow This power of appointment, conferred upon him by our rules, enables him in a large measure to give color to all important legislation which may be proposed by the several committees. The pressure upon him by members of the House for such assignments as their ambition or tastes may lead them to desire is persistent and tremendous. While he can not and should not turn an indifferent ear to the while he can not and should not turn an indifferent ear to the claims of his friends and supporters, yet he must not forget that the responsibility for legislation rests largely upon him, and that beyond certain limitations, if he would have the best work done, he can not afford to be influenced by personal considerations or the inclinations of friendship. And in any event, even where all considerations are equal, his appointments can not be shaped so as to exist which expressions or desires of all as to satisfy the expectations or desires of all.

Under the rules of the House, very few of the committees have the privilege of calling up for consideration at any time bills reported by them. Committees not possessing this privilege, and members interested in bills reported by them, are constantly immembers interested in bills reported by them, are constantly importuning the Speaker to allow such measures to be acted upon. This imposes upon him the burden of examining these bills, passing judgment upon them, and determining whether or not he will intervene to secure their consideration by the House. In the very nature of things he feels the necessity in the large majority of instances of this sort to refuse his intervention. While the Speaker is not so separated from the membership of the House as that, as in the case of the speaker of the British House of Commons, he must cease to be a partisan when he assumes the duties of his office, yet as to all questions not involved in party policy it is incumbent upon him to deal fairly and impartially with all of the members of the House. A man so constituted that he can not as members of the House. A man so constituted that he can not as to such nonpartisan questions be absolutely just and equitable is to such nonpartisan questions be absolutely just and equitable is not qualified for the office of Speaker. No man can satisfactorily discharge the functions of the Speakership who is not a good judge of human nature. He must understand that there are "many men of many minds;" that peculiarities of temperament exist among the members of this House as elsewhere; that some of them are insistent and persistent, while others are diffident and shrinking; that some are extremely sensitive and easily wounded while others. that some are extremely sensitive and easily wounded, while others are phlegmatic and not of so fine a mold; that self-assertiveness and loquacity are not always, or even usually, accompanied by the best ability, and finally, that, generally stated, each member is fairly striving to serve his constituency according to the lights before him.

How well Judge Crisp met the requirements of the Speaker's office there are many here and elsewhere who can attest. His kindly and patient consideration of all requests made of him was notorious. He was always accessible, and neither by word nor manner gave offense to those whose official duties compelled them to approach him. Amidst all the pressure upon him, even after his health was broken and the burdens of the office seemed more than he could bear, as Clarendon said of the great Hampden, "He preserved his own natural cheerfulness and vivacity, and, above all, a flowing courtesy to all men." Indeed, his nature was so kindly and his desire to possess the esteem and friendship of his colleagues so intense that even when it must have cost him great effort he would assume that cordial manner and cheery emile so effort he would assume that cordial manner and cheery smile so familiar to all of us in this Chamber. In dispensing the privileges at his disposal regarding the proceedings of the House he was absolutely impartial, and neither friend nor foe ever suspected that he had not received from him fair and equitable treatment.

As a presiding officer he has had few equals. His presence in the Speaker's chair was so fine and manly, his voice so full and resonant, and his alertness and power in dealing with parliamentary problems so manifest, that it was always a pleasure to on-lookers to witness the superb manner in which he presided over our deliberations. Misunderstandings and collisions between members sometimes occur to mar the proceedings here, and of these he had his share, as was to be expected in view of his strong character and prominent position. But he never sought to provoke these troubles, and I have many times heard him express the keenest regret that he had been drawn into them. He was a very ambitious man, but his ambition was to render he was a very amountous man, but his amount was to render honorable service to his country, and not to exalt himself. He believed in the teachings, principles, and traditions of the Demo-cratic party, and therefore was an earnest partisan. But his par-tisanship was not of that cheap quality which eternally proclaims itself lest it be overlooked, nor was it ever displayed in such man-ner as to be personally offensive to others. While his opinion ner as to be personally offensive to others. While his opinion was firm upon all subjects that he had investigated, he was more than scrupulous in yielding respect to the judgment of those who differed from him. He recognized the right of all men to think for themselves, and imputed no improper motives or lack of ability to those who had reached conclusions and expressed opinions different from his own.

ability to those who had reached conclusions and expressed opinions different from his own.

This fairness upon his part was ever displayed in his official capacity as Speaker, as well as in private intercourse. During the extra session of 1893, when the House of Representatives was called upon to deal with the important financial question then presented for its consideration, although he was an earnest advocate of the free coinage of silver, his official conduct was so fair and exempt from all personal bias or prejudice that no man, whatever his views may have been, could have pointed to any word or act of his upon which to base complaint or criticism. And as in this instance, so it ever was with him in dealing with great public questions. I do not hesitate to affirm that throughout his Congressional career, from its beginning to the end, he displayed the highest qualities of leadership, and that he was ever guided by aspirations and sentiments altogether ennobling. The distinguished Speaker of this House, in a telegram of condolence sent upon his death to his bereaved widow, truly said that his loss is the country's. He had rendered his country great and valuable service, and being yet in the prime of life, he had abundant resources upon which, if his life had been spared, he would freely and proudly have drawn in its interest and behalf.

His services as Speaker of the Fifty-second Congress were so notable and satisfactory to his party that he was reelected to the Speakership of the Fifty-third Congress without opposition, and in the Fifty-fourth Congress, which had passed under Republican control, he was complimented by the unanimous vote of his party associates for that office. During the Fifty-third Congress he was tendered by the governor of Georgia the anonimment as Senator.

associates for that office. During the Fifty-third Congress he was tendered by the governor of Georgia the appointment as Senator to fill the vacancy created by the death of Senator Colquitt. It was no small part of his ambition to represent his State in that august body. Accompanying this tender came telegrams from distinguished citizens of Georgia who aspired to the vacant seat in the Senate, pledging him that if he would accept the appointment he should have no opposition for election before the legislature. He did not feel that under the existing circumstances he would be justified in vacating the Speakership, and therefore promptly put aside the tempting object of his ambition. In talking with him on the subject, I suggested that the opportunity to attain a seat in the Senate might never come to him again, and insisted that he was not called upon to perform such an act of self-abnegation. Other friends tendered him similar advice. He could not view the situation in that light, and so, placing country and party above self, he declined the great honor, and so far as outward appearances indicated, without the slightest pain or even regret. And yet I knew, as many of his friends did, that he desired almost above all things to be a Senator from the State of Georgia. No finer act was ever performed by a public man, and it is in itself ample proof of the nobility of his soul and the loftiness of his character. The people of his State, remembering his unselfish sacrifice, upon the announcement by Senator Gordon in the spring of last year that he would not seek reelection, promptly determined that Judge CRISP should be his successor, and although considerable effort was made to organize opposition, yet the admi-ration and respect of the people for him was so unbounded that it was swept away like chaff before the wind; and at general pri-maries held throughout the State in the summer and fall of 1896 he was chosen as the Democratic nominee by a substantially unanimous vote. But the legislature of Georgia was not permitted to ratify this verdict of the people by investing him with formal title to a seat in the United States Senate.

The disorder from which he had long been suffering suddenly struck him down on the 23d day of October, 1896, and, as with Moses of old, when in sight of the goal of his ambition, his noble spirit took its flight from all earthly scenes. The deep and widespread regret which at once, through telegrams, letters, resolu-tions, and otherwise, manifested itself in all sections of the coun-try gave evidence of the profound impression created throughout the United States by his eminent public services and of the high and affectionate esteem in which he was almost universally held. In the State of Georgia, upon which his splendid career had reflected such honor, the grief of the people knew no bounds, and was man-In the State of Georgia, upon which his splendid career had reflected such honor, the grief of the people knew no bounds, and was manifested by many and impressive public ceremonials. For a time his body lay in state in the capitol at Atlanta, where multitudes of both sexes and of all ages and colors thronged to view it. It was then carried to his home in Americus upon a special train, escorted by the whole body of State officials and a delegation of judges in behalf of the judiciary of the State. At all the stations along the route vast crowds gathered, in many instances accompanied by military organizations, and often insisting upon having the casket opened that they might once more behold the features of their honored dead. In Americus, his home, where he was revered by his neighbors for his great achievements and loved for his affectionate and generous nature, upon every building, whether private or public, emblems of mourning were profusely displayed. Large delegations from every community in his Congressional district gathered there to participate in the funeral rites. On the 25th day of October, amidst the tears and lamentations of that vast assemblage, our honored friend and distinguished colleague was tenderly laid away in his last resting place.

I have not yet spoken of his domestic relations; indeed, I scarce know how to speak of them. They may be summed up in the statement that he was a devoted husband and a loving father. I doubt if in his family circle a harsh word or rude sentiment ever escaped his lips. When with his wife and children his sweetness of temper, gentle care, and kindly consideration were beyond all power of description.

The character of our distinguished friend easily accounts for the true and real leadership acquired and so long retained by him

The character of our distinguished friend easily accounts for the true and real leadership acquired and so long retained by him in the House of Representatives and elsewhere. I say elsewhere, for, as I have already pointed out, he was under all conditions and circumstances a true and real leader. He was wholly exempt from every species of charlatanry. He had no trick of voice or deportment to distinguish him from others. He never strutted or noted or affected an air of wisdom or resent of the particular of the second of the seco or posed, or affected an air of wisdom, or assumed a patronizing manner. In social life he never discoursed, but contented himself with conversation, and that was always frank and polite, and especially marked by kindly consideration for others. He did not need to be bolstered up by such cheap and tawdry devices. For affectations of all sorts indeed he had great contempt, often saying that they are the sure concomitants of weakness and vulgar-ity. His official conduct was ever courteous and dignified. Though possessing great faculty for retort in debate and making use of it whenever it seemed to be the most effective weapon, yet use of it whenever it seemed to be the most effective weapon, yet it was of the kind that, though smarting at the time, left no permanent sting behind it. His sagacity was such that he rarely took a false step in the management of the cause he had in hand. His success is largely attributable to the fact that he lost sight of himself entirely while discharging his official duties. I doubt if he was ever suspected of performing for the sake of self-aggrandizement. His integrity of purpose so far as I know was never questioned, and I am sure that it could never have been successfully impeached. The traits I have described, coupled with industry, unceasing vigilance, exceptional power in debate, and a fully impeached. The traits I have described, coupled with industry, unceasing vigilance, exceptional power in debate, and a mental poise which nothing could disturb, commanded the admiration, respect, and confidence of his party colleagues and caused them instinctively to turn to him for advice and counsel. They knew that he faithfully endeavored to serve his country and party; that no desire for personal preferment ever marred his purpose or directed his conduct; that he was alert and sagacious, studious and thoughtful, careful and prudent. Such a man could not fail to be a leader, no matter what might be his environments. My personal devotion to him was great, and I had abundant cause My personal devotion to him was great, and I had abundant cause to know that it was fully and cordially reciprocated. It gives me infinite pleasure to reflect that the friendship between us was never impaired, and that to the very last I was the recipient of his love and confidence. With me no other can take his place.

Mr. DALZELL. Mr. Speaker, it seems difficult of belief that, while we are engaged from day to day in the routine of Congressional life and strife, one who but lately was in the forefront of every battle on this floor is sleeping his last sleep in the soil of his Georgian home. It requires our positive knowledge of a melancholy fact to persuade us that a glance across the aisle will not disclose his presence in his accustomed seat. His cheery voice, his kindly look, the warm grasp of his hand, I can hardly realize that they may not be with me on the morrow. But they will not. He who was the leader of his party here and a potential factor when the first session of this Congress ended, ere its second session began, at the call of Providence, joined the great majority who have "passed over the river and are resting under the shade of the trees." The thoughts suggested by an occasion like this, while they are of the most solemn, interesting, and suggestive character, are, nevertheless, trite and commonplace in their expression. True, they bring us face to face with the unsolved and insoluble problem of immortality. But death is the common destiny of all. Men have been dying since the world began; and with each death the same queries have been made, and have failed of answer. There is no oracle outside of Revelation to make reply. What that country is, or whether any, to which we all are bound no man shall know save the emigrant thereto. From him no answer comes; and philosophy and speculation are vain. There is no retreat save to the faith so aptly defined by the great apostle as "the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen."

In bringing my humble but sincere tribute to the memory of Charles F. Crisp, I shall not undertake to recite at any length the history of his life. Others more familiar with its details will do that, and they will do it lovingly. The merest outline of it is sufficient to prove him to have been a man of mark. Born to an inheritance of struggle, without the advantages of wealth or influence or great name, his native virtues, and these only, were the factors in the problem of his successful fortune. His education was only that of the common schools—the common schools that so many times have been the grand universities productive of the highest type of American citizenship. The greatest of modern English poets has idealized such character in his conception of—

Some divinely gifted man,
Whose life in low estate began
And on a simple village green;
Who breaks his birth's invidious bar,
And grasps the skirts of happy chance,
And breasts the blows of circumstance,
And breasts the blows of circumstance,
And grapples with it his evil star;
Who makes by force his merit known,
And lives to clutch the golden keys,
To mold a mighty state's decrees,
And shape the whispers of the throne;
And moving up from high to higher,
Becomes on Fortune's crowning slope
The pillar of a people's hope.

The language of eulogy, Mr. Speaker, is too apt to be the language of extravagance, and the extravagant eulogist overleaps his purpose. I would avoid that danger, and putting aside so much of the poet's language as would be extravagant here, will simply say that the boy of nameless birth who by his own inherent strength became the Speaker of the House of Representatives of the American people has a right to be ranked as one who made by force his merit known, and lived to mold a mighty State's decrees.

can people has a right to be ranked as one who made by force his merit known, and lived to mold a mighty State's decrees.

Into the panorama of our friend's life there are woven many pictures. From a schoolboy he became a soldier; left home and kindred to follow the flag that stood to him for the right. That was not our flag. From our standpoint, he was mistaken; from his, he was a patriot. The time has long since gone by when dispute over that question may be had. And when he was borne, mid the lamentations of his people, to his last resting place, he could not have had (and I doubt not he himself would have said so) a more welcome shroud than the Stars and Stripes—the symbol of an indissoluble Union cemented in blood.

In civil life, with great distinction, he illustrated the versatility of American genius and the grand possibilities of American citizenship. It is characteristic of the American that he is a man of many sides. A possible ruler as well as one ruled—a factor in the creation and maintenance of enterprises which, under our system of government, depend upon individual effort instead of governmental, his education is that of experience, and is practical and varied. The life of our deceased friend proves the truth of this observation.

varied. The life of our deceased friend proves the truth of this observation.

He was a lawyer of mark—first, solicitor-general of his circuit; then clothed with the spotless ermine of a judge. It is said of him that in both of these capacities he measured up to the full stature of a perfect manhood. Retiring from his judgeship, he became the representative of his State on the floor of this House. Here there is no need to sound his praises. They are part and parcel of the plain records of the American Congress.

the plain records of the American Congress.

During his period of service many questions of national importance enlisted legislative attention. His attitude with respect thereto was the attitude of his party; and he was ever at the fore in the assertion and maintenance of that party's principles. All honor to him for that! All honor, say I always, to the man of strong and honest convictions who has the courage to stand by them!

In the assertion and maintenance of his chosen beliefs he was ever a leader. He possessed the elements of leadership. He was bold, aggressive, logical, convincing. He was inspiring; men loved to follow him. He was as brave in defeat as in victory. His leadership asserted itself; and by the choice of his party during two Congresses he presided with dignity in the great office of Speaker of this House.

I do not say that he was always right. I do not say that he had always impartial, considerate, and just.

no faults. Far from it. He was a strong man and gentle; and his faults, such as they were, were overborne immensely by his virtues; and we have now no memory save for the latter.

And so now, with this simple tribute to his memory—so far short of its deserving—I leave him to his conspicuous place upon the roll of the nation's illustrious dead—among those whom the world delights and will continue to honor.

Mr. RICHARDSON. Mr. Speaker, on the first Monday of December, 1883, as a member of the Forty-eighth Congress, Charles Frederick Crist took his seat in this House. Idid not know him until the beginning of the Forty-ninth Congress, the first to which I was elected. Very early after the organization of the Forty-ninth Congress I was assigned to membership on the Committee on Pacific Railroads, of which he was also a member. In the arrangement of seats at the table of that committee I was placed by his side, and in this way first made his acquaintance. I was a new member, and although he had had then but one term, I found he was entirely familiar with all questions before the committee and that its able and efficient chairman, the Hon. J. W. Throckmorton, of Texas, and the entire committee trusted implicitly his opinions and his judgment.

The acquaintance thus formed between us grew into perfect friendship. There was never an incident of any kind or character from the date of our first meeting, through all the long years we served together in this House, that marred that friendship. It remained unbroken to his death. The reflection that throughout all his services here I had his esteem, his respect, and his friendship is a source of supreme satisfaction to me.

As a younger member of the House in service he always gave me his encouragement; as a coworker in committee he gave me his assistance; and finally when he came to the highest position in the gift of this body, I rejoice to know I enjoyed his confidence and support. Each time when he sought the Speakership it was my pleasure to cast my vote for him; and on the occasion of his last nomination to that elevated station I had the honor (which I regarded a high one) by his request to formally present his name. On that occasion, among other things, I said:

name. On that occasion, among other things, I said:

The very pleasant task has been given me of placing in nomination for Speaker of the House in the Fifty-fourth Congress a gentleman who is my warm personal and political friend. It goes without saying that this gentleman has already been named for the position in the hearts of all of us here assembled, and it only remains for the formal words to be spoken. When the Fifty-second Congress was about to assemble, just four years ago now, there appeared in this Chamber 240 of the chosen Representatives of a hopeful and triumphant Democracy. Then it was after a sharp and brilliant contest, the gentleman I am to name was placed in the Speaker's chair. Two years later, when about 215 members of our party met here for a similar purpose, with the experience of a past Congress to guide us, with full knowledge of his honesty, capacity, and ability, he was by unanimous action and with hearty acclamation again chosen our leader. We come now a small band of patriots, so far as numbers are concerned, to say again he is our choice for this responsible office, but we recognize the fact that this time our declaration is impotent.

The roll was called, and he was unanimously chosen as our

It will not be expected of me on this occasion to enter into an account in detail of his long and useful career as a member of this House and a citizen of Georgia. This has been done to-day by others of this body by whom these things are said more appropriately than by myself. I shall content myself with speaking of him in a more general way.

The effort on my part to fully describe the loss the country, and more particularly the Democratic party, sustains by his untimely death would be a failure. There is no man in public life to-day who could not better be spared than Charles F. Crisp. His place may be taken, but it can not be filled by any other Representative.

He enjoyed to the fullest capacity the confidence of his party, not only on this floor, but throughout the Union. Those who differed with him here and elsewhere entertained for him marked respect. His powers in debate were of the very highest order, as all can testify who ever thus met him. He was always cool and clear-headed, and often quite aggressive. His courage was unsurpassed, as his supporters and opponents all will bear witness. His honesty was never questioned. His conduct was always above reproach. Called to the responsible and exacting duties of Speaker of the House, he met these responsibilities and duties in such manner as to reflect not only honor and credit upon himself and his party, but upon the entire country. In the chair he was always amiable, yet always positive. He was gentle, yet stern when duty demanded stermness in the Speaker. He loved to do deeds of kindness as a presiding officer, but never did them when it was improper to do them or when they were to be done at the expense of his office. He was gifted in the statement of all questions and was a talented parliamentarian. He was at all times composed, and while others grew excited, his self-possession was never for a moment disturbed. He was firm in his administration of the affairs of the House, and at times was quite emphatic, but he was always impartial, considerate, and just.

There are times, we all know, in this body when amidst the excitement incident to debate on exciting political questions, when party feeling is running high and bitterness of expression is freely indulged, to preserve order and fair decorum the occupant of that chair is called upon to exercise and must, in his discretion, exercise great powers. Yet during all his experience through many trying and exciting scenes he never exercised those powers rudely or too arbitrarily. He never on such occasions abused the prerogatives and powers of the Speaker or brought his high office into contempt

I would not be understood as saying or insinuating that he was not a partisan, or, more strictly speaking, a party man. He was a strong believer in the principles and tenets of his party, and this with a man of his pronounced convictions and courage necessarily made him more or less a partisan; but his partisanship was never exerted at the expense of his patriotism. Though a partisan he was not a fanatic.

His experience as a lawyer and judge made him conservative and fair-minded. He never for one moment permitted his partisanship to provoke in him bitterness of feeling or expression or to render him uncharitable toward his political opponents or those with whom he differed. He never impugned motives when engaged in controversies nor assailed character in partisan warfare.

His public record covers a period when courage, high ability, and absolute integrity were required to meet grave and important exigencies. It is a proud satisfaction to know that his connection with the history and his appearance in all these exigencies and emergencies were wholly honorable to himself and conspicuously serviceable to his State and country.

In unofficial life he was given best opportunity to display those splendid traits of character which in him were so pronounced and distinguished. I have said he was honorable and just as a public man and presiding officer; so he was sincere and true as a private citizen. His was a changeless sincerity. He was never in disguise. He was the soul of honor. He had a contempt for everything low, mean, or sordid. Highly endowed as he was by nature and his own training, with so many estimable traits, his influence over men was almost without limit.

He had no compromise to make with that which was wrong, and held with much tenacity to that which he believed to be right

He was warm-hearted, genial, and social in his nature. enjoyed the companionship of friends, and made it both pleasant and agreeable for them to be with him. High toned, manly, and dignified in manner and conduct, he treated everyone, both high and low, in fashion becoming a gentleman, and expected like

He was in every respect a most lovable man.

All who came in close acquaintance or contact with him became his friends and admirers. He was a genuine type of the best element of the South. He was called before his work was finished. He did not die of old age or lingering delay.

His eye was not dim, nor his natural force abated.

He was an active worker until his life closed. The full measure of his capabilities had not been reached, and his career was incomplete. He was full of ambition, but was never sordid and venal. His ambitions were all noble.

One of his highest ambitions, as I have heard him say, was to represent Georgia in the United States Senate. Yet he was so self-sacrificing to his conception of the true sense of duty that when the coveted seat was graciously tendered him by the governor of his State, he declined it, saying his first duty was not to himself, but to the House of Representatives, which had honored

He held the high office of judge before being elected to Congress, and also filled other positions of responsibility and dignity in his State. In the late war between the States he was a courageous From his early manhood until death ended his bright and enviable career his pathway had been strewn all along with honors, his hands filled with trusts confided to him by his fellowcitizens, his brain continuously occupied in anxious and arduous thought, his body often taxed to the utmost of physical endurance, but his course had been steadily and unfalteringly upward.

When the end came there was no stain upon his name and fame.

He died in the maturity of his strength and in the fullness of his The position he attained in his country's pantheon is an one. His name will survive long in the history of his elevated one.

State and the country.

A familiar writer has said, "There is no antidote against the opium of time," and that "Gravestones scarce tell the truth forty It is vain for any man to hope for immortality, or for patent from oblivion, for there is nothing really immortal but immortality.

It is a fact that only twenty-seven names of the multitude who lived make up the world's history before the Flood. The greater part of humanity by far must be content to be as though they had not been, and be found in the register of God and not in the record

I will not disparage the names of those who have gone before him in the high office of Speaker of this House. Many of them have been men of great renown and adorned that exalted sta-tion, but none of them surpassed him in zeal and devotion to duty, none surpassed him in patriotism, honesty, and courage, and none exceeded him in energy and integrity. The best that can be said of any of them can be truthfully said of him.

His splendid and successful career was cut off when he was in his highest usefulness, and all must realize the irreparable loss his State and the Republic sustained when his incompleted life was terminated.

The story of his life illustrates what energy, honesty, integrity, and devotion to duty will achieve. That story will illumine the and devotion to duty will achieve. That story will illumine the brightest page not only in Georgia's history, but that of our whole country; and his name, which passes as an invaluable heritage to his grief-stricken widow and children, will be preserved and perpetuated in spotless purity through a long hereafter.

[Mr. BARTLETT of Georgia addressed the House. See Appen-

Mr. McMILLIN. Mr. Speaker, it is sad to have those at any time of life go from us who are capable of serving their country. But to have the gifted and patriotic taken in the prime of life, when ability is at the zenith, when the enthusiasm of youth is happily blended with the discretion of age, is the greatest loss the State can sustain in the death of the citizen.

State can sustain in the death of the citizen.

Such was the case in the death of Judge Charles F. Crisp.
He had by hard work and superior intellectuality fought the battles of early life and won. He had attained an eminence in his State and country of which any man might be justly proud. He had the respect and confidence of his party and people in a very high degree. His State stood ready to bestow upon him still greater honors. His country was ready to applaud and ratify anything his State did in his honor. A future full of brightness and distinction lay before him when the relentless reaper came and claimed the harvest.

claimed the harvest.

Judge CRISP was one of the young men of the South who came on the stage just in time to see his country rent asunder and dison the stage just in time to see his country rent asunder and distracted by a fierce fratricidal strife. Brave and enthusiastic, he united his fortunes with those of his State and section and risked his life in behalf of what he thought was right. The close of the war found him still a youth in a land devastated by the ravages of war, with its agriculture prostrate, its educational institutions closed, many of its young men buried on the battlefield, and sorrow and waste hanging like a pall over the whole land. Such had been the ruin around him that of the 11,000,000 people in the South the combined wealth of 7,000,000 would probably not have aggregated half a million dollars. Ruin stalked abroad where prosperity had only a few years before smiled on the whole land. There was everything to discourage, there was everything to dismay. Such were the scenes which surrounded this young man

Such were the scenes which surrounded this young man on his return from the greatest war of modern times, and the greatest civil war of history. Like many other noble and strong young men of that day and land, Judge Crisp saw these discouraging surroundings without dismay. Instead of giving up because his educational advantages had been restricted by these patriotic duties, he cast about him for the best means of restoring his country to its former prosperity and its prestige. He did not give up the struggle of life because the struggle at arms had been unsuccessful. He had confidence in the strength of his people, the resources of his land, and the power and permanency of free institutions. Others who have preceded me have given so minute an account of his action at that period, the exertion he made, the success he attained, the trust reposed in him by an appreciating people, that it would be out of place for me to reiterate these, but it may be truly said that he was one of the hard-working and potent agencies in reviving the drooping spirits of the people around him, and in building up the waste places of his loved land. Notwithstanding he died so young, he lived to see the agriculture of his country rise again to its feet. He lived to see the sails of commerce whiten the ocean and Gulf around him. He lived to see his own State one of the leaders in the manufacture of the ocean and Gulf around him. of the cotton it produced. He lived to see the iron smelted in the valleys through which he had recently fought force its way by its superiority or cheapness to the markets, not only of this country, but many of the markets of the Old World. He lived to see educational institutions spring up anew where they had been paralyzed or destroyed by war. He lived to help return the ballot to his comrades in arms from whom it had been taken, and he lived to be a potent agent in resisting Federal interference with State elections, and in taking from the statute books the laws which tended to give undue influence to Federal power in the elections of the people.

Although Judge Crisp died so young, if we judge his life by its activities, its accomplishments, its successes, we may truly say he had a long and eventful public career. I knew him well, having served with him during his whole term in Congress, and being connected with him in committee service at the time of his death. He had a quick perception, a strong understanding, and a genial disposition. Having lived in the same hotel with him for a considerable period, I knew his domestic life as well as his public. The same gentleness in demeanor which characterized him when associating with his fellow-men he carried to the family circle intensified. At the hearthstone, in the midst of his family, he was all that could be expected of the husband and father. As a member of this House he was watchful and painstaking. As its Speaker, when presiding over the House, he was courteous, ready, and firm.

Mr. Speaker, in the death of Judge Crisp his State has lost an able and patriotic public servant, and our institutions a zealous advocate and a strong defender. To his family every member who served with him and knew him will join in most heartfelt expressions of sympathy

Mr. Speaker, the State of Kentucky, soon after the close of the Mexican war, erected in the cemetery at her capital a beautiful monument to her sons who fell in that war. The gifted Theodore O'Hara recited at its dedication a poem he composed for the purose. He was afterwards a comrade in arms of Judge Crisp, and I know not how better I can express the feelings of his associates here from whom he has been taken than by quoting the words of his comrade spoken at that monument:

Nor wreck, nor change, nor winter's blight, Nor time's remorseless doom, Shall dim one ray of holy light That gilds your glorious tomb.

Mr. CUMMINGS. Mr. Speaker, Tarquin, tyrant of Rome, once signified a desire to cut off the heads of his tallest nobles. If nobility of nature had been the standard, and CHARLES FREDERICK Crisp had lived under his dominion, he would certainly have been in danger. Nature had fashioned him with the greatest care. In the class for which she had designed him she had left a space very near the head of the list wherein he was to write his name. To fit him for it, however, his training was to be severe and varied. Man, soldier, jurist, he acted his part well; but it was as orator and statesman that he was to round up his career. tudes that intervened taught him endurance, faith, hope, and constancy; so that when he arrived at his destined service he was fitted for the tremendous encounters he was to endure.

He entered the lists with extreme modesty. His voice was low and soft, his demeanor graceful, his manner unobtrusive. He knelt at the shrine of the people, and rose knighted, the defender of their rights—a new champion in the lists. Among the throng he was hardly noticed, but he placed himself in front of his charge. When the poachers of power threatened his preserves, he started up-

Not like a stag that spies the snare, But lion of the hunt aware.

In the grapples that ensued he first leveled the approaches, that the contest might be fair. Then he stormed the citadel his adversary had set up. With herculean power and unyielding constancy he made every crevice feel his incisive assaults, and every salient the unabated force of his well-trained battery. When demolition ensued and all was over, he made the ruin effulgent with instruct-

I might here close this sketch, satisfied that I had given an outline of the characteristics of this noble man; but he was my friend, at times my leader, always my instructor, and I feel it a duty on this occasion to fill it up with such observations on his career as my knowledge affords.

I shall speak of him with something of the suppressed emotion with which Antony struggled over the dead body of Cæsar, though in their lives there was little analogous, and in their death nothing whatever. Neither have I any motive, as the Roman had, for playing the cunning orator. To those who were here with him I need not say that his conduct was most noble under all circumstances; to those who were not here I will say they have missed an exemplar whom they could have studied with advantage. Questions of tremendous import, of vast national importance, shook this Hall during his membership. Call to mind the great struggle over the force bill; the lesser one over the McKinley bill. The first he opposed because he believed it a blow at the attributes of citizenship, sapping the foundations of our polity; the second because he deemed it the vicious outgrowth of a false political economy. All that party zeal, great research, and eminent ability could command clashed in these combats. At times the House swayed and tossed like a forest heaving to a tempest. When the storm had swept by and decorum had returned, such is the tenacity his well-filled quiver he drew no poisoned arrow, for he knew that passion and judgment could have little fellowship, and he was

His oratory was not overvehement. It flowed with regimental precision, close-ranked, animated, and confident. His bearing was always superb. I never knew him halt for a word, or at fault for an illustration. When the situation warranted, he would light up the House with the liveliest display of humor. In attributes, in political tenets, and in his manner of illustration, he might not inaptly be called the John Bright of the American Commons.

His bouts with our distinguished Speaker, eminent for his talents and his audacity, were of thrilling interest.

Flashes of lightning and mutterings of thunder betokened the

It was like those intense situations we have so often seen upon the stage, where the future is threatening and the outcome dubious. It was not in the nature of either to give an inch of ground. When they had thus met in full career, and the strength and mettle of each had fully proved themselves on the other, they generally unlocked, if I may so express it, with something like defiant courtesy. Each had triumphed over the other for the Speakership; each could generously and truthfully say of the other: "Great let us call him for he congagged me."

Many of us remember CRISP's contest for the Speakership. It was his ambition to preside over the House, of which he was so devoted a member. His party dominated by an immense majority and were privileged to caucus for the prize. The contest was intense enough to unsettle nerves not proof against disturbance. From first to last he was threatened with defeat. Yet no ripple Yet no ripple ment. When was observable in his even and well-sustained deportment. When proclaimed victor he received the honor with thanks, emphasizing that he was conscious of the responsibility it imposed and mod estly showing he was confident he could meet its claims. His address on taking the gavel was a model of brevity and almost touching in simplicity. Here it is:

Gentlemen of the House of Representatives: For the great honor you have conferred upon me I return you heartfelt thanks.

I shall endeavor to discharge the duties of the office of Speaker with courtesy, with firmness, and with absolute impartiality. Let us unite in the hope that our labors here may result in the advancement of the prosperity, the honor, and the glory of our beloved country.

The words "our beloved country" flowed into the speech with as sweet a cadence as ever sprang from human heart and fell from human lips. By unanimous vote the House afterwards signified that he had fulfilled his highest promise.

It was during his Speakership that his constancy was severely tried. His highest ambition was to be a Senator of the United States; but he desired to win the honor by services faithfully rendered to his State and people. A vacancy in the Senatorship occurred. The governor of Georgia tendered it to him. He had but to accept it and walk into the other House. He put it instantly aside to serve out the term for which he had been chosen. Duty chained him to the House, and that was a chain at which he never strained. In such estimation was he held by the people of his State that on the first occasion that offered itself they overwhelmingly designated him for the high position he had declined.

Such, Mr. Speaker, was your predecessor as I saw him and knew him in this House for many years. But there was a softer and far more tender shade to his character. It was his love for his home and family. I saw him and knew him in his typical Georgia home. I have conversed with him for hours while the mocking birds flooded the air with music and the sweet perfume of the cape jessamine was wafted to the porch. I have marked his devotion to an invalid wife, his tender affection for his children, and his generous care of old and tried servants emancipated in the war. I have sat at his table. Morning, noon, and night have I seen him bow his head and heard him ask God's blessing upon the food spread before him and his. It was a family united in love and affection—one in which the good old Southern term of endearment, "honey," was not forgotten. The children honored the father and the methor and the method of the father and the method of when the funeral procession passed the house, the words "His old home" were affixed in flowers above the gate. They had been placed there by his neighbors. It was thus he passed to a new home in the hereafter.

But his brilliant attributes will remain a resplendent memory, and when bereft of all human vanity, as I hope we may be, many of us, I am sure, as years go by, will declare with wholesome pride, "I was a member when CRISP was Speaker."

Mr. HERMANN. Mr. Speaker, it is related of a great historic character whose portrait was being painted that when the artist suggested he would eliminate from the picture a mole upon the of party ties that alignments were found to be hardly affected.

How often, amid the wildest commotion, have I seen CRISP rise calm, dignified, and graceful, confident in the justice of his cause, spurred on by duty, and by his almost faultless diction, his earnest manner, and his all-sweeping logic soothe the struggling elements. Members might not agree with him, but they would listen. There was no malignity in him, nor even asperity. From lines, I esteem it a high privilege to unite with other associates in expressing this my tribute of respect, of love, and admiration for the life and character of this distinguished statesman.

him as I always found him.

It seems but yesterday that we beheld in yonder chair the genial face and well-remembered form of him whose eulogy we now speak. Whether as the presiding officer of this House or as the unassuming and always courteous member on the floor, his presence was such as to invite the most kindly attention from his associates as well as from the on-lookers in the gallery. Though one of the most devoted to any task undertaken by him, yet in the performance of that duty there was always shown a ready willingness to suffer interruption and with patience to answer either friend or opponent, and with equanimity to continue. A remarkable trait possessed by ex-Speaker CRISP was in his complete self-government. In all the debates in which he participated— and it was his lot while a member to participate in some of the most exciting controversies known to our annals—he maintained a manly self-possession, a placid, undisturbed, and unruffled tema manly self-possession, a placid, undisturbed, and unrumed temper, and a hold on his subject which eminently fitted him to occupy the trying position of leader of his party. It must have been a pleasure and a pride among his partisans to follow such a leader. There was an absence of egotism, of arrogance, of captiousness, of hauteur in his character. To the young members, more than all, will his memory in this respect be cherished.

The leader of a party in this House can, if his self-will so ordains, discourage and permanently impair the future of many a young member, while he can also encourage, aid, and incite him to the best efforts. Nothing so delighted Judge Crisp as to rescue, by kindly suggestion or active aid, the embarrassed young member floundering in some trying debate or entangled in the parliamentary procedure of the House. Never was there a member of this body more approachable, more seemingly unconscious of high honors, and yet more dignified and more in place than he. The best test of his splendid character, however, was that which he soon developed in the Speaker's chair. In this exalted place the occupant too often abandons his previous cordial mannerism and discourage and permanently impair the future of many a young occupant too often abandons his previous cordial mannerism and occupant too often abandons his previous cordial mannerism and at once assumes an air of austerity and lofty elevation above his fellows not justified by the dignity and authority of any office in this our republican form of government. With Speaker Crisp there was still retained the genial, lovable qualities which ever distinguished him before. He had grown no greater. His associates had grown no less. And yet he was the able, dignified, respected as sociates had grown of the House of Paparses to the second of the House of Paparses.

spected Speaker of the House of Representatives.

To the innumerable demands upon him for recognition he was courteous and patient—willing to hear the merits of the measure submitted, and then either granting, considering, or regretfully declining. Whatever was the answer, the member was made to feel that consideration was accorded him. His appeal had been kindly, respectfully heard. He could not complain. So sensitive was he to the feelings of his fellows, that never did he refuse a request that he did not suffer more pain than did the one denied. He never lost his control when Speaker. We all recall hissuperb bearing when presiding over the House when often wrought up to intense excitement over some political debate. It would seem as if the angry passions, the personal taunts, the criminations and recriminations on the floor, even to the extent of harsh reflection, flery invective, and individual criticism hurled at the Speaker himself, would so unnerve and disturb him as to prompt retaliant himself, would so unnerve and disturb him as to prompt retalia-tion upon his tormentors. Speaker CRISP rose grandly above this temptation. With a cool head and a firm gavel he ruled the storm and mastered it. When order was restored and the mem-bership was again tranquil, and the hot heads were cooling, not the slightest indication could be discerned in the face of the Speaker of the siege he had just passed through. He exemplified in the most practical manner and under the most trying circum-stances the scriptural injunction: "Let every man be swift to stances the scriptural injunction: "Let every man be swift to hear, slow to speak, slow to wrath."

And when at last in the revolution of parties another succeeded him in the chair, again he returned to the membership on the floor and resumed his duties as a Representative; he was still the same generous-hearted, considerate, self-sacrificing friend, associate, and member as he ever was.

With all the angry contentions which history will note as a part of his administration of this House, and which are still in vivid recollection, it is a refreshing boast, and confers imperishable luster upon his good name, that he exercised his powers as a Speaker in a fair and impartial manner as between the great par-

Speaker in a fair and impartial manner as between the great parties on the floor, and that no stamp or stain suggestive of disrepute rests upon any public or private act during his long service as the trusted and distinguished representative of the people of his State. Like the spire on some lofty cathedral seen at close view, when neither its true height nor its majestic proportions can be accurately measured, so is ex-Speaker Crise, in according to him his just place in history in so brief a period after his death. His splendid life work will shine forth in even greater luster as time goes on, for then the mists which more or less obscure every active, ambitious genius, surrounded by enmities and personal antagonisms, will have faded away and exposed to view the intrinsic worth and the perfect symmetry, the strength and beauty of this well-balanced life.

well-balanced life.

The light of our friend was extinguished while it was yet day—yea, at high noon. He was still in the midst of his usefulness, and no premonition pointed out the untimely end. The summons came, and the work was done. It is difficult to realize that this is true. Do we comprehend the uncertainty of life? Is it so frail?

We have the appearing the expiring breath and see it in the open. We hear the answer in the expiring breath and see it in the open grave. It leaves an admonition to us all: "Do thy work to-day; for thee there may be no to-morrow." May we not hope that if not here there may be that to-morrow in the celestial realms, "in that temple not made with hands, eternal in the heavens?"

Mr. Speaker, with these poor words in testimony of my high esteem for our departed associate, and in grateful remembrance of his noble, generous nature, I tenderly lay my sprig of acacia upon his honored grave.

Mr. DINGLEY. Mr. Speaker, I made the acquaintance of Judge Crist soon after he entered the Forty-eighth Congress as a Representative from Georgia. That acquaintance ripened into an intimate friendship, which continued till death removed him from the House of Representatives during the interval between the close of the first and the opening of the second session of the present Congress.

Notwithstanding our divergent political views often brought us into antagonism in debate, yet on all occasions he bore himself with such courtesy and kindliness of spirit, as well as ability and elevation of tone, that my respect for him personally and my admiration of his ability were increased. During my long service with Judge Crisp, in which we were frequently on opposite sides of important and exciting political questions, nothing ever occurred to mar in the slightest degree our warm friendship and mutual regard.

For some time after entering Congress Judge Crisp modestly refrained from active participation in the business and debates of the House, realizing as he did the importance of familiarizing himself first with the rules and methods of the House, so dissimilar in many respects from the practice of all of our State legislative bodies. Unlike many other parliamentary bodies, the House, partly from the necessity which exists in an assembly of so large a membership and partly because of its rapidly changing elements, pays little regard to courtesy in the conduct of its business, and grants very little to any member beyond what he is entitled to under its rules and practice.

I well remember the first time that Judge Crisp forged to the front and demonstrated not only his ability as a legislator, but also his skill as a parliamentarian. It was on the occasion of the consideration and passage of the interstate-commerce bill, when the enforced absence of Judge Reagan, the chairman of the committee having that subject in charge, threw upon Mr. Crisp the responsibility of defending and guiding that important measure through the House, in the face of a well-organized and determined opposition. This duty he performed with an ability, skill, and success which at once placed him among the leading members of the House—a rank which he subsequently maintained without difficulty.

When the Democratic party came into control of the House at Congress it was natural that the opening of the Fifty-second Congress it was natural that Judge Criss's name should have been prominently mentioned for the Speakership, especially in view of the fact that while temporarily occupying the chair he had shown himself to be an expert parliamentarian and a successful presiding officer. But his nomination over older associates of larger experience and greater prestige was a recognition of his fitness for the high office of Speaker, which was shown to be well deserved. The ability and fairness with which he discharged the duties of this important and difficult position entitles Mr. Crisp to a high place among those great statesmen who have graced this high office, second only to the Presidency itself.

Judge CRISP'S mind was eminently logical and judicial. The possession of such a mind is absolutely essential to real success and usefulness in public service. In high public position men ruled by sentiment, who possess little logical power, little capacity to accurately weigh all sides of important questions, and especially to distinguish effects from causes, are always dangerous leaders, however sincere. Indeed, their power for mischief is only augmented by the earnestness which is sometimes born of inability to judicially weigh consequences. Mr. Crisp's mind was so logical and judicial that he could see all around a question, and avoid the errors and dangers of surface thinking.

Judge CRISP's position in the House was reached as much through his industry as through his ability. Indeed, no one achieves eminence either in public or private life except by persistent and well-directed work. There is no royal road to real and permanent success here or elsewhere. One who has carefully and thoroughly prepared himself to meet responsibilities is sooner or later needed. On the other hand, one who excuses himself from the labor required to make himself a master of his chosen line of study will never be able to keep to the front. Judge Crisp's rapid rise from an humble condition to so high a position in the nation affords another illustration of the fact that in this land of the free merit is accorded recognition regardless of station or wealth. In spite of the effort of narrow minds to create the impression that there are classes in this country who secure privileges denied to the masses, the fact is that no class distinctions exist among our people, and that there is no distinction, no honor, no privilege which is not equally open to every citizen, however

It is here in this Chamber, where Representatives from each of the forty-five States of the Union meet to consult with reference to the interests of this great Republic, that we feel as nowhere else the strength of the tie which binds together our seventy millions the strength of the tie which binds together our seventy millions of people. Differ in opinion as we may, there rises above those differences the mutual regard engendered by the friendships here formed, and the feeling that we are fellow-citizens of a common country whose interest we desire to promote, and the heirs of a common heritage whose priceless blessings we desire to defend.

When, therefore, one of our number is removed by death, especially one who has been so long with us as has Judge Crise, we feel the promotion of the control of feel the separation not only as a national loss, but as a personal bereavement.

What we call death—the dissolution of the mysterious union of soul and body which characterizes life as discerned by our imperfect natural vision—is always an unwelcome, although inevitable, visitor. But when it comes to one who, like Mr. CRISP, was still young and in the height of his usefulness, the shock is intensified and the grief deepened. Happy is he who, when called to close his eyes on the scenes of earth and enter upon the life beyond, can meet this summons with a serene faith in Him who is over all and above all, as we doubt not was the case with our departed associate and friend.

Mr. DE ARMOND. Mr. Speaker, this hour is appropriately devoted to services in memory of a distinguished member of this body, lately with us, now gone to

The undiscovered country, from whose bourn No traveler returns.

His life has been gracefully sketched by others far more familiar with it than I am, though I knew him quite well from service with him in the House of Representatives. I knew him somewhat also in the relations of friendship, outside of the House. Of him it has been well said, because it has been truthfully said, that on the domestic side, as husband, father, friend, citizen, his life was not only without reproach, but admirable.

was not only without reproach, but admirable.

The career of Charles Frederick Crise as a public man has been ably and fittingly outlined to-day before this audience and before the country. He himself painted the picture, and the lines have been but pointed out by those who have just engaged the attention of the House. A poor boy, he entered the Southern army from his Georgia home, and performed well the duties of a soldier "in times that tried men's souls." Emerging from the prison where he had been cast by the fortunes of war, with but little preparation except that which had been made in the rude school of the camp, he began the study of his chosen profession. How he rose in that profession, from the stripling attorney at the bar to be solicitor-general, and soon became the chief presidthe bar to be solicitor-general, and soon became the chief presiding officer of the court; how by the suffrages of those who knew him well he was sent to this House, and how his legislative career, begun here and ended here, is honorable and illustrious—all this is known to his associates and to the country too well to need recital

It may be worth while to inquire in what lay principally the ements of the eminent Georgian's success. What was there elements of the eminent Georgian's success. about him that elevated him above his fellows in a body always distinguished for having within it many men of great and com-manding ability? How did he attain and how did he retain leadership unquestioned within and over a party difficult to lead and ever ready to throw aside leaders and to choose new ones in their stead? That he was a man of ability all know. But he led able men, who willingly followed him. That he was a man of courage goes without saying. But he had cheerful followers in men independent as well as courageous, because they felt that he would lead them aright. I believe that the one quality which contributed mightily in giving him this ascendency in the House conceding to him great intellectual endowments—lay in his amiable and lovable disposition. He won power through his kindliness and retained it through kindness, supplemented, of course, by tact, ability, and firmness.

His leadership was not self-imposed. To it he was called voluntarily his leadership was not self-imposed.

tarily by his party associates, because they believed he would lead in the course which it was right for them to take-because it was not irksome to follow him—because his leadership was so pleasant that it seemed but superior fellowship.

Some men achieve greatness and command success in ruling over other men by virtue of intellectual endowment alone or by vast will power. While Judge Crisp possessed these great gifts of nature, he also possessed that sweet and kindly disposi-tion which attracted people to him, which made people love to be associated with him, and which preserved his sway over the minority, as it is now-over the majority as it was for a time ity, as it is now—over the majority as it was for a time—as perhaps the sway of no other man of his party will be established or maintained in this House in many a day to come. He has gone; gone to return to these Halls no more. I can not add to his fame, nor could I detract from it. His life work is known; it is approved by those who knew it best. His career was indeed a remarkable one; and if he had not died in his prime, there is no guessing how many new triumphs of statesmanship might be placed to his gredit. credit.

What a proud thing it is, Mr. Speaker, for a man starting poor and working his way without extraneous aid to rise by the power of his own personality, by his intellect and lovable qualities, to the high position which CRISP reached, and which you, too, twice gained; an official position second only to one other in the world; a place which well filled—filled by intellect, courage, courtesy, kindness, impartiality—is often in a lifetime even higher than any official station not occurried by a man possessing the same estiofficial station not occupied by a man possessing the same estimable qualities of the head and of the heart. Then, true indeed it is that CRISP's was a life upon whose bright, clean, glorious story we may dwell with profit to ourselves and to those who are to come after us.

Leadership is not necessarily sought or coveted. It is generally born in the man. Sometimes it is acquired by a man's own zeal, and sometimes it is thrust upon a man. However, men of superior ability naturally aspire to leadership; not a few attain it without real merit. But those who, because of qualities inherent in themselves, retain leadership over followers possessed of the power to depose them—these few are men born to lead, as others are born to follow.

Perhaps the proudest tribute to the memory of the departed statesman whose death we mourn is that he retained his ascendency over men not so much by virtue of special effort as through the warm feeling, akin to affection, which his sunny disposition and native kindliness awakened in his associates, so that they felt themselves honored in honoring him.

The loss to Speaker Crisp's party and to his country is almost reparable. While we of the minority have many able and strong irreparable. men among us, yet attention does not turn to any one in particular as being peculiarly fitted, as he was, for the post of leader. At least, no one stands out, to the exclusion of the others, like Crisp did, as the proper leader here of the forces of the Democracy.

I esteem it a privilege, Mr. Speaker, that, as a member of this body, I have beheld two great parliamentary leaders, one upon either side of the Chamber, each superb in his own way, marshal their respective forces, now for attack, now for defense. I do not expect again in life, though my years be prolonged to great length, to find their equals in ability to lead and govern their fellow-partisans in parliamentary warfare. But could either have led so successfully the forces which followed the other?

have led so successfully the forces which followed the other:

Often we think and say that those who die in their prime are taken prematurely. Of course, to family and friends, to love and hope and pride, the shock comes most rudely when the blast of death has blown where, it would seem, the blush of life ought to continue. But after all, when you consider the fame in years to come of a man whose life is full of good deeds and grand achievements, as was Judge Crisp's—looked at in the light of history—is it an unmixed misfortune in the annals of the world that such a one goes down when the sun is at high noon, instead of lingering on goes down when the sun is at high noon, instead of lingering on the stage of action, often superfluous, until the long and everlengthening shadows from the West are falling upon him?

Yet there is no doubt that if CHARLES F. CRISP were spared he would long be one of the greatest members of the Senate, whose doors were open for him to enter; no doubt that, living, he would go from honor to honor; no doubt that his fame and usefulness would grow and expand, no matter how rich the honors and deeds would grow and expand, no matter how rich the honors and deeds to his credit when the dread destroyer overtook him.

His career is hardly matched in the legislative history of the country. At least there are few to lay side by side with it; and with his honors full upon him, in the full possession of his magnificent abilities, surrounded by his beloved family and cherished friends, his warm heart ceased to beat and his great intellect was transferred to another scene of action. Long will his memory live transferred to another scene of action. Long will his memory live in the hearts and in the minds of all who knew him. Long will his services to his country be remembered gratefully by those who justly appreciate them, kindly even by those who believe he was wrong politically, because, above all things, he was an amiable man in high station, who as nearly avoided the giving of offense to any, and as uniformly treated all with consideration, kindness, and generosity, as any one of whom we have a record, or any one whom we may expect ever to meet.

Mr. Speaker, in contemplation of these sad events, which are occurring daily—for death is almost as old in the world as life; with the centuries full of life and death, and death, like birth, marking every hour and every minute of every day—we are brought, over and over, time and time again, to the strange, always old, and ever fresh reflections which will spring up when we gaze into the open grave, when we view the cold and lifeless clay which so recently was the mortal shelter of the departed spirit. Filled with that awe which the ages have not been able to banish, which perthat awe which the ages have not been able to banish, which pervades generation after generation, we solemnly ask whither has the spirit gone that lately tenanted this clay? What is there of existence beyond this world? Or is this all? Is this the end? We can not see through the veil just a little way before us, but thick enough to cloud the sight. Faith and Hope alone light up the gulf; alone give promise for the future.

Our friend has gone. His memory is with us, enshrined in our hearts. By his example we hope to profit. But again the query presses for answer, "If a man die, shall he live again?" The abandoned clay is in the churchyard at Americus, under sweet flowers.

doned clay is in the churchyard at Americus, under sweet flowers, with the soft Southern sky bending over all, but the spirit! What of it? Is that which was so much nothing now—vanished, dissolved, annihilated, as though it never was? Did its existence terminate with the life of the body? Whatever vaing lorious philosophers may say, man rebels at the suggestion that there is nothing beyond the grave. The hope, sometimes clung to in desperation, sometimes cherished in brightest anticipation, that there is a hereafter, and that men, though they die, yet live in that hereafter—we will not give that up. No philosophy, even if ripened in ages of calm reasoning, can banish it. It springs as an inheritance of humanity, as an instinct in the soul of every human being that breathes. We -our hopes, our affections, all that we hold near and dear in life, admonish us to believe, constrain us to believe—that our friend has not perished, but that in a higher and nobler sphere this great intellect, this tender, loving spirit shall flourish and expand and achieve new triumphs and perform new deeds of glory and of grace, while countless ages roll on into eternity.

Mr. DINSMORE. Mr. Speaker, in the presence of gentlemen here who were so much nearer to him, who were so fortunate as to have a more extended acquaintance with him, a closer relation, a longer term of service, I approach with diffidence and hesitation the honorable privilege which has been extended to me to speak in commemoration of a great man who made his life a part of the illustrious history of this House. It is not for me to criticise his great character. I leave that to those more capable of the task. I only desire, Mr. Speaker, to place upon record the humble tribute of one who had an acquaintance and friendship with him through a few years, but who, during that whole time, learned to honor, admire, and love him more and more.

It is at all times a delicate and a responsible undertaking to speak here for the permanent record upon the life and character of one who has been a member of this House. Men are too prone to run into extravagant expression, to magnify the virtues of the dead as well as disparage the merits of the living. What is said uead as well as disparage the merits of the living. What is said upon these occasions should be not only just to the dead, but faithful to truthful history. I fain would, in the few sentences which I shall speak to-day, do so as if in presence of the conscious spirit of our departed friend, knowing that he would have me give utterance to no sentiment that is not justified by his own life. Nor have I sought for information upon the detailed incilife. Nor have I sought for information upon the detailed incidents of his history, preferring to put into words the impressions that association with the man have made upon me, and to stop at that.

Duty does not demand of us to enlarge upon or even to refer to foibles of character; but, on the other hand, it is required of us that in the things we say we shall deal fairly and honestly with ourselves and with the dead. Therefore I shall endeavor to restrain my expressions within the bounds of temperate speech, within the limits which I believe would be indorsed by our great leader if he could be present and hear what is said of him.

Mr. Speaker, every man's life, in a narrower or wider sense, is an ideal for other men. Whether it be lowly or exalted, whether it be humble or great, there is among every man's associates some person who will look to him as an exemplar of his own conduct.

person who will look to him as an exemplar of his own conduct, who will find in him something worthy of imitation; and it is pleasant to think there are few men who do not thus exercise an influence for good upon mankind. The greatest good of a great life is its influence upon society. In the aspirations of early youth the boy selects some great character of history and tries to fashion himself upon that model, to build himself up to that level. What a grand figure have we here to inspire the ambition, the fortitude, the patriotism, and the integrity of American youth, aye, and of American manhood!

Mr. Speaker, I have had the honor, in the short time I have served in the House, to be associated with Mr. CRISP as Speaker of the House in one Congress and as the acknowledged leader of the minority in another. In every relation, in every emergency, in every situation it has appeared to me that he arose to the full stature of great manhood and capability of dealing with the difficult tasks that confronted him. As Speaker of the House, as cult tasks that confronted him. As Speaker of the House, as leader upon the floor, as a citizen in private life, he was always thoughtful and dignified, firm and unyielding in adherence to principle, and bold and fearless in defense of it, yet withal kind, gentle, courteous, and considerate. As Speaker, he was easy of access to every member of the House, even though the humblest, newest, most obscure member that had come into it—easy of anyonach and always having words of encouragement for those approach, and always having words of encouragement for those who sought to make themselves useful in the great House over which he had the honor to preside.

I have no doubt that each one having come into the House while he was Speaker has pleasant memories of his own experience and of the words of counsel he has given to him, and we cherish in our minds tender memories never to be effected. He was gootless. of the words of counsel he has given to him, and we cherish in our minds tender memories never to be effaced. He was gentle as a woman, simple in his demeanor, yet always calm, dignified, self-possessed, strong, and great. As leader of his party on the floor, he controlled his forces more by inspiring them with love and confidence than with fear of discipline. He was tolerant of the impulsive ardor of the inexperienced, of the "vaulting ambition" of youth that in this forum so often "doth o'erleap itself," and gave full value to the usefulness of every member.

But. Mr. Speaker, it was in the fury of polemic tempest that the

But, Mr. Speaker, it was in the fury of polemic tempest that the man rose superior to his fellows. The louder shrieked the winds of passion, the higher mounted the surging waves of partisan animosity, the greater appeared the man, the more capable of battling for his cause and of representing the issues for which he stood. This was one of the characteristics of the man—that he shone best under the greatest difficulties—and it seemed to require great and critical situations to bring out his intellectual capabilities. great and critical situations to bring out his intellectual qualities and his great power of leadership. And he has challenged the admiration not only of this side, but of that, and the whole country, for his great ability in performing the stern duties of presiding officer of this unruly House.

It perhaps accords with common observation that simplicity, gentleness, kindness, and unostentation are almost universally characteristics of the truly great man. Consciousness of acknowledged superiority of converting a president of leaderships and of the decomposition of the straight of the stra characteristics of the truly great man. Consciousness of acknowledged superiority, of security in a position of leadership, and of general approbation and respect generates charity toward rivals and consideration for opposition, and causes a great mind to contemn pompous parade and vulgar display, the artifice and the trick of the demagogue. Our departed friend despised all things of this character. He always drove straight for the mark, and by the ponderous power of logic and reason and superly to have and the ponderous power of logic and reason and appeal to honor and patriotism he hewed his way to the accomplishment of his great purpose, always unyielding, brave, and courageous, yet generous to opposition, and never forgetting to be courteous to all and considerate of all.

The privilege was accorded me of a slight glimpse into his domestic life; and it was there, Mr. Speaker, that the beautiful attributes of his character were brought most prominently into view. A devoted husband, a kind, gentle, and confiding father, his faithful wife adored him and his children hung upon him as the tendrils of the vine entwine themselves about the body of the great oak. Coming out of the war almost a youth, with no inheritance save an honorable soldier's name won in a cause that was lost; with no possession other than a tattered uniform and the blood, brain, and brawn that God had given him, he started out to make for himself a place in society and in his country's history. At the threshold there was linked with his life a young, confiding, loving woman, who in the flush of youthful affection defied the will of parental authority and joined herself to him to march by his side through the highways and byways and the uncertain incidents of this world.

When the time came, Mr. Speaker, when the blush of beauty had faded from her cheek and the form he loved in its youthful beauty had been wrenched in the cruel tortures of rheumatism, there was no lessening of the love which he gave to her in the bethere was no lessening of the love which he gave to her in the beginning, but with stronger and greater attachment he stood by her side, and when she held out her crippled hand the love light mounted to his eyes and he was wont to say: "But I will be your hand. You shall walk upon my feet." Those hands and those feet, Mr. Speaker, never failed her, but were, ever present to perform their affectionate offices. A beautiful intimacy existed between him and his children. Often have I looked up with admiration from my table at the hotel where we all lived when father and son, that son whom a loving records have sent here to fill the and son—that son whom a loving people have sent here to fill the vacant chair caused by the relentless hand of death, honoring both father and son in the deed and themselves as well—would walk in side by side, sometimes hand in hand, often arm in arm, before the assembled guests, utterly unconscious that any were looking with admiration upon the beautiful comradeship which existed between these two. And there are not many things more beautiful than confidence and fellowship between father and son nor anything better calculated to impress the son or lead him upward and on-ward in an honorable life and to an enviable old age.

But, Mr. Speaker, in the midst of his honors, in the very zenith of his usefulness and his splendid life, the scythe of the reaper has mown him down. He has left his footprints upon the highways of our nationality; he has engraved his name upon the tablets of his country's history; he has left behind him a name to be emulated and honored, and he has carried with him the respect of his enemies, the admiration and affection of his friends, the devotion of his family, the confidence and esteem of all; and what more, Mr. Speaker, can any man claim for himself upon going out from

Mr. BUCK. Mr. Speaker, I had hoped to be able to add in my best voice to the tributes that are paid to-day to the honored dead. But the elements seem against me; and I do not know whether I shall be able even to make myself heard.

The propriety, Mr. Speaker, that some one young in membership in this House should say something of that great public servant whose memory and whose deeds are here commemorated must be the apology for my presuming to add my humble voice to these tributes. When Hamlet is challenged to the duel with Laertes, Osrick says to him: "You are not ignorant of what excellence Laertes is." Hamlet replies: "I dare not confess that, lest I should compare with him in excellence; but to know a man well were to know himself.

There is therefore in these things a semblance, if not a substance,

There is therefore in these things a semblance, if not a substance, of self-praise which under any circumstances would make me modest in speaking of the great dead whom we honor here to-day. I anticipated, however, the situation. I knew that members of this House who knew him better than I and were better able to speak his praises and display the beauties of his character would precede me and I would be relieved of anything more than the expression of that impression which I gladly and truthfully convey and which it was my good fortune to imbibe from him during the short period that it has been my happiness to know him. It has, perhaps, been my good luck that in this very short period I have learned to know more of him than happens in the average intercourse between members of this House. And, without repeating what has been said, I can only say that, perhaps by operation ing what has been said, I can only say that, perhaps by operation of that inexplicable intuition by which soul communicates with soul, I received the impressions of that greatness of character, that firmness of mind, that consistency of purpose, that devotion to duty which distinguished Mr. Crisp and which language can not exaggerate. I will ask the privilege, in view of the fact that the memory of the dead and his deeds are on record, to pronounce a few reflections incident to this service which, perhaps, also convey

I have heard criticised—I may say ridiculed and condemned—the practice not only of the Houses of Congress, but of courts and other public bodies, to spend hours like these in eulogies upon the dead. Well, it is in the nature of things. There is evil as there is good. The scoffer is at hand to tread upon the heels of the reverent. The jester and the clown are by in the motley mystery of human life to mix their colors in the garments of wisdom and of dignity. But these things come not from men who see "books" in the running brooks, sermons in stones, and good in everything."

I am the spirit that denies

Says the arch scoffer-

Part of the part am I; once all, in primal night— Part of the darkness which brought forth the light.

Why, sir, that is the struggle, the epic of man's redemption, to overcome the spirit of denial and survive godlike in the prevalence of truth. And truth prevails and is evidenced to-day when this House of Representatives turns aside from its usual business and from its public service to lay the flowers of tribute upon the tomb of the departed dead. As we look down the ages and let pass before the view the toils and the struggles, the failures and the successes, the lights and the shades of human character and effort; and above all, when we look into our own souls and try to square ambition with achievement, desire with consummation, hope with possibility—aye, all the contradictions and paradoxes of conduct and aspiration, we do rise from the contemplation with the conviction that through all there is a higher destiny: And even in the blankness of despair and the tragedy of hopelessness, and we exclaim with Hamlet in the ecstacy and exultation of our

What a piece of work is a man! How noble in reason! how infinite in faculties! in form, and moving, how express and admirable! in action, how like an angel! in apprehension, how like a god!

Are not these thoughts justified when we recall that majestic, that self-controlled, that courageous, that manly figure that drew by his magnetic look the attention of his followers and the admiration, if not the approbation, of his opponents? Public service should, as a principle in our country, be always commended. Few men enter politics from purely selfish motives. They do not find, if they enter from selfish motives, what they seek. They soon find that it is a service and a sacrifice, not a gathering of fruits; and whatever the original motive may be with which public men begin to develop themselves, there is always at the bottom the sentiment of patriotism, a desire and an ambition to serve our fellow-men, to be workers in the field of progress and of good toward our country. The wholly selfish man rarely troubles himself about public life. He nurses his personal comfort, and concerns himself no further about the law and the liberty of the land than is necessary to protect his own rights and the pursuit of happiness as he understands it. Happily for the human race and happily for this great country and the people of the United States, mankind stands vindicated in the high shrines of the temples of duty and devotion. It awes the scoffer into ineffectual retreat. It shoves by the selfish. The history of man and human progress is an eternal story of sacrifice, devotion, and of self-denial

We know where in this struggle the departed dead stood; and let us reflect, as has been said, that if he does not take his place among those meteoric successes which come from genius, yet he ranks among those men whose names live in history, not by the noise which they have made for themselves only, as the Cæsars and the Napoleons, but in the rhythm of those gentle streams and strains that flow from their hearts' sympathy for the welfare of markind. We admire genius but genius is the eiff of Colorather. mankind. We admire genius, but genius is the gift of God rather than the virtue of attainment. We look up to a Homer, a Dante, a Shakespeare, and a Goethe as to the inspired of God; but when, in solemn judgment, we pass on the merits of men in the light of their practical service and usefulness, the civilized acclaim goes up to the jurist and the soldier, the philosopher and the legislator, the inventor and the reformer, as the pillars on which the temple of development is erected. Behold Solon and Leonidas, Guttenberg and Luther, Franklin and Washington! And, Mr. Speaker, if not among these men as leaders, still among them as a class if not among these men as leaders, still among them as a class we place the name of Hon. Charles F. Crisp.

Not to repeat a threadbare quotation (if Shakespeare ever can be threadbare), he was of that robust directness which is always honest and honorable; firm as a rock and candid as the light. Aggressive, perhaps, at times to the point of severity, he was ever consistent and conscientious. Self-reliant without ostentation, fixed to his purpose like the northern star; his ambition cast in the high mold of patriotism and general welfare, he will hold his place, all in all, in that rank of men of giant and heroic mold, of all the elements of manhood well compact, of which the majestic Brutus will ever be the literary and historic type.

Mr. Speaker, it is grateful to render these testimonials of affection and approval to the departed dead. It is grateful to live with them—to remember them, as it were, in the pure atmosphere of spir-to remember them, as it were, in the pure atmosphere of spiritual conception, gathering the good they have done into tangible shape as examples for emulation and pledges for the growth and happiness of the future of mankind. So with our honored dead. happiness of the future of mankind. So with our honored dead. However inadequate our tributes may be—while what he leaves behind him in the memory of his perfect character and patriotic service is already secure for all time—they give vital movement to the good which he accomplished; and its present influence will go out at once to the American people, that they may know and feel how glorious a thing is the perfect American citizen.

In this great republic of humanity, where, in every village churchyard, the willow shades the graves of sovereign masters; where every—even the humblest—heart may swell with the passions of a destiny grander and nobler than the majesty of kings, public virtue is a public need and public recognition a duty and a consecration.

consecration.

The republics of antiquity made their great men and their heroes gods, not only to honor the dead, but to incite the living to emulate their illustrious careers. The great people of these United States, for once and ever, should turn back the slander that republics are ungrateful. Let them ever recognize greatness and reward service, honor character, and glorify achievement. With that will come regard for constituted authority and reverence for law, which means peace and order. So shall we develop the perfect citizenship and consummate the highest aims of self-government. So shall we adorn our liberties and make sacred our sense of jus-So shall we adorn our liberties and make sacred our sense of justice. And so, Mr. Speaker, and so best, will be served and honored the glorious dead, whose strong arms were their country's, and whose heart throbs were the aspirations of humanity. Amongst these, transfigured in the light of immortality, will stand CHARLES F. CRISP. He will live long in the affections of his people, and the virtues of his patriotism and the record of his services will shine out amongst the brightest in the uplifting spheres of human liberty and the property and the erty and the unmatched heavens of American citizenship. the living render their devotions, that the dead may be at rest.

Such honors Ilium to her hero paid, And peaceful sleeps the mighty Hector's shade.

by the leaders of his party in this House, full of life and hope, of vitality and courage, yet receiving all with that cordiality, that easiness of access, that charm of manner that was characteristic of the man, and was but the outward reflection of an inward kindliness of heart.

It seems but yesterday. It is but a few short years as days are counted, and yet, within that space of time, we have made much history. We have seen many hopes fade, we have witnessed many misfortunes; but nothing sadder than the event that draped that desk in mourning, and cut short in mid course the high career of

CHARLES F. CRISP.

Truly, Mr. Speaker, these things are beyond human understanding. He was surrounded by a loving family, by troops of friends. He had the esteem and good wishes of thousands of his fellowcountrymen. He stood just upon the threshold of yet further official preferment and honor from that great State that has so often honored him and that he has so honored, when, at the very noon time of his life, when his sun seemed to be at the very zenith, suddenly it declined and went out.

suddenly it declined and went out.

Sir, it is not merely an individual loss that we lament here today. It is the loss to a great party, and the loss to his country.
When the leader of one of the great parties of this country, full of experience, yet in the prime of life, full of capability and patriotism, of vigor and of force, and yet conservative as Mr. CRISP was, is taken away, his loss is at any time a calamity in such a country as ours. But at such a day as this, when dissensions and discorde distract use, when look where we will we see but these discords distract us; when, look where we will, we see but threat-ening clouds; when all circumstances call upon us to realize the need of those high attributes which the great State of Georgia—which he represented, and where I had the honor to be born—has engraved upon her coat of arms as the chief supporters of the governmental fabric, justice, wisdom, and moderation, how great is our loss in such a man! I had hoped much from the wisdom and the moderation of Mr. Crisp. He was never a theorist or an extremist. He hoped for the perpetuity of his party, which he regarded as one of the instruments of good government, and he loved his country. With his wide knowledge of public men, with a high career before him, with the open field of opportunity, I looked for years of usefulness and honor, in which he would have not only advanced his own reputation, but in which he would have been of most material assistance to his people, to the preservation of his party, and to securing the prosperity and welfare of his country. But, sir, that, too, has passed. When I rose here, it was not with the idea that anything I could say would be of any consequence to his fame, or add aught to him. He has written his own memorial in the records of this House and on the pages of his country's history. When I was asked to assist in these services, I felt it to be a high honor. Others who have been much longer here have dwelt upon his qualities and upon his course in this House. I can add nothing qualities and upon his course in this House. I can add nothing to that; but to one characteristic it is peculiarly appropriate that I should render my testimony. I came to the Fifty-third Congress, a new member, comparatively a young man, and I know that everyone who participated in that Congress and who so came here, will join me in the tribute which I pay to Mr. Crisp when I say that his generous hand, guided by that kindly heart, held wide open always, when it was possible, the gates of opportunity to the inexperienced, and to those who could do naught for him, but for whom he could do so much. It is a pleasure to me indeed to-day to be able to testify in some small degree my gratitude for that constant kindness. He has gone beyond the reach of our words, but he is not dead. "As the tall ship, whose lofty prow shall never stem the billows more," he has merely sought a haven of rest. No man is dead while he is borne in affectionate or grateful remembrance, and, Mr. Speaker, Charles F. Crisp will live long in the hearts of many.

long in the hearts of many.

Mr. SWANSON. Mr. Speaker, a great public career has ended. One of the foremost public men of our country has been stricken down. One of the greatest parliamentary leaders of this age is no more. One of the shining lights of this House, whose splendid achievements have and will ever shed luster upon it, is no longer with us. The recognized leader of this side of the House, who counseled and directed us, has departed and left us to mourn a loss which is irreparable. A great heart, warm, generous, kind and magnetic, no longer pulsates. A mind, clear, strong, and masculine, of great depth and grasp, no longer gives us its scintillations of thought. A tongue of great eloquence and power, which so often has stirred and swayed this House, is now silent in death. A life in which can be traced much of shadow and shine, much of privation and much of triumphs, inspiring in its successes over difficulties, admirable in development and attained proportions, has terminated, and we to-day pause in our deliberations to pay merited tribute to and to do reverence to one who has left behind him such a life. I rise to deliver no elaborate eulo-gium, others have done that, but simply on behalf of my State and myself to place a modest chaplet of love and admiration upon the grave of Charles F. Crisp. Virginia has ever felt toward Crisp an affection akin to that entertained for one of her own distinguished sons. When the storms of the late civil war burst over this country, Crisp, then a youth in Virginia, enlisted in one of her regiments and became a gallant and brave soldier in defense of her soil. These years of his, consisting of triumphs and priva-tions, of glory and disappointments, are interwoven with the his-tory of Virginia and her sons. No section rejoiced more than she at his increasing success and fame; now in mourning his loss she is second to none.

Mr. Speaker, Emerson, one of the greatest of American thinkers and writers, has said:

A man's fortunes are the fruits of his character. A man's friends are his

How fully is this truth illustrated in the life of Judge CRISP. His life was one crowned with great fortune, blessed with friends innumerable. Thus we find in him a sterling, honest character, a strong masculine mind, blended with a warm, generous, magnetic heart. To be great and to be loved as much as admired; to netic heart. To be great and to be loved as much as admired; to wield great power and influential leadership, with each day bringing an increasing devotion, indicates the possession of the highest order of intellect, the very best qualities of heart. Judge Crisp possessed all this. No leader ever enjoyed in a greater degree the combined confidence and affection of his followers than Judge Crisp did that of his party associates in this House. We all felt he was our individual friend and our matchless party leader. We shall ever hold his personal traits in loving remembrance, his public career in proud recollection. Who can ever forget that straight, strong form, that handsome face, that unfailing courtesy, that warm grasp of the hand, that genial, pleasant smile, that carried sunshine and happiness wherever he went?

Mr. Speaker, Judge Crisp will ever be remembered for his participation in exciting scenes and debates in this House which have

Mr. Speaker, Judge CRISP will ever be remembered for his participation in exciting scenes and debates in this House which have become historical. Our memory and the imagination of our successors, aided by tradition and history, will ever recall his wonderful powers as a parliamentary debater. With a voice at times slightly tinged with hesitancy, but clear, strong, and resonant, with a presence pleasing and attractive, with thoughts pertinent and incisive, a repartee quick and pointed; cool, calm, and collected amid the greatest excitement and passion, he was well equipped for the rough-and-tumble debates of this House, and it was in these that he showed himself preeminently great. This was in these that he showed himself preeminently great. This House has had few if any Speakers superior to him. He will be classed among its greatest and most noted. As Speaker he presided with dignity and grace, transacted business promptly, decided points of order quickly, was firm and decisive. He was courteous, deferential, and fair to his political opponents. His whole public life is without spot or blemish. For four years, as Speaker, an office in responsibility and power second only to that of the Presidency, he practically controlled the legislation of this country. He exercised the vast powers thus placed in his hands country. He exercised the vast powers thus placed in his hands with prudent care, patriotically and conscientiously, for what he conceived the best interest of his country. No corrupt job, no victous, no unjust legislation ever received countenance from him.

Mr. Speaker, the life of Judge CRISP is instructive. It comes like an inspiration to the poor boy, situated as he was, possessed of high yearning, yet confronted with poverty and difficulties, and tells him not to despair, but to build high the pedestal of his ambition. It teaches the ambitious that great success and permanent fame can only come to those who have clean hands, pure hearts, and patriotic motives. It proclaims how a legislator can and should close his ears to the seductions of the rich few, but can and should listen to the heart beat of toiling and struggling humanity.

Mr. LACEY. Mr. Speaker, it is fitting that in the hurry and bustle of public affairs we should pause for a time and remember that all men are but mortal. The painful truth is thrust upon us from time to time as one of our associates falls out of the ranks. Our friend, whose death brings us again face to face with the great problem that we all in time must solve, had risen high among his fellow-men. There is but one official place among his countrymen higher than that to which he climbed.

The Speakership, it has been often said, is the second place in this country in rank, if its power and influence be considered. The General Commanding the Army holds a more desirable place, because his office tenure is for life. The Chief Justice and Vice-President both take a higher rank theoretically, but the actual second place in the nation is that of the Speakership of the House of Representatives.

All revenue bills must originate in the House, and that body in the most direct degree represents the people. Their term of office is so short that its members are kept in constant touch with the people. A member of Congress is elected in November and does not, except in case of an extra session, take his seat until thirteen months after his election. He has hardly entered upon his duties until the selection of his successor begins to be agitated. In every official act he is face to face with his constituents.

The supreme position in a body of this kind is a leadership of the people themselves.

The House contains 357 members, and so large a body would be hopelessly inefficient and unwieldy if great power were not lodged in the Speaker's hands. He selects the committees and designates the seniority of their members and even appoints their chairmen. The committee is the workshop of the House, and no member can accomplish any results in his legislative work unless the interpretation of the House, and no member can accomplish any results in his legislative work unless that the professional designation of the House and the committee is the workshop of the House, and no member can accomplish any results in his legislative work unless that the professional designation of the House and the committee is the workshop of the House, and no member can accomplish any results in his legislative work unless that the committee is the workshop of the House, and no member can accomplish any results in his legislative work unless that the committee is the workshop of the House, and no member can accomplish any results in his legislative work unless that the committee is the workshop of the House, and no member can accomplish any results in his legislative work unless that the committee is the workshop of the House, and no member can accomplish any results in his legislative work unless that the committee is the workshop of the House, and no member can accomplish the committee is the workshop of the House and the committee is the workshop of the House and the committee is the workshop of the House and the committee is the workshop of the House and the committee is the workshop of the House and the committee is the workshop of the House and the committee is the workshop of the House and the committee is the workshop of the House and the committee is the workshop of the House and the committee is the workshop of the House and the committee is the workshop of the House and the committee is the workshop of the House and the committee is the workshop of the House and the committee is the workshop of the House and the committee member can accomplish any results in his legislative work unless he is assigned to committees in which he is able to perform his chosen work. He is like an actor in a play who has been given a walking part if he is placed upon committees where he has no opportunities for action, or in a line of work for which he is unprepared or to which he is unadapted.

The Speaker may, in the very beginning of a session of Congress, place a member where he may have opportunities, or so shelve him that he can accomplish nothing. This power extends to the minority membership as well as to those of the dominant party, and its influence is felt in every Congressional district in the Union.

But the power of the Speaker does not end here. He has the

But the power of the Speaker does not end here. He has the right to recognize members upon the floor and he may refuse to do so, and there is no redress. He can shape the course of legislation by giving opportunities to present the measures which he may approve. He is the chairman of the Committee on Rules, and this committee is composed of only five members, three of whem are set of his own party. In selecting this committee he is and this committee is composed of only live members, three or whom are of his own party. In selecting this committee he is practically enabled to bring forward any measure he may wish at almost any time, and the House can only prevent action by voting against the present consideration of the proposed measure.

Usually less than 10 per cent of all the proposed legislation in Congress is ever considered at all, owing to the enormous amount

Congress is ever considered at all, owing to the enormous amount of business brought before that body.

This being the case, of necessity there must be a power and discretion resting somewhere by which the necessary business may be selected and considered out of the great mass of the measures introduced. In the last Congress presided over by Mr. Criss, 11,797 Senate and House bills were presented, and of these 563 public and 593 private bills were enacted into laws. Congress is generally entitled to more credit for the bills that it permits to die than for any other part of its work, so that the failure to consider bills is not usually an evil. The power of the Speaker to prevent legislation is therefore a most important function. The Speaker has the power to delegate his authority temporarily as presiding has the power to delegate his authority temporarily as presiding officer by selecting some other member for that purpose, and he also names the chairmen of the Committee of the Whole from time to time.

New members are apt to chafe at first because of the extraordinary powers of the presiding officer, but upon further service they realize that in so large an organization, having such a multiplicity of important business, the system of which they complained at first is essential to the transaction of the business of

A Congress which must consider the appropriation and expenditure of from eight hundred to a thousand millions of dollars in two years must be under a complete system of rules, or they could not have sufficient time for their duties. But, with all his power, the Speaker is still the servant of the House, and con-stantly recognizes that fact. Strong and able men are almost in-variably selected for this place, and they are almost always strong

The responsibility of Congress to the people, and the fact that the Speaker himself must also stand for reelection in the near the Speaker himself must also stand for reelection in the near future, places him in a position where he must not abuse his power. He not only is in a place where his own future and that of most of the members is in his hands, but the future of his party is also largely dependent upon the wisdom and skill with which he exercises his important prerogatives. He can shape the course of his party with almost as much certainty as the President himself.

The speakership of the English House of Commons, on the other hand, is not political, but is rather judicial in its character. The ministry upon the floor of that chamber are responsible to the House and to the country, and the speaker's duties are more like

House and to the country, and the speaker's duties are more like those of a mere presiding officer in a court of justice. All who have seen service in this House will readily concede to our presiding officer a place second only to that of the President of the United States.

Mr. Crisp's first term of office followed immediately after the Fifty-first Congress, where the powers of the office had been so fully demonstrated by Speaker Reed. The attention of the country had been called in an unusual degree to the Speaker's chair, and Mr. Crisp took the place at a time when the people looked upon the office with a full appreciation of its importance. Having personally assailed the prerogatives of the position when in the minority, he was embarrassed in his first term by his own utterances in debate. But in his second term, when his party was distracted by questions which almost threatened its existence, he was tracted by questions which almost threatened its existence, he was compelled to exercise to the uttermost the very powers that he had so severely criticised, even adopting, in a modified form, the same rules that had given a nickname to his Republican predecessor.

Speaker CRISP was too great a man to allow the reins to slip from the hands of his party in the mere effort to be consistent. He recognized the necessity of adopting methods which would enable the dominant party to enact the measures for which that party must answer to this country. Those who served with him knew how ably he conducted himself in the most trying and difficult positions in which he had been placed.

While the Speaker's chair is the seat of influence, yet in a stirring popular assembly it is the object of constant partisan assault, and he whose memory we commemorate to-day in turn was the attacking and the assaulted party. But it is one of the pleasant features of parliamentary life that partisan foes are so often personal friends. Judge CRISP loved a good fighter, and was a hard hitter himself.

hitter himself.

His career is a striking example of the possibilities of life in our Republic.

In the Fifty-third Congress GALUSHA A. GROW was sworn in by Speaker Crisp as a member at large from the State of Pennsylvania. This was an impressive act and brought into comparison two great periods in the history of our people. In 1861 Mr. Grow was chosen as the war-time Speaker of this House. Mr. Crisp was then a young lieutenant in a company of Confederate infan-was then a young neutenant in a company of Confederate infantry, and the civil war was raging with all its fury.

In 1864 Mr. Crisp was a prisoner of war, and was not released until after hostilities had ceased, in June, 1865. Now, after thirty years, the veteran statesman from Pennsylvania returned again to the halls of Congress, and the young lieutenant of 1861 had become the Speaker of the House of Representatives of our reunited country and administered the oath of office to his predecessor, the ex-Speaker of that Congress which had enacted the measures to prosecute the war.

Who could say in the face of such an event as this that we have not laid aside the prejudice and bitterness of the struggle of 1861? And as a citizen of Iowa I wish to lay a tribute upon the tomb of the gallant Georgian, remembering only that we were both in a higher sense fellow-citizens of the United States of America.

My first service in this House was in the Elections Committee with our deceased friend in the heated and stormy sessions of the Fifty-first Congress. Election contests are proverbial for the arity-first Congress. Election contests are proverbial for the partisan feeling that they engender.

Mr. Crisp on these occasions showed himself a sturdy partisan, and it was in these controversies that he won the influence with his party associates that brought him to the Speaker's chair in the succeeding Congress. He was a good parliamentarian, subtle, quick-witted, and always ready for any occasion that might arise, and his party friends rallied around him with that instinct which teaches men to involuntarily recognize a leader. teaches men to involuntarily recognize a leader.

In his private relations he was an agreeable and pleasing gentleman, and made friends on both sides of this Chamber at a time when the political forces were nearly equally divided, and when party feeling ran high. But all his conflicts of the past, in the tented field, at the bar, on the hustings, and in the halls of Congress, are ended. Already pointed out by common consent for a certain election to a seat in the Senate, he was struck down in the very zenith of his career, mourned by those who knew him, of all people of his old district to elect his son and namesake to fill the seat which his death had rendered vacant, and this pleasing circumstance showed howstrong a hold he had upon the constituency which he had so long represented, and how fully they appreciated the beauty and purity of his private life and domestic relations.

And the applause with which members of all parties greeted the son upon taking the oath of office showed with what kindly remembrance they held the sire. It was a graceful and gracious act on the part of the generous

Mr. BELL of Colorado. Mr. Speaker, during the latter part of October last, while crossing the plains of Nebraska, I glanced at a morning paper. My eyes immediately fastened upon a familiar picture with an inscription below, "Ex-Speaker Carsy is dead!" That sad announcement was followed by the crowding upon me of the many reasons he had for coveting a long life. I was forcibly reminded that nature had generously given him a comely and commanding presence; that his nature had been formed into such a happy blending of sunshine, good fellowship, and frank hospitality that his society was greatly sought, and life should have been to him an unbroken pleasure; that through his many commendable attributes he had become preeminently the favored son of his own great State, and was in sight of the goal of his political ambition—the United States Senate—when death overtook him and sent him thither. But sad as these misfortunes are for him and his immediate friends, the sad calamity is infinitely more deplorable as a great public loss.

The death of an individual rarely disturbs the general current of the orderly course of human action, but occasionally one does fall by the wayside that leaves such a void as is difficult to fill. Such a one we lament to-day. His mental alignment approximated the perfect equilibrium. No one faculty had been dwarfed to give a surplus to some other. Therefore, he never startled the to give a surplus to some other. Therefore, he never startled the world with any phenomenal outbursts of genius, nor did he ever disappoint his friends by descending to mediocrity. He was of the solid, even-tempered, well-balanced line of men to whom only can the safety and perpetuity of a great country be confidently intrusted.

It is true he was imbued with a laudable ambition to serve his countrymen in public places, not for pecuniary compensation, as mercenary aspirations were beneath his high standard. He was not ambitious that he might revel in the glare of official society, as such were too empty and sterile for his strong, common-sense view of the real pleasures and amenities of human life. He sought to serve his fellows because they evinced a desire for his services to serve his fellows because they evinced a desire for his services and because he believed that he could serve them well, and he believed that his policies enacted into law would inure to the greatest good to the greatest and most deserving number.

The Populist party in Congress, for whom I speak as well as for myself, has every reason to pay high tribute to his memory. While Speaker, we were few in number, misunderstood, and grossly misrepresented by politicians and the partisan press, often intentionally, and more often through ignorance of our intentions and aspirations; but he was too large to be tainted with bigotry or intolerance, the worstenemies of mankind. He never wavered a hair's breadth in doing us complete justice at all times. We never visited him at his private apartments that his easy geniality hair's breadth in doing us complete justice at all times. We never visited him at his private apartments that his easy geniality and open hospitality did not convince us that he fully recognized that he was Speaker of the whole House. We never approached him in the Speaker's chair that the hand of good fellowship and some friendly verbal greeting was not extended. He never denied our petitions without giving such cogent reasons therefor and in so becoming a manner that we acquiesced in the conclusion that he could not be expected to do less. He granted our supplications in such an unostentatious manner that we were sent away feeling that a right and not a favor had been granted. He possessed none of the elements of the bigot—never fastened any doors between him and the public. He preferred to be with any doors between him and the public. He preferred to be with and of the people. None knew better than he the danger of tyranand of the people. None knew better than he the danger of tyran-nical majorities visiting oppression and injustice on struggling minorities. He was never a representative of any special class or section of the country. He was a statesman of the highest and purest type, and a representative of the whole people of the whole country. In this matchless contest for the supremacy of the people the loss of such a representative, so pure a type of the founders of this Government, is indeed a great public calamity. When I returned to Washington and met the colored boy who used to care for his room, with moistened eyes, he said, "We have sustained a great loss since you went away in the death of Speaker CRISP." He added, "Everything that knew that man loved him."

That is a greater eulogy than I am capable of pronouncing. After all is said and done, the real character of a man is most truly photographed and known in his home life and by those who serve him.

Mr. Speaker, when the angel of death re-Mr. WHEELER. ceived the spirit of Charles Frederick Crisp, a man was taken from this world who had won the love of his State, the confidence and admiration of the entire South, and the respect of our whole

As a native Georgian, I take special pride in the great distinction achieved by him whose death we mourn.

Mr. Crise always performed every duty in a most creditable manner. When little more than a boy, he was a brave soldier and officer in the Army of Northern Virginia, following the sword of Robert Lee in the many battles fought by that illustrious commander. With the return of peace he retired to his home and became a lawyer, respected for his ability, learning, and fidelity. As solicitor-general of his district and as judge of one of the superior courts of Georgia, he earned the highest commendations

He was twice elected to preside over the popular branch of the Congress of the United States, and during a service of fourteen years in this body he certainly reached a most exalted place among the statesmen of America.

His reputation as a parliamentarian and a just presiding officer had extended throughout the civilized world.

While in the midst of the performance of these high duties, he was appointed and urged by the governor of Georgia to accept a seat in the Senate of the United States, but his high conception of the duty he owed to those who had elected him to preside over this body constrained him to decline the proffered honor; but the people of Georgia, appreciating his noble character and superb qualities, seized the first opportunity after the expiration of his term as Speaker to do him honor, and with almost unprecedented unanimity elected him to the office which but a short time before he had felt it his duty to decline—the highest office in their gift—one which he was qualified in an eminent degree to adorn; but just as the decree of the people was to be recorded it was met by the dread messanger. Death the dread messenger, Death.

Well may it be said of him, right worthily he fought life's battle and won his way to fame; and the people who loved to honor him in life will revere and cherish his memory in death, and his name will be arrayed among those illustrious statesmen of Georname will be arrayed among those illustrious statesmen of Georgia who did their full part in perfecting the system of government which has built up this great and prosperous Republic.

In the midst of his strength and usefulness, before age had made slow his footstep, or chilled the warmth of his heart, or dimmed the brightness of his eye, or withered the brilliancy of the intellect which had served his country and his State so long and so well, surrounded by the shadows and hills and sunshine of his own beloved Georgia, in the midst of his countrymen and the beloved family who knew his greatness best of all, he fought his last battle with sickness and pain, and answered to the roll call of the Great Captain and passed from the mystery of this life upon earth into that greater life "whose portals we call death," though there can be no death to those who leave their names enshrined in the hearts of their countrymen. of their countrymen.

In our journey of life, in the halls of Congress, in his old accustomed place, in the sunny vales of his home in the far Southland, we shall greet Charles Frederick Crisp no more. He has met his "Pilot face to face," and has crossed over the river and is at "rest under the shades of the trees."

I can but echo the words of one who knew him well: "Over his dreaming face, in the shadow of the Georgia hills, we say good night to him, but good morning to his enduring fame."

Mr. WOODARD. Mr. Speaker, it is a loving service to those

Mr. WOODARD. Mr. Speaker, it is a loving service to those who knew, loved, and honored him to speak in memory of the life and character of Judge Crise.

As a private soldier he was brave and faithful; as judge of the superior court he shed luster upon the judiciary of his State; as a member of Congress he was long the trusted leader of his party; as Speaker he was a master of parliamentary procedure, a model residue officer five and resolute but lawys court court with an presiding officer, firm and resolute, but always courteous; with an attractive personality, indomitable courage, great prudence, an earnest partisan because he believed the policies of his party, if enacted into laws, would redound to the honor and welfare of his country; a statesman in its best and broadest sense, his party and his country have sustained a great loss in his untimely death.

I do not propose, Mr. Speaker, to review in detail the early history or services of Judge Crisp. That has been done by others who have known him longer, and who have, in appropriate and eloquent words, portrayed his exalted worth as a citizen, his valuable services to his party and country.

I first met him at the beginning of the Fifty-third Congress, when I entered upon my service as a member of this House, and my admiration for his character as a member of the services as a member of the service as my admiration for his character as a man and as a statesman in-my admiration for his character as a man and as a statesman increased with the passing years.

When but a boy, only 16 years of age, animated by that patriotic spirit which followed him through life, we find him a volunteer soldier in the Confederate army, where he served until the end of the war. Immediately after its close he commenced the study of law, and in a few years attained a high rank in his chosen profession. He was elected solicitor-general and judge of the superior court, and while on the bench was elected to Congress. He had conved in the House but a short time when his conscious shilly served in the House but a short time when his conspicuous ability served in the House but a short time when his conspicuous ability pointed him out, as if by intuition, as the leader of his party on the floor. Having been assigned by common consent to that honorable and responsible position, it was manifest that he was a born leader, equal to every emergency, always ready, always wise, always able, and ever true to his convictions of duty. While possessed of that firmness and true courage so necessary to constitute a successful leader, Judge Crisp was withal a modest gentleman, and never forgot the amenities and courtesies due his opponents. On all occasions he exhibited those manly and gentle virtues which never fail to win our warmest admiration and tenderest regard.

In the Fifty-second and Fifty-third Congresses he was elected

In the Fifty-second and Fifty-third Congresses he was elected Speaker of this House, and in that delicate and responsible posi-Speaker of this House, and in that delicate and responsible position he more than sustained his justly earned reputation for ability, firmness, fairness, and courtesy. His record as presiding officer will compare favorably with that of the most distinguished parliamentarians who preceded him. In every position he was called upon to fill, Judge Crisp measured up to the fullest expectations of his friends, and his whole life affords a bright example for the young men of our country to emulate.

As a soldier, as a citizen, as a judge, as a member of Congress, as Speaker, as the great leader of a great party, he was ever faithful to himself, to his people, to his party, to his country, and to his Maker. Those high, noble, and sincere virtues which made Judge Crisp a conspicuous leader in American politics and constituted him a pure and unsullied statesman were a part of his nature, and they appear with equal beauty and brightness in his private character. In all the private and social relations of life the same purity of character, honesty of purpose, and noble aspirations which distinguished his public life made him a model citizen, a true and constant friend, a loving and tender husband, an affectionate father, and a Christian gentleman.

zen, a true and constant friend, a loving and tender husband, an affectionate father, and a Christian gentleman.

It was my fortune, Mr. Speaker, to be constantly associated with him during the last four years, as we boarded at the same hotel in this city. The more I saw of him the more I appreciated his high qualities and the beauties and virtues of his private life. During the latter part of the first session of this Congress the health of Judge CRISP became impaired, but his friends hoped his suffering would be only temporary. After adjournment he sought relief in the pure and invigorating climate of western North Carolina; but the disease which had attacked him was a fatal malady, and his indomitable will and brave heart struggled in vain against the inevitable result. Death came to him in the very zenith of his career. It came to him when his party and country seemed to be in special need of his wise counsel and safe leadership. It came when he was so soon to receive at the hands of a grateful people the high office which had been the ambition of his life. Why should he have been taken at this time? We would not question God's providences, so mysterious in so many ways. has it been said by another: Beautifully

There is an existence beyond the present life where all shall be made clear. We shall see as we are seen; we shall know even as we are known. Mr. Dickens made the poor, idiotic Barnaby and the coarse, strong Hugh, of the Maypole Inn, hold conversation about the visible wonders of the heavens, and they inquire of each other whence comes the light of the innumerable stars that dot the skies. When they were both under sentence of death, and just before the dawn of day were led across the prison yard toward the place of execution, Barnaby, looking upward toward the myriad lights of the night, exclaims.

exclaims:
"Hugh, we shall know what makes the stars shine now."

Our faith here to-day ought to exceed that of the poor simpleton created by the imagination of the novelist. Not only shall we know what makes the stars shine, but all the wonders of the vast universe shall be open to our search. Our homes shall be among the heavens; the problems that our burdened souls have studied so despairingly shall be happily solved, and we may even become participators in the knowledge and power of Him—

Whose power o'er moving worlds presides, Whose voice created and whose wisdom guides.

To this felicity the friend we now with tenderness remember has already fully advanced. We would not, if we could, bring him back to earth, slowly and painfully to die again. We wait, reverently and hopefully, for the summons to us to join him in some star that is shining, from eternity to eternity, with unfading luster in God's illimitable wilderness of worlds.

Mr. LAYTON. Mr. Speaker, what is an ideal man? Who is a perfect man? Who can fully describe him? Where can he be found? These questions present a fruitful and varied field for found? These questions present a fruitful and varied field for the writer and speaker, so broad and varied, in fact, that I do not deem it wise or appropriate to enter thereon or therein save for the purpose only of making a few observations this afternoon more or less pertinent to the occasion.

Hence I would inquire, What is your ideal of an American statesman? Where say you he can be found? How would you describe him to your hearers? Have you ever seen his counterpart? Is he now living or dead? Should these inquiries be addressed to myself, I would be constrained to answer in substance: I have never yet seen in its entirety my ideal of an American states. I have never yet seen in its entirety my ideal of an American states-man. Neither do I know where he can be found, nor can I fully man. Neither do I know where he can be found, nor can I fully or satisfactorily describe him to you. Yet I well remember one who came so near to my ideal that I do not now hesitate to accept him as such. But with a sadness I can but illy express, I would say he is no longer living.

Perhaps my ideal is too exalted. Perhaps, in fact, he never existed, can not, nor ever will. If so, I much regret it, for as I now view it in the light of more or less intercourse and association with more of the same course and association.

now view it in the light of more of less intercourse and associa-tion with many of our American statesmen, during the last six years especially, I do not regard my ideal as unreasonable or im-possible of attainment. And as an American citizen who loves and admires her men and her institutions, and believes in her continuing progress and advancement, it affords me great pleas-ure to say that while none of her statesmen of my acquaintance come up to the exact mark or line, yet so many come so near it that I shall ever refer to the fact with pride and satisfaction. So near have so many come to this exacting ideal that I can have no fear for the future growth and welfare of our now great Republic under their continuing care and guidance.

In my humble judgment an ideal, a real American statesman, in these times especially, when aristocracy and plutocracy are so freely referred to and censured, should at all times be purely democratic in his ways, manner, and conduct with all his fellow-men, and yet always dignified. He should, of course, be educated, able, and intellectual. He should never be a demagogue. He should be affable and pleasant and still dignified. He should be firm and decisive yet considerate and forbearing especially with his info be affable and pleasant and still dignified. He should be firm and decisive, yet considerate and forbearing, especially with his inferiors in intellect and experience. He should not be sarcastic to individuals, no matter how caustic he may be in his references to criticisms of classes or parties, and above and beyond all, unself-ishness and patriotism should guide and control his every public utterance and action. We doubtless have had in the past and now have many American statesmen who fulfill many of these requirements if not quite all. I can pay no higher or more just tribute to the memory of Hon. CHARLES F. CRISP than to say that, taking him all in all, he came nearer doing so than any other with whom I have ever had the honor of an acquaintanceship. None whom I have ever had the honor of an acquaintanceship. None who knew him well will resent this statement or take offense thereat. He was always manly and dignified in his manner and conduct, yet ever affable and pleasant, whether on the floor of this House, in the committee room, in the Speaker's chair, on the street, in public gatherings, or in his own household. He was always positive and firm in his convictions and opinions, and yet ever kind and considerate with those who might differ with him. In all matters he was totally unselfish, and true patriotism—the general welfare of his country—seemed to guide him in all his official conduct. He was not a great orator, but was a great, concisive debater. As a husband and father he was ever loving, kind, and eral welfare of his country—seemed to guide him in all his official conduct. He was not a great orator, but was a great, concisive debater. As a husband and father he was ever loving, kind, and gentle. Those who knew him best appreciated him the most.

Term after term the people of his Congressional district returned him to Congress with almost a unanimous voice. In the Fifty-second Congress, when his party came in power, he was elected to the high and important office of Speaker of this House—the most important position in the Union next to that of President. The Fifty-third Congress again so honored him without any opposition from his own party. He administered the office with great ability and impartiality. At the beginning of the present Congress he was honored by his party associates as their choice for the same position. While serving in this exalted position the governor of his beloved State, in willing obedience to the wishes of the people, tendered him the Senatorship by appointment to fill a vacancy in the United States Senate. And yet, while desiring the position thus so kindly offered him, he promptly declined the appointment on the sole and patriotic ground that he could serve his country and party the better by retaining the Speakership. Soon afterwards he was duly recommended as a candidate for the United States Senate by his party in Georgia with substantial unanimity. But, alas, before he could take his seat therein ruthless Death cut him down. But recently his young but worthy son, Charles R. Crisp, was elected a member of this House without opposition to succeed his illustrious father and fill out his unexpired term in this Congress. On the first day of this session his untimely death was acknowledged by an appropriate resident and the could seem the propriet of the conditions of the propriet resident and the propriet resident and the propriet resident and propre his unexpired term in this Congress. On the first day of this session his untimely death was acknowledged by an appropriate resolution, followed by immediate adjournment for the day in honor of his memory. All, regardless of section or party, conceded that his premature death in the prime of his manhood was a great loss to his State and the nation. No man, no newspaper, said an unkind word of him, but all, as we are now doing, sincerely regret and mourn his loss. Indeed may we say:

None knew him but to love him, Nor named him but to praise.

Ohio mourns with Georgia over the loss of her distinguished son. To every American citizen who desires or intends to follow public official life I most sincerely commend the life, character, and history of Charles F. Crisp. May we, our children, and our children's children ever emulate his noble example.

Mr. BANKHEAD. Mr. Speaker, to-day we stop for a brief season the onward current of our everyday duties to pay tribute to one who in life was most himself when engaged, as we are daily engaged, in the business and affairs of this House. In the death of Charles Frederick Crisp, representative life in America last one of its most brilliant expenses and our nation one of ica lost one of its most brilliant ornaments and our nation one of its purest and most exalted statesmen.

its purest and most exalted statesmen.

Standing now in this presence, about to speak my words of tribute to our dead friend and associate, I feel crowding on me emotions of peculiar sadness. All the keen pain and anguish that touched my heart at the immediate occasion of his death are renewed, and what I would say is almost stayed. In our greetings and farewells we have no set and studied phrases. When we grasp the hand of one we may not have not seen for years, or come to part with one we may never see again, then it is that speech is hollow and but sound, and the beaming eyes, the quivering lips, the whole face give expression to an emotion beyond the ing lips, the whole face give expression to an emotion beyond the reach of words.

Sir, when Mr. Crisp died he had barely passed the half-century mark. Born in the year 1845, educated in the common schools of his State, a mere lad of 16 he entered the Confederate army. his enlistment in May, 1861, to his capture in May, 1864, he was a brave soldier, winning the confidence and love of his superiors. He knew the true import of the word duty, and all his subsequent career shows the influence on his life of the rigorous discipline of active warfare. Of the part he took in this mighty conflict I know how he felt, and that feeling I find embodied in the tribute paid by the distinguished Senator from Ohio [Mr. Sherman] on the late Senator Randall Lee Gibson, of Louisiana:

We have come to regard this fierce and sanguinary struggle as an inheritance from our fathers, growing out of an honest difference of opinion as to the framework of our Government. Poor human nature could provide no arbitrator to settle this contention, but now that it has been settled by a sacrifice of life and treasure almost unexampled in human history, it can be truly said that the result is heartily acquiesced in, and that no slumbering fires can rise from the ashes of the civil war to disturb the unity, integrity, and power of this great Republic.

One year after the close of hostilities found him admitted to the bar and located at Ellaville, Ga., in the practice of the law, called by Burke "one of the first and noblest of human sciences." For six years he toiled at his profession, struggling as its younger members do, with an effort to build up a paying practice. However, in 1872 his success had won him the first of the series of offices which was to end by his being the choice of the Empire State of the South for Senator in the United States Congress. In this year the South for Senator in the United States Congress. In this year he was appointed solicitor-general of the southwestern judicial circuit, and after a twelvementh he was reappointed for four years. In 1873 he removed to Americus, where he spent the remainder of his life. From 1877 to 1882 he was one of the superior court judges. The latter year closed his professional work as an active practitioner. These sixteen years of his life represent a career full of interest. He was a successful lawyer. His ability commended his first office and enabled him to hold it. As an commanded his first office and enabled him to hold it.

commanded his first office and enabled him to hold it. As an advocate he was earnest and fearless. Transferred to the bench, his facilities easily adjusted themselves to the severe exactions of the position, and he was all that is looked for in the terms an upright and a just judge.

Taking his seat in the Forty-eighth Congress, he early assumed that prominent place and developed those splendid qualities of leadership which won for him the Speaker's chair of the Fifty-second and Fifty-third Congresses. His life and work here are known and read of all men. I know that I am in the limits of exact statement when I say that there are no acts of his while in this body that will not stand the test of the most searching criticism. In his relations with his fellow-members he was always genial and body that will not stand the test of the most searching criticism. In his relations with his fellow-members he was always genial and pleasant. He seemed always happy; and while he might be leading a galloping charge on this floor, his natural manner never became offensive, and at its conclusion his perennial humor and serene temper returned. In his work as a Representative he was always busy, and no duty did he leave unperformed if possible of attention. His constituents had unbounded confidence and trust in him and in his power to serve them.

Perhaps it was in his course as Speaker in this body that he displayed qualities of a higher order than in any other field. His ability as a parliamentarian was remarkable. In his incumbency of this exalted seat and in his administration of its duties he won the admiration of his political opponents and was the idol of his friends. He was essentially fair and just. It was his desire to do right, and this he did at all times, as he conceived it. Quick, decisive, impartial, unfailing in resource, he must be ranked with his greatest predecessors.

While he was a good soldier, a successful lawyer, a learned judge, and a leader in the greatest representative assembly in the world, it is as a Christian gentleman he must be accorded the world, it is as a Christian gentieman he must be accorded the greatest honor. In his home life, which I can not here invade, he was the devoted, tender, and loving husband, and the ever fond, indulgent parent. I was first attracted to him because of his orderly habits of life and his loyal love of his home. Day by day I saw him come and go, in the halls of Congress, in his intercourse with the world, in the bosom of his family, and I saw in his life the well-nigh perfect man.

But he is gone from us now. In a little while we should have seen him take his seat in the other end of the Capitol, but instead he has gone up higher, "to where, beyond these voices, there is peace." The journey done, he is resting now; he is sleeping the sleep that knows no waking, careless alike of the day dawn or the twilight. For him the dark night of death was the sunburst of an eternal hereafter.

I will not say, "God's ordinance Of death is blown in every wind," For that is not a common chance That takes away a noble mind.

His memory long will live alone In all our hearts, as mournful light That broods above the fallen sun And dwells in heaven half the night.

Mr. McLAURIN. Mr. Speaker, no man can foretell the mysterious issues of life and death. Few who saw Judge Crisp at the close of last session thought that death would so soon cast its pale shadow upon that apparently robust body and vigorous mind.

How uncertain is the future! To-day life is bright, the sea is calm, the tide swells high and strong. To-morrow the tide turns; business trouble, sickness, or death robs us of hope and pleasure. From the calm and beautiful harbor where we floated so confidently, we are rudely tossed out upon the wide ocean. The horizon stretches far beyond our vision, and the heave of its restless waves comes from depths that are unfathomable. Vainly struggling, we either sink to the tranquil depths, where all is peace, or, tempest-torn and faint, are cast upon the shore. Well may the poet exclaim:

What is life? A brief delight; A sun, scarce brightening ere it sink in night; A flower, at morning fresh, at noon decayed; A still, swift river, gliding into shade.

The man who would know its true secret must learn to live "in deeds, not years; in thoughts, not breaths; in feelings, not in figures on a dial"—to count time in heart throbs. He most lives mgures on a dial —to count time in near throws. He most fives who thinks most, feels noblest, acts best.

I think Judge Crisp grasped the true meaning of life and lived "in deeds, not years; thoughts, not breaths."

The first time that I saw him, the thing that struck me most forcibly was the strong, cheerful, and kindly expression of his face. He had a hearty, genial manner, with a pleasant smile and kind word for everyone. I can well believe that in the home circle he was gentle, tender, and considerate; his sunny nature must have gladdened the hearts and lives of those who were traveling the journey with him. It is, however, for those more intimate to speak of him in private life. As a colleague from a sister State, it is simply my wish to pay a brief but sincere tribute to him as a public man. Those who differed with him politically will testify that while firm in his convictions, he was generous and tolerant of the opinion of others, while those of us who accepted his leadership will say that, like Joseph of Arimathea, "He was a just man and good counselor."

For the great, patient, toiling masses he had an active and sincere sympathy. He never lost sight of the fact that he was a public servant, sent here to represent the will of the majority. He was an ideal Representative, never imagining himself wiser than the collective thought of the people who sent him here. He was in close touch with his people, with a thorough knowledge of their sentiments upon all public questions; and, after all, true statesmanship in a representative government simply means the needs and wishes of the people translated into law. The people love and appreciate a faithful representative. What a graceful and touching compliment they paid Judge Crisp! When death came, they sent his son to occupy his vacant chair in this House. Indeed, there was no more beautiful sight than the almost brotherly confithere was no more beautiful sight than the almost brotherly confidence and intimacy that seemed to exist between this father and son, and the people of Georgia honored themselves in paying such a tribute to the memory of their dead. I am sure that the mantle fell upon worthy shoulders, and that the trust will be regarded sacred by his successor and namesake.

It was while engaged in a canvass of his State for the Senatorship that the premonitory symptoms were felt of that disease which ended his life. Although apparently sound and vigorous, he probably had full knowledge of this vital weakness, but he did not allow it to deter him from his work. I met him day after day in the committee room, cheerful and confident, while he was always at his post on the floor of the House, prompt and vigilant. It may literally be said that "he died in the harness." We are told that when that knight of old, without fear or reproach, Chevalier Bayard, was wounded unto death, he commanded his attendants to prop him up against a tree with his face to the enemy; then, after taking the sacrament, died with this beautiful sentiment on his lips: "The justice of Almighty God will be tempered by the blood of our Lord Jesus Christ." With a character as pure and spotless, with as chivalrous courage, and a like trust in the justice and mercy of the same God died, without fear or reproach, this gallant knight of modern day.

The State of Georgia, Mr. Speaker, has been prolific in great men. At the mention of her name the mind reverts to Alexander Stephens, the conservative and sagacious statesman; to Ben Hill, It was while engaged in a canvass of his State for the Senator-

Stephens, the conservative and sagacious statesman; to Ben Hill, the eloquent and gifted orator; to the lion-like and majestic Toombs, with his fiery and irresistible logic; but, sir, great as are these, Charles F. Crisp is well worthy a place in their ranks. The times did not afford him the same opportunity to display the most striking qualities of statesmanship that they did Stephens and history may not accord him as high rank; in the realms of oratory he was not, perhaps, the equal of Toombs or Hill, but as an all-round man, statesman, orator, and debater, he was the peer of all-round man, statesman, orator, and debater, he was the peer of Georgia's greatest.

Of great practical common sense, modest, imperturbable, evenly poised and cool, it was impossible to throw him off his balance.

As the representative of a powerful majority, wielding the Speaker's gavel, he was impartial, courteous, and kind; as the leader of the minority, he was cautious, tactful, and full of resource, and it seemed to me that his masterly qualities were never better displayed than in the latter rôle. He had a clear, clean-cut, incisive style, with an entire absence of attempt at display. In a calm, sensible, business-like manner, he went right to the marroy of a question. the marrow of a question.

He inspired confidence, and men trusted Judge Crisp and accepted his leadership because they knew that he would never say or do a foolish thing nor be caught in an untenable position. Preeminently a safe man, it could be confidently counted upon Preemmently a safe man, it could be confidently counted upon that he would say the right thing at the right time and do the right thing in the right place. Fully developed mentally, physically, and morally, he was ready for and equal to every emergency. No one in this House ever saw him on any occasion, however difficult, when he did not meet the requirements in every respect.

He saw in an instant a weakness in the position of an adversary, and his thorough knowledge of parliamentary usage enabled him to seize every advantage. Under the most trying circumstances he fully met and often exceeded the expectation of his friends.

Mr. Speaker, it is in such an hour as this, when the great and powerful are cut short in the midst of their career, that we are most forcibly reminded of our weakness and dependence upon God. Death is the great leveler; he makes no distinction between It is the same everywhere; in the humble cot or the bright palace, in the wild forest or the brilliant city, in the swamps or upon the mountain top, to the humble laborer or the great statesman, the same dread summons chills the blood and freezes the heart. Christ, and Christ alone, can dispel the pall of gloomy terror that hovers about the bed of death. genius of man and the wisdom of the ages offer no other solution.

The "Go in peace," and "Thy sins are forgiven thee" must be spoken to each, and is our safe retreat.

It is not given to many to rise to the elevated position occupied by Judge Crisp. All can not be eagles, but each of us has his by Judge Crisp. All can not be eagles, but each of us has his work, great or small; and we are taught that the manner in which it is performed is of more account than the magnitude of the task accomplished. If the trend of our life is for good, if its course is ever upward and onward, if its thought and inspiration are in harmony with the purpose of Providence in creating us, however insignificant our work may appear to others, surely we shall find in the great final day of account that we have not lived and toiled in vain.

As members of this House we lead here busy, active lives, and when we are at home the turmoil, strife, and jealousies of political rivalry leave little to prepare for the "great beyond." It is well, therefore, on occasions of this character to pause a moment well, therefore, on occasions of this character to pause a moment and draw home the solemn lesson each for himself.

Let us not be unmindful of the fact that a great leader, one of the busiest in our number, yet found time to seek that peace which will sustain the faltering soul in that last dark hour and make it radiant with the never-dying hope of eternal life. Judge CRISP was a consistent and faithful member of the Methodist Church. After all the triumphs which crowned a brilliant and successful career, I doubt not that if to-day his well-known voice could be heard in this Chamber he would reecho the dying words of the founder of his church, John Wesley, "Best of all, the Lord is with us."

Mr. McCREARY of Kentucky. Mr. Speaker, there is no arena which death does not invade. There is no place too sacred for its touch. There is nothing living on earth, no matter how great or small, how pure or vile, how rich or poor, but must finally succumb to the dread Destroyer. There is always somewhere—

Some heart that is bleeding, Some eye that is weeping. Some home that is draped, Some loved person dead.

When our comrade dies, when our coworker is stricken down full of hope and high purposes and great achievements, when he who has helped to make history and participated with us in the important legislation of our country is taken away in the prime and vigor of a splendid manhood, when his ability, integrity, and devotion to the public weal are most appreciated and most needed, we realize fully that death is very near to us, and that our affliction is severe and our country's loss is great.

Others have given detailed accounts of the life and career of Hon.

CHARLES F. CRISP. I shall sneak mainly of his character and his genial, pleasant nature, and with the promptness and readiness with which he met every emergency.

I regarded him as a noble type of American manhood, able, logical, self-made, and self-reliant, and always courteous, courgeous, and true.

He was firm and sincere in his convictions, faithful to his fitiends, liberal to his opponents, fair, just, and conscientious, and unceasing in the discharge of his duties as a Representative.

He was the faithful friend and champion of the people. He loved liberty, civil, political, and religious, and he was devoted to popular government.

He was both a patriot and a philanthropist. No man gave greater and more continued evidence of his love of country, and no man was more prompt to aid a friend or give freely to the needy and

He worked for what he regarded as the rights of the people, and did all in his power to protect the interests and promote the welfare and prosperity of the Republic, and the radiance of his integrity and the brightness of his honor were never assailed or

He was devoted to his wife, his children, and his home, and no He was devoted to his wife, his children, and his home, and no husband or father was ever the recipient of more love and respect. His family circle was full of affection and sweet communion, and here he illustrated how happy a man could be who was trying to do his duty to his God, his family, and his country.

His life and achievements illustrated not only the splendid opportunities of our great Republic, but showed also the honorable success and great renown that will crown earnest efforts, strict integrity, and steadfast devotion to duty.

The first and last conspicuous events in his life showed not only his courage, ability, and self-reliance, but also the confidence, admiration, and love lavished upon him by those who knew him best. At 16 years of age he proved his courage and self-reliance by enlist ing as a soldier in the Confederate army and bravely fighting until ing as a soldier in the Connederate army and bravely igniting until the close of the war for what he believed to be right. When he was 51 years of age, the people of Georgia, who had for more than a quarter of a century studied his public service and his fidelity to his State and nation, sought to confer upon him the highest honor in their gift by making him a United States Senator, and practically all of the State senators and representatives elected were instructed by the people to honor him with this great office; but his death prevented this great trust and well-merited distinction from being conferred upon him.

His views on finance, taxation, education, commerce, agriculture, an economical administration of the Government, the sovereignty of the people, and the independence of the coordinate departments of the Government, and on all other important questions presented, were often announced in strong and eloquent speeches, which are found in nearly every volume of the Congres-sional Record issued since his service as Representative commenced.

As an earnest, fearless champion of Democracy, he was always ready to defend his party and his principles, and he loved to up-hold and support the teachings and doctrines of Jefferson and

It was as Speaker of the House of Representatives he gained his highest honors and made himself most conspicuous before the country. His knowledge of parliamentary law and procedure, his country. His knowledge of parliamentary law and procedure, his equipoise, and the ease, dignity, firmness, and fairness with which he presided made him popular with the members of all political parties and enabled him to conduct the business with order and dispatch. I believe the dispassionate judgment of those over whom he presided for four years is that he is entitled to be remembered as one of the ablest and most accomplished of the Speakers of the House of Representatives.

of the House of Representatives.

The history of Georgia is luminous with the names of brilliant, earnest, and faithful statesmen. Among the ablest and strongest of that great galaxy the name of Charles F. Crisp has taken its permanent place. His fame does not belong to Georgia alone, nor to the South, but to the whole Republic, and in Kentucky we will cherish his memory, and his fame will survive along with that of the other dead statesmen, jurists, and heroes—Hill, Toombs, Colquitt, and Brown—who did so much to make Georgia conspicuous and illustrious.

It is written in one of the tender and beautiful legends which the Talmud has preserved that at the moment of the death of a good man memories of his love and charity and good deeds float good man memories of his love and charity and good deeds float through his mind to cheer and console him as his spirit soars others have given detailed accounts of the life and career of Hon.

Charles F. Crisp. I shall speak mainly of his character and his service in the legislative forum, where I knew him best and where I respected and admired him as a leader and loved him as a friend.

I first met him when I commenced my service as a Representative in Congress in 1885. My admiration for him grew as I became better acquainted with him, and I was deeply impressed with his.

He could see fidelity and devotion to loved ones at home; he could see charity and love, fragrant as flowers in springtime, beautifying and chastening a life well spent in the service of his God and his country, and at the end of it all, I believe, he could hear the welcome plaudit, "Well done, thou good and faithful servant; enter thou into the joy of thy Lord."

Mr. WELLINGTON. Mr. Speaker, amid the lengthening shadows of this midwinter afternoon the Representatives of our nation have met to mourn the untimely ending of a great career. The strong voice of active legislation is at rest, the fierce contention of partisan debate is hushed, and in their stead solemn decorum and order reign. To-day we are concerned not with the living, in the present, or the future, but the dead and the past. We call a halt in the march of life; we turn from the busy scenes and activities of living men to the grave that nestles with many others in distant Georgia, in that place set apart for the habitations of the dead; and as we stand before it with sad and sorrowful mien, I would lay a simple flower there while others may place a wreath of amaranth upon it as a tribute to the memory of Charles Frederick Crisp.

From the quiet portals of the grave there come none but "fond regrets and tender recollections." Resentments are forgotten, faults forgiven, and remembrance portrays to us in vivid pictures the virtues and noble actions of the departed.

As we unroll the canvas of the last half century, whereon time hath painted in ineffaceable colors the life history of the distinguished man whom we mourn, there are few foibles to condone guished man whom we mount, there and much that was noble to commend.

The annals of a nation are written in the biography of its great men. The mass of the people have no history. The record of their lives is short and simple, and remains ever the same. They are born, they live, they die, and are forgotten; generation after generation meets the same fate. We blunder through youth, struggle in manhood; and if perchance we are fortunate enough to reach old age, it is a scene of vain and unavailing regrets. But there are men who, by the force and power of talent or genius, indomitable will, or never-ceasing perseverance, lift themselves above their fellows, and in the record of their lives write history for their people. Such a man was CHARLES FREDERICK CRISP. Not a brilliant man, perhaps; not one whose name will flash with lustrous light, for he did not live in a time when splendid effulgence reigned. Yet when the records of this commonplace period of American national life are made up, his figure will stand out in bold relief as one who stood by his section, who partook of the bitterness of sectional strife, and yet was broad enough to rise above rancor, and developed into a national character, which, though tinged with sectionalism, grew gradually until he reached the loftier elements of patriotism, humanity, and a gentleness rarely observed among men.

rarely observed among men.

Born in the stormy times when the unavoidable conflict was rapidly approaching, he had reached the days of youth when sectional strife began. The bitter struggles of that eventful period have become a story of the past, and a generation of men have been born and grown into manhood since the great civil war. To me it is a memory of childhood. Yet I can well remember when the two opinions of government, which had existed antagonistic to each other since the formation of the Republic, divided our land and arrayed one part against the other.

In the North there had grown the idea of a strong Federal Government, such as had been portrayed by the Declaration of Independence. In the South there was the sentiment of a confederation of States, such as had been contemplated in the Articles of Federation which bound the colonies in the Revolutionary war. These two rival principles met upon the border; there sentiment was divided, and therefore upon the borderland can be found that judgment which perhaps will give in more impartial manner credit to each and both for the valor, heroism, and self-sacrifice with which each section maintained what it believed to be right.

When the great struggle came, Mr. CRISP, who was then a youth, cast his fortunes with his native State. Georgia had broken the bonds that bound her to the Federal Union. She had joined herself to that other government which had been named by the Southern States. CRISP had been reared in the school of State rights, of sovereignty for the Commonwealth, and therefore it was but natural to him to give allegiance to the Commonwealth which, though not the place of his birth, had given him sustenance through childhood and youth, and from which he had received all she had to give.

to give.

Amid all the changeful fortunes and vicissitudes of internecine strife the days of his youth passed into manhood, and in the fortunes of war he became a prisoner in the hands of the Federal troops. There he remained until the conflict was ended and the great question upon which the perpetuity of this Government depended was forever put at rest. The first period of his life was closed. The sentiment of State sovereignty, which had colored his youth and led him to take up arms at the behest of his State against the General Government, was dead—aye, more; buried beneath four years of weary marching, attacks and repulses, victories and defeats, a million lives, and billions of treasure. It was a lesson in national life which every nation must learn, and which, thanks be to God, the American nation has successfully committed to memory. It made a deep impression upon Mr. CRISP's life; it fashioned all the years that were to come, and converted much of the partisan into a judicial temperament. He began life on his own account, studied law, and entered into its practice. Success attended his efforts, judicial honors were given him, and then there came into his life another ambition, which led him into the path where he was most needed. The bitter passions and intense prejudices of sectional strife do not pass away in the fading of a moon nor yet in the circling of the seasons of one short year. They die gradually, and the people who would throw them off need the calm judgment, the sober second thought of men who can lead them conservatively, who will appeal to nobler sentiments and broader views, and no man in the past two decades has rendered greater service to his common country in this direction than CHARLES FREDERICK CRISP. His whole course in the House of Representatives, while it manifested the fact that he was true to the atmosphere in which he lived and faithful to the people whom he served, demonstated that he could look beyond the narrow confines of his State, view the broad expanse of our country, and, step by step, guide the Southern States to the common cause made for the whole American people.

made for the whole American people.

When I met him first, but little over a year ago, I knew him only by the reputation he had made as the leader of the political organization to which he belonged; knew him by the record he had made as Speaker of the House of Representatives. I esteemed him, admired him, honored him, and personal contact but intensified that sentiment and feeling.

As a leader of men of his own opinion, he was neither rude nor masterful. To the opposition he was very fair, just, and frequently charitable. To tyros and beginners he was not only gentle, but generous, and he had about him the subtle quality of standing firm upon his own ground, yet winning the confidence, trust, and good graces of his adversaries.

I saw him last upon the floor of this House, when insidious disease had begun its work, but he bore it bravely and by strength of will and nerve attempted to win the terrible battle of life against death. Even then the silent angel poised the dread shaft which ere long was to speed and strike him down. The flowers of spring had bloomed and faded when he departed for his home, there to engage in the contest which was to bring him further honors from the people of his State. Summer passed, the harvests of autumn were gathered, and the winds of approaching winter were beginning to sigh and moan among the trees when the final summons came, and the wires flashed to friend and foe the news that saddened one and all, giving the tidings of his death.

The record of his life is made up. It is fair and beautiful; and the characteristic which shall make him loved most among our people is that he was just and generous toward all, and mingled with justice and generosity that love which is the best part of all men, for, in the language of the Ancient Mariner—

He prayeth well who loveth well Both man and bird and beast; He prayeth best who loveth best All things both great and small; For the dear God who loveth us, He made and loveth all.

Thus we may leave him, life's fateful mission accomplished and the enigma of the hereafter solved. His memory may be safely intrusted to the people with whom he lived and who now dwell where his ashes rest.

Mr. TATE. Mr. Speaker, we pause amidst the stormy strife of life's fierce battles and the busy bustling scenes of party contention and international disturbance to pay tribute to the memory, recall the services, tell of the exalted character, and recount the many virtues of one who has left his impress upon the age in which he lived. A great leader has fallen. When the future historian comes to record the names of the illustrious statesmen who have been the pride and glory of our common country, that of CHARLES F. CRISP will shine forth among the first and the foremost and shed luster upon the greatest and the best.

torian comes to record the names of the interious statesmen who have been the pride and glory of our common country, that of CHARLES F. CRISP will shine forth among the first and the foremost and shed luster upon the greatest and the best.

When Attorney-General Cushing, on December 9, 1853, announced to the Supreme Court the death of that great and good man, William R. King, Vice-President of the United States, he said, among other beautiful things, concerning the dead statesman, these grand words, which are so appropriate to this occasion that I take the liberty of transcribing them:

He stands to the memory in sharp outline, as it were, against the sky like some chiseled column of antique art, or some consular statue of the imperial republic, wrapped in its marble robes, grandly beautiful in the simple dignity and unity of a faultless proportion.

Mr. Speaker, death extinguished a great light when Judge Crisp died. He was not an orator like Clay, nor a logician like Webster, nor a metaphysician like Calhoun, yet he possessed in harmonious combination, in a great degree, all of these distinguishing attributes, and was, sir, the best-rounded character I ever knew. He was a pleasing, a charming speaker; graceful in manner, clear in statement, fair in his representation of his opponent's position and argument, candid in his search for the truth.

He knew how to be, at the same time, a partisan and a patriot. He was a partisan because he believed that the principles and policy of his party involved the highest interest of his country and his race. He was a patriot because he recognized in the beneficent Constitution and institutions of his country the world's last and best hope for constitutional liberty and free representative

He knew how to be, at the same time, a partisan and a patriot. He was a partisan because he believed that the principles and policy of his party involved the highest interest of his country and his race. He was a patriot because he recognized in the beneficent Constitution and institutions of his country the world's last and best hope for constitutional liberty and free representative government. He was no specialist, but he stood among the first in all things which go to make greatness. He was a wise counselor, an able statesman, an eloquent advocate, an accomplished parliamentarian, a courtly gentleman, and a true friend. His life is an inspiration to the young men who are to come after him—a beacon light to guide them to a higher sense of public duty, and give them a more exalted idea of unselfish patriotism. I do not care to dwell at length upon the public career of the illustrious dead, because it is a part of the public history of the country and familiar to all. His name is indissolubly associated with all the public events of importance which have occurred in the last decade.

is an inspiration to the young men who are to come after him—a beacon light to guide them to a higher sense of public duty, and give them a more exalted idea of unselfish patriotism. I do not care to dwell at length upon the public career of the illustrious dead, because it is a part of the public history of the country and familiar to all. His name is indissolubly associated with all the public events of importance which have occurred in the last decade. From the time when, a mere youth, he first entered public life down to the moment when death called him from us, his career was a series of brilliant successes. As solicitor-general, judge, president of conventions, member of Congress, Speaker, everywhere and at all times he met every obligation and discharged the duties of every trust committed to him with honesty, fidelity, and ability. Right here, upon the floor of this House, was the scene of his greatest triumphs—his most brilliant achievements. Cool, self-poised, and well balanced, he could always husband his resources at the right time and direct his energies with the best possible effect. Never did he develop his matchless powers or show his wonderful resources so well as when leading the forlorn hope of the minority; amidst the fire and clash of party contention he would always parry the blows of the opposition, and by well-directed aims send his own darts with fatal precision into the heart of the enemy. He never voluntarily gave offense, and frequently disarmed opposition by his kindness and urbanity. Those, however, who met him in debate found that "there were blows to take as well as blows to give."

well-directed aims send his own darts with fatal precision into the heart of the enemy. He never voluntarily gave offense, and frequently disarmed opposition by his kindness and urbanity. Those, however, who met him in debate found that "there were blows to take as well as blows to give."

Some men may have surpassed Judge Crisp in the subtle forces of thought; others may have excelled him in the divine gift of eloquence; still others may have been his equal in soundness of judgment and the judicial fairness with which he exercised power, and perhaps he had his peers in the high social qualities for which he was so eminently distinguished, but men possessing all these high attributes in combination are rarely found. Judge Crisp possessed them all. His was a clear, active, incisive intellect. He was a fluent and eloquent speaker, an upright and impartial judge, an able and faithful Representative, a ready and skillful parliamentarian, and as a Speaker of this House for ability and fairness he goes to history the peer of Blaine and Randall. He was a polished and courtly gentleman, genial in manner and spirit as an "incense-breathing morn" in May, a bold and fearless antagonist, a faithful and confiding friend, and more than this, than these, than all, he was that "noblest work of God, an honest man." His was—

One of the few, the immortal names, That were not born to die.

Judge CRISP sent the sunshine of joy and gladness into the hearts of those who came in contact with his magnetic presence. It has been said that he never lost a friend nor made an enemy. Those of us who enjoyed the pleasure of comradeship with this goldenhearted man, who luxuriated, as it were, in the bright light of his genial companionship, can attest how great is our loss, how sad our bereavement. A gentler, kindlier heart never beat within a human breast. Would that I could speak of him in fitting language as a friend. He was my friend in all that term can suggest, and my personal loss is greater than I can tell. I loved him and I loved to follow where he led. But above all I loved to sit and hold sweet converse with him.

He has departed from among us, and we will never see his like again. Silently and sorrowfully he was laid away in the bosom of the Commonwealth he loved so well and served so faithfully. The grief of thousands of stricken hearts followed his funeral train. We have embalmed him in our hearts forever, and Georgia continues to weep upon the new-made grave of her best beloved son. Friend of my life—

Farewell; my lips may wear a careless smile,
My words may breathe the very soul of lightness,
But the touched heart must deeply feel the while
That life has lost a portion of its brightness.

Judge Crisp was ambitious, "that glorious fault of angels and gods." He had ambition for official position not for its empty honors and perishing emoluments, but for the privilege and opportunity it gave him to serve his country. His ambition was neither selfish nor inordinate. He was ambitious to do the most good within the compass of a life's duration, and to that end he consecrated the best energies of his great mind and his honest heart. He wanted to go to the Senate, the sine qua non of every statesman's ambition, but his desire to attain this exalted station did not overcome his fixed purpose to serve his country where he could do his country most good. While we can not say of him what Antony said of Julius Cæsar, "I thrice presented him a kingly crown—he did thrice refuse," yet we all do know that he was once presented with a seat in the American Senate and that he did once refuse it, because his friends and his party thought he could render the country greater service by remaining Speaker of this House, and with him their wish was law. He was assured by the present able and patriotic junior Senator from Georgia [Mr. Bacon], who was at the time an aspirant for the position, that if he would accept the appointment to the office of Senator tendered him by Governor Northen, made vacant by the death of the beloved and lamented Colquitt, he would have no opposition for the succession before the legislature; therefore his acceptance at that time meant the fulfillment of the cherished ambition of his life. Yet he made the personal sacrifice for the public good. Some men are stimulated to great achievements by the love of glory, others by the thirst for power, but the sentiment that absorbed the thought and thrilled the heart of Judge Crisp was love of country.

Breathes there the man with soul so dead Who never to himself hath said, This is my own, my native land!

The greatest heroes of the world's history are those who fought the battles against self and conquered. Crisp did this. He fought this fight, he kept the faith, he gained the victory, and wears the crown.

Pure and unselfish patriotism was his distinguishing characteristic.

Mr. Speaker, Georgia, ever proud of the achievements of her sons, looked upon this, her favorite, with peculiar pride and fondness, and her people, unforgetful of the sacrifices he had made for them, with a unanimity unsurpassed, had named him for the highest position within her gift, when his great heart ceased to beat. And thus this light was extinguished in the very blaze of his greatest political triumph; he reached forth his hand to take the Senatorial toga and grasped a shroud.

Mr. Speaker, as the stars go down to rise on some fairer shore, so our friend passes through the gloom of the grave to another and

Mr. Speaker, as the stars go down to rise on some fairer shore, so our friend passes through the gloom of the grave to another and immortal condition of life. To those annealed in the blood of the crucified Gallilean, there is no death.

There is no death! What seems so is transition;
This life of mortal breath
Is but a suburb of the life elysian,
Whose portal we call Death.

Divine revelation flashes from the sheen of the cross upon the darkness of the grave, the light of life, and anchors the broken heart of humanity, by the cable of faith, to the cherished truths of the resurrection and immortality. The religion of Christianity offers the only rational solution of the problems of life and death. We shall meet our friend and associate again, with all those who have preceded us.

We may not sunder the veil apart,
That hides from our vision the gates of day,
We only know, that their barks no more
May sail with us o'er life's stormy sea;
Yet somewhere, I know, on the unseen shore,
They watch and beckon and wait for me.

Our distinguished colleague and beloved friend was as felicitious in death as he was successful in life. He had lived long and well in a few brief years. He had served his country well and faithfully, in positions of high trust and great honor. He was in the high tide of matured intellectual manhood, and in the noonday splendors of national fame. Age had not palsied his great powers, disappointment had not paled the star of his hope, nor frozen the current of his love. His work well done, his fame assured as part of his country's history, "He wraps the drapery of his couch about him and lies down to pleasant dreams," with every flower on his tomb wet with a nation's tears.

Mr. LIVINGSTON. Mr. Speaker, when I first knew CHARLES F. CRISP he was a very, very young man. He had been appointed solicitor-general of one of the circuits in the State of Georgia, and so well and so faithfully did he perform his duties as solicitor, that when he asked an appointment to the judgeship of the same circuit, he received it at the hands of the governor. So well did he perform the duties of judge—no stain, no criticism, no slander was cast upon him or his administration—that at the end of his first term he was elected by the Georgia legislature for a second term.

In all his life he performed his duties well. Beginning without much of this world's goods, with but few friends, and with a limited education, he learned to trust implicitly in that old adage that—

Honor and shame from no condition rise; Act well your part; there all the honor lies.

From his early manhood until the day of his death he was a practical, upright, honest official in every capacity, whether State or national.

In 1883 we had a very noted political contest, such as had not taken place for many years in Georgia. There was opposition to the nomination and election of the then acting governor, and there was a combination to beat him. There were, I believe, four or five candidates who were prominent. Two of them were very nearly equal, and controlling almost the entire vote of the convention. Judge Crisp was a delegate at that time in behalf of a man who had but 13 votes in the convention. I was a delegate, and when we met, the great question to solve was who should act as the permanent president of that convention. Neither of the dominant candidates could afford to allow his rival to name the presiding officer. There was a committee of thirteen appointed to suggest a presiding officer, and I am glad that I had the pleasure, as a member of that committee, of suggesting Charles F. Crisp and of stating in the committee room that, of all the men who were accredited as delegates to that convention on that day, Charles F. Crisp was, in my humble opinion, one of the fairest-minded and most impartial and honest men in the convention. The suggestion was accepted; he was elected, and well and satisfactory did his selection prove to all interested parties. That was the beginning of his political life.

Mr. Speaker, so much has been said of Charles F. Crisp to-day, both as to his life and as to his character, and the day has worn so far away, and there are so many others who are anxious to say something in his behalf, that I shall only consume a moment or two more of time. I was with him much during the last year. I have been intimate with him for many years. I have seen him in sunshine and under the clouds. I have seen him in prosperity and in adversity, but never in all my life did I see Charles F. Crisp so sorely tried as during the last year. When he thought of entering the race for United States Senator before the people of Georgia, the proposition was that this question should be remanded to the people, by primaries that should select the name of the Senator, believing that the Georgia legislature would indorse their action. It is well remembered by everybody on the floor of the House that a very strong man—a young man, strong in mind and in body—met him on the hustings in Georgia, contesting his claim to the Senatorship on account of his financial views.

It was intimated, when Mr. Crisp left the field and failed to fill the engagements on hand, that it was for other reasons than his physical condition. He was criticised by the papers at home in some instances and by newspapers abroad. No one knew but Mr. Crisp his real condition. No physician who had attended him or prescribed for him knew his sufferings and the peculiar condition, physically, under which he labored. He withdrew. He submitted to those adverse criticisms and talked to me about it more than once. I was with him, Mr. Speaker, when he made his last speech on earth. Called by the people of Rome, Ga., and the surrounding country last fall to deliver a political speech, he had a magnificent audience, and never in my life did I see a speaker who nerved himself so thoroughly to do his full duty and measure up to his full capacity as did Charles F. Crisp on that occasion. It was painful to see the effort he made to meet the expectations of the vast crowd that was hanging upon his lips. Yet he partially failed; it was his last effort. He only talked for a few minutes, and had to sit down. There were but few, perhaps, including Mr. Crisp himself, who were aware of how fatal the malady was or would be, and how soon it would take him from his sphere of action.

Permit me to say in conclusion, Mr. Speaker, that his death was a national loss; but a much greater loss to Georgia, and to his home circle and to his personal friends an irreparable loss. He was an honest man, a good man, a discreet man, a wise man, a kind man, a liberal man, a manly man.

Mr. LAWSON. Mr. Speaker, on the 23d day of October last the soul of Charles F. Crisp, a great Georgian and an honored member of this body, passed through the gates of death into the presence of God. On that day his eyes rested for the last time on the autumnal splendors of his Southern skies. At such a season life is precious. For no artist, however deep his inspiration or exalted his imagination, has ever conceived a picture that rivaled in beauty and grandeur the surpassing loveliness of forest and landscape when "every leaf is an opal, and every tree a bower of varied beauty." From such a scene the soul of Judge Crisp, conscious of its impending voyage, and with no loved one absent, fearlessly launched upon the serene and placid sea of eternity. The places that knew him once will know him no more forever. But in a potent sense he still lives—lives in the virtues which he illustrated and in the successes which he achieved. These are invulnerable to the leaden scenter.

and in the successes which he achieved. These are invulnerable to the leaden scepter.

For the emulation of youth a nobler examble than our deceased friend can scarcely be presented. Ardent, courageous, patriotic, and loyal to his adopted State, he, at the age of 16 years, grasped the sword in defense of her sovereign rights. Through four years of fatigue, hardships, and untold privations he followed the immortal Lee, the incomparable soldier and peerless citizen, amid the vicissitudes of fortune, to his final defeat. Then, at the age of 20 years, located in a small south Georgia town, he began a new life. A stranger, without either fortune or ancestral distinction, he began that long civic combat which, protracted through many years, ended only with his life. There was nothing in the physical aspect of the country, nor in its social and political condition, to an elevated plain of manhood and usefulness. Physical desolation all around and athorough social upheaval, united with a galling oppression from without, tended to make the prospect cheerless oppression from without, tended to make the prospect cheerless and hopeless. But that manly courage and hardihood acquired in his soldier life qualified him for the conquest of adverse conditions and for his final triumph over all discouragements. His education was meager, such only as he had acquired in the common schools; yet he was inducted into the learned profession of the law, a profession which in his Southern home had always held aloft the highest standards of learning, integrity, and honor. But by dint of native ability, strenuous effort, and unfailing industry, he soon won a firm foothold in the profession, and was promoted to the office of solicitor-general, and charged with the prosecutions of all infractions of the criminal laws in his circuit. His able and faithful discharge of the duties of his office is evidenced by the fact that on the first opportunity thereafter he was oppression from without, tended to make the prospect cheerless denced by the fact that on the first opportunity thereafter he was elected one of the judges of the superior courts of the State, courts which are vested with the highest original civil and criminal jurisdiction in the State. Responsibilities of the most grave and onerous nature now devolved on him—none could be more so. To hold the scales of justice evenly between the contending animosities and passions of personal strifes and to determine the issued ities and passions of personal strifes, and to determine the issues of life and death impartially according to law, is a responsibility and a duty more exacting of the intelligence, the patience, the integrity, and the humanity of the judge than can otherwise be imposed. Yet Judge Crisp bore this burden with fortitude, with a sound understanding, and with conscientious loyalty to justice a sound understanding, and with conscientious loyalty to justice and fidelity to the State, eminently displaying in all emergencies the immovable and calm equipoise of an impartial magistrate. His countrymen, to attest their approval of his able judicial administration, transferred him to a sphere of less serious responsibilities, but of higher honor and wider usefulness. They elected him to the Congress of the United States. I will not undertake to portray his labors and successes here. That will be much better done by his colaborers and cotemporaries.

I did not witness any part of his Congressional career until he was chosen Speaker of the House of Representatives. As his colleague, and representing in part the same people. I witnessed with a par-

I did not witness any part of his Congressional career until he was chosen Speaker of the House of Representatives. As his colleague, and representing in part the same people, I witnessed, with a pardonable exhilaration of feeling, the industry, aptitude, ability, and fairness with which he deported himself in that great office. Quick to perceive, prompt to act, resolute of purpose, calm, composed, and suave in manner, he was a model officer. The stormy ebullition of partisan fury did not appall him, nor did sudden parliamentary entanglements disconcert him. Deliberate, just, self-poised, courteously according equal consideration to political friend and foe, he pursued the even tenor of his way. His personal bearing, and the unique blending of his moral and intelectual qualities, fitting him well and equally for action or for the council board, plainly marked him for the leadership of his party in the House. His sagacity, if not unerring, was of the keenest description. For these reasons, when his party suffered defeat, and when he descended from the chair to the floor of the House, party leadership was accorded him spontaneously, without rivalries, and without criticisms or comparisons. And though he knew that disease was corrupting the fountains of life, and though, haggard and wasted in strength, he sometimes seemed to bend beneath the burden, he resolutely maintained his station at the head of the column. Thus, as lawyer, jurist, legislator, Speaker, and statesman, he was a conspicuous figure and filled a large space in the public eye.

His was the applause of listening senates to command, And to read his history in a nation's eyes.

And cut down in the midst of his years, in the prime and maturity of manhood, in the zenith of his fame and usefulness, his death is an irreparable loss to his State and country.

It may be remarked that his history was complete as it progressed. He advanced step by step from one degree of honor and usefulness to a higher, but every inch traversed was thoroughly conquered ground, and he did not need the brilliancy of a later cable years to reflect head and supplement or amond the deficien-achievement to reflect back and supplement or amend the deficiencies, the errors, or the failures of an earlier period.

One event in his political career stands out as a conspicuous illustration of his self-sacrificing patriotism. It was well known to his friends, and a fact which he did not hesitate to admit, that he coveted a seat in the United States Senate. That seemed to be the coveted a seat in the United States Senate. That seemed to be the goal of his ambition, the capstone to an unbroken series of political conquests. But when, on the death of Senator Colquitt, the governor of Georgia offered to fill the vacancy in the Senate by the appointment of Judge Crisp, he patriotically put aside the coveted prize, esteeming the services he was performing as Speaker of the House of Representatives to be of far greater value to the country than his services as a Senator could be. His countrymen warmly appreciated and applauded his self-denial, and in the fullness of time, when he could accept the office without a sacrifice of duty, they, with practical unanimity in a primary election, indicated him as their choice for the Senatorship. All that remained to consummate the people's choice and his own ambition was the vote onsummate the people's choice and his own ambition was the vote of the general assembly, which would have been cast before the passing of those beautiful October days. Had death spared him a few days longer an admiring people would have crowned him with the laurels he so long coveted. But he is gone; and the glittering prize which, like ripened fruit, was just dropping into his hands, has fallen to the lot of another.

hands, has fallen to the lot of another.

I can not close this brief sketch without some reference to the private and unofficial life of the honored dead. I will not profane the sanctuary of his domestic life by any allusion to it except to say that he was a loving, dutiful, and indulgent husband and father. No man's life is faultless. No man's life is as good as he wishes it to be and strives to make it. Life is a drama of alternate defeat and victory. The private life of Judge Crise, leaving out the foibles and follies that human nature in the best of men is heir to, was untarnished and spotless. No one ever questioned his integrity, and no suspicion or slander ever cast a film upon the clear surface of his character. It was above reproach. His affable surface of his character. It was above reproach. His affable surface of his character. It was above reproach. His affable manners and singularly democratic habits drew men to him and "grappled them with hooks of steel." No aspersion of his political foes ever escaped his lips; they even shared the beneficence of his Christian charity. His bonhommie was perennial; his cheerfulness a never-failing stream. It was a delight to share in the pleasantries of his sunny disposition. As greatness grew upon him he did not forget his early and less-favored friends. The great poet tells us that—

"Tis a common proof."

'Tis a common proof,
That lowliness is young ambition's ladder,
Whereto the climber-upward turns his face;
But when he once attains the upmost round,
He then unto the ladder turns his back,
Looks in the clouds, scorning the base degrees
By which he did ascend.

Not so with Judge CRISP. A friend once gained was a friend forever. The friends of his early days were the stancher friends of his last days. The period of his suffering and decline was wreathed in their admiration and love. And if any sacrifice which they could have offered could have beaten back the stealthy which they could have offered could have beaten back the stealthy and relentless approach of the grim monster, he to-day, strong and militant, would be an active leader amongst us.

I conclude with one other remark. Death came to him as it comes to but few. It did not with a sudden and resistless stroke mercifully cut him down. It did not, through wasting disease, always nearing the inevitable end, assure him that recovery was always nearing the inevitable end, assure him that recovery was impossible. But it tantalized him with alternate hope and dread. Now it approached; again it receded; but the dread Reaper was ever dimly present. In the noisy altercations of these halls, in the privacy of his home, in the council chamber, on the highway, in the hall of assemblies, in solitude, in society, at funerals and at marriage feasts, everywhere and always, Death, toying with his heartstrings, mocked him. Whether his end was near or far off, he knew not; but he did know that his sleepless enemy was inexorable and relentless. For months he stood near and listened to the lashing of the waves upon the eternal shore and feared not. Surely the valiant never taste of death but once.

Mr. MORSE. Mr. Speaker, at this late hour I promise that my words will be very few. The great dramatist has said:

All the world's a stage, And all the men and women merely players

Of this Washington, with its ever-changing life, seems to me to be a fit illustration. I often think, as I ascend the steps of this Capitol building, of all the men who have served here and walked these streets, ascended these steps, and had their little day of honor, fame, and pleasure, and have joined the silent majority

Judge Crisp, in whose honor we have met here this afternoon, like all the rest, is but an illustration of Gray's immortal Elegy in a Country Churchyard, that-

The paths of glory lead but to the grave.

These considerations should lead us to look away to that undiscovered country, should lead us to seek for honor and treasure laid up "where neither moth nor rust doth corrupt, and where thieves do not break through nor steal." How it should lead us to thieves do not break through nor steal." How it should lead us to strive for that incorruptible crown of glory that fadeth not away, for those enduring honors that will stand when the marble crumbles, when the bronze turns to dust, and when the canvas fades—will stand when the elements have melted with fervent heat and the works thereof are burned up.

Mr. Speaker, to know CHARLES F. CRISP was to love the man.
I disagreed with this distinguished statesman upon nearly every political question, upon economic and financial questions, but I am here to bear testimony to the fact that I believe he was a thoroughly honest and sincere man. I am here to say that he was a refined and courteous gentleman; and I am here to say that he bore the duties of that great office which you enjoy, Mr. Speaker, and whose responsibilities you know so well—I am here to say that he bore those great honors with a quiet modesty and dignity. Charles F. Crisp was a gentleman in the widest, broadest sense of those words. Shakespeare says:

The evil that men do lives after them; The good is oft interred with their bones.

I have often thought when reading that that he spoke ironically. I think exactly the opposite is true. I think we love to recount the virtues of our deceased friends rather than their failings and faults. The distinguished gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. Dalzell] has said that Speaker Crisp had faults; but he has truly and justly said that his virtues far outshone them; his gentleman from the property of the p teness, his culture, his urbanity of manner, even to his political opponents as well as his friends, was a marked characteristic of opponents as well as his friends, was a marked characteristic of this great man, who now sleeps in the soil of his own loved State, the great empire State of Georgia.

Mr. Speaker, Mr. Charles F. Crisp died in the zenith of his fame. He died at the post of duty, as one should wish to die. You remember, Mr. Speaker, when the surgeons gathered around Mr. Garfield in the depot when he was stricken down by the vilest essessin that ever current the earth, he asked Dr. Diego. wilest assassin that ever cursed the earth, he asked Dr. Bliss: "Doctor, is the wound mortal?" And you remember the answer that the doctor made. Said he: "Mr. Garfield, we fear the worst." And that great man said: "Doctor, I am not afraid to die," Why not? Because he was at the post of duty. One of die." Why not? Because he was at the post of duty. One of my illustrious and distinguished predecessors, who for sixteen years represented in yonder Hall the district which I have the honor to represent—John Quincy Adams, the old man eloquent—died in yonder Hall in 1848. He died as he lived—at the post of duty, like this man. He died on his shield, and his last words were: "This is the last of earth. I am content." Surely the place where a statesman would wish to die!

Some of the oldest people who live in my country will tell you that their grandparents told them about a dark day. It occurred on the 19th day of May, 1780. It began to grow dark at 10 o'clock in the morning, and at noon it was so dark in New England that in the morning, and at noon it was so dark in New England that people could not see to read outdoors. Our fathers had very few books besides the Bible, and in that book they read that God had appointed a day in which He would judge the world. Very many of the good people of New England thought the day of judgment was at hand. Indeed, Mr. Speaker, as you know, the strange phenomenon has never been explained. The only explanation ever offered was that the smoke from dense forest fires in the West met a dense fog from the East. At any rate, on the 19th day of May, 1780, at noonday in New England a man could not see to read out of doors. This dark day overtook the Connecticut house of assembly in session; and amidst profound silence and gloom, one of the members arose in his place and said: gloom, one of the members arose in his place and said:

Mr. Speaker, it is evident that some strange and wonderful providence of Almighty God is upon us, by which we can not see to read at noontime. It may be, sir, that the day of judgment is at hand. In view of this strange and wonderful providence of God, I move you, sir, that the Connecticut house of assembly do now adjourn.

There was another member of the house of assembly, whose name was Abraham Davenport, and he was a Quaker; and he stood up in his place and opposed the motion. He said:

Mr. President, I am opposed to the motion to adjourn. I am utterly unable to explain the darkness. It may be that some strange and wonderful providence of God is upon us. It may be, as my brother has said, that the day of judgment is at hand. But, sir, as I know of no better place to be overtaken by death and the judgment than at the post of duty, I move you, sir, that the candles be brought in and the act be read again.

It was done; and the business of the house went on.

Now, Mr. Speaker, I have faith to believe that if you and I, like CHARLES F. CRISP, and John Quincy Adams, and James Abram Garfield, and Abraham Davenport, are found at the post of duty, Garfield, and Abraham Davenport, are found at the post of duty, in the largest meaning of those words, having our peace made with God, we need not fear death or the judgment. Surely this man died at the post of duty: he died bravely and he sleeps well; his name and his memory and his record will be revered by his countrymen to the remotest time. Fare you well, CHARLES F. CRISP! We shall see you no more on the shores of time. We say to you a last and sad farewell.

Mr. TURNER of Georgia. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that gentlemen who have spoken on the pending resolutions may have leave to extend their remarks, and that others may have the privilege of furnishing remarks for publication within the next ten days.

There was no objection; and it was ordered accordingly.

The question being then taken, the resolutions were agreed to; and in accordance therewith (at 5 o'clock and 55 minutes p. m.) the House adjourned.

EXECUTIVE COMMUNICATIONS, ETC.

Under clause 2 of Rule XXIV, the following executive com-munications were taken from the Speaker's table and referred as

A letter from the Acting Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting reports from the accounting officers of the Treasury Department, with lists of delinquent officers during the year 1896—to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

A letter from the president of the Anacostia and Potomac Rail-

A letter from the president of the Anacostia and Potomac Kall-way Company, transmitting a statement of receipts and expendi-tures for the year ending December 31, 1896, together with a list of stockholders—to the Committee on the District of Columbia, and ordered to be printed.

A letter from the Acting Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting list of amounts due the Union and Kansas Pacific Railroad company.

nies; also settlements in favor of the Central Branch, Union Pacific Railroad Company-to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES ON PUBLIC BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS.

Under clause 2 of Rule XIII, bills and resolutions were severally reported from committees, delivered to the Clerk, and referred to the several Calendars therein named, as follows:

Mr. BABCOCK, from the Committee on the District of Colum-

Mr. BABCOCK, from the Committee on the District of Columbia, to which was referred the joint resolution of the House (H. Res. 228) providing for additional telegraphic and electric-light facilities in the city of Washington, D. C., during the inaugural ceremonies on the 4th day of March, 1897, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 2533); which said bill and report were referred to the House Calendar.

Mr. MORSE, from the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, to which was referred House bill No. 9491, reported in lieu thereof a bill (H. R. 10023) setting apart a plot of public ground in the city of Washington, in the District of Columbia, for memorial purposes, under the auspices of the National Society of the Daughters of the American Revolution, accompanied by a report (No. 2534); which said bill and report were referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union. Union.

Mr. SHERMAN, from the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce, to which was referred the bill of the Senate (S. 3071) commerce, to which was referred the bin of the senate (c. 047) entitled "An act to authorize the construction of a bridge over the Monongahela River from the borough of Braddock to the township of Mifflin, Pa., reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 2538); which said bill and report were referred to the House Calendar.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES ON PRIVATE BILLS.

Under clause 2 of Rule XIII, private bills and resolutions were severally reported from committees, delivered to the Clerk, and referred to the Committee of the Whole House, as follows:

By Mr. SHANNON, from the Committee on the District of Columbia: The bill (H. B. 4279) to cure the title to certain real estate in the District of Columbia. (Report No. 2535.)

By Mr. BISHOP, from the Committee on Military Affairs: The bill (H. R. 8275) to remove the charge of desertion standing against Philip Beidle. (Report No. 2536.)

Philip Beidle. (Report No. 2536.)

By Mr. BAKER of Kansas, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions: The bill (H. R. 9878) granting a pension to Sarah C. Ward. (Report No. 2539.)

ADVERSE REPORT.

Under clause 2 of Rule XIII, Mr. BISHOP, from the Committee on Military Affairs, submitted an adverse report (No. 2537) on the bill (H. R. 6910) to remove the charge of desertion standing against James F. O'Sullivan; which said bill and report were laid on the table.

PUBLIC BILLS, MEMORIALS, AND RESOLUTIONS.

Under clause 3 of Rule XXII, bills, resolutions, and memorials of the following titles were introduced and severally referred as

By Mr. SHERMAN: A bill (H. R. 10022) to amend the act entitled "An act to regulate commerce"—to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

By Mr. VAN HORN: A joint resolution (H. Res. 232) for the relief of Robert L. Lindsay—to the Committee on Military Affairs, By Mr. SMITH of Michigan: A resolution (House Res. No. 492) requesting the Secretary of State to inform the House concerning the status of an agreement between the United States and Great Britain regarding the building of war vessels on the Great Lakesto the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

By Mr. RICHARDSON: A concurrent resolution (House Con. Res. No. 67) to print 6,000 additional copies of Bulletin No. 33, United States Department of Agriculture, entitled the Cotton Plant; its History, Botany, Chemistry, Culture, Enemies, and Uses—to the Committee on Printing.

PRIVATE BILLS, ETC.

Under clause 1 of Rule XXII, private bills of the following titles were presented and referred as follows:

By Mr. FITZGERALD: A bill (H. R. 10024) for the amendment of the military record of Herman Wenige—to the Committee on of the filinary record of Herman (1995) Military Affairs.

By Mr. OTEY: A bill (H. R. 10025) granting a pension to James Whitten, Company K, Fifteenth Regiment New Jersey Volunteers—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. PATTERSON: A bill (H. R. 10026) for the relief of John Morrison, of Shelby County, Tenn.—to the Committee on War Claims

By Mr. REED: A bill (H. R. 10027) to correct the naval record of John Richard Dimock—to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

By Mr. RICHARDSON: A bill (H. R. 10028) for the relief of William Johnson, administrator of Thomas J. Johnson, deceased, By Mr. SPENCER: A bill (H. R. 10029) for the relief of Anna.
Hunt, administratrix of the estate of George F. Hunt, deceased, late of Claiborne County, Miss.—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. WALKER of Virginia (by request): A bill (H. R. 10030) to correct the military record of Thompson Tooley, alias James Heney—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. WHEELER: A bill (H. R. 10031) for the relief of Anthony Burleson—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Also, a bill (H. R. 10032) for the relief of John T. Lehman, of Lauderdale County, Ala.—to the Committee on War Claims.

Also, a bill (H. R. 10033) for the relief of John McMurtry, of Lauderdale County, Ala.—to the Committee on War Claims.

PETITIONS, ETC.

Under clause 1 of Rule XXII, the following petitions and papers were laid on the Clerk's desk and referred as follows: By Mr. FITZGERALD: Memorial of the Massachusetts Historical Society, Charles Francis Adams, president, for the preserva-tion of the old frigate Constitution—to the Committee on Naval

By Mr. MOSES: Petition of the heirs of Josiah Chambers, deceased, late of Carroll County, Ga., praying that his war claim be referred to the Court of Claims under the Bowman Act—to the referred to the Court of Claims under the Bowman Act—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. WALKER of Virginia: Papers to accompany House bill to correct the military record of Thompson Tooley, alias James Heney—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. SHAFROTH: Petition of the Society of the Sons of the Revolution in the State of Colorado, John F. Spalding, president, for the publication of the archives of the Government relating to the form the state of the Government relating to

for the publication of the archives of the Government relating to the formative period, extending at least from about 1720 to the close of the war of 1812—to the Committee on Printing.

Also, petition of Thomas Butler and 35 other ex-soldiers residing in Longmont, Colo., urging the passage of House bil. No. 9209, granting a service pension to honorably discharged soldiers of the late war—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

SENATE.

MONDAY, January 18, 1897.

Prayer by the Chaplain, Rev. W. H. MILBURN, D. D. J. L. M. Irby, a Senator from the State of South Carolina, appeared in his seat to-day.

The Journal of the proceedings of Thursday last was read and approved.

CERTIFICATION OF ELECTORS.

The VICE-PRESIDENT laid before the Senate two communications from the Secretary of State, transmitting, in pursuance of the provisions of the act of February 3, 1887, certified copies of the final ascertainment of the electors for President and Vice-President for the States of Kentucky and Tennessee; which were ordered to lie on the table.

CHIEF OF CENSUS DIVISION.

The VICE-PRESIDENT laid before the Senate a communication from the Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting for the consideration of Congress a communication from the Secretary of the Interior of the 14th instant, submitting an estimate of appropriation in lieu of an estimate transmitted to the Senate on the 4th instant, for a chief of census division; which, with the accompanying papers, was referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

ORIGINAL DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA TERRITORY.

The VICE-PRESIDENT laid before the Senate a communica-The VICE-PRESIDENT laid before the Senate a communication from the Attorney-General, transmitting, in response to a resolution of December 17, 1896, a statement of what proportion the present holdings of the United States in the State of Virginia and within the former limits of the District of Columbia bear to the whole territory originally ceded by that State to the United States, etc.; which, with the accompanying papers, was referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia, and ordered to be

THE CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION.

The VICE-PRESIDENT laid before the Senate a communication from the Civil Service Commission in response to a resolution of the 14th instant, stating that in obedience to the requirement of the law of January 16, 1883, the Commission on April 29, 1896, made to the President, for transmission to Congress, its annual report for the fiscal year 1895; which was referred to the Committee on Civil Service and Retrenchment, and ordered to be printed.

REPORT OF ANACOSTIA AND POTOMAC RIVER RAILROAD COMPANY.

The VICE-PRESIDENT laid before the Senate the annual report of the Anacostia and Potomac River Railroad Company for the year ended December 31, 1896; which was referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia, and ordered to be printed.

REPORT OF THE CAPITAL TRACTION COMPANY.

The VICE-PRESIDENT laid before the Senate the annual report of the Capital Traction Company, of the District of Columbia, for the year ended December 31, 1896; which was referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia, and ordered to be

DISTRICT CHARITIES AND REFORMATORY INSTITUTIONS.

The VICE-PRESIDENT appointed Mr. Martin a member on the part of the Senate of the Joint Select Committee to Make Investigations of the Charities and Reformatory Institutions of the District of Columbia, in place of Mr. HARRIS, excused.

HOUSE BILLS REFERRED.

The following bills were severally read twice by their titles, and referred to the Committee on Military Affairs:

A bill (H. R. 710) to remove the charge of desertion against

James A. Crouch;
A bill (H. R. 1628) for the relief of Dewitt Eastman;
A bill (H. R. 2253) for the relief of Barzilla C. Hudson;
A bill (H. R. 3851) to reimburse Col. Phillip Kirshner for money paid for the services of a band for the Sixteenth Regiment of Ohio

Infantry Volunteers; and
A bill (H. R. 3926) to correct the war record of David Sample.
The following bills were severally read twice by their titles, and referred to the Committee on the Judiciary:

A bill (H. R. 3623) to amend section 4 of an act entitled "An act to define the jurisdiction of the police court of the District of

A bill (H. R. 6834) to prevent the purchasing of or speculating in claims against the Federal Government by United States officers;

A bill (H. R. 9671) to detach the county of Marion from the northern division of the northern district of Alabama and attach the same to the southern division of said district; and

A bill (H. R. 9901) to detach the county of Audrain from the western district of Missouri and to attach the same to the eastern district of said State of Missouri.

The bill (H. R. 939) for the relief of Cogswell & Co. was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Claims.

The bill (H. R. 2859) granting a pension to Harriet F. Herrick was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Pen-

The bill (H. R. 9752) to amend an act entitled "An act to authorize the construction of a steel bridge over the St. Louis River between the States of Wisconsin and Minnesota," approved April 24, 1894, as amended by an act approved August 4, 1894, entitled "An act to amend an act to authorize the construction of a steel bridge over the St. Louis River between the States of Minnesota and Wisconsin," was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Commerce.

The bill (H. R. 6883) to incorporate the Convention of American Instructors of the Deaf was read twice by its title.

Mr. McMILLAN. I ask that the bill may lie on the table. It is the same as a Senate bill now on the Calendar.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. It will be so ordered.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED.

The VICE-PRESIDENT announced his signature to the following enrolled bills and joint resolution, which had previously been signed by the Speaker of the House of Representatives:

A bill (S. 206) to provide an American register for the steamer

A bill (S. 1424) to amend an act entitled "An act to amend section 4178, Revised Statutes, in relation to the marking of vessels' names at bow and stern, and also to provide for marking the draft," approved February 21, 1891;

A bill (S. 1725) authorizing the Kansas City, Watkins and Gulf

Railway to construct and maintain a bridge across Red River, at the city of Alexandria, La.;

A bill (S. 1741) to authorize the Muskogee, Oklahoma and Western Railroad Company to construct and operate a line of railway through Oklahoma and the Indian Territory, and for other pur-

A bill (S. 2334) construing the acts of Congress in relation to the award of life-saving medals;

A bill (H. R. 4538) for the relief of John Keefe;
A bill (H. R. 8676) to enable the town of Flagstaff, in the Territory of Arizona, to issue bonds to construct a water system; and A joint resolution (S. R. 189) providing for the erection of a Government building at the Tennessee Centennial Exposition.

PETITIONS AND MEMORIALS.

Mr. CULLOM presented a petition of the Illinois State Grange praying for the establishment of a free rural mail delivery; which was referred to the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads.

He also presented a petition of Local Branch No. 5, Junior Steam Fitters' Association, of Chicago, Ill., praying for the enactment of legislation providing for the protection of seamen on the Great Lakes; which was referred to the Committee on Commerce.

He also presented a petition of the Board of Trade of Alton, Ill., praying Congress to recognize the independence of Cuba, which praying Congress to recognize the independence of Cuba; which was ordered to lie on the table.

He also presented a petition of the general assembly of the State of Indiana, praying for the passage of House bill No. 3273, relating to the classification of clerks in first and second class post-offices; which was referred to the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads.

He also presented the memorial of M. J. O'Shea, of Chicago, Ill., remonstrating against the ratification of the arbitration treaty with England; which was referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

He also presented the memorial of Delaney & Murphy, whole-sale liquor dealers, of Chicago, III., remonstrating against the pas-sage of House bill No. 8582, allowing the bottling of distilled spirits in bond; which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

He also presented a petition of the Christian Ministers' Associa-

He also presented a petition of the Christian Ministers Association, of Cincinnati, Ohio, praying for the enactment of legislation to prevent the nullification of interstate antigambling laws; which was referred to the Committee on Interstate Commerce.

He also presented resolutions adopted by the Illinois State Grange, favoring the establishment of the equality of the sexes at the ballot box; which were referred to the Select Committee on Woman Suffrage.

He also presented a petition of the Illinois State Grange present

He also presented a petition of the Illinois State Grange, praying for the establishment of postal savings banks; which was referred to the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads.

He also presented a petition of the Cincinnati Baptist Ministers'

He also presented a petition of the Cincinnati Baptist Ministers' Conference, of Cincinnati, Ohio, praying for the enactment of legislation relating to gambling by telegraph and express; which was referred to the Committee on Interstate Commerce.

He also presented the memorials of Rev. J. B. McCrary, publisher of the Baptist Truth, of Metropolis; of Bailey & Son, publishers of the Bureau County Republican, of Princeton; of P. R. Nelson, publisher of the Winchester Times, of Winchester; of E. J. Doering, president of the Medical Recorder Publishing Company, and of W. H. Mansfield, publisher of the Roseland Review, all in the State of Illinois, remonstrating against the passage of the so-called Loud bill, relating to second-class mail matter; which were referred to the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads.

He also presented the memorial of J. R. Hammond, editor of the Arkansas Commonwealth, of Little Rock, Ark., remonstrat-ing against the passage of the so-called Loud bill, relating to second-class mail matter; which was referred to the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads.

He also presented the petitions of John R. Marshall, publisher of the Record, of Yorkville; of H. W. Austin, president of the Oak Park State Bank, of Oak Park, and of Cad Allards, all in the State of Illinois, praying for the passage of the so-called Loud bill, relating to second-class mail matter; which were referred to the Committee or Poet Officer and Poet Poetle.

the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads.

Mr. CULLOM. I have just received a dispatch in the nature of a petition from the Bankers' Club of Chicago, which I will read:

Resolved, That the Bankers' Club of Chicago hereby indorses the accredited representatives of the United States and Great Britain, and calls upon the Senate, in the interest of peace, the welfare of the business of the country, and the advancement of civilization, to ratify it without unnecessary delay.

JOHN J. MITCHELL, President.
W. D. C. STREET, Secretary.

I move that the petition be referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. COCKRELL. I present resolutions of the Kansas City Live Stock Exchange, in regard to the necessity of amending the law touching chattel mortgages in the Indian Territory. I believe a House bill for this purpose has been introduced, and I think there is a similar measure pending before the Judiciary Commit-tee of the Senate. I ask that the petition be referred to that committee with the accompanying letter from the president of the Kansas City Live Stock Exchange, J. R. Stoller, and also a similar letter from Tootle, Wheeler & Motter, of St. Joseph, and one from Murray Carleton, of the Wear & Boogher Dry Goods Company, of St. Louis. I think the Committee on the Judiciary is the committee which has that bill, and I hope it will act very promptly upon the matter. I move that the petition and accompanying papers be referred to that committee.

panying papers be referred to that committee.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. COCKRELL presented the memorials of William Davis
Foster, editor of Medical Arena, of Kansas City, Mo.; of W. R.
Adams, publisher of Taney County Sentinel, of Taneyville, Mo., and of Anton E. Neumeister, M. D., publisher of the Medical Arena, of Kansas City, Mo., remonstrating against the passage of the so-called Loud bill, relating to second-class mail matter; which were referred to the Committee on Post-Offices and PostReads.

Roads.

Mr. PEFFER. I present the petition of Rev. J. C. Post, of Mulvate, Kans., in which he asks Congress "to submit to the legislatures of the several States an amendment to the Constitution of the United States requiring the Supreme Court of the United States, when ruling any act of Congress as in violation of the Constitution, to immediately submit their decision to Congress in the same way that a Presidential veto is submitted, with their reasons for such adverse action. Whereupon Congress shall consider the reasons upon which such adverse decision is made, and, if, after such consideration, Congress shall by a majority vote reaffirm their action, notwithstanding said action of the Supreme Court, then said law shall become a part of said Constitution." I move that the petition be referred to the Committee on Privileges and Elections.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. PEFFER presented the memorials of L. S. Roby, publisher of the Kansas Endeavorer, of Topeka, Kans.; of the publishers of the Farmers' Vindicator, of Valley Falls, Kans., and of P. F. Yearont, publisher of Emporia Times, Emporia, Kans., remonstrating against the passage of the so-called Loud bill, relating to second-class mail matter; which were referred to the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads.

Mr. McMULLAN presented the memorial of Foster Bros. pub-

Mr. McMILLAN presented the memorial of Foster Bros., publishers of the Gladwin County Record, of Gladwin, Mich., and the namers of the Gladwin County Record, of Gladwin, Mich., and the memorial of Eugene Glass, publisher of the Dog Fancier, of Battlecreek, Mich., remonstrating against the passage of the so-called Loud bill, relating to second-class mail matter; which were referred to the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads.

He also presented a petition of the West Chester State Normal School and sundry citizens of West Chester, Pa., praying Congress to restore the former law of the District of Columbia against of the Courier, of Greenville, Ohio, and the memorial of C. W. Charles, publisher of the Ohio Chronicle, of Columbus, Ohio, remonstrating against the passage of the so-called Loud bill, relating to second-class mail matter; which were referred to the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads.

Sunday traffic; which was referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

Mr. PLATT presented the petition of Charles W. Bogart, president of the Twenty-third Ward Bank and 100 other citizens of New York City, praying Congress to authorize the Secretary of War to contract with Charles Stoughton and his associates for the entire work of the Harlem Kills Canal; which was referred to the Committee on Commerce.

Mr. GALLINGER presented a memorial of the Boston Paper Trade Association, of Boston, Mass., remonstrating against the passage of the so-called Loud bill in its present form, and praying that the matter of second-class mail be referred to a commission to investigate and report a bill to remedy whatever abuses may now exist; which was referred to the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads.

and Post-Roads.

He also presented memorials of Josiah B. Dyer, for Sargent, Dyer & Co., publishers of the Stone Trade News, of Concord; of Lewis W. Brewster & Son, publishers of the Portsmouth Journal, of Portsmouth; of A. F. Rowell, publisher of the Lancaster Gazette, of Lancaster; of F. W. Bittinger, publisher of the Weekly News, of Woodsville; of E. W. Townsend, publisher of the Independent, of Salmon Falls; of W. A. Whiting, manager of the Emerson Paper Company, of Sunapee, all in the State of New Hampshire, remonstrating against the passage of the so-called Loud bill, relating to second-class mail matter; which were referred to the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads. ferred to the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads.

Mr. CALL. I present the petition adopted at a mass meeting of citizens of Pensacola, Fla., of which J. J. Sullivan was president, and other named officers, including Mr. S. R. Mallory, former member of Congress. The paper states that the Spanish Government in the conduct of the war against the people of Cuba have disregarded the laws of humanity and of civilized warfare in massacring the wounded and dying, and butchering noncombatants, and have devastated and laid waste the island. It further states that the principles of liberty humanity and increases massacring the wounded and dying, and butchering noncombat-ants, and have devastated and laid waste the island. It further states that the principles of liberty, humanity, and justice are sacred to the American people, and they view with displeasure the conduct of the Government of Spain in denying to the Cubans the rights which are the inherent birthright of all free men. The petition prays the Congress of the United States to recognize the rights of the people of Cuba, who desire now to form a govern-ment, and extend the hand of fellowship to them. I move that the petition lie on the table the petition lie on the table.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. LODGE presented a memorial of the Boston Paper Trade Association, of Boston, Mass., remonstrating against the passage of the so-called Loud bill in its present form, and praying that the matter of second-class mail be referred to a commission to investigate and report a bill to remedy whatever abuses may now exist; which was referred to the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads.

He also presented a petition of the Atlantic Coast Seamen's Union, praying that so much of Senate bill No. 2623 and House bill No. 6399 as relates to corporal punishment be stricken out; which was referred to the Committee on Commerce.

He also presented a petition of 143 depositors of the failed Freedman's Savings Bank, praying Congress to appropriate sufficient money to reimburse them for their losses resulting from the failure of that bank; which was referred to the Committee on Fi-

He also presented petitions of the Batchelder & Lincoln Company, of Boston, Mass.; of W. Frederick Kimball, of Boston, Mass., and of Charles H. Ingalls & Co., of Lynn, Mass., praying for the passage of the so-called Torrey bankruptcy bill; which were ordered to lie on the table.

Mr. TURPIE presented a memorial of the Municipal Engineering Company of Indiana, remonstrating against the passage of the so-called Loud bill, relating to second-class mail matter; which was referred to the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads.

was referred to the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads. He also presented the memorial of H. T. Benninghof & Sons, H. Gumberts & Son, and Otto Durre & Co., of Evansville, Ind.; the memorial of sundry wholesale liquor dealers of Indianapolis, Ind., and the memorial of W. E. Broderick, second vice-president National Wholesale Liquor Dealers' Association of America, of Baltimore, Md., remonstrating against the passage of House bill No. 8582, allowing the bottling of distilled spirits in bond; which were referred to the Committee on Finance.

He also presented a petition of the Pastoral Association of were referred to the Committee on Finance.

He also presented a petition of the Pastoral Association of Evansville, Ind., praying for the enactment of legislation to prevent the nullification of State antigambling laws by extending to interstate gambling by mail and express; to enact a law raising the age of consent to 18 years in the District of Columbia and the Territories; to enact a Sabbath law for the national capital, and to substitute voluntary industrial arbitration for railroad strikes, etc.; which was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary. Mr. SHERMAN presented a petition of the Fifth Conference of the Foreign Missions Boards and Societies in the United States and Canada, praying for a speedy ratification of the arbitration treaty; which was referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

He also presented the memorial of John Calderwood, publisher

He also presented a petition of the Board of Trade of Indianapolis, Ind., praying for the enactment of a reciprocity law extending the trade not only in flour and products of grain, but also in other commodities; which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

Mr. DAVIS presented a petition of sundry clerks and other employees in different branches of the public service in the State of Minnesota, praying for the passage of House bill No. 8320, providing for the creation of a civil service retirement fund, etc.; which was referred to the Committee on Civil Service and Re-

Mr. MITCHELL of Wisconsin presented a petition of the Board of Trade of La Crosse, Wis., praying for the appointment of a banking and currency commission; which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

He also presented a petition of the Board of Trade of La Crosse, Wis., praying for the establishment of a department of commerce and manufactures; which was referred to the Committee on Commerce.

He also presented a petition of the Wisconsin National Guard Officers' Association, praying for the enactment of legislation relating to the reorganization of the National Guard and militia of the United States; which was referred to the Committee on Military Affairs

He also presented the memorials of Oliver Bros., publishers of the Waupin Leader, of Waupin; of Charles A. Brood, publisher of the Momior Sentinel, of Momior; of Chautors & Hanford, publishers of the Brodhead Independent and Wisconsin Citizen, of Brodhead; of A. F. Churchill, publisher of the Times, of River Falls; and of Sommers & Reynolds, publishers of the Weekly Madisonian, of Madison, all in the State of Wisconsin, remonstrating against the passage of the so-called Loud bill, relating to second-class mail matter: which were referred to the Committee on ond-class mail matter; which were referred to the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads.

Mr. GORDON presented resolutions adopted at a meeting of the General Assembly Home Missions of the Presbyterian Church of the United States (Southern), held at Atlanta, Ga., relative to property holdings in the Choctaw and Chickasaw Nations; which were referred to the Committee on Public Lands.

Mr. BATE presented the memorials of Rosenblett & Dolby, pub lishers of the Musicial Idea, of Greenville, Tenn.; of Henry H. Dukes, publisher of the Newport Times, of Newport, Tenn.; and of S. A. Cunningham, of Tennessee, remonstrating against the passage of the so-called Loud bill, relating to second-class mail matter; which were referred to the Committee on Post-Offices and

Mr. GORMAN presented a memorial of the Merchants and Manufacturers' Association of Baltimore, Md., remonstrating against the adoption of the resolutions relative to the independence of the Republic of Cuba; which was ordered to lie on the table.

He also presented a resolution adopted at a representative meeting of the Religious Society of Friends (Orthodox), held at Baltimore, Md., urging members of Congress to use their influence and more, Md., urging members of Congress to use their influence and votes in the interest of the maintenance of peaceable relations between the United States and other nations; which was referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

He also presented memorials of W. M. Abbott & Son, publishers of the Evening Capital, of Annapolis, Md.; of Plummer & Plummer, publishers of the Free Press, of Greensboro, Md.: of Charles W. Ely, publisher of the Maryland Bulletin, of Frederick, Md.; of J. M. Litzinger, publisher of the Mountain Democrat, of Oakland, Md.; of J. M. Street & Son, publishers of the Harford Democrat, of Maryland; of C. Scott Duvall, publisher of the Temperance Sentiment, of Gaithersburg, Md.; of S. E. Whitman, publisher of the State Democrat, of Easton, Md.; of Edward Reisler, publisher of the Carroll News, of Union Bridge, Md.; of the Health Magazine Company, of Maryland; of Enoch B. Abell, publisher of the St. Marys Enterprise, of Leonardtown, Md.; of H. W. Lewis, publisher of the Banner of Liberty, of Libertytown, Md.; of J. B. Morrow, editor of the Ellicott City (Md.) Times; of the National Underwriter Company, of Baltimore, Md., and of of the National Underwriter Company, of Baltimore, Md., and of Albert Weil, general manager of the Baltimore (Md.) Life Publishing Company, remonstrating against the passage of the so-called Loud bill, relating to second-class mail matter; which were referred to the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

Mr. PLATT. From the Committee on the Judiciary I ask that that committee be discharged from the further consideration of the bill (H. R. 7907) for the protection of the people of the Indian Territory, extending the jurisdiction of the United States courts, providing for the laying out of towns, the leasing of coal and other mineral, timber, farming, and grazing lands, and for other purposes, and that the bill be referred, with the accompanying papers, to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

Mr. COCKRELL. Was a similar bill pending before the Committee on Indian Affairs?

Mr. PLATT. It is the Curtis bill that was referred, after pass ing the other House, to the Judiciary Committee. The same bill was pending before the Committee on Indian Affairs, having been introduced in the Senate: and when we reach the order of bills I am going to introduce another bill this morning covering the same ground.

Mr. COCKRELL. The Committee on the Judiciary is to be discharged and the bill referred to the Committee on Indian

Mr. PLATT. Yes.
The VICE-PRESIDENT. In the absence of objection, it will be so ordered.

Mr. CULLOM. I am instructed by the Committee on Appropriations, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 9643) making appropriations for the legislative, executive, and judicial expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1898, and for other purposes, to report it with sundry amendments and submit a brief statement of facts as a report. I give notice that to-morrow morning, or as soon thereafter as I can get the opportunity to call it up, I shall ask for the consideration of the bill.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The bill will be placed on the Calendar.

Mr. McMILLAN, from the Committee on the District of Columbia, to whom was referred the joint resolution (S. R. 187) relating to the laying of electric subways in the District of Columbia, mr. CHANDLER. I should like to ask the Senator from Michigan, the chairman of the Committee on the District of Columbia, whether he proposes to bring up the joint resolution for action either to-day or some near day.

Mr. McMILLAN: I will answer the Senator from New Hamp-shire that the measure will go on the Calendar and can be called up by any Senator. I am not particularly anxious that the joint resolution shall come up this morning.

Mr. CHANDLER. I ask whether the joint resolution will arrest the present work on the streets of Washington.

Mr. McMILLAN. It would, if passed.

Mr. CHANDLER. It seems to me that either to-day or to-morrow some time ought to be fixed for the consideration of the joint resolution, if it is to have any effect whatever. it is reported by the committee indicates that they think the construction of the present ditches and the tearing up of pavements ought to be stopped by act of Congress. If the work is to be stopped, the joint resolution ought to be acted upon immediately. The VICE-PRESIDENT. The joint resolution will be placed on the Calendar.

Mr. PETTIGREW, from the Committee on Appropriations, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 9707) making appropriations for the support of the Military Academy for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1898, reported it with amendments.

Mr. QUAY, from the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, to whom was referred the bill (S. 3520) to provide for the erection of a custom-house in the city of New York, reported it with an amendment and submitted a record theseson.

it with an amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

He also, from the same committee, to whom the subject was referred, reported a bill (S. 3543) for a public building at the city of Altoona, Pa., and appropriating money therefor; which was read twice by its title.

Mr. WETMORE, from the Committee on the Library, to whom was referred the amendment submitted by Mr. Gibson on the 11th instant, intended to be proposed to the sundry civil appropriation bill, reported favorably thereon, and moved that it be referred to the Committee on Appropriations; which was agreed to.

He also, from the same committee, reported an amendment intended to be proposed to the sundry civil appropriation bill, and moved that it be referred to the Committee on Appropriations; and printed; which was agreed to.

Mr. HILL, from the Committee on the Judiciary, to whom was referred the bill (S. 3514) to regulate the term of office of postmasters, reported it with amendments.

Mr. NELSON, from the Committee on Commerce, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 9752) to amend an act entitled "An act to authorize the construction of a steel bridge over the St. Louis River between the States of Wisconsin and Minnesota," approved April 24, 1894, as amended by an act approved August 4, 1894, entitled "An act to amend an act to authorize the construction of a steel bridge over the St. Louis River between the States of Minnesota and Wisconsin," reported it without amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred the amendment submitted by himself on the 11th instant intended to be proposed to the sundry civil appropriation bill, reported favorably thereon and moved that it be printed and that it be referred to the Committee on Appropriations with the accompanying report; which was agreed to.

Mr. PEFFER, from the Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (S. 3339) granting a pension to Louise E. Perkins, reported it with an amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

Mr. GALLINGER, from the Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (S. 947) granting a pension to Margaret Stone, widow of Benoni Stone, a soldier of Florida Seminole Indian war, reported it without amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred the bill (S. 3491) granting an increase of pension to Capt. John W. Dodd, reported it without amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

Mr. MITCHELL of Wisconsin, from the Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (S. 2375) granting an increase of pension to John G. Powers, reported it without amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

submitted a report thereon.

He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred the bill (S. 3177) granting a pension to Oscar A. Palmer, Tabor, Iowa, reported it without amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

Mr. VILAS, from the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads, to whom was referred the bill (S. 1811) to extend the uses of the mail service, reported it with amendments, and submitted a report thereon.

He also (for Mr. Brice), from the Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (S. 2993) granting a pension to Rebecca Gilbert, reported it without amendment, and submitted a report

He also (for Mr. BRICE), from the same committee, to whom was referred the bill (S. 3541) granting a pension to Jane B. Johnston, reported it with an amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

He also (for Mr. Brice) from the same committee, to whom was referred the bill (S. 2994) granting a pension to William G. Alspach, reported it without amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

Mr. VEST, from the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, to whom was referred the bill (S. 3481) to provide for the purchase of a site and the erection of a public building thereon at Joplin, in the State of Missouri, reported it without amend-

He also, from the Committee on Commerce, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 8551) to establish railroad bridges across the Cumberland and Tennessee rivers, in Kentucky, reported it with an amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 8814) to authorize the construction by the Duluth and North Dakota Railroad Company of two bridges across the Red River of the North between the States of Minnesota and North Dakota, reported it without amendment.

MONONGAHELA RIVER BRIDGE.

Mr. VEST, from the Committee on Commerce, to whom was referred the bill (S. 3426) to authorize the Union Railroad Company to construct and maintain a bridge across the Monongahela River, reported it without amendment.

Mr. QUAY. A similar bill passed the other House last week and upon resching the Sanata at my suggestion was laid.

and upon reaching the Senate at my suggestion was laid upon the table to await this report. I should be glad if the Senate will indulge me to put the House bill upon its passage, as I am to leave the city within a few days to be absent until the 1st of March. I ask unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the House bill.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from Pennsylvania asks unanimous consent for the present consideration of a bill, which will be read for information.

Mr. QUAY. The House bill was laid on the table several days

The bill (H. R. 9733) to authorize the Union Railroad Company to construct and maintain a bridge across the Monongahela River was read, and, by unanimous consent, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to its consideration.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

Mr. QUAY. I move that the bill (S. 3426) to authorize the Union Railroad Company to construct and maintain a bridge across the Monongahela River be indefinitely postponed.

The motion was agreed to.

BILLS INTRODUCED.

Mr. PLATT introduced a bill (S. 3544) to secure to the citizen Indians in the Indian Territory the equal use of their tribal lands, and to extend the jurisdiction of the United States courts therein, and for other purposes; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

Mr. CULLOM introduced a bill (S. 3545) amendatory to an act entitled "An act to regulate commerce," approved February 4, 1887, and the several acts amendatory thereof; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Interstate Commerce.

Mr. VILAS introduced a bill (S. 3546) granting a pension to Ellie Kee, widow of Thomas Kee, late private Company F of the Seventh Regiment Wisconsin Volunteer Infantry; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Pensions.
Mr. CHANDLER introduced a bill (S. 3548) to provide for a ermanent census; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on the Census.

Mr. GORMAN introduced a bill (S. 3549) to authorize the Chesapeake Beach Railway Company, of Maryland, to extend its line into and within the District of Columbia; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

Mr. CLARK introduced a bill (S. 3550) granting an increase of pension to J. F. Crawford; which was read twice by its title, and, with the accompanying paper, referred to the Committee on Pensions. He also introduced a bill (S. 3551) to authorize the entry and patenting of lands containing petroleum and other mineral oils under the placer-mining laws of the United States; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Public Lands.

INTERNATIONAL MONETARY CONFERENCE.

Mr. CHANDLER. I introduce a bill in behalf of the junior Senator from Colorado [Mr. Wolcott], which I ask may be read at length

The bill (S. 3547) to provide for the representation of the United States by commissioners at any international monetary conference hereafter to be called was read the first time by its title, and the second time at length, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That whenever, after March 4, 1897, the President of the United States shall determine that the United States should be represented at any international conference called by the United States or any other country, with a view to securing by international agreement a fixity of relative value between gold and silver as money, by means of a common ratio between those metals, with free mintage at such ratio, he is hereby authorized to appoint five or more commissioners to such international conference; and for compensation of said commissioners and for all reasonable expenses connected therewith, to be approved by the Secretary of State, including the proportion to be paid by the United States of the joint expenses of any such conference, the sum of $100,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary, is hereby appropriated.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. To what committee does the Senator suggest that the bill be referred?

Mr. CHANDLER. The bill is in the exact language of the three revious acts of Congress providing for the representation of the United States at international conferences. It is also in accordance with the act of March 2, 1895, in using the words "with free mintage at such ratio." Those words were first added in the act of 1895. The bill presents but a single point, and is well understood by Senators, so that I ask unanimous consent that, without being referred to any committee, it may go over until to-morrow, when I shall endeavor to bring it up for consideration.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and the bill will be placed on the Calendar.

Mr. HILL. The bill will be printed and laid on our desks?

Mr. CHANDLER. It will be printed, of course; and I ask to have rejected as past of the printed of the print have printed as a part of my remarks this morning copies of the four previous acts of Congress.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Without objection, it will be so ordered.

The acts referred to are as follows:

[Bland-Allison Act, February 28, 1878, Statutes at Large, volume 20, page 25.] [Bland-Allison Act, February 28, 1878, Statutes at Large, volume 20, page 25.]

Sec. 2. That immediately after the passage of this act the President shall invite the governments of the countries composing the Latin Union, so called, and of such other European nations as he may deem advisable, to join the United States in a conference to adopt a common ratio between gold and silver, for the purpose of establishing internationally the use of bimetallic money, and securing fixity of relative value between those metals; such conference to be held at such place in Europe or in the United States at such time within six months as may be mutually agreed upon by the executives of the governments joining in the same, whenever the governments so invited, or any three of them, shall have signified their willingness to unite in the same.

vited, or any three of them, shall have signified their willingness to unite in the same.

The President shall, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, appoint three commissioners, who shall attend such conference on behalf of the United States, and shall report the doings thereof to the President, who shall transmit the same to Congress.

Said commissioners shall each receive the sum of $2,500 and their reasonable expenses, to be approved by the Secretary of State; and the amount necessary to pay such compensation and expenses is hereby appropriated out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated.

[Sundry civil act, March 3, 1881, Statutes at Large, volume 21, page 455.]

For commissioners, not exceeding three in number, to be appointed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate of the United States, to represent the United States at a conference to be called to adopt a common ratio between gold and silver, for the purpose of establishing internationally the use of bimetallic money and securing fixity of relative value between those metals, the sum of $5,000 each, and for a secretary to said commissioners the sum of $5,000, and their reasonable expenses, to be approved by the Secretary of State; the amount necessary to pay such compensation and expenses to be immediately available out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated.

[Sundry civil act, August 7, 1882, Statutes at Large, volume 22, page 303.]

For commission to represent the United States at the reassembling of a conference to adopt a common ratio between gold and silver, for the purpose of establishing internationally the use of bimetallic money and securing fixity of relative value between those metals, and in negotiations with reference thereto, $25,000 and their reasonable expenses, to be approved by the Secretary of State.

[Sundry civil act March 2, 1895, Statutes at Large, volume 28, page 962.]

That whenever the President of the United States shall determine that the United States should be represented at any international conference called with a view to secure internationally a fixity of relative value between gold and silver, as money, by means of a common ratio between those metals, with free mintage at such ratio, the United States shall be represented at such conference by nine delegates, to be selected as follows: The President of the United States shall select three of said delegates, the Senate shall select three members of the Senate as delegates, and the Speaker of the present House of Representatives shall select three members of the Fifty-fourth Congress as delegates. If at any time there shall be any vacancy, such vacancy shall be filled by the President of the United States. And for the compensation of said delegates, together with all reasonable expenses connected therewith, to be approved by the Secretary of State, including the proportion to be paid by the United States of the joint expenses of such conference, the sum of $100,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary, is hereby appropriated.

AMENDMENTS TO APPROPRIATION BILLS.

AMENDMENTS TO APPROPRIATION BILLS.

Mr. LODGE submitted two amendments intended to be proposed by him to the sundry civil appropriation bill; which were referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be

He also submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the agricultural appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

Mr. PERKINS submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the sundry civil appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Fisheries, and ordered to be printed.

Mr. BAKER submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the Indian appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs, and ordered to be printed.

Mr. PETTIGREW submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the Indian appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs, and ordered to be printed.

Mr. NELSON submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the general deficiency appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Commerce, and ordered to be printed.

Mr. BURROWS submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the Indian appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs, and ordered to be printed.

THE COTTON PLANT BULLETIN.

Mr. TILLMAN submitted the following concurrent resolution; which was referred to the Committee on Printing:

Resolved by the Senate (the House of Representatives concurring), That there be printed 20,000 extra copies of Bulletin No. 33 of the United States Department of Agriculture, entitled The Cotton Plant: Its History, Botany, Chemistry, Culture, Enemies, and Uses, of which number 6,000 copies shall be for the use of the Senate, 12,000 copies for the use of the House of Representatives, and 2,000 copies for distribution by the Secretary of Agriculture.

GRAIN RATES AT MISSOURI RIVER POINTS.

Mr. PETTIGREW submitted the following resolution; which was considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to:

Resolved, That the Interstate Commerce Commission is hereby directed to send to the Senate a copy of the evidence taken by them in the investigation of grain rates at Missouri River points.

DIVISIONAL LINE BETWEEN VENEZUELA AND BRITISH GUIANA,

Mr. PETTIGREW. I offer a resolution and ask unanimous consent that it may be considered at this time.

The resolution was read, as follows:

Resolved, That the Secretary of State be, and is hereby, directed to send to the Senate a statement of the proceedings of the Commission appointed to investigate and report upon the true divisional line between the Republic of Venezuela and British Guiana, together with a copy of the treaty or agreement between the United States and Great Britain upon the subject of the boundary, which agreement has been submitted to the Government of Venezuela for consideration.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the present consideration of the resolution?

Mr. GRAY. I move that that resolution be referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

Mr. PETTIGREW. I ask to have the resolution printed and lie upon the table until to-morrow.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. It will be so ordered, in the absence of objection?

MISSOURI AGRICULTURAL COLLEGE GRANT.

Mr. COCKRELL. I ask that the Committee on Public Lands be discharged from the further consideration of the bill (S. 68) for the final adjustment of the agricultural college grant to the State of Missouri, and the bill (S. 3332) for the adjustment and correction of a selection of land by the State of Missouri under the act of Congress of July 2, 1862, donating to the States lands for the benefit of colleges of agriculture and mechanic arts, and that they be indefinitely postponed, as the grant has already been satisfactorily adjusted by the Secretary of the Interior.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The bills referred to by the Senator from Missouri will be indefinitely postponed, in the absence of objection.

BRIDGES ACROSS THE CUMBERLAND AND TENNESSEE RIVERS.

Mr. BLACKBURN. I ask unanimous consent that the Senate consider at this time the bill (H. R. 8551) to establish railroad bridges across the Cumberland and Tennessee rivers in Kentucky. It is a bill which has just been reported favorably by the Senate Committee on Commerce.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill, which had been reported from the Committee on Commerce with an amendment, in section 1, line 14, after the word "Kentucky," to insert "the location of said bridges;" so as to read "the location of said bridges to be selected by said railroad, or its successors or assigns, between said described points on said rivers.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The amendment was ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be ead a third time.

The bill was read the third time, and passed.

THE TWELFTH CENSUS

There has been an informal hearing on the Mr. CHANDLER. subject of the Twelfth Census before the Senate Committee on the Census and various members of the Senate and House Committees on Appropriations. I submit the minutes of that hearing, and ask that the usual number of copies may be printed as a document for the use of Congress

The VICE-PRESIDENT. In the absence of objection, it is so

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. Chapell, one of its clerks, announced that the House had passed the following bills:

A bill (S. 637) granting a pension to George M. Brooks; A bill (S. 937) granting an increase of pension to Sarah W. Comly, widow of Maj. Clifton Comly; A bill (S. 1320) to confirm the title to certain lands in William

Morgan and Harrison Moore, and to require the issue of patents therefor;

A bill (S. 2008) granting a pension to Fanny Moale Gibbon; A bill (S. 3182) granting a pension to Susan E. Cunningham; and

A bill (S. 3375) authorizing the construction of a bridge across the Columbia River, in the State of Washington.

The message also announced that the House had passed with amendments the following bills in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate:

A bill (S. 1690) granting a pension to Richard Brookins; and A bill (S. 2129) granting an increase of pension to Annie E. Nolan.

The message further announced that the House had passed the following bills; in which it requested the concurrence of the

A bill (H. R. 537) to remove the charge of desertion from the military record of Bernhard Steuber;
A bill (H. R. 1168) to increase the pension of Josiah P. Hill, late of Company F, Eighty-first Regiment of Illinois Volunteers in the war of the rebellion;

A bill (H. R. 1221) to make oleomargarine and all other imitation dairy products subject to the laws of the State or Territory into which they are transported;

A bill (H. R. 1311) granting an increase of pension to Charles W. Sentman;

A bill (H. R. 1353) for the relief of the administrator of George

McAlpin, deceased;
A bill (H. R. 1474) granting a pension to John J. Copley;
A bill (H. R. 1475) for the relief of Basil Moreland;
A bill (H. R. 1498) directing the Secretary of War to grant an

A bill (H. R. 1498) directing the Secretary of War to grant an honorable discharge to William M. Dalzell;
A bill (H. R. 1515) for the relief of Hugh McLaughlin;
A bill (H. R. 1524) to execute the findings of the Court of Claims in the matter of William B. Isaacs & Co.;
A bill (H. R. 2364) for the relief of Joseph H. Johnson;
A bill (H. R. 2620) granting a pension to Lauretta L. Prince;
A bill (H. R. 3294) for the relief of officers and crews of the United States gunboats Kineo and Chocura;

A bill (H. R. 3866) for the relief of George W. Goodman; A bill (H. R. 4099) to increase the pension of Mary S. Higgins; A bill (H. R. 4310) for the relief of Mathias Pedersen; A bill (H. R. 4941) to pension Hester A. Bostwick; A bill (H. R. 4943) to remove the charge of desertion standing against the name of Patrick Dougherty, Company A, Thirteenth against the name of Patrick Dougherty, Company A, Thirteenth New York Volunteer Infantry;

A bill (H. R. 5061) to pension Ira Powers, of Henderson County, Tenn.;
A bill (H. R. 5597) for the relief of Charles Deal;
A bill (H. R. 6233) granting increase of pension to John J. Boatwright;
A bill (H. R. 6528) to increase the pension of Clara L. Nichols, widow of Bvt. Maj. Gen. W. A. Nichols;
A bill (H. R. 6561) to increase the pension of Martha C. Carter, widow of Rear-Admiral S. P. Carter;
A bill (H. R. 7317) to increase the pension of Leroy M. Bethea;
A bill (H. R. 8683) granting a pension to Frederick Lierman;
A bill (H. R. 9306) granting a pension to Amanda Woodcock; and and

A bill (H. R. 9666) to correct and amend the military record of John Long, late private Company H, Thirty-first Regiment Missouri Volunteers.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED.

The message also announced that the Speaker of the House had signed the following enrolled bills and joint resolution; and they were thereupon signed by the Vice-President:

A bill (S. 347) to remove the charge of desertion and grant an honorable discharge to Helmuth F. Seeckel;

A bill (S. 1075) for the relief of the heirs of D. J. Fulford;

A bill (S. 1448) to withdraw from the Supreme Court jurisdiction of criminal cases not capital and confer the same on the circuit courts of appeals:

cuit courts of appeals;
A bill (S. 2176) granting a pension to Thomas Pollock;
A bill (S. 3050) to validate the appointments, acts, and services of certain deputy United States marshals in the Indian Territory,

and for other purposes;
A bill (S. 3210) granting a pension to Anna P. Johnson; and A joint resolution (S. R. 133) authorizing Surg. P. M. Rixey, of the Navy, to accept from the King of Spain the grand cross of naval merit with the white distinction mark, in recognition of services rendered to the officer and sailors of the Santa Maria who were injured by an explosion on that ship. injured by an explosion on that ship.

USE OF THE LIBRARY BUILDING.

Mr. MORRILL. I ask that the resolution reported by me from the Committee on Additional Accommodations for the Library on the 13th instant may be now taken up for consideration.

Mr. QUAY. On Thursday last I gave notice that at the conclusion of the routine morning business to-day I should call up the Army appropriation bill; but if the proposition for which the Senator from Vermont asks consideration is not going to occupy time,

I will give way.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Vermont to take up the resolution referred to by

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate resumed the consideration of the concurrent resolution reported from the Committee on Additional Accommodations for the Library of Congress January 13, 1897, as follows:

Resolved by the Senate (the House of Representatives concurring), That the building providing additional accommodations for the Library of Congress shall not be used or occupied, nor any part thereof, for any purpose other than that legitimately connected with the aforesaid Library of Congress.

Mr. MORRILL. Mr. President, I have a statement from the Library building will be required for present use. I have submitted the statement to my friend from Maine [Mr. Hale], who has examined it, and I believe he has no further objection to the passage of the resolution.

Mr. HALE. I objected the other day to the consideration of the resolution reported by the Senator from Vermont, believing then that there was available space in the new Library building then that there was available space in the new Library building which might properly be utilized by other branches of the public service. I have since then read a carefully prepared memorandum made by the Librarian, in which the whole subject of the uses of the different rooms in the building is gone into, and I can see from that memorandum (having a great deal of confidence in the Librarian about such matters) that the mere uses of the Library itself will pretty much or quite engross all the space in the building. For this reason I withdraw my objection and shall not

ing. For this reason I withdraw my objection, and shall not further oppose the passage of the resolution.

Mr. MORRILL. I ask that the statement of the Librarian, which I have presented, may be printed as a special document.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. In the absence of objection, it will be so ordered. The amendment reported by the Committee on Additional Accommodations for the Library to the resolution will be stated.

The Secretary. At the end o add "as authorized by law."

The amendment was agreed to. At the end of the resolution it is proposed to

Mr. HILL. What is the form of the resolution?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. It is a concurrent resolution. Does the Senator desire the resolution to be again read?

Mr. COCKRELL. Has the resolution ever been read?
The VICE-PRESIDENT. The resolution has been read.
Mr. HILL. Is it expected that the resolution shall go to the President?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair thinks not, as it is a concurrent resolution

Mr. HILL (to Mr. COCKRELL). Is this a matter under the exclusive jurisdiction of Congress?

Mr. COCKRELL. Yes, as it relates to the Congressional Li-

Mr. HILL. Then I have no objection to the resolution.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the esolution as amended.

The resolution as amended was agreed to.

PRESIDENTIAL APPROVALS.

A message from the President of the United States, by Mr. O. L. PRUDEN, one of his secretaries, announced that the President had on the 13th instant approved and signed the following acts:

An act (S. 264) providing for the location and purchase of public lands for reservoir sites;

An act (S. 1276) greating

An act (S. 1276) granting an increase of pension to John L. Britton:

Britton;
An act (S. 1723) to approve and ratify the construction of a bridge over and across Caddo Lake, at Mooringsport, La., by the Kansas City, Shreveport and Gulf Railway Company;
An act (S. 1724) authorizing the Kansas City, Watkins and Gulf Railway Company to construct and maintain a bridge across the Black River in Louisiana; and An act (S. 1883) to grant a pension to Charlotte O. Van Cleve, widow of Gen. Horatio P. Van Cleve.

The message also announced that the President of the United States had on the 14th instant approved and signed the act (S.

States had on the 14th instant approved and signed the act (S. 3245) granting a pension to Elvira Bachelder.

The message further announced that the President of the United States had on the 16th instant approved and signed the following acts:

An act (S. 2711) granting a pension to Ira Harris; An act (S. 1631) granting a pension to Emeline Filgate; and An act (S. 1881) granting a pension to Lydia Chapman.

BILL BECOME A LAW

The message also announced that the bill (S. 724) granting an increase of pension to Helen M. Mallery having been presented to the President on the 5th instant and not having been returned by him to the House of Congress in which it originated within the ten days prescribed by the Constitution, it has become a law without his approval.

INAUGURAL CEREMONIES.

Mr. BACON. I ask unanimous consent for the present consid-Mr. BACON. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of House joint resolution 214, which was reported by me from the Committee on the District of Columbia, authorizing the Secretary of War to grant permits to the executive committee on inaugural ceremonies for use of reservations or public spaces in the city of Washington on the occasion of the inauguration of the President-elect on March 4, 1897. This is a matter which has been twice brought before the Senate by me by direction of the Committee on the District of Columbia. I was instructed to ask for its immediate consideration, and each time it has been laid over at the request of some Senator, so that he might have further time to look into it. It was first laid over in order that it might be printed, and the second time the Senator from Maine [Mr. time to look into it. It was first laid over in order that it might be printed, and the second time the Senator from Maine [Mr. Hale] said he was not then ready for consideration and asked for a postponement. It is perfectly apparent that it is a matter which ought to be disposed of at a very early date, in order that the committee may, after due permission from the Secretary of War, know to what extent they may be allowed to proceed in making the necessary preparation for the inaugural ceremonies.

Mr. HALE. The joint resolution will give rise to some discussion when it comes up, and I know the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. QUAY] is desirous of getting the Army appropriation bill through the Senate to-day. Therefore I hope the Senator from Georgia will let the matter lie over for a day or two, and after the appropriation bills are out of the way I shall not further object to its consideration.

to its consideration. Mr. BACON. I am perfectly content, Mr. President, that the joint resolution shall go over for a limited time, but I think it important, in view of the public interests, that some definite time should be fixed for the consideration and determination of this

Mr. HALE. I think the Senator is right about that. It ought to be settled within a few days whether the joint resolution is or is not to pass. After a while, after a few appropriation bills have been passed, there will be an opportunity of bringing up the joint resolution. I shall not then further oppose the consideration of the joint resolution. I do not say that I am for the measure, but I shall not object to its coming up.

Mr. BACON. I understand.

PACIFIC RAILROADS.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. If there be no further concurrent or other resolutions

Mr. QUAY. I move, in accordance with the notice heretofore given, that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the Army appropriation bill.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair will recognize the Senator from Pennsylvania after the morning business shall have been concluded.

The Chair lays before the Senate a resolution submitted by the Senator from Alabama [Mr. Morgan], coming over from a previous day, which will be read.

The Secretary read the resolution submitted by Mr. Morgan on the 14th instant, as follows:

the 14th instant, as follows:

Whereas it is alleged that certain bonds issued by the United States in aid of the Central Pacific Railroad Company and also of the Union Pacific Railroad Company have fallen due and remain unpaid, and that by reason of the default in the payment thereof the property held and owned by each of said companies at that time became the property of the United States, and that said property of every description so held and owned by said companies at the time of such default now rightfully belongs to the United States:

*Resolved, That the Committee on the Judiciary is directed to examine into and report whether such allegation is true in fact and in law, and that they report the nature and character of the right and title of the United States in and to said property, and the descriptions of or classes of property that have so inured to the United States under the law, and whether either of said railroad companies has any lawful right or equity of redemption of said property.

Mat. III. In Class Content for the Alcheme who effected the reso.

Mr. HILL. The Senator from Alabama who offered the resolution is out of the Chamber at present, and I suggest that it remain over for a few moments until he returns. I inquire whether the resolution should not properly go to the Committee on Pacific Railroads?

Mr. STEWART. I suggest that the resolution lie over until to-morrow morning and keep its place.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. In the absence of objection, that course will be pursued.

ARMY APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. QUAY. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the army appropriation bill.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 9638) making appropriations for the support of the Army for the fiscal year end-ing June 30, 1898, which had been reported from the Committee on Appropriations with amendments.

on Appropriations with amendments.

Mr. QUAY. I move that the first formal reading of the bill be dispensed with, and that the amendments reported by the Committee on Appropriations be acted upon as they are reached in the reading of the bill.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. In the absence of objection, that course will be pursued. The bill will be read.

The Secretary proceeded to read the bill, and read to the end of the clause on page 6, ending in line 9, as follows:

the clause on page 6, ending in line 9, as follows:

For additional pay to such officers for length of service, to be paid with their current monthly pay, $6,960.

Mr. HAWLEY. I desire to offer an amendment to that clause, recommended to me by the War Department, to correct an injustice resulting from the general terms of the act of October 1,1890.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. Bacon in the chair). The Chair will suggest to the Senator that his amendment will come in after the committee amendments have been acted upon.

Mr. QUAY. That order may be dispensed with so far as the committee is concerned and the amendment received.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair will entertain the amendment of the Senator from Connecticut.

Mr. HAWLEY. I send the amendment to the desk, to come in after line 9, on page 6.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.
The SECRETARY. In line 9, on page 6, after the word "dollars," it is proposed to insert:

And the promotions authorized by law when a vacancy occurs in the office of the Chief Signal Officer may be made in grades below that of colonel, upon the approval of this act.

Mr. QUAY. I will accept that amendment, Mr. President.

Mr. QUAY. I will accept that amendment, Mr. President.
The amendment was agreed to.
The Secretary resumed the reading of the bill. The first amendment of the Committee on Appropriations was, on page 18, line 7, after the word "same," to insert "and including also all expenditures for construction and repairs required at the Army and Navy Hospital at Hot Springs, Ark.;" so as to make the clause read:

Construction and repair of hospitals: For construction and repairs of hospitals at military posts already established and occupied, including the extraduty pay of enlisted men employed on the same, and including also all expenditures for construction and repairs required at the Army and Navy Hospital at Hot Springs, Ark., except quarters for the officers, $75,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 19, line 16, after the word "diseases," to strike out "except at" and insert "and the supply of:" so as to read:

MEDICAL DEPARTMENT.

MEDICAL DEPARTMENT.

Medical and hospital department: For the purchase of medical and hospital supplies, including disinfectants for general post sanitation, expenses of medical supply depots, pay of employees, medical care and treatment of officers and enlisted men of the Army on duty at posts and stations for which no other provision is made; for the proper care and treatment of cases in the Army suffering from contagious or epidemic diseases, and the supply of the Army and Navy Hospital at Hot Springs, Ark.; advertising and other miscellaneous expenses of the Medical Department, the amount to be expended for pay of civilian employees not to exceed $40,000, $135,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 23, line 15, to increase the appropriation for the expenses of the Signal Service of the Army from $15,000 to $18,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The reading of the bill was continued to the end of line 19, on

Mr. COCKRELL. I ask the Senator from Pennsylvania to permit me to offer an amendment at this point. In line 16, page 23, after the word "may," I move to insert "in the discretion of the Secretary of War," so that the Secretary will have control of the matter.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated. The SECRETARY. After the word "may," in line 16, page 23, it is proposed to insert "in the discretion of the Secretary of War;"

so as to make the proviso read:

Provided, That department commanders may, in the discretion of the Secretary of War, detail two enlisted men from each army post in their respective departments, under such arrangements as they may deem best, to report to the chief signal officer of the Department for instruction and duty.

Mr. QUAY. The amendment is unobjectionable. Let it be adopted.

The amendment was agreed to.

The amendment was agreed to.

The reading of the bill was resumed and concluded.

Mr. QUAY. If the Secretary will return to page 8, there should be an amendment in lines 21 and 22, by striking out the words "when traveling on duty without troops," which occurs in a quotation from lines 9 and 10 of the same page, where that language is omitted. I move to strike out the words I have indicated.

The Secretary. In line 21, page 8, it is proposed to strike out the words "when traveling on duty without troops;" so as to make the clause read:

the clause read:

All the money hereinbefore appropriated, except the appropriation "for mileage to officers when authorized by law." shall be disbursed and accounted for by the Pay Department as pay of the Army, and for that purpose shall constitute one fund.

Mr. QUAY. That leaves the language as it is in line 9.
The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment submitted by the Senator from Pennsylvania.

The amendment was agreed to.
The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendments were concurred in.

The amendments were ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time, and passed.

HOUSE BILLS REFERRED.

The following bills were severally read twice by their titles, and referred to the Committee on Pensions:

A bill (H. R. 1168) to increase the pension of Josiah P. Hill, late of Company F, Eighty-first Regiment of Illinois Volunteers, in the war of the rebellion;

A bill (H. R. 1311) granting an increase of pension to Charles . Sentman;

A bill (H. R. 1474) granting a pension to John J. Copley; A bill (H. R. 2620) granting a pension to Lauretta L. Prince; A bill (H. R. 4099) to increase the pension of Mary S. Higgins; A bill (H. R. 4941) to pension Hester A. Bostwick; A bill (H. R. 5061) to pension Ira Powers, of Henderson County,

A bill (H. R. 6233) granting increase of pension to John J. Boatwright

A bill (H. R. 6528) to increase the pension of Clara L. Nichols, widow of Bvt. Maj. Gen. W. A. Nichols;
A bill (H. R. 6561) to increase the pension of Martha C. Carter, widow of Rear-Admiral S. P. Carter;

A bill (H. R. 7317) to increase the pension of Leroy M. Bethea; A bill (H. R. 8683) granting a pension to Frederick Lierman; and

A bill (H. R. 9306) granting a pension to Amanda Woodcock. The following bills were severally read twice by their titles, and referred to the Committee on Military Affairs:

A bill (H. R. 537) to remove the charge of desertion from the military record of Bernhard Stueber;
A bill (H. R. 1498) directing the Secretary of War to grant an honorable discharge to William M. Dalzell;
A bill (H. R. 1515) for the relief of Hugh McLaughlin;

A bill (H. R. 2364) for the relief of Joseph H. Johnson; A bill (H. R. 3866) for the relief of George W. Goodman; A bill (H. R. 4943) to remove the charge of desertion standing against the name of Patrick Dougherty, Company A, Thirteenth New York Volunteer Infantry; and

A bill (H. R. 9666) to correct and amend the military record of John Long, late private Company H, Thirty-first Regiment Missouri Volunteers.

The following bills were severally read twice by their titles, and referred to the Committee on Claims: A bill (H. R. 1353) for the relief of the administrator of George

McAlpin, deceased;
A bill (H. R. 1475) for the relief of Basil Moreland;
A bill (H. R. 1524) to execute the findings of the Court of Claims in the matter of William B. Isaacs & Co.;

A bill (H. R. 3294) for the relief of the officers and crews of the United States gunboats Kineo and Chocura;

A bill (H. R. 4310) for the relief of Mathias Pedersen; and A bill (H. R. 5597) for the relief of Charles Deal.

REGULATIONS CONCERNING OLEOMARGARINE, ETC.

The bill (H. R. 1221) to make eleomargarine and all other imitation dairy products subject to the laws of the State or Territory into which they are transported was read twice by its title.

Mr. GEAR. I move that the bill be referred to the Committee

Mr. GEAR. I move that the bill be referred to the Committee on Interstate Commerce.

Mr. COCKRELL. My impression is that similar bills have always gone to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry.

Mr. GEAR. I do not know whether or not they have gone to that committee, but certainly the Committee on Interstate Commerce is the proper committee to consider a bill of the magnitude and character of the one now before the Senate.

Mr. COCKRELL. Which committee considered the bill in the other House?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Committee on Agriculture.
Mr. GEAR. It was considered in the other House by the Committee on Agriculture.

Mr. HILL. Let it go to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry here.

Mr. BATE. Similar bills have heretofore gone to the Committee on Agriculture of this body, I will say to the Senator from Iowa. They generally go to that committee.

Iowa. They generally go to that committee.

Mr. HILL. Is it not proper to refer the bill to the Committee on Agriculture? I think it is. I am inclined to believe that its reference to that committee will facilitate the passage of the bill, and if the Senator from Iowa is a friend of the bill, and I assume

Mr. GEAR. I will state, in reply to the Senator from New York, that I am on both committees. It makes no great difference to which committee the bill goes. I favor the bill, but I think the Committee on Interstate Commerce is the proper committee to which to refer it.

which to refer it. Mr. HILL. I suggest a modification, that the bill be referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry. Does the Senator from Iowa accept the suggestion?

Mr. GEAR. No. I think it should be referred to the Committee on Interstate Commerce, where, personally, I would prefer that it should go. Mr. BATE. Mr. BATE. Such bills, permit me to say, have heretofore gone to the Committee on Agriculture, and we had a similar measure before us last session by the action of the Senate.

Mr. GEAR. Let the Senate decide the matter. I am not particular about the reference of the bill.

Mr. BATE. The Senator and I are both members of the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry.

Mr. HILL. I move to amend the motion of the Senator from Iowa by inserting "the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry."

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair will state to the Senator from New York that it is not an amendable motion, except by way of instruction.

Mr. HILL. Then I withdraw the amendment. I trust the motion of the Senator from Iowa will be voted down, and that the bill will be referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry.

Mr. COCKRELL. I hope that the bill may be laid over until the matter comes up regularly in the morning, when the Senate will be full

Mr. GEAR. I agree to that suggestion.
The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will go over.

SOLDIERS' HOME AT HOT SPRINGS, S. DAK.

Mr. PETTIGREW. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (S. 2791) for the establishment, control, operation, and maintenance of the Northern Branch of the National Home for Disabled Volunteer Soldiers at Hot Springs, in the State asks the unanimous consent of the Senate for the present consideration of the bill which he has indicated. Is there objection?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from South Dakota

Mr. BATE. Has the bill been before a committee; and if so,

what committee:

Mr. PETTIGREW. It was reported from the Committee on Military Affairs. There is a written report accompanying the bill.
Mr. BATE. In favor of the bill?
Mr. PETTIGREW. Yes, sir; a unanimous report, I understand.

Mr. BATE. I know that we had the bill up in that committee, but I did not know what the final action was

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be read.

The Secretary read the bill.

Mr. BROWN. I object to the consideration of the bill. I do not think a bill of its importance ought to be passed without the most careful consideration.

Mr. PETTIGREW. I call for the reading of the report, and I should be glad to have the Senator from Utah listen to its reading. The PRESIDING OFFICER. The report will be read, if there be no objection. The Secretary read the report, submitted by Mr. SEWELL May 29, 1896, as follows:

The Secretary read the report, submitted by Mr. Sewell May 29, 1896, as follows:

The Committee on Military Affairs, to whom was referred the bill (S.2791) for the establishment, control, and maintenance of the Northern Branch of the National Home for Disabled Volunteer Soldiers at Hot Springs, in the State of South Dakota, having had the same under consideration, report it back with a recommendation that it do pass.

As is expressed in its title, this measure provides for the erection of a branch of the National Home for Disabled Volunteer Soldiers at the city of Hot Springs, State of South Dakota. It is a location possessing advantages that can not elsewhere be acquired—advantages provided by nature and so rare in their combination that they are duplicated in only a few instances the world over. From the surrounding hills come forth unfailing streams of water, medicated and tempered in the great laboratory of subterrances earth, endowed with health-giving properties in relative proportions so exact that man, with all the skill that scientific knowledge imparts, may strive in vain to improve upon, and at last can only imitate. It is the product of centuries of processes—a part of the grand scheme of nature, which, in preparing the earth for man's habitation, made provision also to combat the ills to which man has fallen heir.

As a site for the proposed Home the citizens of Hot Springs agree to donate ground sufficient for all the needs of the Home, and to give a deed of perpet ual lease of one or more of the medicinal hot springs which there abound. Under the provisions of the bill both the Home site and the spring or springs are to be selected by the Board of Managers of the National Home for Disabled Volunteer Soldiers, the donors of the property agreeing to abide by the choice of that organization. It is also provided that the Board of Managers are to have exclusive jurisdiction over the property.

In presenting a favorable report upon the measure your committee bases its conclusions upon these proposition

SIR: 1 return herewith Senate bill No. 2791, for the erection and maintenance of the Northern Branch of the Home for Disabled Volunteer Soldiers, at Hot Springs, S. Dak.

There is no question in my mind that another branch of the National Home for Disabled Volunteer Soldiers should be established in the territory between the Mississippi and the summit of the Rocky Mountains, that one now in existence being constantly overcrowded and unable to meet the requirements.

now in existence tening constants.

The location at Hot Springs is an eligible one, and with the appropriation a hospital could be erected which would relieve the hospitals of the other Branches at once, and form the nucleus of a larger branch, should one be required.

Senate bill No. 279I is herewith respectfully returned.

Respectfully, yours,

W. B. FRANKLIN,

W. B. FRANKLIN,
President Board of Managers National Home for Disabled Volunteer Soldiers.

Hon. DANIEL S. LAMONT, Secretary of War, Washington, D. C.

On the 4th of April last, the chairman of the Senate Committee on Indian Affairs (Mr. Pettighew) addressed a letter to General Franklin on the subject of the bill under consideration, and to that letter General Franklin replied in the following terms:

HARTFORD, CONN., April 7, 1896.

My Dear Sir: I have received your letter of the 4th instant, on the branch of the National Home contemplated at Hot Springs, S. Dak.

A similar bill, H. R. 724, Fifty-fourth Congress, had been referred to me some time ago by the Secretary of War, from one of the Congressional military committees. The following is a copy of my indorsement on the bill, and I ought to say that my opinion was given as a member of the Board of Managers merely, and is not necessarily the opinion of the Board:

"Harfford, Conn., February 11, 1896.

"SIR: I respectfully acknowledge receipt of H. R. bill 784, Fifty-fourth Congress, first session, for the establishment, etc., of a hospital as a sanitarium branch of the National Home for Disabled Volunteer Soldiers, at Hot Springs, in the State of South Dakota, referred to me for remark.
"I am of opinion that it is desirable that another branch of the National Home be established in one of the States west of the Mississippi River to supplement that at Leavenworth, established in 1884, but now overcrowded, and I know of no objection to the size property the hot springs would be an advantage, but I am unable to speak the hot springs would be an advantage, but I am unable to speak of that advantage.

"I think the bill would be improved by not specifying the name 'hospital,' but by making it simply a branch of the National Home for Disabled Volunteer Soldiers at Hot Springs, as the name of the institution.

"The appropriation is not large enough. One hundred and fifty thousand dollars is the smallest that has been appropriated, in my experience, for the construction of a branch home.

"The condition as to donation of land and springs to the institution seems correct. The second section of the bill does not, I think, need change. The bill is herewith returned.

"W. B. FRANKLIN,

"Respectfully, yours,

"President Board of Managers National Home "for Disabled Volunteer Soldiers." and I know of no objection to the site proposed. It may be that the use of the hot springs would be an advantage, but I am unable to speak technically of that advantage.

"Hon. DANIEL S. LAMONT, "Secretary of War, Washington, D. C."

I think it will be well to have the name left blank, or to simply call it the Northern Branch, National Home for Disabled Volunteer Soldiers, and I also think the amount to be appropriated should be $150,000 for the construction of the branch in the first instance.

Respectfully, yours,

President Board of Managers National Home for Disabled Volunteer Soldiers.

Hon. R. F. Pettignew, Chairman Committee on Indian Affairs, United States Senate, Washington, D. C.

United States Senate, Washington, D. C.

We have in these two communications a full indorsement of the bill for the erection of a branch home at Hot Springs by the president of the Board of Managers of the National Home. He approves of the location of the proposed branch home, and testifies to the necessity for another institution of that character for the relief of overcrowded Homes. General Franklin refers particularly to the opportunity here presented for the erection of a branch home with a view to future enlargement, should the exigencies of the service demand increased facilities. It appears, from the information obtained by your committee, that existing Homes are not susceptible of enlargement upon the basis of plans adopted and put in force.

Gen. W. W. Averell, assistant inspector-general of the National Home for Disabled Volunteer Soldiers, in a letter to Senator PETTIGREW, of South Dakota, under date of February 13 last, says:

"It may be well to mention that all the Branches of the Home this side of the Rocky Mountains are crowded, and they can not be enlarged for a greater population without a troublesome and expensive extension of their plants for cooking, heating, laundry, etc., which are now strained to their full capacity."

General Franklin doubtless had these conditions in view when he will be supported to the conditions in view when he will be supported to the conditions in view when he will be supported to the conditions in view when he will be supported to the conditions in view when he will be supported to the conditions in view when he will be supported to the conditions in view when he will be supported to the conditions in view when he will be supported to the conditions in view when he will be supported to the conditions in view when he will be supported to the conditions in view when he will be supported to the conditions in view when he will be supported to the conditions in view when he will be supported to the conditions in view when he will be supported to the conditions in view population without a troublesome and expensive extension of their plants for cooking, heating, laundry, etc., which are now strained to their full capacity."

General Franklin doubtless had these conditions in view when he said, in his report to the Secretary of War, April 27, 1896:

"The location at Hot Springs is an eligible one, and with the appropriation a hospital could be erected which would relieve the hospitals of the other Branches at once, and form the nucleus of a larger branch, should one be required."

The demand upon the facilities of these homes of refuge is a growing one, and will increase rapidly for a number of years. The defenders of the nation have reached an age when many of them must succumb to physical disability and disease, and those whose declining years are attended by too frequent poverty must place themselves under the bourty of the nation. The importance, therefore, of a branch home that can be readily expanded to adapt itself to augmented numbers is apparent.

Regarding the curative properties of the medicinal waters of the Hot Springs your committee desires to speak at length. These springs were the resort of the Indians long before the white man found his way into the jealously guarded realm of the Black Hills country, and were considered by the aborigine as a panacea for all diseases. Their fame had penetrated the confines of civilization long before the advancing wave of white settlement had swept back the line of opposition and driven the Indians from their last rallying point. As soon as the Anglo-Saxon had possessed himself of this long-contested ground, business methods began to be applied to the medicinal springs. They were made available to the public, their properties ascertained, and their curative qualities proclaimed. An extensive hotel was erected, baths constructed, and conveniences for the sick provided. In 1879 the State of South Dakota located and erected a Soldiers' Home at Hot Springs, and it is now a large institution, filled with veterans of the late war who

BATH, N. Y., February 7, 1894.

Averell, who says:

BATH, N. Y., February 7, 1894.

Dear Str.: I have been requested to present to you my views regarding the advisability of and necessity for the establishment of a sanitarium at Hot Springs, S. Dak. Your committee, I presume, has my reports of three visits to the State Home for Disabled Volunteer Soldiers at that place made in 1891, 1892, and 1893, which contain my knowledge of the climate and of the healing qualities of the waters of the Minnekatah or Hot Springs.

The unusual number of members discharged from the State Home during the year by reason of their recovery from the disabilities which had entitled them to its care and benefits first attracted my attention, and subsequently the results of the remarkable test made last year, 1893, upon thirty disabled men selected and sent from the Western Branch of the National Home, have induced my belief in the efficacy of the waters of the Hot Springs for rheumatism, sciatica, spinal irritation, and nervous prostration.

The test, which is fully described in my report, was severe, but too brief. It was upon about 30 men, 18 of whom were treated for rheumatism. In the sixty days' test, 8 of them, or 44 per cent of those who were treated for rheumatism, were practically cured, the remainder all benefited, excepting I, and those suffering from sciatica, spinal irritation, and nervous prostration were improved. I believe the percentage cured would have been doubled with four to six months' treatment. During the year ending June 30, 1893, there were in the Central, Marion, Northwestern, and Western Branches of the National Home an average number sick of 1.590 of which $53, or 53 per cent, were treated for rheumatism in its various forms, acute, subacute, and chronic (articular and muscular). These branches are the nearest and most accessible to the South Dakota Hot Springs and if provision were made for the treatment of those $53 members afflicted with rheumatism at the Hosprings, and 44 per cent of them were cured, there would ensue a saving to the there would be 176 restored to health, and there would follow a saving of $100 per capita to the Government per annum, or $17,000. Thus there might be a total saving effected per annum of $70,000.

If a sanitarium were established at Hot Springs at a cost of $100,000, and one-half the cases of rheumatism should be cured that might be sent to it for treatment from the most convenient Soldiers' Homes, I have no doubt it would pay for itself within five years after it was ready for occupation, in saving from cost of maintenance in Soldiers' Homes without cure. Without a cent of savings in money, the rescue from pain and misery and the restoration to health of those men for whose welfare the Government is responsible would, I believe, fully justify the establishment of the sanitarium.

In this view it would be an economical undertaking for the public good, which the public would appreciate and approve.

I am, General, very truly, yours,

WM. W. AVERELL, U. S. A.,

WM. W. AVERELL, U. S. A.,
Asst. Inspector-General, National Home for Disabled Volunteer Soldiers. Gen. John C. Black, Chairman Subcommittee on Soldiers' Homes, etc.

Chairman Subcommittee on Soldiers' Homes, etc.

The report in detail upon the test cases at Hot Springs, S. Dak., referred to by General Averell runs as follows:

Case I.—Andrew J. Arnett, B. Sixth Kansas Infantry. Forwarded to South Dakota July 6, 1893. Locomotor ataxia. Returned to Western Branch July 23. No improvement under treatment.

Case II.—Nathan J. Axtel, H. Fourteenth Illinois Infantry. Forwarded to South Dakota July 6, 1893. Muscular rheumatism, lumbago, nervous prostration, cystitis. Returned to Western Branch November 9. Rheumatism improved after treatment. Lumbago cured. Cystitis not benefited. Commenced Keeley treatment April 9, 1894. for tobacco; no influence on general health. No treatment in Western Branch Hospital.

Case III.—Adam P. Baum, E., One hundred and sixteenth Indiana Infantry. Forwarded to South Dakota July 6, 1893. Chronic articular rheumatism; spinal irritation. Returned to Western Branch November 9. Rheumatism cured. Spinal irritation not materially benefited. Commenced Keeley treatment February 24, 1894. Health now completely restored. Is one of the most competent nurses in hospital at this time.

Case IV.—Ira D. Chamberlain, D, Seventh Indiana Infantry. Forwarded to South Dakota July 6, 1893. Sciatica. Returned to Western Branch November 9. Since return from South Dakota (under treatment of Home surgeon) showed marked improvement. Used two crutches and suffered continual pain when he commenced treatment; now very much improved; uses only one cane. Now absent with leave at Washington, D. C.

Case V.—Thomas Concannon, G, Sixty-ninth Illinois Infantry. Forwarded to South Dakota July 6, 1893. Chronic articular rheumatism and lumbago. Returned to Western Branch November 9. Greatly improved on return. Swellings all gone from hands and feet. Gained in weight and strength. Commenced Keeley treatment February 22, 1894. Physical condition greatly improved.

Returned to Western Branch November 9. Greatly improved on return. Swellings all gone from hands and feet. Gained in weight and strength. Commenced Keeley treatment February 22, 1894. Physical condition greatly improved.

Case VI.—Martin W. Cozine, D. Twelfth Missouri Cavalry. Forwarded to South Dakota July 6, 1893. Chronic articular rheumatism. Returned to Western Branch November 9. Very much improved by treatment. Is now absent with leave from hospital.

Case VII.—Clark Eldridge, A. Third Rhode Island Cavalry. Forwarded to South Dakota July 6, 1893. Nervous prostration. Returned to Western Branch November 9. Claims to be not improved by treatment. Examination shows less tenderness of spine. Is hypochrondriacal. Now in barracks.

Case VIII.—Charles A. Gifford. H., Fourth Illinois Cavalry. Forwarded to South Dakota July 6, 1893. Diabetes mellitus. Returned to Western Branch November 9. Improved under treatment. Now in convalescent Company K. Case IXI.—Patrick W. Gilligan, D. Thirteenth Indiana Infantry. Forwarded to South Dakota July 6, 1893. Lumbago; spinal irritation. Returned to Western Branch November 9. Improved under treatment; gained 4½ pounds. Now in barracks.

Case XI.—Gillman D. Grove, United States Navy. Forwarded to South Dakota July 6, 1893. Nervous prostration and lumbago. Returned to Western Branch November 9. Improved under treatment. Now in barracks.

Case XI.—James Hanson, alias John Kerwin, H. Eleventh United States Infantry. Forwarded to South Dakota July 6, 1893. Chronic articular rheumatism. Returned to Western Branch November 9. General improvement in condition. Now in barracks.

Case XII.—Philander Hudson, D, One hundred and seventh New York Infantry. Forwarded to South Dakota July 6, 1893. Chronic articular rheumatism. Returned to Western Branch November 9. General improvement in condition. Seturned to Western Branch November 9. Rheumatism practically cured. South Dakota July 6, 1893. Chronic articular rheumatism. Returned to Western Branch November 9. Rheumatism practically cured. Spin

South Dakota July 6, 1893. Chronic articular rheumatism. Returned to Western Branch November 9. Was considerably improved under treatment. Now in barracks.

CASE XV.—Edward F. Kingsland, H. Second Colorado Cavalry. Forwarded to South Dakota July 6, 1893. Chronic articular rheumatism. Returned to Western Branch November 9. Greatly improved by treatment. Gained in strength, weight, and appearance. Now in barracks.

CASE XVI.—Alphonozo Longacre, 6, One hundred and eighteenth Pennsylvania Infantry. Forwarded to South Dakota July 6, 1893. Locomotor ataxia. Died at Hot Springs, S. Dak., September 1, 1893.

CASE XVII.—John Mahony, C, Forty-third Onio Infantry. Forwarded to South Dakota July 6, 1893. Muscular rheumatism and lumbago. Returned to Western Branch November 9 Greatly benefited. Pain entirely disappeared from back and shoulders. Gained in weight. Commenced Keeley treatment October 21, 1893. Is now orderly for Home treasurer, and in good health.

CASE XVIII.—Albert Mueller, E, Second Illinois Light Artillery. Forwarded to South Dakota July 6, 1893. Chronic articular rheumatism. Returned to Western Branch November 9. Great improvement, but still swelling and pain in left ankle and left wrist. Gained in weight.

CASE XXIX.—Edward McGloin, E, Third New Jersey Cavalry. Forwarded to South Dakota July 6, 1893. Chronic articular rheumatism. Returned to Western Branch November 9. Worse than before treatment. Is now in hospital (Western Branch November 9. Worse than before treatment. Is now in hospital (Western Branch November 9. Practically a well man; gain of 11 pounds in weight. Now in barracks.

CASE XXI.—Evi T. Nichols, E, First Ohio Light Artillery. Forwarded to South Dakota July 6, 1893. Chronic articular rheumatism and lumbago. Returned to Western Branch November 9. Practically a well man; gain of 11 pounds in weight. Now in barracks.

CASE XXII.—Michael Shea, H. Twenty-seventh New Jersey Infantry. Forwarded to South Dakota July 6, 1893. Chronic articular rheumatism. Returned to Western Branch November 9. Impro which was principal reason for sending him to the springs. Is now in hospital (Western Branch) under treatment.

CASE XXIII.—Patrick A. Somers, F. Two hundred and thirteenth Pennsylvania Infantry. Forwarded to South Dakota July 6, 1893. Chronic articular rheumatism. Returned to Western Branch November 9. No better for the treatment. Now in barracks.

CASE XXIV.—Abram Steadman, A, Thirty-first Ohio Infantry. Forwarded to South Dakota July 6, 1893. Chronic rheumatism. Returned to Western Branch November 9. Rheumatism entirely gone. Cystitis no better. Now in hospital (Western Branch) for latter.

CASE XXV.—John Walsh, United States Marine Corps. Forwarded to South Dakota July 6, 1893. Chronic muscular rheumatism. Returned to Western Branch November 9. Some improvement. Legs still painful. Commenced Keeley treatment February 2, 1894. Now in barracks as well as a man of his age could expect to be.

CASE XXVI.—Richard Youmans, hospital steward, United States Army. Forwarded to South Dakota July 6, 1893. Nephritis, lumbago, and rheumatism. Returned to Western Branch November 9. Rheumatism and lumbago both disappeared. Nephritis worse. Now in barracks.

CASE XXVII.—Frederick Zeigler, B. First Missouri Light Artillery. Forwarded to South Dakota July 6, 1893. Chronic articular rheumatism. Returned to Western Branch November 9. Rheumatism all gone.

I herewith respectfully submit my final report of the experimental test upon the details sent here (the Hot Springs of South Dakota) July 7, 1893, from the Western Branch National Military Home, Kansas, of the curative properties of the waters and climate of Hot Springs, S. Dak., for certain chronic diseases, the nature and history of which are fully given in detailed report above.

The number of men sent was 30, and time given for the test sixty days; age of youngest patient, 46 years; oldest, 71 years; average age, 52 years.

As will be observed, the cases of locomotor ataxia, arthritis deformans, and aberration of the mind, conceded to be incurables, and sent only with the credit given for cures and the treatment by the waters and the climate of this place.

As will be seen, almost every man was afflicted with rheumatic or nervous troubles, the same being cured in almost every instance. I am satisfied that a careful inspection by the medical board on the return of the men will bear me out in saying that all things considered, age of patients, shattered constitutions of some of them, variety and complication of diseases, and the chronic nature of all, that the result of this test, as shown by detailed report, is in every substantial sense highly satisfactory. A realization of all the claims put forth by the promoters of this experiment as to the virtues of the waters and climate of Hot Springs, S. Dak., and the desirability of this place for the location of a United States sanitarium for the treatment of such chronic diseases as most usually affect the old soldier is fulfilled.

I can not speak too highly of the courtesy and assistance given me by Gen. Joseph Knipe, and the excellent conduct of all men while under my care. Col. E. E. Clough, and the board of managers of the South Dakota Soldiers' Home, Commandant McGrew and wife, and all the officers of the Home have done all in their power to aid in securing the comfort of the men, and many thanks are due them for their untiring efforts to do so much good.

Very respectfully,

R. D. JENNINGS,

R. D. JENNINGS, Surgeon in Charge.

WESTERN BRANCH NATIONAL HOME FOR DISABLED VOLUNTEER SOLDIERS, September 9, 1893.

SIR: I have the honor to transmit herewith my report on the condition before and after treatment of the patients sent to Hot Springs, S. Dak., to test the efficiency of the waters for various diseases.

Very respectfully, etc.,

O. C. McNARY,
Assistant and Acting Surgeon.

Gen. W. W. Averell, U. S. A.,
Assistant Inspector-General
National Home for Disabled Volunteer Soldiers.

National Home for Disabled Volunteer Soldiers.

To sum up:
Of the patients suffering from rheumatism and lumbago, eight are practically cured of that disease; the balance, except one, McGloin, are improved. McGloin is worse. Cases of sciatica improved, cases of cystitis were not benefited, cases of spinal irritation improved, cases of nervous prostration improved, cases of diabetes mellitus improved, case of nervous prostration improved, cases of locomotor ataxia, one, Arnett, was sent home after two weeks on account of an aggravated renewal of the pains, no improvement; and one, Longacre, died at the Springs September 1, 1893.

The treatment by baths and drinking of the waters was supplemented by internal and external medication (in all or most cases, I believe), and in some cases by electricity.

The experiment would have been a better and truer test of the efficacy of the waters had this medication and electricity not been employed. As it is, we can not judge of the true virtues of the water. We can only judge of the results of the treatment employed as they present themselves.

The patients themselves, with two or three exceptions, believe their improvement would have been more perfect and lasting had they remained longer under the treatment. This I believe myself.

However, the benefits received by the patients sent are, in most cases, quite satisfactory.

Very respectfully submitted.

O. C. McNARY,

Assistant and Acting Surgeon.

O. C. McNARY, Assistant and Acting Surgeon.

Your committee have been furnished with a copy of the analysis obtained by the superintendent of the South Dakota Soldiers' Home of the water of three of the springs in the Hot Springs group, and deem it of sufficient importance to incorporate within this report.

An analysis by Prof. G. A. Maringer, chemist, Chicago, resulted as follows:

MINNEKAHTA SPRINGS.
[Constituents, in grains.]
Silica	2.464
Peroxide of iron	Trace.
Calcium sulphate	16.352
Magnesium sulphate	4.320
Sodium sulphate	25, 620
Potassium sulphate
Sodium chloride and potassa	13,790

Analysis of two of the prominent springs by Prof. Charles B. Gibson of Chicago, Ill.

MAMMOTH MINERAL WATERS. [Constituents, in grains, per gallon of 58 329 1

Total residue	83, 1000
Inorganic and nonvolatile	71.0000
Organic and volatile.	12, 1100
Sulphate of sodium	23. 2628
Sulphate of potassium	E 8970
Culphote of potassium
Sulphate of calcium	36.1125
Chloride of calcium	5.5887
Chloride of ammonium	.0291
Chloride of magnesium.	4.1144
Nitrate of magnesium	.3024
Dhosphata of magmanian
Phosphate of magnesium.	.0996
Carbonate of magnesium	3.5057
Iron sesqui-oxide	.1490
	0210
Alumina
Silica	1.548

LAKOTAH OR INDIAN SPRING MINERAL WATER. [Constituents, in grains, per gallon of 58.329.]

Total residue	57, 2100
Inorganic and nonvolatile	49, 1600
Organic and volatile	8,0500
Sulphate of sodium	8.8241
Sulphate of potassium	3.3312
	16. 2909
	8, 4990
Chlouida of amountains	. 0491
CILT AND A
Th	3.1403
Phosphate of calcium	.3110
Nitrate of magnesium	.1507
Carbonate of magnesium.	3.0445
Iron sesqui-oxide	.2600
Alumina	.0210
Silica	1.8300
Commandant Turns of the Court Debate Collines II Inches	a A TT-A

Commandant Lucas, of the South Dakota Soldiers' Home, located at Hot Springs, in a report to Assistant Inspector-General Averell, says:

"After a careful observation of the results in the treatment of our sixty-odd veterans for severe and desperate cases of rheumatism, I am constrained to say that I have no longer doubts about the curative properties of the waters. Every case that has been treated in the Home (not an exception) has resulted in a perfect cure, or the patient is approaching it. These results I regard as little less than miraculous, when the enfeebled and broken-down condition of these men is taken into account. The waters are equally good and effective in treating cases of indigestion, scrofula, and all skin or cutaneous diseases."

condition of these men is taken into account. The waters are equally good and effective in treating cases of indigestion, scrofula, and all skin or cutaneous diseases."

The Hot Springs of South Dakota are located in the mountainous western end of the State—a region abounding in delightful scenery and all the healthgiving influences of nature in the rough. No more charming surroundings can be found at any of the health resorts of the world. These springs lie within the boundaries of Fall River County, and about them has accumulated a community of a couple of thousand people, incorporated as a city of the second class. Its buildings are constructed with a generous display of architectural skill and taste. The city can be reached over two lines of railway. Its altitude is 3,400 feet above sea level. The atmosphere of that region is dry and bracing. Lying in a sheltered valley, it is protected from winter's rigors, and it is altogether a most satisfactory abiding place for invalids or for those in search of recreation.

In closing this report your committee append a preamble and resolution adopted by the managers of the Soldiers' Homes of Colorado, Minnesota, and Kansas, in which the Congressional Representatives of those States are asked to give their support to the bill which is the subject of the favorable action of your committee.

Whereas it is the policy of the National Board of Managers for Disabled Volunteer Soldiers' Homes to provide a sanitarium for the treatment of exsoldiers who are afflicted with rheumatism and kindred diseases; and Whereas from the published reports by General Averell and other indisputable evidence it has been demonstrated by thorough and fair tests that the hot water at Hot Springs, S. Dak., cures more than 60 per cent of such cases; and Whereas an effort is being made to secure the location of such a sanitarium at Hot Springs, S. Dak.; and Whereas we are satisfied from information furnished us that no better place has been yet discovered: Therefore

Be it resolved, That we favor the location of a sanitarium at Hot Springs, S. Dak., and urge our Representatives in Congress to support and aid in the passage of such bills as may be presented for that purpose.

OFFICE BOARD OF COMMISSIONERS

SOLDIERS AND SAILORS' HOME OF COLORADO, Room 1, Capitol Building, Denver, December 5, 1895.

The above preamble and resolution were brought before the board and, after due consideration, the secretary was authorized to state on behalf of the board that both were unanimously indorsed and that this action shall form part of the permanent records of the commission.

Attest:

W. P. HARBATTLE, Secretary.

W. P. HARBATTLE, Secretary.

The above preamble and resolutions were adopted at a meeting of the board of trustees, Minnesota Soldiers' Home, February 11, 1896.

HENRY A. CARTH, President.
J. R. B. BERBERG, Secretary.

This is to certify that the board of managers of the Kansas State Soldiers ome indorsed the foregoing resolution on this 5th day of December, 1895. By order of the board.

J. H. STEWART, Secretary. Col. C. M. CUNNINGHAM, Commandant.

MARITIME CANAL COMPANY OF NICARAGUA

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The hour of 2 o'clock having arrived, and there being no unfinished business, the Chair lays before the Senate the first bill upon the Calendar.

The SECRETARY. A bill (S. 1012) to prevent the desecration of the national flag.

25.620
13.790
62.546

The Secretary. A Bin (S. 1913) to prevent the desecration of the national flag.

Mr. MORGAN. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the bill (S. 3247) to amend the act entitled "An act to incorporate the Maritime Canal Company of Nicaragua," approved February 20, 1889.

Mr. MILLS. I ask my friend to yield to me a moment that I may have a bill passed.

Mr. MORGAN. As soon as the canal bill is taken up, I will yield for that purpose.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Alabama, to proceed to the consideration of the bill indicated by him.

Mr. CAFFERY. On that I ask for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered; and the Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. WALTHALL (when Mr. George's name was called). My colleague [Mr. George] is paired with the junior Senator from Oregon [Mr. McBride]. If my colleague were present, he would

Mr. GORDON (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Iowa [Mr. Gear] who is not in his seat, and I withhold my vote.

Mr. MARTIN (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the senior Senator from Montana [Mr. Mantle], who is not in his seat, and I withhold my vote. If he were present, I should vote "yea."

Mr. MITCHELL of Wisconsin (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from New Jersey [Mr. Sewell]. If am paired with the Senator from New Jersey [Mr. Sewell]. In he were present, I should vote "nay."

Mr. ROACH (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the Senator from California [Mr. Perkins], but by an arrangement the pair has been transferred from the Senator from California to the Senator from Idaho [Mr. Shoup]. If the Senator from Idaho were present, he would vote "yea" and I should note it is a simple from the senator from Idaho were present, he would vote "yea" and I should

Mr. TILLMAN (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Nebraska [Mr. Thurston]. As he is absent, I the Senator from Nebraska [Mr. Thurston]. As he is absent, I withhold my vote.

Mr. VILAS (when his name was called). I am paired generally with the Senator from Oregon [Mr. MITCHELL]. If he were present, I suppose he would vote "yea;" I should vote "nay."

Mr. WILSON (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the Senator from Florida [Mr. Pasco]. If he were present, I should vote "yea."

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. ALLISON. I desire to state that my colleague [Mr. Gerron]. If spaired with the senior Senator from Georgia [Mr. Gerron]. If

Mr. Allison. I desire to state that my coneague [Mr. Gerk] is paired with the senior Senator from Georgia [Mr. Gordon]. If my colleague were present, he would vote "yea."

Mr. GORDON. Then I will vote. I vote "yea."

Mr. McBRIDE. I have a general pair with the senior Senator from Mississippi [Mr. George] and my colleague [Mr. MITCHELL of Oregon] has a general pair with the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. VILAS]. With the consent of the Senator from Wisconsin, I will transfer my pair to my colleague, so that the Senator from Wisconsin and myself may vote. I vote "yea." Mr. VILAS. I vote "nay."

Mr. MORRILL (after having voted in the affirmative). I am paired with the Senator from Tennessee [Mr. Harris], who ap-I am pears to be absent, and therefore I withdraw my vote. The result was announced—yeas 36, nays 14; as follows:

	Y	EAS-36.	+
Aldrich, Allison, Bacon, Brown, Burrows, Call, Cameron, Cannon, Chandler,	Clark, Cullom, Davis, Faulkner, Frye, Gallinger, Gibson, Gordon, Gorman,	Gray, Hale, Hawley, Hoar, Lodge, McBride, McMillan, Morgan, Peffer,	Perkins, Platt, Proctor, Pugh, Quay, Sherman, Stewart, Wetmore, White.
	N	AYS-14.
Bate, Berry, Blackburn, Caffery,	Chilton, Cockrell, Hill, Mills,	Nelson, Pettigrew, Turpie, Vest,	Vilas, Walthall,
	NOT	VOTING-39.
Allen, Baker, Blanchard, Brice, Butler, Carter, Daniel, Dubois, Elkins, Gear,	George, Hansbrough, Harris, Irby, Jones, Ark. Jones, Nev. Kyle, Lindsay, Mantle, Martin,	Mitchell, Oreg. Mitchell, Wis. Morrill, Murphy, Palmer, Pasco, Pritchard, Roach, Sewell, Shoup,	Smith, Squire, Teller, Thurston, Tillman, Voorhees, Warren, Wilson, Wolcott.

So the motion was agreed to; and the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill (S. 3247) to amend the act entitled "An act to incorporate the Maritime Canal Company of Nicaragua," approved February 20, 1889, which had been reported from the Select Committee on the Construction of the Nicaragua Canal with amendments.

Mr. MILLS. By consent of the Senator from Alabama, I wish to call up Senate bill 3525, a bill reported unanimously from the Committee on Commerce, in reference to the improvement of a waterway on the coast of Texas.

Mr. MORGAN. Several gentleman have applied to me to give way temporarily for the purpose of having bills passed which they regard as somewhat pressing. After the pending bill has been read, I will yield as far as I can do so without displacing it or losing my right of way.
The VICE-PRESIDENT.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The bill will be read.

The Secretary read the bill.

Mr. MORGAN. The Senator from Texas [Mr. Mills] desires that the pending bill may be temporarily laid aside until he can call the attention of the Senate to a measure pending here. I have no objection on my part to that course, and I ask that the bill before the Senate may be temporarily laid aside.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. PLATT in the chair). It will be so ordered, in the absence of objection.

WATER ROUTE BETWEEN GALVESTON AND HOUSTON, TEX.

Mr. MILLS. I ask unanimous consent for the consideration at this time of Senate bill 3525.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Texas asks unanimous consent for the present consideration of a bill the title of which will be stated.

The Secretary. A bill (S. 3525) to provide for an examination and survey of a water route from the mouth of the jetties at the city of Galveston, Tex., through the ship channel and up Buffalo Bayou to the city of Houston, Tex., and appropriating money

Mr. MILLS. I will state that the bill has been unanimously reported by the Committee on Commerce.

By unanimous consent, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill.

Mr. HOAR. I desire to inquire of the Senator from Alabama, he having consented to temporarily laying aside the Nicaraguan bill, if he expects to go on with it this afternoon?

Mr. MORGAN. There are two Senators who have applied to me for leave to ask for the consideration of bills, and one of them, as I know, is a matter of great merit.

Mr. HOAR. I did not wish to interfere. I merely wanted to know for my own information if the Nicaraguan bill was to go on to-day.

Mr. MORGAN. I propose to go right on with it after the bills to which I have referred have been disposed of.

Mr. HOAR. The reason of my inquiry is this: I propose, at some time when the Senate is not desirous of proceeding with any other important business, to ask to have the bankruptcy bill any other important business, to ask to have the bankruptcy bill taken up and read. I do not propose to have any action taken upon it until the return of one or two Senators, who are especially interested in it, especially the Senator from Colorado. If the Senate were transacting routine business, I would simply ask for the reading of that long bill. But as I understand the Senator from Alabama desires to go on to-day with the Nicaraguan bill. I do not now make the request bill, I do not now make the request.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill taken up on the request of the Senator from Texas [Mr. Mills] is before the Senate as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed. WILLIAM H. LINTON.

Mr. HAWLEY. The Senator from Alabama [Mr. MORGAN] has kindly consented to let me ask unanimous consent for the consideration of the bill (S. 3477) to remove the charge of desertion from the military record of William H. Linton. I now make that request.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed. DEATH OF REPRESENTATIVE CRISP.

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. Chapell, one of its clerks, communicated to the Senate the intelligence of the death of Charles F. Crisp, late a member of the House from the State of Georgia, and transmitted the resolutions of the House

Mr. GORDON. Mr. President, I desire to give notice that on Thursday next, at 3 o'clock p. m., I shall ask the Senate to suspend business to receive resolutions upon the subject to which the mes-sage from the House of Representatives relates, and to hear some remarks in connection therewith.

CANALS BETWEEN THE GREAT LAKES AND ATLANTIC OCEAN.

The PRESIDING OFFICER laid before the Senate the following message from the President of the United States; which was

To the Senate and House of Representatives:

I transmit herewith the report of Messrs. James B. Angell, of Michigan, John E. Russell, of Massachusetts, and Lyman E. Cooley, of Illinois, who were appointed commissioners under the authority of a law passed March 2, 1885, to make inquiry and report, after conference with such similar commissioners as might be appointed on behalf of Great Britain or the Dominion of Canada, concerning the feasibility of the construction of such canals as will enable vessels engaged in ocean commerce to pass between the Great Lakes and the Atlantic Ocean, and the most convenient location and probable cost of such canals, together with other facts and information in said act specified relating to their construction and use.

The commissioners have prosecuted the work assigned them with great zeal and intelligence, resulting in the collection of a mass of information, embodied in their report and its accompanying exhibits, which is of great importance and interest as related to the project subjected to their examination.

The advantages of direct and unbroken water transportation of the production of the mportance and interest as related to the project subjected to their examination.

The advantages of direct and unbroken water transportation of the products of our Western States and Territories from convenient points of shipment to our seaboard ports are plainly palpable. The report of the commissioners contains, in my opinion, demonstration of the feasibility of securing such transportation, and gives ground for the anticipation that better and more uninterrupted commerce through the plan suggested, between the great West and foreign ports, with the increase of national prosperity which must follow in its train, will not long escape American enterprise and activity.

It will be observed that the report of the commissioners, though as comprehensive as the time and facilities at their disposal permitted, does not definitely deal with the cost of the work they were called upon to consider, and omits some of the other details related to it. Thus far they have labored without compensation, and a part of the small sum appropriated for the payment of their expenses still remains unexpended.

I suggest to the Congress the propriety of making economical provision for such further prosecution of their work as will more fully develop the information necessary to an exact and complete understanding of this interesting and important subject.

CROVER CLEVELAND.

GROVER CLEVELAND.

EXECUTIVE MANSION, January 18, 1897.

[Note-Report and accompanying documents transmitted to House of Representatives.]

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The message will be printed and referred to the Committee on Commerce, in the absence of objection.

MARITIME CANAL COMPANY OF NICARAGUA.

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, resumed the consideration of the bill (S. 3247) to amend an act entitled "An act to incorporate the Maritime Canal Company of Nicaragua," approved February 20, 1889.

Mr. MORGAN. Mr. President, the subject of the Nicaraguan Canal has been so long under consideration by the Senate, by the people of the United States, and by the people of the world, and involves such a wide field for examination, that it is impossible for anyone to undertake to enter upon a full description of the merits. anyone to undertake to enter upon a full description of the merits anyone to undertake to enter upon a full description of the merits of this great enterprise within the limits of a single address. On this occasion I shall make no effort of the kind. I find it difficult always to trust myself with an undertaking of this sort in connection with this enterprise, because it has got such a hold upon my convictions that perhaps I may see it in a magnified light, though I could not, if I were possessed of all the powers of oratory and eloquence that any human being ever possessed, describe with sufficient fullness and force the merits of this question as it concerns the people of the United States alone, to say nothing of the people of the whole world. of the whole world.

In presenting this bill to the Senate I have the honor to state that the Committee on the Construction of the Nicaraguan Canal that the Committee on the Construction of the Nicaraguan Canal is unanimous in the approval of every feature of it. The bill which we have reported here in fact originated in the House of Representatives, was reported to that body, and, after the most scrutinizing care we could bestow upon it, we have not found it necessary to change it in any of its features.

This measure, however, changes considerably previously proposed legislation on this subject, particularly the bill which passed through the Senate in the last Congress, and changes it in favor of amendments which were then suggested, propositions which were then advanced with sufficient reason to justify the committee of this body and of the other House in believing that it was better to incorporate those features or those amendments into the better to incorporate those features or those amendments into the bill rather than to jeopardize the measure in any sense at all or to invite opposition by excluding them on matters of detail that are not essential to this measure.

On a full survey of this bill and a full examination of it in connection with the great subject to which it relates, I am satisfied it is the best bill we have presented—the most conservative bill. It leaves all power in the hands of the Executive to arrest the progress of this enterprise in the event that he finds it is going wrong, and to inform the Government of the actual conditions in Nicaragua, as to all suggestions and questions which have been raised heretofore or can be raised in regard to it, in full time to prevent any possible disaster.

Mr. President, there is but one parallel case in history by which we can come to any judgment in reference to the advantages and profits which may be derived from this as a financial enterprise, and also as to the advantages which come to the nations who may and also as to the advantages which come to the nations who may control this gateway between the Atlantic and Pacific oceans politically and commercially and in every other respect. That standard of comparison is the Suez Canal. We have in the United States, however, two other standards of comparison with this canal in reference to the cost of its construction and the facility with which it may be built, and also with reference to its effect upon the increase of the interior commerce of the country. Those are the great locks at Sault Ste. Marie and the drainage canal at

This last enterprise is one which originated among the citizens of that great city, and has for its primary purpose the drainage of the town and the adjoining country. The progress that has been made in the construction of that canal, I undertake to say and I think I can do it without incurring any contradiction—has proven to be a new development in the art of canal construction, and it really is the most astonishing piece of work in the economy and rapidity of construction which has ever yet been accomplished by the genius of the American people, or of any other people on the earth. So I accept those two canals, the Sault Ste. Marie and the drainage canal at Chicago, as furnishing standards to which we can refer in estimating the cost of the construction of the Nicaraguan Canal, the difficulties to be overcome, and the facility or the rapidity with which it may be done.

In the case of the Suez Canal, we have the advantage of a full comparison in all essential features: First, in the manner of its comparison in an essential reactures: First, in the manner of its being dredged, opened, the water let into it, sea locks for the pur-pose of preventing the intrusion of high seas into the canal to wash it away, the difficulties of approach on the Mediterranean side and on the side of the Red Sea, and the necessity of building ports or harbors for the accommodation of the shipping about to enter the canal.

Then, proceeding from that point, we have the analogy of the difficulties of maintenance, which, in the case of the Suez Canal, are really much greater than they will be in the case of the Nicaraguan Canal. In the case of the Suez Canal the difficulty arises from the drift of the sand into the channel, caused by the winds which prevail there at certain times, and sometimes unexpectedly, and drift vast amounts of sand into the channel, so that the process of dredging is required to be continually kept up. A corresponding difficulty, but of quite a different nature, is to be met and overcome at Nicaragua. In Nicaragua the trouble arises from the excessive rainfalls on the eastern coast of that State, and that difficulty can be met, and is met, in the line projected here, by placing the canal level, from its start on the Atlantic side to its terminal on the Pacific side, above the reach of any flood or high water. I consider that the difficulty in meeting the rainfall in Nicaragua is met and finally disposed of in the plan of construction, or rather in the axial location of the canal, whereas in the case of the Svez canal the trouble is over receiving and will the case of the Suez canal the trouble is ever recurring, and will remain there so long as the winds blow and the sands can be shifted by them. So I find in the history of the Suez Canal, both in the cost of its construction and maintenance, and more particularly in the receipts—the income from its tolls—what I conceive to be a very excellent, perhaps a conclusive, standard of comparison with the Nicaraguan Canal.

Before I enter upon a description of the project which we have brought forward in this bill for the purposes that it is expected to accomplish and the reasons for bringing it forward, I desire to call accomplish and the reasons for oringing it forward, I desire to can the attention of the Senate to some statistics in regard to the Suez Canal. That canal is $97\frac{1}{2}$ miles long, pretty nearly a straight line, though there are some curves in it. There are about 68 or 70 miles of canalization, actual lift of the earth and throwing it out upon embankments. That canal was constructed at a time when the art of canal building with dredges and pumps was very imperfect as compared with the present time. We might say the advantages now are as 100 to 50. We have more than double the advantage in building a canal, going through any material which you please to select, whether it is stone, or mud, or clay, or sand, or gravel. We have now more than 50 per cent advantage in the method of construction, in cheapness and rapidity of construction, over what existed at the time the Suez Canal was built, and this great advantage has come from the invention of American mechanics, American constructors, who have been forced by exigencies which they could not escape to tax their genius so as to get machinery of different kinds for the construction of the great drainage canal at Chicago, which actually overcomes

Mr. DAVIS. I should like to ask the Senator from Alabama whether any estimate has been made as to how far the estimates of cost which were before the committee in respect to the Nicaragua Canal, can be diminished in view of the actual result at Chicago?

Mr. MORGAN. We have that estimate here, and we have also the statement of the gentleman who constructed the canal. Mr. DAVIS. Will the Senator state the percentage or anything of that kind?

of that kind?

Mr. MORGAN. I can not give the percentage, except to say that at Chicago in rock channeling, rock lifting, the removal of clay and gravel out of the line of the canal and transferring it an average distance of probably two or three hundred yards the saving is at least 50 per cent. It is, I believe, the most marvelous progress ever made by mechanics in the history of such works.

Mr. DAVIS. I know there are great claims made about it, and I should be glad to see a specific statement.

Mr. MORGAN. Before I get through I will call the attention

Mr. MORGAN. Before I get through I will call the attention of the Senate to the statements on that subject.

Now, Mr. President, when Disraeli was about to go out of office, at least within a year or two before he went out of office, he had at least within a year or two before he went out of office, he had the courage to overcome a British prejudice against the Suez Canal, which was very intense and very foolish. The British Government had large and very valuable settlements at the Cape of Good Hope, and all the ships that passed around from the Atlantic to China and India and into the Pacific Ocean went by the Cape of Good Hope, touched there naturally, necessarily indeed, and were a source of enormous revenue and great profit to those people. Besides that, the British Government did not want to have a canal pendes that, the British Government did not want to have a canal opened between the Red Sea and the Mediterranean, for the reason that adjacent to that canal lay the territory of some of her most powerful rivals. Along the line of the Mediterranean there were France, Italy, Turkey, and on the north African coasts there were several of the smaller states, including Egypt, under the suzerainty of the Sultan of Turkey. We find after we pass around the the Red Sea that her recessions were flexibled on a side by to the Red Sea that her possessions were flanked on one side by Arabia and on the other by Africa, with very enterprising colonies established by the French, the Italians, and the Germans in those sections of the world. So she did not wish her passage from London or Liverpool to Bombay or any other port in India to be through states or in the vicinity of states that might hold a flank position or a short line upon her, and could come out and attack her ships or her commerce or anything she might have to send through there and impede her way to her colonies. So Great Britain was opposed to it.

When the Suez Canal was originated it was a private enterprise. When the Suez Canal was originated it was a private enterprise. An endeavor was made to get the French Government into it, but the French Government declined to make the guaranties; it declined to take it up, and De Lesseps went through the south of Europe and got together a sufficient subscription for the purpose of building the great canal, or at least to start it. He then went to the Khedive of Egypt. The Khedive, with remarkable foresight and with great courage, committed his Government to the assistance of the canal, and together the people of the south of Europe, most largely in France, and the Khedive of Egypt constructed the canal. The British Government interposed a protest to the Sultan of Turkey against this thing being done. The Sultan interposed a protest to the Khedive against it, but not earnestly enough to prevent the construction of that great waterearnestly enough to prevent the construction of that great waterway. After the canal was built, and after, as we remember, the celebration of it, which was a fête that occupied the attention and excited the admiration of the world, the French Empress being there for the purpose of inaugurating the work, Disraeli, with that sagacity which perhaps distinguished him as much as any other British statesman, concluded that it was to the best interest of the British statesman, concluded that it was to the best interest of the British Government to buy a controlling interest in that stock; and he set about to do it. He could not buy a controlling interest. The other Governments objected. He could not buy an interest that cost him more than $20,000,000, at a little above par. The whole capitalization of the canal at that time was $100.000,000. So he could get only about one fifth of it, instead of a majority of the stock; but he bought the stock, and he bought it at a slight premium in the market.

He believed, and the world since that time has realized the fact, that that investment by Great Britain was of all others that that great Government has ever made the most profitable financially and the most important politically, and the occupation of Egypt to-day is due to the fact of the building of the Suez Canal and the necessity that Great Britain is under of having both the terminal to-day is due to the fact of the building of the Suez Canal and the necessity that Great Britain is under of having both the terminal points of that canal under her military control. She occupies Egypt, and she will occupy Egypt so long as the Pyramids do, unless the Government in London breaks down. That was the moving cause; that was the consideration which forced her to take this ground, and she holds it with British tenacity.

Now, without going any further into the general history of this matter, which I have given very imperfectly, I desire to call attention to what the British investment was. The canal was opened in 1870. It was completely built in 1869. Great Britain invested about $20,000,000 in the stock of the canal, just a few dollars under that sum, and put the stock in her treasury as an asset of the treasury, which made it equal to the consol or any other obligation of the Government of Great Britain. At the close of 1895, as was stated by the treasury bench in the House of Commons—I have the authority to show it, a London paper—the cost of the investment had been returned by the dividends on the stock. The full cost had been returned in 1895. At the present rate of dividends, the present value of the shares is $120,000,000.

Mr. President, that looks improbable; it looks as if it were mere romance, mere fiction, mere fancy; and yet it is the solid fact. On the investment of $20,000,000, by Disraeli, the precise date of which I can give you if it is required, the stock to-day is worth $120,000,000. I have a table which shows the rate of earnings of the Suez Canal since 1869. At the rate of tolls now charged, about $187 per ton on vascals prescing through the general tabing possible to the stock.

the Suez Canal since 1869. At the rate of tolls now charged, about $1.87 per ton on vessels passing through the canal, taking no account, however, of the passenger trade, the Suez Canal, after nearly doubling its size, for it has been enlarged out of the reserve fund, and after a heavy fund is set apart for betterments, is earning 18 per cent dividends on a cost of $100,000,000. Of the cost of $100,000,000,$58,000,000 only was expended in actual canalization—actual work. Forty-two million dollars of the $100,000,000 was for interest, discount, fees for promotion, and losses in administration. Only a part of it was a necessary charge on the resources of the company. The Suez Canal was built in a very extravagant way, so far as fees and cost of promotion are concerned. Immense amounts of money were spent that ought not to have been spent. Nevertheless, the whole canal was capitalized at $100,000,000 after all these expenses were covered.

The canal is now a permanent property, earning 6 per cent on $300,000,000, and it has grown to these proportions in twenty-seven years. The latest quotations of the shares on the Paris Bourse years. The latest quotations of the shares on the Paris Bourse were on last Saturday, January 16, 1897, and the 500-franc shares ($100) were quoted at 3,250 francs—common stock of the canal company—or in dollars a share of the par value of $100 is worth $650.

The Suez Canal, as I have stated, was opened to traffic in 1869. Its first year's realization was really in 1870. The growth and present magnitude of its business are shown in a table I have here and will insert in my remarks.

Year.	Number of vessels.	Net Suez tonnage.	Receipts.	Dividends.
1870	20.00	436,609 2,009,984 3,057,421 6,355,752 6,890,094 8,698,777 7,712,029 7,659,060 8,039,175	$869, 150 5, 281, 150 7, 298, 524 12, 011, 451 13, 485, 055 16, 789, 103 14, 977, 712 14, 222, 486 14, 825, 411 16, 000, 000 15, 800, 000	Per cent, 17, 20, 18, 18, 18, 18,

It has gone on with a steady, gradual increase. I could not get the number of vessels for 1895 and 1896, but perhaps I will get it before I close my remarks to-day. But I will take 1894. The number of vessels which passed through the canal in 1894 was 3,352, against 486 in 1870; the tonnage was 8,039,175, against 486,609 in 1870, and the receipts were $14,825,411, against $869,150 in 1870. The percentage of receipts upon the capital invested was 18.50 per cent in 1895. In 1895 the receipts went up to $16,000,000. In 1896 they were $15,800,000.

In 1896 they were $15,800,000.

Now, if not another ship in the world passed through the Nicaragua Canal except such as we would get by a division of tonnage with the Suez Canal, and if we got 4,000,000 tons a year whilst she got 4,000,000 tons a year, and if we charged $1.50 a ton while the Suez Canal charges $1.87, we at once see that the profit on the investment proposed by this bill in the construction of the Nicaragua Canal would be quite satisfactory. That is the view which the American people ought to take of this matter if they have only a money-making interest in the canal. It is a very encouraging and profitable view to take of it, and it suits the temper of the present age that in making investments of money or of the of the present age, that in making investments of money or of the credit of the United States it should be clearly demonstrated that there is to be a profitable outcome, in dollars, from the investment.

I do not indulge in the romantic sentiment which many have even boasted, that it would be better for us to build the canal and throw away the money than not to have the canal. At the same time that is a proposition which would be very hard to answer when you come to consider it in a national sense, for if we can spend $260,000,000 in two or three years for the purpose of maintaining the equilibrium of our credit commercially with Great Britain, a matter about which I am not complaining, we certainly can afford to spend one-half of that sum or something equivalent can all ord to spend one-hair or that sum or something equivalent to one-half in building a canal which, if it did not yield to us a dollar of profit, would at the same time furnish to the agriculturists and all the industrial people of the United States in every quarter such enormous advantages as would arise from this method of cheap water transportation between our Pacific and our Atlantic coasts. Or if we were to build the canal alone for the use of the Navy as a strategic movement, so that we might double the power of our Navy without building two great fleets—one for the Pacific and one for the Atlantic—it might be said, in the American sense, properly, that we could throw away the whole amount of money we put into the canal and still make a very large amount of money we put into the canal and still make a very large earning in the advantage, of a maritime and strategic nature, which we would get out of the enterprise. Or if we built the canal alone for the convenience, advantage, and profit of our coast trade, we would still find that the people themselves would be stimulated by the opportunity furnished by the canal in all of their industries and all of their trades to that degree that we might very well afford to accept any opportunity that might be presented to put the money in that course of expenditure, without ever expecting to receive a dollar in return.

Or if we look at the great national duty of connecting together our coasts—the Atlantic and Pacific—and to form of this nationality that sort of union of interest, as well as of feeling and sympathy, which would bind us together as a nation and a people beyond all possibility of severing or of dissatisfaction in the future, then, if we were to throw away all the money that we propose to put into the canal—in an enterprise so advantageous and so inviting—we should not consider that we had lost anything. Or if by building the canal we could open to the merchants and the sailors of the Atlantic Coast, to say nothing of the Pacific Coast, the advantage of free and cheap water introduction to the traffic of the Pacific Ocean, with all of its vast undeveloped and absolutely incomprehensible wealth, we would say that if we were to throw the money away it would be still well invested if it resulted in the production of this great waterway.

Pacific Ocean, with all of its vast undeveloped and absolutely incomprehensible wealth, we would say that if we were to throw the money away it would be still well invested if it resulted in the production of this great waterway.

We might find light also in the example of Russia, which builds a railway, called the Siberian road, from her eastern shores to Vladivostok, just above Korea. She can not expect to realize a very large profit upon the freight to be carried by that railroad. With the same feeling of enterprise that Russia must have in respect of enlarging her eastern possessions and opening the advantages of the Pacific Ocean to her people, we might well say that we could as well afford to throw this money away, if it is to be thrown away, as Russia can to throw away the money she has put into the Siberian railroad without ever reclaiming a cent of it. But when we come to look into the actual facts and take the standard of comparison furnished to us by the Suez Canal, to which it is impossible to close our eyes, we are admonished that not only have we these great powers, privileges, and duties resting upon us, but we have actually in sight an enormous earning on a very small expenditure.

With these general observations, Mr. President, in an outline view of this great question, merely touching upon the surface of things, and not undertaking to penetrate into the actual argument about it, I desire now to present to the Senate the terms and provisions of the pending bill, to show that it is a thoroughly practicable and, as I believe, a thoroughly wise measure. I would not feel authorized to indulge in that expression about it if I were the author of the bill, but perhaps 150 of the most intelligent men in the United States have had a part in the authorship of the bill, and many of those men have been in the Houses of Congress. The honorable Senator from Ohio [Mr. Sherman] presented two bills here, the terms of which were somewhat modified and changed as argument proceeded and experience was obtained, indicating that changes ought to be made. After long and laborious consideration on the part of the Committee on Foreign Relations, I presented a third bill, which changed the features of the former bills considerably.

Considerably.

Then the subject went into the House of Representatives, and I must do the committee of the other House the justice to say that they have very much improved the whole plan. They have accepted propositions which originally I thought were antagonistic to the measure in rather a vital sense. I am now persuaded that they are wise amendments, and I believe that no more carefully considered measure than this one has ever been brought to the attention of the Congress of the United States. It is obliged to be so because the different committees which have acted upon it and the great number of gentlemen who have considered it have thought the matter over in the most careful and considerate way. No person who has ever been connected with the proposed canal improvement of whom I am aware has attempted to inject into it any personal wish or desire or thought or feeling or advantage either for himself or the section of country which he happened to represent.

It is a fair, a just, a genuine bill through and through, and from the very outset the measure has had the support of all the different parts of the American Union. The honorable Senator from Vermont, Mr. Edmunds, who was here, a wise and able man, was a great friend of the measure. He bestowed the closest attention upon it. The fact is, Mr. Edmunds is the man who originated the thought of our legislation and brought the matter into the Senate of the United States. Then there was Mr. Dolph, over on the other coast, Mr. MITCHELL of Oregon, over there, and other gentlemen who are present with us to-day. Then there was the honorable Senator from Ohio [Mr. Sherman], in the center of the United States, and his former colleague, Mr. Payne. There was Mr. Eustis of Louisiana, who united in the first report, and it was a unanimous report from the Committee on Foreign Relations, and after he went out of the Senate he became one of the directors in the scheme. Mr. Saulsbury was its active supporter. There was the Hon. Joseph Brown, who now sleeps in an honored grave, whom we all know was a man of extreme carefulness in respect of all public expenditures and public enterprises. He had, perhaps, as little of the idea of speculation upon Government credit as any other man who has ever held a seat in this body. He was an enthusiastic friend of this measure, and he wrote or telegraphed me from his sick bed in Atlanta, Ga., to pair him in favor of the bill; that it had his whole, hearty support. So from all over the United States, the East and the West, the North and the South, and the center have been represented by different gentlemen in the Senate of the United States and also in the House of Representatives who have concurred most heartily in bringing this subject forward as a matter of indispensable national necessity and of captivating national glory and honor.

captivating national glory and honor.

How did it happen that the Senate of the United States thought it was prudent and necessary to take up this subject? It was in this way: The Government of the United States, under the Frelinghuysen-Zavala treaty with Nicaragua, had an opportunity to secure a certain control over the canal projected in that treaty, for which we proposed to pay $4,000,000 to the Government of Nicaragua, and we had an opportunity to acquire almost absolute sovereignty in Nicaragua, at least over an area of country 12 miles wide. The provisions for the construction, maintenance, and protection of the canal under the Frelinghuysen-Zavala treaty were very full and complete. I was one of its earnest supporters, and but for the fact that the succeeding Administration differed in opinion with the one that preceded it on that question and withdrew the treaty I think there is no doubt that it would have received the necessary two-thirds vote in this body. It received a majority vote upon every occasion when it was presented. But the defeat of that treaty was upon two grounds, one of which was that of an entangling alliance with foreign powers. There was supposed to be involved in it an entangling alliance with the Government of Nicaragua. Another reason was that there was some apprehension on the part of distinguished gentlemen that a controversy with Great Britain would arise out of this treaty in respect of the Clayton-Bulwer treaty of 1850.

There was a controversy also that was thought possible to arise out of the application of the Monroe doctrine, which at that time was not quite so clearly defined in the policy of the United States Government as it is to-day. At that time there seemed to be no objection to the project as to its cost or feasibility. No point was raised about its feasibility, no apprehensions were expressed about its being a valuable investment, and no dangers were anticipated in respect of an intervention in a hostile way by foreign governments to claim an interest in the canal. The Senate of the United States and the executive department went forward with perfect freedom in the negotiation of that treaty. It was met at the time only by the argument to which I have adverted and by another which was a matter that has been prominent and very important in its effect upon the subsequent movements for the building of the canal. We had secured the right by treaty with Nicaragua, and Great Britain in the very same terms had secured the right, she securing her right ten years before we secured ours, to our citizens to accept concessions from the Nicaraguan Government for the building of the canal, and some of our citizens at the time our treaty was formed with Nicaragua had a valuable concession which they were unable to carry through. The policy seemed to be then that it was better to have the canal in the ownership of private men than to have it in the ownership and control of the Government of the United States and in that way to avoid entangling alliances.

ownership and control of the Government of the United States and in that way to avoid entangling alliances.

So, after the Zavala treaty was completed, a positive and active encouragement was given by the Government of the United States to private citizens to go into Nicaragua and to obtain concessions. That encouragement was in the direction of detailing men to make surveys, from the Navy Department and other Departments of the Government, engineering departments, and in relieving officers from duty in the Departments here to send them out for the purpose of negotiating such concessions.

The man who was chosen to go there to make these negotiations had been twice before detailed for duty in the exploration of canal lines through Nicaragua and Costa Rica, and had made a great deal of very valuable and laborious research in the location of the canals and in the determination of those preliminary questions, which, of course, involved the other question, of the feasibility of building the canal. That man was A. G. Menocal, a Cuban by birth, educated in Cuba and in the United States, admitted as a civil engineer into the Navy Department of the Government of the United States, and who has been the projector and builder of some of the greatest works that have been accomplished by the Navy Department from that time to this. At all events, Mr. Menocal was selected, and it was a very wise selection, because he showed that he had as much diplomatic ability perhaps as he kad of engineering ability.

The people of Nicaragua and Costa Rica, because of the rejection of the Zavala treaty, had turned their eyes anxiously toward Europe for friends to build this canal, and they received Mr. Menocal with indifference, you may say, if not with antagonism. He was, however, a man of Spanish birth; he spoke the language perfectly; and he was before that time in Nicaragua as an officer detailed by the Government of the United States to go down and survey the San Juan River and the harbor of Greytown at the request of Nicaragua. The Nicaraguan Government was very friendly to Mr. Menocal, because they had asked the Government of the United States to detail him, as a favor to the Nicaraguan Government, to go to Nicaragua and survey the San Juan River and also the harbor of Greytown—work that he went there and performed for the Nicaraguan Government at their request while he was still an officer of the United States Government.

It would not do to say that he did not find any difficulties in the way; but he overcame them. He made a most admirable negotiation, and the result of it was the concession from Nicaragua which is before us to-day, and is the basis of our action. He obtained a concession, not to the Government of the United States, for the Government of the United States did not want it; they had just rejected a concession which was still more valuable in the Frelinghuysen and Zavala treaty; therefore it had to be a matter of private enterprise. A few gentlemen in New York and else-where in the United States, perhaps as many as twenty-five or thirty (I have all their names in the record here), concluded that thirty (I have all their names in the record here), concluded that they would organize a provisional association—a private company—for the purpose of getting this concession. They furnished Mr. Menocal with money. The terms of the concession required the payment of $100,000 in gold to fix the bargain, and required a payment also of $50,000 for the purpose of enabling the Government of Nicaragua to obtain the right of way from her citizens, ment of Nicaragua to obtain the right of way from her citizens, who had claimed private rights of property on the western side of Nicaragua Lake. That money was subscribed and paid. Nicaragua received the $150,000, and has it still in her treasury.

They came to the United States and they took a charter in Colorado for this company—I believe the name of it was the Nicaragua Canal Company—for the purpose of receiving the concession from the gentleman to whom it was made in terms, for the concession reads that it was made to Mr. Menocal for the benefit of these other persons or this corporation. So the concession passed into the hands of that incorporation, consisting of the gentlemen who owned the property and who had paid their money for it.

Thereupon they concluded, and wisely concluded, that they would obtain a charter for this company to work the concession, which was the company of execution, from the Congress of the United States. They did that in order to have the power of this Government engaged in the regulation of the affairs of the corporation in connection with foreign Governments, and also for the name and the prestige of it, which was all entirely rightful the name and the prestige of it, which was all entirely rightful

That matter underwent considerable debate in the Senate and in the House, and after quite a while a charter was voted. That charter has a very important political effect upon the whole plan, I will not now go into it, inasmuch as I am the whole scheme. I will not now go into it, inasmuch as I am not undertaking to give all the history of the progress of this work, but it regulated the amount of stock, the amount of bonds which the company might issue; it required the officers of the corporation under oath to report directly to the Secretary of the Interior in respect of all matters connected with the operations of the canal, and to answer to any other demands that he might make from time to time, in order that the Government of the United States might be informed as to the condition of this property, its progress, and all that related to it, and might take further legislative or other action that might be requisite. the whole scheme.

action that might be requisite.

In that particular, and in many others which will be found in the charter, the Government of the United States united itself with this incorporation and with this concession to the extent of giving to it its protection, the power of organization as a corpora-tion, and all the other things that abound in the case of an incor-poration, connecting the Government very closely with it. It is not possible to deny that we have united the political powers of the United States in a responsible way with this enterprise and the United States in a responsible way with this enterprise and with the concession upon which it is based.

Now, this private enterprise, as we call it, was encouraged by the Government of the United States, and particularly by the then Secretary of the Navy, Mr. Whitney, who made the detail of Mr. Menocal to go out there and perfect the arrangement and to conduct the survey. He had a detail there for nearly three years afterwards in conducting the surveys about which so much has been said. The Government of the United States in all of this matter has stood behind these gentlemen, has encouraged them. matter has stood behind these gentlemen, has encouraged them, and given them to believe that at least their rights, whatever they might be under the concession, would always be preserved and protected by the power of the Government of the United States. In all this the Government acted wisely and within its rights, but not without incurring obligations of duty and honor that Congress should respect

There is nothing plainer than that. No set of men ever entered into an enterprise with a better guaranty from a government than was given by the Government of the United States to these men when they went out there and spent their money, and came back and got their organization completed, and went to work to build this canal, on which they have spent four and a half million dollars of their own private money, and were then incorporated by Congress as the Company of Execution to work out the grants in this concession.

Now, in that view of the situation, Mr. President, the question, of course, arose in the minds of these men where they could finance the bonds. It was their business to raise the money to do what the bonds. It was their business to raise the money to do what the Government had invited and urged them to do. There are very few men in the United States who by combination could build that canal. Perhaps there are one or two who might build it out of their own private fortune, but when you come to men of average ability in a financial way it would take perhaps a great many thousand of them to unite the strength of their credit sucmany thousand of them to unite the strength of their credit successfully for the purpose of building a canal of the magnitude of this work. They necessarily were thrown upon the financial markets of the world for the money with which to build their canal. That is not an unusual thing. There is not a railroad in the United States of any great extent that has not been built in the same way. The projectors of the railroads have been compelled to go to the financial centers of the world and to get the pelled to go to the financial centers of the world and to get the money by borrowing it, and they have to put up very heavy security, usually a dollar of stock for a dollar of bonds, and sometimes a great deal more than that, besides blanket mortgages.

These gentlemen went to work to finance this scheme, and they raised in the United States almost exclusively—I believe exclusively—the four and a half million dollars which they have expended, by the selling of the stock and by placing bonds upon the market and in the hands of our own people. The list of bondholders and stockholders, not in the Maritime Company, but in the Construction Company, amounted to some three or four hundred. holders and stockholders, not in the Maritime Company, but in the Construction Company, amounted to some three or four hundred, and all those names appear in the records of Congress here. I have heretofore put them upon the record. They were making progress. The Construction Company had an arrangement, I think I might call it a contract, with Baring Bros. to finance the bonds. It will come out more fully in the statements made by Senator Miller and others here. The Baring Bros. were overtaken with misfortune and failed, and that cut them off. But before that happened, as I remember the dates, Mr. Miller, who had been a member of this body and was well known, was met by Mr. Edmunds in the office of our Secretary of the Senate. Mr. Edmunds asked him what was being done about the building of this canal, in which he felt a very great interest.

this canal, in which he felt a very great interest.

Mr. Miller told him they were at work at it; that the requirements of the concession were pretty severe; that at least $2,000,000 had to be spent within about eighteen months from the date of the completion of the survey; that they had got the money together and they had complied with their contract; that they had secured the concession absolutely; the terms were rather severe, but they had complied with them, and besides that, they were then in the course of the expenditure of the balance of the four and a half million dollars which they had already raised upon their bonds. Mr. Edmunds suggested, "Well, where are you getting the money?" "Why, of course we are getting it from England. Everybody gets money from England." Mr. Edmunds did not like the thought. "What are you giving for it?" "Well, a very large amount of our securities. We are building a canal that will cost, according to the certificate of the engineer should be set that the control of the control. securities. We are building a canal that will cost, according to the estimates of the engineers, about $85,000,000 at the outside. We have promised that we will issue $150,000,000 of our bonds, and we will back it up with $100,000,000 of our stock, and with a mortgage upon the franchise and upon all the corporate rights of every kind. That is what we have had to do." Mr. Edmunds remarked to Mr. Miller, "Why, this is going to be an enormous tax upon the commerce of the United States. That canal ought to be built for the estimated price and then your rates of tell can be lowered. for the estimated price, and then your rates of toll can be lowered so that you will not tax the commerce of the United States to the extent that you would otherwise have to do." Mr. Miller said that extent that you would otherwise have to do." Mr. Miller said that was very true, and he would be very happy if any arrangement could be made to bring about that result, but that the company did not have the power to do it; that their financial credit was not strong enough to enable them to get the money to build the canal upon any better terms. They had done the very best they could. they could.

It was their property, and they had the right to do with it the sest they could, and no one at that time seemed to have any objection to the idea that the stock of the canal was to be owned entirely abroad, any more than we have any seeming objection at this moment of time that the stock of the Union Pacific Railroad and the Central Pacific Railroad are owned abroad. Quite a majority of the stock of both of these great corporations is owned

But at that time the question was not one that had been pub-But at that time the question was not one that had been publicly agitated, and these gentlemen doubtless did not feel the embarrassment that they feel now about a suggestion of that kind. Mr. Edmunds came into this body when it was in executive session, in order that no bad impression might get out over the world in respect of what we were going to do or thought we had a right to do. He had a resolution passed requiring the Committee on Foreign Relations to make inquiry into this subject, and to ascertain upon what terms the United States could be permitted to take hold of this charter and build the road. That was the purport of the resolution; I do not know the terms of it, but that was the purpose of it. And of course the committee, following the lead of the Senate, had executive sessions in regard to it. The president of the Construction Company and the president of the Maritime Canal Company were summoned before the Committee on Foreign Relations, and several of the directors and their clerks, and we examined carefully into the whole matter. question arose, on the suggestion of the Senate committee, upon what terms will this corporation place its contract in the power of the United States? Negotiations, you may call them, were held between the committee and the owners of the franchise, and the result was that certain terms were considered to be acceptable on both sides. It was probable that the terms agreed upon would be acceptable on both sides, and the Senate committee embodied those terms in a bill and reported it to this body. It never had a hearing here for the want of time, but an able report was made, which was signed by every member of the committee, favoring the plan and favoring the acquisition of the contract, as far as was permissible, for the benefit of the United States.

Now, I have brought this matter up, Mr. President, to the point where it rests at the present moment, and the question is, Will the United States buy this property from these men at the price and on the terms presented in the pending bill? That is the question. It is their property; it is not ours. They did not really question. It is their property; it is not ours. They did not really come here to sell it, although they may now be anxious to do so. I am not prepared to say that they are or that they are not. But it is their property. They have paid for it. They acquired it under guaranties from the Government of the United States of the most solemn character; at least, that the Government had not any right to put terms upon them that would so embarrass them as that they would be compelled to surrender their property to this Gov-

The first bill that was presented here was not upon the idea that the Government should become a stockholder, but that the stocks should remain in the Treasury of the United States, to be disposed of along with the bonds for the purpose of raising money. The company said, "We are unable to negotiate that scheme if you company said. We are thindle to negotiate that scheme if you put it forward. There will be a very large additional cost and a loss to the Government and a loss to us if the proposition goes into that shape," and they objected to it. Nevertheless, the committee were in favor of it. They never intimated that they would agree to it, but we thought we had compulsory power enough over them to compel them to do it. That is the way we thought about it. We thought it was just, at least that it was nearly so, and that it was wise, and we would compel them to do it.

The proposition that the Government of the United States should become a stockholder in this company came from the Maritime Canal Company through their authorized agents. They said, "Take the stock; take seventy million of the stock; let it be paid-up stock; and take it as a consideration for the guaranty of these bonds. Then that will leave us a sum of money to be distributed in bonds or stocks to Nicaragua and Costa Rica and the present owners of the concession, out of which we can get pay for what we have put in there, and that is all we are claiming."

The proposition for the Government to become a stockholder originated in the mind of some of the gentlemen who owned this concession, and in the mind of the Senators who were there representing the Government in that committee.

Now, I should like to know whether, if we defeat the pending bill, any man in the world can justly say to the owners of this concession, "You have not got the right now to dispose of it for your own benefit in any market where you can find a purchaser." your own benefit in any market where you can find a purchaser." How can we ever place ourselves in an attitude so disagreeable and so unjust toward our own people? After we have rejected overtures, if you please, though they are not overtures, for the sale of this property, after we have refused to buy it, after we have refused to have anything to do with it, how can we then turn to these men and say, "You shall not dispose of this property to some foreign power or some foreign people?"

And yet, Mr. President, we ought to say one thing or the other. They complain, and they have complained bitterly all the time, that the overture made by the Committee on Foreign Relations by the order of the Senate to the owners of these concessions so far crippled them in the markets of this country and abroad as that they crippled them in the markets of this country and abroad as that they could do nothing whatever with their bonds or their stocks after that date. They would go to a banker and say, "Here, we want to place these bonds; here is ample security," and all that. The banker would respond to them, as has been done on many occasions, "Your security is good; your property is valuable; the guaranties are all right; but we know that when we start this project and get this canal on foot the United States will be compelled to come and take it away from you, and then we shall have to give up our property and the prospect of the profit that we expect to realize in entering into the negotiation with you, and we do not choose to do it; it is too risky. If you were free, as a railroad company, to make your negotiations without the intervention of the Government that record here!

ernment, that would be all well; but we understand perfectly well that no canal can be built through Nicaragua unless it is under the patronage and under the protection of some particular government that has to be strong enough to take care of it, and that Government is the United States, and therefore we are unwilling to put up any money."

Now, Mr. President, I contemplate the idea of these men seeking another market with their concessions with a great deal of dissatisfaction and very serious apprehension. A doctrine has gone forth. I do not know who was the author of it, but he was a great man, whoever he was, and he lived somewhere between the days man, whoever he was, and he lived somewhere between the days of Monroe and the days of Mr. Hayes. The doctrine is generally attributed to General Grant. Probably he might have been the author of it. It was couched in very terse words. I remember to have seen it used in the dispatches of Mr. Evarts. "The canal through the Isthmus of Darien must be an American canal under American control."

I believe that Mr. Evarts, whom we all honor, was the author of this true, patriotic, and noble sentence. It will never be changed while America is worthy of its glorious name. That American under the flag of the country. There is not one man who is a true American who is willing to yield or abandon it. I number myself amongst the class who adhere to it with absolute pertinacity; and without undertaking to make any rash expression or anything that appears to be pertinent to an existing or prospective state of affairs, I do not hesitate to announce that I would not consent that any European power should go into Nicaragua and drive this company out of their concession and take the place of the United States, as we now have it, and build this canal. I should never consent to that; and I would resort to any kind of force which might be necessary to prevent a result so damaging and so disgraceful as that would be to this country.

Now, I will suppose that we have defeated this bill and, after

Now, I will suppose that we have defeated this bill and, after we have defeated it, that no man can turn to the Maritime Canal Company or to any other company and say, "We have got some lien, moral, legal, or equitable, upon your franchise;" no man can turn around and say they are under any obligation whatever in the disposition of this great property for which they paid and which we encouraged them to buy; we must in honor then say to them, "Go where you will and sell it to whom you will, you have them, "Go where you will and sell it to whom you will, you have as much right to do it as an Alabama planter has a right to sell his bale of cotton in London or in Paris, and to choose his market." I will suppose, then, that this bill is defeated, and I will suppose that these men go to England and tender to the British Government precisely the situation we are in here to-day, and they should say to the British Parliament, "Give us a charter in the very words of the American charter, mutatis mutandis, give us this identical charter, pass the bill which was reported by the Committee on the Nicaraguan Canal to the Senate of the United States, claim for yourselves the $70,000,000 of stock there, advance the $100,000,000 of guaranty which was necessary to build the canal, pay us the little pittance we have expended here of four and a half millions in this canal, pay it back to us, and give us seven millions of paid-up stock in the concern; pass your bill through Parliament in the very words of this bill, and give us the charter in the very language of the American charter, and you shall have the rights we have acquired under these concessions."

Mr. President, who can estimate the excitement which would occur in the United States upon the passage of a bill like that through the Parliament of Great Britain? How are we to prevent it? We may say that this is to be an American canal under vent it? We may say that this is to be an American canal under American control, but before we can say that to Great Britain under the circumstances which I have just been announcing to-day, which are absolutely the fact, you have got to break down a treaty between Great Britain and Nicaragua, and also you have got to discard and ignore a treaty between the United States and Nicaragua, both of which are in the same terms. By a treaty made between Great Britain and Nicaragua ten years before our made between Great Britain and Nicaragua ten years before our treaty was in existence, in 1858, eight years after the date of the Clayton-Bulwer treaty, Great Britain has precisely the powers and rights in Nicaragua which we have under our treaty made ten years later. There is a little story connected with that—not a story, but a piece of history which has not been very much commented upon, although it is in our diplomatic correspondence—which will illustrate rather foreight rephase; the statement and which will illustrate rather forcibly, perhaps, the statecraft and statesmanship and diplomatic skill of the British Government as compared with ours.

When Mr. Cass was Secretary of State, he negotiated a treaty with Ayun—I think he was the man who negotiated it, though perhaps it may have been some other. That treaty was drawn up with great care. It is the same treaty which ten years or twelve years later we negotiated and concluded a second time with Nicaragua. That treaty was made and already drawn up and agreed upon when the British Government sent out a special commissioner to Nicaragua to arrange certain matters between that Government and Great Britain, including the rights Great Britain claimed to exercise and were also conceded to the United States under the Clayton-Bulwer treaty. When this British commissioner got there, he found that the Nicaraguan secretary of state had already agreed to a treaty with the United States, and he succeeded in persuading him that the United States were the bitter enemies of Nicaragua; that it would not do to confer upon them any such power and authority, and that they had better make that treaty with Great Britain, because Great Britain was a very much stronger power than the United States, especially as a naval power. He succeeded in taking that treaty out of the hands of the Nicara guan Government and copying it—for he copied it literally—and got it signed as a treaty between Great Britain and Nicaragua; and it took this Government ten years to get a treaty in identical terms with Nicaragua granting us the right to build a canal or a railroad through her territory. Now this concession this law railroad through her territory. Now, this concession, this law, the act of incorporation, and all that we have done in regard to it, is predicated upon that treaty between the United States and Nicaragua; and yet when we come to look over the field we find that Nicaragua had granted to Great Britain the same powers and privileges precisely, word for word, ten years sooner.

How did we happen to manage to get ahead of Great Britain on that? Merely by the fact that our enterprising citizens, the very men whom we are now pulling up by the ears and questioning so severely about everything, went there and got this concession. That was all. We were first in time, and being first in time, were first in right. Now, discard it, throw it away, have nothing to do with it, spurn it, put your foot upon it, drive those men out of this Senate Chamber, and I should like to know whether your destring that this is an American can all under American conyour doctrine that this is an American canal under American control is going to prevail against the British right to have exactly the sam concession from the very same people whom we are now casting away? Whether they would do it, or whether they would not, I do not know, but I do not care, after we have taxed these men to the extent we have, about making them lose the $4,500,000 that they have expended, besides $7,000,000 of stock which they claim in the enterprise, I do not care about compelling them to throw that all away, or to burn it up as a sacrifice on the altar of their patriotism. I do not feel well to do a mean thing like that. No American can fail to blush clear behind his ears question comes up whether we shall contemptuously kick these men out of doors simply because they come here and offer to us as a bargain this canal, which would make us worth $100,000,000 more than the canal will cost in fifteen years from the date of its construction.

How, then, are we to prevent these men from going to Great Britain, or, after we have destroyed their hope and power of realizing this matter in money and of building this canal, how are we to prevent Nicaragua from saying, "The Congress of the United States has abandoned the project and the Government of Great Britain has got a right to come in?"

Mr. President, I insist upon this bill being passed, or I insist upon its being defeated right now. We have matters lying just in front of us. They relate to the arbitration of "matters of difference between the Government of the United States and the Government of Great Britain." I want to know what those matters of difference are. I want to know what we are signing our names to when we put them to that paper, and whether it includes differences about our rights to go to Nicaragua and Costa Rica and establish an American canal under American control. I want to pass this bill so that Great Britain shall have her fair opportunity to say to us: "This matter will be in difference between Well, if a matter gets in difference between us relating to the Monroe doctrine, relating to the Clayton-Bulwer treaty, relating to the treaty between Nicaragua and the United States, or a treaty between Nicaragua and Great Britain, I want to know it; treaty between Nicaragua and Great Britain, I want to know it; and if it is to be a difference of the sort which involves the disclaimer of that great utterance, "This is to be an American canal under American control," I want to know that. I want to know whether I am willing or prepared, or anybody else here is, to settle a difference of that kind or a difference in respect to the Monroe doctrine by a court to be established through the umpirage of King Oscar, or whether it is to be settled by the strength of the power of the right arm of the United States, duly exerted in defense and protection of our rights. That is why I want this bill acted upon now. I want to know what the Congress of the United States intends to do about it.

Then I want to know after that what the Government of Great Britain intends to do about it. Then I shall be prepared to understand what are the matters of difference between the United States and Great Britain. I conceive that there are no such matters of difference; that there will be none, because if it is possible to work an estoppel at all upon the conscience of a government that estoppel has become absolute by the fact that Great Britain obtained from Nicaragua a treaty, in the identical terms, ten years sooner than our treaty was signed—the very treaty upon which we are predicating this action, the very treaty which justifies us in every step we have taken or propose to take. Great Britain obtained the same concessions, or the same treaty rights from Nicaragua, but we, having been first in point of fact in obtaining the concessions under that treaty and in acting upon them by legislation in Congress, she is estopped from saying that we have not as much right as she has, because we have got the same rights under the Clayton-Bulwer treaty that she has, and we have the same rights under the Nicaragua treaty that she has. So I regard the question as being absolutely settled, and the report of the committee fully sets forth the ground upon which we have rested that branch of this case

rested that branch of this case.

This bill, Mr. President, deals with two Republics, two sovereign Republics. How did we ever get a right to legislate in respect to the governmental powers of Nicaragua and Costa Rica? We got it under the treaty of which I am speaking; we got it under the concession on which this legislation is based; we got it under a provision in that concession that New York should be the office of the company, and that this body of gentlemen who received this concession might apply to any Government they chose for the purpose of getting corporate authority under the protection of sovereign power to build this canal, naming New York as the sovereign power to build this canal, naming New York as the place where the central office was to be. All of those men were Americans. The transaction was entirely with the people of the United States, and had in prospect the granting of authority by Congress for the execution of that concession by the company of execution named in the bill, called the Maritime Canal Company of Nicaragua, the name which we adopted. That company of execution was to be created by some other Government than that of Nicaragua. Why? Because Nicaragua felt that she did not have the power to maintain and enforce its rights and powers if they were assailed by some great power. Where did she go? To this great Republic, her sister, in whom she has had the most perfect confidence, almost blind confidence, from the time she first adopted our form of government.

We are dealing with two Republics. Those Republics are stock-holders in the Maritime Canal Company, and this bill proposes that the Republic of the United States shall be also a stockholder. They are represented by directors. They have reserved to them-selves in the concessions a certain part of the stock that we are providing for. We have reserved the right here to alter, amend, or repeal that charter. Can we deal with Republics like Nicaragua and Costa Rica in this ordinary legislative way as we deal with private citizens, otherwise than through the stipulations of treaties and through their consent to our legislation?

The original charter which we granted to this company, of which Nicaragua and Costa Rica were members, provided for stock that might amount to $200,000,000. In this bill we have changed it and provided that-

The capital stock of the Maritime Canal Company of Nicaragua shall consist of 1,000,000 shares, of $100 each.

Making $100,000,000. Then we come to some definitions of what the terms mean.

That the words "the Nicaragua Canal," whenever used in this act, or the act to which this is an amendment, shall be held to include all real and personal property and franchises, railroads, piers, channels, dams, locks, embankments, and other works necessary for or incidental to the construction, equipment, maintenance, and operation of the said interoceanic canal made or that may be made by the Maritime Canal Company of Nicaragua, or under its authority, by virtue of the said acts and the concessions granted or to be granted by Nicaragua and Costa Rica.

There we were and are legislating for these two Republics and putting our laws and the power of our laws into the very bosom of their sovereignty, but with their consent. We are not sover-eigns over them, but we exercise, with their consent, certain sovereign powers within their limits and with their cooperation.

Then this company in the process of its organization and operation created some debts and sold some of their stock and some of their bonds. The bill provides with the extremest care that all f these engagements must be absolutely taken up, liquidated, and canceled before the act shall go into effect; and that must be done to the satisfaction of the Secretary of the Treasury of the United

The United States are then authorized in section 3 to subscribe for $70,000,000 of this $100,000,000 of stock, the stock to be issued and placed in the Treasury of the United States precisely as Great Britain placed the stock of the Suez Canal in her treasury as an asset of the treasury, and that is to be done now, and the consideration for doing that is as follows:

Which stock shall be issued in consideration of the guaranty by the United States of the bonds of said company hereinafter provided for, and shall be regarded as fully paid and nonassessable. In addition thereto 70,000 shares of nonassessable capital stock of said Maritime Canal Company of Nicaragua shall be issued and delivered to such person or persons as may be designated by those stockholders of the said company whose stock has been surrendered and canceled, as hereinbefore required.

It will take more than that amount of stock to liquidate the outstanding obligations of this company. They will have to go down into their pockets to get the money to do it.

The next provision in the bill vacates the office of the present directors and appoints 11 directors, 8 of whom shall be appointed by the President of the United States, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate. One shall be appointed as a director by the Republic of Nicaragua, and 1 shall be appointed as a director by the Republic of Costa Rica, and 1—making 3—shall be a director for the other stockholders of the company. Beyond the amount of $7,000,000 of shares it is impossible that private individuals can get into this corporation at all. It is exclusively governmental—seventy millions of it belonging to the Government of the United States, six and a half millions belonging to the Government of Nicaragua, reserved in the charter—that is a reservation of the charter—and a million to the Government of Costa Rica, also reserved in the charter. So it is a governmental establishment, with served in the charter. So it is a governmental establishment, with the mere provision that less than one-seventh of the stock of the company may be in the hands of private holders.

Now observe what a total reversal that is of the doctrine with which we originally set out in this matter and which the Governwhen it reversed the Zavala treaty. ment set out with treaty was rejected because it was a governmental affair and led to entangling alliances. The Government then preferred that the canal should all be in the ownership of private people with governmental protection. Now we have reversed the thing until the clamor in the United States is that "we are in favor of this canal if the Government can only own it, but we do not want to have any private man to have anything to do with it." That is now the complaint. It seems to me that that objection is raised merely for the sake of defeating any action at all. But, however that may be, I impute no motives to anybody. We have now got it just as close to absolute governmental ownership as it is possible to get it without usurping the sovereignty of Nicaragua and Costa to get it without usurping the sovereignty of Nicaragua and Costa Rica. They make a concession, in which they say expressly, "This concession shall not be sold to any foreign government, but they may get the stock; they may organize the company." An interest in it may not only be sold, but the concession itself provides for the open bidding on the part of the governments, so that all may come in and take stock. That has been observed; that has been gone through with. The opportunity was offered to foreign governments to take stock, but they did not take it. Now the opportunity is offered to the United States Government to take it, and the question is whether they will. take it, and the question is whether they will.

These eight directors are to be men who have no interest in this canal company. I had better read that provision. It as follows:

canal company. I had better read that provision. It as follows:

The board of directors of the Maritime Canal Company of Nicaragua shall consist of eleven directors, one to be appointed by Costa Rica, one by Nicaragua, and one by the stockholders of the Maritime Canal Company other than the said Governments, and eight to be appointed by the President of the United States, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, and removable by the President of the United States for cause. In case of a vacancy in the membership of directors appointed by the President the same shall be filled by appointment by the President, in the same manner, for the unexpired term. That no directors appointed by the President of the United States shall own, directly or indirectly, any stock or pecuniary interest in said company, nor shall any stockholder, director, officer, or employee be connected in any manner with or interested, directly or indirectly, in any contract made by the said company for implements, equipment, material, or anything connected with the construction, equipment, or operation of said canal, and not more than four of said directors shall be appointed from one political party.

I regard that as enough. It meets all the objections which here

I regard that as enough. It meets all the objections which have Then the bill provides for the succession in been made here. office of the directors:

The treasurer of said Maritime Canal Company shall give bond to said company in such sum as may be fixed by the board of directors.

The directors are to receive a compensation of $5,000 a year, and in addition to that, their actual traveling expenses, and each di-rector appointed by the President "shall visit the canal and make a personal examination of the works at least once each year." they are required to send their report to the President of the United States, who is required to lay it before Congress with his next annual message.

In order to arrive at the sum of money which has been expended in the construction of the canal by the Maritime Canal Company, or the Construction Company, an account is to be stated:

SEC. 7. That as soon as practicable after the passage of this act an account shall be stated with the Maritime Canal Company of Nicaragua, which shall include all necessary and proper expenditures which have been made or incurred by said company or for its account by its agents since the 3d day of June, 1889—

That is the time they commenced work-

In and about the construction of said canal, or in any way incident thereto, or connected therewith, including all railroad and telegraph lines built by the said company, and all administration and promotion expenses. The amount of said expenditures shall be ascertained and determined by a commission consisting of two members, one of whom shall be appointed by the President of the United States and the other by the stockholders of the Maritime Canal Company of Nicaragua, whose stock is to be surrendered, as hereinbefore provided; and in case the said commissioners should fail to agree upon the amount of said expenditures they shall select some third person as arbitrator, whose decision in the matter shall be final. For the reimbursement of said expenditures so ascertained and in liquidation of the amount thereof, including interest thereon, there shall be issued and delivered to the person or persons selected by the stockholders of said Maritime Canal Company of Nicaragua whose stock has been surrendered and canceled as provided for in section 3 of this act, bonds of said company in an amount equal at their par value to the sum of such expenditures so ascertained, which sum shall not in any event exceed $4,500,000 and the interest thereon.

They are fastened down within that limit.

They are fastened down within that limit.

Said bonds so to be issued shall have the guaranty of the United States indorsed thereon, as provided in section 10 of this act, and the acceptance of the same shall be in full satisfaction of all claims against the United States or the Maritime Canal Company of Nicaragua.

Then the United States has reserved the right to purchase any of this $7,000,000 of stock, or the stock of Nicaragua, or the stock of Costa Rica, paying for it not exceeding the rate of interest at 3 per cent per annum; but that is to be done by an act of Congress, if ever done at all.

Section 9 provides for an issue of bonds not to exceed $100,000,-000 at 3 per cent—3 per cent bonds payable quarterly "in denominations of not less than $50, nor more than $1,000." They are to be coupon or registered bonds, according to the election of the persons who take them-to be dated on the 1st day of July, 1898, to be payable on the 1st day of July, 1928, but redeemable at the pleasure of the United States at any time after the 1st day of July, 1906, at par with interest at the rate of 3 per cent per annum, payable quarterly.

And said bonds shall be secured by a first mortgage on its property and rights of property now existing or hereafter acquired, of all kinds and descriptions, real, personal, and mixed, of all franchises and rights of the said company, including its rights and franchise to be a corporation. Such mortgage shall contain a provision for a sinking fund sufficient for the payment of said bonds at maturity in accordance with the provisions of section 12 of this act. Such mortgage shall be so framed as to be valid as a first lieu under the laws of Nicaragua and Costa Rica. The form and sufficiency of such mortgage as the first lieu upon the Nicaragua Canal and of the provision for the sinking fund shall, before execution, be approved by the Attorney-General of the United States, and the trustees named in such mortgage shall be duly executed in triplicate by the officers of said company, and shall be recorded in the office of the Secretary of the Treasury in Washington and in the proper offices in Nicaragua and Costa Rica, to be designated by the said States; and as additional security for the payment of said bonds, and to save the United States harmless by reason of its guaranty of the same, there is hereby created a first lieu in favor of the United States upon the Nicaragua Canal.

They have 1 000 000 acres of land conceded to them in absolute

They have 1,000,000 acres of land conceded to them in absolute They have 1,000,000 acres of land conceded to them in absolute fee simple title by the Government of Nicaragua, and by the time the canal is built that 1,000,000 acres of land can not be worth less than $5 an acre. It is worth more than $2.50 an acre to-day. It is in one of the finest regions of Nicaragua. True, it is a wilderness region, but the hard wood upon it will pay for the land three times over. There is coffee land, sugar land, fruit land of every description and corn land. I can not describe the different verge. description, and corn land. I can not describe the different vegetables that grow there, because I am not acquainted with all of them; but it is a country of most rich abundance of production. A million acres they have absolutely in fee simple. They bring that to us as a dowry, worth more than the stock we give them, they having yielded $6,500,000 of stock granted to them in the concessions. They transfer that into the hands of the company, which means seventy parts of a hundred to the United States. which means seventy parts of a hundred to the United States. Then besides that, they have the unlimited right to take timber, stone, and material of every kind from any of the public lands in Nicaragua and east of Lake Nicaragua; and from that point down to Grey Town it is the rarest thing to find any settlements. There are a few settlers along the San Juan River, but the population of eastern Nicaragua is light—they commenced their set-tlements on the western coast. They have cleaned that up beautifully, and there is not a more agreeable and attractive country in the world than the western part of Nicaragua. It is well watered, with fine climate. It is healthful, and abounds in all manner of rich production. It has a very fine population.

The Indians inhabited that country originally, but they are now citizens of Nicaragua. There are no longer any tribal Indians there. They, of course, have built their wigwams about through the forests for the purpose of living upon the fruit where summer always prevails and where they have very little to do to obtain a living. That land when it is brought into convenient access by the canal will be one of the most beautiful and fertile regions on this earth. There is 1,000,000 acres. In addition, on the public land, they have a right to overflow as far as the canal can possibly reach or there is any necessity for an overflow. Now, these bonds are to be signed and deposited in the Treasury of the United States. They are to be issued to the company, the whole $100,000,000 are to be signed and deposited in the Treasury of the United States. They-

of the United States. They—shall be issued by the Secretary of the Treasury from time to time to the said Maritime Canal Company of Nicaragua only as the work on the Nicaragua Canal progresses, as hereinafter provided. Before the issue of said bonds by the Secretary of the Treasury he shall cause to be engraved and printed and duly executed on each of said bonds the guaranty of the United States, in the words and figures following, to wit: "The United States of America guarantees to the lawful holder of this bond the payment by the Maritime Canal Company of Nicaragua of the principal of said bond and the interest thereon as it accrues." And the Secretary of the Treasury is hereby authorized and directed, if the interest on said bonds as it becomes due is not paid into the Treasury of the United States by the Maritime Canal Company of Nicaragua, to pay the same, and the sum required for that purpose is hereby appropriated out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated. And all payments of principal of said bonds or the interest thereon shall be made through the Treasury of the United States.

In the event of a failure on the part of the company to pay in-

In the event of a failure on the part of the company to pay interest on the bonds, instead of paying interest at 3 per cent on these sums, interest is to be paid at 4 per cent, and the account is to be stated whenever the interest is due and payable, so that the amount of accumulated interest bears interest at the rate of 4

Out of its net earnings each year the said corporation shall pay, first, the interest upon the bonded debt guaranteed by the United States; second, they may declare, out of the balance of the net earnings, a dividend upon the stock, in no year to exceed 5 per cent, and the balance of the net earnings, if any there be, shall be paid into the Treasury of the United States and constitute a sinking fund for the payment of the principal and interest of the mortgage. All dividends paid upon stock owned by the United States shall also be paid into said sinking fund, and the Secretary of the Treasury shall, as rapidly as possible, apply the same to the extinguishment of said mortgage debt.

There we set apart 70 processes 2.

There we set apart 70 per cent of the net earnings of this canal for a sinking fund in the hands of the Government.

I now come to a point about which there has been heretofore great difficulty, as to which concession has been made by the House committee—and I make it, too, and the committee over which I have the honor to preside makes it cheerfully:

That the said canal shall be constructed under the supervision and according to the plans and specifications prepared by the Engineer Department of the United States Army.

What more can any reasonable man demand as to the location,

What more can any reasonable man demand as to the location, plans, or specifications than is here conceded?

Nothing is actually located by this bill, except that it is to pass, of course, under the concession, through Nicaragua. They may put it entirely in the bed of the San Juan River if they want to; they may take the old Child survey, or the old Lull survey, and adopt it if they wish; they may take the Menocal survey and adopt it if they prefer; but whatever they adopt, the plans and specifications shall be prepared by the Engineer Department of the United States Army. Now, that is putting it sufficiently, I suppose, into the hands of the Government of the United States to gratify the reasonable demands of any person in regard to it.

to gratify the reasonable demands of any person in regard to it. Here is another important power in the hands of the President under this bill:

The President of the United States, upon the recommendation of the Chief of the Engineer Corps of the United States Army, shall detail three competent engineers from the War Department to enter regularly the service of the Maritime Canal Company, and said engineers shall select one of their number as chief engineer, and thereafter shall detail such additional number as may be required from time to time by the board of directors for the construction of said canal, provided the same can be done without detriment to the public service.

struction of said canal, provided the same can be done without detriment to the public service.

That it shall be the duty of the chief engineer in making his surveys and estimates, and of the directors in letting contracts, to divide the work into such sections and parts as will secure the completion of said canal with the utmost expedition.

That said canal company shall pay annually into the Treasury of the United States the official salaries of said engineer officers while in the employ of said company, and, in addition thereto, shall pay to said officers for their use 25 per cent of such salaries.

That the President of the United States may, and is hereby authorized, in his discretion, at any time after the passage of this act, to appoint a board of three civil engineers, the members of which shall be selected from civil life—

That cuts out Menocal. They are any ious to put him out, and

That cuts out Menocal. They are anxious to put him out, and out he goes—to visit and carefully inspect the route of the said canal and to make and conduct such examinations and investigations in reference to the same as may be deemed necessary, and to report thereupon to the President of the United States. And the sum of $20,000 is hereby appropriated for the purposes of said examinations and investigations by said board of civil engineers.

Sec. 14. That the board of directors shall quarterly file with the Secretary of the Treasury a detailed statement of the work done and the expenses incurred therefor during the preceding quarter, and the amount due and payable thereon, together with all other expenses incurred by said board, and on his examination and approval of said statement he shall issue and deliver to said board of directors bonds sufficient at their par value to cover the amount approved by him.

So that not one bond can be issued except upon work done and

So that not one bond can be issued except upon work done and actually approved and a statement thereof laid before the Secretary of the Treasury.

Here are other careful restrictions on the powers of the corporation:

poration:

Sec. 15. That the said Maritime Canal Company shall not issue any bonds or mortgages except as herein provided, and shall not indorse or guarantee the paper, contract, or obligation of any person, persons, or corporation whatsoever, except as herein provided, and no contract shall be entered into or purchase made by said company beyond the amount of bonds authorized to be issued by this act.

Sec. 16. That the bonds so issued to said directors shall be disposed of by them at not less than their par value, and the proceeds arising from such sales shall be paid into the treasury of the canal company, and, except as hereinbefore provided, shall be used for the extinguishment of the company's indebtedness contracted after the appointment, by the President of the United States, of the eight directors herein provided for.

Sec. 17. That Congress shall at all times have the power to alter, amend, or repeal this act, and this act shall be null, void, and of no effect if the Maritime Canal Company of Nicaragua shall fail to comply with the requirements of section 3 of this act and to communicate to the Secretary of the Treasury its acceptance of the terms and conditions of this act within nine months from the passage thereof.

If there can be anything more conservative or safer than is

If there can be anything more conservative or safer than is found in this bill, I do not see how human ingenuity is going to devise it, provided the company has power to do any work in complying with the terms of the concessions. Some gentlemen may be loath to enter into an engagement of this kind on behalf of the Government because it contemplates the issue of bonds and the guaranty of the United States for their payment. You must remember that this bill so provides that the President of the United States can stop the issue of bonds at any moment. If he finds that we are going in a wrong direction, that a false step has been taken, that the canal is not feasible, or that it is going to cost too much, or that there is some question between ourselves and some other Government that interferes, the President of the United States can stop it at once. He has the power to withhold the issue of bonds, and of course that stops everything. We could not defer the building of this canal until every contingent question that might possibly arise out of it could be brought up and settled. We can not afford to wait for it. I have stated one reason why we can not afford to wait for it, but there are a great reason why we can not afford to wait for it, but there are a great many others which I can not undertake now to enumerate. It is perfectly obvious, however, it seems to me, that the least reflective man can see that there must be a point where this legislation takes effect. Otherwise Nicaragua and Costa Rice can say to us, "You have done nothing. We have waited upon you a long time. We want to be excused from it. We intend to be excused. We intend to have this canal constructed. We do not intend that you shall play dog in the manger any longer about it. We want you to act and to act decisively, or else say that you will not."

I am informed—I do not know, but I believe it is true, because I have been informed by a very eminent diplomatist—that the principal point in the movement recently taken in Central Amer-principal point in the movement recently taken in Central America, which caused the union of Honduras, San Salvador, and Nicaragua under what they called a diet, a form of government having reference to outside administration and outside affairs, which they call the Greater Republic of Central America, was to facility tate the building of this canal, to bring the powers of all three of those Republics in such a manner to the attention of the people of the United States and of the executive government that they would see the importance of going to work, having some definite line of action.

Mr. President, if the voice of the Senate is against the building of the canal as an impracticable scheme, or one that is likely to involve us in expenses we can not afford to bear, or to involve in conflicts with foreign governments of which we are afraid, express it and let these men go—let them have their rights and profits—and let us no longer hang as a shadow over them or an obstruction between them and other parties who will be only too glad to take up the construction of the canal.

Let me ask every Senator on this floor if he does not believe that the Nicaraguan Canal has as good a chance for traffic as the Suez Canal? The possibilities, the probabilities, the inducements, the field of operation for the passage of ships from the Atlantic to the Pacific Ocean seeking marts of trade through this opening are so great that the wisest navigators and the greatest merchants in the world do not hesitate to put the annual income, at $1.50 a ton, up to $16,000,000 per annum. They do not hesitate to do it. Of course there is a variety of opinions on this subject; but take the most intelligent men, beginning with Commodore Maury and coming down to date, and you will find that the consensus of opinion is down to date, and you will find that the consensus of opinion is overwhelming in favor of the proposition that we will at least get 8,000,000 tons, at $1 a ton, and at $1 a ton that would be $8,000,000. Set apart $1,000,000 for maintenance of way, which is a very large allowance, and $3,000,000 for the payment of interest on $100,000,000, if you please, and you have $4,000,000. What else have you got? At $1 a ton you have $4,000,000 for dividends, in which the Government has seven-tenths interest, per annum. That is clear profit.

There is not a government in the world which has the corporting

There is not a government in the world which has the opportu-There is not a government in the world which has the opportunity to put its money into this enterprise that will not do it the very moment we let go, and when we let go of this proposition we must expect it to go into the hands of Great Britain, unless we are prepared to load our guns and stand by them in defense of the doctrine, the inspiring thought, that this must be an American canal, under American control. We have come to a point in this matter where we have to act. If you throw away this contract, after that we can say nothing more about it. Let us not play fast and loose. Let us not play like children with a question of this kind. Let us either accept it or discard it and take our ground where we feel that duty and honor call us.

where we feel that duty and honor call us.

where we feel that duty and honor call us.

I shall not complain at all of any man who takes ground opposite my views upon this question. I should not think of such a thing; but I say to him, "My friend, act now. Come along. I am for it, and you are against it. If you have more votes on your side than I have, vote it down and let it go. Let us quit it." When you wipe out this concession, you wipe out all chance that the United States is ever to get control of the canal unless you do it by overpowering Nicaragua and Costa Rica. That is the reason why I have been so very anxions that we should bring this matter. why I have been so very anxious that we should bring this matter to a conclusion. We are standing in the way of gentlemen who have done us no harm, to say the least of it. Neither are they mendicants. They are not beggars for favor from us; but if I would speak of them as I feel, I would class them as we know them, from their character, to be amongst the noblest and most patriotic of our American people. There is not a man connected with the Nicaragua Canal, either with the Construction Company or with the Maritime Canal Company, who is not a gentleman of great excellence, and many of them have reputations that are appreciated and loved by the whole people of the United States.

Let me read from the report of the committee, because it is more succinct than I could otherwise state it, what we claim. There is great doubt about what the canal will cost. If I would state that my own judgment is that the canal will not cost exceeding $70,000,000 when it is finished, you might say I was mad; that I had been misled; that my judgment had become unbalanced. Yet I believe it. But there are others who believe that it will cost $150,000,000. Some of them are men of ability and character whose opinions are worthy of much consideration. The Commiswhose opinions are worthy of much consideration. The Commission we sent out there, after adding very largely to the estimates which had been made before and for causes that I will not now stop to inquire about, reported that it would cost $135,000,000. It is entirely feasible, they report. There is no doubt about any part of it. The harbor, the water, the control of the flood, the drought every contingency and every circumstance are taken into consideration. One hundred and thirty-five million dollars is what they say it will cost, and the estimates are from that down until we come to $70,000,000. Some men who have built great works and who have the money to build others are willing to take the canal to-day, as their letters show, and to build it upon Menocal's estimate. They are now ready to do it. Now the committee have come to the following conclusion about it:

Estimating that the canal can be completed in five years, and placing the cost at $150,000,000-

As an argument-

the highest estimate—and the operating expenses at $1,000,000 per annum, we have an accumulation of interest, at 3 per cent, at the end of five years of $11.250,000 to be added to the cost of the canal, two and a half years being the average period of expenditure in its construction.

Of course, we do not put the bonds out until the work is done.

The cost of the canal on this estimate would be $161,250,000, and the interest thus compounded on this sum for the next ten years after the canal is completed would amount to $48,375,000. Add to this $1,000,000 each of the ten years for maintenance and operating expenses and the sum is $88,375,000. The earnings of the canal for the same period, computed on the lowest basis of ton-nage that has been suggested by anyone—5,000,000 tons, including passenger fares—at $1.50 per ton (which is less than the toll rates of the Suzz Canal) will amount to $75,000,000, thus giving a net profit of $16,625,000, or $1,662,500 per annum.

will amount to $75,000,000, thus giving a net profit of $16,625,000, or $1,682,500 per annum.

One million six hundred and sixty-two thousand five hundred dollars per annum net profit. There is the lowest computation of tonnage, 5,000,000 tons; the highest cost, $150,000,000; interest, expense of maintenance, all that put in, and that is the result.

If every calculation of the owners of these concessions is disappointed, and the most unfavorable conjectures of those who deny that it can be a paying property are true, as they have stated them in their calculations, a lower rate of tonnage on this canal than is collected on the Suez Canal makes the Nicaraguan Canal a paying property, and its stock a dividend-paying stock.

The owners of this property estimate the cost of the canal at $20,000,000, in round numbers, and its income at 9,000,000 tons, on the average, during the first ten years it is in operation. The interest account on that basis would stand thus at the date of the opening of the canal: Interest accoundated while the work is in progress, $5,000,000, making the cost of the canal $85,000,000.

The interest on this sum for ten years, at 3 per cent, is $25,500,000. Add for operating expenses $10,000,000, and the entire expenditure is $35,500,000 for that period.

The income at $1.50 per ton, including passenger fares, would be $14,500,000 per annum, or $145,000,000 for the first ten years that the canal is in operation.

This is not an extravagant estimate when it is compared with the cost of the Suez Canal, which is 99 miles long and cost $58,000,000 for construction and $100,000,000 in all, and is now being enlarged to accommodate its trade, and with its net earnings in 1892 of $7,000,000 at the rate of $2 per ton on 7,710,000 tons that passed through that canal.

But the committee feel entirely warranted in the estimate that the cost of the canal and its income will be very near the average between these opposing calculations. On that basis the cost of the canal will be $115,000,000,000,000,000,000,

The Suez Canal now pays 18½ per cent, as I have shown by the tables which I laid before the Senate to-day. We take the medium between that, 7½ per cent. Certainly we are on safe ground.

The Suez Canal pays in dividends 81 per cent on a sum that makes the value of the stock in the market at least four times its par value.

When I wrote this report it was only a little over four times. Now it is nearly six, so rapid is the growth of the value of the Congress intervened in the effort to control the construction and future direction of this canal for the purpose of regulating the cost of it in order to prevent it from being too great a burden upon our commerce, especially in our coastwise trade.

The other advantages of such control, while they are very great, are not so directly within the reach of Congressional action. The neutrality of the canal and its innocent use, guaranteed by our treaties, apply equally to all nations and are properly subject in some respects to the laws of nations.

In this opening address—perhaps I may not speak any more about it; I do not know—I will not go into particulars to delay and weary Senators, who have trouble enough in listening to me at all; but the subject is one of extreme interest and extreme importance.

Mr. President and gentlemen of the Senate, the committee have placed themselves on the solid rock of mathematics as to this bill. If there is truth in reach of human endeavor to discover it, either by calculation based on facts which are known and events which are conjectural, or upon the evidence furnished to us by the Suez Canal and by the Sault Ste. Marie Canal, these reports cover and present that truth, and what we have to do and all we have to do in respect of the financial question concerned here is to ascertain what the investment must be, how long it will take to build the canal, what the custom of it will be in the way of tolls, and what the receipts from that custom ought to be, say, at $1 or $1.50 a ton. If Europe and the world can afford to pay the Suez Canal $1.87 a ton for sending its commerce through that canal, they certainly can afford to pay us $1.50 or $1 a ton, and we do not propose to do anything else than to lower our rates so as to bring a large part of the traffic of the world through this canal, although it is not necessary for its maintenance or its profit that we should divert a single ship from the Suez Canal.

Mr. President, if I should undertake to discuss this question as far as I should like, or as far as the suggestions that arise in my mind seem to require me to do, I should detain the Senate very much too long, both for its own patience and for my personal welfare. I will therefore leave the subject now in the hands of the Senate, and will undertake, if any objections are raised to it, to do my best to answer those objections without passion or prejudicing. dice or anything of the kind, in a deliberate way, and to present the facts, for they are all before us, in answer to any objections that may be made to the bill as it is presented.

I dislike to see the bill amended, because the House has agreed upon it after such a patient and full examination, and after the House has conceded everything that has been demanded against the bill heretofore. I dislike to see it amended, but at the same the bill heretofore. I dislike to see it amended, but at the same time I would not say that I am adverse to such amendments if any Senator here can show good reason why the bill ought to be amended, for I want the best bill that can be had.

Now, there is not one unclean speck upon this whole business. There is nothing connected with it in the nature of a job, or of pressure, or even imputation in what is being done here. While we all know that it would gratify the gentlemen who belong to these companies, what is being done here is done on the motion of the Senate of the United States. We originated it. We did it in executive session. We have interfered with these people. We tried to get this contract out of their possession on terms that were agreeable to us. They never asked us to do it, and they never would have asked us. They had no occasion to ask us. But they would have felt mortified, as we all would, to have found that the power of money in Great Britain was so great and abundant and power of money in Great Britain was so great and abundant and so supreme that those people over there could take anything we were concerned in and finance it and work it because of our supposed poverty.

Mr. President and gentlemen of the Senate, our poverty here is all supposition. Seventy millions of people, or eighty millions of people, in a country like we have here, are able to do what any other people in this world would have ever ventured to do, or will ever venture to do. I can show this to the Senate by the experience of gentlemen here, old and young, all of whom have looked in the face the facts to which I am about to refer. I can show to them that within the last thirty or forty years of our national experience the people of the United States under this form of government, under this flag, and upon this continent, are able to survive and outlive and grow rich upon any misfortunes that can possibly befall them.

About thirty years ago I saw the fairest part of this land almost covered in ashes. The smoking ruins sent their columns of grief to the skies. It is the most beautiful land there is upon this continent. There were left there, as an inheritance of those people, conflicts with other races that seemed to challenge not merely the conflicts with other races that seemed to challenge not merely the powers of manhood but the powers of divinity itself to overcome, and I have seen opposed to those same people the power of a great government that they had to overcome. Yet I have seen the wealth, the enterprise, the honesty, the firmness, the courage of men rise above these low conditions, and they have rebuilt a country in thirty years than which there is not to-day a more beautiful or a more lovely country in this world. No more need to be a superposed to the second of the beautiful or a more lovely country in this world. No man need ever attempt to convince me that the American people have not got it in their power to accomplish anything that they think they ought to do that is right in the eyes of God and man and honorable in the history of nations.

Here is a duty lying before us that we ought to thank God for the opportunity of performing. From the time of the visit of Co-lumbus to these shores down through every age of that long period almost every enlightened government in the world has been excited on the subject of finding a communication right through the waist of this hemisphere so that the union might be completed between the Pacific and the Atlantic in zones where there were peace and harmony and sunlight and breezes to create and increase the happiness of nations and of men. Many of the greatest men have been thinking of it and projecting it for years and years, and all intelligent men have longed for its consummation. Millions of dollars of money, thousands of lives, have been expended in these explorations, and the world has no more idea of giving up the completion of this canal than the Christian world has of giving up the millennium. It is fixed in their minds that it is to be completed.

When was there a grander opportunity? When was man ever called upon in performing the high functions that he holds in virtue of his dominion over this world to do a nobler and a more worthy thing than that of assisting in building this canal through the waist of this hemisphere? Who can shrink from it and go to his grave feeling that he has honored the opportunities that God has given him to make for his country wealth, glory, power, and splendor? Give us that canal; plant us there in a position of powerful influence, for it can not be less than that, in the midst of these great influence, for it can not be less than that, in the midst of these great continents, with our form of government, our traditions, our purposes, our prospects, and the influence that we have already gathered and will gather around the majestic character of the American nation, which has already ascended above the nations like the monument to Washington stands above the plains of the Potomac; give us that attitude in the midst of this hemisphere, and then we can expect, then we can know that our grand development of the right and power of man in self-government will spread its influence not over this hemisphere alone, but will hold its position there against the united world. Then we shall not be out of harmony with the age in which we live; then we can live in the happiness of great duties well performed; then we shall not in the happiness of great duties well performed; then we shall not be in an apologetic position with respect to foreign countries. Neither shall we be domineering in this country; but, standing in the light of God's own truth as He has given it to us, and, as I believe, it has been materialized, concentrated, and crystallized in the Constitution of the United States, we will be the most powerful people on this earth. I thank God that He has given me as an individual man, as I am, in the Senate of the United States, the opportunity of raising my voice in favor of this bill.

EXECUTIVE SESSION.

Mr. HILL. 1 move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate proceeded to the consideration of executive business. After twenty-seven minutes spentin executive session the doors were reopened, and (at 5 o'clock and 15 minutes p. m.) the Senate adjourned until to-morrow, Tuesday, January 19, 1897, at 12 o'clock meridian.

NOMINATIONS.

Executive nominations received by the Senate January 18, 1897. COLLECTOR OF CUSTOMS.

Thomas D. Byrum, of North Carolina, to be collector of customs for the district of Albemarle, in the State of North Carolina, to succeed Kenneth R. Pendleton, whose term of office has expired by limitation.

POSTMASTERS.

John R. Lucas, to be postmaster at Rockwell City, in the county of Calhoun and State of Iowa, in the place of Joseph C. Thorne,

Alpha R. Young, to be postmaster at Caldwell, in the county of Sumner and State of Kansas, in the place of William A. Sturm, Francis M. Mumford, to be postmaster at St. Francisville, in the parish of West Feliciana and State of Louisiana, the name of the parish of west Fenciana and State of Louisiana, the name of the office having been changed from Bayou Sara to St. Francisville. Mr. Mumford was originally appointed July 15, 1886, and has been continued since the office became Presidential. His present commission will expire March 29, 1897.

PROMOTIONS IN THE ARMY. Subsistence Department.

Col. Thomas C. Sullivan, assistant commissary-general of subsistence, to be Commissary-General of Subsistence with the rank of brigadier-general, from January 18, 1897, vice Morgan, retired from active service.

Cavalry arm.

Capt. Louis Henry Rucker, Ninth Cavalry, to be major, January 13, 1897, vice Kennedy, Fourth Cavalry, retired from active service. Capt. Eli Lundy Huggins, Second Cavalry, to be major, January 13, 1897, vice Kramer, Sixth Cavalry, retired from active service. First Lieut. Philip Pendleton Powell, adjutant Ninth Cavalry, to be captain, January 13, 1897, vice Rucker, Ninth Cavalry, promoted.

First Lieut. Lloyd Milton Brett, adjutant Second Cavalry, to be captain, January 13, 1897, vice Huggins, Second Cavalry, promoted. Second Lieut. George Tayloe Langhorne, Third Cavalry, to be first lieutenant, December 11, 1896, vice Brown, First Cavalry, promoted.

Second Lieut. Ulysses Grant Kemp, Eighth Cavalry, to be first lieutenant. December 15, 1896, vice Bullock, Seventh Cavalry, Second Lieut. Charles Young, Ninth Cavalry, to be first lieutenant, December 22, 1896, vice Baldwin, Seventh Cavalry, appointed commissary of subsistence, who resigns his line commis-

Second Lieut. Alfred Charles Merillat, Eighth Cavalry, to be first lieutenant, December 22, 1896, vice Knight, Third Cavalry, appointed assistant quartermaster, who resigns his line commission.

Second Lieut. Robert Bruce Wallace, Second Cavalry, to be first lieutenant, January 4, 1897, vice Brainard, Second Cavalry, appointed commissary of subsistence, who resigns his line commis-

Second Lieut. Francis Cutler Marshall, Eighth Cavalry, to be first lieutenant, January 5, 1897, vice Cruse, Sixth Cavalry, appointed assistant quartermaster, who resigns his line commission.

Infantry arm.

First Lieut. James Berryman Jackson, Seventh Infantry, to be captain, December 22, 1896, vice A. H. Jackson, Seventh Infantry, appointed paymaster, who resigns his line commission.

Second Lieut. Joseph Dugald Leitch, Twenty-fourth Infantry, to be first lieutenant, December 22, 1896, vice Jackson, Seventh Infantry, promoted.

CONFIRMATIONS.

Executive nominations confirmed by the Senate January 18, 1897. SECRETARY OF THE INTERIOR.

David R. Francis, of Missouri, to be Secretary of the Interior. PROMOTIONS IN THE ARMY.

Pay Department.

Lieut. Col. George William Candee, deputy paymaster-general, to be assistant paymaster-general with the rank of colonel.

Maj. Alfred Elliott Bates, paymaster, to be deputy paymaster-general with the rank of lieutenant-colonel.

INDIAN AGENT.

Frederick Treon, of Crowcreek, S. Dak., to be agent for the Indians of the Crow Creek Agency, in South Dakota, in lieu of his position as agent for the Indians of the Crow Creek and Lower Brulé Agency, the latter agency having been divided and its name changed to Crow Creek by the act approved June 10, 1896.

APPOINTMENT IN THE NAVY.

Joseph Fyffe, a citizen of Massachusetts, to be an assistant paymaster in the Navy.

PROMOTIONS IN THE MARINE CORPS.

First Lieut. Littleton W. T. Waller, United States Marine Corps, to be a captain. Second Lieut. Albert S. McLemore, United States Marine Corps, to be a first lieutenant.

Melville J. Shaw, a graduate of the Naval Academy and a citizen of Minnesota, to be a second lieutenant in the United States Marine Corps, from the 1st day of July, 1895, to fill a vacancy existing in that grade.

PROMOTIONS IN THE NAVY.

Asst. Naval Constructors Lloyd Bankson and John G. Tawresey, to be naval constructors in the Navy.

Holden A. Evans, a citizen of Florida, William P. Robert, a citizen of Mississippi, Daniel H. Cox, a citizen of New York, Thomas G. Roberts, a citizen of Alabama, and Lawrence S. Adams, a citizen of Pennsylvania, to be assistant naval constructors in the Navy, from the 1st day of July, 1896.

Lieut. Commander John P. Merrell, to be a commander.

Lieut. Commander Joseph G. Eaton, to be a commander.

Lieut. Charles P. Perkins, to be a lieutenant-commander.

Lieut. (Junior Grade) Daniel P. Menefee, to be a lieutenant. Lieut. (Junior Grade) Daniel F. Mehelee, to be a heutenant. Ensign Volney O. Chase, to be a lieutenant (junior grade). Lieut. Benjamin H. Buckingham, to be a lieutenant-commander. Lieut. (Junior Grade) John H. Gibbons, to be a lieutenant. Ensign George R. Slocum, to be a lieutenant (junior grade). Ensign George R. Slocum, to be a lieutenant (junior grade). Lieut. (Junior Grade) Thomas Snowden, to be a lieutenaut. Ensign William G. Miller, to be a lieutenant (junior grade). Lieut. (Junior Grade) Edwin H. Tillman, to be a lieutenant. Ensign George W. Kline, to be a lieutenant (junior grade). Lieut. (Junior Grade) Robert F. Lopez, to be a lieutenant. Ensign John P. McGuinness, to be a lieutenant (junior grade). Lieut. (Junior Grade) Frank W. Kellogg, to be a lieutenant. Ensign Joseph Strauss, to be a lieutenant (junior grade). Lieut. (Junior Grade) John L. Purcell, to be a lieutenant. Ensign Charles S. Stanworth, to be a lieutenant (junior grade). Ensign Charles S. Stanworth, to be a lieutenant (junior grade). Lieut. (Junior Grade) Reuben O. Bitler, to be a lieutenant. Ensign Robert L. Russell, to be a lieutenant (junior grade). Lieut. Commander Seth M. Ackley. to be a commander. Lieut. Charles G. Bowman, to be a lieutenant-commander. Lieut. (Junior Grade) Herman G. Dresel, to be a lieutenant Ensign Harrison A. Bispham, to be a lieutenant (junior grade).

neer.

Lieut. (Junior Grade) Harry Phelps, to be a lieutenant. Ensign Armistead Rust, to be a lieutenant (junior grade) Ensign Armistead Rust, to be a lieutenant (junior grade). Ensign George R. Evans, to be a lieutenant (junior grade). Commander Colby M. Chester, to be a captain. Lieut. Commander William W. Gillpatrick, to be a commander. Lieut. (William P. Potter, to be a lieutenant-commander. Lieut. (Junior Grade) Patrick W. Hourigan, to be a lieutenant. Ensign Edward W. Eberle, to be a lieutenant (junior grade). Commander Charles E. Clark, to be a captain. Lieut. Commander Benjamin S. Richards, to be a commander. Lieut. William H. Beehler, to be a lieutenant-commander. Lieut. (Junior Grade) John B. Bernadou. to be a lieutenant. Lieut. (Junior Grade) John B. Bernadou, to be a lieutenant.
Ensign Charles M. McCormick, to be a lieutenant (junior grade).
Lieut. (Junior Grade) Homer C. Poundstone, to be a lieutenant.
Ensign Glennie Tarbox, to be a lieutenant (junior grade).
Lieut. Commander Benjamin F. Tilley, to be a commander. Lieut. Commander Benjamin F. Tilley, to be a commander.
Lieut. Giles B. Harber, to be a lieutenant-commander.
Lieut. (Junior Grade) Albert A. Ackerman, to be a lieutenant.
Ensign William W. Gilmer, to be a lieutenant (junior grade).
Lieut. (Junior Grade) Albert P. Niblack, to be a lieutenant.
Ensign Robert E. Coontz, to be a lieutenant (junior grade).
Lieut. (Junior Grade) William Truxtun, to be a lieutenant.
Ensign William H. G. Bullard, to be a lieutenant (junior grade). Ensign William H. G. Bullard, to be a lieutenant (juntor grade). Commander Charles J. Barclay, to be a captain.
Lieut. Commander Harry Knox, to be a commander.
Lieut. Sumner C. Paine, to be a lieutenant-commander.
Lieut. (Junior Grade) Stokely Morgan, to be a lieutenant.
Ensign Webster A. Edgar, to be a lieutenant (junior grade).
Lieut. Commander Clifford H. West, to be a commander.
P. A. Engineer James P. S. Lawrance, to be a chief engineer.
Asst. Engineer Walter S. Burke, to be a passed assistant engineer.

P. A. Engineer Isaac S. K. Reeves, to be a chief engineer. Asst. Engineer Oscar W. Koester, to be a passed assistant engi-

P. A. Engineer Wythe M. Parks, to be a chief engineer. Asst. Engineer Edward L. Beach, to be a passed assistant engi-

P. A. Engineer Frank H. Bailey, to be a chief engineer. Asst. Engineer Herman O. Stickney, to be a passed assistant engineer.

P. A. Engineer George S. Willits, to be a chief engineer.
Asst. Engineer Louis M. Nulton, to be a passed assistant engineer.
P. A. Engineer Walter F. Worthington, to be a chief engineer.
Asst. Engineer John B. Patton, to be a passed assistant engineer. Asst. Engineer George W. Danforth, to be a passed assistant engineer.

P. A. Paymaster John S. Carpenter, to be a paymaster.

Asst. Paymaster Philip V. Mohun, to be a passed assistant pay-Paymaster Daniel A. Smith, to be a pay inspector. P. A. Paymaster Livingston Hunt, to be a paymaster.

Asst. Paymaster Martin McMahon Ramsay, to be a passed assistant paymaster.
P. A. Paymaster John A. Mudd, to be a paymaster.

Asst. Paymaster Guy G. Rodgers, to be a passed assistant pay-

George G. Seibels, a citizen of Alabama, to be an assistant paymaster. Edmund W. Bonnaffon, a citizen of Pennsylvania, to be an assistant paymaster.

Medical Inspector Daniel McMurtrie, to be a medical director.

Surg. John L. Neilson, to be a medical inspector.

P. A. Surg. John M. Edgar, to be a surgeon.

P. A. Surg. Thomas C. Craig, to be a surgeon.

P. A. Surg. Philip Leach, to be a surgeon.

George D. Costigan, a citizen of California, to be an assistant Middleton S. Elliott, a citizen of South Carolina, to be an assistant surgeon.

Frank L. Pleadwell, a citizen of Massachusetts, to be an assistant surgeon. Dudley N. Carpenter, a citizen of New Hampshire, to be an assistant surgeon.

Daniel H. Morgan, a citizen of West Virginia, to be an assistant surgeon. POSTMASTERS.

Winfield S. Mercer, to be postmaster at Albany, in the county of Delaware and State of Indiana.

Lang C. Allen, to be postmaster at Clarksdale, in the county of Coahoma and State of Mississippi.

Edwin L. Drake, to be postmaster at Winchester, in the county of Franklin and State of Tennessee.

David A. Minnich, to be postmaster at York, in the county of York and State of Pennsylvania.

David B. Howerton, to be postmaster at Hallettsville, in the county of Lavaca and State of Texas.

Mira Johnson, to be postmaster at Mount Pleasant, in the county of Titus and State of Texas.

Emma L. Lombard, to be postmaster at South Ashburnham, in the county of Worcester and State of Massachusetts.

Lyman D. Thurston, to be postmaster at Leicester, in the county of Worcester and State of Massachusetts.

Miss Georgie L. B. Tobin, to be postmaster at Barnwell, in the county of Barnwell and State of South Carolina.

William V. Leech, to be postmaster at Cape Girardeau, in the county of Cape Girardeau and State of Missouri.

Alva H. O'Dowd, to be postmaster at Weston, in the county of Cape Girardeau and State of Missouri.

Platte and State of Missouri.

John W. Duncan, to be postmaster at Adrian, in the county of Bates and State of Missouri.

Kate E. Sullivan, to be postmaster at Excelsior Springs, in the county of Clay and State of Missouri.

Rella C. Harber, to be postmaster at Trenton, in the county of Grundy and State of Missouri.

Charles Ray, to be postmaster at Cassville, in the county of Barry and State of Missouri.

Charles Q. Hardman, to be postmaster at Edina, in the county of Knox and State of Missouri.

Gideon B. Hart, to be postmaster at Breckenridge, in the county of Caldwell and State of Missouri.

Edward C. Meehan, to be postmaster at Norborne, in the county of Carroll and State of Missouri.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

Monday, January 18, 1897.

The House met at 12 o'clock m. Prayer by the Chaplain, Rev. HENRY N. COUDEN.

The Journal of Saturday's proceedings was read and approved.

HENRY F. THORNTON.

The SPEAKER. The first question before the House is the unfinished business coming over from Saturday. The Clerk will report the pending bill.

The bill (H. R. 1064) for the relief of Henry F. Thornton was

The SPEAKER. The pending question is on an amendment offered by the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. Steele] to insert $16 instead of $25 as the amount of the pension.

Mr. BLUE. Has consent been given for the consideration of the bill?

The SPEAKER. Consent has been given.

Mr. BLUE. I suggest that the arrearage clause, the second section of the bill, which provides that this pension shall take effect from December 25, 1895, is not customary. If I was correct in understanding that as the provision of the bill, it should be amended by striking out that clause.

Mr. PAYNE. Mr. Speaker, I do not think that the House gave consent for the consideration of this bill except upon the understanding that the amendments reported by the committee should be agreed to.

The SPEAKER. Unanimous consent was given for the consideration of the bill, and there was no attempt to qualify that consent

Mr. PAYNE. The first amendment of the committee, I believe, was voted down. But the previous question was not ordered.

The SPEAKER. It was not.

Mr. MILES. When was unanimous consent given?

The SPEAKER. On Saturday. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. STEELE] the amendment of the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. STEELE] striking out $25 and inserting $16.

The amendment was agreed to; there being—ayes 48, noes 28.

Mr. BLUE. If this bill provides, as I understand it does, that this pension shall begin December 25, 1895, I desire to move an amendment so that the act shall take effect on its passage. I do not care anything about the amendment as to the amount, but I do not think we should assent to this principle of paying arrearages.

The SPEAKER. The matter is covered by the second amendment of the committee, which has not yet been put to the House. The Clerk will read the amendment next in order.

The Cierk read as follows:

In line 3, strike out the words "Commissioner of Pensions" and insert "Secretary of the Interior."

The amendment was agreed to.
The SPEAKER. The Clerk will now read the second amendment of the committee

The Clerk read as follows:

Strike out the following: "SEC. 2. That this act shall take effect from December 25, 1895."

Mr. OWENS. I suggest that the House ought to be very careful in acting on this amendment, because we have already agreed to an amendment giving to this poor pensioner the princely increase of $4 a month. Hence, I repeat, the House can not be too careful as to the time when this increase shall take effect.

Mr. PAYNE. It would not be a very good time now, upon this bill, to commence granting arrearages of pensions.

Mr. OWENS. Yes; I say the House ought to be very careful.
Mr. PAYNE. It has been the practice of the House to strike out these provisions for arrearages.

Mr. OWENS. That is why I wanted to invite the attention of the gentleman from New York and others to this question, so that they might realed a provisions for arrearages.

that they might make no mistake in this case.

Mr. PAYNE. I call attention to another fact—that unanimous consent for the consideration of this bill was obtained after the committee's amendment had been reported at $15 a month. House had not thought that that amendment was to be adopted it would not have consented to the arrangement. I know of at least one member who would not have consented to the consideration of the bill.

Mr. OWENS. That is the trouble with the gentleman from New York, he too often mistakes himself for the House.

Mr. PAYNE. "The gentleman from New York" was very careful to make his objection to the House and not to the gentleman from Kentucky.

Mr. OWENS. I was conscious of that.

The SPEAKER. As the debate seems to have been closed on the bill [laughter], the question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment was adopted.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will proceed with the call of committees, there being no unfinished business on the table.

The Committee on the Public Lands was called.

Mr. LACEY. Mr. Speaker, there is one bill. No. 43 on the House Calendar, the bill H. R. 4804, which is the only bill the committee has on the Calendar, and I desire to call it up for consideration

The SPEAKER. The bill does not seem to be in the hands of the Clerk.

Mr. LACEY. With the understanding that this can be returned to, I do not wish to detain the House. It is only one bill and will take, I think, but a very few minutes. I ask consent that the next committee be called.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will proceed with the call of committees

The Committee on Indian Affairs was called.

SALE OF INTOXICATING DRINKS TO INDIANS,

Mr. SHERMAN. Mr. Speaker, there is a bill that the gentleman from Nebraska [Mr. Meiklejohn] will present to the House from the Committee on Indian Affairs.

Mr. Meiklejohn. Mr. Speaker, on behalf of the Committee on Indian Affairs, I call up the bill (H. R. 280) to prohibit the sale of intoxicating drinks to Indians, and for other purposes.

The bill was read, as follows:

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That any person who shall sell, give away, dispose of, exchange, or barter any malt, spirituous, or vinous liquor, including beer, ale, and wine, or any ardent or other intoxicating liquor of any kind whatsoever, or any essence, extract, bitters, preparation, compound, composition, or any article whatsoever, under any name, label, or brand, which produces intoxication, to any Indian to whom allotment of land has been made while the title to the same shall be held in trust by the Government, or to any Indian a ward of the Government under charge of any Indian superintendent or agent, or any Indian, including mixed bloods, over whom the Government, through its departments, exercises guardianship, and any person who shall introduce or attempt to introduce any malt, spirituous, or vinous liquor, including beer, ale, and wine, or any ardent or intoxicating liquor of any kind whatsoever into the Indian country, which term shall include any Indian allotment while the title to the same shall be held in trust by the Government, or while the same shall remain inalienable by the allottee without the consent of the United States, shall be punished by imprisonment for not less than sixty days, and by a fine of not less than $100 for the first offense and not less than $200 for each offense thereafter: Provided, however. That the person convicted shall be committed until fine and costs are paid. But it shall be a sufficient defense to any charge of introducing or attempting to introduce ardent spirits, ale, beer, wine, or intoxicating liquors into the Indian country that the acts charged were done under authority, in writing, from the War Department or any officer duly authorized thereunto by the War Department.

Sec. 2. That so much of the act of the 23d day of July, 1892, as is inconsistent with the provisions of this act is hereby repealed.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the engrossment and third reading of the bill.

Mr. MADDOX. Mr. Speaker, I would like to ask the gentleman from Nebraska to explain this bill.

Mr. MEIKLEJOHN. Mr. Speaker, I would say in reply to the gentleman from Georgia that this bill passed the House at the last session of the Fifty-third Congress, but reached the Senate too late for consideration.

too late for consideration.

The present law prohibits the sale of intoxicating liquors to Indians under a penalty of a fine of not more than $300 for each offense or imprisonment not exceeding two years. The only change the pending bill contemplates in the present law is that the punishment for the sale of intoxicating liquors to Indians shall be for the first offense not less than $100, and for each offense thereafter not less than $200 and imprisonment for a period of time not less than sixty days.

The United States courts in Oregon, Washington, Montana, and certain other States have held that under the Dawes law the allottee of Indian lands, while the title is held in trust by the Government, is not a ward of the Government, and that the sale of liquors to an Indian to whom an allotment of land has been made is not a crime under our present statutes.

This proposed legislation amends the existing statutes in three particulars:

particulars:
First, it makes it unlawful to sell, give away, dispose of, exchange, or barter "any essence, extract, bitters, preparation, compound, composition, or any article whatsoever under any name, label, or brand which produces intoxication."

Second, the punishment "by imprisonment for not more than two years or by a fine of not more than $300 for each offense" is changed to "imprisonment for not less than sixty days and by a fine of not less than $100 for the first offense, and not less than $200 for each offense thereafter."

Third, the term Indian is defined to embrace an Indian "to

Third, the term Indian is defined to embrace an Indian "to whom allotment of land has been made, while the title to the same shall be held in trust by the Government;" an Indian "a ward of the Government under charge of any Indian superintendent or agent;" or an Indian, "including mixed bloods, over whom the Government, through its departments, exercises guardianship."

The bill is recommended by the Commissioner of Indian Affairs, the Secretary of the Interior, the board of Indian commissioners, the Indian Rights Association, and judges and marshals of the United States courts.

It is petitioned for by the Indians themselves and the civilized tribes tribes.

In the interest of the Indian, in the interest of society, and in the interest of good government it should become a law.

Mr. MADDOX. The question is whether the House is authorized to pass such a law as you are asking for. That is the point on which I wish to hear the gentleman from Nebraska.

Mr. MEIKLEJOHN. In the case of United States against Holliday, reported in 3 Wallace, page 407, that question is very fully considered; and the courts have always held until the recent decisions in Washington, Oregon, and Montana that the decision of a political department of the Government as to whether the tribal relations of the Indians had ceased would be followed by the courts. That opinion has been the law until the recent detrioal relations of the Indians had ceased would be followed by the courts. That opinion has been the law until the recent decisions of the United States courts in the States mentioned.

I therefore believe that we have full authority to pass such a bill, and if there is any question as to the constitutionality of the measure, in my judgment it ought to be left to the courts.

Mr. LITTLE. I would like to ask the gentleman—not being familiar with the decision to which he has referred—if it was not based on the fact that the allottees became citizens of the United based on the fact that the allottees became citizens of the United

Mr. MEIKLEJOHN. You refer to the decisions in the courts of Oregon, Washington, and Montana? Mr. LITTLE. Yes. Mr. MEIKLEJOHN. It was upon It was upon that ground.

Mr. MEIKLEJOHN. It was upon that ground.
Mr. LITTLE. On the ground of citizenship?
Mr. MEIKLEJOHN. Yes.
Mr. LITTLE. When the Indian takes his allotment, he becomes a citizen of the United States, and ceases to be a ward of the Government. I am inclined to think that to give the Federal courts jurisdiction of offenses committed by citizens against citizens trenches upon the authority of the States, an authority that ought to be retained in the State governments. If they are citizens of your State, I see no reason why the legislature can not pass ample and sufficient laws to protect its own citizens, and I am inclined and sufficient laws to protect its own citizens, and I am inclined to think it ought to do so.

Mr. MEIKLEJOHN. I will say to the gentleman from Arkansas that it is my judgment that under the Dawes bill, so long as the title is held in trust by the Government, for twenty-five years the little is held in trust by the Hodien ellected does not gain all from the date of the allotment, the Indian allottee does not gain all the rights of full citizenship to an extent that precludes the Government from exercising control and guardianship over him through its political departments.

Justice McKenna, of the United States circuit court of appeals, ninth circuit, in the case of Eels et al. vs. Ross, delivered the opinion of the court October 10, 1894, as follows:

We do not consider it necessary to consider or decide all the propositions argued. If the land was an Indian reservation, the agents had a right to remove all persons found therein contrary to the law. (Revised Statutes, section 2147. See also Revised Statutes, sections 2118, 2149.) It is not disputed that the lands are a part of those set apart as the Puyallup Reservation, and that the reservation has not been directly revoked; but it is contended that the allotment of the lands in severalty, and afterwards making the Indians citizens, necessarily had the effect to revoke the reservation. There is plausibility in the argument, and it needs to be carefully considered. It is clear that the allotment alone could not have this effect (The Kanasa Indiana, 5 Wall., 737) and citizenship can only have it if citizenship is inconsistent with the existence over vation may be inconsistent with the rights of citizens. The advantages of a reservation are not; and if, to secure the latter to the Indians, others not Indians are excluded, it is not clear what right they have to complain. The act of 1837, which confers citizenship, clearly does not emancipate the Indians from all control or abolish the reservations.

Section 3 provides for leasing lands under certain contingencies, under the regulations of the Secretary of the Interior, and the provise of the section continuation of the Secretary of the Interior, and the provise of the section continuation of the Secretary of the Interior, and the provise of the section continuation of the Secretary of the Interior, and the provise of the section continuation of the Secretary of the Interior, and the provise of the section continuation of the Secretary of the Interior, and the provise of the section continuation of the Secretary of the Interior, and the provise of the section continuation of the Secretary of the Interior, and the provisions of the section of the Secretary of the Interior and the provision of the Secretary of the Interior and the provisions of the Secretary of the Interior and the Interior and Interi

Mr. LITTLE. As I understand, you base your opinion on the fact that the Government still retains the supervision over his allotment, his lands; but does he not become a citizen to all intents and purposes, with the right to vote, and so forth?

Mr. MEIKLEJOHN. It is my judgment that he does not gain his full rights as a citizen so far as the control of the Government is concerned, and whether Indians are to be considered as a tribe or have ceased tribal relations is primarily a question for the political states.

ical department of the Government.

Mr. LITTLE. I fully concur with my friend as to the importance of legislation of this sort, if it can be properly enacted. I think the highest restrictions should be placed for the protection of these Indians.

Mr. MEIKLEJOHN. In reply to the gentleman's question, if he will pardon me, I will read what Commissioner Browning says:

he will pardon me, I will read what Commissioner Browning says:

It will be observed that the tendency of the courts below is to declare Indians who become citizens by taking allotments in severalty not to be under the Indian agent within the meaning of the law prohibiting the sale of liquors to Indians, and to be free to purchase intoxicating liquors, notwithstanding the fact that agents are maintained over them by the Government, and as the cases in which these decisions are made are of a criminal character and can not be appealed by the Government, it will be absolutely necessary for the full protection of the Indian allottees that some such legislation as is proposed in this bill shall be enacted. The making of allotments to Indians changes their status as to citizenship, but it does not change the Indian allottee by the free use of intoxicating liquors as he could receive by such use as a member of a tribe, and the presence in the midst of any community of Indian allottees who would be free to purchase intoxicating liquors would be a menace to the lives and property of the law-abiding members of such community.

William H. Brinker, United States attorney for the district of Washington, in a communication to the Commissioner of Indian Affairs, says:

Unless this traffic is prohibited by legislation, the policy of the Government to civilize the Indian will be defeated, and he will be converted from a wandering nomad into a drunken loafer.

Mr. LITTLE. Now, I fully agree with what is said there; but while the character of the Indian has not been changed, or his while the character of the Indian has not been changed, or his tastes or habits changed, has not the power to which he must look for protection been changed, by the action of this Government, as well as by his consent? In other words, ought he not to look to the State government for his protection when he becomes a citizen and exercises the rights of a citizen?

Mr. MEIKLEJOHN. May I inquire of the gentleman from Arkansas, if the United States courts in different jurisdictions are not agreed as to the construction of the Dawes bill on citizenship of the Indian, would it not be wise to pass the measure and leave of the Indian, would it not be wise to pass the measure and leave the constitutionality of the act to the Supreme Court?

Mr. LITTLE. We can afford to look into it somewhat ourselves. I confess I have not examined the authorities, but it does occur to me, without any careful examination, that it is going a step too far, and that the Federal courts ought not to be empowered to interfere with the jurisdiction which, in my judgment, ered to interfere with the jurisdiction which, in my judgment, properly belongs to the State.

I will ask the gentleman this further question: Why is it that your State government can not protect these Indians as amply as the Federal Government can? Your legislature can pass laws making the penalties as high as it wants to. The State has the arm of all its officers and all the local courts, which, it seems to me, would be more efficient in this regard than the Federal machinery. machinery

Mr. MEIKLEJOHN. Does the gentleman understand that the change in the present law provided by the bill, so far as the Indians who are subjected to it are concerned, is its application to allottees of Indian lands during the time that the title is held in trust by the Government?

Mr. LITTLE. Well, yes; I understood that there was some limitation in that line, and I am glad to hear the gentleman state that; but I do not think the character of the land holdings is the turning point in the case. I think it is a question of the status of the individual, his citizenship.

Mr. MADDOX. In other words, the question is this: If this House has not the jurisdiction or authority to pass this law that House has not the jurisdiction or authority to pass this law that you ask for, the law will have no legal effect, and you will fail in the purpose for which you propose it.

Mr. MEIKLEJOHN. May I inquire of the gentleman, so long as the Supreme Court has held that Indians under the control of an agent are wards of the Government, as it held in United States vs. Holliday, would it not be well, notwithstanding decisions to the contrary by United States district courts, to pass the bill and leave the expection of legality of the art to the courts?

leave the question of legality of the act to the courts?

Mr. MADDOX. But when the land is allotted, as in this case, and the Indians become citizens of the State, this Congress has no longer the power to legislate on the subject, so far as they are concerned, and your legislation will be void. I agree with the gentleman as to the necessity for this legislation, but I think it ought to be State legislation instead of Federal. Now, the difficulty that I have if the gentleman are in that I have a federal to the I have the I culty that I have, if the gentleman will pardon me, is that I do not want to stand here as a member of the Committee on Indian Affairs and allow this sort of a law to be passed without entering our protest against it, because I do not believe we have any right to pass any such law, or any authority.

Mr. MEIKLEJOHN. Is it not your opinion that we best take chances on the constitutionality of this act than to continue this nefarious business of debauching our Indians and bringing them to degradation instead of civilization?

Mr. MADDOX Loan not can about the continue this necessary and the continue that the continue the continue that the contin

Mr. MADDOX. I can not say about that; but you and I have both taken an oath here to support the Constitution.

Mr. MEIKLEJOHN. I am of the opinion that the bill is constitutional and should be passed, and I believe the courts will hold that citizenship under the Dawes law does not remove the Indian from governmental control.

Mr. MADDOX. The trouble is that we differ as to the constitutional in the constitution of the cons

Mr. MEIKLEJOHN. In Beck vs. Flournoy, etc., Company, decided by the circuit court of appeals, eighth circuit, December 10, 1894, Judge Thayer, in delivering the opinion of the court, said:

It is suggested, as we understand, that because Congress conferred the right of citizenship upon all Indians to whom allotments of land might be made and upon every Indian who should take up a residence separate and apart from his tribe and adopt the habits of civilized life, the power to sell, lease, and otherwise dispose of allotted lands was also conferred as a necessary incident of citizenship. It is urged, as we understand, that Congress should not make these Indians citizens of the United States without at the same time giving to them the unrestricted power to sell, use, and control all property whatsoever in which they chance to have an interest. This argument appears to us to be untenable. We know of no reason, nor has any been suggested, why it was not compet nt for Congress to declare that these Indians should be deemed citizens of the United States and entitled to the rights, privileges, and immunities of citizens while it retained for the time being the title to certain lands in trust for their benefit and withheld from them for a certain period the power to sell, lease, or otherwise dispose of their interests in such lands. * * * And we can conceive of no sufficient reason why the United States in the exercise of its sovereign power should be denied the right to impose similar limitations, especially when it is dealing with the defendant race like the Indians, who have always been regarded as the wards of the nation. * * It does not follow, therefore, that the power of these Indians to deal with land which was held by the Government in trust for their benefit was sensibly enlarged, or that the restriction against alienation found in the fifth section of the act of February 8, 1887, was removed because in the sixth section of the same act Congress saw fit to declare that when land had been allotted to an Indian or he had separated from his tribe and adopted the habits of civilized life he should be entitled to all the rights, privileges, and immunities of a citizen. The two sections of the act are by no means inconsistent with each other. The clause imposing a limitation upon the power of alienation is not in conflict with the subsequent clause conferring the boson of citizenship. Both provisions may well stand together. They were inserted for a well-defined purpose, which it is easy to comprehend; and the act should be so construed as to give effect to both provisions, and thereby accomplish the purpose of the lawmaker. (65 Fed. Rep., 30.)

I desire to submit as a part of my remarks the committee report on this bill. It is as follows:

I desire to submit as a part of my remarks the committee report on this bill. It is as follows:

The Committee on Indian Affairs, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 280) entitled "A bill to prohibit the sale of intoxicating liquors to Indians, and for other purposes," beg leave to submit the following report, and recommend that said bill do pass with an amendment:

Amend the title so as to read: "A bill to prohibit the sale of intoxicating liquors to Indians, providing penalties therefor, and for other purposes."

This bill enacts that it shall be unlawful for any person to sell, give away, dispose of, exchange, or barter any intoxicating liquors of any kind what soever to any Indian to whom allotment of land has been made while the title is held in trust by the Government, or to any Indian a ward of the Government, including mixed bloods, over whom the Government exercises superint on the contract of the contr

"The bill was passed by the House of Representatives in the last hours of the last session, but too late to receive the consideration of the Senate, and consequently did not become a law. It is my purpose, however, on the assembling of the next Congress, to submit the matter to the Department in a special report, with a view to having the bill again introduced and, if possible, passed into law."

The bill has the approval and indorsement of the Secretary of the Interior, the Commissioner of Indian Affairs, United States district attorneys, and the Indian Rights Association.

The necessity for this legislation is clearly set out in the accompanying letters, which are made a part of this report.

OFFICE UNITED STATES ATTORNEY, DISTRICT OF OREGON, Portland, October 12, 1895.

Portland, October 12, 1895.

DEAR SIR: Permit me to acknowledge receipt of your communication under date of 5th instant. Replying thereto, I have to say that Judge Bellinger's decision was never reported, but was in substance as follows: "That under section 6 of the act of Congress approved February 8, 1887 (24 Stat. L., page 390), all Indians who have lands allotted to them in severalty, as per the provisions of said act of Congress, are deemed to be citizens of the United States and subject to the laws, both civil and criminal, of the State wherein they reside, and that it was the intention of Congress by adopting section 6 to repeal the provisions of section 2139, Revised Statues, so far as said allotted Indians are concerned,"

Bespectfully, yours,

DANIEL R. MURPHY,

United States Attorney.

DANIEL R. MURPHY, United States Attorney.

G. D. MEIKLEJOHN, The Millard, Omaha, Nebr.

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR, OFFICE OF INDIAN AFFAIRS, Washington, January 18, 1895.

Department of the Interior, Office of Indian Affairs,

Sir. Referring to office report of October 12, 1894, in response to a letter from Hon. Thomas Lynch, inclosing copy of House bill No. 6557, "to prohibit the sale of intoxicants to Indians," and asking for the opinion of this Department thereon, I have the honor to transmit herewith, in duplicate, copy of a letter of January 4, 1895, from the United States district attorney for the district of Washington, inviting attention to the fact that the courts of Washington and Oregon have decided that as section 6 of the act of February 8, 1887 (24 Stat. L., 389), provided for the admission to citizenship in the United States of Indians who have taken allotments under said act, such Indians are emancipated from the control of the Indian agents, and that it is not a violation of the law (section 2139 of the Revised Statutes, as amended by the act of July 23, 1882 (27 Stat. L., 280), to furnish such citizen Indians with liquor.

Said bill No. 6557 provides a penalty for the sale of intoxicating liquors to Indians who had taken allotments under the said act of 1887, and in that report it was suggested that as the tendency of the courts was to declare an Indian who had become a citizen by taking an allotment in severalty to be free to purchase intoxicating liquors, notwithstanding the fact that agents have been, under the direction of Congress, maintained over such Indians by the Government, it would be absolutely necessary, if the Indian allottees are to be fully protected, that some such legislation as proposed in this bill should be enacted. Mr. Brinker, the district attorney for Washington, whose communication is referred to above, states that it has been frequently demonstrated (and it is not seen how demonstration is necessary) that the allotment of lands will not alone destroy the appetite for liquor nor render the Indian any less dangerous to himself and neighbors than he was before. As was stated in the report from this office, above referred to, the making of

The SECRETARY OF THE INTERIOR.

Office United States Attorney, District of Washington, Seattle, Wash., January 4, 1895.

Seattle, Wash., January 1, 1895.

Sir: I desire to call your attention to a matter which seems to me should be brought to the attention of Congress and some remedial legislation passed covering it.

I refer to the sale of liquor to Indians. By section 2139, Revised Statutes of the United States, it is made a crime for anyone to sell, give, etc., liquor to any Indian under the charge of an Indian agent or superintendent.

On February 8, 1887 (24 Stat. L., 388), Congress passed what is known as the "Dawes bill," providing for the allotment in severalty of the lands of certain reservations to the Indians. The sixth section of this act declares that every Indian to whom allotments have been made is a "citizen of the United States and is entitled to all the rights, privileges, and immunities of such citizens."

The United States courts in this district and in Oregon have decided that the effect of section 6 is to emancipate the Indians from the control of the Indian agents and to make them "citizens" in the fullest sense, and that it is not a violation of section 2139, Revised Statutes, to furnish such citizens with liquor.

not a violation of section 2109, Revised Statutes, but this is denied by the is protected by section 2139, Revised Statutes, but this is denied by the

he is protected by section 2139, Revised Statutes, but this is denied by the court.

It seems to me that the policy of Congress has been to civilize these Indians, and that the allotment of land is but one step in that direction, giving them land so that by the reflection of proprietorship they may cease their wandering and become attached to one place, which they can call their "home," and that they are just as susceptible to evil influences while occupying their home as they were before, and in as great danger from the liquor traffic as they were before the allotments were made, and that the same reasons exist now for prohibiting this traffic, under severe penalties, as ever existed. It has been frequently demonstrated that the allotment of land will not alone destroy the appetite for liquor, nor render the Indian any the less dangerous to himself and neighbor than he was before.

Unless this traffic is prohibited by legislation, the policy of the Government to civilize the Indian will be defeated, and he will be converted from a wandering nomad into a drunken loafer.

I tried a case to-day in the United States district court here in which a man was indicted for selling liquor to two Indians on November 29, 1894. The evidence was conclusive that the defendant sold the Indians a quart of whisky, which they drank and became so intoxicated that one of them laid down across a railroad track, where he was found by an officer, and upon being arrested his drunken companion attempted forcibly to rescue him from the officer.

These Indians testified that they lived upon lands which had been allotted.

rested his drunken companion attempted forcing to rescal and cofficer.

These Indians testified that they lived upon lands which had been allotted to them in severalty, and the court instructed the jury to return a verdict acquitting the defendant.

Total these matters to your attention in the hope that some legislation may

I call these matters to your attention in the hope that some legislation may be had which will make the offenders liable to punishment.

Very respectfully,

WM. H. BRINKER, United States Attorney. The COMMISSIONER OF INDIAN AFFAIRS, Washington, D. C.

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR, OFFICE OF INDIAN AFFAIRS,
Washington, January 25, 1895.

SIR: I am in receipt of your letters of January 2, 1895, transmitting a copy of House bill 6657, "to prohibit the sale of intoxicants to Indians," as follows, on which you request the opinion of this Department:
"Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America, in Congress assembled, That any person who shall sell, give away, dispose of, exchange, or barter any malt, spirituous, or vinous liquor, including beer, ale, and wine, or any ardent or intoxicating liquor of any kind whatsoever, or any essence, extract, bitters, preparation, compound, composition, or any article whatsoever, under any name, label, or brand, which produces intoxication, to any Indian to whom allotment of land has been made while the title to the same shall be held in trust by the Government, or to any Indian a ward of the Government under charge of any Indian superintendent or agent; and any person who shall introduce, or attempt to introduce, any malt, spirituous, or vinous liquor, including beer, aie, and wine, or any ardent or intoxicating liquor of any kind whatsoever into the Indian country, shall be punished by imprisonment for not more than two years, or by a line of not less than $100 for the first offense, and not less than $200 for each offense thereafter, or by both fine and imprisonment, in the discretion of the court: Provided, however, That when the punishment shall be by fine the person convicted shall be committed until fine and costs are paid, the informers to have and receive one-half of all fines paid and collected. But it shall be a sufficient defense to any charge of introducing, or attempting to introduce, ardent spirits, ale, beer, wine, or intoxicating liquors into the Indian country that the acts charged were done under authority, in writing, from the War Department, or any officer duly authorized thereunto by the War Department.

"Sec. 2. That so much of the act of the 23d day of July, 1892, as is inconsistent with the provisions of this act is hereby repealed."

In line II, section I, you suggest an amendment to the bill by inserting after theiword "Government," and before the word "under," the words "or any Jud an over whom the Government exercises wardship." The object of this amendment is, as you say, in order to avoid any misunderstanding as to the meaning and intent of the word "ward" as used in the bill.

In reply, I have to say that the Office has experienced some considerable the various provisions of law touching the same on account of the duty of the Government wi ceased to hold tribal relations is primarily a question for the political departments of the Government, and if they have decided it, this court will follow their lead."

The district courts of the United States, it seems, have not, however, held this view of the case, the office having received numerous reports from its agents citing cases where the district courts have held that the making of allotments to Indians of a reservation makes them citizens of the United States and takes them out from under the charge of the agents of the United States, notwithstanding the fact that the Government maintains agencies over them. The court of the United States for the district of Washington held, in a case which was tried in the spring of 1890, that as the Puyallup Indians were citizens of the United States, the sale of liquors to them was not punishable under the statutes, basing this opinion on the ground that the Congress and the Executive were not authorized to maintain an agency over the Indians after they had become citizens. This appears to this office to be in direct violation of the ruling of the Supreme Court in the case of Holliday above cited.

The district court of the United States for Oregon, Judge Bellinger, held in the case of The United States v. Thomas Kawkes and Edwin Kline (none of these cases have been published, so far as I know) to the same effect, viz, that Indians who have received allotments in severalty have become citizens of the United States and are not in charge of the United States agent, and therefore the sale of liquors to them is not prohibited by the law, which is applicable only to the Indian wards of the Government.

It will be observed that the tendency of the courts below is to declare Indians who become citizens by taking allotments in severalty not to be under the Indian agent within the meaning of the law prohibiting the sale of liquors to Indians, and to be free to purchase intoxicating liquors, notwithstanding the fact that agents are maintained over them by the Government;

menace to the lives and property of the law-abiding members of such community.

In a report of August 14, 1894, Capt. P. H. Ray, U. S. A., until recently the acting Indian agent of the Shoshone Agency, Wyo., says, with respect to the attitude of the courts toward this question, that if this is to be the interpretation of the law by the courts he does not think any advantage to be derived from allotments will compensate for the evil that will follow the opening of the reservation to whisky sellers, and that in their present condition it will practically destroy these people to remove them from the protection of agents and turn them over to the most lawless element on the frontier. Mr. John F. T. B. Brentano, the Indian agent for the Grande Ronde Agency, in Oregon, reported on the subject also, and expressed somewhat similar fears as to the results to the Indian allottees the decisions of the courts respecting this matter would have.

I have just recently received a letter dated Seattle, Wash., January 4, 1895, from William H. Brinker, United States district attorney for the district of Washington, inviting my attention to the decisions of the courts respecting the sale of liquors to Indian allottees, and expressing the belief that the attention of Congress should be called to the same, and some remedial legislation passed covering it. He says that "unless this traffic is prohibited by legislation the policy of the Government to civilize the Indian will be defeated and he will be converted from a wandering nomad into a drunken loafer."

Under date of October 12, 1894, the office submitted a report to the Secretary of the Interior on this bill, at the request of Hon. Thomas Lynch, of Wisconsin, and on January 18, 1895, two copies of Mr. Brinker's letter, above referred to, were transmitted to the Secretary, with the request that Mr. Lynch's attention be invited to the desirability of the passage of this law, and that a copy be furnished the Committee on Indian Affairs of the Senate, with the statement that the pas that it would seem to be desirable that the bill should be amended in some similar manner, but I would suggest that the words offered by you be proposed after the word "agent," and before the word "and," in line 12, section I. The reason for this is that if the amendment were inserted at the place where you suggest, the law would not be applicable to allottees who have received allotments under the fourth section of the act of 1887, their allotments being on the public domain and outside of the jurisdiction of any United States Indian agent; but these Indians are also quasi wards of the Government and need none the less the protecting arm of the United States.

I would also suggest an amendment to your amendment by the insertion of the words "including mixed bloods" after the word "Indian" and before the word "over." This amendment seems to be desirable, in view of the fact that there appears to be a great difference of opinion as to what an Indian is within the meaning of the laws; and also by the insertion of the words "through its political departments" after the word "Government," and the substitution of the word "guardianship" for "wardship."

I inclose a copy of the bill showing how I would recommend that it be amended, and have to say, as I have once or twice before said in this letter, that I think it very desirable that Congress should, at this session, enact the same into law or pass some legislation similar to this bill.

Very respectfully,

D. M. BROWNING, Commissioner.

D. M. BROWNING, Commissioner.

Hon. George D. Meiklejohn, House of Representatives. (Through the Secretary of the Interior.)

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR,
Washington, December 10, 1895.

SIR: I have the honor to transmit herewith draft of a bill prepared by the Commissioner of Indian Affairs "to prohibit the sale of intoxicating drinks to Indians, and for other purposes."

The accompanying report of the Commissioner, dated 23d ultimo, sets out the reasons for the desired legislation, and the matter is presented for the favorable action of Congress.

Very respectfully,

The Speaker of the House of Representatives.

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR, OFFICE OF INDIAN AFFAIRS, Washington, D. C., November 23, 1895.

Department of the Interior.

OPTICE OF INDIAN APPAIRS,
Washington, D. C., Nowember 23, 1825.

Sir: In my annual report for 1895, on pages 56 and 57, I referred to the embarrassments experienced by this office on account of a decision by Judge Bellinger, of the United States district court for Oregon, which in effect permits the sale of liquor to Indian allottees without limitation (to which reference was made in my annual report for 1894, page 62 et seq.), and quoted the provisions of a bill which was introduced in the last Congress by Hon.
George D. Meirley and the state of this subject I stated that it was my purformed in a special report with a view to remedying the evil.

In concluding my discussion of this subject I stated that it was my purformed and if possible passed into law. In pursuance of this purpose I have the honor to submit herewith in duplicate the draft of a bill "to prohibit the sale of intoxicating drinks to Indians, and for other purposes."

This proposed bill is similar in its provisions to the one passed by the House of Representatives in the last hours of the last Congress, the modifications suggested being:

"which term shall include any Indian allotment while the fifth to the same shall be held in trust by the Government or while the same shall remain inalienable by the allottee without the consent of the United States."

(2) The change of the penalty provided by fixing the minimum time of imprisonment instead of leaving that to the discretion of the Curit Comprisonment and fine instead of leaving that to the discretion of the curit.

(3) The striking out of that part of the former bill which provided for the payment to the Informer of one-half the fines imposed.

(3) The striking not of that part of the former bill which provided for the payment of the Indian tille and the destriction of its character as Indian country. It is true the decision of the circuit court of appeals in Eells vs. Ross (64 Fed. Rep., 417) lays down a rule which, if followed to its logical conclusion, would prev honor to recommend that one copy of each be forwarded to the Vice-President, with request that it be laid before the Senate at the assembling of Congress on December 2, 1895, and that one copy of each be forwarded to the Speaker of the House of Representatives, to be laid before that body on its organization.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

D. M. BROWNING, Commissioner.

The SECRETARY OF THE INTERIOR.

A bill to prohibit the sale of intoxicating drinks to Indians, and for other pur-

A bill to prohibit the sale of intoxicating drinks to Indians, and for other purposes.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That any person who shall sell, give away, dispose of, exchange, or barter any malt, spirituous, or vinous liquor, including beer, ale, and wine, or any ardent or other intoxicating liquor of any kind whatsoever, or any essence, extract, bitters, preparation, compound, composition, or any article whatsoever under any name, label, or brand, which produces intoxication, to any Indian to whom allotment of land has been made while the title to the same shall be held in trust by the Government, or to any Indian a ward of the Government under charge of any Indian superintendent or agent, or any Indian, including mixed-bloods, over whom the Government, through its Departments, exercises guardianship, and any person who shall introduce or attempt to introduce any malt, spirituous, or vinous liquor, including beer, ale, and wine, or any ardent or intoxicating liquor of any kind whatsoever into the Indian country, which term shall include any Indian allotment while the title to the same shall be held in trust by the Government, or while the same shall remain inalienable by the allottee without the consent of the United States, shall be punished by imprisonment for not less than sixty days and by a fine of not less than $100 rot the first offense and not less than $200 for each offense thereafter: Provided, however, That when the punishment shall be by fine the person convicted shall be committed until fine and costs are paid; but it shall be a sufficient defense to any charge of introducing or attempting to introduce ardent spirits, ale, beer, wine, or intoxicating liquors into the Indian country that the acts charged were done under authority in writing from the War Department or any officer duly authorized thereunto by the War Department.

Sec. 2. That so much of the act of 23d day of July, 1892, as is inconsistent with th

UNITED STATES INDIAN SERVICE,
Grande Ronde Agency, Oreg., June 10, 1895.

SIR: Inclosed you will find a copy of the Sheridan Sun of last Thursday
June 6, 1895.

You will observe that I have marked an article entitled "A Donnybrook picnic." It will show you what the sale of liquor to Indians is doing for some of them. I have some Indians that are just as moderate as any white man;
but it is ruining a great man;

of them. I have some Indians that are just as moderate as any white man; but it is ruining a great many.

Since the last day of April (when the Indian court was disbanded) there has been an immense increase of crime resulting from intoxication. May 18, Thom. Lawney and Oleman Issac tried to kill Bobert Metcalf on this reservation, and were only prevented by the timely arrival of the Government farmer.

On May 28, Dan Wacheno beat his wife. They were both drunk. Next day she left him, and they are now separated.

On May 30, Bill Warren tried to murder James Silque and John Pratt. The latter had a very close call.

Twice I have myself been personally assaulted by an Indian, without, however, suffering anything.

There is no law making drunkenness a crime in this State, and if there was it would not be enforced.

Do you think that Congress could be induced to enact a new law making it a crime to sell liquor to an Indian, and would not Judge Bellinger hold such a law unconstitutional?

Very truly, yours,

JOHN F. T. B. BRENTANO,

United States Indian Agent.

JOHN F. T. B. BRENTANO, United States Indian Agent.

The COMMISSIONER OF INDIAN AFFAIRS.

[The Sheridan Weekly Sun, Sheridan, Thursday, June 6, 1895.]

A "DONNYBBOOK" PIONIC—THE INDIANS FROM THE AGENCY GET BOILING DRUNK AND FIGHT—THE WILLAMINA POSTMASTER ASSAULTED—HE IS DEFENDED BY CITIZENS ARMED WITH AX HANDLES—OBSCERE AND PROFANE LANGUAGE USED—SWAGGERING BUCKS CAUSE LADIES AND CHILDREN TO GIVE THE SIDEWALKS—OUR NEW CITIZENS ENJOY THEIR FREEDOM.

ENDED BY CITIZENS ARMED WITH AX HANDLES—OBSCENE AND PROFAME LANGUAGE USED—SWAGGERING BUCKS CAUSE LADIES AND CHILDREN TO GIVE THE SIDEWALKS—OUR NEW CITIZENS ENJOY THEIR FREEDOM.

The school picnic at Willamina last Friday was well attended. The exercises, literary, musical, and otherwise, including an address from Superintendent Stilwell, were interesting. The ball game between the Sheridan boys and Grande Ronde boys was uninteresting. Only three innings were played. The Indians were too drunk to distinguish a baseball from a barn door, and failed to make a run. Later in the day when king alcohol got the Indians thoroughly under his malign influence they began a Donnybrook fair exhibit which surpassed anything ever seen in this section of the country. It was knock down and drag out for several hours, the Indians fighting among themselves like veritable demons. Lame Jim had his left arm broken in two places, and lay bruised, drunken, and bleeding by the roadside between Willamina and Grande Ronde from Friday evening until nearly noon Saturday.

Another fellow named Tipton attacked Postmaster Dundas, who was going out to the ball ground with two of his little children. Dundas knocked the Indian down several times with his fist, but the bloodthirsty bruite followed him uptown to his store, being joined by four or five other intoxicated Indians. Mr. Dundas secured an ax handle, and being reenforced by Mr. Shaller, Jo. Stewart, and others, the onslaught of the savages was checked. Stewart then persuaded the Indians to take Tipton away. This they agreed to do, so they bound him hand and foot and threw him in a wagon like a fat porker destined for market. One of the squaws present went through her drunken lord's pockets and took his money, and procuring some alcohol, a number of the dark sex got gloriously hilarious. One of these bibulous dames started to drive the wagon containing her stupefied husband and a lot of children home, but running off the grade, overturned the wagon, spilling out the whole family. Fortunate last Friday, was arrested and put under $800 bonds on Wednesday last by Justice Connor at Ballston to appear before the next Polk County grand jury.

United States Indian Service,
Grande Ronde (Oreg.) Agency, September 10, 1895.

Sir: I regret to have to report of a murder on this reservation. On August 81, 1895, Peter Lafferty, an Indian, crushed the skull of Jonas Short, Indian, both of this reservation.

This crime, like so many others, can be laid directly to bad whisky. I trust that something may be done in the near future to punish those that sell whisky to Indians under the charge of an agent.

Very truly, yours,

JOHN F. T. B. BRENTANO,
United States Indian Agent.

The Commissioner of Indian Affairs.

P. S.—The above Jonas Short died on September 7, 1895.

J. F. T. B. B.

United States Indian Service,

Grande Ronde (Oreg.) Agency, September 17, 1895.

Sir: Inclosed you will find the Daily Oregonian of this morning. In the first column, on the third page, you will find a dispatch which will explain itself. I have marked it.

I wrote to you about the whisky troubles on the 10th of June, when an Indian (William Warren) tried to kill two old Indians belonging to this reservation.

Indian (William Warren) tried to kill two old Indians belonging to this reservation.

I have also reported this bad state of affairs here in my annual report on this agency (August 23, 1895).

On September 10 I reported to you the death of Jonas Short (an Indian belonging here) at the hands of Peter Lafferty, another Grande Ronde Indian. Now comes this case mentioned in to-day's Oregonian.

Can not something be done to stop this whisky business with these Indians? If not, most of them will be lost.

Very truly, yours,

JOHN F. T. B. BRENTANO,

United States Indian. Agent

JOHN F. T. B. BRENTANO, United States Indian Agent.

The COMMISSIONER OF INDIAN AFFAIRS.

P. S.—I have not heard anything about this matter contained in to-day's Oregonian, and know nothing more than what was contained in this dispatch.

J. F. T. B. B.

[Extracts from Morning Oregonian, Portland, Oreg., Tuesday, September 17, 1895.]

AN INDIAN STABBED.

INDEPENDENCE, OREG., September 16.

Yesterday was not the usual quiet Sunday in Independence. The town was crowded with people, and the stores all did a good business. The saloons also had plenty of customers. Sunday night eleven drunks were run in. Since the marshal gets fees, he keeps the drunk and disorderly off the streets, A fight took place over the river opposite here Sunday night among the Indian hop pickers. Two of them were badly using a third. Frank Isaacs, a Grande Ronde Indian, stepped in to separate them, when Billy Tom, a Stletz Indian, turned and stabbed him with a knife, one wound being very near the heart. Billy Tom has been arrested and taken to Salem. The Indians were more or less drunk.

UNITED STATES INDIAN SERVICE, Grande Ronde (Oreg.) Agency, September 24, 1895.

SIR: Inclosed find Yamhill County Reporter of September 20, 1895. You will find two marked items on the first page. Both cases have been reported to you by me, by my letters of September 10 and September 17, 1895. My dear sir, can not something be done to stop this whisky business? Since May 1, 1895, when the court of Indian offenses was abolished here, they have grown wild. With the old court we checked them to a good extent, but since there is no court, we have no way of controlling them.

Very truly, yours,

JOHN F. T. B. RRENTANO, United States Indian Agent.

The COMMISSIONER OF INDIAN AFFAIRS. P. S.—See also my letter of June 10, 1895.

[Extracts from the Yamhill County Reporter, McMinnville, Oreg., Friday, September 20, 1895.]

FROM THE COUNTY PRESS.

[Sheridan Sun.]

Another row took place on the reservation one day last week. An Indian by the name of Peter Lafferty crushed the skull of another by the name of Jonas Short, using a piece of 2 by 4 scantling by way of emphasis. Short, it is feared, will not live long. Should he live short, Lafferty may not live long. Both are Indian citizens, which leads us to remark that the Government made a mistake when it invested the Indians with citizenship and gave them a full swing at fighting fire water.

[Oregon News and Notes.]

Independence must be getting tough. A dispatch sent out from there Monday said: "Yesterday was not the usual quiet Sunday in Independence. The town was crowded with people, and the stores all did a good business; the saloons also had plenty of customers. Sunday night 11 drunks were run in; since the marshal gets fees he keeps the drunk and disorderly off the streets. A fight took place over the river opposite here Sunday night among the Indian hop pickers. Two of them were badly using a third. Frank Isaacs, a Grande Ronde Indian, stepped in to separate them, when Billy Tom, a Siletz Indian, turned and stabbed him with a knife, one wound being very near the heart. Billy Tom has been arrested and taken to Salem. The Indians were more or less drunk."

United States Indian Service, Siletz Indian Agency, Oreg., October 24, 1895.

SIR: I have the honor to submit my report on the condition of affairs at this agency for the month of September, 1895:

Indians.—The larger portion of the indians have been in the hop fields during this month and have earned quite an amount of money, though a great many have saved but little of it, being able to buy whisky without any restraint. They have spent this money in this way, and there are several in the hands of the law. One of the Siletz Indians will likely go to the penitentiary for stabbing one of the Grande Ronde Indians. It is very unfortunate that the courts have ruled that it is not a violation of law to sell them whisky. I have consulted the United States district attorney in the matter; he advises me we are powerless—can do nothing to prevent the cause. This is the worst feature connected with their citizenship, and has already resulted, and will, I fear, continue to result, in much injury to these Indians. As stated above, the larger portion have been engaged picking hops for white people during the past month; for the present month a portion of them will be engaged plowing and sowing fall grain, while others will be engaged fishing.

BEAL GAITHER, United States Indian Agent.

The Commissioner of Indian Affairs, Washington, D. C.

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR, Washington, December 31, 1895.

SIR: Referring to Department letter of 10th instant, addressed to the Senate and House of Representatives and transmitting draft of a bill prepared by the Commissioner of Indian Affairs, "to prohibit the sale of intoxicating drinks to Indians, and for other purposes," I have the honor to transmit herewith copy of a communication of the 30th instant from the Commissioner of Indian Affairs and accompanying copy of a petition signed by the Indians of the Santee Agency, Nebr., in favor of the passage of the bill.

Very respectfully,

HOKE SMITH, Secretary.

The Chairman Committee on Indian Affairs,

House of Representatives.

December 30, 1895.

Sir: Referring to my report of November 23, 1895, transmitting a draft of a bill to prohibit the sale of liquors to Indian allottees, in duplicate, with the recommendation that one copy thereof be transmitted to the Vice-President, to be laid before the Senate, and the other be transmitted to the Speaker, to be laid before the House of Representatives, I have the honor to inclose herewith, in duplicate, a copy of the report of December 20, 1895, from Joseph Clements, United States Indian agent of the Santee Agency in Nebraska, with which he forwards a petition, numerously signed by the Indians of his agency, in favor of the passage of said bill.

The legislation proposed in the draft submitted by him as above stated is contained in two bills introduced into the Senate, one by Mr. Jones of Arkansas (S. 855) and the other by Mr. Gallinger, of New Hampshire (S. 855); and it is also contained in a bill introduced in the House by Mr. Meiklejohn (H. R. 280), and many features thereof are contained in the bill H. R. 68, which was introduced by Mr. Meiklejohn in the House. All of the bills herein referred to have been referred by the House and Senate to the Committee on Indian Affairs of each House, respectively, and I have the honor to recommend in order that the committees may be advised with respect to the sentiments of these Indians as regards this matter, that one copy of the inclosed papers be forwarded to the House Committee on Indian Affairs and the other copy be forwarded to the Senate Committee on Indian Affairs for their information.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant.

D. M. BROWNING, Commissioner.

The SECRETARY OF THE INTERIOR.

United States Indian Service, Santee Agency, December 20, 1895.

DEAR SIR: I have the honor to herewith forward you a petition signed by the men and women of Sactee, to show you the desire of these Indians to suppress the liquor traffic among them.

These people are fully aware of their weakness and the injurious and degrading effect liquor has among them.

They would nearly all sign if we had the opportunity to present the petition to them; but many of them have not been at the agency for some time.

I respectfully suggest that there be added to the bill the following amendment, namely, to make it punishable for one Indian to sell or give liquor to another.

another. Very respectfully,

JOS. CLEMENTS, United States Indian Agent.

The COMMISSIONER OF INDIAN AFFAIRS, Washington, D. C.

We, the undersigned women of the Santee Sioux tribe, feeling that the liquor traffic is demoralizing and degrading our people, destructive to habits of industry and ruinous to our homes, respectfully express our approval of the bill introduced by Representative Meiklejohn to stop the sale of all intoxicants to Indians, and we urgently and earnestly pray the United States Senators and Representatives in Congress to earnestly work to secure its nassange.

Anna Brown, Jane Walker, Louisa Redwing, Amanda Brown, Elizabeth M. Frazier, Nancy Barker, Clara Cash, Victoria Robinson, Susan Wambdisin, Martha Redwing (x), witness A. L. Riggs; Wacanga (x), witness A. L. Riggs; Anna Garvie, Maggie Brass, Mrs. Hakewaxte (x), Nancy Jones, Mary Jones, Mrs. Ellen Iron Elk, Mary Kitto. Anna Redwing, Fannie Moose, Rebecca Holmes, Emma Whipple, Mary Henry, Fannie Hony, Sarah Young, 'ulia Wakeman, Ellen Hopkins, Lucinda Robbison, Maggie Chapman, Lucy Kitto, Mrs. Jane Hawk, Wospin, Alice Stone, Mary H. Campbell, Josephine Holsey, June Frazier, Ynhe Wina, Nina Good Teacher, Anna Wakana, Anglic Johnston, Emma Redowl, Mary Goodthunder, Julia Goodthunder, Lizzie Barker, Mary Lightning, Ahewin, Jane Hopkins, Mary Jones, Elizabeth Wicinyan, Ellen Harlan, Lucy Peather, Maggie Wicanapidutawin, Sarah Redowl, Rasele Jeinck, Rebecca Smith, Nancy Anpahdewin, Anna Thomas, Julia Hawk, Rejuta Ellen Pappay, Anna Fluit, Angela Wilson, Ellen Kitto, Jane Stone, Elizabeth Blacksmith, Lucy Redowl, Emily Trudell, Henry Trudell, Elizabeth Wabashaw, Elizabeth Chapman, Lizzie Redwing, Emma Smith, Harriet Robinette, Hattie Robinette, Nancy Pay Pay, Coray Stone.

We, the undersigned Indians of the Santee Sioux tribe, respectfully express our approval of the bill presented by Representative Meiklejohn, of Nebraska, "to stop the sale of all intoxicants to Indians," and urgently and anxiously pray the United States Senators and Representatives in Congress to earnestly work to secure its passage.

James Garvie, Joseph Goodteacher, George D. Redowl, Alfred H. Barker, Baptist Whipple, Daniel Frazier, Joe Robertson, John Ross, Levi Trudell, Chas. Rockwood, William Holmes, Essia Frazier, Joe Godfary, jr., John Jones, Albert Frazier (councilman), Henry Westman. Lame Rawillard, Louis Robineet, Joe

Godfary, sr., Stephen B. Smith, T. J. Gemack, Joseph Wabashaw, Artemus Ehnawnani, William Wabashaw, James Heart, Oliver Laewix, William Abraham, John T. Chapman, Pat Henry, Red Cloud, Joseph Cash, James Brown, Richard Kitto, John B. Chapman (councilman), Joseph A. Kitto (councilman), James Chapman, R. W. Brown, Chas. Frazier, Simon Kitto, Edward Hedges, Samuel Wolfe, Solomon Jones, Charles Jones, Eli Jones, Solomon W. Barker, James C. Lightning, Joshua Crow, Robert (his x mark) Hakewaste, Daniel Wakama, Henry Robinson, Samuel Jones, Eugene Hoffman, Solomon Ross, James Redwing, Stephen John, Thomas Robinson, A. L. Campbell (councilman), Antoine Trudell, Charles Moose, Samuel Campbell, William C. Campbell, Edward Eastman, George Thomas, Joseph A. Walker, Peter Trudell, J. M. Campbell, Capt. B. J. Young, George Laurence, William Henry, Daniel Stone, Charles St. Clair, Thomas C. Whipple, Sam Red Cloud, Joseph Samuel, Daniel C. Westman, John Kitto, Joseph Redwing, Charles Wolfe, Herbert Whipple, George Henry, Isaac Redowl, Willie Bruss, James Sharp, Adam Bulestone, Henry M. Jones, Johnson Redowl, John C. Rammilard, John K. Home, Joshua Harlan, Henry Waumdisin, Andrew Huntka, Oliver Rammilard, Alex Redwing, John Largester, Jo C. Day, Charles Standing Soldier, Wakauhditauha, John Henry, John M. Green, Joseph Robinett, Daniel Coon, Jacob Barker, Joh Goodteacher, John C. Tuttle, John B. Walker, George Good Teacher, Thomas Whipple.

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR, Washington, February 13, 1896.

Sin: Referring to previous correspondence relative to a draft of a bill prepared by the Commissioner of Indian Affairs, "To prohibit the sale of intoxicating drinks to Indians, and for other purposes," I have the honor to transmit herewith a copy of a communication of Ilth instant and accompanying petition from the Omaha Indians of Nebraska, asking for the passage of the bill introduced by Mr. Meikleyohn, having in view the prohibition of sales of liquors to Indian allottees.

Very respectfully,

HOKE SMITH, Secretary.

The Chairman Committee on Indian Affairs, House of Representatives.

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR,
OFFICE OF INDIAN AFFAIRS,
Washington, D. C., February 11, 1836.

SIR: Referring to my reports of November 23 and December 30, 1895, relative to certain proposed legislation to prohibit the sale of liquors to Indian allottees, I have the honor to inclose herewith (in duplicate) copy of a letter of January 31, 1896, from Capt. W. H. Beck, U. S. A., acting Indian agent of the Omaha and Winnebago Agency, transmitting a petition by the Omaha Indians asking for the passage of the bill introduced by Mr. Meiklejohn, having in view the prohibition of sales of liquors to Indian allottees.
I recommend that one copy of this petition be forwarded to the chairman of the Senate Committee on Indian Affairs and the other copy be forwarded to the chairman of the House Committee on Indian Affairs, for the information of these committees.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,
D. M. BROWNING, Commissioner.

The SECRETARY OF THE INTERIOR.

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR,
UNITED STATES INDIAN SERVICE,
Omaha and Winnebago Agency, Nebr., February 5, 1896.
SIR: I have the honor to transmit a petition signed by the Omahas, relative to the liquor bill introduced by the Hon. George D. Meiklejohn, member of Congress.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

WM. H. BECK.

Captain, Tenth Cavalry, Acting Indian Agent.

WM. H. BECK,

Captain, Tenth Cavalry, Acting Indian Agent.

Washington, D. C.

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR, UNITED STATES INDIAN SERVICE, Omaha and Winnebago Agency, Nebr., January 31, 1896.

The Commissioner of Indian Affairs, Washington, D. C.

Washington, D. C.

SIR: We, the undersigned Omaha Indians, are painfully aware of the evil effects of the use of intoxicating liquors among our people, and of the impossibility of restraining many of the Indians from its use, and also that white men can not be prevented from selling it to Indians or giving it to them whenever a bargain is being made between Indians and white men; therefore in view of our past experience and of the failure of the efforts of the officials and Indians to prevent this traffic, we heartily indorse the bill introduced by the Hon. George D. Meiklejonn, prohibiting the sale of all intoxicating liquors to Indians, and beg the friends of the Indians to use all their power to secure its passage through Congress.

[Signed by 255 Indians, of whom 183 are males and 52 are females.]

Indian Rights Association, 1305 Arch Street, Philadelphia, December 9, 1895.

MY DEAR SIR: I acknowledge with thanks the receipt of your favor of the 5th instant, with inclosures. Absence from the city has prevented an earlier 5th instant, with inclosures. Absence from the city has provided in response.

Our association highly approves the efforts you are making in the direction to protect the Indians from the curse of intoxicants, both on the reservations and to those who have received their allotments. We will be glad to cooperate with you to the extent of our power in securing the passage of your bill.

I will also be glad to embody the substance of your letter in our annual report, which is almost completed.

Very truly, yours,

Secretary Indian Rights Association,

Hon. G. D. Meiklejohn.

House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.

Mr. GAMBLE. Mr. Speaker, I only care to say a word in regard to this. Although under the Dawes Act of 1887, which gives the Indians citizenship-

Mr. MORSE. Mr. Speaker, I should like to hear this dialogue.

There is so much confusion that we can not hear what gentlemen

The SPEAKER. Will the House please be in order, and will gentlemen have the kindness to take their seats?

Mr. GAMBLE. Mr. Speaker, I do not know that I could enlarge

Mr. GAMBLE. Mr. Speaker, I do not know that I could emarge on the suggestion made by the gentleman from Nebraska [Mr. Meiklejohn]; but under the law of 1887, which confers citizenship upon Indians who are allottees, yet at the same time under the general supervision by the Indian Department of the Indians their relations to the Government do not change, and it is essentially necessary for the good government of the Indians and for their better met that the sale of intervienting lignory under any pretense betterment that the sale of intoxicating liquors under any pretense

Mr. MADDOX. Mr. GAMBLE. Mr. MADDOX. We do not disagree upon that point at all.
Mr. GAMBLE. Now, then, if these Indians are still under the charge of an Indian agent, which they are, although they may have taken allotments, and although they receive annuities and maintain the same relation to the Federal Government practically that they did before, I believe that this law is in harmony with the Constitution in the general supervision over the Indians of the country; and I apprehend that the courts of the country have taken different views on this question. I understand that one of the courts in California has held that even under the existing stations in the courts of the court the coarts in Camorna has need that even under the existing star-nte they have the right to exclude the sale of liquors to Indians, and that arrangement was carried out there. I believe that this is in line with the best judgment of the Commissioner of Indian Affairs and the Interior Department; and I think that the Govern-ment can better protect the Indians from the sale of intoxicating liquors than by referring it to the States in which they may be located. I earnestly hope that the bill may pass, because I believe it is thoroughly essential for the government and control of the Indians

Mr. LITTLE. May I ask my friend a question?
Mr. GAMBLE. Certainly.
Mr. LITTLE. I suppose there is no doubt but what the State governments have jurisdiction of those Indian citizens. If the State courts have jurisdiction over the Indians who have become citizens of the United States, what is the necessity of Congress taking this advanced and doubtful ground for their protection?
Are not the States amply able to do that?
Mr. GAMBLE. There appears to be a conflict of opinion as to

Mr. GAMBLE. There appears to be a conflict of opinion as to the right of the State or the jurisdiction of the Federal Government in these matters. These matters heretofore have been controlled by the Federal Government entirely, and such has been the expectation of those having the control of the Indians that it should remain in the Government and not in the State authorities. They think it can be better and more efficiently controlled by the Federal Government than by the State.

Mr. LITTLE. But suppose anyone under the law of the State should be indicted by the State court, and likewise be indicted by the Federal court. It seems to me that that would get up endless confusion. What have your States held heretofore on the subject?

Mr. GAMBLE. I do not think the question has ever come before the courts that my attention has been definitely called to. The State courts have never taken jurisdiction. It occurs to me, as suggested by my friend from Nebraska [Mr. Meiklejohn], that the Indians are still wards of the Government. They simply hold a title under the jurisdiction of the Government, which may be extended even during twenty-five years.

Mr. BAILEY. Will the gentleman permit an inquiry?

Mr. GAMBLE. Certainly.

Mr. BAILEY. Does not the act provide that when they take this land in allotment they become citizens?

Mr. GAMBLE. They become citizens.

Mr. BAILEY. Then it is utterly impossible for them to be citizens and provide the third states of the Livited States of the come time. It is constituted to the come time.

zens and pupils of the United States at the same time. It is very clear that the Government has the right to continue them in the state of tutelage and dependence, but when it terminates that condition and makes them citizens of the United States, then it has no more power to legislate specifically for them than for any other

Mr. GAMBLE. This is entirely a question of jurisdiction. is a matter that ought to be passed upon and determined by the courts. The Interior Department, I know, does exercise jurisdic-tion and control of the Indians who have taken allotments, that is, those who still retain tribal relations, and I believe we can better maintain this tutelage than by referring it to State jurisdiction. [Cries of "Vote!" "Vote!"]

Mr. MEIKLEJOHN. Mr. Speaker, if there be no others who desire to speak on the measure, I would ask for the previous

Mr. MADDOX. Just a word, Mr. Speaker, and then I am

Mr. MEIKLEJOHN. I yield to the gentleman.
Mr. MADDOX. This is a question which involves the constitutionality of the law which the gentleman proposes to pass. I am fully aware of the necessity of this legislation, and the wisdom of this legislation. It is only a question as to whether Congress has the right to pass this law on the subject. The gentleman from Arkansas [Mr. LITTLE] and myself are of the opinion that Congress has no authority to pass this law. We believe that when these Indians have their lands allotted to them and they become citizens of a State, the State only can legislate on this subject. Our friends take a different view from this. We want to put ourselves right upon the record. We have no objection to the legislation, except we believe it to be unconstitutional and will reto "."

Mr. MEIKLEJOHN. Mr. Speaker, I desire to say in reply to the gentleman from Texas, in relation to the act of 1887, known as the Dawes Act, that it is a contested question what qualifica-tions relating to citizenship that act carried with it. I ask for the previous question.

The previous question was ordered.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time. The question being taken on the passage, the Speaker declared that the noes seemed to have it.

Mr. MEIKLEJOHN. I ask for a division.

The house divided; and there were—ayes 82, noes 22.

So the bill was passed.

On motion of Mr. MEIKLEJOHN, a motion to reconsider the rote by which the bill was passed was laid on the table.

The title was amended as proposed by the committee.

KANSAS, OKLAHOMA CENTRAL AND SOUTHWESTERN RAILWAY COMPANY.

Mr. SHERMAN. Mr. Speaker, on behalf of the Committee on Indian Affairs I call up the bill (H. R. 9863) to extend and amend an act entitled "An act to grant the right of way to the Kansas, Oklahoma Central and Southwestern Railway Company through the Indian Territory and Oklahoma Territory, and for other purposes," approved December 21, 1893.

The bill was read, as follows:

poses," approved December 21, 1893.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the provisions of an act entitled "An act to grant the right of way to the Kansas. Oklahoma Central and Southwestern Railway Company through the Indian Territory and Oklahoma Territory, and for other purposes," approved December 21, 1898, be, and the same are hereby, extended for a period of two years from and after December 21, 1898, so that said Kansas, Oklahoma Central and Southwestern Railway Company shall have until December 21, 1898, to build the first 100 miles of its said railway line in said Territories, and two years thereafter to complete the same.

SEC. 2. That section I of said act approved December 21, 1898, be amended to read as follows: "That the Kansas, Oklahoma Central and Southwestern Railway Company, a corporation organized, created, and existing under and by virtue of the laws of the Territory of Oklahoma, and of the laws of the State of Kansas, be, and the same is hereby, invested and empowered with the right of locating, constructing, equipping, operating, using, and maintaining a railway, telegraph, and telephone line through the Indian Territory and Oklahoma Territory, including lands that have been allotted to Indians in severalty or reserved for Indian purposes, beginning at any point to be selected by said railway company on the south line of the State of Kansas, in the county of Montgomery, on the south line of the State of Kansas, in the county of Montgomery, on the south line of the State of Kansas, in the county of Montgomery, on the south line of the State of Kansas, in the county of Montgomery, on the south line of section No. 14, township No. 35, range No. 18 cast of the sixth principal meridian, or on the south line of section No. 13 or section No. 14, township No. 35, range No. 18 cast of the sixth principal meridian, or on the south line of section No. 18 or section No. 19, township No. 35, range No. 18 cast of the sixth principal meridian, or on the south line of section No. 18 o

Mr. SHERMAN. Mr. Speaker, the purpose of this bill is simply to extend for two years the time for the construction of this railroad; but, while extending the time, we insert certain limitations that are now put in all bills of this character, though they were not usually inserted in them at the time when the original bill was

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

On motion of Mr. SHERMAN, a motion to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed was laid on the table.

Mr. SHERMAN. The Committee on Indian Affairs have no further business at this time, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. DBAPER (when the Committee on Patents was called). Mr. Speaker, I am directed by the Committee on Patents to call up for consideration the bill (H. R. 3014) revising and amending the statutes relating to patents.

The bill was read, as follows:

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That section 4888 of the Revised Statutes be, and the same hereby is, amended by inserting on line 4, after the word "country," the words "before his invention or discovery thereof," and on line 5, after the word "thereof," the words "or more than two years prior to his application," so that the clause so amended will read as follows:

"SEC. 4886. Any person who has invented or discovered any new and useful art, machine, manufacture, or composition of matter, or any new and useful improvements thereof, not known or used by others in this country before his invention or discovery thereof, and not patented or described in any printed publication in this or any foreign country before his invention or discovery thereof, or more than two years prior to his application, and not in public use or on sale in this country for more than two years prior to his application, unless the same is proved to have been abandoned, may, upon payment of the fees required by law and other due proceeding had, obtain a patent therefor."

SEC. 2. That section 4220 of the Revised Statutes be, and the same hereby is, amended by adding to the third clause of said section after "thereof" and before "or" the following words: "or more than two years prior to his application for a patent therefor;" so that the section so amended will read as follows:

Sec. 2. That section 3930 of the Revised Statutes be, and the same hereby is, amended by adding to the third clause of said section after "thereof" and cation for a patent therefor," so that the section so amended will read as follows:

"Sec. 430. In any action for infringement the defendant may plead the general issue, and, having given notice in writing to the plaintiff or his attorage and the section of the plaintiff or his attorage and the section of the plaintiff or his attorage precial matters:

"First. That for the purpose of deceiving the public the description and specification filed by the patentse in the Patent Office was made to contain isses than the whole truth relative to his invention or discovery, or more than isses than the whole truth relative to his invention or discovery, or more than isses than the whole truth relative to his invention or discovery, or more than isses than the whole truth relative to his invention or discovery, or more than isses than the whole truth relative to his invention or discovery, or more than its properties of the patent for the which was in fact invented by another, who was using reasonable dill-gene in adapting and perfecting the same; or,

"Second. That he had surreptitiously or unjustly obtained the patent for that which was in fact invented by another, who was using reasonable dill-gene in adapting and perfecting the same; or,

"Fourth. That he was not the original and first inventor or discoverer of any material and substantial part of the thing patented; or any material and substantial part of the thing patented; or may material and substantial part of the thing patented; or may material and substantial part of the thing patented; or more of the public.

"The patents and when granted in vention, the publication for a patent herefor;" and includes the defendant, and the sames and residences of the public.

"The patents and when granted and the names and residences of the brains and proofs of the same may be given upon like notice in the advantage of the pat Statutes, the certificate of such acknowledgment, under the hand and official seal of such notary or other officer, shall be prima facie evidence of the execution of such assignment, grant, or conveyance;" so that the section so amended will read as follows:

"Sec. 4898. Every patent or any interest therein shall be assignable in law by an instrument in writing, and the patentee or his assigns or legal representatives may in like manner grant and conveyan exclusive right under his patent to the whole or any specified part of the United States. An assignment, grant, or conveyance shall be void as against any subsequent purchaser or mortgagee for a valuable consideration, without notice, unless it is recorded in the Patent Office within three months from the date thereof.

"If any such assignment, grant, or conveyance of any patent shall be acknowledged before any notary public of the several States or Territories or the District of Columbia, or any commissioner of the United States circuit court, or before any secretary of legation or consular officer authorized to administer oaths or perform notarial acts under section 1750 of the Revised Statutes, the certificate of such acknowledgment, under the hand and official seal of such notary or other officer, shall be prima facie evidence of the execution of such assignment, grant, or conveyance."

Sec. 6. That section 4221 of the Revised Statutes be, and the same hereby is, amended by adding thereto the following sentence:

"But in any suit or action brought for the infringement of any patent there shall be no recovery of profits or damages for any infringement committed more than six years before the filing of the bill of complaint or the issuing of the writ in such suit or action, and this provision shall apply to existing causes of action;" so that the section so amended will read as follows:

"Sec. 4921. The several courts vested with jurisdiction of cases arising under the patent laws shall have power to grant injunctions according to the course and principles o

Mr. DRAPER. Mr. Speaker, I ask for the reading of the report as a part of my remarks.

The report (by Mr. DRAPER) was read, as follows:

Mr. DRAPER. Mr. Speaker, I ask for the reading of the report as a part of my remarks.

The report (by Mr. DraPER) was read, as follows:

The committee on Patents, to whom was referred House bill 3014, have had the same under consideration and report as follows:

This is a bill prepared by a special committee of the American Bar Association on amendment of the patent law, whose report was accepted and indorsed by the entire association.

Coming before the committee and the House as the result of the study of the ablest lawyers of the country who have had to deal with all the questions under the patent law that come before the courts, your committee have felt that their recommendation was entitled to great weight, and have been naturally inclined to report the bill without amendment. They have, however, further sought the advice of the Commissioner of Patents and of some of the most eminent judges on the bench, who concur in the opinion that the changes proposed by the eminent gentlemen responsible for the bill. There is a strong feeling in the community that undue delays in the Patent Office, which have endeavored to make the amendment proposed by the bar association to meet this state of things even more stringent.

To this end they recommend an amendment to this bill, as follows: That section 4, line 5, on page 5, be amended by the insertion after the word "months" of the following:

To this end they recommend an amendment to this bill, as follows: That section 4, line 5, on page 5, be amended by the insertion after the word "months" of the following:

To this end they recommend an amendment to this bill, as follows: That section 4, line 5, on page 5, be amended by the insertion after the word "months" of the following:

To this end they recommend an amendment to this bill, as follows: That section 4, line 5, on page 5, be amended by the insertion after the word "months" of the of lowing:

To this end they recommend an amendment to this bill, as follows: That section 4, line 5, on page 5, be amended by the ins not affect the term of the United States patent unless the application for said foreign patent was filed more than seven months prior to the filing of the application in this country, in which case no patent shall be granted here. A similar provision exists in the laws or treaties of most European countries, and this provision, it is believed, will accomplish the object which the legislators had in view in framing the present law, and will obviate all of its present inconveniences. This section as amended will not apply to any patent in this country granted prior to the passage of this act, nor to any applications for a patent in this country then pending, or to any patent granted on such a pending application.

The amendment provided in section 4 to section 4894 is for the purpose of preventing delays in the Patent Office. The bill provides that the term of two years within which the applicant must complete and prepare for examination the filing of his application, and also the same term within which he must prosecute the same for action thereon, shall be reduced to six months. The committee believe that this shortening of time for delay is proper, and have gone further in the same direction in the amendment to the bill which they have recommended.

Section 5 of the bill is a matter of detail, and provides that a certificate of acknowledgment of assignment of patents before a proper officer shall be prima facie evidence of execution.

Section 6 provides a statute of limitation in patent cases. Under the decisions of the Supreme Court the State statutes of limitation apply to actions for infringement of patents broughtupon the law side of the court. It seems to your committee desirable that there should be a uniform statute of limitations, and they therefore adopt the recommendation of the committee of the bar association.

It is believed, as before stated, that these amendments will simplify and improve the patent law, and they are unanimous in recommending the passage of the bill, with the exception of the la

Mr. DRAPER. Mr. Speaker, this bill proposes half a dozen minor amendments to the patent law which have been recommended unanimously by the American Bar Association. A year ago or more a committee of that association was appointed to consider such amendments as might be found desirable in the patent law, and that committee, while unable to agree on matters which they considered of great moment, did agree to recommend the half dozen amendments which are embodied in this bill. I will not discuss the matter generally at length, but will take up these modifications one at a time and explain them to the House. I may say in the outset that the bill, in the reading, sounded somewhat forwidth because the output forwidth has a somewhat forwidth because the output forwidth and the sound of the sound what formidable, because the entire statutes that are proposed to be amended were read.

The first amendment is to section 4886. It provides that the patenting or publication of an invention in any foreign country more than two years prior to the application in this country shall be a bar to obtaining a patent. That is to say, if a patent is granted in a foreign country, then after two years from the grant of that patent the applicant can not obtain a patent in the United of that patent the applicant can not obtain a patent in the United States, as he now can. As the law now stands, a man may publish or patent an invention in a foreign country and years afterwards it may be patented in this country. In the United States if an inventor has his invention in public use more than two years before he applies for a patent he can not obtain a patent upon it. It seems to me, and it seems to your committee, that this amendment would be a very proper addition to the law, and an addition in the interest of the public.

Section 5 of the bill is a matter of detail. It provides that a certificate of acknowledgment of assignment of a patent, before

Section 5 of the bill is a matter of detail. It provides that a certificate of acknowledgment of assignment of a patent, before a proper officer, shall be prima facie evidence of execution.

Section 6 provides a statute of limitation in patent causes. This is the only section upon which there was any difference of opinion in your committee. Some members of the committee thought that the statutes of limitation of the several States should control, whereas this bill proposes to make a universal statute of six years, covering the entire country. No minority report, however, has been filed, so that the bill stands as the recommendation of the committee.

It is also sought in the bill to remedy an evil which some have considered almost an abuse in the Patent Office, namely, that an applicant for a patent can make his application, receive a rejecapplicant for a patent can make his application, receive a rejection, wait two years before making an answer to the rejection, and continue in that way, so that the application may remain in the Patent Office a long time, a term of five or ten or possibly fifteen years, and then may come out of the office and cover the invention for seventeen years from the date of issue. This bill proposes an amendment to that part of the law by substituting the words "six months" for the words "two years," so that after receiving a reply from the office to his application the applicant shall be required to make his answer within six months, thus reducing the length of time that an application can remain in the office. This, however, did not seem a sufficient limitation to your committee, and the amendments which they have proposed go committee, and the amendments which they have proposed go still further in the direction of limiting not only the time that the applicant can delay answering the reply of the Patent Office to his application, but also limiting the time that his application can remain without final action in the office, except in cases of interference.

The amendments which are proposed by the committee apply to different sections of the bill, but mean exactly the same thing. The amendment to section 4 proposes to insert the following:

And upon failure to complete the case for final action within eighteen months after the filing of the application the Commissioner of Patents may require the applicant to show cause why final action should not be taken thereon; and if upon such hearing the Commissioner determines that the application has not been prosecuted with reasonable diligence, he shall make an order requiring the applicant to complete his case for final action within six months thereafter, and upon the expiration of said six months final action shall be taken thereon. In cases where interference has been declared, three years' additional time may be allowed for the prosecution of the interference, which time may be extended by the Commissioner of Patents upon its being shown to his satisfaction that due diligence has been shown in prosecution of such action.

Another amendment of the committee proposes a change in the provision of section 4887 of the Revised Statutes. This amendment is made desirable by a recent decision of the Supreme Court, to the effect that under the present law, properly interpreted, the term of a United States patent is to be limited by that of a foreign patent if the foreign patent was for the same invention and was issued before the patent granted by the United States. The fact is, that when this bill was prepared it was intended to cover cases of foreigners taking patents in the United States. But there have arisen cases in which Americans, having made inventions, have applied simultaneously for an American patent and a foreign patent; and in such cases, owing to the fact that in most foreign countries there is no system of examination, while in our country there is such a system, which delays the issue of the patent for there is such a system, which delays the issue of the patent for months, at least, and possibly for years, the foreign patent has frequently come out first. In such cases, according to the decision to which I refer, the American patent expires at the date of the expiration of the foreign patent. The amendment to section 4887 was intended to cover these cases. It is proposed as an amendment to the existing law that the granting of a foreign patent to the same inventor or his assigns shall not affect the term of the United States patent upless the application for said foreign patent. United States patent unless the application for said foreign patent was filed more than seven months prior to the filing of the application in this country, in which case no patent shall be granted here. A similar provision exists in the laws or treaties of most European countries, and this provision, it is believed, will accomplish the object which the legislators had in view in framing the plish the object which the legislators had in view in framing the present law, and will obviate all of its present inconveniences.

This section as amended would not apply to any American patent that has been granted prior to the passage of this act or to any applications now pending in this country for a patent, or to any patent granted on any pending applications. It will apply only to applications which may be made after the passage of this bill.

Now, Mr. Speaker, I believe I have explained the cases that this bill is intended to cover. It embraces, as will be seen, merely minor modifications of the patent laws. Its passage is recommended by the bar association, whose committee bestowed a great deal of time in the investigation of the subject. It is recommended by the Commissioner of Patents, and recommended also by your Committee on Patents. Committee on Patents.

Reserving the balance of my time, I shall be glad to answer any questions in regard to the bill that any gentleman may desire to ask. If no one desires to make any inquiry, I will ask for a vote.

Mr. HULICK. I wish to ask the gentleman, in the first place, whether there are any copies of this bill which can be had? I have been trying to secure a copy of the bill and report, but have thus far failed to do so.

Mr. DRAPER. Copies of the bill and report are, so far as I know, in the document room; but I shall be very glad to furnish to the gentleman my copies.

Mr. HULICK. There is one further question I should like to I wish to know whether these amendments have reference to cases where patents have expired and where parties have desired to obtain renewals. There are cases where, upon the expiration of a patent, parties may desire, by reason of the death of the inventor, or for some other good reason which might be satisfactory to the Department, to obtain a renewal. Has the committee in any of these amendments provided any means outside of the existing laws by which patents may be renewed; and if so, for what length of time?
Mr. DRAPER.

One of the amendments provides that the Commissioner of Patents may require the applicant to show cause why final action should not be taken, and if he shows reasonable cause, of the amendments of the committee, I presume.

Mr. HULICK. Yes, sir; and with reference to the particular matter I have just indicated.

Mr. DRAPER. If the gentleman desires, I will read the amendments.

ments again. Mr. HULICK. I think the gentleman did not comprehend the

Mr. HULICK. I think the gentleman did not comprehend the scope of my question.

Mr. DRAPER. I desire to do so.

Mr. HULICK. So I understand. Now, I wish to know whether the existing laws or the regulations of the Department in reference to the renewal of a patent which has expired by limitation of time are affected by any of these amendments submitted by the committee? There are, of course, cases where it may be desired for some good reason that an extension of the patent be granted. for some good reason that an extension of the patent be granted, in order that the patentee or his representatives may realize something from the invention.

Mr. DRAPER. There is nothing in the bill which affects that question one way or the other.

question one way or the other.

Mr. HULICK. Well, I have not had time or opportunity to examine the bill; hence I asked the question.

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. Speaker, this bill (H. R. 3014) has been so carefully considered by the committee and so ably presented and explained by the chairman of the committee [Mr. Draper], both in his report and in his remarks, that those who have read the one and heard the other will be convinced of the importance. the one and heard the other will be convinced of the importance of passing this bill.

The great ingenuity of the American people, their fertility of ideas, and their untiring energy in carrying them out have been among the great causes of development in this country and the reasons for its great advancement in industry and wealth. The protection of the inventions of our people by granting them the right (by patent) to sue others using their improvements without permission from the inventor has given the inventor the opportunity of getting the necessary assistance to perfect and fully develop his ideas and put their resultant on the market.

The effect has been that our machinery and mechanical devices have so cheapened in many matters the cost of production that we find our goods selling cheaper in foreign markets than they can be made for there, and yet the American laborer is paid in the manufacture of these articles double and treble the amount paid manufacture of these articles double and treble the amount paid for similar labor in foreign countries.

Our statutes affecting patent rights have long needed the amend-ments made by this bill in order, among other things, to expedite the granting of patents and to give our patentees relief from the effect now given to foreign patents, and their lapsing affecting our patents under certain conditions. This bill properly regulates these matters and gives only such rights as should have been pro-vided for long ago. In this respect it relieves patentees and those who are assisting them from a cumbersome system, which worked who are assisting them from a cumbersome system, which worked no good to any one and great harm to the American inventor in

The universal statute of limitation provided for by this bill will also meet, I am satisfied, with general approval by the courts, for it again simplifies the issues and gives six years—an abundant time to the industrious prosecutor of his rights—to push his claims, and prevents an inventor sleeping on his rights too long and allowing others to develop his invention, and when they have amassed a profit by their industry, to compel them to pay triple damages after a long lapse of years. The statutes giving patent rights being national, the limitation of recovery should also be limited by national laws and be uniform throughout the country.

Mr. DRAPER. I ask for a vote on the amendments of the committee.

The question being taken, the amendments were agreed to. The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

On motion of Mr. DRAPER, a motion to reconsider the last vote was laid on the table.

PATENTS GRANTED TO NAVAL OFFICERS.

Mr. FAIRCHILD. Mr. Speaker, I desire to call up another bill from the Committee on Patents, the bill (H. R. 4178) providing for the use by the United States of devices covered by letters patent. The bill was read, as follows:

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That whenever, in the judgment of the Secretary of the Navy, the public interests will be promoted by the use in the naval service of devices covered by letters patent issued to any officer of the Navy, whether retained in his ownership or assigned to others, the United States may acquire the right to use said device upon such terms or at such rate of compensation as may to the Secretary of the Navy seem just and equitable, and in determining the compensation to be paid by the United States for the assignment or for the use of such devices regard will be had by the Secretary of the Navy to any facilities in originating the work or perfecting the invention which the inventor may have enjoyed by reason of his connection with the public service.

Mr. FAIRCHILD. I ask for the reading of the report in my time. The report (by Mr. FAIRCHILD) was read, as follows:

The report (by Mr. FAIRCHILD) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Patents, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 4178) providing for the use by the United States of devices covered by letters patent which may be hereafter issued to any officer of the Navy, have examined the same, and report as follows:

The evils sought to be remedied by this bill, and the arguments in support thereof, are referred to by the Secretary of the Navy in his annual report to Congress as follows:

"Inventions useful to the naval service are frequently patented by officers of the Navy. Officers have peculiar opportunities in the line of their duty for discovering the defects of naval appliances and devising remedies for the same. When they have been especially assigned to the duty of making experiments for the purpose of suggesting improvements in some particular direction, if the facilities for conducting the experiments have been furnished by the Department, and the expenses, including the procuring of patents, have been borne by the Department, the improvements or devices are the property of the United States.

"When, however, an officer is not acting under authority of the Department, and the invention does not concern a matter the officer was especially assigned the duty of investigating, and when the expenses of making experiments and procuring the letters patent are borne by the officer, it has been held that the patent is the property of the officer, and is valid as against the Government itself. In order to use these devices the United States must obtain the consent of the patentee and pay him such price for the use of the same as he may demand, and it has frequently been found difficult to adjust the rights of officers as against the Government in these cases.

"The inventive genius of officers should not be suppressed, nor should they be unjustly deprived of the fruits of their labor, but, on the other hand, there ought to be no extraordinary pecuniary stimulus to turn to their own advantage knowledge acquired at the expense of the Government and tending to promote the interests of the service in which they are employed. Such a stimulus exists where the Government must do without improvements essential to its naval power or pay to persons whom it has educated and furnished the opportunities for developing such improvements such prices as they may insist upon for the same.

"The British Government has recently found it expedient to prescribe the terms under which its navy shall acquire the use of inventions patented by persons in its naval service, and the following provisions appear to me to be particularly equitable and just: "The invention may be used by or for Her Majesty's service, and that the terms of payment, if any, shall be decided by the admiralty,' and 'in settling terms, either for assignment or use, regard will be had by the admiralty to any facilities in originating, working out, and perfecting the invention which the inventor may have enjoyed by reason of his official position."

"As naval officers receive their education at the expense of the Government, and their opportunities to make improvements in naval appliances result largely from such education and the facilities afforded them by the duties they perform under the Government, I have the honor to recommend that Congress be asked to enact legislation providing that the United States may at any time acquire the right to use devices covered by letters patent issued to officers of the Navy, whether retained in their ownership or assigned to others, upon such terms and at such rate of compensation as may, by the Secretary of the Navy, whether retained in their ownership or assigned to the Secretary of the Navy, 1895, pages 48 and 49.)

Similar references were made in the report of the Judge-Advocate-

The amendments were agreed to. The question recurred on the engrossment and third reading of the bill.

Mr. BLUE. Mr. Speaker, I would like some explanation other than the report gives about this bill. Is it the purpose of its enactment to give to an officer in the employ of the Government the benefit of a patent gained while in the discharge of his duty, while in the pay of the Government, and when his services and time belonged to the Government? Does it give him an opportunity to receive the full benefit of a patent which he may acquire under such circumstances?

Mr. FAIRCHILD. I will answer the gentleman by stating that a naval officer now in the employ of the Government has the privilege to which he refers, and he has it to an extent that he can deprive the Government even of the right to use the patent in any way whatever except upon his own terms. It is to correct that very evil that the bill is drafted, in accordance with the recommendation of the Secretary of the Navy, who has had experience resulting from the present situation; and the bill is designed, while not taking away from the officer the privilege of receiving proper compensation for any invention that he may make, to provide a means of determining what that proper compensation shall be when the patent is used by the United States Government.

Mr. BLUE. Then the bill seems to be in the direction of correcting the evil I thought it was attempting to establish. I have no further questions to ask.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. Speaker, this bill (H. R. 4178) is also of great importance and should be passed. There is not a company engaged in manufacture in the United States and properly managed which does not seek to protect its interests by securing itself in the right to the exclusive use of the inventions of its employees in the line of the business which they are carrying on; and it is customary for companies developing new ideas to have an agreement with every employee providing for the purchase by the employer of the inventions of the employee on some fair basis.

The rights secured by patent emanate entirely from the Government, and it is a special privilege granted by statute to inventors, and from which the inventor derives exclusive advantages.

As the average business corporation, as I have before said, protects itself even from an employee who may be only a short time in its employ, certainly the Government should be placed in as good a position as the average company, and should not be excluded from using, under some fair arrangement, the inventions of men from using, under some fair arrangement, the inventions of men who are not only in the employ of the Government but whom the Government has specially educated for many years, at its own expense, in the line in which the inventions are made. It would seem that no argument would be necessary to convince even the naval inventor who would be affected by this particular bill that it was most eminently fitting for him to give to the Government, for a fair return, the exclusive right to the use of any improvements born of his inventive genius. Were the Government deprived of this right it might prove disastrons to the country. prived of this right it might prove disastrous to the country.

Those inventions might be the very ones which would be required to perfect some mechanical device which would place the Government in a much safer position than it otherwise would be in. It would, therefore, be a mistake to put any curb on the inventive genius of the naval inventor. This bill does not put a curb upon it, but gives the Government the opportunity of acquiring the inventions on paying the employee of the Government such compensation as his inventive genius may be entitled to, and thus obtaining the exclusive right to the use of his inventions.

CONSIDERATION OF PRIVATE PENSION BILLS.

Mr. HENDERSON. Mr. Speaker, I desire to submit a privileged report from the Committee on Rules, and ask its present consideration.

I am directed by the committee, to whom was referred House resolution No. 482, to report back the same and recommend its passage.

The SPEAKER. The resolution will be read.

The resolution was read, as follows:

The resolution was read, as follows:

Resolved, That on Tuesday, the 19th day of January, immediately after the reading of the Journal, the House shall resolve itself into Committee of the Whole House for the consideration of such bills as are in order on the sessions of Friday evenings, and that in the consideration of such bills under this resolution ten minutes' debate shall be allowed on each bill, with the amendments thereto, such time to be divided equally between those favoring and those opposing the bill: Provided, however, That nothing in this resolution shall be construed as interfering with conference reports on general appropriation bills.

Mr. HENDERGON.

Mr. HENDERSON. I ask the previous question. Mr. GROSVENOR. Mr. Speaker—

Mr. GROSVENOR. Mr. Speaker—
The previous question was ordered.
Mr. GROSVENOR. Mr. Speaker, I was trying to get the attention of the Chair for the purpose of stating that as I understand it an assignment of an election case was made for to-morrow.
Mr. HENDERSON. That goes over by consent, or request of the Elections Committee, until Wednesday. Judge McCall desires me to state to the House in this connection that the Virginia contested-election case of Yost vs. Tucker will come up on Wednesday next.

The resolution reported from the Committee on Rules was

The resolution reported from the Committee on Rules was agreed to.

The Clerk proceeded with the call of committees.

CHARGES OF DESERTION IN CERTAIN CASES.

Mr. CUMMINGS. Mr. Speaker, on behalf of the Committee on Naval Affairs, I present the bill which I send to the Clerk's

The Clerk read the title of the bill, as follows:

A bill (H. R. 9102) to amend section 5 of an act to relieve certain appointed or enlisted men of the Navy and Marine Corps from the charge of desertion, approved August 14, 1888.

The SPEAKER. This call is for bills upon the House Calendar. Mr. CUMMINGS. This bill does not come up under the rules now?

The SPEAKER. It would not be in order now.

LEASE OF CERTAIN ISLANDS IN ALASKA.

Mr. SCRANTON. Mr. Speaker, on behalf of the Committee on Territories, I present the bill (S. 2555) to authorize the Secretary of the Treasury to issue leases of certain islands in Alaska for the breeding of foxes.

The bill was read.

Mr. DOCKERY. I hope we may have the report read, Mr. Speaker, so as to understand the bill.

The SPEAKER. This bill is not on the House Calendar. 1t has never been reported.

Mr. SCRANTON. The committee has authorized a favorable

report.

The SPEAKER. It is not on the Calendar. It must be on the Calendar to be in order under this call.

Mr. SCRANTON. A Senate bill?

The SPEAKER. A Senate bill. The idea of this committee hour, so called, is to bring up bills which are on the Calendar of the House and which do not involve an appropriation. required to be on the Calendar, so that the House may have some notice of its existence as a bill.

Mr. SCRANTON. Then I will ask to withdraw the bill.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. BARTHOLDT. Mr. Speaker-

Mr. BARTHOLDT. Shr. Speaker
The SPEAKER. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?
Mr. BARTHOLDT. I ask unanimous consent to have the Committee on Immigration called again. I have a resolution from that

The SPEAKER. Is the resolution on the House Calendar?
Mr. BARTHOLDT. No, sir.
The SPEAKER. It is of no use to call the committee then.
Mr. BARTHOLDT. It is merely a formal matter.
The SPEAKER. This would not be the proper time.
The Clerk resumed and completed the call of committees.

Mr. BAILEY. Mr. Speaker, I desire to make a parliamentary inquiry.
The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. BAILEY. I desire to know if to-day was designated as District of Columbia day?

The SPEAKER. It was; but the chairman of the Committee on the District of Columbia thought he would not call up matters from that committee until later. Mr. BAILEY. Then I desire to know if, under that regular order, he has the right to desist so long as he pleases, and then take advantage of the order at any time he pleases. It seems to me, if this day has been set apart for that purpose, he owes it to the House to enter upon the business of that committee.

Mr. DOCKERY. He should either claim the day or disavow his intention to do so.

The SPEAKER. If anybody is to blame for that, the Chair thinks he is. The Chair thought that, as he was informed that the business of the District of Columbia would take but about two hours, perhaps we could finish up some business on the House Calendar in a more expeditious way in the early part of the day, rather than in the later part.

Mr. BAILEY. I frankly say to the Chair that I have been induced to make the inquiry by reason of the fact that a number of gentlemen have inquired of me what the District Committee intended to call up, and I was unable to answer.

The SPEAKER. Well, the Chair is unable to answer that. He was not aware of any special matter that was to be brought up, but understood that there were some matters that would be likely to take an hour and a half or two hours, and in endeavoring to dispose of the business of the House it seemed that this would perhaps be the better way to do it.

Mr. BAILEY. I should not have interrupted the call except for the fact that there seems to be no further committee business.

Mr. TERRY. Mr. Speaker, there seems to be a sort of inter-lude here, and I should like unanimous consent to get a bill in. [Laughter.

Mr. SHERMAN. I ask unanimous consent that we return to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from New York [Mr. Sherman] asks unanimous consent to return to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce, for the consideration of a bill that will be appropriate under this call. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

A message from the Senate, by Mr. Platt, one of its clerks, announced that the Senate had passed the following resolution; in which the concurrence of the House was requested:

Resolved by the Senate (the House of Representatives concurring), That the building providing additional accommodations for the Library of Congress shall not be used or occupied, nor any part thereof, for any purpose other than that legitimately connected with the aforesaid Library of Congress as authorized by law.

The message also announced that the Senate had passed without amendment the bill (H. R. 9733) to authorize the Union Railroad Company to construct and maintain a bridge across the Monongahela River.

SENATE RESOLUTION REFERRED.

Under clause 2 of Rule XXIV, the following resolution was taken from the Speaker's table and referred to the Committee on the Library:

Resolved by the Senate (the House of Representatives concurring), That the building providing additional accommodations for the Library of Congress shall not be used or occupied, nor any part thereof, for any purpose other than that legitimately connected with the aforesaid Library of Congress as authorized by law.

MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT.

A message in writing from the President of the United States was communicated to the House by Mr. PRUDEN, one of his secretaries, who also announced that the President had approved and signed bills and joint resolutions of the following titles: On January 14, 1897: An act (H. R. 4604) granting a pension to Jane Fisher.

On January 15, 1897: An act (H. R. 878) to reduce the cases in which the penalty of death may be inflicted.

On January 16, 1897:
An act (H. R. 5407) to remove the charge of desertion now standing against Oscar A. Bulette, known in his military title as standing against Oscar A. Bulette, known in his military title as Austin Bulette, late private in Company E, Fifty-second Illinois Infantry Volunteers, during late war;
An act (H. R. 2358) for the relief of Arminda White, widow of Israel White;
An act (H. R. 5393) for the relief of Lucinda Rickards, widow, and the minor children of John D. Rickards, deceased;
An act (H. R. 979) granting a pension to Frances E. Helfenstein:

An act (H. R. 2405) granting a pension to Maria Gibbons; An act (H. R. 4405) granting a pension to Augustus G. Cary; An act (H. R. 5050) granting a pension to Ransom C. Hazelip; An act (H. R. 5311) granting a pension to Sarah Ann Wible;

An act (H. R. 9139) granting a pension to Margaret J. Young.

On January 16, 1897:
Joint resolution (H. Res. 213) to permit railroads in the District to occupy additional parts of the streets to accommodate the traveling public attending the inaugural ceremonies.

The following bills were presented to the President on the 5th instant, and not having been returned by him to the House of Congress in which they originated within the time prescribed by the Constitution of the United States, have become laws without his approval:

An act (H. R. 2969) to grant a pension to Mrs. Lucy A. Allen; An act (H. R. 4361) to pension William H. Nesbitt; An act (H. R. 986) for the relief of Hiram P. Pauley; An act (H. R. 5787) for the relief of Henry A. F. Worth; An act (H. R. 1022) to increase the pension of Bryan Cotton; An act (H. R. 6468) to increase the pension of Andrew R. Ladd; An act (H. R. 6466) to increase the pension of George V. Barnard:

An act (H. R. 5400) to increase the pension of Mary L. Bacon, widow of the late George B. Bacon, late lieutenant-commander of the United States Navy;

An act (H. R. 1178) granting a pension to Sarah Weedon Jones; An act (H. R. 1825) granting a pension to Mary Prince, widow of Ellis Prince:

An act (H. R. 1827) granting a pension to Nancy B. Prince, widow of Elbert Prince;

An act (H. R. 1892) granting a pension to Catharine Darragh; An act (H. R. 2859) granting a pension to Katherine Zeigenheim, of Louisville, Ky.;

An act (H. R. 3152) granting a pension to Charlotte A. Welton;
An act (H. R. 4720) granting an increase of pension to Isaac H.
Whetsel, of Louisville, Ky.;
An act (H. R. 4052) approving certain acts of the legislative assembly of the Territory of New Mexico, authorizing the issue of certain bonds of said Territory, and for other purposes;
An act (H. R. 3139) for the relief of M. R. William Grebe; and An act (H. R. 3771) for the relief of Stratton H. Benscoter.

BRIDGE ACROSS THE RIO GRANDE AT EL PASO, TEX.

Mr. SHERMAN. Mr. Speaker, on behalf of the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce, I call up the bill (H. R. 9935) to authorize the construction or acquisition of a bridge across the Rio Grande River at El Paso, in the State of Texas.

The bill was read.

Mr. SHERMAN. Mr. Speaker, this is a bill containing the usual limitations, qualifications, and restrictions, and it differs from ordinary bills of this kind only in that it gives the company a right to acquire the title to any bridge that now exists at El Paso, and to enlarge and strengthen it for the use of the company, provided that can be done. The War Department reports that it will not observed negration, and approves of the measure. will not obstruct navigation, and approves of the measure.

The amendments recommended by the committee were agreed to The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed. On motion of Mr. SHERMAN, a motion to reconsider the last vote was laid on the table.

BRIDGE ACROSS MONONGAHELA RIVER IN ALLEGHENY COUNTY, PA.

Mr. SHERMAN. Mr. Speaker, I also call up for consideration the bill (S. 3071) to authorize the construction of a bridge over the Monongahela River from the borough of Braddock to the township of Mifflin, Pa.

The bill was read at length.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

On motion of Mr. SHERMAN, a motion to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed was laid on the table.

WEST BRADDOCK BRIDGE COMPANY.

Mr. SHERMAN. Mr. Speaker, I also call up for consideration the bill (H. R. 9841) to amend an act authorizing the West Bradthe bill (H. R. 9841) to amend an act authorizing the West Braddock Bridge Company to construct a bridge over the Monongahela River from the borough of Rankin to Mifflin Township.

The bill was read at length.

Mr. SHERMAN. Mr. Speaker, this is simply an extension of the time for the construction of this bridge, which is now under way, for three months, or until the middle of July next.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

DISTRICT BUSINESS.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Wisconsin, chairman of the Committee on the District of Columbia, calls up the business of that committee.

Mr. BABCOCK. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House resolve itself into Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the consideration of bills on the Calendar reported from the Committee on the District of Columbia. The motion was agreed to.

The House accordingly resolved itself into Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, Mr. DALZELL in the chair.

The CHAIRMAN. The House is in Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the purpose of considering bills reported by the Committee on the District of Columbia. The Clerk will report the first bill.

BRIDGE ACROSS EASTERN BRANCH OF POTOMAC RIVER.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (H. R. 8010) to authorize a survey for construction of a bridge across the Eastern Branch of the Potomac River in line with Massachusetts avenue extended eastward.

extended eastward.

Be it enacted, etc. That the Secretary of War be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to cause to be made, as soon as practicable, a survey, plan, and estimate of the cost of constructing a substantial wooden, iron, steel, or masonry bridge across the Eastern Branch of the Potomac River, in the District of Columbia, and the necessary approaches thereto, such bridge to begin for its westward end at a suitable point on the Government reservation in line with Massachusetts avenue extended eastward, and extending thence across the said river to a suitable point in the line of Massachusetts avenue extended, for its eastern end, such bridge when constructed to be maintained as a free bridge for travel, and to be of such strength and dimensions as to accommodate the ordinary traffic which passes over an ordinary highway, and also the tracks and traffic of any street railway or railways employing horses or electric or mechanical motors (not steam-operated motors) for the propulsion of its cars which may hereafter be granted the right to cross such bridge by the authorities vested with such power, and to report thereon to the Congress of the United States on the first Monday of December, 1896; and that the sum of $3.000 be, and the same is hereby, appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, for such survey, plan, and estimate, and such contingencies as are necessarily incident thereto, such sum of money to be immediately available upon the passage of this act.

Mr. BABCOCK. Mr. Chairman, this bill is formulated and this act.

Mr. BABCOCK. Mr. Chairman, this bill is formulated upon a report made by the Secretary of War, and is a substitute for the bill offered before the committee for the purpose of constructing a bridge across the Eastern Branch at the end of Massachusetts avenue extended. The Secretary of War made this report—that it would be desirable first to make an appropriation for a survey, after which the bill can be properly considered and brought before this House. This matter has been on the Calendar for some time, and it would seem to me that the bridge would be a public necessity in the near future. I move, Mr. Chairman, that the bill be laid aside with a favorable recommendation. sity in the near future. I move, Mr. Chairn laid aside with a favorable recommendation.

Mr. DOCKERY. Mr. Chairman, I suggest that the gentleman should amend the bill. Here is a report provided for, to be made on the first Monday of December, 1896. That time has already passed. I suppose the gentleman would desire to have it amended for the report to be made on the first Monday of December, 1897.

Mr. BABCOCK. I move that amendment, Mr. Chairman—that in line 23 it be changed to the first Monday of December, 1897.
The CHAIRMAN. Without objection, the amendment will be considered as agreed to. [After a pause.] The Chair hears no objection.

The bill as amended was ordered to be laid aside with a favorable recommendation.

TAXES AND TAX SALES IN THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

Mr. BABCOCK. Mr. Chairman, I call up for present consideration the bill H. R. 4149, which is on the Calendar. A substitute has been offered by the committee, but for some reason it is not on the Calendar. It is the bill H. R. 8499.

The title of the bill H. R. 4149 was read.

Mr. BABCOCK. I ask that the reading of the bill H. R. 4149 be dispensed with, and that the bill H. R. 8499 be substituted in

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Wisconsin asks unanimous consent to dispense with the reading of the bill H. R. 4149 and that House bill 8499 be substituted in its place. Without objection, it will be so ordered. [After a pause.] The Chair hears no objection.

The bill was read, as follows:

The bill (H. R. 8499) in relation to taxes and tax sales in the District of Columbia. Be it enacted, etc., That the assessor of the District of Columbia shall prepare a list of all taxes on real property in said District subject to taxation on which said taxes are levied and in arrears on the 1st day of July of each year hereafter; and the Commissioners of said District are hereby authorized and directed to appoint two clerks, at an annual salary of $1,200 each per annum, to prepare said list and perform such other duties as may be assigned to them by the assessor. And the Commissioners of said District shall publish the said list, with notice of sale, in a pamphlet, of which not less than 2,000 copies shall be printed for distribution to taxpayers applying therefor. Said Commissioners shall, on the third Tuesday in March of each year hereafter, give notice, which shall contain the name of each and every person in which each piece of property is assessed, together with the amount of tax against each, by advertising twice a week for three successive weeks in the regular issue of two or more daily newspapers published in said District that said pamphlet has been printed, and that a copy thereof will be delivered to any taxpayer applying therefor at the office of the collector of taxes of said District; and if the taxes due, together with the penalties and costs that may have accrued thereon, shall not be paid prior to the day fixed for sale, the property will be sold under the direction of the Commissioners of the District of Columbia at public auction at the office of the said collector of the District of Columbia at public auction at the office of the said collector of the District of Columbia at public auction at the office of the said collector of the District of Columbia at public auction at the office of the said collector of the District of Columbia at public auction at the office of the said collector of the District of Columbia at public auction at the office of the said collector of the property shall b A bill (H. R. 8499) in relation to taxes and tax sales in the District of Columbia.

case no other person bids the amount due on any lot, the said collector of taxes shall bid the amount due on the same, and purchase it for the District. Sec. 3. That every purchaser other than the District, and yeals of taxes within five days after the last day of sale. If any such purchaser shall not have paid his bid, or the same shall not have been collected from him within the time above mentioned, the Commissioners may set aside the sale within five days after the last day of sale. If any such purchaser shall not have paid his bid, or the same shall not have been collected from him within the time above mentioned, the Commissioners may set aside the sale, upon payment of the purchases money, the said collector of taxes shall issue to the purchaser accretionate of sale, and if the property shall not be redeemed by payment of the purchase are certificate of sale, and if the property shall not be redeemed by payment to the collector of taxes of said District, for the use of the legal holder of the certificate, the amount for which it was sold at such sale and 15 per cent per anum thereon, a deed shall be given by the Commissioners with heirs or devisees, or to the assignee of such certificates, which deed shall be admitted and held to be prima facie evidence of a good and perfect title, in fee simple, to any property bought at said sale herain authorized; and all the contrary is proved. Provided, That no deed shall be issued until all taxes and assessment appearing upon the tax books against the property are paid, with possible, the property are paid, with possible provided, the possible property is not redeemed by the owner of said property shall thereupon be bid off by the said collector of taxe, in the match of the possible property is not redeemed by the owner of surfficient to meet the amount of tax, penalty, and costs; but in case the highest bid upon any property; and if within two

Mr. HULICK. Mr. Chairman, the bill that is to be considered at this time by the committee is a substitute for the bill H. R. 4149, which has been placed upon the Calendar and a favorable report has been filed thereon; but it was, upon further considera-tion, thought, in view of the amendments that were suggested by the committee to the original bill, that it would be better to be substituted by another bill, which is the one now under consid-

The report was made upon the original bill, with some amendments suggested. I ask that that report, which applies to the principle of this bill, be now read, with the exception of the amendments suggested. The amendments suggested are incorporated in the substitute.

Mr. COX. Before that report is read, I would be glad to hear a statement concerning this bill. It is a long bill, and I could not distinctly hear all the clauses read. Will some member of the distinctly hear all the clauses read. Will some member of the committee give us an explanation of it?

Mr. HULICK. I think if the gentleman will have the report read it will give him an idea. It is not very long.

Mr. COX. All right. I do not know what I am voting on. The report (by Mr. HULICK) was read, as follows:

The Committee on the District of Columbia, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 4149) in relation to taxes and tax sales in the District of Columbia, have carefully considered the same, and, with certain amendments herein suggested, recommend the passage of the bill.

The laws in the District of Columbia relating to the listing of property and the assessment and collection of taxes are very unsatisfactory; in many instances great injustice is done to the taxpayer, and in other cases the District falls to collect the taxes. Millions of property in the District now escapes taxation that should be placed upon the tax duplicate. After assessments have been made upon real estate and the owners fall to pay the taxes, it is difficult for the District to collect the delinquent taxes.

One essential fault is the peremptory requirement that at the expiration of two years from the date of the sale of a piece of real estate for overdue taxes the Commissioners must, on demand of the owners of the tax-sale certificate, issue a deed for the property, without providing as a condition precedent to such deed that all overdue taxes and assessments other than those involved in such tax-sale certificate shall also have been paid.

Under a decision of the supreme court of the District of Columbia at al, equity, No. 9513, decided November 1, 1896 (5 Mackey's Reports, page 274, et seq.), a deed of property made in pursuance of a sale for arrears of taxes for any certain year passes the property involved to the purchaser at such sale, discharged of the liens of all taxes and assessments remaining due and unpaid at the time of the sale, so far as the District is concerned. As a tax deed thus carries with it a clear title ag now levied by the existing statute.

Mr. HULICK. This amount was thought proper by the committee, but if there is any reason why it should be increased, that can be done.

Mr. DOCKERY. It was placed at $1.20 on the testimony of the Commissioners of the District of Columbia, and has been carried at that sum for a number of years.

t that sum for a number of years.

Mr. HULICK. Mr. Chairman, if there are no other questions, will make a brief statement of the provisions of this bill.

Mr. DOCKERY. Very well.

Mr. HULICK (continuing). And would be very glad to answer

Mr. HULICK (continuing). And would be very glad to answer any questions relative thereto.

Mr. Chairman, this bill is one of very great importance to the taxpayers of this District, and evidently of considerable importance to the taxpayers of the whole country. There is perhaps more dissatisfaction aroused and more injustice done by the assessment of personal and real property in the District of Columbia than in any other community in the United States. It is a fact, the committee have learned from coming in as the members of the committee have learned from coming in contact with the people of this city, that the chattel property of the District is not taxed, and that the real estate that is charged with taxation has been subject to the claims of parties who have neglected to pay their taxes, who have let their real estate become delinquent, and in that way have failed to bear their share of the public burdens. The law as it stands, as it was interpreted by a decision of the Supreme Court in the case of Brewer vs. The Distinct of the Supreme Court in the case of Brewer vs. decision of the Supreme Court in the case of Brewer vs. The District of Columbia, decided in 1863, is to the effect that where property has been sold for taxes the deed to the purchaser gives him a title exempt from any other taxes for which the property was not sold. That is, if taxes had been delinquent for two or three or four years (which has been the fact in many cases), the purchaser of the property at a tax sale took it free from all those previous taxes, or liens for taxes, or assessments. The law as interpreted by the Supreme Court held that a deed made in pursuance of a sale for arrears of taxes passed the property involved to the purchaser discharged from all liens for taxes and assessments remaining due and unpaid at the time of the sale. and unpaid at the time of the sale.

Now, the amendment that is provided in this bill will be found on page 5, as follows:

And that before the deed is issued, as hereinbefore mentioned, notice shall be published three times in two daily newspapers published in the District that a deed has been applied for, and that unless the owner comes forward within thirty days from date of said notice and pays all arrears of taxes, general and special, then due, the deed will be issued in accordance with the provisions of this act.

Mr. COX. Mr. Chairman, I think I catch the idea clearly. I understand the gentleman to say that under the existing law, as construed by the Supreme Court, the deed issued to the purchaser at a tax sale was held to give a good title as against all preexisting taxes, and this amendment provides that when the owner comes to redeem (as we would call it in Tennessee) he shall be required

Mr. ON Leather words when the correct?

Mr. HULICK. Yes, sir. We propose to amend the law by providing that no tax deed shall be issued until all outstanding taxes shall have been paid in full.

Mr. COX. In other words, when the owner comes to redeem, he must clean up the property free from all taxes and liens for taxes or assessments. Does not your proposed law limit the redemption to thirty days?

Mr. HULICK. No. It gives two years after the sale. It provides that no deed shall be issued until two years after the sale. The owner of the property can come in within two years and pay the taxes, penalties, costs, and other assessments or liens that may have accrued against the property, and then the sale is canceled and the property is thereby cleared from all liens or taxes, etc.

Mr. COX. But the two-year provision applies to preexisting taxes as well as to the taxes under which the sale was made.

Mr. HULICK. It applies to all taxes and assessments accruing prior to the day of sale, and also to those which may accrue between the time of sale and the time of redemption.

Detween the time of sale and the time of redemption.

This bill has been thoroughly considered by the officers having charge of the execution of liens upon real estate in this District, and has been approved by them. The first section provides that a list shall be prepared, and to that end it proposes the appointment of two extra clerks, who shall be charged with the duty of making out such list. Then the District Commissioners are required to publish the list for at least three weeks after the first publication of it, the time of the sale being fixed by them. I will publication of it, the time of the sale being fixed by them. I will add, Mr. Chairman, that I think there should be an amendment stating more specifically that fact that the Commissioners are to fix the time of sale. That suggestion has been made by the gentleman from New Hampshire [Mr. Baker], and I will offer an amendment to that effect, if there be no objection. I propose to amendment to that effect, if there be no objection. I propose to amend in line 11 on the first page, in the first section of the bill, where it says, "And the Commissioners of said District shall publish the said list, with notice of sale, in a pamphlet," etc. I think it should be expressly provided that the Commissioners shall fix the time of sale, and that the time shall be published, so that property owners may know when their property is to be offered for sale.

Mr. COX. Would it not be well to provide that, where the owners of the property are known, one of the pamphlets or lists provided for in the bill shall be sent to them, so as to bring home notice of the transaction to the owners?

Mr. HULICK. I think there is some force in the gentleman's

Mr. HULICK. I think there is some force in the gentleman's suggestion, Mr. Chairman, that if the owner of the property is known he should be personally notified by sending him one of known he should be personally notified by sending him one of these pamphlets.

Mr. COX. The idea is this: You may publish the notice in two newspapers, or in these pamphlets, and the chances are that many owners will never hear of it, but if you adopt this plan of sending the owner, where he is known, a copy of the pamphlet containing the property advertised, you will bring home notice to him, and, as a matter of fact, in most cases the owner is known.

Mr. HULICK. The text of the bill provides for printing 2,000 copies of these pamphlets for distribution among taxpayers applying therefor. Now, the suggestion of the gentleman (which I think a good one) is that the Commissioners cause to be sent to the owner of the property, if he is known, one of these pamphlets.

the owner of the property, if he is known, one of these pamphlets.

Mr. COX. Yes, sir; that is substantially the amendment I suggest.

Mr. HULICK. I ho
he wishes, I will do so.
Mr. COX. If the get I hope the gentleman will put it in shape; or, if

Mr. COX. If the gentleman will do so, all right.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will send the amendment to

Mr. HULICK. I wish to suggest an amendment which is very brief and which I desire to have adopted now. I move to amend by inserting, after the word "shall." in the eleventh line of the first page, before the word "publish," the words "fix the date of sale and;" so as to read, "and the Commissioners of said district shall fix the date of sale and publish the said list," etc.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. DOCKERY. I have an amendment which I wish to suggest to the gentleman in charge of the bill. The first section authorizes and directs the appointment of two clerks at an annual salary of $1,200 each. This is an organic act, and the clerical force of the office may vary from year to year. I suggest, therefore, that this specific provision for two clerks at $1,200 be stricken out, and that the clause be amended so as to read as follows:

And the Commissioners of said District are hereby authorized and directed to employ a sufficient clerical force to prepare said lists and perform such other duties as may be assigned to them by the assessor.

If this amendment be adopted, it would leave to the annual appropriation bill for the District provision for the clerical force as it may be needed from year to year. At times two clerks may be required; and at another, one; and another, four.

Mr. HULICK. Does the gentleman assure us that there is already authority for the Commissioners to employ additional

Mr. DOCKERY. No. I assume, however, that this bill will pass in sufficient time to enable the Committee on Appropriations to provide for the clerical force in the regular District appropriation bill, inasmuch as that bill has not yet been considered by the subcommittee of the House Committee on Appropriations. This bill if passed will go to the Senate, and by the time the regular appropriation bill is reached we shall have such knowledge of the fate of this bill as will enable us to make provision for the neces-

I wish to call attention further to a provision in section 7 appropriating "a sum sufficient to pay the salaries of the clerks herein provided for up to and including the year ending June 30, 1897." I think that this provision might very well be allowed to remain in the bill, so that an amount sufficient to cover the time intervening between the approval of this bill and the 1st of July would be appropriated. Mr. HULICK. If the Commissioners are allowed authority to make these appointments, even though no appropriation be now made, could they not under that authority employ additional

Mr. DOCKERY. They could; but after the 1st of July they would not have any money with which to pay the clerks so appointed. My suggestion is that provision for the number and paypointed. in the regular District appropriation bill, which has not yet been reported, and which will not be reported probably until the fate of this bill at the other end of the Capitol is known.

Mr. HULICK. The committee have relied as to the necessary amount of clerical force upon the judgment of the Commissioners, who have recommended this bill.

Mr. DOCKERY. This bill does not, at any rate, make any appropriation; it simply provides for the appropriation for their compensation must be made in the regular appropriation bill unless this bill be amended.

Mr. HULICK. Provided authority is given to the Commissioners having in charge the execution of this law to appoint additional clerical force, we have no objection to such modification as the gentleman from Missouri suggests.

Mr. DOCKERY. I agree with the gentleman that such authority ought to be given. If the bill be amended in pursuance of my suggestion, the clause will read:

And the Commissioners of said District are hereby authorized and directed to appoint a clerical force to prepare said list and perform such other duties as may be assigned to them by the assessor.

Mr. HULICK. Would the gentleman leave out the provision as to their payment? Mr. DOCKERY. Yes; I would leave that for the regular appropriation bill. Mr. HULICK. But appropriation bills are made in pursuance Mr. HULICK. But appropriation bills are made in pursuance of law. As a rule, the law fixes the amount of the salary of any United States officer, and the appropriation bill provides for the payment of the amount fixed by law.

Mr. DOCKERY. My suggestion is that we omit now any provision for a fixed salary or for a fixed number of clerks. In an organic act like this such matters ought to be left to be deter-organic act like this such matters ought to be left to be determined by the needs of the office as they arise from year to year.

Mr. HULICK. Well, I think the suggestion good as to the number of additional clerks, but as to the amount, it occurs to me that the salaries ought to be fixed by law and not by an appropriation bill. It is not the object of an appropriation bill to fix salaries, and it would be subject to exception on the floor of the Hoves when presented before this body.

House when presented before this body.

Mr. DOCKERY. Not if the authority is given for the appointment of the clerical force. Still you have no appropriation in your bill as it now stands.

Mr. HULICK. That we expect the Committee on Appropriations to deal with at the proper time.

Mr. BABCOCK. If I understand the position of the gentleman from Missouri, this bill makes no appropriation, and it would be necessary for the Committee on Appropriations to take action to carry it into effect.

Mr. BABCOCK. And your proposition is to give authority to the Commissioners of the District of Columbia to employ the necessary force, and when they can show the necessity for one, two, or three clerks—

Mr. DOCKERSY.

Mr. DOCKERY (interrupting). Or four.
Mr. BABCOCK (continuing). They can employ that number.
Mr. DOCKERY. That is correct; and when the appropriation is made in the proper bill, it would not be subject to the point of order under our rule.

Mr. HULICK. Your suggestion is that the Appropriations Committee should make the appropriation of the amount of the salaries. Now, at one time they would make it $1,000, another committee might say $1,200, and another $1,400, and another a different sum. Unless you fix it by law, there is no way that you can have the salaries regulated. I think it ought to be fixed by law as all of the others are the others are.

Mr. DOCKERY. I beg the gentleman's pardon. The salaries of all the clerks are not fixed by law.

But, Mr. Chairman, with the consent of the gentleman in charge of the bill, I will offer an amendment, which I send to the desk. I move, in lines 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, to strike out the words "clerks at an annual salary of $1,200 each per annum," and insert after the word "appoint," in line 8, the words "a clerical force to prepare said list and perform such other duties as may be assigned to them by the assessor."

Mr. HULICK. I think there could be no serious objection to the form of the amendment. I have no objection to it myself.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

In line 8, after the word "appoint," insert the words "a clerical force to prepare said list and perform such other duties as may be assigned to them by the assessor."

Mr. DOCKERY. That is not quite complete, Mr. Chairman. It should provide to strike out, in line 8, after the word "appoint," the words "two clerks, at an annual salary of $1,200 each per annum."

Mr. HULICK. I would suggest to the gentleman from Missouri that he include the word "sufficient" before the words "clerical force," so as to read "sufficient clerical force."

Mr. DOCKERY. I have no objection to that.

The amendment as modified was agreed to.
Mr. BAKER of New Hampshire. I would like to ask the gentleman in charge of the bill a question.

Mr. HULICK. Certainly.
Mr. BAKER of New Hampshire. I notice, in lines 5 and 6, on Mr. BAKER of New Hampshire. I notice, in lines 3 and 6, on the first page of the bill, that the assessor is to prepare a list of taxes in arrears on the 1st day of July of each year hereafter, and at the bottom of the page it provides that said Commissioners shall, on the third Tuesday in March of each year hereafter, give notice, and so on. Does the gentleman intend that there shall be no tax sale this year, or is it his design to proceed under existing

Mr. HULICK. The tax sale will proceed under existing law, as amended by this statute.

Mr. BAKER of New Hampshire. But suppose that this bill becomes a law between this session and the next regular session. In other words, it may not be applicable at present, but in April,

Mr. HULICK (interrupting). Oh, if the bill does not become a law at this Congress, then we have no further jurisdiction. It goes "where the woodbine twineth." "Sufficient unto the day is the evil thereof.'

Mr. BAKER of New Hampshire. The suggestion was only for the purpose of illustrating the possibility that there may be no legislation and no tax sale at all this year.

Mr. HULICK. It is hard to tell what this Congress will fail to do.

Mr. RICHARDSON. I desire to offer an amendment to the second section of the bill.

I move, Mr. Chairman, after the word "Columbia," in line 2, on page 5, to insert the words "sell such property at public or private sale and;" so that it will read:

The Commissioners of the District or their successors shall, in the name of and on behalf of the District of Columbia, sell said property at public or private sale and issue to any purchaser of said property a deed, etc.

This clearly emphasizes that there shall be a sale; but the words do not appear which empower the Commissioners to sell. It says that the deed shall issue, but it does not contemplate a sale; and these words simply provide that they may sell and that the deed shall follow.

[Here the hammer fell.]
Mr. HULICK. Mr. Chairman, I am not quite certain that that amendment ought to be adopted. I am not quite certain that it would be right to let the Commissioners of the District make a private sale of this property, after failure to have a purchaser at the public sale. It was not my understanding that the bill should have that import.

Mr. RICHARDSON. I get the idea of the gentleman, and if he will listen to me for a moment, I think he will see the propriety of these words. Now, what is the bill? Going back to page 4, commencing in line 15:

And if within two years thereafter such property is not redeemed by the owner or owners thereof, or their legal representatives, by the payment of the taxes, penalties, and costs due at the time of the sale, and that may have accrued after that date, and 10 per cent per annum thereon, or if any property, two years after having been so bid off at any sale in the name of said District, under this or any other law, whether heretofore or hereafter made, is not or has not been so redeemed as aforesaid, unless it shall be shown that the sale for taxes was irregular and void, then the Commissioners of the

Having the property now in their hands, and nobody having re-or their successors, shall, in the name of and on behalf of the District of Columbia—

Do what?-

issue to any purchaser-

Well, who is he? There is no purchaser. Mr. HULICK. Then that ought to be stricken out. Mr. HULICK.

Mr. RICHARDSON. I am amending the text of the bill so as to show that there may be a sale. To whom are they going to issue the deed? There must be a sale. The text of the bill contemplates that there shall be a purchaser, and there can not be a purchaser without a sale. I simply provide that there shall be a sale, and then that they shall-

Issue to any purchaser of such property a deed, which shall have the effect to convey and vest in such purchaser all the right, title, and estate of all persons whomsoever claiming an interest in said property, except as hereinafter provided.

Then follows the proviso. Now, if you are going to issue to the purchaser a deed—and that is the language—how are you going to issue it unless there is a sale by the Commissioners to such purchaser?

chaser?

Mr. HULICK. I see the suggestion of the gentleman—
Mr. RICHARDSON. The gentleman says he does not wish the sale to be private. Why should it not be private? They have complied with all the terms. They have advertised the property two years before. They have bid it in on behalf of the District of Columbia. Nobody has come to redeem it. Nobody has claimed it. No heirs, no legatees, no distributees, nobody claiming the property. What is the District going to do with it? If they advertise it and sell it, why, then, they have to bid it in again, and they would be exactly in the same attitude. After paying costs, and paying for the advertisement, and paying all the expenses they would be exactly in the same attitude. After paying costs, and paying for the advertisement, and paying all the expenses incident to the sale, they would be sitting there with the property on their hands and have to wait two years more for redemption. Now, they ought to be authorized, it seems to me, to sell it, and not to sell it publicly, because there might not appear any purchaser; but if they can find anybody, publicly or privately, who will take it off their hands, pay all the back taxes, take their title to it, in accordance with the proviso which is there, it seems to me they ought to be allowed to sell it.

Mr. HULICK. I think I apprehend the gentleman's suggestion, but I do not think that the Committee on the District of Columbia, and I do not believe that the Committee of the Whole.

Columbia, and I do not believe that the Committee of the Whole,

Columbia, and I do not believe that the Committee of the Whole, would be willing to place the power in the hands of the Commissioners of the District after they had failed to make a public sale to sell it at private sale to anybody for the taxes, when the property might be worth $10,000 or $50,000.

Mr. RICHARDSON. I get the point. Now, I ask the gentleman, what would be the harm in their putting it up at private sale? If they put it up at public sale and somebody bids it in for that very amount—that is, the accumulated taxes and costs and expenses of the sale—he would be in favor of selling it to that bidder publicly. Now, if you would do that publicly, what is the harm in the Commissioners of the District selling it privately, without incurring any additional cost?

without incurring any additional cost?

Mr. HULICK. There might be no harm. But I do not want to put it within the power of the Commissioners of this District to have the appearance of evil or the appearance of harm, and I would not be in favor of letting the Commissioners sell property worth perhaps $50,000 or $100,000 for the taxes, at private sale, and I do not think the committee would have reported in favor of that

Mr. RICHARDSON. Well, now-

Mr. HULICK. One moment. Let me answer the questions already suggested by the gentleman. I think this bill did not intend anything of that kind, although I admit that the language is not as clear—
Mr. RICHARDSON. I was going to ask you what you propose to do with it?

Mr. HULICK. I think the gentleman is mistaken when he says that there will be no purchaser. Of course, if there is no purchaser at the public sale, the Commissioners would have no one to give the deed to. The property would then be returned, would still be delinquent on the tax duplicate, subject to the operation of this statute at the next public sale which would be held under the provisions of the statute.

Mr. RICHARDSON. Now, what I want to ask—
Mr. HULICK. Now, one moment, please. I think the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. RICHARDSON] and the gentleman from New Hampshire [Mr. Baker] called my attention to the same point. I think gentlemen do not properly comprehend this lan-guage. As I said before, it is not as clear, possibly, as it should be.

Now, let me see whether we have not got a purchaser in this: And if within two years thereafter-

That is, after the property has been bid off. I will read-But the property so bid off-

Mr. RICHARDSON. By the District Commissioners. Mr. HULICK (continuing)- shall not be exempted from assessment and taxation.

Mr. RICHARDSON. That is, bid off by the Commissioners?

Mr. HULICK. Yes. Mr. RICHARDSON. Go al Mr. HULICK (continuing): Go ahead.

But shall be assessed or taxed as other property; and if within two years thereafter such property is not redeemed by the owner or owners thereof, or their legal representatives, by the payment of the taxes, penalties, and costs due at the time of the sale, and that may have accrued on and after that date, and 10 per cent per annum thereon, or if any property two years after having been so bid off at any sale in the name of the said District, under this or any other law, whether heretofore or hereafter made, is not or has not been so redeemed as aforesaid, unless it be shown that the sale for taxes was irregular and void, then the Commissioners of the District or their successors shall, in the name of and on behalf of the District of Columbia, issue to any purchaser—

Mr. RICHARDSON. Who is the purchaser under that? How

Mr. RICHARDSON. Who is the purchaser under that? How are you going to get a purchaser?

Mr. WILLIAM A. STONE. Let me suggest that under the language they can sell it at private sale.

Mr. RICHARDSON. A little louder.

Mr. WILLIAM A. STONE. I say that under the law as it now stands the property bid off in the name of the District of Columbia can be sold at private sale.

Mr. RICHARDSON. Undoubtedly.

Mr. HULICK. The gentleman has not read quite far enough.

Mr. RICHARDSON. I think I have. Read on, and let us see.

Mr. HULICK (reading):

Mr. HULICK (reading):

Then the Commissioners of the District of Columbia, or their successors, shall, in the name of and on behalf of the District of Columbia, issue to any purchaser of such property a deed which shall have the effect to convey and vest in such purchaser all the right, title, and estate of all persons whomsoever claiming an interest in said property, except as hereinafter provided.

Mr. RICHARDSON. That is right. Then the proviso.

Mr. HULICK. Then there is the proviso. Now, it occurs to me that if that is the thought on the part of the gentleman—and it possibly may have that construction placed upon the language here—it was not the intention of the Commissioners to have it so provided. Mr. RICHARDSON. Now, your language there—the original text—you will not question, contemplates a sale, because it says the District Commissioners, having bid off this property and having

District Commissioners, having bid off this property and having paid the cost and expense upon it, must issue to the purchaser of it from them a deed. Now, then, I say that contemplates a sale. We agree on that. Now, the only controversy between us is whether you want that sale to be a public or a private sale. My amendment simply makes it plain by saying it may be either public or private in the discretion of the Commissioners. You object to its being a private sale, and I say that if you offer it publicly and it is bid off by them again, it is likely in this way to be offered every two years and nobody may come to redeem it, or nobody is an applicant for it, and you advertise it again and again. You simply go over and over the same operation every two years, except that you have incurred the additional cost of the publication of the second sale, and when that is made, the District Commissioners simply bid it off again and accrue additional increased cost upon the same property, and they get exactly the same title that they had before. Now, I want them to have the right to sell it—and you contemplate that in the text of the bill—and the only question is whether that sale should be public or private, and if they sell it privately there will be no more cost. They should be allowed to sell it in private if they can get a bidder. They can sell it privately without any cost and sell it with the same condition as contained here before the deed is issued—

And before the deed is issued as herein mentioned, notice shall be published three times in two daily newspapers published in the District that a deed has been applied for.

before the deed is issued-

That gives everybody notice to come forward and redeem it and pay off these extra costs and expenses and take the property, or we will give a deed to this private purchaser. It is not a private sale after all, because there has been this advertisement before they can give the deed. If there is a private sale, they must go ahead and readvertise the property before they can give the deed.

Mr. DOCKERY and Mr. BLUE rose.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Ohio has the floor.

Mr. BLUE. If the gentleman from Ohio will permit me, I would like to make a suggestion to the gentleman from Tennessee.

The practice of a good many States of this Union does what this bill purports to do in regard to lands that are not bid off at the public sale. In other words, it provides that such lands shall be knocked off to the District. A further practice is, and the law is, for the State to hold that until some one comes forward and offers to take the certificate for it. Then the certificate is issued, and to take the certificate for it. Then the certificate is issued, and upon that, after the expiration of a certain time, a deed will issue.

Mr. RICHARDSON. Certainly.

Mr. BLUE. I think the gentleman from Tennessee is simply seeking by this amendment, not purposely I apprehend, but in fact, to add additional cost when he provides that no sale shall be required unless it he a private sale.

fact, to add additional cost when he provides that no sale shall be required unless it be a private sale.

Mr. RICHARDSON. If the gentleman will notice the first section of this item, it provides for the very contingency suggested by the gentleman from Kansas; that is, that the purchaser takes the certificate of sale and waits his time, and then a deed is issued to him in two years, and he becomes the purchaser. But here is a case where the District bids it off, there being nobody who comes forward to take the certificate, and the two years having expired. forward to take the certificate, and the two years having expired. to take the certificate, and the two years having expired, it is sold two, three, or four times and nobody comes forward to take the certificate. Under the condition that the gentleman speaks of, this will have to be gone over each two years. There will be the same farce of bidding off this property at the expiration of two years, giving no possession of it to anybody, as nobody has come forward to take the certificate, but if anybody does come forward this provides that he shall take the deed. Now, then, this is simply recruiting him to do so his is simply permitting him to do so.

Mr. BLUE. If the gentleman from Tennessee will permit me, this as it is now authorizes the sale. It uses the word "property" instead of sale certificate, but I think it authorizes the sale to anyone who may come forward to take the property without additional express of an advantage of the sale to the property without additional express of the advantage of the sale to the property without additional express of the advantage of the sale to the property without additional express of the sale to the property without additional express of the sale to the property without additional express of the sale to the property without additional express of the sale to the property without additional express of the sale to the property without additional express of the sale to the property without additional express of the sale to the property without additional express of the sale to the property without additional express of the sale to the property without additional express of the sale to the property without additional express of the sale to the property without additional express of the sale to the sale to the property without additional express of the sale to the sale one who may come forward to take the property without additional expense of an advertisement.

Mr. RICHARDSON. That is what I am providing against—the additional expense of an advertisement. We do not want any additional expense for advertising. Lower down there is a proviso which says that as a further saving to everybody, after you have found the purchaser, before his property shall be taken from him for these unpaid taxes, a publication shall be made to the owner that we are given to give title and finally take his property.

that you are going to give title and finally take his property from him for arrears of taxes.

Mr. BABCOCK. I believe, Mr. Chairman, that I can make this matter clear; at least I can try. I think the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. BLUE], the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. RICHARDSON], and the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. HULICK] do not clearly understand each other. and the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. HULICK] do not clearly understand each other. All that the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. RICHARDSON] seeks to do by his amendment is to authorize the Commissioners to sell at private sale the certificates of property bid in by them. That is the common practice everywhere throughout the country in almost every State of the Union. The gentleman from Tennessee proposes that any tax certificate that has been bid off by the District can be sold to anybody who goes in and offers to take the certificate, paying what it cost at the time of sale with accrued interest from that date. As I understand the gentleman from Tennessee, his position is that the bill is not clear as to the authority of the Commissioners to sell such certificates after they have bid them in. Certainly it is perfectly proper that they should sell those certificates at private sale, because that is they should sell those certificates at private sale, because that is mr. HULICK.

Mr. HULICK. Not in Ohio. Mr. BABCOCK. After the Mr. BABCOCK. After the property has been bid in by the county, they do not have to offer the certificates at public sale.

Mr. BLUE. It becomes a mere assignment of a certificate, then?

Mr. BABCOCK. That is all.

Mr. COX. Let us see how this will work practically. The property is advertised for sale and it is offered for sale and the Commissioners buy it in. They do not buy it in for themselves. They buy it in for the District. Therefore, the District is the purchaser. Now, why should we make any discrimination between the rights of the District of Columbia as the purchaser and the rights of any individual who might have bid off the property?

Mr. BABCOCK. That is a good idea.

Mr. RICHARDSON. But we make this exception, that before the title shall pass the Commissioners, lest they should do injustice to some heirs or other persons, must advertise to this effect: We to some heirs or other persons, must advertise to this effect: have sold this property, we have found a purchaser, and unless you come forward within thirty days and pay up these taxes and costs we are going to foreclose you finally.

Mr. COX. That provision is for the advantage of the owner of the property.

Mr. RICHARDSON. Certainly.

Mr. DOCKERY. Mr. Chairman, let us have the amendment eported at this point.
The amendment was read, as follows:

Page 5, line 2, after the word "Columbia" insert "advertise the sale of said property at public or private sale and."

Mr. WILLIAM A. STONE. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

Mr. HULICK. I believe I have the floor, Mr. Chairman, and I do not propose to yield it until I get through answering questions. I yielded to the gentleman from Tennessee to offer an amend-

Mr. WILLIAM A. STONE. I think I have the floor, Mr. Chairman, as we are under the five minute rule. I move to strike out

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Ohio [Mr. HULICK] is

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Ohio [Mr. HULICK] is entitled to the floor.

Mr. HULICK. I call the attention of the gentleman from Tennessee to the amendment just read. I think the Clerk read it otherwise than as the gentleman intended it. The Clerk read it "at public or private sale," but I understood the gentleman from Tennessee to say "at private sale."

Mr. RICHARDSON. No; I would leave it to the discretion of the Commissioners whether they shall sell at public or at private sale. If they choose to sell at public sale, they have a right to do that, but they should also have the right to sell at private sale. Suppose they offer a piece of property for sale for upuald taxes that, but they should also have the right to sell at private sale. Suppose they offer a piece of property for sale for unpaid taxes and nobody bids. These tax sales occur every one or two years, as I understand. Suppose that nobody bids on this piece of property and the Commissioners bid it in; unless we give them the right to sell it at private sale, they will be required to sit down and wait for one or for two years, until the time comes for another public sale, although they might perhaps have found a purchaser for the property who would have taken it off their hands the very next day after they had bid it in.

Mr. HULICK. I thought the gentleman proposed that the sale should be private only. But, Mr. Chairman, if that amendment is to be adopted, I wish to suggest that there are other sections in this bill that will have to be considered in connection with it.

Mr. WILLIAM A. STONE. A great many of them.

Mr. RICHARDSON. Will the gentleman suggest one?

Mr. WILLIAM A. STONE. I will, if I get a chance.

Mr. RICHARDSON. I was addressing the gentleman from Ohio.

Ohio

Mr. HULICK. I want to call attention to section 4. In that section it is provided—

That the owner or authorized agent of the owner of any property sold as aforesaid, or any other person having an interest therein at the time of sale, may redeem the same from such sale at any time within two years after the last day of sale by paying to the collector of taxes, for the use of the purchaser, his heirs and assigns, the sum mentioned in the certificate of sale therefor, with interest thereon at the rate of 15 per cent per annum after the date of such certificate of sale, together with any tax or assessment which the holder of said certificate shall have paid between the days of sale and redemption, with interest on the same at the rate of 10 per cent per annum.

Now, let a see the date of the control of the same at the rate of 10 per cent per annum.

Now, let us see what will be the practical operation of this. The statute up to this time has provided that there shall be a sale made after delinquency is asserted. When the Commissioners bid in the property, two years have to pass before they can make this private or public sale provided by the amendment. Then, under section 4, there will be two additional years, so that the parties in interest would still have the right to redeem for four years. Is it the intention to give them four years? I understand that the inthe intention to give them four years? I understand that the interpretation of the statute would give them two years for redemption after the public or private sale provided for by the amendment of the gentleman from Tennessee.

Mr. RICHARDSON. My amendment does not affect that question at all

question at all.

Mr. WILLIAM A. STONE. Mr. Chairman, the discussion upon this amendment establishes quite clearly the fact that this bill has not been properly considered. It is a bill which proposes to change the whole system of taxation in this District. It modifies bill has not been properly considered. It is a bill which proposes to change the whole system of taxation in this District. It modifies or practically repeals the present system and establishes a new one. Now, there is no matter that directly affects so many people as the question of taxing property. And I find here two members of the committee unable to agree as to the construction of the bill which they have reported. It seems to me that this in itself is evidence that this measure, affecting so many people and as much property, ought to be more carefully considered before so much property, ought to be more carefully considered before we are asked to make it a law.

The amendment which the gentleman from Tennessee proposes to insert, in the second line on the fifth page, seems to be necessary to give the Commissioners power to sell property previously bid in by them in the name of the District. There appears to be at present no power on the part of the Commissioners to dispose of property thus bid in by them; hence the amendment of the gentleman from Tennessee becomes important and essential, if this bill is to become a law. I find that the bill gives the Commissioners on such power.

Mr. RICHARDSON. Oh, yes; it does.

Mr. WILLIAM A. STONE. In what part?

Mr. RICHARDSON. If the gentleman will turn to page 5, he will find a provision that "the Commissioners of the District, or their successors, shall, in the name of and on behalf of the District of Columbia, issue to any purchaser of such property a deed."

They could not issue that deed unless somebody purchased the property.

property.

Mr. WILLIAM A. STONE. That is an implied power.

Mr. RICHARDSON. Certainly.

Mr. WILLIAM A. STONE. But when you undertake to give power to officials to sell real estate, the power should be specific, Mr. RICHARDSON. That is the reason I have offered the amendment.

Mr. WILLIAM A. STONE. I so understand; and I say that the gentleman's amendment is important and ought to be adopted if the bill is to pass. But the purpose of the gentleman's amendment is to give to the Commissioners a power which they have not now under the law as it stands except by implication.

Mr. RICHARDSON. Well, that may be.

Mr. WILLIAM A. STONE. But I find other objections to the bill. For instance, on page 5, beginning at line 16, I find this lan-

And provided also, That minors or other persons under legal disability be allowed one year after attaining full age, or after the removal of such legal disability, to redeem the property so sold.

It seems to me, on a hasty examination of this clause, that the Commissioners might have to wait until an insane person had re-

Commissioners might have to wait until an insane person had recovered his reason before they could dispose of the property.

Mr. HULICK. Would not that be right?

Mr. WILLIAM A. STONE. There are various other difficulties in this bill. When we undertake to pass a tax law the question should be approached with the greatest deliberation and caution. All possible difficulties should be foreseen and provided for.

Now, I do not know of any crying necessity for a change in the system of taxation in this District. I have very little personal interest in this matter—only to the extent of a very small lot which I own. But I should hesitate, without very careful consideration, to vote for a bill like this, which proposes to change in most essential particulars the existing system of taxation, and to authorize the Commissioners to sell real estate.

Mr. HULICK. Will the gentleman allow me a question?

Mr. WILLIAM A. STONE. Later on I will. It may be that there is an absolute necessity for a modification of the tax laws of this District.

this District.

Mr. BABCOCK. There is.
Mr. WILLIAM A. STONE. I have not heard of any such necessity. I have no doubt that gentlemen of the committee will be able to give the reasons for such a necessity if it exists. But I should like to see this committee agree upon some one paragraph of its bill.

Mr. HULICK. We are agreed upon all of them. Mr. WILLIAM A. STONE. Then why come in here and dis-

Mr. RICHARDSON. The gentleman from Ohio [Mr. HULICK] said that he did not understand my amendment.
Mr. WILLIAM A. STONE. Ifully understand the gentleman's

amendment

Mr. RICHARDSON. But the gentleman from Ohio did not understand it.

Mr. WILLIAM A. STONE. The gentleman in charge of the bill stated that he did not understand that your amendment was

Mr. RICHARDSON. He does now understand its necessity.
Mr. HULICK. I did not understand that the word "public" was included in the amendment.
Mr. WILLIAM A. STONE. The amendment was read something like half a dozen times.

Now, sir, I fail to see the necessity of any change in the tax laws of this District. This bill proposes a radical, a sweeping change. It proposes to repeal the existing system of law on this subject. It seems that the attorney of the District recommends the bill, but I think in a matter of so much importance we ought to have more time to consider it.

Mr. FAIRCHILD. And also the Commissioners of the District.
Mr. WILLIAM A. STONE. Yes, sir; the Commissioners of the District. And I think that this committee ought to be able to come in here and present a bill without practically and radically disagreeing among themselves on its provisions.

Mr. HULICK. There is no disagreement whatever.

Mr. WILLIAM A. STONE. Well, what is the great necessity

Mr. WILLIAM A. STONE. Well, what is the great necessity of passing the bill?

Mr. HULICK. Allow me to answer the gentleman. He has asserted that this bill has not received full consideration. The first bill, House bill 4149, was considered by the committee and reported at the last session. But an amendment having been suggested, as stated in this report, the Commissioners reviewed the matter, took it under further consideration, and sent us the bill which is now offered as a substitute. It has been fully consideration. the matter, took it under further consideration, and sent us the bill which is now offered as a substitute. It has been fully considered by the assessor, by the attorney for the District, and by the Commissioners of the District, and it has been carefully considered by the District Committee and comes unanimously reported by the committee after a full and fair investigation. And I want to say further, if the gentleman will permit me, that the District of Columbia at the close of the last fiscal year, 1896, lost over $20,000 in taxes because the tax law as it is now is inefficient to return into the Treasury the money that was due for taxes. It could not be collected.

Mr. WILLIAM A. STONE. Is the gentleman's question concluded? [Laughter.] Now, let me answer the gentleman's question by asking another: What is the necessity for the legislation? Is it possible that the Commissioners of the District of Columbia are unable to collect taxes from anybody?

Mr. BABCOCK. Yes, it is.

Mr. BAKER of New Hampshire. Very nearly that.

Mr. HULICK. I will state, Mr. Chairman, in response to the gentleman from Pennsylvania, that that is very nearly the condition of affairs. Under the old law the deed given to the purchaser at a tax sale carried with it only the taxes for that year. They were resisted in many cases, in the case of McKay against some parties, and other cases that could be cited, and the courts decided that it passed title, clear of all incumbrance for taxes, and so the District lost the tax for that sale which had accumulated, and, as I have already said, the loss in the fiscal year 1896 was over $20,000 from the same causes.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired.
Mr. HEPBURN. Mr. Chairman, I wish to make an inquiry.
Are we operating under the five-minute rule?
The CHAIRMAN. The Chair so understands.
Mr. WILLIAM A. STONE. Should the four-minute question of the gentleman from Ohio be taken out of my time? [Laughter.]

Mr. HEPBURN. I move to strike out the last word for the purpose of making a suggestion to the gentleman in charge of the

I wish to call his attention to the peculiar condition that may arise under the provisions of the bill. The purpose of the proposed legislation is to compel the payment of delinquent taxes. Under the present law, as I understand it, these delinquent taxes bear 1 per cent interest a month as a penalty for nonpayment. Under the provisions of this bill the party in default is entitled to a reconveyance of the land on payment of the taxes and 10 per cent interest thereon per annum. So that it will be to the advantage of a person who refuses the payment of his taxes to allow the land to go to sale, and then within the two years, or in the case of a disability such as that spoken of a little while ago, after even the period of ten or fifteen years, to come in and pay the 10 per cent penalty, for he will save 2 per cent on the taxes by allowing the property to go to sale.

Has the gentleman from Ohio considered that feature?

Mr. HULICK. I suggest to the gentleman that instead of 10 per cent penalty it is 15 per cent penalty in the first instance. and 10 per cent afterwards annually on the amount paid in for taxes, and the additional taxes that may be paid by the purchaser after and the additional taxes that may be paid by the purchaser after the deed is given.

Mr. COX. Mr. Chairman, I desire to call the attention of the gentleman in charge of the bill to another section that has not been discussed up to this time. I refer to section 6, which provides—

That the said Commissioners shall not convey any property sold for taxes if they shall discover, before the conveyance, that the sale was for any cause invalid and ineffectual to give title to the property sold; but they shall cancel the sale and cause the purchase money to be refunded to the purchaser, his representatives or assigns.

New year head even conveit total the Commissioners of the District.

Now, you have constituted the Commissioners of the District, under that section, a judicial tribunal to try any question of title that may arise. Suppose you put up the property for sale, I become a purchaser in good faith, and offer to pay the taxes on the property, and the Commissioners decline to give me the title. They say, "There is a defect in the proceedings." Have you not, in other words, provided a way that the Commissioners themselves can destroy the effect of the legislation resources them-But suppose I insist that the proceeding is valid, and I have complied with the law; you make it conclusive upon me that the Commissioners can settle the question, and I have no say whatever.

Am I mistaken in that?

M. HULLICK The Commissioners are given authority that if

Mr. HULICK. The Commissioners are given authority that, if they say the sale is ineffectual to pass title, by inadvertence or otherwise, it would not stand-

Mr. COX. But that is a judicial proceeding on their part.

Mr. HULICK (continuing). And under those circumstances they have a right to regulate or to cancel the sale. But suppose the purchaser did not agree in the conclusion of the Commissioners and says, "No; I will take the title as it is." The Commissioners say, "No; it is irregular and ineffectual to pass title." The remedy of the gentleman would be to go into court and have a writ of mandamus issued to compel the Commissioners to pass the title by issuing the deed, and under the operation of the law the court must so determine. must so determine.

Mr. COX. Will the gentleman allow me to say right there that he has created a tribunal, in the persons of the Commissioners, to settle the very question. I know the gentleman is aware, from his knowledge of the law, that when you put the right to decide what is the law in a certain body of men no other body has the right to revise their decision.

Mr. HULICK. It must be for a cause invalid or ineffectual, If the Commissioners are mistaken in their judgment, the court can review and correct the mistake.

Mr. COX. I wish I could agree with you, but I do not agree with you.

Mr. RICHARDSON. Mr. Chairman, we are drifting away from the amendment which I have offered. Everybody agrees that that amendment ought to be adopted. I ask that the vote be taken on the pending amendment, and then we can take up the other objections that the gentleman makes.

Mr. WILLIAM A. STONE. Let me ask the gentleman from Tennessee one question. I noticed similar language on page 4, lines 24 and 25

Mr. RICHARDSON. You are raising another question.
Mr. COX. Yes; we had better get them all up.
Mr. WILLIAM A. STONE. Speaking of the right to sell—

Unless it shall be shown that the sale for taxes was irregular and void.

Mr. WILLIAM A. STONE. It does not say who is to decide whether the sale is irregular and void. Evidently the Commissioners may reconsider the whole thing.

Mr. COX. To whom are you going to show it?

Mr. WILLIAM A. STONE. That is the point.

It is almost as difficult of comprehension as some of the provisions of the civilaimcult of comprehension as some of the provisions of the civilservice law. [Laughter.]

Mr. COX. And then in the sixth section you create a special tribunal; and the difficulty in the gentleman's mind, with all due respect to him, I think is this: You fix a tribunal to decide whether the sale is valid or invalid. When you do that there is no court which can mandamus that tribunal and make them do differently from their own conclusion.

Mr. WILLIAM A. STONE. There is no tribunal to fix that.

It rests in the Commissioners.
Mr. COX. That is it.
Mr. RICHARDSON. Now Now I ask for a vote on the amendment which nobody objected to.

Mr. WILLIAM A. STONE. Nobody outside of the committee.

Mr. HULICK. Nobody inside the committee.

The amendment of Mr. RICHARDSON was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will submit the committee amendment. The question now is on agreeing to the amendment submitted by the committee.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. BABCOCK. I move that the committee rise and report the bill favorably.

Mr. DOCKERY.
Mr. BABCOCK. Oh, no; I have another amendment or two. I withdraw the motion.

Mr. DOCKERY. I desire to offer an amendment to section 7.

on page 7.

Mr. HEPBURN. I want to get in an amendment before that,

Mr. DOCKERY. All right. You go ahead.
Mr. HEPBURN. Mr. Chairman, I move to amend lines 2 and 3, on page 4, by striking out the words "until the contrary is proved."

As the section now reads, it says:

And all proceedings prior to said deed shall be presumed to have been regular until the contrary is proved.

I want to strike out the latter words.

Mr. RICHARDSON. I do not object to that.

The question being taken on the amendment offered by Mr.

HEPBURN to strike out the words "until the contrary is proved,"

Mr. HULICK demanded a division.

The committee divided; and there were—ayes 13, noes 1.

Accordingly the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. HEPBURN. Now, Mr. Speaker, I move to strike out the word "presumed," in line 2 on page 4, and insert in lieu thereof the word "held."

The Clerk read as follows:

In line 2, page 4, strike out the word "presumed" and insert the word "held."

The amendment was agreed to.
Mr. WILLIAM A. STONE. Now, Mr. Chairman, I ought to offer an amendment, but I can not imagine one that would fit the case. Perhaps the gentleman in charge of the bill will help me out of the difficulty. On page 5, line 16, is the following:

And provided also. That minors or other persons under legal disability be allowed one year after attaining full age, or after the removal of such legal disability, to redeem the property so sold, or of which the title has, as aforesaid, become vested in the District of Columbia, from the purchaser or purchasers, his, her, or their assigns, or from the District of Columbia, on payment of the amount of purchase money so paid therefor, with 10 per cent per annum interest thereon, as aforesaid, together with all taxes and assessments that have been paid thereon by the purchaser or his assigns, between the day of sale and the period of redemption, with 10 per cent per annum interest on the amount of such taxes and assessments.

Now, suppose the owner of property is insane, are you going to wait until he gets well?

Mr. HULICK. Would you take his property before he was

Mr. WILLIAM A. STONE. Then you propose to give him a year after he becomes sane?

Mr. HULICK. Well, if he should die—
Mr. WILLIAM A. STONE. Isimply want an explanation of it.
Mr. HULICK. The explanation is this: The committee did not wish, as we found in the statutes in almost all the States, that the disabilities, while they exist, should be a bar to the title becoming perfected in the purchaser under a tax sale. There is no charity for purchasers who have paid a hundredth or a thou-sandth part of the value of the property; and they take it subject to this condition. If they are buying the property that belongs to an insane person, they get the high penalties, the per annum penalties upon the investment.

penalties upon the investment.

Mr. WILLIAM A. STONE. What does the District get?

Mr. HULICK. The District gets the taxes, and the purchaser has to pay as long as he owns the property, until the insane person becomes sound or dies. If that be twenty years, the District gets the taxes in the meantime.

Mr. WILLIAM A. STONE. Suppose a man is insane and his property is sold, and he lives ten or fifteen years after that. The property is nonproducing. The property has not produced any property is nonproducing. The property has not produced any revenue for the support of the District government, and when it is sold the party has to wait until he dies or gets well.

Mr. HULICK. That is an extreme case the gentleman is supposing. Of course it is not expected it would probably arise in one case out of a thousand instances.

Mr. WILLIAM A. STONE. There are a great many insane persons in the District, and a good many members of Congress buy property here.

Mr. HULICK. That might infer that there are a great many members of Congress who are insane.

Mr. WILLIAM A. STONE. I would not say that; but I ask,

Mr. WILLIAM A. STONE. I would not say that; but I ask, where are you going to get the revenue out of the property?

Mr. HULICK. What remedy have you in an extreme case like that? What would you suggest?

Mr. WILLIAM A. STONE. I believed that the committee, who have very thoroughly considered the matter, especially the lawyers on the committee, would be able to present the proper legislation.

Mr. BABCOCK. If the gentleman will permit me, I will state it makes no difference where the party is, whether he is insane or not, the District gets its taxes.

Mr. WILLIAM A. STONE. But when this is a public sale it goes into the hands of the District.

Mr. BABCOCK. If they do not pay the taxes, it will be sold for the taxes regardless of whether the party is in the asylum or

Mr. WILLIAM A. STONE. But the property sold is in the hands of the Commissioners.

Mr. BABCOCK. So far as the execution of the law is concerned, the insane party has no power over it, and the taxes for the next year are assessed, and it can be sold every year for taxes.

Mr. WILLIAM A. STONE. Your policy is to let the property remain in the Commissioners' hands, and the tax remain in the hands of the minor.

Are BABCOCK. This is simply for redemption will a

Mr. BABCOCK. This is simply for redemption.

Mr. RICHARDSON. If the gentleman will allow me for a moment, I think I can make it clear. Let us assume that the party owning this property has been dealt with as we contemplate down to this provision. Now, it turns out that that party is a minor This bill provides in favor of the minor; that is to say, that his property will still remain subject to redemption, notwithstanding all the preliminary steps have been taken, for one year after the disability is removed, and he has become of age. Now, there can be no objection to that, because that is definitely fixed. There is no court, I venture to say, that will give a deed to take the property of a minor for tax without allowing that minor an opportunity to redeem that property after the disability has been removed. Now, then, that does not seem to be the difficulty in the way of the gentleman. The difficulty is that somebody is insane. If there be such a person whose property has been sold under the conditions that we contemplate down to this stage of the bill, what is the effect? The District Commissioners sell the property at public or private sale, as we have provided, and execute a deed after giving thirty days' notice that they will do so.

Let us assume that Mr. Smith is the purchaser of that insane person's property under this condition.

Mr. WILLIAM A. STONE. That is, where the Commissioners have sold the title which they have?

Mr. RICHARDSON (continuing). And he takes the title.
Mr. WILLIAM A. STONE. That is, where the Commissioners have sold the title which they have bought?
Mr. RICHARDSON. And after they have sold it, if it belonged to an insane person, the provision is that until that disability is removed the insane person can have the right to redeem the property; and, as suggested by the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. HULICK] on the committee, that is right and proper, because if Mr. Smith goes forward and purchases property for taxes worth fifty or a hundred times as much as he pays for it, he does so with full knowledge that he is buying the property of an insane person, and that that insane person when the disability is removed has the right to come forward and do what? Redeem his property by paying him what he has paid on this insane person's property and all the penalties and costs additional. That is the law as it is now in several of the States.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Pennsyl-wania has expired.

Mr. RICHARDSON. I thought I had the floor. Then I will take the floor in my own right, and having taken the time of the gentleman, after a statement I will yield to the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

Mr. WILLIAM A. STONE. I simply want to ask the gentleman a question. In the meantime, in the case which you have supposed, there is no tax or revenue from this property. Who will purchase property in that condition?

Mr. RICHARDSON. Now, then, I assume that Mr. Smith becomes the purchaser at this sale, and nobody having come forward, after the conditions have been complied with he takes the title to this property. That property is assessed, in either event, for next year's taxes, and he pays for the first year, the second year, the third, and the fourth, and he pays the taxes until after the insane man, having recovered, comes forward and redeems the property. Before he can redeem he must pay the back taxes and pay also the taxes that Mr. Smith, the purchaser, has paid each year.

Mr. WILLIAM A. STONE. The gentleman is imagining two insane persons, the one who owns the property and the man who is insane enough to buy it under such conditions. [Laughter.]

Mr. RICHARDSON. If nobody is insane enough to buy it, then the property will remain in the hands of the Commissioners.

Mr. WILLIAM A. STONE. And there will be no taxes collected macrif.

lected upon it.

Mr. RICHARDSON. Well, what is the gentleman's remedy for collecting the taxes of an insane person?

Mr. WILLIAM A. STONE. I would not presume to suggest a remedy in the face of the statement that this bill has received more careful consideration than any other measure reported by this committee. [Laughter.]

Mr. RICHARDSON. Well, Mr. Chairman, to be serious about it, there is a necessity for this bill. The Commissioners say that it will relieve them greatly; the assessors say the same thing; the District attorney favors it; the District Committee thinks it is a good bill, and while it is good bill; and, while it may not be perfect, we venture the state-ment here that it is a very great improvement on the existing law. Therefore, having done the best we can, we ask that the bill be put upon its passage unless some other gentleman has an amendment that he desires to offer.

Mr. HEPBURN. Mr. Chairman, I desire to offer an amendment which I send to the desk.

The amendment was read, as follows:

After the word "regular," in line 2, page 4, insert the words "and no deed shall be set aside except on proof of fraud or that no tax was due at the date of the sale."

Mr. COX. If the gentleman will refer to section 6, he will find the principle settled there that the very foundation of the deed lies in the decision of the Commissioners. Now, when they pass upon the question and decide that it is a valid deed, how is the other party going to get into any court to have that action revised or reversed?

Mr. HEPBURN. Mr. Chairman, I think the gentleman has not read section 6 carefully. It provides-

That the said Commissioners shall not convey any property sold for taxes if they shall discover, before the conveyance, that the sale was, for any cause, invalid and ineffectual to give title to the property sold.

That is all.

Mr. COX. That is, if they discover that there is a defect in the sale, they shall so decide and refuse to convey the property? Now, will not that be a judicial decision?

Mr. HEPBURN. No; but there may be defects in it that they do not discover. They are prohibited by this section only when they do discover defects in the sale.

Mr. RICHARDSON. I think that provision is only directory, and that the action of the Commissioners would be subject to

Mr. COX. It is not directory.
Mr. HULICK. Mr. Chairman, I do not object to the amendment of the gentleman from Iowa.

The amendment of Mr. Hepburn was agreed to.
Mr. DOCKERY. Mr. Chairman, I move to amend section 7, page 7, line 17, by adding after the word "dollar" the words "and twenty cents" twenty cents."

Mr. HULICK. Mr. Chairman, I do not know that I have any objection to that amendment, but I can not see any reason for it.

Mr. DOCKERY. That is the price that is now fixed by law, and it is necessary in order to reimburse the District treasury.

The amendment was agreed to.
Mr. DOCKERY. Mr. Chairman, I offer a further amendment. The amendment was read, as follow:

Strike out all after the word "of," in line 19, section 7, to the word "up," in the same line, and insert "two clerks at the rate of $1,200 per annum each;" so that it will read "a sum sufficient to pay the salaries of two clerks at the rate of $1,200 per annum each."

Mr. HULICK. The gentleman will remember that in the first section of the bill, at his suggestion, a provision for two clerks at an annual salary of $1,200 each was stricken out, and the Commis-an annual salary of $1,200 each was stricken out, and the Commissioners were authorized to appoint sufficient clerical force.

Mr. DOCKERY. Yes.

Mr. HULICK. Then why do you now propose this amendment?

Mr. DOCKERY. For the reason that it is necessary to provide for carrying forward this work until the regular appropriation bill shall become available, on the 1st of July.

Mr. HULICK. Then why not use here the language you suggested before and say "sufficient clerical force"?

Mr. DOCKERY. In that case you would have to insert the amount $700 or $800.

Mr. DOCKERY. In that case you would have to insert the amount, $700 or $800.

Mr. HULICK. You might put it in that way.

Mr. DOCKERY. We might make an appropriation of $700 to pay the salaries of clerks up to the beginning of the next fiscal year, but I think the amendment I have proposed will accomplish the object quite as well.

Mr. BABCOCK. Mr. Chairman, I move that the committee

The motion was agreed to.

The committee accordingly rose; and the Speaker having resumed the chair, Mr. Dalzell, from the Committee of the Whole, reported that they had had under consideration bills of the following titles and had directed him to report them severally to the House with recommendations, as follows:

A bill (H. R. 8010) to authorize a survey for the construction of a bridge across the Eastern Branch of the Potomac River, etc.—with the recommendation that it do pass.

A bill (H. R. 8499)—with the recommendation that as amended

A bill (H. R. 4149)—with the recommendation that it lie on the

DISTRICT BILLS PASSED.

Bills of the following titles, reported from the Committee of the Whole with amendments, were taken up, the amendments agreed to, and the bills as amended ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and they were accordingly read the third time,

A bill (H. R. 8010) to authorize a survey for construction of a bridge across the Eastern Branch of the Potomac River in line with Massachusetts avenue extended eastward; and

A bill (H. R. 8499) in relation to taxes and tax sales in the District of Columbia.

On motion of Mr. BABCOCK, a motion to reconsider the vote by which the two bills last named were passed was laid on the table.

By unanimous consent, the bill (H. R. 4149) relating to tax sales was laid on the table.

GEORGE W. WATSON.

Mr. BABCOCK. I call up for consideration the bill (H. R. 4279) to cure the title to certain real estate in the District of Columbia. The bill was read, as follows:

to cure the title to certain real estate in the District of Columbia. The bill was read, as follows:

Whereas George W. Watson, of Washington, in the District of Columbia, on or about October 2, 1871, purchased of one Samuel Cross lots 7 and 8, in square 996, in Washington, in the District of Columbia, paying for the same in full and receiving a deed in fee simple therefor from said Samuel Cross and wife; and said George W. Watson, ever since the purchase of said premises in 1871, has been in possession thereof and occupying the same with his family as his home; and

Whereas the said George W. Watson, and those under whom he claims title to said property, have had peaceable and uninterrupted possession of the same from time immemorial, and since before the laying out of the city of Washington, and have a continuous record chain of title to the same by deeds in fee simple from December 4, 1822; but prior to the year 1822 the title thereto is in the United States, and by some inadvertence the conveyance thereof to one William Prout, who conveyed the same in 1822 to one William Jones, through whom said Watson and his grantors claim title, was never placed on record and has become lost, and therefore, notwithstanding said long occupancy by said Watson and his grantors for a period of more than seventy-three years, a cloud rests upon said title; and

Whereas said Watson has become advanced in years and is infirm, having been confined for six months as a prisoner of war, wounded three times, and lost a leg near the hip in battles as a Union soldier during a service in the Federal armies from the spring of 1861 to November 14, 1864, when he was discharged on account of loss of leg near the hip; said property is his home and all that he has, and by reason of said ancient cloud upon said title he can not sell or borrow money on the same. He purchased the same in good faith, and did not learn of said cloud until long after he had bought and paid therefore.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the

The amendments reported by the committee were read, as follows:

Strike out all of the preamble that follows the title, down to line 1. In line 3, substitute for the words "quitclaims and releases" the words quitclaim and release."

Mr. SHANNON. Mr. Speaker, I ask the reading of the report accompanying this bill, which will, I think, give the House all the information necessary.

The report (by Mr. Shannon) was read, as follows:

The report (by Mr. Shannon) was read, as follows:

The Committee on the District of Columbia, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 4279) to cure the title to certain real estate in the District of Columbia, submit the following report:

In accordance with the provisions of the act of Congress of July 10, 1790, three commissioners were appointed by the President to lay out the city of Washington, and in 1791, in consideration of the great benefit they expected to derive from having the Federal city upon their lands, the original proprietors donated to the United States certain lots in each square.

The first mention found in the records of the square referred to in H. R. 4279 is under the date of December 3, 1793. It is there designated as bounded by certain streets and squares. The lots in this square were not then numbered, but by a verbal agreement made afterwards certain portions of the square were to be donated to the United States by the proprietors. In 1899 this agreement was carried into effect, and the square numbered 996 was then for the first time subdivided into lots, and among those donated and assigned to the United States were the two lots mentioned in this bill, numbered 7 and 8.

to the United States were the two lots mentioned in this bill, numbered 7 and 8.

This is the first clear record we have of these lots, and here we find them assigned to the United States.

In October, 1871, George W. Watson purchased these lots, after having had the records carefully searched, and after being furnished with an abstract of title certifying that the same was good and sufficient. Three years later, in 1874, he learned for the first time that there was a possibility that his title to the lots was not good, since an entry had been found in some of the earlier records showing that the lots had been assigned to the United States in 1809.

Another more careful investigation of the records was then made, and the title was easily traced back to 1822, showing that the owner of the lots at that time was William Prout, one of the original proprietors. Continuing the search, nothing further was found till, under the date of August 4, 1809, it was discovered that the same William Prout had assigned these lots to the United States.

Thus it appears that William Prout first assigned these lots to the United search, nothing further was found till, under the date of August 4, 1809, it was discovered that the same William Prout had assigned these lots to the United States.

Thus it appears that William Prout first assigned these lots to the United States in 1809, and again assigned them to other parties in 1822; that the lots have remained ever since in the hands of private parties, having been sold and transferred again and again, the parties in possession continuing to pay taxes on them to the Government down to the present time, a period of seventy-five years, and that the United States have never asserted any title whatever to the property and do not to-day. The published reports of the Government officials in charge of the public grounds do not include square 996 among the properties enumerated as belonging to the United States.

The only reasonable explanation of the discrepancy in the earlier records regarding the title of these lots is that they were reassigned by the United States to William Prout some time after 1809, and before 1822 when, as stated, he assigned them a second time; and as it is a well-authenticated fact that many of the records of titles in the District of Columbia were destroyed by fire about the year 1814, it need not be surprising that positive proof of such reassignment is wanting. Such records as do exist, however, of that early period in the history of the city, show clearly that there were many reassignments of lots between the original proprietors and the Government before the final division of the squares and lots was arranged to the mutual satisfaction of both parties.

In view of the peculiar facts surrounding this case, the committee are unanimously of the opinion that the relief asked for in this bill should be granted. In their judgment the facts that the purchase of these lots was undoubtedly made in perfect good faith; that improvements have been made upon them; that taxes have been paid upon them to the United States for a continuous period of seventy-five years, and that t words "quitclaim and release."

Mr. SHANNON. Mr. Speaker, as stated in the report which has just been read, George W. Watson and those under whom he claims title to these lots have had peaceable and uninterrupted possession of the same for the period of seventy-five years; that is, the records show a continuous, unbroken chain of title since the year 1822, when William Prout, one of the original proprietors of the lands on which the city of Washington was founded, conveyed this property to one William Jones. And if the earlier record of 1808, referred to in the report, only showed an assignment to a private individual instead of to the United States there would of course he no necessity for the relief which Mr. Watson ment to a private individual instead of to the United States there would of course be no necessity for the relief which Mr. Watson seeks under this bill. As it is, however, the cloud resting upon his title makes it impossible for him either to sell or negotiate a loan upon the property—a very great hardship, indeed, considering that all he has in the world has been invested in these lots and the improvements made upon them.

There are numerous precedents which may be cited showing There are numerous precedents which may be cited showing that Congress has frequently granted relief in cases exactly similar; but I will only refer to one, since the report which accompanied the bill in that case speaks of the destruction by fire in 1814 of the records of titles in the District. As it is very short, I ask for the reading in my time of Report No. 4016, accompanying H. R. 10991, which passed the Forty-ninth Congress.

The Clerk read as follows:

The Committee on the District of Columbia, to whom was referred House bill 10991, submit the following report:

There is a defect in the record title of the lot mentioned in the bill because of the fact that the records of titles in the District were destroyed by fire about the year 1814.

The persons whose relief is contemplated by this bill have paid the taxes on the property for more than thirty years, and are clearly entitled to the same; and as the United States has no just claim, your committee report the bill back to the House, with the recommendation that it do pass.

Mr. SHANNON. I desire to say further, Mr. Speaker, that the bill now before the House was referred to the Commissioners of the District and by them referred to the District attorney for examination and report. That report finds the facts to be substantially the same as set forth in the report of the committee, and recommends the bill to the favorable consideration of Congress. I ask that the report be read in my time for the information of the House.

The Clerk read as follows:

The Clerk read as follows:

OFFICE OF THE ATTORNEY DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA, Washington, February 8, 1896.

GENTLEMEN: I have examined House bill 4279 (Fifty-fourth Congress, first session) to cure the title to certain real estate in the District of Columbia, which you referred to me for examination and report.

From an abstract of title to lots 7 and 8 in square 996 in Washington City, prepared by Mr. J. T. Cull, a member of the bar, and one of our leading examiners, it appears that in the division between the United States and the original proprietors, these lots were assigned to the United States; that in 1822 William Prout, one of the original proprietors, made a ninety-nine-year lease of part of lot 8, which was afterwards assented to by the other original proprietors. This would seem to indicate that the lots were reassigned by the United States to the original proprietors. From 1822 down to the present these lots appear to have been dealt with as private property. They have been assessed for taxes in the name of private individuals, and the United States does not appear to have ever asserted any claim to them.

As no statute of limitations bars the United States, it is necessary, in order to perfect Mr. Watson's title, to have the United States either release its claim, or disclaim any interest in the property.

The history of the title as shown by the above abstract bears out the statement in the preamble to the bill.

I see no objection to the passage of the bill, and for that reason, I think it is entitled to your favorable consideration. The bill is herewith returned.

Very respectfully,

S. T. THOMAS, Attorney District of Columbia.

Hon. COMMISSIONERS, ETC.,

The amendments reported by the committee were agreed to.
The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.
On motion of Mr. SHANNON, a motion to reconsider the last vote was laid on the table.

WASHINGTON AND GLEN ECHO RAILROAD.

Mr. BABCOCK. I call up the bill (H. R. 9704) to authorize the Washington and Glen Echo Railroad Company to obtain a right of way and construct tracks into the District of Columbia 600 feet. The bill was read, as follows:

Beit enacted, etc., That the Washington and Glen Echo Railroad Company, a corporation organized under the laws of the State of Maryland and operating a street railway in said State, the eastern terminus being at or near the northern boundary of the District of Columbia in Chevy Chase, be, and said corporation is hereby, authorized and empowered to obtain a right of way and construct its road and lay double tracks thereon into the District of Columbia a distance of 600 feet, and no farther, from the point in the boundary line of the District where said railway extended crosses the boundary line of the District and from said point on a line across the Columbia boulevard, thence on private property to a point in Connecticut avenue extended, on a route to be approved by the Commissioners of the District of Columbia, said corporation to have full power and authority to operate cars upon said road for the purpose of its traffic; said corporation to use electric motive power in propelling its cars.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

TELEGRAPHIC AND ELECTRIC-LIGHT FACILITIES.

Mr. BABCOCK. Mr. Speaker, I call up for present consideration the joint resolution (H. Res. 228) providing for additional telegraphic and electric-light facilities in the city of Washington, District of Columbia, during the inaugural ceremonies on the 4th day of March, 1897.

The joint resolution was read, as follows:

Resolved, etc., That the Commissioners of the District of Columbia be, and they are hereby, authorized to permit the extension of overhead wires into the Pension building and to such other points as shall be deemed suitable and convenient for use in connection with the parade and other inaugural purposes, the said wires to be taken down within ten days after the conclusion of the ceremonies on the 4th day of March, A. D. 1897.

Mr. BABCOCK. I ask a vote on the resolution. The joint resolution was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

BUILDING FOR DAUGHTERS OF THE AMERICAN REVOLUTION.

Mr. BABCOCK. Mr. Speaker, I desire to say that I have in my hand House bill No. 10023, being a bill setting apart a plot of public ground in the city of Washington, in the District of Columbia, for memorial purposes, under the auspices of the National Society of the Daughters of the American Revolution, which was reported by the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, but by an error was placed upon the Calendar as having been reported by the Committee on the District of Columbia. It is a bill that might properly have been considered by either committee, and I am requested by the gentleman in charge of that bill to call it up, as it is on the Calendar reported from this committee. I ask for the consideration of the bill, and move that the House resolve itself into Committee of the Whole to consider it.

Mr. DOCKERY. I reserve the point of order.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will examine the rule and see whether under the circumstances it is broad enough to cover the motion of the gentleman from Wisconsin. What was the gentleman's statement?

tleman's statement?

Mr. BABCOCK. It is, Mr. Speaker, that the bill is on the Calendar as having been reported from the Committee on the District of Columbia, but, as a matter of fact, it was reported by the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

Mr. DOCKERY. Mr. Speaker, I make the point of order that this bill was not reported by the Committee on the District of Columbia, and is not in order under the rule.

The SPEAKER. The Chair thinks it is not in order, but will examine the rule.

Mr. STEELE. Why, Mr. Speaker, if they can call up a bill reported from the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, they might call up one reported from the Military Committee or any other committee.

The SPEAKER. The Chair wants to see how broad the language of the rule is.

Mr. BABCOCK. This is a matter, as I have already said, that might come before either committee.

Mr. STEELE. But it did not.

The SPEAKER. The Chair thinks the rule applies exclusively to business reported by the Committee on the District of Columbia.

Mr. MORSE. Mr. Speaker, I rise to a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. MORSE. Is it in order to ask unanimous consent to consider this bull.

sider this bill?

sider this bill?

Mr. STEELE. What is the purpose of the building?

Mr. MORSE. Mr. Speaker, I ask the House to indulge me a word of explanation of this bill. This measure is asked for by the National Society of the Daughters of the American Revolution. As I understand it, they propose to erect in this city a memorial building, to cost, if I remember rightly, something like $200,000. Part of this money has already been raised. All they ask of the Government is to donate to them a site for the building. The bill, as you see, is carefully drawn, and the land reverts to the Government in the event it should ever cease to be used for the patriotic purposes indicated in the bill. The building is to be a museum of antiquities connected with the American Revolution, and to contain a hall for the meeting of this patriotic society. The land asked for is unimproved land, near the Bureau society. The land asked for is unimproved land, near the Bureau society. The land asked for is unimproved land, near the Bureau of Engraving and Printing.

The building, Mr. Speaker, will be an architectural ornament to the city, as well as a memorial to the men and women of that far-off time who laid here broad and deep the foundations of civil and religious liberty; a building to tell to coming generations that the Daughters of the American Revolution are not ungrateful or unmindful of the valor and patriotism of the men and women who founded this Government. Mr. Speaker, I can not conceive that any gentleman could object to the use of public land in this capital city for such a patriotic purpose.

I hope the gentleman will withdraw his objection and give to the House an opportunity to consider this bill.

Those the gentieman will withdraw his objection and give to the House an opportunity to consider this bill.

Mr. BLUE. Mr. Speaker, I am opposed to the use of our public parks for any other purpose than that for which they were originally set aside, and I therefore object.

Mr. MORSE. But this is not a park. It is only a piece of unoccupied and unimproved ground down near the Bureau of Engraving and Printing.

graving and Printing.

Mr. BLUE. It is a part of a public space intended for a very different purpose.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will submit the proposition formally to the House. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Massachusetts?

Mr. BLUE. I object.
Mr. MORSE. These Daughters of the American Revolution will get after you for objecting to their bill.
Mr. BABCOCK. The Committee on the District of Columbia has no further business to present to-day.

CANALS BETWEEN THE GREAT LAKES AND THE OCEAN.

The SPEAKER laid before the House the following message from the President of the United States; which was read by the

To the Senate and House of Representatives:

I transmit herewith the report of Messrs. James B. Angell, of Michigan; John E. Russell, of Massachusetts, and Lyman E. Cooley, of Illinois, who were appointed commissioners, under the authority of a law passed March 2, 1895, to make inquiry and report, after conference with such similar commissioners as might be appointed on behalf of Great Britain or the Dominion of Canada, concerning the feasibility of the construction of such canals as will enable vessels engaged in ocean commerce to pass between the Great Lakes and the Atlantic Ocean, and the most convenient location and probable cost of such canals, together with other facts and information in said act specified relating to their construction and use.

The Commissioners have prosecuted the work assigned them with great zeal and intelligence, resulting in the collection of a mass of information embodied in their report and its accompanying exhibits which is of great importance and interest as related to the project subjected to their examination.

embodied in their report and its accompanying exhibits which is of great importance and interest as related to the project subjected to their examination.

The advantages of direct and unbroken water transportation of the products of our Western States and Territories from convenient points of shipment to our seaboard ports are plainly palpable. The report of the Commissioners contains, in my opinion, demonstration of the feasibility of securing such transportation, and gives ground for the anticipation that better and more uninterrupted commerce, through the plan suggested, between the great West and foreign ports, with the increase of national prosperity which must follow in its train, will not long escape American enterprise and activity.

It will be observed that the report of the Commissioners, though as comprehensive as the time and facilities at their disposal permitted, does not definitely deal with the cost of the work they were called upon to consider, and omits some of the other details related to it. Thus far they have labored without compensation, and a part of the small sum appropriated for the payment of their expenses still remains unexpended.

I suggest to the Congress the propriety of making economical provision for such further prosecution of their work as will more fully develop the information necessary to an exact and complete understanding of this interesting and important subject.

GROVER CLEVELAND.

GROVER CLEVELAND.

EXECUTIVE MANSION, January 18, 1897.

The message, with the accompanying documents, was referred to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce, and ordered to be printed.

CONTESTED-ELECTION CASE-YOST VS. TUCKER, TENTH DISTRICT OF VIRGINIA.

Mr. McCALL of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, I desire to give notice that on Wednesday, after the reading of the Journal, I shall call up the contested-election case of Yost vs. Tucker, from the Tenth district of Virginia.

Mr. WILLIAM A. STONE. May I ask the gentleman when that case was reported?

Mr. McCALL of Massachusetts.

Mr. McCALL of Massachusetts. The case was reported near the end of the session last summer.

Mr. WILLIAM A. STONE. What was the report in that case?

Mr. WILLIAM A. STONE. What was the report in that case?
Mr. McCALL of Massachusetts. The report of the majority was in favor of the sitting member, Mr. TUCKER.
Mr. WILLIAM A. STONE. How many of these cases does the committee intend to call up that have not been disposed of?
Mr. McCALL of Massachusetts. That is the only case from the committee of which I am a member that has not been disposed of.
Those is however one other near from Viscoiis which will be There is, however, one other case from Virginia, which will be a short case.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE.

By unanimous consent, leave of absence was granted as follows: To Mr. Howell, for ten days, on account of sickness. To Mr. Truman H. Aldrich, for six days, on account of important business.

To Mr. GOODWYN, indefinitely, on account of important busi-

To Mr. McMillin, for one week.

*

To Mr. Spencer, for ten days, on account of important business. To Mr. Linney, for seven days, on account of important business. And then, on motion of Mr. Payne (at 4 o'clock and 7 minutes p. m.), the House adjourned.

EXECUTIVE COMMUNICATIONS, ETC.

Under clause 2 of Rule XXIV, the following executive communications were taken from the Speaker's table and referred as

A letter from the secretary of the Deep Water Ways Commission, transmitting a report of Deep Water Ways Commission at Detroit, Mich., December 18-22, 1896—to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce, and ordered to be printed.

A letter from the assistant clerk of the Court of Claims, transmitting a copy of the findings filed by the court in the cases of Abner T. Fuller and Samuel W. Carson, administrators, against The United States—to the Committee on War Claims, and ordered to be printed.

A letter from the president of the Capital Traction Company, transmitting its report for the year ending December 31, 1896—to the Committee on the District of Columbia, and ordered to be printed.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES ON PUBLIC BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS.

Under clause 2 of Rule XIII, bills and resolutions were severally reported from committees, delivered to the Clerk, and referred to the several Calendars therein named, as follows:

Mr. MEIKLEJOHN, from the Committee on the Public Lands, to which was referred the bill of the Senate (S. 3328) entitled "Au act to amend an act entitled 'An act to repeal the timber-culture laws, and for other purposes,'" reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 2540); which said bill and report were referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union were referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. FISCHER, from the Committee on Indian Affairs, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 9571) authorizing the Galveston and Great Northern Railway Company to construct and operate a railway through the Indian Territory, and for other purposes, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 2541); which said bill and report were referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. SCRANTON, from the Committee on the Territories, to which was referred the bill of the Senate (S. 2555) entitled "An act to authorize the Secretary of the Treasury to issue leases of certain islands in Alaska for the breeding of foxes, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 2544); which said bill and report were referred to the House Calendar.

Mr. GILLET of New York, from the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 9861) for the erection of a public building at Lockport, N. Y., reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 2545); which said bill and report were referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. FLETCHER, from the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 9799) to amend an act entitled "An act to authorize the Chattanooga Western Railway Company to construct a bridge across the Tennessee River near Chattanooga," giving the said company more time in which to begin and complete said bridge, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 2546); which said bill and report were referred to the House Calendar.

Mr. CUMMINGS, from the Committee on the Library, to which Calendar.

Mr. CUMMINGS, from the Committee on the Library, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 5383) for the purchase of the oil portrait of Mrs. Dolly Madison, by E. F. Andrews, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 2547); which said bill and report were referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES ON PRIVATE BILLS.

Under clause 2 of Rule XIII, Mr. PARKER, from the Committee on Military Affairs, to which was referred the bill (H. R. 2070) for the relief of George W. Spencer, reported the same (Report No. 2542); which said bill and report were referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

CHANGE OF REFERENCE.

Under clause 2 of Rule XXII, committees were discharged from the consideration of the following bills; which were referred as follows:

The bill (H. R. 9874) granting an honorable discharge to William Miller—Committee on Military Affairs discharged, and referred to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

Petition of the Wisconsin National Guard Association, favoring the reorganization of the National Guard and Militia of the United States—Committee on Military Affairs discharged, and referred to the Committee on the Militia the Committee on the Militia.

Petition of the National Guard of Wisconsin unanimously adopted in Milwaukee January 8, 1897, in support of Senate bill 2849, to promote the efficiency of the militia—Committee on Military Affairs discharged, and referred to the Committee on the Militia.

PUBLIC BILLS, MEMORIALS, AND RESOLUTIONS.

Under clause 3 of Rule XXII, bills, resolutions, and memorials of the following titles were introduced and severally referred as follows

By Mr. LOW: A bill (H. R. 10034) to supplement and amend an act entitled "An act for the erection of a new custom-house in the city of New York, and for other purposes," approved March 3, 1891—to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

By Mr. LACEY: A bill (H. R. 10035) to amend the pension laws—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. KIEFER: A bill (H. R. 10036) to incorporate the National Grand Lodge of the Order of the Sons of Hermann—to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

By Mr. BELL of Colorado: A bill (H. R. 10037) ceding the Sugar Loaf Reservoir site, in Lake County, Colo., to the State of Colorado—to the Committee on the Public Lands.

By Mr. McCormick: A bill (H. R. 10038) to regulate the sale of poisons in the District of Columbia-to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

By Mr. WHEELER: A bill (H. R. 10039) granting the right to erect dams to Thurston H. Allen and others—to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

By Mr. HUTCHESON: A bill (H. R. 10057) to provide for an examination and survey of a water route from the mouth of the jetties at the city of Galveston, Tex., and through the ship channel up Buffalo Bayou to the city of Houston, Tex., and appropriating money therefor—to the Committee on Rivers and Har-

By Mr. FISCHER: A joint resolution (H. Res. 233) directing the Secretary of War to submit estimates for work upon the chan-nels in Jamaica and Canarsie bays—to the Committee on Rivers

By Mr. PERKINS: A joint resolution (H. Res. 234) providing for the distribution of the maps and atlases of the United States Geological Survey—to the Committee on Printing.

By Mr. WASHINGTON: A joint resolution (H. Res. 235) to provide for the expenses of the Tennessee centennial commissioners from the District of Columbia-to the Committee on Appro-

By Mr. McCORMICK: A resolution (House Res. No. 495) relative to the widening and deepening the channel of the East River on the eastern side, at Ravenswood, Long Island, N. Y., at or near Rainey's cofferdam—to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

PRIVATE BILLS, ETC.

Under clause 1 of Rule XXII, private bills of the following titles were presented and referred as follows:

By Mr. ANDREWS: A bill (H. R. 10040) granting an increase of pension to George W. Ferree—to the Committee on Invalid

By Mr. BLUE: A bill (H. R. 10041) granting a pension to Malinda Draper—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 10042) granting a pension to Florence E.

Wilber—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 10043) removing charge of desertion from the record of Reuben Randall—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Also, a bill (H. R. 10044) granting a pension to Josiah C. Ury—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 10045) granting a pension to John A. Reeds-to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 10046) removing charge of desertion from record of Abraham W. Crawford—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. BURTON of Ohio: A bill (H. R. 10047) for the relief of the Globe Iron Works, of Cleveland, Ohio-to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. COX: A bill (H. R. 10048) for the relief of the estate of J. E. Brennan, deceased, late of Nashville, Tenn.—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. DOVENER: A bill (H. R. 10049) granting a pension to Nicholas C. Wilson, of Braxton County, W. Va.—to the Committee on Pensions

By Mr. FAIRCHILD: A bill (H. R. 10050) for the relief of Louis Hublitz—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Also, a bill (H. R. 10051) for the relief of John Conway—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. McCALL of Massachusetts: A bill (H. R. 10052) for the relief of Alexander Sutherland-to the Committee on Military Affairs

By Mr. MILES: A bill (H. R. 10053) granting a pension to Leah Jones, widow of John Jones—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. QUIGG: A bill (H. R. 10054) granting an increase of ension to Laura Sprigg Foster-to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. RUSSELL of Connecticut: A bill (H. R. 10055) to correct the military record of Edwin T. Leach—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. WOOD: A bill (H. R. 10056) granting a pension to Martha A. Crooker—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

PETITIONS, ETC.

Under clause 1 of Rule XXII, the following petitions and papers were laid on the Clerk's desk and referred as follows:

By Mr. BELL of Colorado: Petition of soldiers of Dolores County, Colo., in support of House bill No. 9209, granting a serv-ice pension to honorably discharged soldiers of the late war—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. BLUE: Papers accompanying House bill granting a pension to Florence E. Wilber—to the Committee on Invalid

Also, papers to accompany House bill granting a pension to Malinda Draper—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, papers to accompany House bill granting a pension to Josiah C. Ury—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, papers to accompany House bill granting a pension to John A. Reeds—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, papers to accompany House bill to remove the charge of desertion against Reuben Randall-to the Committee on Military

Also, papers to accompany House bill to correct the military record of Abraham W. Crawford—to the Committee on Military Affairs

By Mr. BURTON of Ohio: Resolution of the Lake Carriers' Association, in regard to gas buoys on the Great Lakes-to the Committee on Appropriations.

By Mr. DALZELL: Petition of J. P. Henderson and others, of Pittsburg, Pa., praying for favorable action on House bill No. 4566, relating to mail matter, and Senate bill No. 1675, prohibiting the transportation of obscene matter—to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce. By. Mr. DOVENER: Petition of N. W. Lloyd and 19 other citizens of Braxton County, W. Va., asking the passage of a special act to pension Nicholas C. Wilson—to the Committee on Invalid

Pensions.

By Mr. HARMER: Petition of Rachel P. Leys, Joseph Foulke, M. D., and others, of Philadelphia, Pa., praying for favorable action on House bill No. 4566, relating to second-class mail matter, and Senate bill No. 1675, prohibiting the transportation of obscene matter by any agency-to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce

By Mr. HEMENWAY: Resolution of the Pastoral Association of Evansville, Ind., praying for the passage of legislation of various kinds—to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Com-

By Mr. HULL: Petition of H. Catley, captain, United States Army, retired, of Syracuse, N. Y., in relation to Senate bill for the readjustment of the accounts of certain army officers, and as relating to his military record—to the Committee on Military

By Mr. LACEY: Petition of Rev. Fred Arnfort and others, of Keokuk, Iowa; also petition of Mary L. Allen and others, of Richland, Iowa, praying for protection from intoxicating liquors in the Territory of Alaska—to the Committee on Alcoholic Liquor Traffic.

By Mr. LITTLE: Petition of John B. Bruno, Elizabeth Vraux, and Mary Moose, of the Citizens band of Pottowatomie Indians, of Pottowatomie County, Okla., relating to land patents under act of May 23, 1872—to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

By Mr. OTJEN: Resolution of officers of the Wisconsin National Guard, favoring the passage of Senate bill No. 1169, entitled "An act authorizing the Secretary of War to issue Springfield rifles to each State and Territory, for the National Guard thereof, in exchange for other rifles now held"—to the Committee on the Militia. Militia.

By Mr. REYBURN: Petition of Falls Methodist Episcopal Church, of Philadelphia, Pa., praying for favorable action on House bill No. 4566, also Senate bill No. 1675, to prohibit the transportation of obscene matter—to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

By Mr. RINAKER: Petition of B. P. McDaniel, of the Sixty-

By Mr. RINAKER: Petition of B. P. McDaniel, of the Sixty-third United States Colored Infantry, residing in Madison County, Ill., for relief—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. RUSSELL of Connecticut: Papers to accompany House bill to correct the military record of Edwin T. Leach—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Also, petition of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union of Norwich, Conn., favoring the passage of House bill No. 3203 and sundry other bills—to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. WOOD: Petition of Benjamin V. Carey, of Robinson, Ill., in behalf of Martha A. Crooker, for a pension—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. UPDEGRAFF: Papers of N. N. Jones, warden of Iowa

By Mr. UPDEGRAFF: Papers of N. N. Jones, warden of Iowa State penitentiary, relating to House bill No. 6116 and its application to the transportation of goods manufactured by convict labor—to the Committee on Labor.

Also, petition of the Iowa Academy of Sciences, protesting against the passage of Senate bill No. 1552, for the further prevention of cruelty to animals in the District of Columbia—to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

Also, petition of the Regulist church of West Union Javas for Committee on the District of Columbia.

Also, petition of the Baptist church of West Union, Iowa, for the prohibition of the sale of intoxicating liquors in Government buildings—to the Committee on Alcoholic Liquor Traffic.

Also, petitions of the Wesleyan Methodist Church and of the Baptist Church of West Union, Iowa, to raise the age of protection for girls to 18 years in the District of Columbia and Territories—to the Committee on the Judiciary.

SENATE.

TUESDAY, January 19, 1897.

Prayer by the Chaplain, Rev. W. H. MILBURN, D. D. JOHN P. JONES, a Senator from the State of Nevada, appeared

The Secretary proceeded to read the Journal of yesterday's proceedings, when, on motion of Mr. GALLINGER, and by unanimous consent, the further reading was dispensed with.

CERTIFICATION OF ELECTORS.

The VICE-PRESIDENT laid before the Senate a communica-tion from the Secretary of State, transmitting, in pursuance of the provisions of the act of February 3, 1887, a certified copy of the final ascertainment of the electors for President and Vice-President for the State of South Dakota; which was ordered to lie on the table.

ANNIE E. NOLAN.

The VICE-PRESIDENT laid before the Senate the amendment of the House of Representatives to the bill (S. 2129) granting an increase of pension to Annie E. Nolan; which was, in line 7, before the word "dollars," to strike out "fifty" and insert "twenty-

Mr. GALLINGER. I move that the Senate nonconcur in the amendment of the House of Representatives, and request a conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses.

The motion was agreed to.

By unanimous consent, the Vice-President was authorized to appoint the conferees on the part of the Senate, and Mr. Gallinger, Mr. Cannon, and Mr. MITCHELL of Wisconsin were appointed.

EULOGIES UPON THE LATE REPRESENTATIVE CRISP.

Mr. GORDON. I wish to announce that in consequence of the absence of some Senators who are expected to participate, the eulogies upon the late Mr. Crisp, formerly Speaker of the House, will be postponed from Thursday until Monday next at 3 o'clock, by the permission of the Senate.

PETITIONS AND MEMORIALS.

Mr. ALLISON presented a memorial of the Iowa Academy of Science, remonstrating against the passage of Senate bill No. 1552, for the further prevention of cruelty to animals in the District of Columbia; which was ordered to lie on the table.

Mr. HALE presented the petitions of Henry B. Cleaves and sundry other citizens of Maine; of the Boston Marine Insurance Company, of Boston, Mass.; of V. C. Brown and sundry other citizens of New York, and of sundry citizens of Baltimore, Md. previous of New York, and of sundry citizens of Baltimore, Md., praying for the establishment of a light-house near the broken part of Pol-lock Rip Shoals, at the northeastern entrance of Nantucket Shoals; which were referred to the Committee on Commerce.

which were referred to the Committee on Commerce.

Mr. CALL presented the memorial of H. F. Smith, publisher of the Pensacola Daily Times, of Pensacola, Fla., remonstrating against the passage of the so-called Loud bill, relating to secondclass mail matter; which was referred to the Committee on PostOffices and Post-Roads.

Mr. TUDDIE processed to the Committee on Post-

Mr. TURPIE presented a memorial of 61 citizens of Indianapolis, Ind., praying for the passage of the so-called Loud bill, relating to second-class mail matter; which was referred to the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads.

Mr. McMILLAN presented the memorial of Herbert M. Locke and 500 other citizens of the District of Columbia, remonstrating against the passage of Senate joint resolution 187, relating to the laying of electric subways in the District of Columbia; which was referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia was referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

He also presented the petitions of the Gorsuch Methodist Episcopal Church; of the St. Luke's Baptist Church, of Brightwood; of the Baptist Ministers' Colored Union, and of the Shiloh Colored Baptist Church, all in the city of Washington, D. C., praying for the enactment of legislation raising the age of protection for girls in the District of Columbia to 18 years; which were referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

Mr. LODGE presented a petition of Branch No. 1, American Workmen's Protective League, and 161 citizens of Brooklyn, N. Y., praying for the enactment of legislation restricting immigration; which was referred to the Committee on Immigration.

praying for the enactment of legislation restricting immigration; which was referred to the Committee on Immigration.

He also presented a petition of the West Lynn Shoe Company, of Massachusetts, and the petition of Thomas E. Emerson's Sons, of Massachusetts, praying for the passage of the so-called Torrey bankruptcy bill; which were ordered to lie on the table.

Mr. SEWELL presented a memorial of the New Jersey Horticultural Society, represented in the New Jersey Horticultural Society represented in the New Jersey Horticultural Represented in the New Jersey Horticultural Represented in the New Jersey Horticultural Represented in cultural Society, remonstrating against any appropriation being made providing for the free distribution of seed; which was re-

He also presented resolutions adopted by General Sedgwick Council, No. 22, Order United American Mechanics, of Newark, N. J., expressing sympathy with the Cubans in their struggle for independence; which were ordered to lie on the table.

He also presented a petition of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union of Salem, N. J., through N. A. Carpenter, president, and Mary E. Hire, corresponding secretary, and a petition of the Union Methodist Episcopal Church of Camden, N. J., through John S. Heisler, pastor, and John J. Rice, clerk, praying for the passage of Senate bill No. 2485, to further protect the first day of the week as a day of rest in the District of Columbia; which were referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

He also presented a petition of sundry citizens of Elizabeth N. J.

He also presented a petition of sundry citizens of Elizabeth, N. J., praying that immediate steps be taken by the Government to obtain reparation for injuries inflicted on Armenians in Turkey; which was referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

He also presented a memorial of the Medical Society of New Jersey, remonstrating against the passage of Senate bill No. 1552, for the further prevention of cruelty to animals in the District of Columbia; which was ordered to lie on the table.

He also presented the petition of A. M. Taylor, of Vineland, N. J., praying for the enactment of legislation to amend the postal laws relating to second-class mail matter, and also prohibiting interstate transportation of obscene matter through the mails; which was referred to the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-

Mr. CAMERON presented memorials of the publishers of the Quakertown Free Press; the Souderton Independent; the Saxton Herald; the Conference Journal; the Palmyra Herald; Montgomery Transcript; the Young Folks' Catholic Weekly, of Philadelphia; the Hazleton Journal; the Daily Record, of Mahanoy City; the Daily Standard, of Hazleton; the Tocsin, of Black Lick Stations Feed Home and Condence of Philadelphia Back. delphia; the Hazleton Journal; the Daily Record, of Mahanoy City; the Daily Standard, of Hazleton; the Tocsin, of Black Lick Station: Food, Home, and Garden, of Philadelphia; Der Neutraliot, of Shippock; the Wayne Independent, of Honesdale; the Home Queen and New Ideas, of Philadelphia; the Lykens Register; the News Item, of Middleburg; the Whip and Spur, of Philadelphia; the Bradford Daily Record; the Republican Advocate, of Wellsboro; the Medical World, of Philadelphia; the Philipsburg Ledger, the Christian Standard, of Philadelphia; the Hazleton Sentinel; the Millers' Review, of Philadelphia; the Middletown Press; the Methodist Herald, of Newport; the American Journal of Photography, of Philadelphia; the Advocate, of Dallastown; the Church Advocate, of Harrisburg; the Medical Bulletin; the Universal Medical Journal; the York Daily; the York Weekly; the Commonwealth, of Philadelphia; the Forest Republican, of Tionesta: the Proco Latinus, of Philadelphia; the Sledge Hammer, of Meadville; the Church News; the Reynoldsville Volunteer; the Conoquenessing Valley News; the Sun, of West Newton; the Denver Press; the Chester County Post, of Westchester; the Public Democrat, of Westchester; the Democrat, of Newcastle; the County Journal, of Loganton; the Vienybe Lietuvniky, of Plymouth; the Sun, of Liverpool; of sundry citizens of Philadelphia; the American Slavonic Gazette, of Pittsburg; the News, of Newcastle; the Daily Local, of Ashland; the Watchman, of Newton; the Post, of Middleburg; the Weekly Record, of Brockwayville; the Daily Democrat. of Johnstown: the Times, of Hawley, the Franklip Daily Local, of Ashiand; the Watchman, of Newton; the Post, of Middleburg; the Weekly Record, of Brockwayville; the Daily Democrat, of Johnstown; the Times, of Hawley; the Franklin Repository, of Chambersburg; the Independent Messenger, of Indiana; the American Law Register and Review, of Philadelphia; the Record, of Waynesboro; the Echo, of Erie; the Daily Courier, of Blairsville; the North Philadelphia Tribune, of Bridesburg; the Bulletin, of Hyndman; the Tribune Republican of Mondrille. of Blarsville; the North Philadelphia Tribune, of Bridesburg; the Bulletin, of Hyndman; the Tribune-Republican, of Meadville; the Review, of Marietta; the Pulpit and the Preacher's Helper; the Journal, of Huntingdon; the Times, of West Newton; the News, of Harrisburg; the Il Vesuvio, of Philadelphia; the Entomological News, of Philadelphia; of J. W. McMaster, of Thurlow; of Howard M. Jenkins, of Philadelphia, all in the State of Pennsylvania, and of the Journal of Kildare, Oklahoma, remonstrating against the passage of the so-called Lond bill relating to second against the passage of the so-called Loud bill, relating to second-class mail matter; which were referred to the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads.

He also presented petitions of the American Railway Literary Union of Philadelphia; of David J. Pearsall, of Mauch Chunk; of Rev. Robert A. McIlwain and sundry other citizens of Philadelphia; of John H. Cramer and sundry other citizens of Philadelphia; of William G. Liebig and sundry other citizens of Philadelphia; of Simon Friedman and sundry other citizens of Philadelphia; of E. J. Brown and sundry other citizens of Philadelphia; of Thomas E. J. Brown and sundry other citizens of Philadelphia; of Thomas Moore, jr., and sundry other citizens of Philadelphia; of Rev. George C. Ewart and sundry other members of the Doylestown Baptist Church; of Dr. Henry Berkowitz and sundry other citizens of Philadelphia; of Byron A. Woods, president of the Philadelphia Conference of the Baptist Ministers; of I. B. Jones, of Philadelphia; of Walter H. Bassett and sundry other citizens, of John M. Calver, of Dr. Joseph Foulke, and of Edward Smith Kelly, of Philadelphia, all in the State of Pennsylvania, praying for the passage of the so-called Loud bill, relating to second-class mail matter; which were referred to the Commit ee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads. and Post-Roads.

He also presented the memorial of Dr. H. C. Wood, of the faculty of the University of Pennsylvania, and the memorial of H. P. Armsby, a director of the Pennsylvania State College, remonstrating against the passage of Senate bill No. 1552, for the further prevention of cruelty to animals in the District of Columbia; which were ordered to lie on the table.

He also presented a petition of the Christian Endeavor Society of Manheim, Pa., praying for the enactment of legislation to pro-hibit the sale of intoxicating liquors in the United States Capitol building; which was referred to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

He also presented the memorial of W. E. Broderick, second vice-president of the National Wholesale Liquor Dealers' Association, of Baltimore, Md., and of the Hannis Distilling Company and sundry other distillers and wholesale liquor dealers of Philadelphia, Pa., remonstrating against the passage of House bill No. 8582, to allow the bottling of distilled spirits in bond; which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

He also presented petitions, in the form of resolutions adopted by the Young Irelanders' Association (Clan na Gael) of Pawtucket, R. I.; of Fairmont Lodge, No. 333, Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, of Philadelphia, Pa., and of the Bronze Club, of Cleveland, Ohio, praying Congress to recognize the independence of Cuba; which were ordered to lie on the table.

Mr. ALDRICH presented a memorial of sundry publishers, news dealers, and booksellers of Rhode Island, remonstrating against the passage of the so-called Loud bill, relating to second-class mail matter; which was referred to the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads.

and Post-Roads.

Mr. BURROWS presented the memorial of H. C. Kudner, publisher of the Lapeer County Democrat, of Lapeer, Mich., and the memorial of Foster Bros., publishers of the Gladwin County Record, of Gladwin, Mich., remonstrating against the passage of the so-called Loud bill, relating to second-class mail matter; which were referred to the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads.

Mr. PROCTOR presented a memorial of the Master Car Builders' Association, of St. Albans, Vt., remonstrating against the adoption of the metric system of weights and measures; which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

was referred to the Committee on Finance.

He also presented two petitions of members of the societies of the Colonial Dames of America, praying that a charter be granted them under the name of the National Society of the Colonial Dames of America; which were referred to the Committee on the

Mr. BRICE presented the memorial of the Weideman Company, Ullman Einstein & Co., Weideman, Holmes & Co., and William Edwards & Co., of Cleveland, Ohio, remonstrating against the passage of House bill No. 8582, to allow the bottling of distilled spirits in bond; which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

He also presented the petition of Rev I. L. Kephart, editor of the Religious Telescope, of Dayton, Ohio, and the petition of Eugene E. Diehl, of Cleveland, Ohio, praying for the enactment of legislation prohibiting the sale of intoxicating liquors in the Capitol building; which were referred to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

He also presented the memorial of C. W. Charles, publisher of the Ohio Chronicle, of Columbus, Ohio, remonstrating against the passage of the so-called Loud bill, relating to second-class mail matter; which was referred to the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads.

He also presented a petition of the Merchants' National Bank, of Toledo, Ohio, and a petition of the Ketcham National Bank, of Toledo, Ohio, praying for the passage of the so-called Loud bill, relating to second-class mail matter; which were referred to the Committee on Post-Offices and Post Roads.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

Mr. GALLINGER, from the Committee on Pensions, to whom were referred the following bills, reported them severally without amendment, and submitted reports thereon:

A bill (S. 1538) granting a pension to Joseph M. Waddell; A bill (H. R. 4490) to restore the name of Ethan A. Sellman to the pension roll; A bill (H. R. 5712) granting increase of pension to John W.

A bill (H. R. 1646) for the relief of Dolly S. Brown; and A bill (H. R. 9592) to amend an act entitled "An act granting a pension to Jesse McMillan," received by the President May 27,

Mr. GALLINGER, from the Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (S. 1647) to increase the pension of Clark W. Harrington, late sergeant of Company I, Ninety-third New York Infantry, reported it with amendments, and submitted a report thereon.

He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 4363) to increase the pension of Joseph J. Hudson, reported it with an amendment, and submitted a report thereon. He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 6247) to grant a pension to Miss Jennie E. Moore, reported it with amendments, and submitted a report thereon.

Mr. PEFFER, from the Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 1018) to increase the pension of Bennett S. Shaug, reported it without amendment, and submitted a report

He also (for Mr. BRICE) from the same committee, to whom was referred the bill (S. 2992) granting a pension to Ellen O'Hara, reported it with an amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred the bill (S. 2975) granting a pension to John Amrein, reported it with an amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

Mr. BRICE, from the Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (8.2908) granting a pension to Franklin Andrews, reported it without amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred the bill (S. 2909) granting a pension to Henry Shafer, reported it with an amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

Mr. MORRILL, from the Committee on Finance, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 596) for the relief of Ellis H. Roberts, reported it without amendment.

Mr. BAKER, from the Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (S. 3329) to increase the pension of George W. Smith, late a captain, Seventh Regiment New Jersey Volunteers, reported it with amendments, and submitted a report thereon.

He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred the bill (S. 2959) granting a pension to Sarah Townsend, reported it with amendments, and submitted a report thereon.

He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 4481) granting an increase of pension to Patsey E. Broaddus, of Marion, Kans., reported it without amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 3380) granting an increase of pension to John R. Row of Toronto, Kans., reported it without amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

Mr. ROACH, from the Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (S. 2713) granting a pension to Miss Mary Hayne, reported it without amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

Mr. SHOUP, from the Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (S. 2177) granting an increase of pension to Henry B. Conway, reported it with an amendment, and submitted a report thereon. port thereon.

He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 5855) granting a pension to Emily Elliott, reported it without amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 1500) granting a pension to George W. Bagley, reported it without amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

Mr. McBRIDE, from the Committee on Public Lands, to whom was referred the amendment submitted by himself on the 13th instant, intended to be proposed to the legislative, executive, and judicial appropriation bill, reported it with amendments, and moved that it be referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and printed which was accorded. and printed; which was agreed to.

Mr. MITCHELL of Wisconsin, from the Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 4267) granting an increase of pension to Gabriel Widmer, reported it without amendment, and submitted a report thereon

He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 4298) granting an increase of pension to Annie Thomp-son, reported it without amendment, and submitted a report

Mr. ALDRICH, from the Committee on Finance, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 1256) for the relief of Henry A. Webb, reported it with an amendment.

Mr. HALE, from the Committee on Naval Affairs, to whom was referred the bill (S. 3492) for the relief of Paymaster James E. Tolfree, United States Navy, reported it without amendment.

He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred the bill (S. 3493) for the relief of Pay Clerk Charles Blake, United States Navy, reported it without amendment.

DISTRICT NAVAL MILITIA.

Mr. HALE. I am directed by the Committee on Naval Affairs, to whom was referred the bill (S. 3355) to provide for organizing a naval reserve battalion in the District of Columbia, to report it with amendments and submit a report thereon. I should like to

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The bill will be read for information.
The Secretary read the bill, and, by unanimous consent, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to its considera-

The amendments of the Committee on Naval Affairs were, in section 1, line 6, after the word "naval," to strike out "reserve;" in section 2, line 1, after the word "naval," to strike out "reserve;" to strike out sections 4, 5, and 6 of the bill; in section 7 [4], line 4, before the word "battalion," to strike out "reserve;" and in section 8 [5], line 2, before the word "battalion," to strike out "reserve." The amendments were agreed to.

Mr. SHERMAN. I listened to the reading of the bill as well as I could with the noise around me. I should like to know who will pay for the service of these volunteers. Is it a voluntary organization?

Mr. HALE. It is entirely voluntary. It is something like the Naval Reserve Militia in the different States. The Government has nothing to do with the payment. In fact, they will receive no pay.

Mr. SHERMAN. There are quite a number of officers named in the bill. Will they receive any pay from the Government?

Mr. HALE. None at all.

Mr. SHERMAN. If it is a mere voluntary naval organization have no objection to the bill, but if it were an addition to the Navy I should object to it.

Mr. HALE. I should certainly object if it were to be any addition to the Navy. It is like the organizations of the different States, which are run entirely by the members themselves, without any salary or pay from the Government.

Mr. SHERMAN. I have no objection to the bill.

Mr. CHANDLER. I should like to ask the Senator from Maine whether the organization is to be anything more than a part of the militia of the District of Columbia?

Mr. HALE. It is to be a part of the militia.

Mr. CHANDLER. It is to be a naval company in addition to the infantry and artillery companies of the District?

Mr. HALE. That is exactly what it is to be. The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendments were concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

The title was amended so as to read: "A bill to provide for organizing a naval battalion in the District of Columbia."

ELLIS H. ROBERTS.

Mr. MORRILL. I ask that the bill (H. R. 596) for the relief of Ellis H. Roberts, reported this morning from the Committee on Finance, be taken up for action at the present time. It proposes to pay Ellis H. Roberts $800.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The bill will be read for information.
The Secretary read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, directed to pay to Ellis H. Roberts, late assistant treasurer of the United States at New York City, N. Y., out of any moneys in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $800, the said sum of money representing a loss incurred in the said office of said assistant treasurer, without default or negligence on his part, and made good to the Government by him.

Mr. MORRHLL. We have a long report made in this case, but the bill is so obviously correct that the committee were unani-mously in favor of reporting it, and I will not ask to have the report read.
The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the bill was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

BILLS INTRODUCED.

Mr. BURROWS introduced a bill (S. 3552) for the relief of the legal representatives of John Roach, deceased; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Claims.

Mr. BERRY introduced a bill (S. 3553) for the relief of the trustees of the Presbyterian church of Dardanelle, Yell County, Ark.; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Claims.

He also introduced a bill (S. 3554) for the relief of the estate of Parkes & Ward, of Yell County, Ark.; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-

Roads.

Mr. ALLEN introduced a bill (S. 3555) to amend an act entitled "An act granting to the Eastern Nebraska and Gulf Railway Company right of way through the Omaha and Winnebago Indian reservations, in the State of Nebraska," by extending the time for the construction of said railway; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

Mr. GALLINGER introduced a bill (S. 3556) granting a pendicular way to be a second to the construction of the committee on Indian Affairs.

sion to Carlton W. Muzzy; which was read twice by its title, and, with the accompanying papers, referred to the Committee on

Mr. TURPIE (for Mr. VOORHEES) introduced a bill (S. 3557) granting a pension to Emma M. Elliott; which was read twice by its title, and, with the accompanying paper, referred to the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. DANIEL (by request) introduced a bill (S. 3558) giving to any State having a claim for expenses incurred in defense of the United States the right to have the same adjudicated by the Supreme Court of the United States; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

He also (by request) introduced a bill (S. 3559) for the relief of the heirs of Jonas P. Levy, deceased; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

Mr. GALLINGER introduced a bill (S. 3560) for the purchase of the oil portrait of Mrs. Dolly Madison, by E. F. Andrews; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on the

Mr. MORGAN introduced a joint resolution (S. R. 191) relative to the improvement of the waterway between Birmingham, Ala., and the Black Warrior River; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Commerce.

AMENDMENTS TO APPROPRIATION BILLS.

Mr. PEFFER submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the sundry civil appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, and ordered to be printed.

Mr. PETTIGREW submitted an amendment intended to be proreferred to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

Mr. BACON submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the sundry civil appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Military Affairs, and ordered to be printed. Mr. SHOUP submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the Indian appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs, and ordered to be printed.

Mr. HOAR submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the sundry civil appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, and ordered to be printed.

INTERNATIONAL MONETARY CONFERENCE.

Mr. CANNON submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the bill (S. 3547) to provide for the representation of the United States by commissioners at any international monetary conference hereafter to be called; which was ordered to lie on the table and to be printed.

PUBLIC BUILDING AT ALTOONA, PA.

Mr. QUAY. I ask the unanimous consent of the Senate to proceed to the consideration of the bill (S. 3543) for a public building at the city of Altoona, Pa., and appropriating money therefor.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill. It directs the Secretary of whose, proceeded to consider the bill. It directs the Secretary of the Treasury to purchase by private sale or secure by condemnation a site for, and cause to be erected thereon, a suitable building, with fireproof vaults therein, for the accommodation of the United States district and circuit courts, post-office, and other Government offices, at the city of Altoona, county of Blair, Pa. The plans, specifications, and full estimate for the building shall be a process of the court of the country of the plans, specifications, and full estimate for the building shall be a process of the court of the country of the co be previously made and approved according to law, and shall not exceed, for the site and building complete, $125,000.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

MONONGAHELA RIVER BRIDGE.

Mr. QUAY. I move to recommit to the Committee on Commerce for further consideration the bill (S. 2898) to authorize the construction of a bridge over the Monongahela River from the city of McKeesport to the township of Mifflin, Allegheny County, Pa. The motion was agreed to.

CONVENTION OF INSTRUCTORS OF THE DEAF.

Mr. McMILLAN. I ask unanimous consent to call up the bill (H. R. 6883) to incorporate the Convention of American Instructors of the Deaf. The bill came over from the House yesterday, ors of the Deaf. The and lies on the table.

and lies on the table.

Mr. COCKRELL. What is the order of business?

Mr. McMILLAN. It is a House bill, and is exactly the same as a Senate bill on the Calendar.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The bill will be read for information.

The Secretary read the bill; and, by unanimous consent, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to its consideration.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

Mr. McMILLAN. I move that the bill (S. 2572) to incorporate the Convention of American Instructors of the Deaf in the District of Columbia, which is on the Calendar, be indefinitely postponed.

The motion was agreed to.

CONFIRMATION OF LAND ENTRIES.

Mr. BERRY and others addressed the Chair. Mr. CULLOM. What is the regular order?

Mr. BERRY. I ask unanimous consent to call up House bill

Mr. CULLOM. I have been waiting for the morning business to be concluded, so that I might call up an appropriation bill; but we seem to be on the Calendar. Mr, BERRY. I hope the Senator from Illinois will not inter-

I ask leave to call up a bill which it will not take two minpose.

ttes to pass.
The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair will state that the Senator from Illinois is entitled to recognition after the morning business is concluded, if he desires it.

Mr. CULLOM. I will not interpose an objection to the bill the Senator from Arkansas wishes to call up; but I wish to state while I am on the floor that the legislative, executive, and judicial appropriation bill has been reported and is now ready for consideration. However, I understand that the Senator from Indiana [Mr. Turpie] desires to take the floor immediately after the routine business, and I am disposed to give him the right of way for the purpose of making his address. I would not like to have the routine business continue all the morning by calling up bills from the Calendar.

Mr. BERRY. I ask the unanimous consent of the Senate at this time to proceed to the consideration of the bill (H. R. 8413) to confirm certain cash entries of public lands.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The bill will be read for information.

The Secretary read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That all entries of the public lands made under the provisions of the act entitled "An act to graduate and reduce the price of the public lands to actual settlers and cultivators," approved August 4, 1854, which are illegal and invalid because of the fact that the lands covered thereby had never been offered for sale, be, and the same are hereby, confirmed, if, upon examination by the Commissioner of the General Land Office, the same are found to be otherwise regular and in compliance with said act and the acts supplemental thereto.

SEC. 2. That all acts or parts of acts in conflict herewith are hereby repealed.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

EDWARD H. MUNSON.

I ask unanimous consent to call up for con-Mr. HAWLEY. sideration the bill (H. R. 4199) to correct the military record of Edward H. Munson, late a private in Company H, Thirty-second New York Regiment of Infantry. It will not take two minutes to pass the bill.

By unanimous consent, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

ELECTRIC SUBWAYS IN THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

Mr. COCKRELL. The joint resolution (S. R. 187) relating to the laying of electric subways in the District of Columbia, introduced by me and reported favorably from the Committee on the District of Columbia by its chairman yesterday, should receive immediate action. It is an important measure, and it is important that it should be acted upon at once. I ask that it may be now taken up and disposed of.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from Missouri asks unanimous consent for the present consideration of the joint resolution indicated by him.

Mr. HILL. That measure will lead to considerable debate. I hope it will not be taken up now.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Objection is interposed to the request of the Senator from Missouri.

Mr. COCKRELL. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of Senate joint resolution No. 187.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair will recognize the Senator from Missouri at the conclusion of morning business.

Mr. COCKRELL. Very well.

PACIFIC RAILROADS.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair lays before the Senate, as a part of the morning business, the resolution of the Senator from Alabama [Mr. Morgan], coming over from a previous day. The resolution will be stated.

The Secretary. A resolution directing the Committee on the Judiciary to inquire and report as to the default of the Central Pacific Railroad Company and the Union Pacific Railroad Com-pany in the payment of bonds issued by the United States in aid of said roads

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the

Mr. MORGAN. I ask unanimous consent that the resolution may go over without prejudice.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Without objection, it will be so ordered.

DIVISIONAL LINE BETWEEN VENEZUELA AND BRITISH GUIANA.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair lays before the Senate the resolution of the Senator from South Dakota [Mr. Pettigrew], coming over from a previous day. The resolution will be stated. The Secretary. A resolution directing the Secretary of State to send to the Senate a statement of the proceedings of the comto send to the Senate a statement of the proceedings of the commission appointed to investigate and report upon the true divisional line between the Republic of Venezuela and British Guiana, etc.

Mr. PETTIGREW. As I do not find the resolution printed and on my desk, I ask to have it lie on the table until to-morrow morning, when I shall call it up for disposition.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. In the absence of objection, it will be so ordered. The morning business is now concluded.

ELECTRIC SUBWAYS IN THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

Mr. COCKRELL. I move that the Senate proceed to the con-Mr. COCKRELL. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the joint resolution (S. R. 187) relating to the laying of electric subways in the District of Columbia.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Missouri that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the joint resolution indicated by him.

Mr. HILL. Let us have the joint resolution read first, before

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The joint resolution will be read.
The SECRETARY. A joint resolution (S. R. 187) relating to the laying of electric subways in the District of Columbia.
Mr. GRAY. I should like to have the joint resolution read at

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The joint resolution will be read. The Secretary read the joint resolution, as follows:

Whereas it is provided by the act of June 11, 1896 (29 Stats., page 401), that no underground electric-lighting wires or conduits therefor shall be laid in the District of Columbia east of Rock Creek, excepting in the extension of the existing electric-lighting service within certain specified territorial limits: and the existing electric-lighting service within certain specified territorial limits; and

Whereas the Senate and House are both investigating, through their respective Committees of the District of Columbia, the subject of the laying of electric subways in the streets, roads, avenues, and alleys of the District of Columbia. as recommended by the Commissioners of the said District in their letter of February 8, 1836, and as provided by Senate bill 2031 and House bill 5920 accompanying said letter: Therefore,

Resolved, etc., That until definite action is taken by Congress regarding the construction of said general subway system it shall be unlawful to open any streets, roads, avenues, or alleys in the District of Columbia for the purpose of laying electrical wires, cables, or conduits therein, excepting in the extension of the existing electric-lighting service, within the territorial limits specified in said act: Provided, however, That in cases where the public interests shall, in the opinion of the Commissioners of the District of Columbia, require an immediate extension of existing service permits may be issued therefor, and also for all necessary house connections, to the United States Electric Lighting Company in the territory lying east of Rock Creek, and to the Potomac Light and Power Company in the territory lying west of Rock Creek.

Mr. HILL. Mr. President, I rise to a parliamentary inquiry. The joint resolution was reported yesterday from the Committee on the District of Columbia, I understand. Is there any report accompanying it?
The VICE-PRESIDENT. There is no report, the Chair is advised.

Mr. FAULKNER. There is no report.

Mr. HILL. Is there any amendment reported by the committee?
The VICE-PRESIDENT. There is no amendment reported to the joint resolution. The question is on agreeing to the motion of the Senator from Missouri to proceed to its consideration.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the joint resolution.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. If no amendment be proposed as in Committee of the Whole, the joint resolution will be reported to the Senate. Mr. HILL.

Mr. President, I desire to hear some reason why this extraordinary joint resolu ion should pass this body.

Mr. COCKRELL. Well, Mr. President, there is nothing extraordinary about it. It gives upon its face a plain A B C statement of the reasons why the streets and alleys in the city of Washington shall not be torn up at the will and pleasure of this or that person until Congress has passed upon the question and has determined upon one subway in which all wires are to be placed. Congress is legislating upon that question. The two committees of the Senate and House on the District of Columbia have the matter before them, and at the last session we prohibited anything of this kind being done until those committees could act upon it. That is the object of the joint resolution.

Mr. HILL. Will the distinguished Senator from Missouri oblige me by pointing out the particular statute passed last year which prevented the very action which he is now seeking to prevent by this proposed legislation? If the act complained of is already prohibited, what is the necessity for this legislation? I pause for a reply, for a reply is appropriate at this particular time.

Why, the very point involved is that there is no legislation which prevents this new company from doing precisely what it is doing.

prevents this new company from doing precisely what it is doing to-day, much to the gratification of the honest people of the District of Columbia. Therefore it is no answer to my inquiry to say that the action now proposed to be stopped has already been legally stopped by previous legislation.

Mr. President, I had hoped that we might have been presented something beyond the mere reading of the joint resolution to convince us that we ought to pass this measure. I had hoped, as there was no report from the Committee on the District of Columbia estimates the indexil the reason for this action for the committee. bia setting forth in detail the reasons for this extraordinary legislation, that some one might rise in his place and vouchsafe to honor us with a brief statement of the reasons for the passage of the joint resolution.

The mere fact that when conduits are laid in the streets the streets are necessarily torn up is no argument why there should be no more electric lighting in the city of Washington. According to the brief statement made here, we must stop this tearing up of our streets until somebody prepares a general system by which such improvement is to be done, and until Congress does so, there must be no more tearing up of the sacred soil of the District of Columbia.

Mr. STEWART. Except by a particular company.
Mr. HILL. Except by a particular monopoly—that is it—except by the monopoly which seems to have the ear of some of the committees of this Senate. I speak plainly. I thank the Senator from Nevada for that suggestion. Are we to proceed to pass this joint resolution upon a theory which will not stand, upon a false theory, upon the mere bare suggestion that we are tearing up these streets, and therefore such tearing up must not be done?

I assert as a proposition of law that this new company has a perfect legal right to do what it is now doing, the company which is called the Potomac Company, which dares to enter into competition with the United States Electric Lighting Company. If there is no authority for what the Potomac Company is doing, the courts of this District are open to enjoine the total states of a courts of this District are open to enjoinment at the instance of a committee of the Senate or at the instance of any taxpayer in this city. Why has not some application been made to the courts to stop this improvement? I have in my humble residence in this city, opposite Lafayette Square, had to endure the miserable light which we have had in the park for the last two years, and this new company, which has now laid its conduits in front of that covers has inspired me with the hope that within a brief period square, has inspired me with the hope that within a brief period we may be enjoying good light. But we are told that it shall not be done, and we are told that the mere fact that they are tearing up the streets is enough to make us hasten to stop it. We are told up the streets is enough to make us hasten to stop it. We are told we have already prohibited it. Where is the law which declares we have already prohibited it. that prohibition?

. President, what are the facts? The facts are that this whole Mr. President, what are the facts? The facts are that this whole question has been litigated in the courts of the District of Columbia, and those who are pressing this measure know it. No one knows it better than the United States Electric Lighting Company, because they were parties to the litigation. Some time ago that company, having, of course, the interests of the people of this city at heart, and not their own, sought to prevent this young and vigorous company from coming into competition with them in this city, and rushed into the courts to procure a permanent injunction to stop the doing of this very work. I am not here to cast any improper reflections upon this old monopoly. Of course they are acting for their own selfish interests and for their own good. They assume to be acting in the interests of the public, but they are looking for their own revenues. I never knew a monopoly are looking for their own revenues. I never knew a monopoly yet which proceeded in the courts which did not assume to act in the public interests. But whether this company was acting in the public interests or not makes no difference to the question Whether they resorted to the courts for a proper or an improper purpose, the courts have decided the question in controversy. The courts decided that the new company had the right improper purpose, the courts have decided the question in controversy. The courts decided that the new company had the right to proceed under existing law and lay down conduits. That litigation has been disposed of so far as the application for a temporary injunction is concerned. Appeal has been made to the only tribunal competent to decide it, and it decided the question adversely to the old monopoly. Then the new company proceeded to lay down the conduits, and immediately we are told that the District of Columbia is going to "rack and ruin," because somebody other than this old monopoly is going to make some public improvement in this District.

I have had some talk with citizens of this city, and I yenture the

I have had some talk with citizens of this city, and I venture the statement that they want competition; I venture the statement that they hail with delight any opportunity which will give them additional lighting facilities; I venture the assertion that public opinion in this District is upon the side of this new company, which wants an opportunity to share in the electric-lighting business of this great city of 250,000 or 300,000 people.

Therefore, Mr. President, continuing my argument, it is an idle plea, it is a silly plea, it is a babyish plea to say that we must pass this joint resolution, in the first place, because the new company are tearing up the streets of the city, and in the second place, it is an illogical argument, and a false and untrue argument, to say I have had some talk with citizens of this city, and I venture the that this new company is violating any existing law. That question has been determined adversely to the old monopoly and in favor of the new company.

What is there about this? There is nothing to conceal about it. What is there about this? There is nothing to conceal about it. Why not tell the Senate frankly just what there is of it? That this new company have met with great difficulties in obtaining a foothold in this city is true. It is composed of active, vigorous, energetic young men. They hail from the city of New York, from my own State. They put their money into this business, and are anxious to do something to aid themselves and to help the propole of this District. people of this District. If they are right, they should be sustained. They have met, of course, the persistent, the continuous opposition of the old company, and last session, having some controversy in regard to this matter, certain legislation was put upon an appropriation bill. The theory of this proposed legislation is that in some way outside assurances were given, some verbal assurances, to some members of the various committees, conference committo some members of the various committees, conference committees or otherwise, whereby it was agreed by the new company that nothing should hereafter be done until the Congress of the United States should provide a general system of subways in this city. When is that to be done? Echo answers, When? Who has recently introduced a bill for that purpose in this Senate, and where is there a bill for that purpose introduced in the other House? What bill upon this subject is any committee considering? I pause for a reply.

Mr. FAULKNER. As the Senator pauses for a reply, I will state to him that there is a bill before a subcommittee of the Committee on the District of Columbia, who expect to have a meeting on it to-day, I think.

on it to-day, I think.

Mr. HILL. When was it introduced?

Mr. FAULKNER. I think at the last session of Congress. It was a bill drawn by one of the Commissioners of the District of Columbia, Mr. Truesdell.

Mr. HILL. I am glad of that information, for it throws some light upon the question. When is the committee likely to report?
Mr. FAULKNER. I think it would be absolutely impossible for me to answer that question. I hope they will report during the present session, and I hope the bill will be passed into a law during this session.

during this session.

Mr. HILL. Mr. President, so far so good. The bill had attracted so little attention in the various discussions preliminary to this matter that I was not informed there had been such a bill intromatter that I was not informed there had been such a bill infroduced. Nothing could be of more importance than that bill if one is to be passed—I put it, if one is to be passed. If the committee had given as much attention to that general subway bill as they have given to the effort to stop the Potomac Company from going on with those conduits, we could have had a bill here and been discussing it at this vary hour discussing it at this very hour.

Mr. BACON. I will state that I am a member of the subcommittee to which that bill has been referred, and the criticism of the Senator from New York is not just. In order that what I say may have its full force, I desire to say to the Senator that I agree with him as to the propriety of permitting the present action by the Potomac Company, although I do not propose to antagonize the committee further than by my vote, as I am in the minority.

Mr. HILL. To what committee does the Senator refer?

Mr. BACON. The Committee on the District of Columbia.

The regulation of all the details and the determining of what subway company are exceedingly difficult. The subcommittee has had repeated meetings, and will have others. I desire that the imputation shall at least not rest upon the subcommittee that there is any indisposition to make a prompt report in this matter. For myself, I heartily favor it. I am in favor of a general sub-way system. In the meantime, I repeat, I am in favor of per-mitting the present Potomac Light Company to go on with its work. I only state that fact in order that my disclaimer of undue work. I only state that fact in order that my disclaimer of undue delay on the part of the subcommittee may not be misconstrued or lack anything of its full weight.

Mr. TILLMAN. If the Senator will allow me, I should like to ask some member of that committee to tell us whether the present company, the one that has the monopoly, will continue laying its wires whether you report or not?

Mr. BACON. I do not understand the assettion.

Mr. BACON. I do not understand the question. Mr. TILLMAN. Is there not already in existence on this side of Rock Creek an electric-light company which has permission to lay subways without waiting for your committee to report or act? Mr. BACON. That would lead me into a general discussion of this matter.

Mr. TILLMAN. Answer the question, yes or no.

Mr. BACON. I decline to answer yes or no.

Mr. TILLMAN. Of course you are at liberty to answer in your wn way. Mr. BACON. Mr. BACON. I will say that this matter is largely, if not altogether, proceeding under the control of the District Commissioners. I merely rose for the purpose of setting the subcommittee right as to the statement made by the Senator from New York.

Now, to put me upon the stand to be catechised as to what is the law of the District in regard to all these matters of subways is hardly proper, when the Senator from New York is on the floor discussing the matter, and the question of the Senator from South Carolina can not be answered yes or no. I decline to answer now.

Mr. TILLMAN. I only hope that somebody will answer yes or no the proposition contained in this joint resolution to the effect that somebody has the privilege of doing this very thing while you gentlemen are considering whether you will report on the general gentlemen are considering subway question or not.

Mr. HILL. I will inform the Senator from South Carolina that the object is to let this old company go on and prevent the new accompany from doing anything. That is apparently the scheme. company from doing anything. Tha Mr. GALLINGER. Mr. President

Mr. HILL. I can not enter into a joint debate now.
Mr. GALLINGER. Will the Senator yield to me a moment?
Mr. HILL. Not at present.

Mr. GALLINGER.

I simply wanted to say there is neither trick nor device nor scheme in it.

Mr. HILL. Then somebody ought to be able to explain these things as they arise

Mr. GALLINGER. The Senator has not permitted us. We will do it in our time.

Mr. HILL. Twice I stopped for an answer to pertinent inquiries, and I received no answer to respectful and proper questions, which were put to elicit information.

Mr. GALLINGER. If the Senator will permit me to say so, he will get all the answers he desires on this question before he gets through.

Mr. HILL. Very likely.

Mr. GALLINGER. The Senator will get all he desires.

Mr. HILL. But when Senators say this new company is proceeding illegally, I ask them to point out wherein it has been so proceeding, and Senators remain silent. I will stop right here and let the Senator from New Hampshire explain wherein this company is violating any existing law, if he can explain.

Mr. GALLINGER. Mr. President, I do not propose to explain

just now. The Senator can proceed to make his speech in his own time and in his own way, but if he will be kind enough not to impute dishonorable motives to the members of the Committee on the District of Columbia and to other Senators, he will be keeping within the rules of the Senate.

Mr. HILL. I shall try to keep within the rules of the Senate, but it would not violate the rules of the Senate to have some one explain wherein this new company is violating the law. If it would, the rules of the Senate should be amended.

Mr. President, I do not know of any good reason why this new company should wait until a general system of subways for this entire District shall be perfected, if, under existing law, this company have the right to put in the new conduits that they are now putting in. They are limited in number, and it would not bank-runt the city and would not bankrupt the other company. Thererupt the city and would not bankrupt the other company. Therefore I can not see any reason for the undue haste and zeal with which this matter is pushed.

There seems to be an idea that nobody has a right to enter the There seems to be an idea that nobody has a right to enter the District of Columbia and compete with any old established institution. I hold in my hand an argument, an "oral argument" printed—how that can be I do not know, but it is probably an oral argument delivered before a committee and subsequently printed. It is headed, "Oral argument"—and it is printed in good style—"of Col. A. T. Britton," whom I know very well, a very able lawyer and a good citizen of this city—as counsel for the United States Electric Lighting Company. It is oral, although it is a printed argument, by "Colonel" A. T. Britton. Of course, the old saying is "once a colonel, always a colonel," and it seems to be necessary even for a lawyer to be a colonel. The "Colonel" to be necessary even for a lawyer to be a colonel. The "Colonel" seems to realize that there has been a litigation, but others here in this Senate do not seem to be aware of the fact that there has been a litigation, in which the old company has been worsted, and Colonel Britton takes thirty-two pages to explain how the old company came to be beaten—an explanation which does not explain. At the close of his argument there is this statement:

At the close of his argument there is this statement:

We do not have many opportunities for managing affairs connected with ourselves in this District, and it really seems to our citizens that a company of our own ownership, built up through all the hard and trying times of experimental electric lighting, and being the first to pioneer the way under the direction of Congress in the matter of underground conduits, and which is in full position, with plant and equipment far in excess of the present demands upon it; able to do with its present plant at least double its present work—it really seems to us that it should be preferred in the matter of electric lighting of this District to a lot of outside people.

Here it is openly avowed that "outside people" must be kept out, and insiders be given the preference.

That is the milk in the coccanut; that is the motive; that is the scheme; that is the device to which I allude. You must be one of the "oldest inhabitants" in order to be able to compete for electric lighting in this city. You must have lived here, and your fathers and your grandfathers must have lived here, before you can be put upon the same plane with the old and existing monopolies which have built themselves up in this city, with or without the favoritism of Congress

I do not take much stock, Mr. President, in ancient things just because they are ancient. This city belongs to the whole United States. There is no citizenship per se here, if I may use that expression. Every citizen of the United States has a right to come here with equal privileges, to compete honestly and fairly in all the enterprises that pertain to this great capital city, and we are not to be met with the argument that "outside people" should not to be met with the argument that "outside people" should not be allowed to come in, and that a preference shall be given to the "old hangers-on" who have grown rich out of the franchises obtained from this District and selfishly want to keep out the people whom they call "outsiders," the citizens of New York and elsewhere, who come here and who have the same right to help build up this great city as the sons and daughters of the old residents in this part of the country—"colonels" and otherwise

I have not time to review all of the able argument of Colonel Britton, but the Colonel understands this question pretty well after all. This joint resolution looks as though it had been introduced in the interest of the public welfare. What is the headnote of this argument on the face of this elegantly bound book?

It is as follows:

Oral argument of Col. A. T. Britton upon behalf of the United States Electric Lighting Company, and stating its position in advocacy of the Cockrell Senate resolution.

Colonel Britton understands that this is a contest between the two companies, and he is counsel for one of them. He submits an argument, not in the public interest, but in the interest of his client, this particular corporation. I do not know who was heard before the Committee on the District of Columbia. I do not care to repeat some things which have been said to me about it. debate as it has proceeded has thrown light upon the subject, but there was no mention yesterday that anybody dissented from this report; the fact was very carefully concealed or inadvertently omitted. The distinguished Senator from Georgia [Mr. Bacon] just a moment ago said that he favored the Potomac Company being permitted to go on, but when that report was presented here yesterday there was not a word of dissent from any member of the committee.

Mr. President, I was here the other day and heard the few remarks upon this subject from his seat of that member of the District Committee, the Senator from Tennessee [Mr. Harris], now absent. He is as familiar with the affairs of the District of Columbia, I think, as any other Senator around this circle. Is there a single member of this committee authorized to state that the Senator from Tennessee favors this joint resolution? Not one. I do not desire this resolution finally disposed of in his absence. I prefer hear his views upon this subject; and he has decided views. He has been called away on account of the sickness of his wife. He has been called away on account of the sickness of his whee. He is a leading member of this committee who could throw some light upon this subject. Sir, I think I hazard nothing in stating that he is most earnestly opposed to this joint resolution. Yesterday it was made to appear—I say "made to appear." but perhaps that is not the proper expression; it did appear, apparently, from the recent that it was manimous. No one so stated, but where the report that it was unanimous. No one so stated, but where nothing is said when such a report is made it might be assumed that the report was unanimous. The distinguished Senator from Georgia virtually dissents, and I think at least one other member does not approve of the report.

I think that this resolution ought not to pass for another reason. I regret that by reason of the situation here in the District of Columbia Congress necessarily has to be a sort of common council for this District. I would have as little to do with the details of this matter as possible if I could have my way. I would leave as much discretion as is proper and feasible to the District Commissioners. I would be a sort of common council for this District commissioners. missioners. I would not have grave Senators discussing every little detail of a dirty conduit, as to whether or not it shall go along a particular street. I do not think we should bother ourselves with the little details of municipal government. We have Commissioners appointed by the President and confirmed by the Senate, I think. A Senator on my right, who is pretty good authority, says they are confirmed by the Senate. They are presumed to be men of capacity, ability, honesty. They are old residents here of the District, probably having been brought up here. They know all about the city its ins and outs. They should have They know all about the city, its ins and outs. They should have as much discretion as possible in regard to the management of the local affairs of the District. Every time a little ditch is to be dug in this great city, are we to have a joint resolution introduced? Are we to debate it and discuss it, and to overrule the District Commissioners because we think it ought not to be done? We have the power to do it. I think it is an unwise procedure for us to attempt to review all the minor acts of the officials of the District of Columbia.

Now, are they, too, violating any law? No. Point it out if you can. I have already said that the Potomac Company is not violating any law, and I have challenged contradiction of that statement. I have already said that if the Potomac Company is violatment. I have already said that if the Potomac Company is violating any law, go to the courts. But you have been in the courts and you have been beaten. Now, if the Commissioners are violating any law, go to the courts and restrain them. But they are not violating any law. They approve of the action of the Potomac Company. They see no objection to it. They see no wrong in what is being done. They believe it is a proper and legitimate exercise of existing authority, an improvement proper to be made, with which Congress ought not at this time to interfere.

Mr. VEST. May I ask the Senator from New York a question?
Mr. HILL. Certainly.

Mr. VEST. I understood the Senator to make the statement—possibly I am wrong—that the Potomac Company, as he calls it.

possibly I am wrong—that the Potomac Company, as he calls it, has now, under existing law, the right to tear up the streets whenever it thinks it proper to do so. Does that authority exist under its charter right?

The Senator will excuse me. I did not say that. Mr. HILL. Mr. VEST.

Mr. HILL.

I beg pardon.
No, sir; I did not say it.
What is the existing law, then, in regard to the Mr. VEST. rights of that company?

Mr. HILL. It has a right under the authority of the District Commissioners to lay down these particular conduits. Mr. VEST. But the Commissioners can prevent it from doing

Mr. VEST. But the Commissioners can prevent it from doing so if they see proper?

Mr. HILL. They can. But the Commissioners, in the exercise of their judgment, having carefully considered the matter, have seen fit to decide that it is in the public interest that the work shall go on; and we are asked to review the action of those Commissioners. We are asked to take up the time that should be devoted, as my friend the Senator from Florida [Mr. Call.] would probably say, to the discussion of the Cuban question, to the discussion of the question of tariff or of revenue, to the discussion of the arbitration question, or some of the important and vital subjects which ought to occupy the attention of this body. But we are here now to discuss the great question whether a few conduits shall be laid under a few streets in the District of Columbia.

Abolish your Commissioners, if you have no confidence in them. The newspapers stated the other day—they are not always reliable, but still we can get a good deal of information from them that the Commissioners were going to be impeached. That was the first thing to do. When a public official does not do some-thing that certain men think he ought to do, immediately they vent their indignation by saying: "Well, we will impeach him." It was said immediately that the Commissioners of the District were to be impeached for this high-handed outrage which the courts have sustained. A few days have elapsed, and we do not hear so much about the impeachment proceedings as we did. That has apparently blown over.

We come right back to the question, What is the precise ground upon which we are to act?

Whereas the Senate and the House are both investigating-

I ask my friend the Senator from West Virginia [Mr. FAULK-NER] what bill is before the House on the question of subways?

Mr. FAULKNER. I do not feel it necessary for me to pass upon that question. The records of the House are open to the Senator from New York, and if he desires, he can investigate the matter for himself. All we have to do is to attend to our business in the

Mr. HILL. If we attend to our strict, legitimate business, it will keep us busy. My friend the Senator from West Virginia is hardly fair to the Senate. Of course he has a right to decline to answer any question, but being familiar with this matter as a member of the committee that with eagerness or with reluctance, I do not know or are which reported the injury resolution which I do not know or care which, reported the joint resolution which declares upon its face that the other House is investigating the question, I think he might have informed us whether there is a bill on this subject pending before the other House.

Mr. FAULKNER. If the Senator from New York will permit me, I will state that when a joint resolution drawn up by so distinguished and careful a Senator as the Senator from Missouri [Mr. Cockrell] asserts something as a fact in its preamble, he ought to give credit to it unless he can overthrow the statement by showing that the author of the joint resolution is mistaken.

Mr. HILL. It may be true that the other House is investigating the matter without any bill being before it. All that the joint resolution recites is-

Whereas the Senate and House are both investigating * * * the subject, etc.

That does not show that there has been a bill introduced which is pending before the other House. Oh, no; the answer is begging the question; it is quibbling, with all due respect to the Senator from West Virginia. I do not know whether there is a bill pending in the other House, although I have been informed that there is no such bill. I can ascertain, of course, by inquiry. I can do that, and I think I will be informed as to the fact, because there is no monopoly yet as to the bills of the two Houses. Any member of either House has the right, at least yet, to apply for and get a copy of a bill.

When this report is to be made does not appear, but the joint resolution says:

That until definite action is taken by Congress regarding the construction of said general subway system, it shall be unlawful to open any streets, roads, avenues, or alleys in the District of Columbia for the purpose of laying electrical wires, cables, or conduits therein, excepting in the extension of the existing electric-lighting service.

In whose interest is that provision? It is in the interest of the old company, in the main. It may extend its conduits indefinitely if the Commissioners see fit, but those of the new company can not be laid.

A little more electric lighting in this city would do no injury. I do not go out very much at night, but still I find that I do get a little confused in trying to cross some of the squares which are poorly lighted. I do not know who is to blame for it, but I always land on the wrong side of the square or the street, and I insist upon it, nearsighted as I am, that we ought to have more electric

Mr. GALLINGER. Will the honorable Senator yield to me for a moment? Mr. HILL.

Mr. HILL. Certainly.
Mr. GALLINGER. I desire to ask the Senator from New York if he is aware of the fact that the number of lights is absolutely mregulated by law passed by the Congress of the United States?

Mr. HILL. No; I am not aware of it. I would leave a little something to the District Commissioners. I would not monopolize everything for the Senate and the House.

Mr. GALLINGER. The Commissioners can not, of course. go beyond the amounts of money appropriated by Congress for this

That is all right, but I would not specify in an act of Congress just precisely every electric light. I would not regulate the place where such light should be put. You have the right to do it, of course. Congress can regulate the materials which shall be used; Congress may designate the precise corner where the light shall be placed. I should like to have one in front of where I live. Perhaps there are lights in front of the residences of other Senators. I, however, would leave something to the discretion of the District Commissioners, so far as we can. I think we should have better government. I object to so much special legislation for the District of Columbia. If we have in our system of government three Commissioners appointed by the President and confirmed by the Senate, the best men in the District of Columbia should be selected, and probably such men have been appointed. I would vest in them all the discretion that is reasonable and proper, and I think I would trust them to put in two or three extra lights without having the matter limited and specified by act of Congress framed by the most dignified legislative body upon earth.

Mr. GALLINGER. If the Senator will permit me again, I will state that I did not mean to say, and I do not think the Senator could have understood me as saying, that Congress determines precisely where an electric light shall be placed. What I meant to say was that Congress makes an appropriation of money for to say was that Congress makes an appropriation of money for this purpose, and acting under the direction of Congress the Commissioners place the lights up to the limit of the appropriation. If the Senator can persuade them to put a light in front of his residence, that is all right.

Mr. HILL. Oh, Mr. President—
Mr. GALLINGER. But this new company will not place lights except under the appropriations of Congress paying them for that service.

for that service.

Mr. HILL. Of course all the moneys for the control and management of the affairs of this city must come through Congress. They must come from appropriations, and of course the Commissioners can not exceed the appropriations. That is all right. Nobody disputes that proposition. But the point is that I would limit the Commissioners and restrict them as little as possible. I think it might be desirable to have electric lights from another company. I would give the privilege to the District Commissioners to allow the new company to enter this District. I would break up the existing monopoly, if I could, in the interest of free competition.

Mr. TILLMAN. Mr. President—
The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. VILAS in the chair). Does the Senator from New York yield to the Senator from South Carolina?

Mr. HILL. Certainly.
Mr. TILLMAN. I should like to have information from some-body who can give it as to whether these companies are going to supply electric light only for the city or are to go into private houses and let some of us who are now fooling with ill-smelling gas get electric lights where we live.

Mr. HILL. I understand that the new lights for which conduits are now being put down, and about which all this fuss is made, are for public lighting; that it is not proposed to interfere at present with the existing monopoly of the old company in regard to private lights, as I have been informed.

Mr. TILLMAN. In other words, they will not allow you to buy electricity from any other company than the one on this side of the creek

Mr. HILL. My friend the Senator from South Carolina reaches his conclusions pretty accurately and pretty quickly.
The joint resolution provides—

That until definite action is taken by Congress regarding the construction of said general subway system, it shall be unlawful to open any streets, roads, avenues, or alleys in the District of Columbia for the purpose of laying electrical wires, cables, or conduits therein, excepting in the extension of the existing electric-lighting service within the territorial limits specified in said

Then comes the proviso. That is a pretty broad prohibition. You have not confidence enough in your Commissioners to allow them to permit the new company to extend its conduits a single foot. That they may be permitted to extend the others is fairly discernible from the terms of the joint resolution.

Is there not an existing appropriation under which the new company have a right to receive some of this electric lighting? I wish to read the first clause of the preamble of the joint resolution:

Whereas it is provided by the act of June 11, 1896 (29 Stats., page 401), that no underground electric lighting wires or conduits therefor shall be laid in the District of Columbia east of Rock Creek, excepting in the extension of the existing electric-lighting service within certain specified territorial limits.

What is the effect of that? Are we to vote for the joint resolu-tion just upon reading it, with no explanation vouchsafed? I have as much confidence in the committees of this body as has any other Senator, but committees sometimes make mistakes. Committees are not always accurate, and when no Senator vouchsafes to give us a single word of explanation as to the joint resolusafes to give us a single word of explanation as to the joint resolution, seemingly expecting us to vote for it just because it has been reported, I have a right, sir, to comment upon some of the peculiar features of the joint resolution, and in so doing I cast no reflections upon the distinguished Senator who is its author. A more painstaking, capable, or honorable man does not sit in this body, but he is human; he is subject to the same prejudices that exist with other Senators. We therefore have a right to consider his joint resolution, and when he himself vouchsafes no explanation of it, I think we have a right to debate the question until somebody comes forward here and explains the reasons, legal or otherwise, why this thing should be done.

My friend the Senator from Missouri, with the earnestness and impetuosity which characterizes a young man like himself, rather impetuosity which characterizes a young man like himself, rather resented the idea that I should call this an "extraordinary" joint resolution. There was no reflection upon anybody intended in that statement. Is it not extraordinary? I think when the debate shall have proceeded we shall be told that an extraordinary situation is presented which calls for extraordinary action.

not an ordinary joint resolution. It is not ordinary action. It is not an ordinary joint resolution. It is not ordinary legislation. It is unusual; it is extraordinary.

Mr. President, I have been reminded by my friend the Senator from West Virginia [Mr. FAULKNER] that we ought not to talk about House bills and House action. There are two sides to this question. No one knows it better than my friend the Senator from West Virginia. I have talked with the members of the House who were its conferees upon this subject; but I suppose I must not repeat what they said. This joint resolution is going to have hard sledding before it becomes a law. No one knows it better than these gentlemen. Without going into the details of what we have heard about conference committees, I will state that there is a misunderstanding-I think I state it accuratelybetween the House and the Senate in regard to this question.

am not to take my conception of duty from some understandings had between conference committees, not reduced to writing.

I hold in my hand a letter from the president of the new company, the Potomac Company, in which he goes on to give his version of certain things that took place when, last spring, we were preparing the appropriation bills here. I do not think it necessary to read the letter here now, because nobody has alleged any misunderstanding. The proposed legislation is put right upon the broad ground that, whereas some time or other there is going to be a general system of subways, therefore, until that millen to be a general system of subways, therefore, until that millennium day shall come, we shall not have a single extension of a foot of electric lighting in this city by the new company. That is the proposition. How long is the old company to have a monopoly? Nobody knows. You propose to stop every work of this kind until the two Houses have agreed upon more general legislation upon this subject. Would it not be better to invest the Commissioners of the District with the power to give each of these companies the right to extend its conduits within reasonable limits? What is the objection to it? I do not know of any. I can not imagine any.

Senators say they expect the bill will be reported and passed at the present session. Has the Senator from West Virginia forgotten that we have already agreed to consider the Nicaraguan Canal bill? And he knows as well as I do what is implied by that fact. Extensive debate, elaborate argument; day after day consumed in the discussion of that question. How is the subway bill to be passed if there is formidable opposition to it? Yet the joint resolution proposes a perpetual stay of proceedings. for all time against the laying of a single foot of electric-light wires by this new and enterprising company hailing from New York or hailing from Nebraska or hailing from Indiana or where-ever it comes from. Yet I am reminded that I must not call the joint resolution an extraordinary one. It is a simple, ordinary resolution, introduced to stop all electric lighting in this city except by one company, and that company may go on and extend its lines. That is all.

Mr. President, I do not like the joint resolution. That is evident from what I have said. Before the joint resolution shall pass, I should like to have some statement from the District of Columbia Commissioners as to what they think about it. I have not the honor of an acquaintance with a single member of that commission. I will go a little further and say that not a single man in the employ of the District Commissioners was ever appointed upon my solicitation, strange as that may seem. I care little about the Commissioners; I am under no obligations to them; but if they are charged with the management of the affairs of the District of Columbia they ought to be treated respectfully; and I think before we enter upon this extraordinary legislation we should have some communication from the Commissioners giving the reasons for their action in allowing a few additional conduits to be laid. Such a report should be presented for the consideration of the Senate. I know it has been said that the new company is proceeding with undue haste. I have not been very long in the District, but I have noticed some of the public works that have been carried on, and I venture to say that if this work is to be done at all nobody should object because it is done immediately. Almost like magic have these conduits been put down, with the least possible discomfort to the people. The trench is dug for a certain distance and the conduits laid in a day. They have done what few men in tearing up the streets of the city ever have done. They clear up everything behind them and leave the street in perfect shape. Never has any work been performed, if you say with greater rapidity, I say with better public satisfaction. Yesterday I rode up on one of the street cars here, and I heard citizens discussing the question among themselves and complimenting the Potomac officials for the rapid and thorough manner in which they had utilized the streets: that is, with the least public inconvenience possible, the streets: that is, with the least public inconvenience possible, filling up the trenches which had been dug and leaving the streets absolutely in as good condition as before. Public work always should be performed promptly. The streets should not be encumbered by great piles of material. This company, above all others that I have noticed for five years, has performed its work faithfully and well, so that scarcely a day elapses after the digging of a trench before the whole street is capable of being occupied by which is the street in the street is capable of being occupied by

So, Mr. President, upon any ground upon which you can consider this joint resolution it ought not to be passed. Let me summarize what I had the honor of saying: First, the statement that this company is violating law is not true; second, the statement that this company is violating law is not true; second, the statement that the Commissioners are violating law is not true; third, the ques-tion has been litigated in the courts and decided against the old company; and fourth, we should leave this question to the Com-missioners, largely to be determined by their discretion. The passage of the pending joint resolution is a virtual reflection upon the discretion of the Commissioners vested with the control of this

I am not willing, sir, to vote for a measure that condemns public officials unless some Senator can point out the precise line of the statute that they have violated. I think I have been one of those, since I have been in the Senate, who have not hastily endo not believe in holding up the Commissioners of this District, or any other body of men or public officials, to scorn, to criticism, or in reversing their action, unless I can have pointed out to me what statute they are violating, what particular discretion they are abusing, what power they are manipulating for some wrongful purpose. It is not sufficient for me that it may be said a committhe or two committees of this body want this measure passed, and therefore we should pass it. I am not willing to surrender my judgment as a Senator to the keeping of any committee and lend my support to the pending measure unless it can be shown by argument other than the mere presentation of the bill itself that we ought to vote for it. Otherwise, Mr. President, we all would surrender to committees the discretion properly vested in us here as Senators

I have already referred to the fact that this was largely a fight between two electric-light companies; that one company has got the ear of the committees of this body and the other has not. That of itself may be unfortunate for the company that is left out in the cold. I hold in my hand a statement of the Potomac Company which has just been sent to me. It is a statement, respectful in form, dated January 19, 1897. It is addressed to the Senate and House of Representatives.

We respectfully submit the following statement, and beg that unfavorable action may be taken by you upon Senate resolution No. 187.

It is signed by Mr. O. P. Crosby, president of the Potomac Electric Power Company; and here is an elaborate statement giving all the reasons why the joint resolution ought not to pass. I do not propose at this time to detain the Senate by reading it, but no Senator ought to vote for the joint resolution until he has heard both sides. No Senator should be in haste to pass the joint reso-lution simply because some committee wants it passed. If men have come here from abroad and have had the effrontery to place their money in public improvements in this city, they have a right their money in public improvements in this city, they have a right to be heard before it shall be confiscated. What is the joint resolution? It virtually is a confiscation of the property and money of this new company. The two companies are not placed upon an equality. One is given more privileges than the other. I stand here asking for fair play, for equal rights, no matter whether the men were born in the District of Columbia, or, unfortunately, born in the city of New York. If you once establish the principle that men of capital are not invited here, are not wanted here, they of course will refuse to come.

wanted here, they of course will refuse to come.

Mr. President, that would be a bad principle and a vicious policy and a narrow-minded course. I trust the time will never come when the Senate, by the passage of resolutions of this character, will indorse the statements contained in the brief of Colonel Britton, that those here in power who have the monopoly should be preferred against outsiders.

Why, sir, during the recent campaign the distinguished candidate for the Presidency on the Democratic side was criticised by some people because in a jocular or semihumorous way he had spoken of the "enemy's country." The criticism was farfetched in the light in which he spoke; in the connection with which he used those words there was nothing especially objectionable in

Mr. President, it is indeed true that no part of our common country is the "enemy's country." That is true. But no part of this country, especially no part of this little municipality (10 miles square) belongs exclusively to a few people, so that outsiders have no business here.

Mr. President, not only should there be competition, legitimate and proper, in electric lights, but there should be competition in everything in this capital city. There should be competition in all the things that concern the happiness of the people of this District. This Government can afford to pay for the best of everything. The people of this District who assemble here, especially those who live here during each winter season, who are residents here in the winter time, and are also Senators and Representatives, have a right to have the best lights, the best water, the best gas, the best streets, the best government that is to be found anywhere. I do not intend to discuss the question as to whether the people here should have the elective franchise, because I want to confine myself strictly to the pending joint resolution.

Mr. President, the system of our government for the District of Columbia will permit the best government, if it is properly adminstreet is torn up you are to have a bill introduced in Congress to stop it. I as a Senator do not want to be a sewer commissioner of this city. I do not want to be a road inspector. I do not want to have thrust upon me duties which are inconsistent with those that pertain to the dignified office of Senator of the United States; and therefore I would leave to the District Commissioners the fullest possible discretion.

Mr. President, I have said that I did not intend to put in evidence at this time the statement of the president of the Potomac Light Company, nor do I care about reading the letter of the president in regard to the understanding or the minute of the president in regard to the understanding or the misunderstanding that was had last spring about proposed legislation, because until that was had last spring about proposed legislation, because until that branch of the subject has been touched it would not be germane. I am here to say, in conclusion, that the joint resolution is extraordinary; I am here to say that it violates the rights of the new company; I am here to say that it is in the interest, whether intended or not, of the old company. I mean to say that it is in the interest of a monopoly against which the people of this city have long contended. I say it is based upon a wrong spirit, a narrow spirit, such as has been exhibited in the brief that I have read here. It will do more to retard the progress of your District, it will do more to retard public improvements, it will do more to constitute a pernicious precedent, than any other piece of legislation that can be enacted. legislation that can be enacted.

Mr. President, having said this much, I will yield to anyone else who desires to discuss this question, simply saying that I think the joint resolution is a mistake. I cast no reflections upon the committee that reported it. I presume they gave both sides a hearing. I have not been advised in regard to that matter. I ask my friend from West Virginia whether that is true?

Mr. FAULKNER. It is true.

Mr. HILL. The Senator answers that it was done. wish, of course, to interrogate him against his will, but I would simply ask whether it was not understood that there was to be a further hearing?

Mr. FAULKNER. If the Senator from New York has finished talking against time, I will then take the floor and answer, I think, all the questions he wants answered as to the facts. Of course I can not follow him in the line he has taken as to language, nor make any insinuations similar to those which he has indulged in; but in other respects I will try to present the facts to the Senate on which the committee acted.

Mr. HILL. What is there about this question, Mr. President, at is so ticklish? What is there about it that Senators are so that is so ticklish? sensitive upon, when I ask a respectful question as to whether there was not possibly an understanding that there was to be a further was not possibly an understanding that there was to be a further hearing upon the bill (a matter which occurs every few days in regard to a bill) that we should not have a frank answer? I do not understand it, Mr. President. It is beyond my comprehension that there should be so much sensitiveness displayed in regard to this matter. I assume that the committee intended to be fair; I am willing to assume that they have been fair from their standpoint; but I did understand that those connected with it were to have some further hearing in regard to this matter, if adverse action against the Potomac Company was to be taken. I may be informed properly or I may not be. I may be mistaken in regard to it. It is certain, Mr. President, that if there was not a full and complete hearing, if there was to be a further hearing which has not been had, we at least can have that hearing here, because before we are through with this question it ought to be discussed in all its bearings. Whilemy friend from West Virginia unkindly suggests that I have been talking against time, I confess that I have been talking, Mr. President, against a joint resolution that is ill timed. Perhaps that is what he means. Sir, I would talk any length of time that I might deem necessary to defeat it, or at least to prevent its passage until every Senator around this circle should understand precisely what the joint resolution means.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New York will please suspend.

Mr. HILL. I will suspend, Mr. President, for to-day.
The PRESIDING OFFICER. The hour of 2 o'clock having arrived, it is the duty of the Chair to lay before the Senate the unfinished business, which is Senate bill 3247.

MARITIME CANAL COMPANY OF NICARAGUA.

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, resumed the consideration of the bill (S. 3247) to amend an act entitled "An act to incorporate the Maritime Canal Company of Nicaragua," approved February 20, 1889.

Mr. TURPIE. Mr. President, the opposition we make to the pending bill is not founded on any hostility to the project of the isthmian canal by the Nicaragua route. We are earnestly in favor of an American canal under American control, meaning thereby a canal built and owned by the people and Government of the United States and under the control of the Congress and President of the great Republic. of the great Republic.

The isthmian canal, sir, is a great design, worthy of this age and of this Government—the crown of this age. It purposes to remove the Straits of Magellan thousands of miles to the north, to erase from the ocean sailing charts the tedious and prolonged voyage around the Horn, to sever and divide those grand divisions of the earth's surface, North and South America, and yet, sir, to make them more adjacent, to weld them in closer union and with a more binding tie than they have ever been before.

the consummation of this enterprise, so long desired, so long expected, meets the favor of every statesman, of every citizen of the world within the bounds of civilization. It is because we favor, because we earnestly favor, the construction and completion of the isthmian canal by the Nicaragua route that we are opposed to letting it go into the hands of a private corporation, the beneficiary of this bill, an insolvent corporation without means, without money, without credit, an association, sir, already clothed with the left-handed prestige of failure, whose further connection with this great enterprise must assuredly lead to its connection with this great enterprise must assuredly lead to its disastrous defeat.

The completion and successful navigation of an isthmian canal has been an ideal conception for two hundred and fifty years—ever since this hemisphere has been the site of settled and permanent European colonization. The project has been common to the countries and the people of both North and South America. It has been a conception heretofore like that which prevailed in the period of Columbus with respect to reaching India by sailing continually to the west. It has been an ideal conception like that which prevailed in a later period with respect to a northwest passage to Asia. It has been an ideal conception like that which prevails even now with respect to the exploration, the discovery, and the actual occupancy by human footfall of the North Pole of

It has, however, passed out of the sphere of mere ideal conception. It has made the attempt and passed beyond that line into the line of a project tentative and experimental and actual upon certain conditions and limitations. There is nothing new in the designitself. There is nothing new in the Nicaragua route. There is nothing new in the constructive purpose of this bill, of the original act, or of the amendment now pending to it.

This is in its historic order the twenty-first concession, inspection, survey, and attempt at the construction of the isthmian canal by the route of Nicaragua. Indeed the governments which have successively controlled the dominion and the eminent domain of this route have been in all their existence extremely liberal in the grant of concessions; they have been extremely liberal in their the grant of concessions; they have been extremely liberal in their gift of concessions; they have been extremely liberal in their policy to all parties and persons who wished to avail themselves of preparatory or concessionary rights upon the land which the canal if successful must traverse. This is not only the twenty-first concession in historic order to parties, persons, and corporations for this purpose, but it is the fourth American concession for that purpose, using the word American in the sense of belonging to the United States.

The first concession and charter was made in favor of De Witt Clinton whose distinguished successor I see now occupying a seat

Clinton, whose distinguished successor I see now occupying a seat in this Chamber. It was made to a governor of New York and his associates. The second was made to a well-known citizen occupying no official position but controlling unlimited credit and unlimited funds, Cornelius Vanderbilt, and his associates, also of New York. The third was made to gentlemen of the same city and of the same abundant financial resources, Frederick Kelley and his associates; and the fourth one, the one now existing, was made to the Maritime Canal Company of Nicaragua. There was the same concession, upon the same terms, upon the same condi-tions, for the same price, a merely nominal one, paid in all these instances

It is valuable to consider the history of former concessions, not only to our own countrymen but to countrymen of other nationalities, when it is claimed here that this concession has an extraordinary validity or contains some extraordinary rights which have not been heretofore granted or considered by the concessionary

This is the fourth concession to citizens of the United States for the construction of this work. All of these concessions and projects have been expensive, prolonged, and heretofore abortive. This has not been for the reason that the project or design in itself is devoid of merit, but because capitalists in Europe and America have alike not been convinced of its commercial possibility or its pecuniary returns as an investment.

I listened with great pleasure, as I always listen, to the honorable chairman of the select committee upon this subject, who able chairman of the select committee upon this subject, who reported the pending amendment to the original act, with reference to the immense profit to be gathered in the prosecution and completion of this work. He refers to the enormous recent improvements which have been made in the instrumentalities of excavations and embankments, giving new facilities and promising new methods of success in its prosecution. All these and many more reasons have been urged for years upon the capitalists of both hemispheres; and yet not one has been convinced that this work ought to be undertaken as furnishing the means of a this work ought to be undertaken as furnishing the means of a profitable investment. Indeed, sir, this project, tentative yet, experimental yet, passed by numerous failed efforts into the sphere of projects properly named—this project is yet tabooed. It would not be heard, it would not be considered, in any office of any capitalist either in the United States or Europe. For the last fifty years it has been blacklisted; it has been placed beyond consideration as a money investment. We have very recent proof of this, and the most authentic proof which could be offered for the existence of any contention or fact in human testimony. That proof ence of any contention or fact in human testimony. That proof is in the history of this Maritime Nicaraguan Canal Company. That company was required when it opened its books and sought subscriptions for stock and bonds to realize means for the construction and completion of their work to make publication for thirty successive days in the principal newspapers of London, Paris, and New York.

Paris, and New York.

This publication, which was required by the terms of the original concession, as it had been required by the terms of former concessions, was made. This project, with all its advantages, with all its enormous profits, and with all its roseate predictions, was thrust into the face and under the eyes of every member of the Bourse in Paris, of every member of the stock exchanges of London, of every operator in Wall street, and was rejected—totally rejected. No one in any of these capitals took one penny of stock, one dollar of bonds, of the Maritime Nicaraguan Canal Company. So that this condition of taboo of which I have spoken, this condition of absolute isolation, is founded upon the most recent evidence, and justifies any careful man in saying that investment in this project, and the project itself, is an outcast, a fugitive from the financial world; it is a beggar, a pariah in any rational financial system.

Some money was raised—how much I do not know; some money was expended—how much I do not know; but none of it was raised by the Maritime Canal Company of Nicaragua. All the money that was subscribed was subscribed and paid by citizens of the United States, and most of that subscription was confined to the citizens of New York. Our fellow-citizens of the United States, conversant with this enterprise, expressly notified that financial aid was needed, learned very early to make a distinction between the solvency and responsibility of the Maritime Canal Company and the solvency and responsibility of the Nicaraguan Construction Company. It is true these companies were very closely connected; they were the Siamese twins of this scheme; but it was very early understood, most distinctly apprehended, although the Maritime Canal Company had undertaken a project financially unjustifiable and financially unprofitable, yet that the Nicaraguan Construction Company might make money out of the expendirational financial system. Construction Company might make money out of the expenditure. The construction company only related to the expenditure of money. It had no relation at all to the completion of the canal or the profits which were to accrue. All the holders of stocks and bonds in the construction company looked to was an expenditure of money as the work proceeded and the profits which might be made, the profits which would accrue by jobs and subjobs, from contracts and subcontracts, details—very rich financial details in the prosecution of such a scheme, very fruitful financial details in the prosecution even of a similar scheme afterwards to be noticed.

noticed.

Our people, therefore, very early came to the conclusion that the canal might never be completed. That did not interfere with the details of the construction or with the policy of the Construction Company. They came very early to the conclusion that the canal might never be completed, or, if completed, that its returns upon investment would be worthless. Therefore, their investment was made in the capital stock of the Nicaraguan Construction Company, a corporation of the State of Colorado, a corporation yet in existence, a corporation which has enjoyed new life and accession of fresh vitality from its recharter in the State of Vermont, awaiting this appropriation of $100,000,000 to be expended in construction, awaiting the movement of the larger fish as the pilot fish accompanies the whale, awaiting the movement like the kingfisher who pounces on the bird which has caught the prey and compels its redelivery to itself. That is the comparative situation of these companies. So even our own people, residing in New York and elsewhere, with full notice of the apprehended or expected profits from this magnificent financial investment, no less than the people of London and of Paris, have turned their backs upon it and given no credit to those arguments which proceeded upon the supposition that it would be a profitable financial investment. which proceeded upon the supposition that it would be a profitable financial investment.

The project, then, as such, stands discredited, totally, wholly discredited, in our own country and in all others. The stocks or bonds of the Construction Company, in case an appropriation is made, will have a market value; but the stocks and bonds of the Mariwill have a market value; but the stocks and bonds of the Maritime Canal Company, depending on the completion and the consequent rentals from the canal, are considered as a dead loss—caput mortuum—on the minus side. That this should be the condition of the principal beneficiary of this bill, and that it should be financially discredited, totally discredited, is not strange.

The Nicaragua route is geographically only a few days'sail from a city and country which is called Panama, and this route—the Panama route—had been advertised in the same way, craving for investors, yet no capitalist took any stock in the Panama scheme, no government took any stock in the Panama scheme of the isthmian canal, no European government even gave it incorporainvestors, yet no capitalist took any stock in the Panama scheme, no government took any stock in the Panama scheme of the isthmian canal, no European government even gave it incorporation. It was undertaken by a private corporation, incorporated under the Government of Colombia, in South America, its charter providing its principal office should be in Paris, just as the charter of the Maritime Nicaraguan Canal Company provides that its principal office shall be in New York.

Millions were expended in the prosecution of the work of construction of the Panama Canal. It is only 41 miles long. This proposed Nicaraguan Canal is more than 100 miles long. Two hundred and forty million dollars were expended in the attempt to construct the Panama Canal; but, sir, it was not at the expense of any capitalist, of any Government, either directly or indirectly. It was made by a grand levy upon the small tradesmen, the peasants, and villagers of France. The first investment of the company was to subsidize the French press. There was not a newspaper throughout the country from which any information could be got except that the canal by the route of Panama was going to be a success and be as profitable as the canal of Suez. It was due to the credulity of the multitude; it was due to their willingness to believe and accept the promise of the Panama Canal Company, deluded with the glamor of the scheme and beguiled with the splendor of its projector, De Lesseps, fresh from his magnificent achievement at Suez, that they subscribed and paid this enormous sum, only to sink it beyond the reach of redemption or of resurrection.

Not only was the first subscription of $100,000,000, the sum asked in this bill, so sunk; but after that had been swept away by asked in this bill, so sunk; but after that had been swept away by the storms and floods of the isthmus—as prevalent at Nicaragua as they are at Panama—after the last vestige of improvement had been wiped out, credulity, which seems like the wool on a sheep—you may shear it, and yet it will come out on the same animal a second time—after $100,000,000 had been sunk and was known to be sunk in the Panama scheme, $100,000,000 more—the second crop of extortion—was contributed by the peasantry, artisans, and villagers of France.

Although this is the fourth American concession and the fourth organized effort for the construction and completion of this design, it is the first in one feature. De Witt Clinton, the late governor of New York—not a very late one—in the early twenties saw in imagination all the greatness of this design being effected and completed. He had as associates the most wealthy and responsible citizens in his own State, and made at that time an inspection and survey of this route. Cornelius Vanderbilt, whose name is synonymous with enterprise, with public spirit, with successful investment, and with great accumulation of cash, a man of abundant resources, made also the same attempt under the same auspices, with a similar organization. Frederick Kelley, of New York, and his associates and friends, the successors of the first before-mentioned American projectors and promoters, undertook the same enterprise upon the same route. All these failed. But neither De Witt Clinton nor Kelley nor Vanderbilt ever came to either House of Congress and asked them for $100,000,000, or any other sum, to assist in the prosecution of the work. They never even dreamed or conceived of asking what is called Government aid and assistance in that which they had undertaken. Neither of these gentlemen would have advised or asked this Government to undertake an enterprise in which they had themselves

Mr. Vanderbilt spent a quarter of a million dollars in the work of preliminary survey—a very handsome investment. He received the profiles, maps, drafts, and all the details of a most elaborate report, and then abandoned the enterprise. What the estimate of cost was I do not know. I have frequently inquired for that report and for the papers, not only here but of gentlemen in New York, but I have never seen them. Kelley and De Witt Clinton none of these promoters of the enterprise, who were once concessionaires, just as these gentlemen are, under treaties with the Republics of Costa Rica and Nicaragua, ever came even to the threshold of the Senate to ask an appropriation of a dollar in aid of their enterprise. This is the first project of that kind. But the Maritime Canal Company, a corporation without money or credit, utterly bankrupt and insolvent, ask that we pay out of our own Treasury into their treasury $100,000,000, to be used in a work which, according to their own designs, is shown to be not capawhich, according to their own designs, is shown to be not capable of financial completion, profitable completion, and wholly incapable of accomplishment at all, as the sequel will show. They have abandoned their design, and they have chosen no other, but on general principles they want $100,000,000.

Some of the engineering projects of this corporation are spoken of as bold and daring, but I think its financiering project far surpasses them. It is bold, bald, and brazen in effrontery, and yet so delicate in its tracery and form that it may be hard to determine whether it depends most for its success upon corruption or creations. whether it depends most for its success upon corruption or credulity. Their bill, which was discussed very fully here three years ago, asked for $70,000,000. Why do they now want $30,000,000

I voted very reluctantly for the act of February 20, 1889, the original act of incorporation of this company. It was a matter here of a good deal of discussion sub silentio, from seat to seat, from desk to desk. The promoters were gentlemen—one of them was from my own State-very distinguished gentlemen, from different parts of the Union, named in the act as incorporators, but the concession, which controls the charter, and the act which had not yet become a charter both provided that the principal office of the company, all its securities, and all its archives should be kept and preserved in the city of New York. Therefore we suggested to them that it ought to be a New York corporation and that the United States ought not to meddle with the grant of corporate power; that even the grant of an ordinary incorporating act might entangle financially the Government with the enterprise itself, and that at home they would have a forum with which they were perfectly familiar, State courts with whom the enterprise, if not received with favor, would be at least treated with great impartiality and fairness. For weeks, day after day, we remitted, and sent them again and again to the New York forum for an act of incorporation.

Finally it was said to them in very express terms, "We are apprehensive that in granting this act of incorporation the Government may be in some way pecuniarily liable directly or indirectly for the expenditures of your undertaking." They said no, they did not want a dollar of this Government or of any government. They said the initial strength—that is the term; it takes the very highest class of operators to invent these terms-they said the initial strength and inceptive favor of the enterprise itself would attract and draw to them all the capital and more than would be needed for the prosecution of the design. They repre-sented to us that an English syndicate was ready to take the con-tract for the completion of the route from the Atlantic to Lake Nicaragua, and that a French syndicate was waiting to take the contract for the completion of the canal from Deseado to Brito, the Pacific terminal. They represented to us that London and Paris were hungering and thirsting to take the stock, bonds, and contracts, and that they did not desire any pecuniary aid.

We gave them our most ample consideration and very diligent attention. The result was a conference between those hesitating about the support of the bill—I was one of them—and the friends of the bill, and they came to a very definite conclusion; they came to a well-ordered and acute point in this controversy. "You say you do not want any money. Are you willing to put that into the act? You say you do not want the United States to assume the slightest liability on account of this most. the slightest liability on account of this work. Are you willing to make that a part of the charter?" They said they were; and it was upon that condition that the original act of incorporation of was upon that condition that the original act of the practice the Maritime Canal Company was passed, and it was upon that condition that I, among others, voted for the bill. I believe that condition, which is a proviso, was drafted by the honorable and learned Senator from Mississippi [Mr. George], who, I regret, is detained by severe indisposition from his seat at this time. to call attention to it. It is part of the fundamental law in this case. It is part of the fundamental policy of the incorporation. It is a condition precedent to the granting of the charter, accompanying the granting of the charter, running yet with the charter.

The principal office of said corporation shall be in the city of New York-

I read from page 2 of the original act of incorporation

I read from page 2 of the original act of incorporation—
and all legal process may be served upon the person who may at the time be in charge of said office or upon the attorney of said company, whose name and address shall be certified by the president of the company; and such certificates shall be filed in the office of the Secretary of State of the United States: Provided, however, That nothing in this act contained shall be so construed as to commit the United States to any pecuniary liability whatever for or on account of said company, nor shall the United States be held in any wise liable or responsible in any form or by any implication for any debt or liability in any form which said company may incur, nor be held as guaranteeing any engagement or contract of said company, or as having assumed by virtue of this act any responsibility for the acts or proceedings of said company in any foreign country or contracts or engagements entered into in the United States.

In the operative language of the act is "guaranteeing"—the very word used in this bill.

If that is not a conclusive estoppel at law and in equity against this demand for an appropriation of $100,000,000, the English language can not frame one.

We were determined that the company should never be incorporated at all without this proviso. The proviso being in the charter is not only prima facie but conclusive against their rights, against even their equity to come here and make this enormous demand for subvention and subsidy.

The Government of the United States was not the only one interested in saying "Hands off!" with respect to this incorporation. Equal precaution, sir, was taken by both the Republics of South America who were parties to its original concession. I wish to call the attention of the Senate to the provisions of the original cession upon that subject.

Article 15 of the treaty, the concession between the Maritime Canal Company and Nicaragua, is identical with the same article in the treaty between this corporation and the Republic of Costa Rica, and reads in the following terms:

All expenditures for surveys, construction, maintenance, and operation of the Interoceanic Maritime Canal shall be borne by the concessionary com-pany, without any subvention in money nor guaranty—

They took the pains to report upon that very thing, and not only to report, but to agree upon that very thing which is asked for in the pending bill—without any subvention in money nor guaranty of interest on the part of the Republic, nor other concessions than those specified in the present agreement.

The Government of the United States was not the only one that distrusted the Maritime Canal Company. The Government of the United States was not the only one that discredited this corporation. Even in its beginning, even in its inception, all three of the Republics that were signatory parties to the treaty of cession declared that they would not be bound either directly or by guaranty for any pecuniary liability of the company in this enter-prise. It is not to be taken as any disfavor to the prosecution of this enterprise. The corporation has always pretended and pro-fessed that it wanted none; that it had itself the money, or could command it, to construct and complete the canal. or not, it voluntarily made the agreement with all three of the Republics that it would ask no money and no guaranty of either of them; and the company has now deliberately violated such agree-ment with respect to the United States, and the pending bill proceeds upon the violation of that agreement. It proceeds upon the fact that we shall be bound not only for the expenses of construcfact that we shall be bound not only for the expenses of construction and completion, but that we shall repay to this company not the value of its work, half a mile of canal, which it has been engaged for four years in making, but the money expended to make the work, expended for work done by the Nicaragua Canal Construction Company—not by the Maritime Company—under a contract by which the Maritime Company agreed to pay the Construction Company four times the estimated cost of the completion of the work. We are compelled—the United States are compelled—under the conditions of this bill, under that contract, to pay four times the estimated cost of the work actually done by the Construction Company as found under their own estimates. struction Company as found under their own estimates

If I were in favor of this bill at all, I should have no objection to paying the reasonable cash value at this time for what they have there, if they have anything, but I think it is a very inequitable, thoroughly unjust provision that we should be bound to pay what they expended when they expended, as the archives of the company show, four times more than the work was estimated at. This belongs, sir, to that field of operations, that close field similar to mare clausum in international law, which is foreclosed between the construction company and the principal company engaged in the work. This is the third attempt which the corporation has made to procure money from the Government. Heretofore they have got procure money from the Government. Helecology of their own nothing, and, according to the terms and conditions of their own nothing, and according to the terms and conditions of their own nothing. This charter, they ought neither to ask nor to receive one penny. This magnificent enterprise in their hands has been totally discredited. Why should we encumber ourselves with the wreck and fragment of a defunct body corporate when we can by tripartite treaty with the Republics interested build, own, and operate this canal, regarding its construction as a necessity, when, upon grave consideration and accurate estimate, we find it to be practical to do so. Whatever is possible, the Government of the United States may accomplish and will accomplish. What we do here pecuniarily ought to be done on the account of the Government, not on the account of a private corporation.

The gist of the bill is in sections 9 and 16, and I propose to examine those sections.

SEC 9. That to secure the means to construct and complete said canal, and to meet the expenditures made on account thereof, the said Maritime Canal Company of Nicaragua is hereby authorized to issue coupon or registered bonds, or both, of the said company, in denominations of not less than $50 nor more than $1,000, to an amount not exceeding $100,000,000, to be dated on the 1st day of July, 1896—

That undoubtedly is a numerical error, because the day has already passed-to be payable on the 1st day of July, 1926-

They are thirty-year bonds or designed to be such—but redeemable at the pleasure of the United States at any time after the 1st day of July, 1906, at par with interest at the rate of 3 per cent per annum, payable quarterly on the 1st days of October, January, April, and July of each year, from the delivery of the bonds to said company by the Secretary of the Treasury from time to time as by this act required: Provided, That the President of the United States may at any time suspend the issue of said bonds until Congress, being informed by him of the reasons for such suspension, shall otherwise direct. And said bonds shall be secured by a first mortgage on its property and rights of property now existing or hereafter acquired of all kinds and descriptions, real, personal, and mixed, of all franchises and rights of the said company, including its rights and franchises and rights of the said company, including its rights and franchise to be a corporation. Such mortgage shall contain a provision for a sinking fund sufficient for the payment of said bonds at maturity in accordance with the provisions of section 12 of this act. Such mortgage shall be soframed as to be valid as a first lien under the laws of Nicaragua and Costa Rica. The form and sufficiency of such mortgage as the first lien upon the Nicaragua Canal and of the provision for the sinking fund shall, before execution, be approved by the Attorney General of the United States, and the trustees named in such mortgage shall be approved by the Secretary of the Treasury. Said mortgage shall be recorded in the office of the Secretary of the Treasury in Washington and in the proper offices in Nicaragua and Costa Rica, to be designated by the said States; and as additional security for the payment of said bonds, and to save the United States harmless by reason of its guaranty of the same, there is hereby created a first lien in favor of the United States upon the Nicaragua Canal.

I come now to section 16: They are thirty-year bonds or designed to be such-

I come now to section 16:

That the bonds so issued to said directors shall be disposed of by them at not less than their par value, and the proceeds arising from such sales shall be paid into the treasury of the canal company, and, except as hereinbefore provided, shall be used for the extinguishment of the company's indebtedness contracted after the appointment by the President of the United States of the eight directors herein provided for.

Now, the first question in this case, which has always seemed to Now, the first question in this case, which has always seemed to me, sir, a very serious question, is, Has Congress the lawful authority to guarantee the note of a citizen of the United States—of any citizen? The Maritime Canal Company, the beneficiary of this bill, is a corporation. That is very true. It is chartered by the Government of the United States. A corporation is decided to be a person, and not only a person but a resident, a resident of the State in which its principal office is situate; and if its principal office be situate in any State, it must therefore be a citizen and resident of the United States.

Where in the Constitution is the authority given Congress—in what section, in what clause, either by indirection, by any sort of implication, for there is no provision on the subjectof implication, for there is no provision on the subject—to guarantee the bond or note of a citizen, for the person sought to be guaranteed here is a citizen. I should think it would be a thing to be avoided in the foundation of any government. I do not think a constitution could have been framed or adopted which, even by implication, gave the power to the National Government either to indorse or guarantee the note or bond of a citizen. I can conceive that they might guarantee the bond of a State or of several States; that is, I conceive that authority might have been given them to do that. Possibly such a proposition might have prevailed, but no one looking at the solvency of the Government, no one having the presence of the taxpayers before him, no con-stituent body depending upon votes for election would ever even have considered the proposition to allow the National Government

Yet that is the bone of this bill. Whatever its flesh may be, very loose and flabby, the bone of the bill proceeds upon the lawful authority of the Government to go security—I will put it in the most colloquial term—upon the note or bond of a citizen. The framers of this measure say there is nothing in the Constitution forbidding it. I do not think there is Such a monstrous proposition needed. it. I do not think there is. Such a monstrous proposition needed no prohibition. What amount of taxation would be needed to supply the Treasury with funds if we should undertake to guarantee the payment of the notes or bonds of citizens?

The promoters of this measure were the only persons who could conceive of any such prohibition. I do not think it is an answer to a constitutional objection to say that the power questioned is not forbidden in the provisions of that instrument. The Constitution is an instrument of granted powers, and where powers are not granted they are not; they exist not. Here is a power not granted; not purposed to be granted; not implied as granted; not by any possible intendment granted. And it is not. There is no such power.

It is very fortunate for us that we have limitations in the Constitution. It is the only lawful prohibition upon zeal without knowledge; upon that energy without bounds—I am putting it upon high grounds—upon that enthusiasm which has no measure and no mood in its operation; that generous enthusiasm which has so often found utterance here on this theme. The only bound we can put to it with respect to the pecuniary subsidies of this kind asked of the Government is that we might be pleased to do it, but we have not the power; we have not the authority to tax the people in such manner.

The denial of this power has nothing to do with the denial of the construction of this work or its completion. The Government may borrow money. That is a necessary power implied by many of those granted. The Government may appropriate money from of those granted. The Government may appropriate money from the Treasury; that is, set apart and designate and mark it as ap-plicable to a certain purpose. I am rather of the opinion indorsed by Mr. Edmunds, formerly a Senator, that the power of appro-priation is perhaps the most absolute power in the body. But then that operates upon funds, it operates upon money, it operates upon specie, it operates upon the cash in hand or thereafter to be such from tax collections.

This bill is not an appropriation of money. I would not trouble much about the power of the Government to construct the canal, to build and complete it, under ordinary political and legislative conditions. I would raise no question in regard to it making apconditions. I would raise no question in regard to it making appropriations directly for that purpose or issuing and selling its bonds upon its own account for that purpose. That is not what the bill requires. It requires that we shall guarantee the bonds issued by a citizen of the United States, and gives as the overwhelming reason for it that the citizen is bankrupt and has no credit of his own.

There is no precedent for the exercise of such authority. know we have very often purchased territory and issued bonds to raise the money for that purpose. We have often acquired intraterritorial property for the erection of public buildings in the same manner. But we have never guaranteed bonds as asked for in the pending bill, nor even taken any action resembling this except in one instance, and that was in 1864 in the case of the except in one instance, and that was in 1864 in the case of the Pacific Railroad Company. It is a very disastrous precedent. But the question raised here was not raised at all in that enactment. Sixty-four million dollars of bonds were issued by the United States in subsidy and aid o the Pacific Railroad Company twenty-two years ago. The provisions in that act were just as they are in the bill now pending, for the appointment of directors by the President, for the payment by the company of the interest upon and principal of the bonds, that in case of their nonpayment they should be a first hen upon the road, and for the execution of the mortgage, which was executed, making another first lien, if such mortgage, which was executed, making another first lien, if such is possible. Whether it is possible or not it is the exact language of this bill, and it was the language of the act for the Pacific Railroad Company. It seems to me a very difficult, if not an impossible proposition to make the expenditure a first lien on the road, and then to make the mortgage given a first lien on the road. But that Congress in its dealings with the Pacific Railroad Company evidently did not believe they had authority to guarantee the payment of the railroad bonds, and consequently issued the bonds directly to the company, relying upon the first lien and mortgage to secure the repayment of the money. I do not see how there can be two first liens. That was the language of the Pacific act. It is the language of the pending bill to secure the repayment of the money. I do not see how there can be two first liens. That was the language of the Pacific act. It is the language of the pending bill.

There was another provision, that the road should be finished in sections, and that a car should actually pass over the section and it should be approved before the bonds were delivered over to the company. Such a provision is not in this bill in reference to the canal. I will notice it further in the sequel. I was very glad, sir, to notice the action of the other House in the National Legislature a few days ago in respect to our securities upon the Pacific railroad. That company owe us yet upon this subsidy more than $100,000,000. They owe us, if we had the money, enough to pay for the subsidy which this company is asking. Would it not be well enough, I submit in all courtesy and kindness to the promoters of this work, to wait until we have collected the $100,000,000 due to us from the Pacific railroad company before we make another investment of the same character?

another investment of the same character?

All the provisions for repayment in that instance have failed. We have nothing left but the land over which the right of way runs, a strip, I believe, of 200 feet of actual embankment, the incorporeal hereditament, the right of way, the ties, and the rails; we have only a chance to get them. If it had been possible to get the bonds without laying a single rail, they would have been taken by the company; but as they could not take them without completion of section by section, we have this remnant of security and this fragment of indemnity left. Whether we shall realize upon it I do not know, but, as I said before, I am very glad that the honorable House has seen fit not to surrender our chances for indemnity against this great loss. When so much has been said and is likely to be said concerning the personal ability and respectability, solvency, and high character of persons who are to be appointed by the President as directors of the Maritime Nicaragua Canal Company, that was all repeated twenty-two years ago with the same veracity and gravity as it is now repeated with respect to the directors of the canal. There is no amount of personal respectability or solvency or character which will give us this guaranty, the guaranty of honest, commonplace integrity, by incorporate action. Every Senator whom I address knows that to be true.

There is a provision in that act concerning the railroad, a subsidy, that the directors should visit the road once a year, just as this bill provides that they shall visit the canal once a year, and there was the ordinary provision that their expenses should be paid, just as this bill provides that they shall be paid, and the salary was $5,000, just the same salary mentioned in this bill for the directors of the canal. There is a remarkable similarity between both these acts, and I very much fear there will be the same similarity with respect to the fate and fortune which will befall the taxpayers of the United States in relation to results.

It is true it may be said that the Government directors were in the minority on the Pacific Railroad. They were. There was a majority there of interest not controlled by the United States, but we had a minority on the board. When the land grants were exhausted, were used, were sold, were disposed of, and had realized money enough to build and equip the road, we got no payments either of principal or interest. There never has been a single year in which we have had any net profits reported on the road, because net profits would have made a payment to the Government upon its debt peremptory. "Net profits" is the term used in the bill which is now before us. It may be said that these Government directors could not prevent that, but they could have at least advised the country of this enormous confiscation. They went and attended every year; they attended every board meeting. Was there ever any complaint made by any one of them? Did they advise the Government or the people or the Congress of the misuse of funds, the extravagant abuse of funds, the enormous profits, amounting to 400 per cent, in the building of this road? What do Government directors or any other kind of directors know about those intimate and delicate relations between the principal company and the construction company, for the Pacific Railroad had a construction company which absorbed the land, earnings, everything except the steel rails, which sucked the orange dry and left the principal company an empty shell? What could they do to prevent that? What do these canal directors know, and what will they know about the relations between the construction company mentioned in the bill and the Maritime Canal Company? What do they know about the contractors and subcontractors, material men, the overcharging, the salaries of subordinates rendering no service? What do they know about larceny and laches which infest the expenditure of vast sums of public money, which cost those who expend it nothing, and who constantly rely upon new supplies of funds from the same facile source which yielded to their demands in the first place?

There is no directorate that can give us any additional security, any indemnity for the expenditure of the money realized upon the bonds, or the slightest guaranty of the completion and construction of this canal. There is nothing in the machinery of government directorate in such a work for the honest and intelligent expenditure of the sums of money granted, least of all none for its repayment or return expenditure of the sums of money granted, least of all none for its repayment or return.

When this great enterprise is undertaken it ought to be under the direct action of Congress authorizing the Secretary of War to build this canal as he builds a fort or improves a harbor, without the aid of construction companies, cliques, or combinations, and beyond the risk or the reach of such conspiracies. We should then have the assurance that every dollar would be honestly employed, not only in construction, but in every hour of labor with reference to its final completion; whereas if we rashly and imprudently give to this corporation the handling of $100,000,000 the profits of construction in the way of labor to its numerous officers and agents will prolong that process, and completion will be the left thing which they either degines of all none for its reservations.

officers and agents will prolong that process, and completion will be the last thing which they either desire or design.

This work, if it should ever be completed, Mr. President, if you will allow me the expression, will be and must be armored. There will have to be a fleet or squadron at the Atlantic terminal and at the Pacific terminal; there will have to be batteries in defense on land at both of these terminals, and there are several places in the interior where the officers of the Government detailed to make inspection say that it will be necessary to keep a military force, not a large one, but a constant military force for the purpose of guarding it either from public enemies or from private malice.

In every way it will not only be a national but a military and strategic point for the United States. How will this jurisdiction and control of ours be reconcilable with the policy of the private corporation, and what part will they be willing to give or have they set apart for such military reconnoissance and naval observation as will undoubtedly be necessary the moment the work is constructed and completed? If the work is to be so essentially a Government establishment, and must necessarily be a charge in a military and naval sense upon the Government, why ought not, in its inception, the construction to be undertaken wholly as a Government enterprise?

Government enterprise?

Section 4 of the bill, which I will ask to have inserted in my remarks, provides for the creation of the directory of the new company on a new capitalization of the company, which is provided for in the bill:

vided for in the bill:

SEC. 4. That upon the issuance and delivery of the stock and bonds provided for in sections 3 and 7 of this act the places of the directors of the Maritime Canal Company of Nicaragua, except such as represent the States of Nicaragua and Costa Rica, shall become vacant. The board of directors of the Maritime Canal Company of Nicaragua shall consist of eleven directors, one to be appointed by Costa Rica, one by Nicaragua, and one by the stock-holders of the Maritime Canal Company other than the said governments, and eight to be appointed by the President of the United States, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, and removable by the President of the United States for cause. In case of a vacancy in the membership of directors appointed by the President the same shall be filled by appointment by the President, in the same manner, for the unexpired term. That no directors appointed by the President of the United States shall own, directly or indirectly, any stock or pecuniary interest in said company, nor shall any stockholder, director, officer, or employee be connected in any manner with or interested, directly or indirectly, in any contract made by the said company for implements, equipment, material, or anything connected with the construction, equipment, or operation of said canal, and not more than four of said directors shall be appointed from one political party.

One of the directors must be a resident of the Republic of Costa

One of the directors must be a resident of the Republic of Costa Rica. That is one of the provisions of the first treaty. One of the directors must be a resident and in behalf of the Republic of Nicaragua under the same terms of the previous concession. One of the directors, in the bill it is provided, shall represent the Nicaragua Canal Company. The whole number is eleven. Eight of the directors would be, then, under the provisions of the bill, appointable by the President of the United States. This is a new feature in the bill. The original bill provided for fifteen directors; this reduces the number to eleven. Three are already provided in the bill; the eight are said to be dependent upon Executive appointment.

appointment.

This section of the bill in regard to the directorate of the Maritime Canal Company deals with that function as if they had absolute power respecting it, as if there had been no primary and mandatory provisions in regard to it, as if it was nova res, a thing entirely new, created only in this enactment, and which might be entirely controlled by it. It proceeds upon the supposition that all they have to do is to consult Congress in regard to the making or unmaking of directors and in regard to the way the appointing power of the directorate shall be exercised. This would be true if Congress were as regardless of public treaties as the promoters of this measure.

This charter of the Maritime Canal Company was made subject to the treaty of concession executed between the representatives of the Nicaragua Canal Association and the Republics of Costa Rica and Nicaragua. It follows, then, that all our legislation, both the charter and any conceivable amendments to the charter, must be made subject to the conditions of the original treaty of concession. In other words, the treaty of concession is dominant upon the future policy of the company, upon the directorate, and upon every other incident of the incorporation government with which it deals. I wish, therefore, to call the attention of honorable Senators to Articles I, VIII, IX, and X of the treaty of concession. Article I, page 110:

The Republic of Nicaragua-

And it is proper to say that the treaties between Nicaragua and Costa Rica and this company are identical except as to where names are changed-

ARTICLE I.

The Republic of Nicaragua grants the aforesaid Nicaragua Canal Association, and Mr. A. G. Menocal, representative of the said association, accepts on its behalf, for the purposes set forth in Article VII, the exclusive privilege to excavate and operate a maritime canal across its territory between the Atlantic and Pacific oceans.

ARTICLE VIII.

The present concession is transferable only to such company of execution as shall be organized by the Nicaragua Canal Association, and in no case to governments or to foreign public powers.

ARTICLE IX.

The people of all nations shall be invited to contribute the necessary capital to the enterprise, and it shall be sufficient for the fulfillment of this requirement to publish an advertisement for thirty (30) consecutive days in one of the principal daily papers of each of the cities New York, London, and Paris.

ARTICLE X.

The company shall be organized in the manner and under the conditions generally adopted for such companies. Its principal office shall be in New York, or where it may be deemed most convenient, and it may have branch offices in the different countries of Europe and America, where it may consider it expedient.

Its name shall be the "Maritime Canal Company of Nicaragua," and its board of directors shall be composed of persons, one-half at least of them shall be chosen from the promoters who may yet preserve their quality as such.

The promoters are named in the original charter as well as the provision for the election of directors, and it is provided, as is usually done in such incorporations, that no person shall be a director who is not a stockholder, and that when he ceases to be a stockholder he shall cease to be a member of the directorate. Here is a plain provision that one-half of the directorate shall be chosen from among the promoters. The President of the United States may appoint, under the provisions of this charter, but he could only appoint one-half of these persons from the list of the promoters of the Maritine Canal Company. He could not do otherwise without violating the terms of the concession.

Now, there are eight directors after the three who have already Now, there are eight directors after the three who have already been nominated in terms in the bill. One-half of that number would be four. There would be four directors from the promoters of the Nicaragua Canal. There would be one director chosen by that company, one director each for the two Republics, making in all seven directors in the interest of the canal, leaving four who might be disinterested appointees of the United States.

Mr. President, it will be seen, then, that under the terms of the concession which control all our enactments and must control all the action of the company, under the terms of that treaty, there will be seven persons chosen in the interest of the Maritime Canal will be seven persons chosen in the interest of the Maritime Canal Company and four who may not be in that interest. These four may be in the interest of the United States or they may be permay be in the interest of the United States of they may be perfectly impartial and disinterested, as directors should be in such a work. But it is claimed that this provision in the bill giving the power to appoint these directors by the President of the United States gives some security to the United States for the expenditure of the moneys which are to be procured upon the guaranty of the Government, and gives some control to the United States of the policy and operation of the canal. That is not possible, sir, unless four men can control seven. It is not possible except that in this case in a board of directors composed of eleven members the majority shall be four. It is very plain that there is no sort of security for us in that provision. The language of the treaty is extremely peremptory; it is what is called mandatory; it is in such terms as may be enforced; it is in such terms as to admit of a writ of prohibition against a person not properly appointed, a peremptory writ of mandate to a person who is appointed properly. I will call attention to it:

Its name shall be the "Maritime Canal Company of Nicaragua," and its board of directors shall be composed of persons one-half at least of whom shall be chosen from the promoters who may yet preserve their quality as

They lose no right by being chosen as directors; they still retain their rights as promoters. The operative words are "shall be chosen," and none I conceive could be made more peremptory; no legal right could rest upon a stronger foundation.

If we were disposed to treat with a friendly republic upon strictly legal grounds, which I do not suppose we ought, I suppose an assumption, even if there had not been this strong landary of cashing that the strategy of cashing that the treaty and its covenanted terms.

Mr. BATE. Mr. President, if the Senator from Indiana does not desire to continue his remarks this evening, I move that the senator from Indiana does not desire to continue his remarks this evening, I move that the senator from Indiana does not desire to continue his remarks this evening, I move that the senator from Indiana does not desire to continue his remarks this evening.

guage, a recital, a recommendation, that half the directors should be chosen from among the promoters made by the signatory powers thereto, would be regarded as binding on the Government of ers thereto, would be regarded as binding on the Government of the United States, or on every government disposed to honor treaty obligations, and I do not think that any Executive of the United States, any President of the United States, would be for a moment guilty of the discourtesy of questioning the peremptory power of this provision in the treaty. It was reserved for the friends of the pending bill to violate their own treaty, to infract their own agreement, and publicly to disparage the character of these two Republics in South America by coming here to Congress and asking us by law to make an enactment in contradiction to their own treaty. their own treaty.

On this subject, sir, I shall ask to read an extract from the speech of the honorable Senator from Florida [Mr. PASCo]—and it can not be read too often by persons who are desirous of being acquainted with the fundamental elements of knowledge in respect to the career and history of the Maritime Canal Company of Nicaragua. It will be found that this treaty concession was not drawn without caution; it will be found that the provision in relation to the name is as peremptory as the provision in relation to the directors; that one-half of the directors shall be promoters, and the name shall be the Maritime Canal Company. Could they submit an act here changing the name? Could they pass it? Would a majority disregard the terms of the treaty of cession? I read from the remarks of the honorable Senator from Florida in treating of this provision of the original cession: of the honorable Senator from Florida [Mr. Pasco]—and it can this provision of the original cession:

One of the provisions of the bill for the protection of the interests of the United States, upon which great stress is laid by the Committee on Foreign Relations in their reports and by some of the friends of the proposed scheme in the debate upon the pending bill, is that ten of the fifteen directors are to be appointed by the United States, and that with this majority control the interests of our people will be fully protected.

That is the claim made here now.

Those who urge this in favor of the bill must have overlooked the tenth article of the concessions. The last clause of that article reads as follows:

"Its name shall be the 'Maritime Canal Company of Nicaragua,' and its board of directors shall be composed of persons one-half at least of whom shall be chosen from the promoters who may yet preserve their quality as such."

The Senator from Florida remarks upon this provision:

The Senator from Fiorida remarks upon this provision:

This means that eight at least of the fifteen directors are to be chosen from the promoters, and as Nicaragua and Costa Rica have one each, this leaves the United States with the privilege of choosing but five of the fifteen directors to represent her interests, and of course the control of the corporation passes to the private stockholders, who are to own, under the plan of reorganization of the company, not more than $7,000,000 of the capital stock.

If the United States can choose ten of the directors while this article is in force, five of them must be from these promoters who own the stock and control the company as now organized. This sweeps away the foundation for the provisions of the bill to give the United States control of the Maritime Company through the board of directors.

Every word of that very able and elaborate analysis of the terms of the original concession is as applicable to the pending bill as to the number of directors. The pendthe original bill, except as to the number of directors. The pending bill reduces the number to eleven, and of that eleven seven must be chosen, under the provisions of the bill, from those who are promoters of the company, who represent the interests of the corporation and the two Republics. Four alone are to be appointed by the President of the United States as representatives of any by the President of the United States as representatives of any interest the United States may have in such company.

It is very clear that under the terms of the treaty of cession it was not intended, and it will not be permitted to the Maritime Canal Company, to transfer the control of its own operations to the Government of the United States, or any other government, without a violation of the treaty of cession. They can not transfer the control of the treaty of cession.

without a violation of the treaty of cession.

fer this control, not even for money.

Here is the grinding perverseness of these original conditions in the treaty of cession, that they can not transfer the control of the company from their own corporation—not even for $100,000,000.

They are very willing to make a transfer; they are anxious to commit enjoide—suicide of the corporation. They are anxious to make mit suicide—suicide of the corporation. They are anxious to make a gift of the directory, willing to violate treaties, compacts, obligations. What possible ties can bind such action? What possible a gift of the directory, whing to take gations. What possible sense of duty can exist in men who are not only willing but anxious to infringe and to break down the provisions to which they agreed in the original treaty of cession? If there is anything in this treaty, that part of it which provides that one-half of the directors shall be promotors in the company, the part of the directory which belongs to the two Republics, that the concession shall never that the concession government or state—if there is anything in this go to a foreign government or state—if there is anything in this treaty declared, written with every sort of emphasis and accent, it is the fact that this corporation must control itself under the terms of the cession, must retain control of the canal, can not transfer it to the United States or to any other government. That is the very thing which is not permitted, which is forbidden, which is prohibited by the treaty of cession, and it is the very thing that

Mr. TURPIE. I will retain the floor, and resume my remarks to-morrow

Mr. CULLOM. Did I understand the Senator from Tennessee to move an executive session?

Mr. BATE. I did, but I will withdraw that motion if Senators desire. Mr. CULLOM. I should be very glad if the Senator would allow me to call up the legislative, executive, and judicial appropriation bill, and proceed with it for an hour or so.

Mr. FRYE. I hope that will be done.
Mr. BATE. It is now 4 o'clock.
Mr. ALDRICH. That will not interfere at all with the bill which has been pending.

Mr. BATE. I have no objection.

Mr. CULLOM. Of course I do not care to interfere with the Senator from Indiana [Mr. Turple] in finishing his speech at whatever time he desires.

Mr. BATE. It was for the reason that the Senator from Indiana desired to suspend his remarks this evening that I made the motion for an executive session.

Mr. CULLOM. So I understood.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Debate is out of order. The motion of the Senator from Tennessee for an executive session is not debatable. Mr. BATE. It has been suggested by those who have charge of the appropriation bills that they would like to have them considered, and therefore I will withdraw my motion.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Tennessee withdraws his motion.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. W. J. Browning, its Chief Clerk, announced that the House had passed the bill (S. 3071) to authorize the construction of a bridge over the Monongahela River from the borough of Braddock to the township of Mifflin, Pa.

The message also announced that the House had disagreed to the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 9638) making appropriations for the support of the Army for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1898; asks a conference with the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and had appointed Mr. Hull, Mr. Parker, and Mr. McClellan managers at the conference on the part of the House.

The message further announced that the House had passed the

The message further amounted that the House had passed the following bills and joint resolution; in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate:

A bill (H. R. 280) to prohibit the sale of intoxicating drinks to Indians, providing penalties therefor, and for other purposes;

A bill (H. R. 1064) for the relief of Henry F. Thornton;

A bill (H. R. 3014) revising and amending the statutes relating

A bill (H. R. 4178) providing for the use by the United States of devices covered by letters patent;
A bill (H. R. 4279) to cure the title to certain real estate in the District of Columbia;

A bill (H. R. 4379) for the relief of John H. Willis;

A bill (H. R. 8010) to authorize a survey for construction of a bridge across the Eastern Branch of the Potomac River in line with Massachusetts avenue extended eastward;

A bill (H. R. 8499) in relation to taxes and tax sales in the District of Columbia;

A bill (H. R. 9619) granting a pension to Mirum C. Peck;
A bill (H. R. 9704) to authorize the Washington and Glen Echo Railroad Company to obtain a right of way and construct tracks into the District of Columbia 600 feet;

A bill (H. R. 9841) to amend an act authorizing the West Braddock Bridge Company to construct a bridge over the Monongahela River from the borough of Rankin to Mifflin Township;

A bill (H. R. 9863) to extend and amend an act entitled "An act to grant the right of way to the Kansas, Oklahoma Central and Southwestern Railway Company through the Indian Territory and Oklahoma Territory, and for other purposes," approved December 21, 1893; A bill (H. R. 9935) to authorize the construction or acquisition of a bridge across the Rio Grande River at El Paso, in the State of Texas; and

A joint resolution (H. Res. 228) providing for additional telegraphic and electric-light facilities in the city of Washington, D. C., during the inaugural ceremonies on the 4th day of March, 1897.

LEGISLATIVE, EXECUTIVE, AND JUDICIAL APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. CULLOM. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the legislative, executive, and judicial appropriation bill.

Mr. MORGAN. And that the regular order be temporarily laid aside for that purpose?

Mr. CULLOM. Certainly.
Mr. HILL. For what length of time does the Senator from Illinois desire to proceed with the bill of which he is in charge?
Mr. CULLOM. I think we ought to run along for an hour of

Mr. HILL. I thought the Senator said he desired to take up the bill and consider it for an hour.

Mr. CULLOM. We must get in the habit of working a little longer each day; but we can determine later as to our course of

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Illinois asks unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill named by him. Is there objection?

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 9643) making appropriations for the legislative, executive, and judicial expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1898, and for other purposes.

Mr. CULLOM. I now ask that the first formal reading of the bill may be dispensed with, and that the amendments reported by the Committee on Appropriations may be acted upon as they are the Committee on Appropriations may be acted upon as they are reached in the reading.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and that course will be pursued.

The Secretary proceeded to read the bill, which had been reported from the Committee on Appropriations with amendments.

The first amendment of the Committee on Appropriations was, under the head of "Senate, Office of the Secretary," on page 2, line 12, after the word "Senate," to strike out "$5,000" and, in line 14, after the word "Senate," to insert "$5,000;" so as to read:

Office of Secretary: For Secretary of the Senate, including compensation as disbursing officer of the contingent fund of the Senate, $5,000, etc.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the head of "Office of Sergeant-The next amendment was, under the head of "Office of Sergeantat-Arms and Doorkeeper," on page 6, line 7, before the word "carpenters," to strike out "two" and insert "three;" in line 12, after the word "each," to strike out "telephone operator, $720" and insert "two telephone operators, at $720 each;" in line 15, after the word "dollars," to insert "press-gallery page, $600;" in line 17, before the word "laborers," to strike out "twenty-two" and insert "twenty-five;" and, in line 22, before the word "dollars," to strike out "twenty-four thousand two hundred and twenty-four" and insert "twenty-eight thousand six hundred and sixtyfour" and insert "twenty-eight thousand six hundred and sixty-four;" so as to make the clause read:

Office of Sergeant-at-Arms and Doorkeeper; For Sergeant-at-Arms and Doorkeeper, $4,500; horse and wagon for his use, $420, or so much thereof as may be necessary; for clerk to Sergeant-at-Arms, $2,000; assistant doorkeeper, $2,502; a messengers, acting as assistant doorkeeper, $2,502; a messengers, acting as assistant doorkeepers, at $1,800 each; 46 messengers, at $1,440 each; assistant messenger on the floor of the Senate, $1,440; messenger to Official Reporters' room, $1,400; messenger in charge of storeroom, $1,200; upholsterer and locksmith, $1,440; a carpenters to assist him, at $960 each; skilled laborer, $1,000; 2 janitors, at $900 each; laborer in charge of private passage, $840; 2 female attendants in charge of ladies' retiring room, at $720 each; 2 telephone operators, at $720 each; telephone page, $600; press gallery page, $600; 3 laborers, at $840 each; 25 laborers, at $720 each; 16 pages for the Senate Chamber, at the rate of $2.50 per day each during the session, $8,250; in all, $128,664.

The amendment was agreed to.

The reading of the bill was continued to the beginning of the clause on page 7, line 5, making appropriations for the salaries of the employees of the Senate document room.

Mr. MORGAN. Will it be agreeable to the committee to receive amendments from members of the Senate now, or do they prefer to have the committee amendments first acted upon?

Mr. CULLOM. I have no objection to receiving small amendments as we proceed with the reading of the bill.

Mr. MORGAN. There being no objection, there is one part of the bill to which I should like to offer an amendment as we go along, which I think will not be objected to. I send the amendment to the desk

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment proposed by the Senator from Alabama will be stated.

The Secretary. On page 7, line 6, after the word "dollars," it is proposed to strike out "three assistants" and insert "first assistant, $1,600; two;" so as to read:

For superintendent of the document room (Amzi Smith) $3,000; first ssistant, $1,600; two assistants in document room, at $1,440 each, etc.

Mr. MORGAN. That makes a change only in the compensa-tion of the real first assistant there, Mr. George H. Boyd. Mr. Boyd has been in that office now almost since his childhood, and has got to be almost as proficient in it as Mr. Smith, and that is saying a great deal for anybody. I think it is time we moved his salary up to the point suggested in my amendment, which is $1,600. The corresponding officer in the House of Representatives receives a salary of $2,000.

Mr. CULLOM. The Senator's proposed amendment is to make
Mr. Boyd first assistant, and then to have two assistants in

Mr. MORGAN.

That is right.
Is that in the document room? Mr. ALLISON. Mr. MORGAN.

Yes.

Mr. MORGAN.

Mr. CULLOM. I am inclined to think the amendment is right.

Mr. MORGAN. I think it is.

Mr. CULLOM. I have no objection to the amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. CULLOM. The amendment just adopted will necessitate a change in the total sum appropriated at the end of the paragraph. I suggest that the clerks may be authorized to change the totals where such change is made necessary by the adoption of amendments in any particular clause of the bill. That will obviate the necessity of calling attention to each particular change that may be made necessary.

that may be made necessary.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. In the absence of objection, that will be understood as agreed to.

The reading of the bill was resumed. The next amendment of the Committee on Appropriations was, on page 7, line 16, before the word "thirteen," to strike out "and;" in line 17, after the word "each," to insert "and page, six hundred dollars;" and in line 18, before the word "hundred," to strike out "twenty-five thousand six" and insert "twenty-six thousand two;" so as to make the clause read:

Folding room: For superintendent of folding room, $2,160; assistant in folding room, $1,200; clerk in folding room, $1,200; foreman in folding room, $1,200; nine folders, at $1,000 each; thirteen folders, at $40 each; and page, $600; in all, $23,280.

The amendment was agreed to.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the head of "Under Architect of the Capitol," on page 7, line 22, before the words "assistant engineers," to strike out "three" and insert "four;" in line 25, before the word "firemen," to strike out "two" and insert "three;" on page 8, line 1, before the word "laborers," to strike out "four" and insert "six;" and in line 4, before the word "dollars," to strike out "sixteen thousand one hundred and fifty" and insert "twenty thousand one hundred and twenty-five;" so as to make the clause read:

Under Architect of the Capitol: For chief engineer, $2,160; 4 assistant engineers, at $1,400 each; 3 conductors of elevators, at $1,200 each; machinist and assistant conductor of elevators, $1,000; 3 firemen, at $1,095 each; 6 laborers, at $720 each; in all, $20,125.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 9, line 2, before the word "thousand," to strike out "one" and insert "two;" so as to make the clause read:

For materials for furniture and repairs of same, exclusive of labor, $2,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 9, line 4, before the word "thousand," to strike out "one" and insert "two;" so as to make the clause read:

For services in cleaning, repairing, and varnishing furniture, $2,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in the provisions for the House of Representatives, on page 17, line 8, after the word "days," to strike

And the appropriations made in the foregoing paragraphs under the Senate and House of Representatives for session employees shall be available on and after the first day of the meeting of the Fifty-fifth Congress, and continue available until the final adjournment of the first session of said Congress.

So as to make the clause read:

That wherever the words "during the session" occur in the foregoing paragraphs they shall be construed to mean not exceeding seven months, or two hundred and seven days.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 17, after line 12, to insert:

For clerk hire, Members and Delegates: To pay Members and Delegates the amount they certify they have paid or agreed to pay for clerk hire necessarily employed by them in the discharge of their official and representative duties, as provided in the joint resolution approved March 3, 1893, during the session of Congress, and when Congress is not in session as provided in House resolution passed May 8, 1896, $400,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary; and Representatives and Delegates elect to Congress whose credentials in due form of law have been duly filed with the Clerk of the House of Representatives, in accordance with the provisions of section 31 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, shall be entitled to payment under this appropriation.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 18, after line 13, to strike out:

To pay Members and Delegates the amount which they certify they have paid or agreed to pay for clerk hire necessarily employed by them in the discharge of their official and representative duties, as provided in the joint resolution approved March 3, 1893, and House resolution, passed May 8, 1896, $400,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary.

The amendment was agreed to. The reading of the bill was continued to the end of line 20 on

Mr. CULLOM. As there are a good many Senators who are especially interested in the Library of Congress, and as the Senate is not very well attended this evening, I suggest that we pass over all of the provisions relating to the Library, which will be from the words "Library of Congress," in line 21, page 19, down to and including line 12 on page 26.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without reading so much of the

Mr. CULLOM. Yes.

Mr. CULLOM. Yes.
The PRESIDING OFFICER. If there be no objection, that course will be pursued. The Chair hears none.

The reading of the bill was resumed, beginning with line 13 on page 26. The next amendment of the Committee on Appropriations was, under the head of "Executive," on page 27, line 2, after the words "President of the United States," to strike out "Private Secretary" and insert "Secretary;" so as to read:

For compensation to the following in the office of the President of the United States: Secretary, $5,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the head of "Department of State," on page 28, line 15, before the word "dollars," to insert "four hundred;" and in line 23, before the word "dollars," to strike out "nineteen thousand six hundred" and insert "twenty thousand:" so as to make the clause read:

For compensation of the Secretary of State, $8,000; Assistant Secretary, $4,500; Second and Third Assistant Secretaries, at $3,500 each; chief clerk, $2,500; six chiefs of bureaus and one translator, at $2,100 each; private secretary to the Secretary, $2,400; eleven clerks of class $2, four clerks of class $2, seven clerks of class $2, one clerk of class $2, for indexing records, $1,400; sixteen clerks of class $1,000 each; ten clerks, at $1,000 each; ten clerks, at $500 each; ten clerks, at $1,000 ea

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the head of "Office of Comptroller of the Treasury," on page 36, line 8, before the word "hundred," to strike out "five" and insert "seven," and in the same line, after the word "dollars," to strike out:

Five law clerks revising accounts and briefing opinions, at $2,100 each; ree clerks of class four;

And insert:

Chief law clerk, $2,700; four law clerks revising accounts and briefing opinions, one at $2,100, and three at $2,000 each; two confidential clerks of class 4, including one for the Assistant Comptroller.

In line 15, before the word "clerks," to strike out "four" and insert "five," and in line 17, before the word "hundred," to strike out "six" and insert "nine;" so as to make the clause read:

Office of Comptroller of the Treasury; For Comptroller of the Treasury, $5,500; Assistant Comptroller of the Treasury, $4,500; chief clerk, $2,700; chief law clerk, $2,700; four law clerks revising accounts and briefing opinions, one at $2,100 and three at $2,000 each; two confidential clerks of class 4, including one for the Assistant Comptroller; five clerks of class 3; two clerks of class 1; two messengers; and one assistant messenger; in all, $39,900.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the head of "Office of the Treasurer," on page 41, line 23, before the word "clerks," to strike out "eighteen" and insert "twenty;" on page 42, line 1, before the word "clerks," to strike out "eight" and insert "ten," and in line 3, before the word "hundred," to strike out "sixty-six thousand six" and insert "seventy thousand eight;" so as to make the clause read:

For the force employed in redeeming the national currency (to be reimbursed by the national banks), namely: For superintendent, $3,500; teller, $2,500; bookkeeper, $2,400; assistant teller, $2,000; two clerks of class 4; three clerks of class 3; four clerks of class 2; twenty clerks of class 1; one skilled laborer, $1,000; ten clerks, at $1,000 each; ten clerks, at $900 each; three assistant messengers; and one charwoman; in all, $70,800.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the head of "Office of the Director of the Mint," on page 47, line 6, after the word "dollars," to insert "examiner, $2,500," and in line 15, before the word "hundred," to strike out "twenty-six thousand eight" and insert "twenty-nine thousand three;" so as to make the clause read:

Office of the Director of the Mint: For Director, $4,500; examiner, $2,500; computer, $2,500; assayer, $2,200; adjuster of accounts, $2,000; two clerks of class 4; one clerk of class 2; four clerks of class 1; translator, $1,400; one clerk, $1,000; one copyist; one messenger; assistant in laboratory, $1,000; and one assistant messenger; in all, $29,300.

The amendment was agreed to.
The next amendment was, under the head of "Office of Supervising Surgeon-General Marine-Hospital Service," on page 48, line 19, to insert the following proviso:

Provided. That the Secretary of the Treasury is hereby authorized, in his discretion, to grant to the medical officers of the Marine-Hospital Service commissioned by the President, without deduction of pay, leaves of absence for the same periods of time and in the same manner as is now authorized to be granted to officers of the Army by the Secretary of War.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the head "Office of assistant treasurer at Chicago," on page 54, line 11, before the word "dollars," to strike out "four thousand five hundred" and insert "five thousand;" in line 16, before the word "clerks," to strike out "ten" and insert "eleven," and in line 21, before the word "hundred," to strike out "thirty-four thousand two" and insert "thirty-five thousand nine;" so as to make the clause read:

Office of assistant treasurer at Chicago: For assistant treasurer, $5,000; cashier, $2,500; paying teller, $1,800; assorting teller and receiving teller, at $1,500 each; clerk, $1,600; bookkeeper, and two coin, coupon, and currency clerks, at $1,500 each; eleven clerks, at $1,200 each; messenger, $840; stenographer, $720; janitor, $600; and three watchmen, at $720 each; in all, $35,920.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the head of "Office of assistant treasurer at New York," on page 57, line 3, after the word "dollars," to strike out "engineer, $1,050," and insert "two engineers, at $1,050 each;" and in line 9, before the word "dollars," to increase the total appropriation from $194,590 to $195,640.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the head of "United States mints and assay offices," on page 59, line 15, after the subheading "Mint at Carson, Nev.," to strike out—

For assayer in charge, $2,500; melter, $2,000; assistant assayer, $1,500; and one clerk, $1,500; in all, $7,500—

And insert:

For superintendent, $3,000; assayer, and melter and refiner, at $2,500 each; chief clerk, $1,800; bookkeeper, cashier, assistant assayer, assistant melter and refiner, and weigh clerk, at $1,500 each; in all, $17,300.

So as to make the clause read:

Mint at Carson, Nev.: For superintendent, $3,000, etc.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 59, line 25, to increase the appropriation for wages of workmen at the mint at Carson, Nev., from $10,000 to $15,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 60, line 1, under the head of "Mint at Carson, Nev.," to strike out—

For incidental and contingent expenses, $3,000-

And insert:

For incidental and contingent expenses, including wastage of operative officers and loss on sale of sweeps, $7,500.

So as to make the clause read:

For incidental and contingent expenses, including wastage of operative officers and loss on sale of sweeps, $7,500.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 64, after line 24, to insert:

Assay office at Deadwood, S. Dak.: The Secretary of the Treasury is hereby authorized and directed to provide sufficient room for an assay office in the city of Deadwood, as provided by the act approved June 11, 1886, entitled "An act making appropriations for sundry civil expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1897, and for other purposes," and provide the same with the necessary fixtures and apparatus. For the payment of salaries and wages of workmen and contingent expenses and rent the sum of $10,000 is hereby appropriated in addition to the sum already appropriated, the said office to be conducted under the provisions of an act entitled "An act revising and amending the laws relative to the mints, assay offices, and coinage of the United States," approved February 12, 1873.

The amendment was agreed to.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the head of "Nautical Almanac Office," on page 80, line 8, to increase the appropriation "for services of a competent mathematician to supervise the completion of the tables of the planets" from $2,000 to $3,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the head of "Department of the Interior," on page 84, line 13, after the word "each," to insert "census clerk, $2,000;" and on page 85, line 12, before the word "thousand," to strike out "twenty-four" and insert "twenty-six;" so as to make the clause read: so as to make the clause read:

office of the Secretary: For compensation of the Secretary of the Interior, $3.00; First Assistant Secretary, $4.500; Assistant Secretary, $4.000; chief clerk, $2.500, and $250 additional as superintendent of the Patent Office building; nine members of a board of pension appeals, to be appointed by the Secretary of the Interior, at $2.000 each; special land inspector connected with the administration of the public-land service, to be appointed by the Secretary of the Interior and to be subject to his direction, $2.500; clerk in charge of documents, $2.000; custodian, who shall give bond in such sum as the Secretary of the Interior may determine, $2.000; six clerks, chiefs of division, at $2.000 each, one of whom shall be disbursing clerk; four clerks, at $2.000 each; census clerk, $2.000; private secretary to the Secretary of the Interior, $2.000; eleven clerks of class 4; nine clerks of class 3; thirteen clerks of class 2; twenty-five clerks of class 1, two of whom shall be stenographers or type-writers; returns office clerk, $1.200; two clerks, at $4.000 each; one clerk, $000; seven copylsts; telephone operator, $000; three messengers; six assistant messengers; fourteen laborers; two skilled mechanics, one at $000 and one at $720; two carpenters, at $900 each; one laborer, $000; one packer, $900; conductor of elevator, $720; four charwomen; captain of the watch, $1,000; forty watchmen; additional to two watchmen acting as lieutenants of watchmen, at $120 each; engineer, $1,200; assistant engineer, $1,000; and seven firemen; to enable the Secretary of the Interior to employ laborers in the work of distributing the reports of the Eleventh Census, $3,960; in all, $228,030.

Mr. CULLOM. I ask the Senate to disagree to the amendments reported from the Committee on Appropriations which have just been stated.

The amendments were rejected.
Mr. CULLOM. Now, I offer an amendment to come in as a new paragraph after the word "dollars," in line 12, on page 85.
The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated, The SECRETARY. On page 85, after line 12, it is proposed to

For a clerk of class 4, to act as census clerk, and for rent, salary, heat, and light incident to the proper care and preservation of the records of the Eleventh and previous censuses, $6,800, to be immediately available.

The amendment was agreed to.

The reading of the bill was resumed. The next amendment of The reading of the bill was resumed. The next amendment of the Committee on Appropriations was, under the subhead "Patent Office," on page 92, line 21, to increase the appropriation "for purchase of professional and scientific books and expenses of transporting publications of patents issued by the Patent Office to foreign governments," from $2,000 to $3,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the subhead "Bureau of Education," on page 93, line 23, before the word "dollars," to insert "six hundred;" and on page 94, line 13, before the word "hundred," to strike out "two" and insert "eight;" so as to make the clause read:

Bureau of Education: For Commissioner of Education, $3,600; chief clerk, $1,800; statistician, $1,800; translator, $1,600; collector and compiler of statistics, $2,400; specialist in foreign educational systems, $1,800; specialist in education as a preventive of pauperism and crime, $1,800; two clerks of class 1; two clerks of class 2; two clerks of class 2; seven clerks of class 1; two clerks, at $1,000 each; seven copyists; two copyists, at $500 each; copyist, $720; skilled laborer, $340; one assistant messenger; two laborers; two laborers, at $480 each; laborer, $400; and one laborer, $360; in all, $50,820.

The amendment was agreed to

Mr. BATE. In the clause which has just been amended, on page 93, line 24, after the word "statistician," I move to strike out "$1,800" and insert "$2,000;" so as to read:

Statistician, $2,000.

That is merely giving an increase of salary to the statistician of the Bureau of Education of $200 a year, which should be agreed of the base seems to be some merit in it. there seems to be some merit in it.

Mr. BATE. That is right. A similar amendment was agreed to at the last session.

The amendment was agreed to.

The reading of the bill was resumed. The next amendment of the Committee on Appropriations was, under the head of "Surveyors-general and their clerks," on page 100, line 12, before the word "dollars," to strike out "eight thousand five hundred" and insert "ten thousand;" and in line 13, before the word "dollars," to strike out "ten thousand five hundred" and insert "twelve thousand;" so as to make the clause read:

For surveyor-general of the Territory of New Mexico, $2,000; and for clerks in his office, $10,000; in all, $12,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the head of "Department of Labor," on page 111, line 17, before the word "laborers," to strike out "two" and insert "four;" and in line 22, before the word "dollars," to strike out "one thousand two hundred and twenty" and insert "two thousand five hundred and forty;" so as to make the clause read:

For compensation of the Commissioner of Labor, $5,000; chief clerk, $2,500; disbursing clerk, $2,000; four statistical experts, at $2,000 each; four clerks of class 3; five clerks of class 2; twelve clerks of class 1; ten clerks, at $1,000 each; two copyists; one messenger; one assistant messenger; three watchmen; four laborers; two charwomen; six special agents, at $1,600 each; ten special agents, at $1,400 each; four special agents, at $1,200 each; in all, $102,540.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in the provision for Court of Private Land Claims, on page 114, line 9, after the words "on the," to strike out "31st day of December "and insert "4th day of March;" and in line 11, after the word "and," where it occurs the first time, to strike out "ninety-eight" and insert "ninety-nine;" so as to make the clause read:

SEC. 19. That the powers and functions of the court established by this act shall cease and determine on the 4th day of March, 1899, and all papers, files, and records in the possession of said court belonging to any other public office of the United States shall be returned to such office, and all other papers, files, and records in the possession of or appertaining to said court shall be returned to and filed in the Department of the Interior.

The amendment was agreed to.

The reading of the bill was continued to the end of line 5 on page 115.

Mr. COCKRELL. I am not certain as to the effect of the provision on page 114, beginning with the proviso in line 23 and going down to the beginning of the additional proviso in line 5 on page 115. I am fearful that it may have some effect on the salaries of United States marshals and deputy marshals, and therefore I will ask that it may be stricken out so that we may consider it in conference.

Mr. CULLOM. Would it not be just as well to have the proviso referred to passed over for to-night?

Mr. ALLISON. We can not dispose of the bill this evening.

Mr. COCKRELL. That would be very much better.

Mr. CULLOM. It think it would be better, perhaps. We will look into the matter meanwhile.

Mr. ALLISON. Let it be passed over. Mr. CULLOM. I ask that the proviso may be passed over for the evening.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That course will be pursued, if there be no objection.

The reading of the bill was resumed. The next amendment of the Committee on Appropriations was, under the subhead "United States courts, Indian Territory," on page 115, line 12, after the words "per annum," to insert "and give bonds as other marshals;" so as to make the additional proviso read:

Provided further, That each of the district attorneys in the Indian Territory shall receive a salary of $4,000 per annum, and each of the marshals shall receive a salary of $4,000 per annum and give bonds as other marshals.

The amendment was agreed to.
The reading of the bill was continued to the end of line 23 on page 116.

Mr. CULLOM. I desire to offer an amendment to come in after the word "dollars," in line 23, page 116, which seems to be neces-sary in order to enable the Government to keep a commissioner in the Yellowstone Park.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The SECRETARY. After the word "dollars," in line 23, page 116, it is proposed to add:

And the provisions of section 21 of an act making appropriations for the legislative, executive, and judicial expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1897, and for other purposes, approved May 28, 1896, shall not be construed as impairing the right of said commissioner to receive said salary as herein provided.

The amendment was agreed to.

The reading of the bill was resumed and concluded.

Mr. CULLOM. On page 3 I overlooked a little amendment which the committee desire to have made. In the provision for the office of the Secretary of the Senate, line 11, after the word "each" where it occurs the first time, I move to insert:

One assistant messenger, $1,200.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. CULLOM. In line 12, page 3, I move to strike out the words:

Page, nine hundred and twelve dollars and fifty cents.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. CULLOM. Then the total should be changed so as to read

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That change will be made. Mr. CULLOM. I hope that to morrow the Senate will take up the pending bill as early as possible and conclude its consideration during the day. The reading of the bill having been completed, and all the amendments of the committee having been agreed to except with respect to the provisions relating to the Library and to public buildings and grounds, I move that the Senate adjourn.

Mr. LODGE. I hope the Senator from Illinois will withhold that motion for amoment. I should like to ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of a bill.

Mr. CULLOM. Very well.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair will lay before the Senate bills from the House of Representatives for reference.

HOUSE BILLS REFERRED.

The following bills were severally read twice by their titles, and referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia:

A bill (H. R. 4279) to cure the title to certain real estate in the District of Columbia;

A bill (H. R. 8010) to authorize a survey for construction of a bridge across the Eastern Branch of the Potomac River in line with Massachusetts avenue extended eastward;

A bill (H. R. 8499) in relation to taxes and tax sales in the District of Columbia;

A bill (H. R. 9704) to authorize the Washington and Glen Echo

Railroad Company to obtain a right of way and construct tracks into the District of Columbia 600 feet; and

A joint resolution (H. Res. 228) providing for additional telegraphic and electric-light facilities in the city of Washington, D. C., during the inaugural ceremonies on the 4th day of March, 1897.

The following bills were severally read twice by their titles, and referred to the Committee on Commerce:

A bill (H. R. 9841) to amend an act authorizing the West Braddock Bridge Company to construct a bridge over the Monongahela River from the borough of Rankin to Mifflin Township; and A bill (H. R. 9935) to authorize the construction or acquisition of a bridge across the Rio Grande River at El Paso, in the State of Texas.

The following bills were severally read twice by their titles, and referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs:

A bill (H. R. 280) to prohibit the sale of intoxicating drinks to Indians, providing penalties therefor, and for other purposes; and A bill (H. R. 9863) to extend and amend an act entitled "An act to grant the right of way to the Kansas, Oklahoma Central and Southwestern Railway Company through the Indian Territory and Oklahoma Territory, and for other purposes," approved December 21, 1893. December 21, 1893.

The following bills were severally read twice by their titles, and referred to the Committee on Pensions:

A bill (H. R. 1064) for the relief of Henry F. Thornton; and A bill (H. R. 9619) granting a pension to Mirum C. Peck. The bill (H. R. 4379) for the relief of John H. Willis was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

The bill (H. R. 3014) revising and amending the statutes relating to patents was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Patents.

The bill (H. R. 4178) providing for the use by the United States of devices covered by letters patent, was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

ARMY APPROPRIATION BILL.

The PRESIDING OFFICER laid before the Senate the action of the House of Representatives disagreeing to the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 9638) making appropriations for the support of the Army for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1898, and requesting a conference with the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon.

Mr. ALLISON. In the absence of the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. QUAY], who has charge of the bill, I move that the Senate insist upon its amendments and accede to the request of the House of Representatives for a conference.

The motion was agreed to.

By unanimous consent, the Presiding Officer was authorized to appoint the conferees on the part of the Senate; and Mr. QUAY, Mr. HALE, and Mr. BLACKBURN were appointed.

RICHARD BROOKINS.

The PRESIDING OFFICER laid before the Senate the amendments of the House of Representatives to the bill (S. 1690) granting a pension to Richard Brookins.

The amendments were, in line 5, after the word "month," to in-The amendments were, in line 5, after the word "month," to insert "subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws;" in line 7, after the word "Cavalry," to strike out down to and including the word "seven," in line 11; and, in line 13, after the word "Colored," to strike out down to and including the word "five," in line 15, and insert the word "Infantry;" so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, at the rate of $12 per month, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Richard Brookins, who served under that name in Troops M and H of the Ninth Regiment of United States Cavalry, and under the name of Dick Spencer in Company K, One hundred and twenty-third United States Colored Infantry.

Mr. BAKER. I move that the Senate concur in the amendments made to the bill by the House of Representatives.

The motion was agreed to.

ALFRED P. BUSS.

Mr. LODGE. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (H. R. 2941) granting increase of pension to Alfred P. Buss. It is a small bill which has been reported by our committee without amendment.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill. It proposes to place on the pension roll the name of Alfred P. Buss, late private Company D, Fourth Regiment Massachusetts Heavy Artillery, at $30 per month.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

SETTLEMENT OF CERTAIN CLAIMS AGAINST THE DISTRICT.

Mr. GORMAN. I ask the Senate to consider at this time the bill (H. R. 8726) to provide for the payment of certain claims against the District of Columbia by drawback certificates. It has been reported unanimously by the Committee on the District of Columbia.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered

Mr. CULLOM. I renew the motion that the Senate adjourn.
The motion was agreed to; and (at 5 o'clock and 45 minutes p. m.) the Senate adjourned until to-morrow, Wednesday, Januuary 20, 1897, at 12 o'clock meridian.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

TUESDAY, January 19, 1897.

The House met at 12 o'clock m. Prayer by the Chaplain, Rev. HENRY N. COUDEN.

The Journal of the proceedings of yesterday was read and approved.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. THOMAS. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House resolve itself into Committee of the Whole House for the consideration of pension bills, under the special order.

The SPEAKER. That would be the regular order, if the gentleman demands the regular order.

Mr. THOMAS. I demand the regular order.
The SPEAKER. The House will resolve itself into Committee of the Whole House to consider pension bills, under the special order of the House. The Clerk will report the special order. The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved, That on Tuesday, the 19th day of January, immediately after the reading of the Journal, the House shall resolve itself into Committee of the Whole House for the consideration of such bills as are in order on the sessions of Friday evenings, and that in the consideration of such bills under this resolution ten minutes' debate shall be allowed on each bill, with the amendments thereto, such time to be divided equally between those favoring and those opposing the bill: Provided, kovever, That nothing in this resolution shall be construed as interfering with conference reports on general appropriation bills.

Mr. TALBERT. Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry.
The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.
Mr. TALBERT. I would like to ask if the ten minutes allowed is to comprise the reading of the report?

The SPEAKER. The Chair thinks that the report of the com-

The SPEAKER. The Chair thinks that the report of the committee is only read as a part of the debate.

Mr. TALBERT. As part of the debate?
The SPEAKER. It is only read as a part of the debate.
The House accordingly resolved itself into Committee of the Whole House, Mr. Henderson in the chair.
The CHAIRMAN. The House is in Committee of the Whole, under the special order adopted yesterday morning, to consider bills proper to be considered at the Friday night sessions.

Mr. ERDMAN. Mr. Chairman, a parliamentary inquiry.
The CHAIRMAN. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?
Mr. ERDMAN. Does not the special order require that the House shall resolve itself into Committee of the Whole?
The CHAIRMAN. It has resolved itself into Committee of the

The CHAIRMAN. It has resolved itself into Committee of the Whole now.

Mr. ERDMAN. By what action?

The CHAIRMAN. It was done in pursuance of the special order, and by order of the Speaker.

Mr. ERDMAN. Can the Speaker resolve the House into Committee of the Whole or must it resolve itself?

The CHAIRMAN. It is resolved in the usual way, and we are now in Committee of the Whole. The Clerk will report the first bill. bill.

Mr. THOMAS. Mr. Chairman, I understand the first bill is Calendar No. 630, which was being considered when the commit-

Calendar No. 630, which was being considered when the commit-tee rose at the last sitting. The gentleman from South Carolina [Mr. Talbert] had the floor.

The CHAIRMAN. Calendar No. 608 was passed over without prejudice, the Chair is informed.

Mr. THOMAS. We had one bill under consideration, the gen-tleman from South Carolina [Mr. Talbert] had the floor, and I asked him to yield for a motion that the committee rise.

The CHAIRMAN. The committee will first dispose of the bill that was under consideration.

Mr. THOMAS. I ask that that bill be disposed of.

The Clerk read as follows:

WILLIAM R. HARLESS.

A bill (H. R. 4629) granting a pension to William R. Harless.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be the enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place upon the pension roll the name of William R. Harless, of Red Bank, Douglas County, Mo., late a soldier in Companies Band E, Sixtieth Regiment Enrolled Missouri Militia, in the war for the suppression of the rebellion, and pay him a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

Mr. TALBERT. Mr. Chairman, I would like to have the report read.

The CHAIRMAN. The report will be read in the gentleman's

The Clerk proceeded to read the report, which is as follows:

The Cierk proceeded to read the report, which is as follows:

The Committee on Invalid Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 4629) entitled "A bill granting a pension to William R. Harless," beg leave to submit the following report, and recommend that said bill do pass with amendments:

William R. Harless served as a private in Company B, Sixtieth Regiment Missouri Enrolled Militia, from July, 1862, to January, 1863, when the company was disbanded: also, he enlisted again as corporal, Company E, Sixtieth Missouri Enrolled Militia, under Captain Morton, in the spring of 1863 and served with it until the company was disbanded in January, 1864; he also served a short period in Capt. B. F. Cook's company of the St. Clair County Missouri Militia.

The records of the Wey December 1.

short period in Capt. B. F. Cook's company of the St. Clair County Missouri Militia.

The records of the War Department do not show that either of these organizations were ever mustered into the United States service.

Claimant applied for pension June 13, 1881, for results of typhoid-pneumonia contracted at Quincy, Hickory County, Mo., which settled in back and hips. The claim was rejected on the grounds of no ratable disability from alleged causes since date of filing claim.

He filed a claim July 22, 1890, under act of June 27, 1890, for "affection of back and hip," which was rejected on ground of his not having been in the military service of the United States.

Proofs have been presented to your committee showing clearly that the claimant served, as alleged by him, in the Enrolled Missouri Militia about one and one-half years.

On the question of disability claimant filed, September 10, 1885, the affidavit of Dr. M. H. Osborn that he examined him and found a general debilitated condition. He was then suffering from varix of thigh and leg, chronic inflammation of bladder, and diseased condition had appearance of long standing and permanency. Disability three-fourths.

Dr. W. J. Gilbreath testified that claimant was afflicted with congestion of arteries and kidney disease, and the spinal column affected, lower end being curved inward; found a great amount of albumen in urine, and urine bloody; troubled with cramps, and arteries ruptured, and also hydrocele—a case of general disability to extent of three-fourths at least.

Dr. J. H. Hill testified to finding considerable tenderness over kidneys, excessive flow of urine, and applicant complains of continuous pain in region of kidneys and bladder, and varicosed veins of both legs and feet.

Dr. J. H. Burdett filed March 28, 1891, that claimant suffered with varicose veins of both legs, rupture in left inguinal region, injury to hips and back, and rheumatism. Has had eight ribs broken, three on right and five on left side, and has heart disease—his disabilities and rheumatism. Has had eight ribs broken, three on right and five on left side, and has heart disease—his disabilities amounting to three-fourths or more.

Dr. J. T. Stewart testified March 28, 1891, that he has varicose veins in both legs and abdomen, hernia left side, in jury to back and hips, and rheumatism and valvular disease of the heart, and from having eight ribs broken. All of his ailments are of long standing and of a permanent character and not aggravated from vicious habits. He had a severe cut with an ax, serving lower third of fibula of left leg.

He was examined by a board of examining surgeons April 4, 1883, who gave him no rating. He has not been examined since by a regular board.

Claimant filed with the committee a numerously signed petition, certifying to his service and the merits of his claim, and asking for him a pension of $12 per month; also the testimony of comrades, setting forth that while a member of Company B, Sixtieth Missouri Enrolled Militia, he had a bad spell of typhoid pneumonia that left him crippled in back and hips, and that in an engagement with the enemy his horse forced him astride of a small tree which caused rupture in left side, and that from vaccination his blood was contaminated by poison, which has affected him ever since.

Your committee believe him entitled to a pension, and recommend that the bill do pass with the following amendment:

Strike out all between the word "Harless," in line 5, and the word "and," in line 8, and insert in lieu thereof the words "late private in Companies B and E, Sixtieth Regiment Enrolled Missouri Militia."

Mr. Chair-

Mr. TALBERT (during the reading of the report). Mr. Chairman, I ask that the further reading of the report be dispensed with. This is a claim for pension to a man where the reports from the War Department do not show that either organization was ever mustered in as United States troops. They give him no ratable disability. It seems to me that it is a very unjust claim, and it ought not to pass.

The amendment recomended by the committee was agreed to. The question was taken on ordering the bill as amended to be laid aside with a favorable recommendation; and the Chairman announced that the ayes seemed to have it.

Mr. ERDMAN. Division, Mr. Chairman.

The committee divided; and there were—ayes 79; noes 21.

So the bill was ordered to be laid aside with a favorable recom-

MARGARET O'DONNELL.

The next business on the Private Calendar was the bill (H. R. 4823) for the relief of Margaret O'Donnell, nurse of United States

Volunteers.

The bill was read.

Mr. MILNES. Mr. Chairman, that is a bill that was passed over the other day. The beneficiary of that bill is dead. I therefore move that the bill be reported to the House with the recommendation that it lie on the table.

The motion was agreed to.

J. R. PACK.

The next business on the Private Calendar was the bill (H. R. 6234) to restore the name of J. R. Pack to the pension roll.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he hereby is, authorized and directed to restore to the pension roll of the United States the name of J. R. Pack, who was a private in Company D of the Webster County (Mo.) Home Guards, and acting assistant surgeon of the United States Army, and pay him a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

Mr. TALBERT. I ask that the report be read. The report (by Mr. Crowther) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Invalid Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 6234) entitled "A bill to restore the name of James R. Pack to the pension roll," beg leave to submit the following report, and recommend that said bill do pass with amendments:

James R. Pack served as a private in Company D, Webster County (Mo.) Home Guards, from June 12, 1861, to November 1, 1861, when honorably discharged; and also served as an acting assistant surgeon. United States Army, from September 9 to November 9, 1862. The following certificate of discharge proves his service in the Webster County, Mo., Home Guards:

To whom it may concern:

Know ye that, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved May 15, 1886, J. R. Pack, who was enrolled as a private in Company D, Webster County (Mo.) Home Guards, on the 12th of June. 1861, is hereby discharged the service of the United States, to date November 1, 1861.

Given at Washington City this 20th day of June, 1891.

By authority of the Secretary of War:

F. C. AINSWORTH,
Major and Surgeon, United States Army.

This applicant applied for pension July 18, 1891, under the act of June 27, 1890, and was pensioned from date of application at $12 per month for "disease of lungs."

His name was dropped from the rolls November 3, 1894, on the ground of

of lungs."
His name was dropped from the rolls November 3, 1894, on the ground of insufficient service (two months), subsequent service as acting assistant surgeon not recognized.
The medical examination under which he was pensioned shows him rated at twelve-eighteenths for disease of lungs and six-eighteenths for general debility.

at twelve-eighteenens for disease of rungs and six eighteenens for disease of rungs and six eighteenens. Your committee are of opinion that the soldier's discharge, copied above from the original issued by the War Department, is conclusive evidence of service of more than ninety days and an honorable discharge, and that therefore the applicant fulfilled all the requirements intended in the act of June 27, 1890, and therefore recommend the passage of the bill, with the following

27, 1890, and therefore recommend the passage of the bin, with the following amendments:

Amend bill by substituting the word "James" instead of the initial "J" in the Christian name of the beneficiary, in line 5; also by adding after the last word in the printed bill the following proviso:

"Provided, That the pension herein granted shall be paid to James R. Pack, and that no part of it shall be retained by any authority to reimburse the Government for any pension heretofore paid."

Also amend title by inserting the Christian name "James" instead of the initial "J" in the name of the beneficiary.

Mr. TALBERT. Mr. Chairman, I just want to call the attention of the House to the fact that this is a claim for a pension for a man where there is no evidence that he ever served as long as ninety days. He was in the Home Guards, and it was never stated that he did any duty or anything of the sort. It seems to me that it is a very unjust claim, and has no merit at all in it. I move that the bill be reported to the House with the recommendation that it be laid on the table.

Mr. CROWTHER. Mr. Chairman, I am surprised that my distinguished friend from South Carolina, who professes to be so fair and friendly to all old soldiers, should raise any objection to fair and friendly to all old soldiers, should raise any objection to this case, when if he had read the report or paid attention to the reading of the report, he would have discovered that this soldier was in the service from the 12th day of June, 1861, until November 1, 1861, when he was discharged by order of the War Department. Hence, there is no question about the service of this soldier.

Mr. TALBERT. The point I make is this—
The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman yield?
Mr. CROWTHER. For a question, yes.
Mr. TALBERT. There is no evidence that the man ever served ninety days

Mr. CROWTHER. There is evidence from the War Department, and it is set forth in the report.

Mr. TALBERT. Did he ever serve at all?

Mr. TALBERT. Did he ever serve at all?
Mr. CROWTHER. Certainly he served.
Mr. TALBERT. The fact of his being discharged is no evidence of service. The report states that he served in the Home Guards, but there is no evidence as to what those Home Guards did in the way of service. There were thousands of mon who ways in (17). There were thousands of men who were in "Home way of service.

way of service. There were thousands of men who were in "Home Guards" for only a few days and never did any real service.

Mr. CROWTHER. If my distinguished friend will read Report No. 1000, he will discover that there was an agreement between the President of the United States and the State of Missouri whereby the Home Guards of that State and the Missouri Militia called the gentleman's attention. Now, Mr. Chairman, no claim that has been presented during this Congress is more just or equitable than this one. The claimant was placed upon the roll by order of the Pension Bureau, but when the present administration came into power the roll was revised and he was stricken from it. There is no question about his service. There is no question about the justice of his claim, and I hope the committee will be sustained in its recommendation in this case.

Mr. TALBERT. Mr. Chairman, I call attention to this language in the report:

His name was dropped from the rolls November 3, 1894, on the ground of insufficient service (two months), subsequent service as acting assistant surgeon not recognized.

The medical examination under which he was pensioned shows him rated at twelve-eighteenths for disease of lungs and six-eighteenths for general ability.

It appears, therefore, from the report itself that it is all a matter of guesswork as to the length of this man's service. It so appears from the report of the committee.

Mr. TRACEY. Mr. Chairman, I know this claimant for pension personally, and have known him for some years. I personally know about the service in and of which he was a part. There is no question about that service having been rendered, nor is there any question but that since the time when he was stricken from the roll he has become completely disabled. He was not completely disabled at the time the examination was made by the board, but since that time and since his name was stricken from the roll he has become a physical wreck.

Mr. TALBERT. Do you maintain that his disabilities can be traced to service origin?

Mr. TRACEY. No. He was pensioned under the law of 1890; but it remains true that disabilities which can not be traced by competent testimony to service origin have a strong presumption in favor of their origin in the service.

Mr. TALBERT. You say that you know him personally. Do you state here that you know personally that his disabilities can be traced to service origin?

Mr. TRACEY. I do not know that personally, but I do personally know about the service.

Mr. TALBERT. Do you know that he ever did any service at all?

Mr. TRACEY. I do.

The question being taken on the motion of Mr. TALBERT that the bill be laid on the table, the Chairman declared that the noes seemed to have it.

Mr. TALBERT. I ask for a division. The committee divided; and there were—ayes 14, noes 75.

So the motion was rejected.

The amendment recommended by the committee was then adopted; and the bill as amended was laid aside to be reported to the House with the recommendation that it do pass.

JAMES WARBROOK.

The next business on the Private Calendar was the bill (H. R. 7115) granting a pension to James Warbrook.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the limitations and provisions of the pension laws, the name of James Warbrook, late private in Company K, One hundred and twenty-seventh Regiment Pennsylvania Volunteer Infantry, in the late war of the rebellion, at $12 per month.

Mr. TALBERT. Mr. Chairman, I ask that the report be read. The report (by Mr. Wood) was read, as follows:

The committee on Invalid Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 7115) granting a pension to Joseph Warbrook, submit the following report:
The claimant was a corporal in Company K, One hundred and twenty-seventh Pennsylvania Volunteers. He was enlisted August 5, 1862, and discharged, as shown by his certificate, on February 24, 1863, for valvular disease of the heart. The evidence discloses that he was sound on enlistment and was a good soldier and has an honorable discharge. His disease seems to have been incurred from exposure while in the service.

A claim under the general law was rejected June 13, 1893, on ground of "no pensionable disability from alleged disease of heart since date of filing claim."

A claim under act of June 27, 1890, was rejected June 28, 1893, on ground of "no ratable disability."

The claimant made application for reopening. The legal reviewer approved the same "for disease of heart, kidneys, stomach, and bowels, rheumatism, and general ill health."

The medical referee rejected same on the former ground of no "ratable disability."

Claimant has five times been examined by medical boards, beginning on whereby the Home Guards of that State and the Missouri Militia were recognized as a part of the United States Army, and were mustered into the service in pursuance of that agreement.

Mr. TALBERT. In the case which preceded this it was stated that there was no record in the War Department of this Missouri Militia ever having been mustered into the service.

Mr. CROWTHER. There is no record pertaining to some of these organizations in the War Department, but the record does exist in the adjutant-general's office of the State of Missouri, together with the original agreement entered into between the President of the United States and the governor of Missouri, all of which is fully detailed in Report No. 1000, to which I have him suffering from rheumatism, kidney, stomach, and bowel troubles, and totally disabled from manual labor.

There is no doubt that claimant is now disabled, whatever may be the cause. His habits and character are shown to be unexceptionally good, and the committee recommend the passage of the bill.

Mr. THOMAS. Mr. Chairman, I desire to offer an amendment to perfect the bill.
The amendment was read, as follows:

In line 8, after the word "Infantry," strike out the balance of the bill and sert "and pay him a pension of $12 per month."

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill as amended was laid aside to be reported to the House with the recommendation that it do pass.

RICHARD C. ENRIGHT.

The next business on the Private Calendar was the bill (H. R. 6539) granting a pension to Richard C. Enright.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place upon the pension roll the name of Richard C. Enright, late colonel of the Sixty-third New York Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension of $30 per month, in lieu of the pension now being paid to him.

Mr. TALBERT. I ask that the report be read. The report (by Mr. Wood) was read, as follows:

The report (by Mr. Wood) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Invalid Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 6539) granting a pension to Richard C. Enright, submit the following report:

Richard C. Enright was colonel Sixty-third New York Volunteer Infantry from his enlistment, October 39, 1861, to the date of his honorable discharge, February 5, 1862. The evidence of himself, which is corroborated to some extent by a captain of said regiment, satisfies the committee that on rabout January 8, 1862, at night, while on picket duty at camp at Edsalls Hill, near Alexandria, Va., and in returning from the line, his horse stumbled by stepping into a hole, throwing him, by which there was evidently severe straining and spraining of the muscles, tendons, and tissues of the left shoulder, and from which there has resulted anchylosis of shoulder joint. From the date of this accident claimant has been disabled, and upon his examination by the medical board at Chicago, Ill., January 6, 1893, he was shown to be entitled to a third-grade rating on account of that injury, as also eight-eighteenths for rheumatism. His disability is increasing and is permanent. There is much testimony, medical and otherwise, in the Pension Office which has been examined by the committee, and there is very little doubt but that his disabilities entitle him to a pension of $30 per month.

Claimant is now drawing $12 per month under act of June 27, 1890, for injury to left arm and shoulder, rheumatism, and disease of heart.

The only difficulty is in the proof that the disability is of service origin.

At the time of the accident claimant was alone. He is shown to have been disabled immediateley thereafter and has so remained since. He does not appear to have been in any manner disabled prior to the alleged accident. He has furnished all the evidence that in the nature of the case is possible under the general laws; the Pension Bureau so recognize. There is this indersement attached to the papers in the case by the First Deputy Commissi sioner:

"The general case I do not believe he will be able to prove."
Believing him to have been disabled in the line of duty, and to an extent that entitles him to $30 per month, and that he is unable to produce the necessary amount of evidence required at the Pension Office for the reasons above stated, your committee regard this as a proper case for relief by Congressional action, and recommend that the bill do pass, with an amendment to the title by inserting the words "to increase" in lieu of the word "granting."

Mr. TALBERT. Mr. Chairman, I simply want to call attention to the statement of the committee in their report. They say "the only difficulty is in the proof that the disability is of service orionly difficulty is in the proof that the disability is of service origin," thus admitting that they have no proof whatever that the disability can be traced to service origin. Again they say: "Believing him to have been disabled in the line of duty;" so they recommend this case without a scintilla of real proof. I submit, sir, that that is a very flimsy basis upon which to bring in a bill granting a pension of $30 a month. I merely wish to bring this point to the attention of the committee.

Mr. WOOD. Mr. Chairman, there is plenty of evidence in this case entitling the claimant to a pension of $30 a month. There is his own testimony, which is corroborated by one of the captains of the company. To be sure, it is not so much proof as the Pension Office requires in these cases, but, from the nature of the accident, there could hardly be any other direct evidence but his own. He had established the picket line, and in returning his horse stumbled from stepping into a hole, and the claimant here thrown and injured.

Mr. MILES. Will the gentleman permit an interruption right there?

Mr. WOOD. Certainly.
Mr. MILES. I sympathize with the gentleman's claim that this case is exceptional, and that it would be difficult, under the circumstances, to furnish such proof as would be required by the Pension Office, and I would like to ask the gentleman, now that he has the floor, to tell the committee to what extent the individual testimony of the claimant himself is corroborated, as the record states it is the some companion who was along with him at port states it is, by some companion who was along with him at the time when the accident occurred.

Mr. WOOD. It is a fact that he went out on the picket line that night, mounted. It is also a fact that when he went out he was well—without any disability. On the return of the pickets he was found to be disabled, and disabled in the manner that he claims. So far as the accident itself is concerned, there is no evidence except his own testimony.

Mr. MILES. The fact that he was disabled on his return is shown, I understand, by the testimony of his captain, is it not?

Mr. WOOD. Yes, sir.

Mr. MILES. I think, Mr. Chairman, that ought to be satisface.

tory.

The bill was laid aside to be reported favorably to the House.

GEORGE E. REID.

The next business on the Private Calendar was the bill (H. R. 5620) to pension George E. Reid.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll of the United States the name of George E. Reid, late a private in Company E of the One hundred and eightieth Regiment Ohio Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The amendment reported by the committee, to strike out "twelve" and insert "six," so as to make the pension $6 per month, was read.

month, was read.

Mr. STRONG. Mr. Chairman, I trust that the amendment proposed by the Committee on Invalid Pensions will not prevail. George E. Reid was the youngest of three brothers who enlisted in the United States service at the same time, the oldest of whom was under 20 years of age. The two older brothers died from wounds received in the Army. George E. Reid survived, but is a wreck. I happen to know the witnesses whose affidavits have been in evidence before the committee. Dr. J. A. Sansell and Dr. W. A. Swimley are two as reputable and efficient physicians and surgeons as we have in our part of the country, and when either of them makes a statement it means something. Both of them know this man, George E. Reid; both of them have examined him; both of them testify to a state of facts showing that he is permanently disabled. He is crippled in the right shoulder so that his arm it useless. He is crippled in the right shoulder so that his arm can not be freely or fully raised. He has rheumatism of the spine. He has other ailments that absolutely incapacitate him to perform

Now, George E. Reid did not put down the rebellion. He was too young to engage in the early part of the war. He must have been under 16 years of age when he enlisted. But he served for a period of ten months. He served until after the war, and as long as his services were required. I believe that this House, after the liberal action it has taken upon other cases, and especially the liberal course it has pursued in pensioning officers and officers' widows at even as high a rate as $100 a month, ought not no ston and higgle about giving this near man $12 a month the amount stop and higgle about giving this poor man $12 a month, the amount called for by the bill, and which the committee propose to cut down to the pitiful sum of $6 per month. I hope the amendment proposed by the Committee on Invalid Pensions will be voted down.

Mr. ERDMAN. I ask that the report be read.

The report (by Mr. LAYTON) was read, as follows:

Mr. ERDMAN. I ask that the report be read.

The report (by Mr. Layton) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Invalid Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 5820) entitled "A bill to pension George E. Reid." beg leave to submit the following report, and recommend that said bill do pass, with an amendment:

George E. Reid served as a private in Company E, One hundred and eightieth Regiment Ohio Volunteer Infantry. from September 24, 1884, to July 12, 1865, when mustered out with company and honorably discharged.

He filed claim for pension under the act of June 27, 1890, on October 10, 1894, alleging disability from injury to right shoulder, right hand, left wrist, and back, disease of eyes and throat, catarrh, and piles. This claim was rejected June 24, 1894, on the ground of "no ratable disability shown under the act of June 27, 1890."

He filed another claim August 17, 1892, and again October 10, 1894, each of which was rejected on the same ground.

He was examined by a board of examining surgeons at Kenton, Ohio, June 14, 1893, who rated him at one-fourth (or $2) for injury to right shoulder, one-fourth (or $2) for lumbago, and one-fourth (or $2) for catarrh affecting larynx and pharynx and nasal passages.

He was again examined by the board at Kenton, Ohio, November 23, 1894, who found that the acromion process of scapula on right side had been fractured and prevents his raising the arm above level of the shoulder; that the fifth metacarpal bone of right hand has been broken and is lower than the balance of the hand, and leaves the action of flexors of the little finger weak. Find stomach drumming and tender, spleen and liver enlarged, tongue coated gray, skin dry and harsh, and body poorly nourished; nutrition fair. He has follicular inflammation of the pharynx. Lungs and heart normal; no evidence of piles. Can see to "20" of Smellen's chart at 15 feet with either eye. Opthalmascope shows nothing abnormal with eyes. No catarrh in head.

Dr. J. A. Stansell filed affidavit April II, 1894, that he ex

Your committee, having carefully considered all the facts presented in this claim, recommend that the bill be amended by striking out the word "twelve," in line 8, and in place thereof insert the word "six;" and, as amended, recommend the passage of the bill.

The question being taken on the amendment reported by the committee, it was rejected; there being, on a division (called for by Mr. Miles)—ayes 9, noes 54.

The bill was then laid aside to be reported favorably to the

GEORGE C. ABBEY.

The next business on the Private Calendar was the bill (S. 350) granting an increase of pension to George C. Abbey. The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to increase the pension of George C. Abbey, late a private of Company M of the First Connecticut Volunteer Heavy Artillery, and to pay him $20 per month from and after the passage of this act.

Mr. TALBERT. Let us have the report read. The report (by Mr. Kerr) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Invalid Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (S. 350) granting an increase of pension to George C. Abbey, submit the following granting an increases of pension to deerige C. Asbey, stoling the following report:

After careful examination we adopt the report of the Senate Committee on Pensions, and recommend the passage of the bill.

The Senate report is as follows:

"The Committee on Pensions. to whom was referred the bill (S. 350) granting a pension to George C. Abbey, have examined the same, and report:

"A similar bill was introduced in the Fifty-third Congress, first session, referred to the Committee on Pensions, examined, reported favorably, and passed the Senate.

"The facts are as follows:

Passed the Senate.

"The facts are as follows:

"The claimant in this case enlisted in Company M, First Connecticut Heavy Artillery, January 30, 1862, and was honorably discharged September 25, 1865. While in the service he contracted malarial poisoning, chills and fever, and nervous prostration, which resulted in chronic epilepsy and general debility to such an extent that he has for years been unable to support himself and family.

to such an extent that he has for years been unable to support himself and family.

"He has frequent attacks of epileptic spasms, falling and lying for hours in convulsions, and is entirely unfitted to attend to business of any kind. He is a man of good habits and is upright and honest. A former report set forth the fact that a reputable board of examining surgeons, who examined soldier for pension originally, recommended him for a rating of $30 per month, but the Commissioner of Pensions cut this down to $0 per month, and issued him a certificate at that rate dating from August 24, 1889, which he is now drawing. An application for increase has been rejected.

"Under these circumstances your committee believe that the applicant ought to have special relief at the hands of Congress, and accordingly recommend that the bill do pass with an amendment.

"Amend line 6 by striking out the word 'thirty' and insert in lieu thereof the word 'twenty."

"The kill were laid aside to be reported favorably to the House.

The bill was laid aside to be reported favorably to the House.

WILLIAM T. WALKER.

The next business on the Private Calendar was the bill (S. 1888) granting an increase of pension to William T. Walker.
The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of William T. Walker, late of Company H, Thirteenth Regiment Indiana Cavalry, at the rate of $25 per month, in lieu of the pension he is now receiving.

Mr. OWENS. What is the pension that this man is now receiving?

Mr. THOMAS. Eight dollars a month.
Mr. OWENS. The House decided yesterday that an increase from $12 to $16 a month was the proper amount of increase where the man was perfectly helpless and had nothing to live upon. Would it not be well to confine ourselves to that precedent and wake this pension $12 instead of $25 as the bill proposes?

make this pension $12 instead of $25 as the bill proposes?

Mr. THOMAS. I do not understand that the House set any such precedent as the gentleman from Kentucky suggests.

Mr. ERDMAN. I suggest that we have the report read.

The report (by Mr. Kerr) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Invalid Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (S. 1888) granting an increase of pension to William T. Walker, submit the following report:

The committee, after carefully examining the bill, adopt the Senate report as the report of the committee, and recommend the passage of the bill.

The Senate report is as follows:

"The Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (S. 1888) granting an increase of pension to William T. Walker, have examined the same and report."

The Committee of Pension to William T. Walker, have examined the same and report:

"A similar bill was introduced in the Senate at the second session of the Fifty-third Congress and referred to the Committee on Pensions.

"It was examined, favorably reported, and passed the Senate. The facts are as follows:

"The claimant in this case enlisted February 12, 1864, and was honorably discharged November 18, 1865. Was pensioned from November 19, 1865, at $4 per month, for varicocele of left side. Pension was increased to $12 a month from July 10, 1890, under the act of June 27, 1890, for left varicocele, rheumatism, disease of heart, and injury of left hand. December 6, 1893, claimant was notified by Commissioner of Pensions that his pension would be reduced to $8 per month unless he should furnish evidence that he was suffering from the diseases and aliments for which his pension was granted under the act of June 27, 1890. January 13, 1894, claimant filed in Pension Office the affidavits of five reputable physicians of Urbana, Ohio, where he resides, all of whom state, substantially, that from their own personal knowledge they know that claimant is actually suffering from the aliments for which he was pensioned, and that he is incapable of performing manual labor to any extent, and that he is very nervous and sickly and at times weak mentally. It appears from the records that claimant has no means of support outside of his pension. "Under the circumstances, and in view of the statements of the physicians mentioned, your committee recommend that the bill do pass."

Mr. OWENS. Mr. Speaker, the report in this case presents a case almost parallel with the one presented yesterday. Hence, in order to give the House an opportunity to be consistent, I move that the increase in this case be $4; in other words, that the rate of pension fixed by the bill be $12 instead of $25.

The question being taken, the amendment was rejected; there being—ayes 24, noes 54.

The bill was laid aside to be reported favorably to the House.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. TALBERT. Mr. Chairman, I ask to be allowed to take up, out of its order, the bill (H. R. 6765)— Mr. THOMAS. Mr. Chairman, I am compelled to ask for the regular order.

Mr. TALBERT. If the gentleman will allow the bill and the report to be read, I am sure he will not object.

Mr. THOMAS. I would like very much to accommodate the mr. THOMAS. I would like very fluct to account gentleman from South Carolina, but on conversation with gentlemen around me, I find many whose bills will be reached to-day, men around me, I find many whose bills will be reached to-day. and I have promised, for the present at least, that we will proceed in the usual way with the Calendar. Later on in the day I shall be very glad, if possible, to accommodate the gentleman from South Carolina.

The CHAIRMAN. It is the prerogative of the committee to determine the order in which it will proceed with the business. We will pursue the Calendar unless the House decides otherwise, or by unanimous consent permission is given. For the present the gentleman from Michigan objects, and the Clerk will report the next bill on the Calendar.

JAMES L. M'KINNEY.

The next business on the Private Calendar was the bill (H. R. 3688) to pension James L. McKinney for services in Oregon Indian

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, directed to place on the pension roll of the Government the name of James L. McKinney, of Capt. W. W. Chapman's Company I, Second Regiment Oregon Mounted Volunteers, for meritorious service, and for injuries received in the Indian wars in Oregon, then a Territory, and allow him a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The committee recommend the adoption of the following amend-

Strike out "twelve" and insert "eight;" so it will read "$8 per month."

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill as amended was laid aside to be reported to the House with favorable recommendation.

DANIEL GILES.

The next business on the Private Calendar was the bill (H. R. 3939) to pension Daniel Giles for services in Oregon Indian wars. The bill was read, as follows:

The one was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, directed to place on the pension roll of the Government the name of Daniel Giles, of Capt. Samuel Gordon's Company, H, Oregon Volunteers, and thereafter also in Capt. Edward Sheffield's Company, A, of said volunteers, for meritorious service, and for injuries received while in said service against hostile Indians in Oregon, then a Territory, and allow him a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

Mr. ERDMAN. Mr. Chairman, it seems that the House is willing to let anything and everything go through without knowing what it is doing. I do not know but what the country might perhaps be a little better satisfied with our action if they had some reasons set forth for the pension which is proposed to be granted in these bills, and I therefore ask for the reading of the report.

The report (by Mr. STRODE of Nebraska) was read, as follows:

The report (by Mr. Strode of Nebraska) was read, as follows:
The Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 3939) to pension Daniel Giles for services in Oregon Indian wars, beg leave to report:
The records of the Auditor for the War Department show that Daniel Giles served in Capt. Samuel Gordon's Company, H, and also in Capt. Edward Sheffield's Company, A, Oregon Volunteers, in the Rogue River Indian wars of 1855-8i, in the then Territory of Oregon, and that his service continued from January 12, 1856, to May 10, 1856. The testimony shows that during said service he was exposed to such hardships as permanently to disable him for active duties in his later years. The colonel of his regiment, Col. William J. Martin, testifies that he required his services in a scouting party during the war, and selected him among fourteen others to perform a very hazardous undertaking; that the party were caught in a heavy storm in the winter in the mountains, and as they were not permitted to have fires, so a not to disclose their camp to the enemy, that during this exposure Daniel Giles contracted a heavy cold, which settled on his lungs and in his spine, and that after nursing him for some weeks in camp, the colonel testifies he sent him to the hospital. He, however, recovered sufficiently to continue in the service until the close of the war.

The colonel says he was a brave and efficient and honorable soldier; that he has known him ever since, and that his health is broken, and he has reason to believe it is so from his hardships in the Indian wars.

Two comrades of the same companies also testify substantially to the same facts, and as to his being an invalid ever since, although a strong, robust man when he enlisted. He is now over 60 years of age, and is in dependent circumstances.

The physician, a United States pension examining surgeon, who recently cumstances.

The physician, a United States pension examining surgeon, who recently examined him, testifies that he is totally disabled for manual labor, chiefly from disease of lungs and spine, the result of exposure; that his disease is chronic, progressive, and incurable, and that he requires frequent medical aid and medicines.

Representative Hermann, who has known the claimant for thirty-four years, states to the committee that he knows him to be an invalid and disabled for manual labor.

Wherefore your committee reports the bill back with a recommendation that it do pass with an amendment fixing the rate of pension at $8 per month.

The amendment recommended by the committee was agreed to. The bill as amended was laid aside to be reported to the House with a favorable recommendation.

GEORGE B. MERCHANT.

The next business on the Private Calendar was the bill (H. R. 3166) granting a pension and arrearage of pension to George B. Merchant.

The bill was read, as follows:

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place upon the pension roll, at the rate of $72 per month, George B. Merchant, late sergeant Company K, Fourth Regiment Ohio Volunteer Infantry, the same to be in lieu of the pension of $50 a month now drawn by soldier, and to be subject to all the conditions and limitations of the pension laws.

SEC. 2. That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay said George B. Merchant, out of the moneys appropriated for the payment of pensions, the sum of $2,428, the same being the difference between the pension of $30 a month drawn by soldier from December 4, 1891, and April 17, 1895, and the amount drawn from April 17, 1895, and December 31, 1895, at the rate of $30 per month, and the full rate of $72 per month, for total disability, requiring the constant attention and help of another person, to which soldier was entitled during said time.

SEC. 3. That this act shall be in force after its passage.

Mr. MILES. Let us have the report in that case.

Mr. MILES. Let us have the report in that case.

The report (by Mr. KERR) was read, as follows:

Mr. MILES. Let us have the report in that case.

The report (by Mr. KERR) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Invalid Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 8166) granting a pension to George B. Merchant, submit the following report:

The soldier enlisted April 22, 1861, in Company K. Fourth Ohio Volunteer Infantry, and was honorably discharged June 21, 1864, on account of wound received at Spottsylvania Court-House on the 10th of May, 1864. He was shot through the mouth and neck, resulting in injury to spine and nervous system.

This soldier had a remarkably good war record.

He was in battle at Middle Fork Bridge July 7, 1861; at Rich Mountain, July 11; at Beverly, July 12; at Petersburg, September 11 to 13; at Rommey or Mill Creek Mills, October 26; at Blue Gap, January 7, 1862; at Winchester, March 22 and 23; at Cedar Creek, March 25; at Port Republic, at Antietam, at Fredericksburg, at Chancellorsville, at Auburn and Briston, at the Wilderness, and Spottsylvania Court-House, besides almost innumerable skirmishes during his service.

In November, 1864, he was granted a pension of $8 per month for service disabilities. In 1885 the rate was increased to $10 per month. On January 17, 1887, his pension was increased to $20 per month. On January 17, 1889, he was allowed $50 per month.

In March, 1890, the Pension Office, on its own motion and by virtue of an act of Congress passed March 4, 1890, increased his pension to $72 per month.

The evidence shows that for the last six or seven years the soldier has required the regular personal aid and attendance of another person. In 1894, probably from his wound (and so accepted by the Pension Office), he had a stroke of paralysis. This condition has been constantly increasing since, and now he is wholly helpless. His food must be carried to his mouth and his drink held to his lips by an attendant. He is and must be dressed and undressed; his clothes buttoned and unbuttoned when occasion requires it. When down he can not rise without assistance.

Four of fi

The amendment recommended by the committee was agreed to. Mr. THOMAS. Mr. Chairman, to further perfect the bill, I offer the amendment I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Strike out in line 4 all after the word "roll," and add "the name of George B. Merchant, late sergeant Company K, Fourth Ohio Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension of $72 per month in lieu of the pension he is now receiving."

Mr. ERDMAN. I merely suggest to the gentleman that the report in this case is defective and incomplete. It appears that this soldier was dropped under a Republican administration, and that under a Democratic administration of the office he was reinstated. The report ought to have—pursuing the ordinary course—a tirade against the administration that did that work. When a trade against the administration that did that work. When that is added it would perfect the report so as to accord with the usual reports from the committee. The House is now doing what the Republican administration failed to do for this soldier.

The amendment of Mr. Thomas was then agreed to.

The bill as amended was laid aside to be reported to the House with the recommendation that it do pass.

MARY L. TWEDDLE.

The next business on the Private Calendar was the bill (H. R. 5793) granting a pension to Mary L. Tweddle.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll of the United States the name of Mrs. Mary L. Tweddle, widow of William Tweddle, late captain of Company K, Tenth Kentucky Volunteers, and to pay her a pension, subject to the provisions and limitations of the general pension laws.

Mr. TALBERT. Mr. Chairman, I ask for the reading of the report.

report.
The report (by Mr. Anderson) was read, as follows:
The Committee on Invalid Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 5793) granting a pension to Mary L. Tweddle, submit the following report:
William Tweddle, the husband of this petitioner, served as captain of Company K. Tenth Kentucky Volunteer Infantry, from November 2, 1861, until August 7, 1862, when his resignation, tendered by reason of having contracted rheumatism affecting the back and lower extremities, was accepted.

He was pensioned by the Pension Office at the rate of $5 per month from discharge; $15 from May 13, 1882, and $20 from March 24, 1886, on account of lumbago and chronic diarrhea, and, as will be seen by the foregoing rates, his disability gradually increased until he was allowed the total of his rank as a captain.

discharge; $15 from May 15, 1823, and $20 from March 24, 1886, on account of lumbago and chronic diarrhea, and, as will be seen by the foregoing rates, his disability gradually increased until he was allowed the total of his rank as a captain.

He died August 22, 1892, of congestion of the brain.

The petitioner applied to the Pension Bureau for a pension under the general laws, furnishing medical testimony that Captain Tweddle's death was due to the lumbago or rheumatism for which he was pensioned, and also the certificate of the board of health, made upon the return of the attending physician, showing that the primary cause of death was congestion of the brain and the remote cause rheumatism and diarrhea, but the claim was rejected in the Pension Bureau upon the ground that it was not shown from a medical standpoint that the cause of death was due to the disabilities for which this officer was pensioned.

Both the officer and the petitioner had been previously married, and the fact of death of the former consorts was duly shown in evidence on file in the Pension Office.

The petitioner married the officer on January 5, 1891, and consequently can have no status for pension under the act of June 27, 1890, which act requires that a widow of a soldier shall have been married to such soldier prior to the passage of such act.

The medical testimony furnished by Drs. Mannakee and Muncaster, of this city, physicians of high standing, shows that the congestion of brain was no doubt a result of the heart trouble from which the officer had suffered as a result of the rheumatism, which for a period had only affected the lumbar muscles, but became general thereafter.

Medical authorities admit that congestion of the brain, the result of impeded return of the blood from the head, may be caused by impediments within the circulation, such as disease of heart.

While the connection of the death cause with the pensioned disabilities may not have been sufficiently shown by the testimony of the attending physicians, your committ such a one as to present equations be passed.

The petitioner is old and dependent upon the assistance of friends and a daughter who is hardly able to assist her by reason of having a large family of her own to support.

The Chairman I desire briefly to call atten-

Mr. TALBERT. Mr. Chairman, I desire briefly to call attention to this report.

tion to this report.

This is a claim for pension to the widow of Captain Tweddle, who was a gallant soldier, who had been receiving a pension up to the time of his death, his disabilities being traced to service origin. He was a gallant captain. He had been married before, however, and his former wife was the woman who shared with him the troubles, the trials, and turmoils of the period of war. The widow, who is proposed to be the beneficiary of this bill, was married to him in 1891. The act of June 27, 1890, expressly says that the widow of a soldier who shall receive the benefits of that act shall have been married to the soldier prior to the passage of the act. the act.

act shall have been married to the soldier prior to the passage of the act.

Now, will this House, in direct violation of the law which it has enacted, grant a pension to this widow who shared none of the troubles, privations, and trials of this gallant soldier during the period of the war? There is no doubt of the testimony; it is all right, as far as that is concerned; the board of examiners say that it is all right. Now, will you violate the law, will you repudiate your own action, will you stultify yourselves and turn round and abrogate the law which you have adopted? The only reason assigned for the action of the Committee on Pensions is that this petitioner "is old, and dependent upon the assistance of friends and a daughter who is hardly able to assist her by reason of having a large family of her own to support." That may be true, but there are other widows in the land just as needy and just as old as this one is. No doubt she is a good woman, and all that sort of thing; but I submit, sir, that this House should not violate the direct spirit of the law in granting a pension to this widow who married the soldier after the act of June 27, 1890, was passed.

Mr. THOMAS. Mr. Chairman, in the absence of the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. Evans] who introduced this bill, I will ask that it go over without prejudice.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Michigan [Mr. THOMAS] asks that the bill be laid aside without prejudice. If there be no objection, it will be so ordered.

There was no objection, the Private Calendar was the bill (H. R.

JOSEPHINE GLOVER.

The next business on the Private Calendar was the bill (H. R. 5532) to increase the pension of Josephine Glover.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and is hereby, directed to increase the pension of Josephine Glover, widow of Capt. E. Y. Glover, Company A, Thirty-fourth New Jersey Volunteers, and that she be paid a pension of $30 per month.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on ordering the bill to be laid aside to be reported to the House with a favorable recommendation.

Mr. ERDMAN. Mr. Chairman, let us have the report. The report (by Mr. WOOD) was read, as follows:

The report (by Mr. Wood) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Invalid Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 5532) to increase the pension of Josephine Glover, submit the following report:
The claimant was the widow of Bvt. Lieut. Col. Elisha V. Glover, jr., late of Thirty-fourth New Jersey Volunteers. She is now in indigent circumstances, supporting herself by keeping boarders, doing the work most circumstances, supporting herself by keeping boarders, doing the work most result. She appears to have no property. She is drawing a pension of $16 per month, being, according to the evidence, $12 per month for herself and $2 for each of two children. She resides at Warrington, Fla. Her husband died in 1855 of heart disease, evidently of service origin.

Elisha V. Glover, jr., was commissioned as first lieutenant Company A, Thirty-fourth New Jersey Volunteers, September 3, 1863; as captain same company April 15, 1864; major, by brevet, for gallant and meritorious services, November 11, 1865, and lieutenant-colonel, by brevet, for gallant and meritorious services, by the President of the United States, on July 28, 1866, to rank from November 11, 1865.

Claimant was married to soldier since the war.

In view of the destitution of claimant and the honorable record of this soldier, the committee recommend the passage of the bill.

The bill was ordered to be laid aside to be reported to the House with a favorable recommendation.

EMILY M. TYLER.

The next business on the Private Calendar was the bill (H. R. 6560) to increase the pension of Emily M. Tyler.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll the name of Emily M. Tyler, widow of Erastus B. Tyler, late a brevet major-general of United States Volunteers, at the rate of $100 per month, in lieu of the pension she is now receiving.

The Committee on Invalid Pensions recommended the following amendment:

In lines 6 and 7 strike out the words "one hundred" and insert in lieu thereof the word "seventy-five."

The amendment was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on ordering the bill to be laid aside to be reported to the House with a favorable recommendation

Mr. ERDMAN. Let us have the report read. The report (by Mr. MILES) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Invalid Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 8560) to increase the pension of Emily M. Tyler, having carefully considered the same, respectfully report:

The bill proposes to increase the pension of Mrs. Emily M. Tyler, the widow of the late Brig. and Bvt. Maj. Gen. Erastus B. Tyler, who died January 9, of the late Brig. and Byt. Maj. Gen. Erastus B. Tyler, who died January 9, 1891.

Erastus B. Tyler entered the service as colonel of the Seventh Regiment Ohio Volunteers, three-month organization, April 25, 1861, and mustered in as colonel of the same regiment for three years in June, 1861. He continued in command of his regiment until May 20, 1862, when he was promoted to brigadier-general for gallantry on the field.

The regiment of which he was colonel and the brigade which he commanded were in action at Cross Lanes, W. Va., August 28, 1861; Winchester, Va., March 23, 1862; Port Republic, June 9, 1862; Cedar Mountain, August 9, 1862; Antietam, September 17, 1862; Chancellorsville, May 1, 2, 3, and 4, 1863; Gettrysburg, Jnly 8 and 3, 1863; Lookout Mountain, November 24, 1863; Missionary Ridge, November 25, 1865, and finally mustered out on August 24, 1865.

General Tyler was conspicuous for hard fighting and successful results, He received severe injuries of left side of body and side of head by fragments of a shell, and suffered from intestinal troubles for some time, as shown by the record. Although clearly entitled to and often importuned by his friends to apply for a pension, he never applied. His widow is now in dependent circumstances. On March 3, 1891, a special act granting the claimant 30 per month was approved, and this sum she is now drawing.

The long and meritorious services of her late husband alone would entitle her to recognition at the hands of Congress even if the cause of his death were of doubtful origin. Mrs. Tyler should be pensioned at the rate now so generally conceded to the widows of general officers.

Your committee therefore respectfully recommend the passage of the bill with the following amendment:

In line 6 and 7 strike out the words "one hundred" and insert in lieu thereof the word "seventy-five."

Mr. WOOD. Mr. Chairman, I move to further amend by striking out "seventy-five" and inserting "fifty." I desire to call the attention of the committee to the fact that the reason which is set forth for granting this pension of $75 a month is that on March 3, 1891, she received a pension, by special act, of $30 a month, and that she should be pensioned at the rate now so generally conceded to the widows of general officers. My recollection of the evidence that was submitted to the committee is that this widow is in pretty good circumstances, outside of the pension, and I think that if this bill should pass at $50 a month, especially in view of the fact that in 1891 $30 a month was supposed to be sufficient, we should be going as far as we ought to, under the circumstances.

Mr. MILES. Mr. Chairman, I made this report, but I did not introduce the bill. It will be seen from the report that General Tyler was an Ohio soldier. The bill to pension his widow was introduced in the Senate, and passed that body with an allowance of $100 a month. There is no member on this floor at present, so far as I know, who feels called upon to defend this bill. I desire simply to make a statement. General Tyler's widow is now a Maryland woman, who lives not in my district, but in the city of Baltimore. She is not "in pretty good circumstances," as my friend seems to suppose, but is in rather indigent circumstances.

Mr. TA
The CH
The OH
The bil increase have a statement of the provided in the seem of the provided in the provided in the seem of the provided in the seem of the provided in the provided in

She is an old woman, and I think it is unfair for the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. Wood] to take out of this report only one fact, to wit, the fact that she was granted a pension of $30 a month in 1891, and call the attention of the committee to that fact alone. There are other facts in the report to which he would do well to call the attention of the committee, among them the fact that General Tyler fought gallantly in nearly every one of the great battles of the late war; that although before he died he was a poor man, and although he was frequently appealed to because of his circumstances to apply for a pension, he persistently refused to do so, and died without ever having drawn a cent from the Treasman of the United States of her than his selection.

do so, and died without ever having drawn a cent from the Treasury of the United States other than his salary.

Now, Mr. Chairman, I was not inclined myself as a subcommittee of the Committee on Invalid Pensions to go beyond $50 a month, and I believe I recollect to have so reported to the committee, but when the record of this soldier's gallant services was read to the committee, when the condition of his widow was brought to the attention of the committee, and when another little incident—which I will not violate good taste and propriety by reciting to this committee—was called to the attention of the Committee on Invalid Pensions that committee with much feeling. mittee on Invalid Pensions, that committee with much feeling, overruled me, and reported that this widow should have $75 a month.

I trust, Mr. Chairman, that those members of the committee who may have a recollection of the circumstances attending the re-port which I made to the committee and the facts which were then disclosed will understand and appreciate a tendency on my part disclosed will understand and appreciate a tendency on my part to indulge a statement with respect to this bill which, to say the least, would be natural to us all, if similarly situated, and that further opposition to the bill will not be made.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment of the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. Wood].

Mr. THOMAS. Mr. Chairman, I desire to say that the statement made by the gentleman from Maryland [Mr. Miles] is my opinion of this case, and I hope that the bill will be passed as it came from the committee. The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. Wood] said that the evidence was that the lady was in fair circumstances. I do not understand that to be so. It is a fact that she has some property, but her income or her available means of support are very slim, and I remember distinctly the discussion in the committee. I hope that the bill will pass as recommended by the committee.

in the committee. I hope that the bill will pass as recommended by the committee,

Mr. TALBERT. Mr. Chairman, I hope this amendment will prevail reducing the pension from $75 to $50 a month. It seems to me that if this House will at once adopt that common medium it will save a great deal of discussion which has to be gone over and over again in this House. Several widows of general officers have been pensioned at the rate of $50 per month, and it seems that it would be just and proper to this House, and just and proper to the widows of soldiers themselves, and just and proper to the country, if this House would settle once forever that question of pensioning officers' widows, and that can be done by adopting the common medium of $50.

pensioning officers' widows, and that can be done by adopting the common medium of $50.

Mr. CURTIS of New York. Mr. Chairman, the chairman of the committee that brings these bills before the House has advised the adoption of the report of the committee. The gentleman from Maryland [Mr. MILES], who has learned much of this case, and who is a member of that committee, reports also and speaks very earnestly in favor of it, and the facts as disclosed fully justify the House in being consistent in these measures and giving to the widow of a distinguished officer like General Tyler the sum recommended. I trust that the amendment will not prevail, and that the bill will go through the House at $75 per month.

The question was taken on the adoption of the amendment; and the Chairman announced that the noes appeared to have it.

the Chairman announced that the noes appeared to have it.

Mr. TALBERT. Division, Mr. Chairman.
The committee divided; and there were—ayes 29, noes 35.
Mr. TALBERT. I demand tellers, Mr. Chairman.
Tellers were ordered.
The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Illinois, Mr. Wood, and the gentleman from Michigan, Mr. THOMAS, will please act as tellers.

The committee again divided; and the tellers reported—ayes 33,

Mr. TALBERT. No quorum, Mr. Chairman.
The Chairman proceeded to count the House.
Mr. TALBERT. I withdraw the point of no quorum.
The CHAIRMAN. The point of no quorum is withdrawn; the noes have it, and the amendment is lost.
The bill was ordered to be laid aside with a favorable recommendation.

ISAAC HOLBROOK.

The next business on the Private Calendar was the bill (H. R. 2396) granting a pension to Isaac Holbrook, late private in Company G, One hundred and twenty-first Regiment Ohio Volunteer

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Isaac Holbrook, late private in Company G, One hundred and twenty-first Regiment Ohio Volunteer Infantry.

Mr. ERDMAN. Let us have the report read. The report (by Mr. LAYTON) was read, as follows:

Mr. ERDMAN. Let us have the report read.

The report (by Mr. Layton) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Invalid Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 2996) granting a pension to Isaac Holbrook, having carefully considered the same, report as follows:

Said soldier, Isaac Holbrook, enlisted and was duly enrolled as a private in Company G, One hundred and twenty-first Ohio Volunteer Infantry, on the 20th day of August, 1862. On the 11th day of September, 1862, all the members of the company, save and except said Holbrook, were regularly mustered into the United States service at Camp Delaware, Ohio. Said Holbrook was not mustered at the same time, because he was then lying sick in the hospital. Soon thereafter the regiment was ordered to the front, and, in compliance with the orders of his captain, said Holbrook fell in line and went with his regiment to Cincinnati, Ohio, where it was duly armed and equipped, and then proceeded to a point south of Louisville, Ky. While in camp at this place he again took sick, and was sent across the Ohio River to a Government hospital at New Albany. After remaining in this hospital for a short time, and after partial treatment for and recovery from his sickness, he was told by the officer in charge to go home, as he had never been mustered, and on account of his then physical disabilities, which were probably permanent, he never would be. That thereupon he went from thence to Columbus, Ohio, where, on or about the 20th day of January, 1863, he was paid for the five months he had actually served, and then went home. He never again entered the service.

He was a strong, healthy man when he first enlisted. He has been more or less disabled ever since he left the service. He was never actually mustered. He never received a certificate of discharge. He is now about 75 years of age, in feeble health, and totally incapacitated from performing manual labor. He has no property or income, but is dependent upon charity and friends for support.

He made application for pension

Mr. ERDMAN. Mr. Chairman, the House ought to understand this soldier was never in the service. He never was a soldier. He formed the intent to become a soldier and started to become a soldier; but he never was in the service. He never rendered any service. I do not know but what this is as good an example of paternalism as we could point the country to—to pension everybody who intended to go into the service, and give him as high a pension as one who had rendered the very best service to as high a pension as one who had rendered the very best service to the country. It is a very good example for the country to look at.

Mr. HULICK. Mr. Chairman, I introduced this bill and am familiar with the facts and circumstances of this case, and it is certainly a very meritorious one. Mr. Holbrook is now about 76 years of age. He enlisted in this regiment, as the report shows, September, 1862. He went to Camp Delaware, Ohio, and while there, and before the regiment was mustered, he was sent to the hospital and confined with intermittent fever. While at the hospital the regiment was ordered to the front. He left the hospital and went to his company, shouldered his musket and went to Cincinnati, and thence to Louisville, Ky. He was there ordered from his company by his captain and told to go into hospital, because he was not able to go farther. He passed over the river into he was not able to go farther. He passed over the river into Indiana to another hospital of the Government, and remained there until his captain ordered him not to report to the company, stating that the condition of his health was such that he could not stating that the condition of his health was such that he could not be mustered and he could not go with the regiment. He remained there in that hospital until he was able to report under the orders of his captain at Columbus, Ohio. He was there in the hospital, and when he became sufficiently able to leave the hospital the captain told him that as he was not mustered he could go home. He was then paid off in full for five months' service.

It is true, as the gentleman says, he never rendered any service. He enlisted, and he remained in the service five months, and then was sent home, having been paid for five months' service as a soldier. He applied for a pension. He is pensionable under the law, under the rules and regulations of the Pension Bureau, and would receive a pension but for the fact that he was not mustered. This special bill is to muster that old soldier, who is to-day without a dollar of money, who has to rely upon his relatives, and the fact is most of the time he remains in the poorhouse. He was a man of good health when he entered the service. He is now a total wreck in health as well as in property. He has not one dollar, and he deserves the gratitude not only of this Congress, but of the country for the fact that he attempted to render service, but was prevented from doing so.

Mr. TALBERT. Will the gentleman yield to me for a question?
Mr. HULICE. Certainly.
Mr. TALBERT. Why is it that this soldier did not have himself mustered in during that whole period of five months?
Mr. HULICK. The report shows that fact, but I will answer the question. He was at Camp Delaware, in Ohio, and before the mustering officers appeared there to muster in the regiment it was ordered to the front without having been mustered in, and he took up his musket and went with the regiment. It went first to Cincinnati, and from there to Louisville, and he remained with it until the captain ordered him to the hospital. While he was in the hospital, lying on his back, unable to appear, the regiment was mustered, and when the company left for the front with the regiment the captain ordered him to remain until he should be able to join the regiment and then to report at Columbus.

Mr. TALBERT. But it seems to me that he might have had himself mustered in during those five months if he had been very anxious. So far from giving this man a pension, it seems to me that he might very reasonably be classed as a deserter. How many thousands of men are there in the country that might come here, if we should establish this precedent, and claim that they were in the service and never mustered in, and that some officer told them to go home and they went home?

to go home and they went home?

Mr. HULICK. I can not answer the gentleman's question as to the number of men that might be so situated, but whether there are a thousand or one, the principle is the same. This soldier did everything in his power to serve his country—

[Here the hammer fell.]

The question being taken on the adoption of the report of the committee, the Charman declared that the ayes seemed to have it.

Mr. ERDMAN. I ask for a division.

The committee divided; and there were—ayes 32, noes 4.

Mr. TALBERT. No quorum.

Upon a count, 105 members were found to be present.

The report of the committee was adopted.

The bill was laid aside to be reported to the House with the recommendation that it does not be a second to the s ommendation that it do pass.

MARGARET KIRKPATRICK.

The next business on the Private Calendar was the bill (H. R. 6099) granting a pension to Margaret Kirkpatrick.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior is hereby authorized and required to place upon the pension roll of the United States the name of Margaret Kirkpatrick, army nurse, at the rate of $12 per month, subject to the limitations of the general pension laws.

Mr. TALBERT. I ask for the reading of the report. The report (by Mr. Baker of Kansas) was read, as follows:

The report (by Mr. Baker of Kansas) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Invalid Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 6099) granting a pension to Margaret Kirkpatrick, beg leave to submit the following report:

The Pension Office records show that Margaret Vincent served and was paid as matron of the post hospital at Macon, Mo., from November 1, 1864, to April 6, 1865, five months and six days; and that service was of a character and under authority recognized by the War Department and recognized by the Pension Office as pensionable under the act of August 5, 1892, provided it were six months in duration. The service of which there is record commenced November 1, 1864, and lacks twenty-four days of the six months prescribed, but the evidence shows that her service as nurse really commenced in the summer of 1864 and was of sufficient length to bring her within the law if her earlier service had been rendered under authority recognized by the War Department.

An affidavit of Surg. A. B. Castle, of the post hospital at Macon, Mo., on file in the Pension Office, shows that Margaret Vincent was employed as nurse and matron in that hospital from some time in the summer of 1864 until the spring of 1865, but he can not give the precise dates. While this perhaps does not meet the technical requirements of the law, it does show that the claimant actually rendered more than six months' service as nurse and matron in a United States post hospital.

The evidence shows that the claimant is over 62 years of age, is unable to earn a support, by reason of age and physical infirmity, and has no means of income from any source.

The passage of the bill is recommended.

Mr. TALBERT. Mr. Speaker, this is a bill similar in its nature

Mr. TALBERT. Mr. Speaker, this is a bill similar in its nature to one for the benefit of the widow Tweddle that was up a while Mr. IALBERT. Mr. Speaker, this is a bill similar in its nature to one for the benefit of the widow Tweddle that was up a while ago. The act of August 5, 1892, provides that nurses of this class must have served over six months in order to be entitled to a pension, and, as I understand it, there is no evidence to show that this lady served even six months. Consequently, to give her a pension will be to go directly against the law of August, 1892. One reason assigned for the passage of this bill is that the pensioner is 62 years of age. Well, Mr. Chairman, there are a great many ladies in this country 62 years of age. Another reason is that she is unable to earn her support; but unfortunately there are a great many ladies in this country who are unable to earn a support. It is a pity and we may sympathize with them, but we have no right, as representatives of the people, to pension them when they are not entitled to pension under the laws of the country. This bill, I say, is very similar to the one for the benefit of Mary L. Tweddle, which was up a while ago, and I think it ought to be treated in the same way and passed over without prejudice. Mr. LACEY. Mr. Chairman, this bill was introduced by me, and I call the attention of the gentleman from South Carolina to the fact that this applicant not only served in this hospital, but that she served in another hospital for over a year, as shown by the

she served in another hospital for over a year, as shown by the

Mr. MILES. The difficulty, as I understand it, is that that hospital was not authorized by the War Department.

Mr. LACEY. It was not authorized by the Department, but she served within twenty or thirty days of the time required by the general law in a regularly organized hospital, and in the other one, which was a post hospital, she served over a year.

Mr. MILES. The service in both cases was of the same general character, I suppose?

Mr. LACEY. Yes, sir; of the same general character, and the committee thought that her case came clearly within the spirit of the law and that she ought to receive a pension.

Mr. MILES. I think so myself.

Mr. WOOD. Mr. Chairman, I desire to offer one or two amendments to perfect the bill.

The amendments were read, as follows:

In line 3, after the word "Interior," insert the words "be and he;" and in line 4 strike out the word "required" and insert "directed."

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be laid aside to be reported to the House with the recommendation that it do pass.

The next business on the Private Calendar was the bill (H. R. 1095) granting a pension to Annie M. Ermer.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll the name of Annie M. Ermer, widow of Henry Ermer, late of Company G. Tenth Regiment Maryland Infantry, subject to the conditions and regulations of the pension laws.

The report (by Mr. Miles) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Invalid Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 1095) entitled "A bill granting a pension to Annie M. Ermer," beg leave to submit the following report, and recommend that said bill do pass without

The Committee on Invalid Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 1005) entitled "A bill granting a pension to Annie M. Ermer," beg leave to submit the following report, and recommend that said bill do pass without amendment.

This is a bill enacting that Annie M. Ermer, widow of Henry Ermer, late of Company G, Tenth Maryland Infantry Volunteers, be pensioned, subject to the conditions and regulations of the pension laws.

Henry Ermer enlisted June 23, 1863, as a private in Company G, Tenth Maryland Infantry Volunteers, and was honorably discharged January 29, 1864, being mustered out as corporal with his company. He died March 9, 1894, of pneumonia.

Annie M. Ermer filed claim for pension March 29, 1894. She furnished proof of legal marriage to soldier February 27, 1879, and complied with every requirement of the Pension Bureau exceptsatisfying the office as to her dependence, and her claim was rejected November 30, 1894, on the ground of nondependence—"claimant has other means of support than her daily labor."

She appealed from the decision of rejection, but the Secretary of the Interior affirmed the decision, figuring out her income at $13,922 per month. The evidence filed in the Pension Bureau shows that the husband left property valued at $6,106, but in the settlement of the estate and payment of his debts it was all absorbed except one piece of real estate valued at $3,965, upon which there was a mortgage for $3,000, bearing 6 per cent interest, and about $100 worth of household effects. This property, when rented, brought in $40 per month, and the claimant has a life estate therein, but claimant swears that this $40 is her entire income, out of which she must pay interest, taxes, insurance, water rent, light, etc., leaving very little, if anything.

She filed testimony in support of her statement, showing that the building, which brought the only income, was vacant for several months, and that as she had been an invalid for many years she was then (June, 1894) dependent on friends and those not le support.

In view of the facts presented, your committee believe the applicant is dependent within the meaning and intent of the law, and recommend the passage of the bill without amendment.

Mr. WOOD. Mr. Chairman, in order to perfect the bill, I desire to offer the amendment which I send to the desk.

The amendment was read, as follows:

In line 7 strike out the words "conditions and regulations" and insert "provisions and limitations."

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. TALBERT. Mr. Chairman, a few moments ago we passed a bill allowing a pension to a lady on the ground that she was unable to earn her support. Here is the case of a woman who is fully capable of supporting herself, who has an income large enough to support her without any labor. Now, if you are going to pension one on the ground that she is unable to earn a support, and are going to pension another when she has a support, I do not see what is to prevent you from pensioning the whole crowd.

[Laughter.] I merely want to draw attention to the inconsistency.

The bill was laid aside to be reported to the House with the recommendation that it do pass.

ELLA HATFIELD.

The next business on the Private Calendar was the bill (H. R. 1066) granting a pension to Ella Hatfield, invalid daughter of Maj. David Hatfield, First Regiment New Jersey Infantry Volun-

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, uthorized and directed to place on the pension roll the name of Ella Hateleld, daughter of the late Maj. David Hatfield, First Regiment New Jersey colunteer Infantry, at the rate of $25 per month.

Mr. TALBERT. I ask that the report be read.

The report (by Mr. McClellan) was read, as follows:

Mr. TALBERT. I ask that the report be read.

The report (by Mr. McCleellan) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Invalid Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 1968) entitled "A bill granting a pension to Ella Hatfield, invalid daughter of Maj. David Hatfield is pass without amendment:

David Hatfield served in the Moxican war as a private in Company G. Tenth United States Infantry, and was commissioned as captain Company A. First New Jersey Infantry Volunteers, May 21, 1801; was promoted to major of said regiment May 28, 1801. In the batfie at Gaines Farm, Va., June 27, 1802, Major Hatfield was shot through the head and died from the wound July 30, 1802.

Mary B. Hatfield, his widow, filed claim for pension February 27, 1863, which was granted at $25 per month, with $2 additional for each of five children, the youngest of which, Ella Hatfield, became 16 years old September 22, 1877.

The widow remarried September 28, 1807.

One of the children, Thompson D. Hatfield, who was helpless from infancy, was pensiomed at $25 per month by special act of Congress approved February 23, 1889. He died September 1, 1862, at the asylum at Morris Plains, N. J., of epileptic dementia.

Ella Hatfield, youngest daughter of soldier, has been frail and delicate from infancy and never able to care for herself. She is now 34 years old, and is in a sanitarium for treatment for consumption.

Dr. W. H. Martland testifies that he attended and treated her at various times between 1873 and 1889; that she was frail and delicate, and subject to attacks of malaria, disorders of digestion, nervous derangements, debility, and had neurasthenia, with all its complications. I considered her at that time to be physically unfit to perform any kind of labor continuously. She is now (November 2), 1895) at a sanitarium in the Adirondacks for treatment for disease of lungs.

Dr. J. C. Young testifies to treating her since 1889, and says:

"She is a typical case of neurasthenia, and very susceptible to disorder of digestion, nervous derangeme

Mr. WOOD. For the purpose of perfecting the bill, I offer the amendments which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

After the word "Infantry," in line 6, insert "and pay her a pension."
Also amend the title of the bill so as to read: "A bill granting a pension to Ella Hatfield."

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill as amended was laid aside to be reported favorably to the House.

EDWARD C. SPOFFORD.

The next business on the Private Calendar was the bill (H. R. 6730) granting a pension to Edward C. Spofford.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll the name of Edward C. Spofford, late a sergeant of Company F, Thirty-fifth Massachusetts Volunteers, and pay him a pension of $50 per month from and after the passage of this act, in lieu of the pension now received by him.

Mr. ERDMAN. Let the report be read.

The report (by Mr. Sulloway) was read, as follows:

The report (by Mr. Sulloway) was read, as follows:

The committee on Invalid Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 6730) granting a pension to Edward C. Spofford, having carefully considered the same, respectfully report:

The claimant enlisted July 26, 1862, in Company F, Thirty-fifth Massachusetts Infantry, and was discharged May 19, 1863, to accept a commission as second lieutenant in Battery A, First Missouri Light Artillery, but there is no record of his being mustered in on the same.

At the battle of South Mountain, September 14, 1862, he was wounded in the head, and on April 23, 1891, he was granted a pension under the general law on this account.

Since the date last mentioned the claimant has become paralyzed in right arm, side, and leg, and on August 27, 1894, he filed a claim for increase, alleging the paralysis to be the result of the wound in head, the pensioned disability.

October 10, 1894, the examining board reports that the claimant can not dress himself, undress himself, or attend to the calls of nature without assistance; and on September 9, 1895, another board reports him "so disabled from above disabilities as to be unable totally to do any manual labor and requires at times the aid and attention of another person."

The latter board gives him the following rating:

"Affection of spine, four-eighteenths; disease of the heart, four-eighteenths; dyspepsia, six-eighteenths; paralysis of right arm, total disability, 806; right leg, ten-eighteenths."

This claim was rejected, however, because the paralysis was not accepted as a result of the wound in the head, although the medical referee says "is has resulted, in all probability, from cerebral embolism."

The injury to the head is thus described by the examining board:

"Three inches above left eye begins a linear scar, which runs backward and to the left ear, 4 inches; scar is elevated and adherent; there is a distinct groove in the external table the entire length of the scar; the groove is one-eighth of an inch deep; pain on pressure the entire length."

The evidence in the Bureau of Pensions shows that at South Mountain the soldier was wounded in the head by a musket ball, and that at about the same time a shell exploded just back of his head, he receiving the full effect of the concussion. He was taken from the battlefield to a temporary structure used as a hospital, and on this point the assistant surgeon of the regiment testifies:

"He was under my personal care after the wound, at the field hospital, said wound being on the top of the head and partially fracturing the skull. I left him at the hospital, said hospital being a deserted log house and yard surrounding it. He, with many others, was lying there, while I went on with my regiment to Antietam. He was subsequently sent to general hospital at Middleton, Md."

It is further shown by the same evidence that from hospital he was sent to his home in Massachusetts, where he was confined to his bed for almost three months, during four weeks of which he was delirious. At this time his spine appeared to be affected, and his right shoulder and arm were paralyzed. When he reported to his regiment about January 1, 1863, he could with difficulty handle a gun, and on this account he was procured a commission for staff duty. The paralysis gradually grew better, and did not trouble him very much for about thirty years, when he had the stroke from which he is now suffering, in precisely the same right arm and shoulder, the only difference being that it now exists in a greatly aggravated degree. He is now drawing $12 per month under the act of June 27, 1890.

To the mind of the medical referee the most potent reason for not finding the sequence was, in his own langua

Mr. WOOD. For the purpose of perfecting the bill, I offer a formal amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

In line 6 strike out the letter "s," at the end of the word "Volunteers," and insert "Infantry."

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. TALBERT. Mr. Chairman, as I understand this report, this soldier rendered distinguished service. The statement of the report is that he enlisted July 26, 1862, and was discharged May 19, 1863, in order to accept a commission as second lieutenant, but it seems there is no record of his having been mustered in upon that commission. It is shown, however, that at the battle of South Mountain he was wounded, and was carried from the field. In that and other engagements he appears to have rendered distinthat and other engagements he appears to have rendered distinguished services as a soldier; he showed himself to be a brave man. I think, therefore, he deserves the pension proposed in the bill, and I shall vote for it heartily. I hope the bill will pass.

The question being taken, the bill was laid aside to be reported favorably to the House.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

The committee informally rose; and Mr. Steele having taken the chair as Speaker pro tempore, a message from the Senate, by Mr. Platt, one of its clerks, announced that the Senate had disagreed to the amendment of the House of Representatives to the bill (S. 2129) granting an increase of pension to Annie E. Nolan, asked a further conference with the House on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and had appointed Mr. Gallinger, Mr. Cannon, and Mr. Mitchell of Wisconsin as the conferees on the part of the Senate.

The message also announced that the Senate had passed bills of the following titles; in which the concurrence of the House was requested:

A bill (S. 3525) to provide for an examination and survey of a water route from the mouth of the jetties at the city of Galveston, Tex., through the channel and up Buffalo Bayou to the city of Houston, Tex., and appropriating money therefor; and A bill (S. 3477) to remove the charge of desertion from the military record of William H. Linton.

The message also announced that the Senate had passed bills of the following titles, with amendments in which the concurrence of the following titles, with amendments in which the concurrence of the House was requested:

A bill (H. R. 8551) to establish railroad bridges across the Cumberland and Tennessee rivers in Kentucky; and

A bill (H. R. 9638) making appropriations for the support of the Army for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1898.

The message also announced that the Senate had passed without the stable of the following titles.

amendment bills of the following titles: A bill (H. R. 8413) to confirm certain cash entries of public

A bill (H. R. 6883) to incorporate the Convention of American

Instructors of the Deaf;

A bill (H. R. 4199) to correct the military record of Edward H. Munson, late a private of Company H, Twenty-second New York

Regiment Infantry; and
A bill (H. R. 596) for the relief of Ellis H. Roberts.
Mr. HULL. Mr. Speaker, I ask that the Army appropriation bill, which has just been returned from the Senate with amendments, may be taken up now, so that we may disagree to the amendments and have a committee of conference appointed.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Without objection, it will be so ordered

Mr. HULL. I move that the House disagree—
Mr. RICHARDSON. I submit that the Committee of the Whole having risen informally, the Journal will not show this action. There was no motion that the committee rise, and it has always been held irregular for the House to transact any business when the Committee of the Whole had simply risen informally. I object to the action requested unless the committee rises regularly by motion.

Mr. HULL. Such action as I now ask has been taken repeatedly by unanimous consent.

Mr. RICHARDSON. The gentleman is mistaken.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The special order under which the House is acting to-day provided, as the Chair understands, for conference reports.

Mr. RICHARDSON. Where the Committee of the Whole has risen without a motion, it has not been usual for the House to take action in the way now proposed. Such action could not be journalized nalized.

Mr. HULL. I submit it has always been held that action could be taken in this way by unanimous consent.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. In the opinion of the Chair, it can be done by unanimous consent. Is there objection?

Mr. RICHARDSON. I object, unless the Committee of the Whole rises regularly.

The Committee of the Whole resumed its session.

HANNAH E. RODGERS.

The next business on the Private Calendar was the bill (H. R. 1832) granting a pension to Hannah E. Rodgers.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and is hereby, directed to place on the pension roll of the United States of America the name of Hannah E. Rodgers, the surviving daughter of Josiah Hunt, deceased, formerly of Chautauqua County, State of New York, a soldier of the Revolutionary war, at the rate of $30 per month, according to the rules and regulations governing pensions.

The amendment reported by the committee was read, as follows; In line 8 strike out the word "thirty" and insert in lieu thereof the word twelve."

Mr. ERDMAN. Let us hear the report.
Mr. LOUDENSLAGER. Will not the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. ERDMAN] and other members of the House be satisfied with a statement of this case? This bill proposes to pension the daughter of a Revolutionary soldier—

Mr. ERDMAN. I am afraid the gentleman will not make his statement as full as that of the report. I should like to hear the report.

The report (by Mr. Loudenslager) was read, as follows:

The report (by Mr. LOUDENSLAGER) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 1832) entitled "A bill granting a pension to Hannah E. Rogers," beg leave to submit the following report, and recommend that said bill do pass with an amendment:

This is a bill enacting that Hannah E. Rogers be placed upon the pension roll as the aged and dependent daughter of Josiah Hunt, who is shown by the records of the Pension Bureau to have served three terms of enlistment, covering the entire period from January, 1777, to June, 1783, in the New Jersey Line, war of the Revolution. During his service he participated in the battles of Short Hills, Brandywine, Germantown, Monmonth, Green Springs, and Yorktown.

The claimant declares under oath that she is 80 years old and dependent upon a son, a wounded veteran of the late war, for support. She resides at Dunkirk, N. Y.

The testimony accompanying the bill fully establishes her relationship to the soldier, and shows that the soldier and his wife have been dead for many years.

years.

All the facts are fully substantiated by the testimony on file, and it is stated that the soldier also rendered service in the war of 1812; but of this no record has been secured.

The passage of the bill is respectfully recommended with an amendment striking out the word "thirty," in line 8, and substituting therefor the word "twelve," so as to fix the rating at $12 per month.

The question being taken, the amendment reported by the committee was agreed to.

The bill as amended was laid aside to be reported favorably to the House.

JAMES CHARLES CRAMER.

The next business on the Private Calendar was the bill (H. R. 3714) removing the charge of desertion from the military record of James Charles Cramer.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of War be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to remove the charge of desertion standing against James Charles Cramer, late a private in Company E, One hundred and forty-eighth Regiment Pennsylvania Volunteers, and to issue to him an honorable discharge.

Charles Cramer, having had the same under consideration, would respectfully report thereon as follows:

"whose name also appears on some records as James C. Cramer, was drafted from the Twenty-fourth subdistrict of Pennsylvania August 22, 1933, to serve three years; that he was received at Carlisle, Pa., rendezvous November 3, 1889; that he joined Company E, One hundred and forty-eighth Pennsylvania Volunteers, to which he was assigned, and was present therewith until May 10, 1894, when he received a slight gunshot wound of left side at the battle of Po Rivery U. Dr. 1884, 181, 183; that he was rensered May 17, 1894, and entered Satterlee General Hospital, West Philadelphia, Pa., May 18, 1894, and entered Satterlee General Hospital, West Philadelphia, Pa., May 18, 1894, and entered Satterlee General Hospital, West Philadelphia, Pa., May 18, 1894, and entered Satterlee General Hospital, West Philadelphia, Pa., May 18, 1894, and entered Satterlee General Hospital, West Philadelphia, Pa., May 18, 1894, and entered Satterlee General Hospital, West Philadelphia, for treatment for a wound; that he went home from said hospital and there remained till May, 1895, when he again went home on the spital and there remained till May, 1895, when he again went home "all broke up in health, hearing gone, and at times clear out of his mind from pain in his head and ears;" that he was then (at the date of his affidavit) able to do but little manual labor because of "wound in left side and dearness of both ears."

Edwin A Scott, of Imlay City, Mich., late of Company E, Sixty-fourth New York Volunteers, under date of March 15, 1885, testified that he met applicant told him in the intrenchments in front of Petersburg Va, in the latter produces of the work of the service of the work of the service of the service having rejoined his company.

The charges of desertion in this case are predicated upon the following circumstances:

First. The soldier left the hospital at West Philadelphia, Pa., June 6, 1884, and went home, but returned to his regiment in September of that year and remained until May, 1865. The soldier, in his affidavit, gives as the reason for his leaving the hospital at the time stated, that he received word that his wife and children were lying at the point of death; that he tried to get a furlough, but could not, and then went home. These facts, standing alone, might justify the charge of a technical desertion, but if we are to credit the statement in the affidavit of the beneficiary, it is apparent that in leaving the hospital desertion was not his purpose, but rather to visit his family, who were ill. The return of the soldier to his command in September of the same year, and his service until the close of the war, according to his captain's testimony, negatives the presence of any intention on the part of the soldier to desert, and his conduct as to this first charge of desertion does not vary much from that of many soldiers who, under like circumstances, visited their families on account of the illness of some member thereof, but returned to their commands, and against whom the charge of desertion was never entered; and, in the opinion of your committee, the soldier in this case should be excused under the circumstances from the first charge of desertion.

As to the second charge of desertion, occurring in May, 1865, after the close of the war, although the date of the month is not definitely fixed, and notwithstanding the fact that the affidavit of the beneficiary is the only evidence found showing that he served until May, 1865, if such were a fact, he would be excused from the second charge of desertion under the act of March 2, 1889.

In the absence of any proof to the contrary, your committee is inclined to give the soldier the benefit of the doubt, if any exists, and recommend that the bill do

During the reading of the above the hammer fell.

The CHAIRMAN. The time under the rule allowed for debate

The CHAIRMAN. The time under the rule allowed for debate on this bill has expired.

Mr. McCLELLAN. I ask consent that the rest of the report be printed as a part of my remarks.

There was no objection.

The entire report is printed above.

Mr. STEELE. Mr. Chairman, I move that this bill be reported to the House with the recommendation that it lie upon the table. According to the man's own admission he was a deserter.

The motion of Mr. Steele was agreed to.

The bill was accordingly laid aside to be reported to the House with the recommendation that it do lie on the table.

ARMY APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. HULL. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the committee rise informally for the purpose of nonconcurring in the Senate amendments to the Army appropriation bill, and ask a conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on said bill. conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on said bill. The gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. Richardson], who objected to my request a few moments ago, tells me that he would not object to this proceeding, and it is necessary, in order to get the conference ordered by the Senate this afternoon, that the action of the House be messaged back to the Senate promptly.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Iowa?

There was no objection.
The committee informally rose; and Mr. Steele took the chair as Speaker pro tempore.

Mr. HULL. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House nonconcur in the amendments of the Senate to the Army appropriation bill and ask a committee of conference thereon.

The motion was agreed to.

The SPEAKER pro tempore announced the appointment of Mr.
HULL, Mr. PARKER, and Mr. McClellan as conferees on the part of the House.

CHANGE OF REFERENCE.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair, if there be no objection, will correct the reference of a Senate bill. The bill S. 702 which was referred to the Committee on Invalid Pensions should be referred to the Committee on Pensions. Without objection, that order will be made.

There was no objection, and it was so ordered. The Committee of the Whole resumed its session.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

The next business on the Private Calendar was the bill (H. R. 3659) for the relief of John E. Wilbur.

The bill was read at length.

Mr. McCLELLAN. Mr. Chairman, I ask for the reading of the

Mr. STEELE. Mr. Chairman, I do not believe this bill comes within the purview of the order of the House. It is not a desertion case or a bill for the removal of such a charge. The order involves only the consideration of pension bills and bills removing charges of descrition charges of desertion.

Mr. MITCHELL. Does the gentleman make objection? This gentleman was dismissed from the Army, but his dismissal was practically vacated by President Lincoln.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair is clearly of the opinion that the bill does not come within the rule; and the Clerk will report the next bill.

The next business on the Private Calendar was the bill (H. R. 989) to amend the military record of Capt. Thomas M. Elliott.

The CHAIRMAN. This is a bill of the same character as the last one, and will be laid aside as not coming within the rule of to-day. The next business on the Private Calendar was the bill (H. R.

6686) to correct the military record of Joseph A. Blanchard, late first lieutenant of Troop E, First New York Mounted Rifles. The bill was read at length.

Mr. McCLELLAN. I ask for the reading of the report in my

Mr. WOOD. Mr. Chairman, I raise the point of order that this bill is not in order under the rule. Mr. McCLELLAN. The report will disclose that fact. I am not familiar with the report.

Mr. HULL. This is a court-martial case, and of course it would not be in order.

Mr. WOOD. It is not a bill for the removal of the charge of desertion, but to correct a military record.

Mr. McCLELLAN. But that correction might be for the removal of the charge of desertion.

Mr. HULL. It is not.

Mr. DOCKERY. Then the bill is not properly in order here.

The CHAIRMAN. The suggestion of the gentleman from New York might be true, but on the face of the bill it is not properly within the purview of the rule and, in the opinion of the Chair, is not proper. not in order.

The Clerk will report the next bill.

JULIA D. BEEBE.

The next business on the Private Calendar was the bill (H. R. 6915) granting a pension to Julia D. Beebe, widow of Frank D. Beebe, late assistant surgeon, One hundred and fifty-seventh Regiment New York Volunteers.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place upon the pension roll of the United States

the name of Julia D. Beebe, widow of Frank D. Beebe, late assistant surgeon of the One hundred and fifty-seventh Regiment New York Volunteer Infantry, at the rate of $20 per month, to commence from the date of the passage of this act.

Mr. ERDMAN. I ask for the reading of the report. The report (by Mr. Poole) was read, as follows:

Mr. ERDMAN. I ask for the reading of the report.

The report (by Mr. Poole) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Invalid Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 6815) granting a pension to Julia D. Beebe, widow of Frank D. Beebe, late assistant surgeon. One hundred and fitty-seventh Regiment New York Volunteers, submit the following report:

Frank D. Beebe enlisted as assistant surgeon One hundred and fitty-seventh New York Volunteers on the 19th of September, 1882, and was discharged November 9, 1883, he having been obliged to resign on account of diarrhea, which had become chronic, the records of the hospital showing that he had been sick and unft for duty for over three months. On the 26th of January, 1886, Beebe made application for pension, alleging bloody dysentery, result of diarrhea contracted in the Army. This claim was allowed, and a pension was granted him April 4, 1883, at the rate of 8.50 per month from the date of his discharge from the Army, November 10, 1863. On the 15th of July, 1891, Dr. Beebe made a claim for increase; also making another claim June 3, 1882, alleging great a claim for increase; also making another claim June 3, 1882, alleging great increase was paid after his death to the widow.

Julia D. Beebe made application for a pension as the widow of Frank D. Beebe August 2, 1886, which claim was rejected August 7, 1885, on the ground "that death resulted from disease of lungs not due to cause which has been legally accepted."

The register of vital statistics makes affidavit that the cause of death was chronic diarrhea and pneumonia.

Dr. O. S. Langworthy, of Hamilton, N. Y., filed an affidavit with the Pension Bureau May 6, 1885, in which he says that he studied medicine with Dr. Beebe for three years, and for two years prior to his death was in partnership with him. During all of that time he testified that Dr. Beebe was a great sufferer with diarrhea, his bowels moving from three to ten times daily, causing him intense pain, followed by weakness; that he also suffered wit

Mr. THOMAS. Mr. Chairman, I offer the amendments I send to the desk to perfect this bill.

The Clerk read as follows:

In line 7, after the word "Infantry," insert "and pay her a pension;" in line 8 strike out all after the word "month;" and amend the title of the bill so as to read: "A bill granting a pension to Julia D. Beebe."

The amendments were agreed to.

The question being taken on the amendment recommended by the committee, it was agreed to.

The bill as amended was laid aside to be reported to the House with the recommendation that it do pass.

SHUBAEL GOULD.

The next business on the Private Calendar was the bill (S. 1310) granting an increase of pension to Shubael Gould. Tre bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Shubael Gould, late a private in Company G. Righth Regiment Vermont Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $50 per month, in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The CHAIRMAN. Shall the bill be laid aside with a favorable recommendation?

Mr. ERDMAN. Mr. Chairman, let us have the report read. The CHAIRMAN. The report will be read in the gentleman's

The report (by Mr. SULLOWAY) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Invalid Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (S.1310) granting an increase of pension to Shubael Gould, having carefully considered the same, adopt the accompanying Senate report (No. 127) as their own, and respectfully recommend the passage of the bill.

[Senate report No. 127, Fifty-fourth Congress, first session.]

[Senate report No. 12], Fifty-fourth Congress, first session.]

The claimant under this bil lenlisted December 24, 1863, and was discharged June 23, 1865. He was pensioned at $16 per month for disease of right leg, which was subsequently increased to $24 and $30, the pensionable causes being stated on these occasions as disease of right leg and resulting deblity. He applied for further increase, which was rejected on the ground that the then existing condition was due in part to other causes.

Soldier is at present in a totally helpless condition, requiring the constant attendance of another person, one side being entirely paralyzed, and the heart's action disturbed. In his behalf it is contended that this condition is due to the progress of the disease for which he is pensioned, but the Pension Bureau took the ground that the paralysis was of cerebral origin, and hence not directly traceable to pensionable causes.

Claimant has had many medical examinations, all physicians agreeing that he is in a deplorable and hopeless condition. The last two examinations gave the pulse rate at 100 and 120, respectively, and respiration at 36. He suffere greatly, being constantly restless, and the probabilities are that he will not survive many months. The examining boards give him a first-grade rating.

Dr. O. B. Way, of Claremont, N. H., his attending physician, describes his condition as one of extreme and hopeless suffering. Dr. Sanborn, of Newport, N. H., who was sent by the Pension Bureau with special instructions to examine into the causes of soldier's present condition, reported as follows:

"Mr. Gould is very feeble and confined to his bed, with marked emaiation and tremor of whole body; almost complete loss of motion in left leg, and but slight sensation; can not stand alone or feed himself; action of heart very weak and rapid; integuments on legs discolored as per diagram, with ulceration of left leg; he requires regular aid and attendance of another person by reason of pensioned disabilities. I consider the apoplectic stroke which Mr. Gould is suffering from, causing hemiplegia of left side, the result of his general debility, caused by phlebitis and ulceration of leg."

A subsequent examination by the same physician disclosed a similar condition, and he recommended that he be pensioned accordingly. Had the testimony of these medical men, who personally saw and examined the soldier, been accepted, he would have been granted $72 per month, but the medical officers of the Pension Bureau, in their discretion and wisdom, refused to accept the view that the existing condition was wholly due to pensionable causes, and rejected the claim.

The bill under consideration increases the pension from $30 to $50, and your committee are of op

The bill was ordered to be laid aside to be reported to the House with a favorable recommendation.

JOHN NICHOLS.

The next business on the Private Calendar was the bill (S. 638) granting an increase of pension to John Nichols.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of John Nichols, of Durham, Butte County, Cal., late sergeant Company I, One hundred and eleventh Illinois Infantry Volunteers, at the rate of $36 per month, in lieu of the pension he is now receiving under certificate 75345.

Mr. ERDMAN. Mr. Chairman, let us have the report. The CHAIRMAN. The report will be read. The report (by Mr. Andrews) was read, as follows:

The report (by Mr. Andrews) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Invalid Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (S. 638) granting an increase of pension to John Nichols, adopt as their own the accompanying Senate Report No. 159 and recommend the passage of the bill.

[Senate Report No. 159, Fifty-fourth Congress, first session.]

The Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (S. 638) granting an increase of pension to John Nichols, have examined the same and report:

The claimant served as sergeant of Company I. One hundred and eleventh Illinois Volunteer Infantry, from August 11, 1862, to May 22, 1865. While in the line of duty at Resaca, Ga., he received, on May 14, 1864, a gunshot wound through the left shoulder, the ball passing through his body, coming out near the shoulder blade, for which disability he is now receiving a pension of $24 per month. He has made several applications for increase, claiming that his disabilities are as serious as if his arm was amputated, as he is totally unable to perform manual labor of any kind, but his claim for increase was rejected, as, in the opinion of the medical referee, his disabilities were not considered sufficient to entitle him to this rating.

The claimant, as shown by affidavits of his physician and neighbors, is now wholly unable to perform any manual labor by reason of said gunshot wound of left shoulder, and is practically helpless, being unable, at times, to dress and undress himself by reason of his wound, which renders the left arm useless and equivalent to the loss of arm at the shoulder joint; that said wound also affects the left lung, and causes entire loss of voice at times.

In the opinion of your committee the disabilities enumerated from which the claimant is now suffering entitle him to the rating of the total disability of loss of use of arm, which is $36 per month, and the passage of the bill is therefore recommended.

The bill was ordered to be laid aside to be reported to the House with a favorable recommendation.

GEORGE B. CUSTER.

The next business on the Private Calendar was the bill (S. 1806) granting a pension to George B. Custer, late sergeant of Company H, Seventy-third Regiment Indiana Volunteer Infantry.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place upon the pension roll the name of George B. Custer, late sergeant Company H, Seventy-third Regiment Indiana Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension of $20 per month, said pension to be for injuries to right hand, right foot, and right ankle, received in service and line of duty.

Mr. ERDMAN. Mr. Chairman, let us have the report. The CHAIRMAN. Let the report be read. The report (by Mr. Pickler) was read, as follows:

The report (by Mr. Pickler) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Invalid Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (8.1806) granting a pension to George B. Custer, having carefully considered the facts in the case, respectfully report:

An application for pension in this case was filed by the claimant, George B. Custer, November 3, 1879, under the act of July 14, 1862, for injuries to the right hand, right foot, and right ankle. The claim was rejected by the Pension Bureau on the ground that the claimant had failed to establish origin of injuries in the service and line of duty.

The facts of the case, from the evidence filed by claimant and the reports of the various special examiners, are as follows:

The claimant, George B. Custer, is a Mexican war veteran and is now drawing a pension of $8 per month for services in that war.

He enlisted in the Seventy-third Indiana Volunteer Infantry for the war of the rebellion July 21, 1862, and served until mustered out, July 1, 1865.

The claimant alleged in his application for pension that he incurred serious injuries to his right hand, right foot, and ankle while in service and line of duty. That the said injuries were incurred in February, 1863, while he was on detail service in a pioneer corps; that he was the only person detailed from his company on such duty, and that all the other members of the pioneer corps were strangers to him. That in February, 1863, as above stated, he, with others of the pioneer corps, was engaged in building a railroad bridge across a creek called Squirrel Creek, near Stone River, Tennessee, and while helping to raise a "bent" in said bridge and helping to lift the timbers by means of a pry, the other men let go and the weight of the heavy timbers came on claimant and, his foot slipping, he was pressed to the ground under the handspike and his right hand and foot caught underneath and badly injured.

means of a pry, the other men let go and the weight of the heavy timbers came on claimant and, his foot slipping, he was pressed to the ground under the handspike and his right hand and foot caught underneath and badly injured.

The records of the War Department show that in March and April, 1863, he was in hospital, but the nature of his disability is not stated.

The rectimony shows that claimant was an able-bodied, healthy man at enlistment, and was without injury up to the time he was detached from his company for detail in the ploneer corps.

The lieutenant of claimant's company states that claimant was an excelent soldier, faithful in the discharge of his duties, and one of the most reliable men he ever knew. That he remembers that claimant was detached for duty in the pioneer corps, and that when he returned to the company he complained of some injury; that his hand was bandaged or in a sling. Does not remember just what the injuries were, but remembers distinctly that claimant was suffering from varicose veins in his leg, which claimant had shown him. That shortly after claimant's return to his company the regiment was ordered off on a raid and claimant was left behind for treatment for his injuries. He also remembers and detained for nineteen months and did not again see claimant.

The captain of Company H. Seventy-third Indiana Volunteer Infantry, testifies that he knew the claimant three years before the war, and that he was an able-bodied, healthy man. Does not remember of any disability during service, and does not remember condition at discharge. Has seen claimant once since discharge, when he complained of some injury, but does not remember the name or nature of the disability. Beventy-third Indiana Volunteer Infantry, who had served in Company H as orderly sergeant, testifies that he commanded Company H for some eight months during absence of officers; that he knew claimant well and that he was a good solder, always ready for duty until he met with an accident while detailed with pioneer corps a

Mr. THOMAS. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendments, to perfect the bill.

The Clerk read as follows:

In line 7 strike out all after the word "months" and add "in lieu of the pension he is now receiving."

Amend the title so as to read: "An act granting an increase of pension to George B. Custer."

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be laid aside to be reported to the House with the recommendation that it do pass.

HENRY MACKRILL.

The next business on the Private Calendar was the bill (H. R. 3690) restoring a pension to Henry Mackvill, alias Henry Mackey. The bill was read, as follows:.

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and is hereby, authorized and directed to place or reinstate on the pension roll the name of Henry Mackvill, alias Henry Mackey, a late landsman in the United States naval service during the war of the rebellion, and cause him to be paid a pension of $15 per month on account of catarrh, disease of rectum, disease of kidneys, and disease of eyes, and necessary results thereof, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws.

The Committee on Invalid Pensions recommended the following amendments:

Strike out the words "or reinstate" in line 4; substitute the name "Mackrill" for "Mackvill" in line 5; strike out the word "fifteen" in line 7 and insert "twelve" in lieu thereof, and strike out all after the word "month" in line 8.

Also, amend the title of bill so as to read: "Granting a pension to Henry Mackrill, alias Henry Mackey."

Mr. ERDMAN. Let us have the report.
The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. ERDMAN] demands the reading of the report.

The report by (Mr. KIRKPATRICK) was read, as follows:

The report by (Mr. Kirkpatrick) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Invalid Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 3660) granting a pension to Henry Mackvill, alias Henry Mackey, late landsman in the United States Navy, having carefully considered all the facts and circumstances presented, respectfully report as follows:

The Auditor for the Navy Department says:

"Henry Mackrill, landsman, enlisted at the naval station at Chicago, and was entered on the rolls of the Princeton, January 23, 1864, and served to March 3, 1864; on the Ticonderopa to May 4, 1865, as landsman; on the Princeton as ordinary seaman to May 11, 1865, and was discharged from the Sabina as ordinary seaman, August 3, 1865. The rolls do not show anything in reference to his being a Confederate prisoner or having served in the Confederate army."

The War Department records show:

"Henry Mackrill, private, Company D, Ninth Mississippi Infantry, C. S. A, enlisted April II, 1862, at Vicksburg, Miss., for three years, and is reported on rolls to August 31, 1863, 'present.' October 31, 1863, 'absent, sick since October 20, 1863, by order Surgeon Williams.' December 31, 1863, 'absent, missing in action since day after Missionary Bidge, November 25, 1863, 'absent, missing in action since day after Missionary Bidge, November 25, 1863, 'absent, missing in action since day after Missionary Bidge, November 25, 1863, Reported as deserter.' Name not found on rolls of later date. Nature of disability not stated. Prisoner of war records show Henry Mackeral, Company D, Ninth Mississippi Infantry, captured at Chickamauga, Tenn., November 25, 1863. Confined at Rock Island, II., December 13, 1863, where he enlisted in the United States Navy, and sent to naval rendezvous, Camp Douglas, III., January 25, 1864."

Claimant alleges that at breaking out of the war he was a British subject, and engaged in cutting wood on the Lower Mississippi; that the floods washed his wood away, and it was impracticable to get any work or even anything to eat unless he enlisted, and under the pressure of his surroundings he enlisted in the Confederate States army, intending to get away at first opportunity, which came at battle of Mission Ridge, when he and eight others surrendered to one Union soldier.

When he enlisted in the United States Navy, he asked to have his name put on rolls as "Henry Mackey," for fear that he might be taken prisoner; but this was not done. After the war he was known as Henry Mackey; had the legislature of Indiana change his name to Henry Mackey; became a naturalized citizen under that name, and has been known as Henry Mackey ever since.

He applied for pension under act of June 27, 1890 (filed July 4, 1890), and ized citizen under that name, and nas been known as Heally accessione.

He applied for pension under act of June 27, 1890 (filed July 4, 1890), and again May 9, 1891, and with the latter an affidavit stating his prior Confederate service. His pension was allowed October 2, 1891, at $12 per month from July 25, 1890, for "catarrh, disease of rectum, kidneys, and eyes."

He was dropped from the rolls for "disloyalty" September 23, 1895, under authority of section 4716, Revised Statutes, having voluntarily aided or abetted the rebellion against the authority of the United States.

There is no question in this case but that the applicant is disabled for performing manual labor. The board of examining surgeons at Delhi, Ind., July 15, 1891, rated him four-eighteenths for nervous debility, six-eighteenths for post-nasal catarrh, two-eighteenths for sicases of eyes, four-eighteenths for kidneys, and four-eighteenths for piles, and his disabilities have progressed since then.

for fidneys, and four-eighteenths for piles, and his disabilities have progressed since then.

The construction of the act of June 27, 1890, which prevailed several months without objection, while the Congress which enacted it was still in session, that uinsty days' service and an honorable discharge, without regard to previous loyalty, were the prerequisites to a pensionable status under that act, gave this sailor a pension, to which your committee believe he was justly entitled, he having fathfully served more than one and one-half years and being honorably discharged.

Your committee therefore recommend the passage of the bill with the following amendments:

Strike out the words "or reinstate" in line 4; substitute the name "Mack, rill" for "Mackyill" in line 5; strike out the word "fifteen" in line 7 and insert "twelve" in lieu thereof, and strike out all after the word "month," in line 5.

rill "for "mackynt in lieu thereof, and strike out all after the word "month," in line 8.

Also, amend the title of bill so as to read: "Granting a pension to Henry Mackylll, alias Henry Macky."

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the committee amend-

Mr. THOMAS. For the purpose of identifying the man more accurately as to his service, I offer the amendment which I send to the Clerk's desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

In line 6, after the word "service," insert "on U. S. S. Ticonderoga."

The amendment was agreed to.
Mr. TALBERT. Mr. Chairman, it seems to me this is a very singular kind of an individual. He is a British subject, then an American; first a Confederate and then a Federal, and finally he changed his name two or three times. It seems to me the matter ought to be further investigated. This is a matter for the Pension Bureau to look after.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. Chairman, I wish to say that he changed his name because he feared that if he was again captured by the

Mr. TALBERT. I submit, Mr. Chairman, that this matter ought to be laid over for further investigation.

Mr. HATCH. This man came from England to this country knowing nothing in regard to the great questions that were at issue before the people. He was cutting wood on the Lower Mississippi. The floods came and carried away his wood, and as there was the correction of the country that the country that the country is the country that the country t was no opportunity for obtaining employment he joined the Confederate army.

Mr. TALBERT. How do you know whether it was this fellow or the other fellow?

Mr. HATCH. It gives his name here.
Mr. TALBERT. Yes; but he changed his name so often that you can not catch up with him. I think the matter ought to be investigated further.
Mr. THOMAS. This man is thoroughly identified by having been once admitted as a pensioner at $12 a month. Under a different construction of the law his name was drawned from the ferent construction of the law his name was dropped from the rolls. His identification is certainly complete, and we need not lay the bill aside for the purpose of identifying the beneficiary.

Mr. DOCKERY. I think he is sufficiently identified.

Mr. THOMAS. His case is certainly before us on its merits.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Indiana [Mr. HATCH] has the floor.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. Chairman, this is merely a reinstatement, This man drew a pension for five years under the act of 1890. Last year, or the year before last, he was dropped from the pension rolls because he had been in the Confederate service. At the time he made application for the pension he made an affidavit that he had been in the Confederate service. I think he is sufficiently identified in the Pension Office.

Mr. DOCKERY. Mr. Chairman, I do not think that is the trouble in this case at all. I think this case is fully identified. I am satisfied he served in the Confederate army, because I remember when we had this case before the House some days since it was shown that he had been in the Confederate army for more than twelve months; also that he was a subject of Great Britain, and later on he changed his views and entered the Army of the Union.

Mr. LOUD. How do you know that he changed his views?

Mr. DOCKERY. I accept the suggestion of the gentleman from California. He changed his service. I suggest to my friends on California. He changed his service. I suggest to my friends on the other side, if you are to inaugurate the policy of pensioning ex-Confederates, it seems that you should begin with worthy cases. The report shows this applicant to be unworthy.

The CHAIRMAN. Time for debate against the bill is exhausted. Mr. LOUD. We were talking for it. [Cries of "Vote!"]

Mr. DOCKERY. I hope the House will not pass this bill. The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the adoption of the amendments recommended by the committee.

The amendments recommended by the committee were agreed to. The CHAIRMAN. The question is on laying the bill aside with a favorable recommendation.

a favorable recommendation.

The question was taken; and the Chairman announced that the ayes seemed to have it.

Mr. TALBERT. Division, Mr. Chairman.
The committee divided; and there were—ayes 65; noes 26.
So the bill was ordered to be laid aside with a favorable recommendation

Mr. DOCKERY. Mr. Chairman, I desire to give notice that I shall ask for a yea-and-nay vote in the House on the passage of this

PETER J. CLAASSEN.

The next business on the Private Calendar was the bill (H. R.

2221) granting an increase of pension to Peter J. Claassen.

Mr. McCLELLAN. Mr. Chairman, this bill was introduced by my colleague [Mr. Hurley] and was reported by myself. Since it has been reported the beneficiary has died. I therefore move that the bill be reported to the House with the recommendation that it lie on the table.

The motion was agreed to.

MARY FORWARD.

The next business on the Private Calendar was the bill (H. R. 4930) granting a pension to Mary Forward.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Mary Forward, of Allegan, Mich., widow of Charles Branch, late of Company C, Third Michigan Cavalry Volunteers, and pay her a pension of $12 per month.

Mr. TALBERT. I ask for the reading of the report, Mr. Chairman

The CHAIRMAN. The report will be read in the gentleman's

The report (by Mr. THOMAS) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Invalid Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 4930) granting a pension to Mary Forward, respectfully report:

This claimant was married December 24, 1855, to Charles Branch, who served in Company I, Tenth Veteran Reserve Corps, and who died March 24, 1865. She was pensioned as his widow until October 7, 1866, when she was again married, this time to Joseph Forward, who died December 22, 1891. The claimant is now old, disabled, and needy. She was the wife of the soldier during the war, and cared for their three children during his absence in the service.

In view of these facts, your committee are of opinion that this woman should not be left to suffer in her age and decrepitude. In consequence of her remarriage the Government was relieved from the payment of about $2,300, the amount she would have received as pension from date of her remarriage to the present time had she not remarried.

Your committee are of opinion that she should be again pensioned, and recommend the passage of the bill with an amendment, striking out the words "of Allegan, Mich.," and inserting in lieu thereof the words "formerly the."

Mr. TALBERT. Mr. Chairman, I submit that if this claim is Mr. TALBERT. Mr. Charman, I submit that it this claim is passed it will be a direct violation of the law, which says that when a widow remarries she thereby forfeits all her claim to a pension. Here is a bill asking that a lady who has remarried shall receive a pension. In consequence of her remarriage she is not entitled to a pension. The reasons given for granting her this pension are that she is poor and needy. There are a great many others in our country who are in the same fix. I submit many others in our country who are in the same fix. I submit, sir, that this bill ought not to pass.

The question was taken on agreeing to the amendment recommended by the committee; and the Chairman announced that the ayes seemed to have it.

Mr. TALBERT. Division. The committee divided; and there were—ayes 41, noes 4.

laid aside with a favorable report; and the Chairman announced hald aside with a favorable report, and the Chairman amounced that the ayes seemed to have it.

Mr. TALBERT. Division, Mr. Chairman.

The committee divided; and there were—ayes 52, noes 16.

So the bill was ordered to be laid aside with a favorable recom-

ELIZABETH A. MARTHON.

The next business on the Private Calendar was the bill (H. R. 5764) granting a pension to Elizabeth A. Marthon.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior is hereby authorized and directed to pay to Elizabeth A. Marthon, widow of Joseph Marthon, late a lieutenant-commander in the United States Navy, a pension of $75 per month, in lieu of the pension she is now receiving.

Mr. ERDMAN. Let us have the report read. The CHAIRMAN. The report will be read in the time of the gentleman.

The report (by Mr. Halterman) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 5784) entitled "A bill granting a pension to Elizabeth D. Marthon," beg leave to submit the following report, and recommend that said bill do pass, with amendments:

The claimant is the widow of Joseph Marthon, late a lieutenant-commander, United States Navy, whose service began as a seaman September 30, 1861. He was subsequently promoted through the several grades to the rank of acting master, which he held when honorably discharged December 31, 1865. He was reappointed acting master April 19, 1866, and was subsequently promoted for valuable and meritorious service, until he finally attained the rank of lieutenant-commander July 1, 1882. His death occurred while still on the active list and from causes originating in the service at Shanghai, China, November 19, 1891, and his widow is now receiving the pension of 30 per month allowed by the general laws to the widows of lieutenant-commanders who die from causes of service origin.

The following statement of Hon. S. L. Milliken, member of Congress, shows the facts upon which your committee bases its favorable recommendation:

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 9, 1896.

Mrs. Marthon is a native of Belfast, Me., the city in which I reside. I have known her since she was a girl, and knew her family, which was one of the prominent old families of Belfast. I knew her husband. Lieut. Commander Joseph Marthon, when he was alive. Since his death the little property which he left has suffered such losses that she is dependent almost entirely upon her pension for the support of herself, and her husband's mother and maiden sister also.

S. L. MILLIKEN, Member of Congress.

The following amendments to the bill are recommended:
Change the title so as to read, "A bill granting an increase of pension to Elizabeth D. Marthon," and strike out the initial "A." where it appears in claimant's name in the body of the bill and substitute therefor the initial
"D.;" also strike out the word "seventy-five," in line 6, and substitute therefor the word "fifty," so as to fix the rating at $50 per month.

The amendments recommended by the committee were agreed to.
Mr. MILNES. Mr. Chairman, this officer whose widow it is proposed to pension would rank as lieutenant-colonel in the Army. It is proposed to pay her a pension at the rate of $50 a month. Before voting for this bill, I should like to learn some good reason why we should pay $50 a month to the widow of a lieutenant-colonel?

Mr. BRODERICK. Mr. Chairman, the gentleman from Maine [Mr. MILLIKEN] and the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. Brosius] understand this question, and had expected to be here to explain the bill. The gentleman from Pennsylvania is ill, and the other gentleman is not in his seat. I have some information about the matter, but not much aside from what appears in the report. The report says that this officer was in the service during the entire war, and from the promotions that were made he evidently was a good officer. He was in the service when he died. He resigned soon after the war closed, and within a year was reappointed and given the position he held when he resigned. I say I think it is clearly shown by the report that he was a good officer. His widow is a meritorious lady and is entitled to the pension. I was asked, if these gentlemen were not present, to say something of this claim; but I know little beyond what is given in something of this claim; but I know little beyond what is given in the report.

Mr. MILNES. Now, Mr. Chairman, there is no question about the meritorious service of the husband of this lady; but it does seem to be a question of paying $50 a month to the widow of an officer of that rank. We have given $50 and $75 and in some cases $100 a month pension to widows of generals, those who have attained the rank of brigadier-general and major-general in the Regular Army. If this man had been in the Army, he would have had the rank of lieutenant-colonel. This lady is now receiving $30 a month, and that is all she ought to ask in all fairness, it seems to me. I move to amend by striking out "fifty" and inserting "thirty."

ing "thirty."

The CHAIRMAN. The motion comes too late, the amendments of the committee having been adopted.

Mr. HALTERMAN. Mr. Chairman, I wish to say in regard to this case that it is a most meritorious one. This lieutenantcommander enlisted in the Navy in 1861 as a common seaman, and advanced step by step until at the time of the taking of Mobile he The committee divided; and there were—ayes 41, noes 4.
So the amendment was agreed to.

The question was taken on ordering the bill as amended to be Admiral Farragut was in the shrouds. He was promoted for bravery on that occasion. He remained in the service until his death. In the Chinese waters he contracted the malarious disease from which he died. His widow now supports his aged mother, who is an invalid and a paralytic, and I think that this lady is entitled to an increase of her pension to $50 a month.

Mr. LOUDENSLAGER. Mr. Chairman, I hope the House will give this case fair consideration. The committee have endeavers give this case fair consideration. The committee have endeavored to be conservative in their action on this bill granting to this widow a pension of $50 a month, which is from $25 to $50 less than would be justified by several precedents. Even in this Congress we have passed bills at the rate of $75 and $100 per month—$75 in a we have passed bills at the rate of $75 and $100 per month—$75 in a case where the rank of the officer was only equal to that of this lieutenant-commander. The service which he rendered to his Government entitles his widow to receive at least fair and equitable treatment, and I trust that the Committee of the Whole will report this bill to the House with a favorable recommendation.

Mr. CURTIS of New York. Mr. Chairman, I rise for the purpose of correcting a remark of my friend Mr. MILNES, which I think was made without due deliberation, that the rank of this naval officer would correspond to that of a lieutenant-colonel.

Mr. MILNES. Lieutenant-commander.

Mr. CURTIS of New York. As I understand the matter, his rank would be that of captain. The fact that this man rose from the forecastle to the position that he occupied at the time of his

the forecastle to the position that he occupied at the time of his death is a consideration which must appeal strongly to this House when called on to recognize his merits as an officer, and, as the chairman of the Committee on Invalid Pensions has said, I believe the pension in this case should be retained at the figure named in the bill, especially as it will be, even at that figure, below many other pensions that have been granted in similar cases.

The bill was laid aside to be reported to the House with the recommendation that it do pass.

HANS JOHNSON.

The next business on the Private Calendar was the bill (S. 1495) granting a pension to Hans Johnson.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Hans Johnson, late corporal of Company I, Twenty-seventh Regiment Iowa Volunteer Infantry, and to pay said Johnson at the rate of $50 per month from and after the date of the passage of this act.

Mr. THOMAS. Mr. Chairman, let the report be r The report (by Mr. THOMAS) was read, as follows: Mr. Chairman, let the report be read.

The Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (S. 1495) granting a pension to Hans Johnson, have had the same under consideration and

The report (by Mr. THOMAS) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (8. 1495) granting a pension to Hans Johnson, have had the same under consideration and report:

Hans Johnson, late corporal of Company I, Twenty-seventh Regiment Iowa Infantry, enlisted August 15, 1862, and was honorably discharged by reason of surgeon's certificate of disability June 14, 1865, at Montgomery, Ala. The claimant has drawn a pension, in sums varying from $5.33\ a month to $8$, from the date of his discharge to July 28, 1890, when his application under the dependent pension law of June 27, 1890, was approved by the Pension Bureau at $12 a month, for disease of the eyes and gunshot wound of the right thigh.

The testimony in the claim, too voluminous for detailed presentation, is clear and ample as to the following facts: That Johnson was a sound man when he entered the service, and continued so until attacked by dysentery, and the incurrence of the gunshot wound in his thigh, and the disease of the eyes which developed while in the service.

These facts are substantiated by the affidavits of the captain of his company who enlisted him, and of the comrades who served with him, as well as by the surgeon's certificate of disability on which he was discharged. Since the war the continuance and increase of his disabilities are testified to by twelve physicians of the best repute, residing in the claimant's city and covering all the years between 1888 to 1898, such physicians having either attended him professionally or certified to his condition as members of pension examination boards. His disabilities since the war and their progressive character are also testified to by the claimant's neighbors and associates, among whom is the name of ex-Gvo. Lucius F. Hubbard. The Hon. C. K. Davis, Senator, has also stated to the committee his personal tribute to the high character of the claimant, and of the progress of his disabilities within his observation. The sum of all this testimony is that the diseas

The amendment was agreed to.
The bill as amended was laid aside to be reported to the House with the recommendation that it do pass.

ROBERT KIRACOFE.

The next business on the Private Calendar was the bill (S. 1017) granting a pension to Robert Kiracofe.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll the name of Robert Kiracofe, late a private in Company G. Eighty-first Ohio Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $12 per month, in lieu of the amount he is now receiving.

The report (by Mr. LAYTON) was read, as follows:

The report (by Mr. LAYTON) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Invalid Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (S. 1017) granting a pension to Robert Kiracofe, having carefully considered the facts in the case, respectfully report:

August 27, 1823, the claimant enlisted in Company G, Eighty-first Ohio Infantry, and was honorably discharged July 13, 1865.

November 24, 1833, he made application under the general law, alleging disease of eyes and disease of lungs, and was granted a pension of $2 per month for the first named disability.

May 27, 1891, he applied for increase, alleging catarrh, deafness, rheumatism, and resulting disease of heart, contracted in line of duty, in addition to the disability for which he was then pensioned. The testimony of four comrades sustains the allegation asto origin. Continuance is substantially proved. The examining board gives him the following rating: Disease of eyes, four-eighteenths; catarrh, two-eighteenths; rheumatism, two-eighteenths; disease of heart, two-eighteenths. April 11, 1894, the claim was rejected on the ground of "no record in the War Department; no medical testimony showing treatment in the service or at discharge, and testimony furnished not sufficient to establish origin in the service and continuance since discharge."

Thereafter, on June 6, 1894, he filed under the act of June 27, 1890, alleging rheumatism, disease of heart, catarrh, partial deafness, and disease of eyes. August 15, 1894, the report of the examining board shows that the claimant is disabled "equivalent to the loss of a leg at the knee for manual labor." March 2, 1896, he was granted a pension of $6 under said act, for rheumatism and disease of heart, the other disabilities alleged not being considered, on the ground of "no ratable disability."

The medical and lay evidence in the case shows that the soldier is disabled for the performance of manual labor, and your committee are of opinion that he is entitled to the maximum rate under the act of June 27, 1890, as fixed by the bill wh

Mr. TALBERT. Mr. Chairman, the question in this case is whether we ought to be guided by the report of the regular examining board or by medical and lay evidence coming from outside. The report of the regular board says that—

The claimant is disabled "equivalent to the loss of a leg at the knee for manual labor." March 2, 1896, he was granted a pension of $6 under said act, for rheumatism and disease of heart, the other disabilities alleged not being considered, on the ground of "no ratable disability."

The medical and lay evidence in this case is to the effect that the soldier is disabled for the performance of manual labor, and the committee on that ground recommend this pension. Now the committee on that ground recommend this pension. Now the question is, Which ought we to be guided by, the report of the official board, or outside testimony given gratuitously?

Mr. LAYTON. Mr. Chairman, in answer to the gentleman from South Carolina, I will state to him that if this committee were to be governed by the report of the examining surgeons this applicant would be entitled to considerable more pension than the amount provided in the bill. Further, I call his attention to the fact that the Committee on Invalid Pensions of the House would have recommended giving this applicant the full amount, that he fact that the Committee on Invalid Pensions of the House would have recommended giving this applicant the full amount that he would be entitled to under the law, according to the report of the last board of examining surgeons, had it not been for the fact that the Senate bill had passed fixing the pension $12 a month, and the committee did not desire to imperil the bill by submitting another amendment which might result in defeating its passage. According to the report of the last examining board this man's disability is equivalent to the loss of a leg below the knee, which, under existing law, would give him a pension considerably more than $12 a month. $12 a month.

A MEMBER. It would entitle him to $36 a month.

Mr. LAYTON. Yes; he would be entitled according to the official report of the board of examiners to $36 a month, but as the Senate had passed this bill pensioning him at the rate of $12, the House committee thought it unwise to hazard the passage of the bill at this session by proposing to increase the amount, and therefore decided to adopt the Senate bill.

The bill was laid aside to be reported to the House with the recommendation that it do pass

ELLEN DAY.

The next business on the Private Calendar was the bill (H. R. 6803) granting a pension to Ellen Day.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll the name of Ellen Day, stepmother of Albert L. Day, late private in Company K, Fifth Regiment Ohio Infantry, at the rate of $12 per month.

Mr. ERDMAN. Let us have the report read. The report (by Mr. LAYTON) was read, as follows:

The report (by Mr. LAYTON) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Invalid Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 6803) granting a pension to Ellen Day, stepmother of Albert L. Day, having carefully considered the same, reports as follows:

The soldier, Albert L. Day, enlisted and was duly enrolled as a private of Company I, First Regiment Ohio Volunteer Infantry, April 20, 1861, and was killed in battle at Cedar Mountain Angust 2, 1882. He was never married.

The claimant, Ellen Day, was duly married to Berry Day, the father of said soldier, on the 17th day of August, 1847, at which time the said soldier was but 18 months old. From this time until the day of his enlistment she always treated him with the utmost kindness, the same as if he was her own son, and he always exhibited the greatest fondness and affection for her.

Said Berry Day, the father of said soldier, filed an application for pension as the dependent father June 17, 1885, but his claim was rejected March 1, 1886, on the ground of nondependence. Subsequently, by special act of Congress approved June 4, 1888, he was granted a pension of $8 per month, which he continued to draw until his death, which occurred April 19, 1889.

The claimant never remarried. She is now aged and without any property whatever. She is in feeble health and has no income except what she is able to make by sewing for others. The foregoing facts are fully shown by the official records and the sworn testimony of persons having personal knowledge of the facts.

Your committee is therefore of the opinion that this stempether should

Your committee is therefore of the opinion that this stepmother should, in the spirit of the pension laws granting pensions to mothers of soldiers, be regarded and treated as the mother of said soldier, Albert L. Day, and does therefore recommend the passage of the bill, with the following amendment: Insert after the name "Ellen Day," in the fifth line thereof, the word "dependent."

The amendment recommended in the last paragraph of the report was adopted.

The bill was laid aside to be reported to the House with the recommendation that it do pass.

MAJ. GEN. JULIUS H. STAHEL.

The next business on the Private Calendar was the bill (H. R.

4534) to increase the pension of Maj. Gen. Julius H. Stahel.
Mr. THOMAS. Mr. Chairman, I move to substitute Senate bill
No. 1694, which is the same as the House bill.

The motion was agreed to.

The Senate bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to increase the pension of Julius H. Stahel, late major-general of volunteers in the Union Army, and pay same at the rate of $100 per month, in lieu of what he now receives, from and after the passage of this act.

The report on the House bill (by Mr. MILES) is as follows:

The report on the House bill (by Mr. Miles) is as follows:

The report on the House bill (by Mr. Miles) is as follows:

The committee on Invalid Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 6534) to increase the pension of Maj. Gen. Julius H. Stahel, having carefully considered the same, respectfully report:

Julius H. Stahel is a native of Hungary, who fought in the patriotic uprising of 1848 and 1849, and after the suppression of that movement he came to the United States, where he was engaged in the publication of a newspaper until the breaking out of the late war.

At the first call of President Lincoln for volunteers he gave up his business and enlisted, April 23, 1861, and continued in active service in the field, being promoted meanwhile for meritorious conduct, through various grades of rank to that of major-general, until after the battle of Piedmont, June 5, 1864, when, in consequence of a wound received while gallanty leading his division in that battle, he was ordered to Martinsburg and Harpers Ferry, for the purpose of collecting and organizing troops.

He was subsequently ordered to Baltimore on court-martial duty, and continued on such until February 8, 1865, when, owing to ill health, he resigned. General Stahel was unquestionably one of the most gallant soldiers who fought under the Union flag, and the Official Records of the Rebellion, a few extracts from which are hereunto appended, bear ample testimony to the valuable services rendered to the Union cause by him.

At the very beginning of the war he greatly distinguished himself. It was in the first battle of Bull Run that, under his command, the Eighth New York Volunteer Regiment repulsed the last two attacks of the enemy, and thereby completely checked their advance and pursuit of the Army.

At the second battle of Bull Run he again distinguished himself, and was complimented by General Schenek for his coolness and bravery.

On August 30, 1862, General Burnside, then in command of the Army.

At the second battle of Bull Run he again disti

DEPARTMENT OF STATE, Washington, October 24, 1885.

Department of State Washington, October 22, 1885.

My Dear Sir: I have this moment received your letter of this date resigning the position of consul-general at Shanghai, and make unfeigned expression of my sincere regret that the Government is to lose the services of so efficient and faithful an officer. And permit me to say how much my regret is increased by the cause of your resignation.

The record of your public service is unimpeachable, and I sincerely trust that in your new pursuit you may fully recover the health you have lost, and with it enjoy an ample and prolonged prosperity.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

T. F. BAYARD.

T. F. BAYARD.

After partially recovering his health he secured a business position in the city of New York in which he continued until recurring disease, infirmities, and the burden of old age compelled his final retirement from active life. General Stahel was entitled to a pension at the time of his resignation in 1865, but he was too conscientious to ask for Government aid so long as he was able to earn his living. After his retirement from active life he applied, in 1892, for the first time, for a pension, and since February, 1893, he has been in receipt of $30 per month, and from March, 1895, of $50 per month.

General Stahel received many letters of commendation and thanks from his superior officers, including Generals McClellan, Burnside, Schenck, Hunter, and others, set out in extenso in House Report No. 1689, Fifty-third Congress, second session, to which reference is hereby made.

He is now 70 years old, and in need of the increase asked for. In consideration of the fact that the Government saved many thousands of dollars by reason of his refusal to accept a pension more than eighteen years ago, when he could have obtained the same, it seems but just that this galiant soldier should receive liberal treatment in his old age.

Your committee therefore respectfully recommend the passage of the bill.

The Senate bill was laid aside to be reported to the House with the recommendation that it do pass.

The House bill was, by unanimous consent, laid on the table.

BETSEY J. WEBBER.

The next business on the Private Calendar was the bill (S. 178) granting a pension to Betsey J. Webber.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the general pension laws and regulations, the name of Betsey J. Webber, mother of Otis Webber, deceased, late private of Company K, Twenty-ninth Maine Regiment Infantry Volunteers.

The amendment reported by the committee was read, as follows: In line 6, before the word "mother," insert the word "dependent."

Mr. ERDMAN. Let us hear the report. The report (by Mr. SULLOWAY) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Invalid Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (S. 178) granting a pension to Betsey Y. Webber, having carefully considered the same, adopt the accompanying Senate report (No. 133) as their own, and respectfully recommend the passage of the bill with the following amendment:

In line 6, before the word "mother," insert the word "dependent."

[Senate Report No. 133, Fifty-fourth Congress, first session.]

Senate Report No. 133, Fifty-fourth Congress, first session.]

The Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (S. 178) granting a pension to Betsey Y. Webber, have examined the same and report:

Claimant is the dependent mother of Otis Webber, late private of Company K, Twenty-ninth Maine Volunteer Infantry. Soldier served from September 12, 1863, to August 22, 1865. There is much evidence on file to show that he received a sunstroke while in the line of duty, and it is conclusively shown that he exhibited aberrations of mind continually from the date of his return home to the time of his death, which occurred May 9, 1894, from drowning (suicide). It is also made to appear, by numerous affidavits, that soldier, during his service and whenever able to work after his discharge, contributed his earnings toward the support of his father and mother, who were in destitute circumstances.

A numerously signed petition, addressed to Hon. WILLIAM P. FRYE, sets forth that the parents are aged, sick, and infirm, and that they are subjects of public charity.

The mother filed a claim for pension under the act of June 27, 1890, which was rejected on the ground that soldier's death by drowning was not due to his military service, and hence that claimant had no pensionable status. It is true that the act of June 27, 1890, does require that dependent parents shall show that death came to the soldier as a result of army service, and hence the decision of the Pension Bureau was correct, under a strict interpretation of the law. But it should be borne in mind that the soldier's mental condition, which induced him to commit suicide, was probably the result of sunstroke in the service, although that can not be absolutely proved.

In considering the equities of the case your committee accept that as a probable fact, and, in connection with the further fact that the mother is sick and destitute, recommend favorable action on the bill.

The amendment reported by the committee was agreed to. The bill as amended was laid aside to be reported favorably to the House.

RICHARD WILCOXTON.

The next business on the Private Calendar was the bill (H. R. 4901) to pension Richard Wilcoxton for services in the late war.
The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he hereby is, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll of the Government the name of Richard Wilcoxton, late of Company G. First Ohio Heavy Artillery, for meritorious services, for severe disabilities received, and disease contracted by him while in the United States service during the late war, and to allow him a pension at the rate of $12 per month, commencing on the 12th day of August, 1890.

The amendments reported by the committee were read, as fol-

Strike out of title "for services in the late war."
Strike out of lines 6, 7, and 8 the following: "for meritorious services, for severe disabilities received, and disease contracted by him while in the United States service during the late war."
Strike out of lines 10 and 11 the following: "commencing on the 12th day of August, 1890."

The amendments were agreed to.

Mr. THOMAS. I ask the adoption of the amendment which I end to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

In line 9, strike out the word "allow" and insert "pay;" so as to read "pay him a pension."

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. ERDMAN. Let us hear the report. The report (by Mr. Kerr) was read, as follows:

The report (by Mr. Kerk) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Invalid Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 4901) to pension Richard Wilcoxton, submit the following report:

The committee, after careful examination of the bill, find the facts to be substantially as follows:

The soldier was a private in Company G. First Ohio Heavy Artillery, and was honorably discharged from the service.

He filed his claim for pension, under the act of 1890, on August 12, 1890, alleging partial disability to do manual labor from rheumatism, disease of the heart, spine, and kidneys. The claim was rejected on the ground "that no disability was found sufficient to give title to pension under said act."

From this decision an appeal was taken, with the contention that the medical board had not reported all his disabilities. This board reported "no rating." The rejection was affirmed.

He then applied for pension under the old law, which claim is still pending, and on the 20th of April, 1892, he was examined by a medical board, and it reported that he had the following disabilities and was entitled to the following rating, viz: For neuralgia, six-eighteenths; for rheumatism, four-eighteenths, and for disease of heart, six-eighteenths. Under former rulings of the Pension Bureau this would entitle soldier to $12 per month under the law of 1890.

The committee are of the opinion that the soldier should have $12 per month in analogy to rating under said law of 1890, and therefore recommend the passage of the bill with the following amendments, viz:

Strike out of title "for services in the late war."

Strike out of lines 6, 7, and 8 the following: "For meritorious services, for severe disabilities received, and disease contracted by him while in the United States service during the late war."

Strike out of lines 10 and 11 the following: "Commencing on the 12th day of August, 1890."

The bill was laid aside to be reported favorably to the House.

The bill was laid aside to be reported favorably to the House. JAMES EGANSON.

The next business on the Private Calendar was the bill (H. R. 7451) for the relief of James Eganson, of Henderson, Ky.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of James Eganson, late seaman, United States Navy, serving on ships Pennsylvania and United States, and pay him a pension of $12 per month.

Mr. ERDMAN. Let us hear the report. The report (by Mr. Baker of Kansas) was read, as follows:

Mr. ERDMAN. Let us hear the report.

The report (by Mr. Baker of Kansas) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 7451) entitled "A bill for the relief of James Eganson," beg leave to submit the following report, and recommend that said bill do pass without amendment:

The claimant enlisted May 17, 1841, in the United States Navy and served as an ordinary seaman aboard the Pennsylvania and the United States until October 14, 1844, when honorably discharged. On July 31, 1893, he filed an application for pension, declaring that in February, 1842, he contracted rheumatism, but as the record failed to show treatment for the disease while in the service and the claimant could not meet all the requirements of the Pension Bureau as to proof, the claim was rejected. The examiner in charge of the claim seems to have been convinced of its merits, for the brief shows that he recommended its allowance, but the board of review declined to accept the evidence as sufficient.

Joseph J. Holland, a reputable and trustworthy citizen of Yates County, N. C., swears that he served aboard the United States with the claimant, and knows that after a cruise around Cape Horn as a part of the South Pacific squadron he (claimant) was afflicted with what his messmates called "gout." This was after a particularly stormy and difficult passage around the Horn, and the hardship and exposure had been great. The claimant limped around on deck and complained of rheumatism. Holland's name is borne on the rolls of the ship United States, along with that of the claimant for more than thirty years, testify that off and on during that entire period he has been a sufferer from rheumatism.

The Henderson, Ky., board of pension examining surgeons reported, under date of October 25, 1898, that claimant was 74 years old, and a sufferer from tender joints, with limitation of motion and atrophy of muscles.

Your committee believe that the evidence fairly proves the claim, and that the relief prayed for can very p

The bill was laid aside to be reported favorably to the House. ELIZABETH T. ANDERSON.

The next business on the Private Calendar was the bill (H. R. 7121) to restore Mrs. Elizabeth T. Anderson to the pension roll.

The bill was read, as follows: Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and is hereby, authorized and directed to restore to the pension roll the name of Mrs. Elizabeth T. Anderson, of Cartersville, Ga., and pay her a pension at the rate of $$8$ dollars per month as the widow of John Anderson, of Loyal's company, Second Georgia Volunteers, Creek war, beginning with the date from which she was last paid.

The amendments reported by the committee were read, as fol-

In line 8 strike out "with" and insert "on."
At the end of the bill strike out the words "from which she was last paid" and insert the words "of the approval of this act."

Mr. ERDMAN. Let us have the report. The report (by Mr. BLACK) was read, as follows:

The report (by Mr. Black) was read, as ionows:

The Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 7121) entitled "A bill to restore Mrs. Elizabeth T. Anderson to the pension roll," beg leave to submit the following report, and recommend that said bill do pass with an amendment:

The claimant is the widow of John Anderson, who served as a musician in Captain Loyal's Company Georgia Volunteers, Creek war, 1836.

The following letter from the Commissioner of Pensions contains a full history of the claim at the Pension Bureau, and in the judgment of your committee the facts are such as to justify the proposed restoration of the claimant's name to the rolls, with an amendment fixing the date of the commencement of pension on the date of the passage of the act.

Department of the Interior, Bureau of Pensions,

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR, BUREAU OF PENSIONS, Washington, February 27, 1896.

Sir: In response to your personal inquiry in respect to the claim for pension No. 2167, of Mrs. Elizabeth T. Anderson, widow of John Anderson, musical face down on his pillow. By reason of these complicated diseases he is incapacitated from manual labor, and the degree of his disability is, in my opinion, equal to the loss of an arm or leg.

This lady was pensioned from April 5, 1893, at $8 per month, on account of the service of her husband in an Indian war, under the provisions of the act of July 27, 1892, and drew this pension until September 13, 1895, when her name was dropped from the rolls, as it was found that the allowance had been erroneous in that the soldier had not performed the requisite thirty days' service to give her title under the aforesaid law. Upon reference to the report of the Auditor for the War Department, I find that soldier was enrolled June 9, 1836, at Columbus, Ga., and discharged July 7, 1836, at the same place, and that he was paid from June 9, 1836, to July 19, 1836, one month and eleven days, including twelve days' travel.

In determining the period of service in cases of this kind the Bureau is governed by departmental decision No. 79, dated March 30, 1894, a copy of which is herewith inclosed, in which it is held that the actual service of a soldier can not be reckoned from the time during which he was paid, but by the period of actual service after reaching the place of rendezvous until his return to said rendezvous. It does not appear that any better explanation of the action in this case can be made than by reference to the decision itself, the terms of which exclude all other period for which paid than that covered by the period between arrival at rendezvous and return to rendezvous. Under these circumstances there was no other action for the Bureau than to drop pensioner's name from the rolls.

WM. LOCHREN, Commissioner.

WM. LOCHREN, Commissioner.

Hon. John W. Maddox, House of Representatives.

The bill as amended was laid aside to be reported favorably to the House.

FRANCIS M. ROSS.

The next business on the Private Calendar was the bill (H. R. 5986) granting pension relief to Francis M. Ross.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, directed to reinstate upon the pension roll the name of Francis M. Ross, of Montrose, Iowa, late a soldier of Company B. Forty-second Indiana Infantry, and shall pay him the pension he was receiving under invalid's certificate No. 204687, and that said payment shall date and continue from May 31, 1895, at which time the name of said Ross was dropped from the pension roll; and the said Ross shall be entitled to receive any increase of pension he may be lawfully entitled to upon establishing his case before the Pension Bureau under the laws of the United States, anything in this act notwithstanding.

The amendments reported by the committee were read, as fol-

Amend the bill by striking out all after the enacting clause and substituting the following:

"That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place upon the pension roll the name of Francis M. Ross, late a private in Company B, Forty-second Indiana Infantry, and pay him a pension of $12 a month."

Amend the title by striking out the word "relief."

Mr. ERDMAN. Let the report be read.

The report (by Mr. Baker of Kansas) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Invalid Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 5986) restoring the pension of Francis M. Ross, respectfully report:

The facts in this case are these: Francis M. Ross, of Montrose, Lee County, Iowa, formerly a private in Company B. Forty-second Indiana Infantry, drew a pension of $12 a month under certificate No. 204667. His application for increase was before the Bureau of Pensions from 1892 until May 27, 1895, when he received this notice:

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR, BUREAU OF PENSIONS, Washington, D. C., May 27, 1895.

Washington, D. C., May 27, 1835.

Sir: I have to advise you that your name has this day been dropped from the pension roll, certificate No. 204667, for the reasons set forth in my letter to you under date of December 11, 1894, viz, that the disability for which the pension was allowed has ceased to exist in a pensionable degree.

WM. LOCHREN, Commissioner.

In establishing his claim for an increase he filed with the Commissioner of Pensions the following affidavits of physicians of his county of established practice, distinguished personal character, and high repute in their profession:

KEOKUK, June 10, 1892.

STATE OF IOWA. Lee County:

STATE OF IOWA, Lee County:

This certifies that I am a resident of Keokuk, Iowa, Lee County; was formerly of Montrose, Iowa; was a practicing physician of Montrose for ten years; have known Francis M. Ross for several years; became his family physician in 1883, and have continued to be such ever since; was called to see him for heart trouble on the 18th day of September, 1885, and have examined him and treated him for said trouble on a number of occasions since. He has a chronic organic lesion of the heart, hypertrophy with valvular insufficiency, also regurgitation (mitral), such disability bringing about a very serious train of symptoms, such as difficulty in breathing, smothering spells when lying down, pain in the region of the heart, and upon the least exertion there occurs a severe attack of palpitation. He is unfit for manual labor, and especially labor that would require much walking or lifting. His degree of disability is more than it would be from the loss of leg or arm. I have no interest in the prosecution of this claim.

JOHN J. RIGG, M. D. JOHN J. RIGG. M. D.

MONTROSE, LEE COUNTY, IOWA, September 16, 1890.

Montrose, Lee County, Iowa, September 16, 1890.

In the matter of the claim of F. M. Ross, late private in Company B. Fortysecond Regiment of Indiana Volunteer Infantry, for increase of pension.

Personally appeared before me, a notary public in and for said county and State, J. M. Anderson, M. D., whose post-office address is Montrose, Lee County, Iowa, whom I certify to be reputable and entitled to credit, and declares in reference to the above case as follows:

I have been intimately acquainted with said soldier for twenty-five years, and a portion of that time was his family physician. I treated soldier about eighteen years ago for pleuro-pneumonia, and discovered at that time that he had chronic pleurisy with lesion. The exact date of my first treatment I can not give. I have prescribed for him at different times since, and have made a careful physicial examination of his condition quite recently, and find cardiac enlargement and mitral insufficiency; also enlargement and induration of liver and spleen, and inability to lie down except upon his abdomen, his face down on his pillow. By reason of these complicated diseases he is incapacitated from manual labor, and the degree of his disability is, in my opinion, equal to the loss of an arm or leg.

I am 70 years old; have practiced medicine forty-eight years, and I have no interest in the prosecution of this claim.

J. M. ANDERSON, M. D.

and who, being duly sworn, declares in relation to aforesaid case as follows: I am a practicing physician, and have been acquainted with said soldier for a short time. I never attended claimant professionally, but have made an examination of his physical condition at this date at his own request, and have found the following disabilities:

He has chronic pleurisy, affecting both lungs. Some emplysemia of left lung, sight over base of right lung. Pleuritic adhesions of left lung, causing dry, hacking cough, particularly at night. Can't lay on his back or on either side for any length of time, causing dyspnœa; bowels tympanitic, spleen enlarged, hypertrophy of heart, and anæmia. Disabilities increase in cold and damp weather, and are in such a degree as to disable him from doing any manual labor. The disability did exist, as claimant states, while in the service.

The above affidavit is in my own handwriting, and in making the same I did not use and was not aided or prompted by any written or printed statement verified, prepared, or dictated by any other person and not attached as on credit of my testimony.

A. WEISMAN, M. D., Keokuk, Lova.

A. WEISMAN, M. D., Keokuk, Iowa.

KEOKUK, IOWA, January 15, 1894.

Keokuk, Iowa, January 15, 1894.

In the pension claim, No. 204667, of Francis M. Ross, of Montrose, Iowa, I respectfully submit the following in regard to the case: I have known said soldier intimately over ten years and have been his family physician the greater part of this time. He has suffered from chronic pleuritis, with adhesion over the lower lobe of left lung; also hypertrophy of heart, with valvular insufficiency; also fermentative dyspepsia, resulting in a chronic gastritis; has dropsical effusions around the heart and in the abdominal cavity, also of the left leg and foot, and hyperthesia of entire left side. Is now totally disabled so far as earning a support by manual labor is concerned. His disabilities are permanent and progressive, and were not caused by vicious habits; and in view of the above facts, and knowing the condition of soldier, both physically and financially, I would regard his case deserving of more than his present rating, and respectfully recommend the increase asked for.

Respectfully submitted.

JOHN J. RIGG, M. D.

JOHN J. RIGG, M. D., Member Board United States Pension Examiners, Keokuk, Iowa.

MONTROSE, IOWA, December 18, 1894.

In regard to the case of F. M. Ross, would state that I have this day examined him and found the following conditions in regard to pleurisy, viz:

Adhesions of all the lower lobe of left lung; also emplysemia of lower lobe of left lung; would further state that I have been intimately acquainted with claimant for past six years, have prescribed for him frequently during that time for pleurisy, and, in fact, whenever he contracts a cold he is troubled more or less; it is chronic form, is progressive and permanent. His disability is real, without the least shadow of doubt. Would state that I have no interest whatever in the prosecution of this claim.

H. CARNES, M. D.

These medical opinions establish the right of Mr. Ross to the pension and amply justify the passage of this bill. We recommend that the bill do pass, with the following amendments:

Amend the title by striking out the word "relief."

Amend the bill by striking out all after the enacting clause and substituting the following:

"That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place upon the pension roll the name of Francis M. Ross, late a private in Company B. Forty-second Indiana Infantry, and pay him a pension of $12 a month."

The amendments reported by the committee were agreed to. The bill as amended was laid aside to be reported favorably to

JOHN BEAIRD.

The next business on the Private Calendar was the bill (H. R. 7457) granting an increase of pension to John Beaird.

The bill was read, as follows;

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior is authorized and directed to place upon the pension roll, at the rate of $50 per month, John Beaird, late sergeant, Company E. Eleventh Regiment Missouri Volunteer Infantry, the same to be in lieu of the pension now received.

In line 4 strike out "fifty" and insert "thirty;" so as to make the rate of pension $30 per month. The amendment reported by the committee was read, as follows:

Mr. ERDMAN. I ask that the report be read. The report (by Mr. Kerr) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Invalid Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 7457) granting an increase of pension to John Beaird, submit the following report:

7457) granting an increase of pension to report:
This soldier was a sergeant in Company E, Eleventh Missouri Volunteers, enlisted on the 20th day of July, 1861, and was discharged on the 28th day of September, 1863 by reason of gunshot wound. He was wounded in the battle of Vicksburg, Miss., on the 23d day of September, 1863. A ball entered his hip, penetrated to the bone, and ranged downward to the knee. The whole course of the ball is 20 inches. A portion of the muscles of the thigh were destroyed, and along the whole course they are adherent to the bone. He is a very heavy man, and by reason of this wound he is wholly incapable of doing any manual labor. It is only with great difficulty that he can walk about.

about. He is at present drawing a pension of $17, and an application for an increase

He is at present drawing a pension of $17, and an application for an increase has been rejected.

An examining surgeon for the Pension Office, as far back as 1874, reported as follows:

"It (the wound) must necessarily render locomotion both irksome and painful during life."

In 1867 an examining surgeon reported him three-fourths disabled. A medical board in 1888 reported him as entitled to second grade, and one in 1892 reported him as entitled to third grade. This latter board reported as follows:

"For purposes of manual labor, it is our judgment, after a careful weighing of all the facts in the case, that the disability is equivalent to the loss of a hand or foot. We therefore recommend a rating of third grade. The present rating seems utterly inadequate to so severe a wound."

Dr. E. H. Poccock testifies that he has known Mr. Beaird for ten years, and that during that time, by reason of said wound, he has been wholly incapacitated from doing manual labor.

Dr. E. V. Kendig, a member of the medical board of Ashland, Ohio, testifies that he has knowh the soldier for ten years last past, and has been his family physician, and that he is not able to do any manual labor.

The whole case leaves no doubt in the minds of the committee but that the soldier is entitled and has most satisfactorily proven his right to a pension of $30 per month.

We therefore recommend the passage of the bill with an amendment striking out of line 4 the word "fifty" and inserting "thirty."

The amendment reported by the committee was agreed to.
The bill as amended was laid aside to be reported favorably to the House.

ALPHONZO O. DRAKE.

The next business on the Private Calendar was the bill (H. R. 7205) granting a pension to Alphonzo O. Drake, late a private in Company E, Second Regiment Rhode Island Volunteers.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Alphonzo O. Drake, late a private in Company E, Second Regiment Rhode Island Volunteers.

Mr. ERDMAN. Let us have the report read. The report (by Mr. POOLE) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Invalid Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 7205) granting a pension to Alphonzo O. Drake, late a private in Company E. Second Rhode Island Regiment Volunteer Infantry, submit the following

Second Rhode Island Regiment Volunteer Infantry, submit the following report:

Alphonzo O. Drake enlisted in the Second Rhode Island Regiment August 15, 1894, and was discharged June 26, 1895. April 1, 1897, he again enlisted in Company I, Thirteenth United States Infantry, and was discharged May 16, 1898. On the 7th of December, 1899, he entered for the third time in Company A, Fifth United States Artillery, and was discharged April 1, 1870. While in the volunteer service he was treated in hospital for scurvy, erysipelas, chronic ulcers of right leg, and epilepsy, and the records show that he was discharged from the Regular Army twice on account of epilepsy. His claim for pension under the general law was rejected April 21, 1885, on the ground that the cause alleged—epilepsy—existed prior to his enlistment. In a decision by the Secretary of the Interior affirming the action of the Pension Bureau in this claim, the honorable Secretary says that the testimony strongly tends to show that claimant had epileptic fits before the first enlistment, and further says whether that be so or not the evidence is manifestly insufficient to prove that the disease originated in the service and line of duty.

strongly tends to show that claimant had epileptic fits before the first enlistment, and further says whether that be so or not the evidence is manifestly insufficient to prove that the disease originated in the service and line of duty.

The records of the Pension Bureau admit the fact that Drake served in the Second Rhode Island nine months before any evidence of epilepsy appeared, and these records show that there was no direct evidence that he ever had epilepsy before the war.

We have examined the affidavit made by William E. Randall, of Warwick, R. I., who swears that he has known Drake intimately since he was 5 years old, and that he never knew of his having any epileptic or other fits; that he was a trong boy and man; that he worked with him during the year 1862, seeing him every day.

Albert H. Randall, of Pawtucket, R. I., makes an affidavit that he has known Drake since he was 10 years old, and that in 1862 said Drake worked for him, and that during all the time he had known him before the war Drake never had a fit of any kind, but was a strong, able-bodied man.

Sara Lewis, of Providence, R. I., makes affidavit that she has known Alphonzo O. Drake since he was 8 years old, and that he lived in her house from 1856 until the war, and that during that entire time he never had a fit of any kind, but was a strong and able-bodied.

Olive T. Drake, the claimant's mother, makes an affidavit in which she says that some years ago, when she was in a mental condition which unfitted her for testifying, she was approached by a special examiner of the Pension Bureau, who caused her to say that her son had epileptic fits before the war and from his boyhood. She now swears that such statements were utterly untrue; that her son never had a fit of any kind before he first enlisted, and that he was strong and well from his birth up.

We have also the affidavit of Dr. Lorenzo Travis, of Providence, R. I., as to Drake's condition for the past ten years. He says:

"He is totally disabled for manual labor by reason of the

Mr. THOMAS. I offer an amendment for the purpose of perfecting the bill.

The Clerk read as follows:

In line 7 strike out "s" in the word "Volunteers" and insert the word "Infantry;" also amend the title so as to read: "A bill granting a pension to Alphonso O. Drake."

The amendments were agreed to.

The amendment recommended by the committee was agreed to.
The bill as amended was laid aside to be reported to the House with the recommendation that it do pass.

NANCY T. DUNCKLEE.

The next business on the Private Calendar was the bill (S. 1787) granting a pension to Nancy T. Duncklee.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Nancy T. Duncklee, dependent stepmother of Lucian A. Duncklee, late of Company C, Sixteenth Regiment New Hampshire Volunteer Infantry, at the rate of $12 per month.

Mr. ERDMAN. Let the report be read. The report (by Mr. Sulloway) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Invalid Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (S.1787) granting a pension to Nancy T. Duncklee, having carefully considered the same, adopt the accompanying Senate report (No. 165) as their own, and respectfully recommend the passage of the bill.

[Senate Report No. 165, Fifty-fourth Congress, first session.]

The Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (S. 1787) granting a pension to Nancy T. Duncklee, have examined the same and report:

Lucien A. Duncklee enlisted October 10, 1862, and served until August 9, 1863.

being discharged for disability from chronic diarrhea. He died at Mattoon, Ill., August 23, 1863, on his way home from the Army, at the age of 19 years. Joel W. Duncklee, soldier's father, applied for and received pension as dependent father, which he continued to draw until the date of his death, on the 4th day of April, 1889.

Claimant under this bill is the dependent stepmother of said soldier. She married Joel W. Duncklee when the soldier and a twinsister were only a few months old, and testimony shows that she was a devoted and kind mother to them. She is now 76 years of age, and in very straitened circumstances. The following affidavit from Dr. D. S. Dearborn, of Milford, N. H., will speak for itself:

MILFORD, N. H., January 20, 1896.

This certifies that I, Darius S. Dearborn, have been family physician for the late J. W. Duncklee during the past fifteen years.

His widow, Nancy T. Duncklee, is a wreck, both physically and mentally; is unable to perform labor, and is wholly unfit to take care of herself; in all probability will never be able to do any more work. Her mental condition is growing constantly worse.

D. S. DEARBORN, M. D. MILFORD, January 20, 1896.

STATE OF NEW HAMPSHIRE, Hillsboro, ss:

Personally appeared this day D. S. Dearborn, M. D., and made oath to the truth of the statement by him signed.

Before me,

[SEAL.]

J. M. LAWS, Notary Public.

The fact that claimant is not the mother of the soldier bars her from pension under the general laws, but the further fact that she tenderly cared for soldier from early infancy gives her title to pension by special act, there being many precedents for such legislation.

Your committee report the bill back favorably, with a recommendation that it do pass.

The bill was laid aside with the recommendation that it do pass.

DUDLEY F. BROWN.

The next business on the Private Calendar was the bill (S. 1311) granting an increase of pension to Dudley F. Brown. The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Dudley F. Brown, late private of Company A., Sixth New Hampshire Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $20 per month, in lieu of that he is now receiving, payable to his legally-constituted guardian.

Mr. ERDMAN. Let us have the report. The report (by Mr. Sulloway) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Invalid Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (S. 1311) granting an increase of pension to Dudley F. Brown, late private Company A, Sixth New Hampshire Volunteer Infantry, having examined and carefully considered the facts and circumstances presented in this case, respectfully adopt the report of the Senate Committee on Pensions, and recommend that the bill do pass.

[Senate Report No. 58, Fifty-fourth Congress, first session.]

The Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (S. 1311) granting an increase of pension to Dudley F. Brown, have examined the same and ing an increase of pension to Dudley 7. Details and increase of pension to Dudley 7. Details and was wounded while in the line of duty. He applied for pension under the general law, but pending the consideration of his claim became so necessitous that he sought relief under the act of June 27. 1890, and was pensioned at the rate of $12 per month, which amount he now draws. Shortly after being pensioned he showed signs of insanity, and is now confined in the New Hampshire Asylum for the Insane, at Concord, N. H., a hopeless lunatic. The affidavit of Dr. Charles P. Bancroft, superintendent of said asylum, is as follows:

NEW HAMPSHIRE ASYLUM, Concord, N. H., January 7, 1896.

NEW HAMPSHIER ASTLUM,
Concord, N. H., January 7, 1896.

Dear Sir: At the request of Weare N. Shaw, the guardian of Dudley F.
Brown, I hereby depose and say that Dudley F. Brown is in a state of chronic delusional insanity. He has been here twice. The first time he was committed here on the lith of August, 1892. He had a history then of having been insane about three years. His case apparently was one of organic disease of the brain.

He had hallucinations of hearing and the persistent delusions that are characteristic of long-continued insanity.

After his commitment at the asylum he continued very nicely for a while, and so far improved that his wife thought it was reasonably safe to try him out again. He was discharged from the asylum after his first commitment on the 5th of May, 1893.

Two months after he left the asylum he appeared quite rational, and then he began to make unusual remarks. He complained of the heat of the sun, and was unable to work out of doors except in the cool of the day. He endeavored to make shoes, his trade being that of a shoemaker, but he conld not apply his mind continuously. He complained of his head quite constantly, and it was not long before he began to manifest delusions, that batteries were at work on his head, and that somebody was discharging electricity through his body.

He could not sleep nights because of these morbid ideas and sensations.
He finally grew more confused and dazed, remaining out in the woods all night without any covering, and was recommitted at the asylum on the 9th of February, 1894.

His condition is evidently one of structural brain disease, and there is no without any covering, and was reconstructural brain disease, and there is no probability that he will ever regain his natural state of mind, and it is also quite certain that he can never be self-supporting and must always depend upon the charity of others for his maintenance.

CHARLES P. BANCROFT, M. D.,

Superintendent New Hampshire Asylum for Insane.

Hon. JACOB H. GALLINGER.

Personally appeared before me the above-named Charles P. Bancroft and took oath that the above statements made by him concerning the mental condition of Dudley F. Brown are true. J. H. CASE, Justice of Peace.

This case is one that strongly and properly appeals to Congress for relief.

Your committee recommend that the bill do pass.

The bill was laid aside to be reported to the House with the recommendation that it do pass.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. THOMAS. Mr. Chairman, several members have come to Mr. THOMAS. Mr. Chairman, several members have come to me and informed me that they had bills of special interest and importance which ought to be passed at this session, and I am inclined to waive the right of calling the regular order and allow the balance of the session of to-day to be devoted to unanimous consents, with the understanding that if on Friday evening we make some arrangement by which the roll shall be called or any other method is reached for allowing members to present bills, those persons who have been recognized to present bills to-day other method is reached for allowing members to present bills, those persons who have been recognized to present bills to-day shall be skipped when the names are called until all of the other members have an opportunity, and with that understanding I will waive all objection to present unanimous consents for the balance of the session this afternoon.

Mr. ATWOOD. I object, and demand the regular order.

The CHAIRMAN. It is in the power of the committee, the Chair would suggest, to move to pursue such course as it pleases in reference to taking up bills under the rule.

Mr. THOMAS. I move that that course be taken during the present session for the remainder of the afternoon.

Mr. ERDMAN. I raise the point of order that that is not in

Mr. ERDMAN. I raise the point of order that that is not in order.

The CHAIRMAN. If the committee will give its attention, the Chair will read the clause of the rule:

In Committee of the Whole House, business on their calendars may be taken up in regular order, or in such order as the committee may determine, unless the bill to be considered was determined by the House at the time of going into committee; but bills for raising revenue, general appropriation bills, and bills for the improvement of rivers and harbors shall have precedence.

The Chair thinks the motion is in order.

Mr. HULICK. I desire to submit a parliamentary inquiry. We are acting under a special rule of the House, under which this class of pension bills is to be taken up. Now, can we, in Committee of the Whole, and in derogation of that rule, change the order?

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair has just read the rule authorizing the committee to determine the order in which bills will be taken up. The rule of the House under which we are acting, the special order, authorizes the consideration of bills that would come up under the ordinary rule at the Friday evening session. But the order of their consideration is a matter for the committee to determine.

Mr. McCREARY of Kentucky. The rule did not establish any order by which the bills should be taken up, and I think the motion of the gentleman from Michigan is clearly in order.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair has so held.

The question being taken on the motion of Mr. Thomas, on a division (demanded by Mr. Erdman) there were—ayes 58, noes 29.

So the motion was agreed to.

JOSEPH E. VANTINE.

Mr. WILLIS. Mr. Chairman, I call up for present considera-tion the bill (H. R. 7969) to increase the pension of Joseph E.

Vantine. The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place the name of Joseph E. Vantine, late first-class fireman on the U.S. S. Richmond, United States Navy, on the pension roll at the rate of $72 per month, in lieu of his present pension.

Mr. ERDMAN. Let us have the report read.

The report (by Mr. MILES) was read, as follows:

Mr. ERDMAN. Let us have the report read.

The report (by Mr. Miles) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Invalid Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 7969) to increase the pension of Joseph E. Vantine, late first-class fireman on the U. S. S. Richmond, United States Navy, having carefully examined and fully considered the facts presented, respectfully report:

Joseph E. Vantine enlisted in the United States Navy May 19, 1857, as second-class fireman on the U. S. S. Minnesote; promoted to first-class fireman May 28, 1857, and served as such to June 10, 1859, when discharged.

He reenlisted as first-class fireman July 13, 1861, and served on the North Carolina to July 27, 1861; on the Richmond from July 28, 1861, to August 29, 1864; on the Princeton from August 30, 1864, to September 9, 1894, when honorably discharged.

Joseph E. Vantine was the first man to suggest the use of chain cables hung over the sides of vessels for protection from the enemy's missiles, and the efficiency of the device was demonstrated by Commodore Farragut's squadron on the Lower Mississippi in April, 1862, in the passage of Forts Jackson and St. Phillip and the encounter with the Confederate ram, and it resulted in the capture of New Orleans, La. This chain armor was used afterwards on board the Kearsarge in her capture of the Alabama.

In the attack on Fort Hudson, La., March 14, 1863, a shot from the enemy's guns struck the boilers of the Richmond, and the fire room and other parts of the vessel were filled with steam, when he, under great difficulties drew the fires from under the boilers and prevented them from exploding, thus saving the ship and perhaps many lives. While this was being done he became exhausted from the heat and cooking steam and had to be relieved every few moments, until by his persistent intrepdity and assiduous efforts the grand work was accomplished. For this heroic act he received special complimentary mention in the admiral's report, and was afterwards presented with a bronze "medal of honor" by injury to his back about July, 1861, while removing a part of an iron ventilator from the port coal bunker of his vessel, and that this injury was enhanced and the disability aggravated by the arduous work at Port Hudson, La., in March, 1863, and the disability has increased with his advancing years; and that he had a stroke of apoplexy August 6, 1895, and is now suffering with complete paralysis of the right side and entire loss of the power of speech; and that he is now totally and permanently helpless, and, his physician says, "will probably never be any better." He has three minor children and he is now in such condition as to require the care and attention of another person.

person.

In view of the testimony, from which it is reasonable to conclude that his paralysis is a result of his naval service, and in view of his gallant and meritorious service, your committee earnestly recommend the passage of the bill without amendment.

Mr. BRUMM. Mr. Chairman, a parliamentary inquiry. I would like to ascertain if the Chairman has a list of members for recognition, prepared before this resolution was passed?

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair is preparing a list of applications as they come. Mr. BRUMM.

Mr. BRUMM. That is no answer to the question.
Mr. McCREARY of Kentucky. That is not a parliamentary inquiry.

Mr. JOHNSON of Indiana. That is not a fair question any way.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on laying aside the bill.

The bill was laid aside with the recommendation that it do pass.

DAVID N. THOMPSON.

Mr. TALBERT. Mr. Chairman, I desire to call up the bill (H. R. 6765) to increase the pension of David N. Thompson. The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to increase the pension now paid to David N. Thompson, late a private of Company C, Thirty-fourth Regiment Illinois Infantry Volunteers, and pay him the sum of $72 per month, in lieu of the pension that he is now receiving.

The Committee on Invalid Pensions recommended an amendment as follows:

In line 7 strike out the word "seventy-two" and insert the word "thirty."

Mr. ERDMAN. Let us have the report read. The CHAIRMAN. Let the report be read in the gentleman's time.

The report (by Mr. BAKER of Kansas) was read, as follows:

The report (by Mr. Baker of Karsas) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Invalid Pensions, having had under consideration the bill (H. R. 6765) to increase the pension of David N. Thompson, respectfully report:

This soldier served from February 2, 1864, to July 27, 1865. He was treated in service for chronic diarrhea and remittent fever, as shown by the record.
He is pensioned at $12 per month under act of June 27, 1890. The report of his last medical examination by a board of surgeons, made February 13, 1895, describes some disability due to chronic diarrhea and great disability, apparently from disease of nervous system, but no rate fixed for any disability, as, at the time the examination was made, the surgeons were not allowed to rate.

as, at the time the examination was made, the day.

The testimony of Dr. L. C. Kern shows that by paralysis claimant is totally disabled and requires aid in dressing. Other evidence filed with this committee shows that claimant became overheated and suffered with brain fever as well as chronic diarrhea in service, that he was weak and emaciated when he came home and never fully recovered, and his present helpless condition is believed to be due to exposure in the service.

Claimant alleges poverty and that he has three persons to support. Your committee consider the bill one of merit, and recommends its passage with an amendment striking out "seventy-two," in line 7, and inserting in lieu thereof "thirty," so as to give him a pension of $30 per month.

The amendment recommended by the committee was agreed to.
The bill as amended was ordered to be laid aside to be reported to the House with a favorable recommendation.

CAROLINE WILKINSON.

Mr. ELLETT. Mr. Speaker, I desire to call up the bill (H. R. 1513) granting a pension to Caroline Wilkinson.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Caroline Wilkinson, of Chesterfield County, Va., the daughter of John Spears, a soldier in the Revolutionary war, who enlisted from Virginia, and pay her a pension of $12 per month.

Mr. ERDMAN. Let us have the report read. The CHAIRMAN. Let the report be read in the gentleman's

The report (by Mr. Loudenslager) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 1518) entitled "A bill granting a pension to Caroline Wilkinson," beg leave to submit the following report, and recommend that said bill do pass without mit the following report, and recommend that said bill do pass without amendment:

The claimant is the daughter of John Spears, who served as a private for fifteen months in the regiment commanded by Colonel Goode, Virginia Line, war of the Revolution. The service is a matter of record, and he was a pensioner on account of same until his death in 1842. His widow, Susanna Spears, was also a pensioner until her death.

Mrs. Wilkinson, the claimant, is a widow, 75 years old, in indigent circumstances, and dependent upon others for supports.

The relationship of the claimant to the soldier is shown by the sworn statements of John S. Sims, William Phaup, and other aged citizens of Chesterfield County, Va.

There are several precedents for the proposed legislation, and in view of the claimant's great age and dependent circumstances, your committee believe that such precedents may very properly be followed in this case.

The bill was ordered to be laid aside to be reported to the House with a favorable recommendation.

BRADBURY W. HIGHT.

Mr. HAGER. Mr. Chairman, I call up the bill (S. 1949) granting an additional pension to Capt. Bradbury W. Hight.
The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll the name of Bradbury W. Hight, late of Company C, Second Regiment Vermont Volunteer Infantry, at the rate of $72 per month, in lieu of his present pension of $17 per month.

Mr. ERDMAN. Mr. Chairman, I should be very glad to have the report in this case read, but it is so manifestly contrary to the actual facts that I will submit a memorandum presented to me by the gentleman who offers this bill [Mr. HAGER], and let that be read as the report.

The Clerk read as follows:

The Clerk read as follows:

Disease causing total blindness different disease from that for which pension granted. Pensioner has high degree of hyperopia (a congenital defect in shape of the eyeball). This causes very little trouble in childhood and youth, but when maturity is attained, the defect becomes manifest and declares itself by headaches and superficial inflammatory attacks. In this case the defect was unequal, the right eye having double the defect of the left. The result of this unequal refraction of the two eyes is that the more perfect is used to the exclusion of its fellow. Glaucoma is an acute inflammatory affection occurring, as a rule, in people of 40 years of age and upward, and also occurring most frequently in cases of extreme hyperopia. It is impossible that glaucoma could have been induced by the service or that it could have subsequently arisen as a remote result of army service.

Mr. LOUD. I should like to ask if that is the report presented.

Mr. LOUD. I should like to ask if that is the report presented by the gentleman who offers this bill?

Mr. ERDMAN. This was given to me.

Mr. HAGER. No; this is not the report of the committee.

Mr. LOUD. I should like to have that matter settled.

The CHAIRMAN. What is the question of the gentleman from

Mr. LOUD. Is this the report of the gentleman who presents the bill to the House?

The CHAIRMAN. It was read as a part of the remarks of the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. ERDMAN].

Mr. ERDMAN. The gentleman submitted that to me as a part of the case

Mr. LOUD. That is, that this man's disability is not the result of service, and could not have been the result of service, and this is simply a proposition to present a gratuity to the man because be may have been in the service.

Mr. HAGER. No, and if the Clerk will read the report of the committee, that will explain the case. This is one of the most meritorious cases ever presented here. The memorandum which has been read is a paper from the minutes of a finding in the Pension Office.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman demand the reading of the report?

Mr. HAGER. No. The bill has passed the Senate, and I ask that the committee act upon it favorably.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is, Shall the bill be laid aside to be reported to the House with the recommendation that it do pass?

The question being taken, Mr. Steele demanded a division.
The committee divided; and there were—ayes 56, noes 14.
Mr. STEELE. No quorum.
The CHAIRMAN (after counting the committee). One hundred and twenty members present. dred and twenty members present.

Mr. STEELE. 1 withdraw the point.

The bill was ordered to be laid aside to be reported to the House with a favorable recommendation.

ELIZABETH WELLONS.

Mr. CRISP. Mr. Chairman, I call up the bill (H. R. 8898) to increase the pension of Elizabeth Wellons.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to increase the pension of Elizabeth Wellons, widow of a soldier of the war of 1812, from $12 per month to $20 per month.

Mr. CRISP. Mr. Chairman, the beneficiary of that bill is an old lady, 81 years of age. She is very feeble and can not possibly live long. She is the widow of a soldier of the war of 1812, and I hope there will be no objection to the bill.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is, Shall the bill be laid aside with the recommendation that it do pass?

Mr. ERDMAN. Mr. Chairman, let the report be read.

The CHAIRMAN. Let the report be read in the gentleman's

The report (by Mr. STALLINGS) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 8898) increasing the pension of Elizabeth Wellons, have considered the same, and

The claimant is the widow of William S. Wellons, who served as a private in the North Carolina Volunteers from September 24, 1814, to February 5, 1815, in the war of 1812.

Mrs. Wellons is now receiving the pension of $12 per month provided by the general laws for the widows of soldiers of the war of 1812. She is 30 years old and in exceedingly feeble health. Aside from her pension she has no property save a little farm, which does not produce an income to exceed $25 per annum.

The facts are shown by the papers on file at the Pension Bureau and by the affidavit of John H. Hodges and Z. Sims, citizens of Houston County, Ga.

There are several precedents for the proposed legislation, and in view of the claimant's great age and necessities the passage of the bill is respectfully recommended.

The question being taken on ordering the bill to be laid aside to be reported to the House with a favorable recommendation, Mr. STEELE demanded a division.

The committee divided; and there were-ayes 82, noes 4.

Mr. STEELE. No quorum.

The Chairman proceeded to count the committee.

Mr. STEELE (during the count). I withdraw the point of no

The CHAIRMAN. One hundred and thirty members, a quorum, present.

Accordingly, the bill was laid aside to be reported to the House with a favorable recommendation.

MARY E. ELY.

Mr. AVERY. Mr. Chairman, I call up the bill (S. 2133) granting a pension to Mary E. Ely.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, sutherized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Mary E. Ely, widow of Ralph Ely, late lieutenant colonel Eighth Michigan Volunteers, and pay her a pension at the rate of $30 per month.

The CHAIRMAN. Shall the bill be laid aside with a favorable recommendation?

Mr. ERDMAN. Let us have the report, Mr. Chairman.

The report (by Mr. Thomas) was read, as follows:

The report (by Mr. Thomas) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Invalid Pensions, having considered the evidence relating to the bill (S. 2133) granting a pension to Mary E. Ely, adopt the following from the Senate report, and recommend the passage of the bill as it passed the Senate:

The beneficiary named is 72 years old, and is the widow of Ralph Ely, who was mustered into the service of the United States September 23, 1861, as captain of Company C, Eighth Regiment Michigan Volunteers. He was promoted to be major September 10, 1862, and lieutenant-colonel February 1, 1863. He was honorably discharged May 19, 1866, as lieutenant-colonel, his services being no longer required. The soldier prosecuted a claim for pension on account of service disabilities, which was allowed by the Pension Bureau after his death and paid to the widow. It was shown that the soldier, while on the march from Fredericksburg to Warrenton Junction, August 14, 1862, was kicked by a horse, suffering a fracture of three of his ribs. A number of affidavits tend to show that this injury caused the soldier trouble and pain from the time of receiving it to the time of his death and prevented him from performing manual labor.

The question being taken on ordering the bill to be laid evident.

The question being taken on ordering the bill to be laid aside to be reported to the House with a favorable recommendation, on a division (demanded by Mr. Steele) there were—ayes 52, noes 22.

Accordingly the bill was ordered to be laid aside to be reported to the House with a favorable recommendation.

NETTIE A. CHEEKS.

Mr. McCREARY of Kentucky. I call up for consideration the bill (S. 2913) granting a pension to Nettie A. Cheeks.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place upon the pension roll the name of Nettie A. Cheeks, widow of Peter O. Cheeks, late a private Company D, Thirteenth Regiment United States Infantry, and a private United States Marine Corps, and pay her a pension of $30 per month.

The amendment recommended by the committee was read, as

In line 5 strike out the initial "O" and insert the initial "C;" so that the ame will read "Peter C. Cheeks."

The amendment recommended by the committee was agreed to.

Mr. ERDMAN. Let us have the report read. The CHAIRMAN. The report will be read in the gentleman's

The report (by Mr. Anderson) was read, as follows:

The report (by Mr. Anderson) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Invalid Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (S. 2913) granting an increase of pension to Nettie A. Cheeks, widow of Peter C. Cheeks, late private Company D. Thirteenth United States Infantry, and private United States Marine Corps, having considered the same, hereby adopt the Senate committee's report as their own and recommend the passage of the bill with an amendment striking out the letter "O." between the words "Peter" and "Cheeks," in line 5, and inserting the letter "C" in lieu thereof; so that the name will read "Peter C. Cheeks."

The Senate committee's report is as follows:

"The records in the War and Navy Departments show that Peter C. Cheeks enlisted June 5, 1962, and served as private, Company D, First Battalion, Thirteenth United States Infantry, until honorably discharged, June 5, 1865, that he remlisted in the United States Marine Corps for four years October 3, 1865, and was honorably discharged by reason of expiration of service October 3, 1869. He died from phthisis pulmonalis January 13, 1894.

"He applied for pension, which was allowed at $8 per month from October 4, 1869, for phthisis pulmonalis. His pension was increased to $14 from March 28, 1873; to $16 from August 12, 1878; to $24 from April 10, 1890; to $30 from March 28, 1873; to $16 from May 17, 1886, and then by act of Congress increased to $72 per month from July 7, 1888.

"The claimant was married to soldier February 6, 1879, and, as the pension record clearly shows, had an invalid husband to care for from the time of marriage. The care and assiduous attention necessary, as they were without means of support, gradually undermined her health, until now she finds herself in poor health and destitute circumstances.

"She applied for pension in March, 1894, and was pensioned at $12 per month, the soldier's death cause having been consumption, contracted in service in line of duty.

"The testimony presented to the committee clearly shows that the claimant is in frail and delicate health, and that she is suffering from rheumatism and weak lungs or incipient consumption, and is unable to perform any kind of manual labor, being greatly troubled with a harassing cough, and that she is totally destitute of any means whatever, has no income except her small pension, and that she is now and has been dependent upon those not legally bound to contribute to her support for her maintenance.

"In view of the facts presented, the committee earnestly recommend the passage of the bill."

Mr. McCREARY of Kentucky. Mr. Chairman, I move that the bill be laid aside with a favorable recommendation.

The motion was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. Wood] is recognized.

Mr. STEELE. I call for a division on that vote.

The CHAIRMAN. The demand comes too late.

Mr. STEELE. I called at the proper time. I beg pardon of the Chair.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair did not hear the gentleman.
Mr. McCREARY of Kentucky. Other business had intervened.
Mr. STEELE. The Chair did not hear me, but I called for a

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (H. R. 8108)

Mr. STEELE. The Chair may not have heard me, but I called for a vote.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair has had no difficulty in hearing the gentleman state his request before. It comes too late.

JESSE DURNELL.

Mr. WOOD. I call up the bill H. R. 3108.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (H. R. 3108) to grant a pension to Jesse Durnell, late second-class pilot on gunboat Lexington and transferred to gunboat Marmora.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Jesse Durnell, late second-class pilot on the gunboat Lexington and transferred to the gunboat Marmora, during the civil war, and pay him a pension of $24 per month from April 4, 1895.

Mr. ERDMAN. Let us have the report.

The CHAIRMAN. The report will be read in the gentleman's

The report (by Mr. Wood) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Invalid Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 3108) granting a pension to Jesse Durnell, late second-class pilot on gunboat Lexington and transferred to gunboat Marmora, submit the following report:

Jesse Durnell, the claimant, was a loyal Virginian during the war, and is now $7 years of age. His wife is past $0 years of age. He has no means or income whatever, and he and his aged wife are dependent upon charity for

Jesse Durnell, the claimant, was a loyal Virginian during the war, and is now 87 years of age. His wife is past 80 years of age. He has no means or income whatever, and he and his aged wife are dependent upon charity for a support.

He was commissioned as a second-class pilot by Rear-Admiral David D. Porter, February 4, 1864, in the Mississippi squadron, and honorably discharged June 17, 1865. He served on the U. S. steamers Meteor, Elk. Lexington, Abrona, and Marmora, also on prize steamer Mattic Cook, being under orders of Admirals Porter, Lee, Lieutenant-Commander Bache, and Fleet Capt. A. M. Pennock.

During the time of his service he acted as first-class pilot, and in various orders signed by Admirals Porter and Lee he is recognized as first-class pilot. An autograph letter has been submitted to the committee signed by Admiral Porter, in which, speaking of Durnell and his class, he says:

"The Mississippi pilots carried their lives in their hands, and were liable at any moment while steering their vessels to be picked off by sharpshooters, and should not be deprived of any portion of their pay. They were worth double the amount the Government paid for their services."

The claimant had a claim for pension pending for many years prior to June 27, 1890. He was unable to supply the proof required by the Department, because he was obliged, under the orders of the officers above named, to serve on so many different vessels, and the surgeons could not remember his precise condition of disability. He then obtained a pension under act of June 27, 1890, of $22 per month from June 23, 1891. He was dropped, as communicated to him June 15, 1895. by the Commissioner of Pensions, is, "that you were not regularly enlisted or mustered into the United States service."

There has been considered by the committee the claimant's commission, his certificate of honorable discharge, and one leave of absence. His suspension is sought to be justified under the decision in the case of Addrew J. Shannon (seventh volume, page 64), wh

The amendment recommended by the committee was agreed to. The bill as amended was ordered to be laid aside with a favorable recommendation.

ELIZABETH L. LARRABEE.

Mr. BARHAM. Mr. Chairman, I call up for consideration the bill (S. 1356) to increase the pension of Elizabeth L. Larrabee, widow of Col. C. H. Larrabee, late of the Twenty-fourth Regiment of Wisconsin Volunteers.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, directed to place upon the pension roll the name of Elizabeth L. Larrabee, widow of Col. C. H. Larrabee, deceased, late colonel of the Twenty-fourth Regiment of Wisconsin Volunteers, subject to the limitations of the pension laws, and to pay her the sum of $30 per month in lieu of the pension of $5 per month which she now receives.

Mr. ERDMAN. Let us have the report read, Mr. Chairman. The CHAIRMAN. The report will be read in the gentleman's time

The report (by Mr. WOOD) was read, as follows:

The report (by Mr. Wood) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Invalid Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (S. 1355) to increase the pension of Elizabeth L. Larrabee, widow of Col. C. H. Larrabee, late of the Twenty-fourth Regiment Wisconsin Volunteers, submit the following report:

The claimant is the widow of Col. C. H. Larrabee, late of Twenty-fourth Wisconsin Volunteers, is 41 years of age, and is drawing a pension of $8 per month under certificate 365150. She was married to the deceased soldier December 5, 1878. The medical evidence submitted to the committee shows conclusively that she is now disabled by diseases and injuries to such extent that she is unable to earn a living. Other evidence shows that she has at present no means or income except her pension.

Colonel Larrabee was killed in a railroad accident at Tehachapi, Cal., in 1883. He left a moderate competence to his widow; how much the evidence does not disclose; but whatever it was it has since been dissipated by her disabilities resulting from disease and injuries sustained in the accident in which her husband was killed, and by her lack of business training and ability, whereby unscrupulous persons have gotten from her what was left.

Colonel Larrabee, as shown by Senate report, had a brilliant civil and military record. He was city attorney of Chicago in 1844, also a member of the first constitutional convention of Wisconsin. He was circuit judge in Wisconsin from 1845 to 1853, and member of Congress from 1859 to 1861. He was second lieutenant and major of the Flith Wisconsin Volunteers in 1861 and M. S. Hancock. On July 25, 1862, he was commissioned colonel of the Twenty-fourth Regiment Wisconsin Volunteers. On August 30, 1863, he was compelled to resign his commission on account of disabilities incurred by diseases contracted in the service.

In 1884 Colonel Larrabee removed to the Pacific Coast, and was a member of the convention which formed the constitution of the State of Washington. Colonel Larrabee came from royal fighting stock

The bill was ordered to be laid aside with a favorable recommendation.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

The committee informally rose; and the Speaker having taken the chair, a message from the Senate, by Mr. Platt, one of its clerks, announced that the Senate had insisted upon its amendments to the bill (H. R. 9638) making appropriations for the support of the Army for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1898, disagreed to by the House of Representatives, had agreed to the conference asked by the House on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and had appointed Mr. Quay, Mr. Hale, and Mr. Blackburn as the conferees on the part of the Senate.

The committee again resumed its session.

The committee again resumed its session.

WILLIAM G. BUCK.

Mr. DE ARMOND. Mr. Chairman, I call up for consideration the bill (H. R. 8388) for the relief of William G. Buck. The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to increase the pension of William G. Buck, late of Company E, Fifteenth Regiment Iowa Volunteers, to $30 per month.

Mr. ERDMAN. Mr. Chairman, let us have the report. The CHAIRMAN. The report will be read in the gentleman's

The report (by Mr. CROWTHER) was read, as follows:

The report (by Mr. Crowther) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Invalid Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 8388) to increase the pension of William G. Buck, late of Company E, Fifteenth Iowa Volunteer Infantry, to $30 per month, having considered the facts presented, respectfully report:

William G. Buck enlisted February 3, 1862, and was honorably discharged July 24, 1865, as a private.

He filed claim for pension December 6, 1884, alleging malarial poisoning and asthma, resulting in general debility. He was pensioned at $6 from December 6, 1884, for malarial poisoning; increased to $8 from February 3, 1886; to $12 from December 22, 1886, for malarial poisoning and results and for chronic diarrhea and ulceration of rectum.

The medical board rated him twelve-eighteenths for chronic diarrhea and results, on April 2, 1890; and at twelve-eighteenths for chronic diarrhea and results, on April 2, 1890; and at twelve-eighteenths for diarrhea and results, and four-eighteenths for lung disease, February 11, 1891.

The Pension Bureau rejected his claim May 21, 1890, claiming heart disease not a result of malarial poisoning, and again September 29, 1891, claiming he was not entitled to increase.

Testimony filed with the committee, in connection with that filed in the Pension Bureau, convinces us that claimant is totally disabled for the performance of any kind of manual labor by reason of malarial poisoning, disease of heart and lungs, and chronic diarrhea and results, and we therefore recommend the passage of the bill without amendment.

The bill was ordered to be laid aside with a favorable recom-

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Michigan [Mr. MILNES] The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from michigan [Mr. Milkes] is recognized.

Mr. BAILEY. Mr. Chairman, a parliamentary inquiry.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. BAILEY. I desire to know how it is that the Committee of the Whole can proceed in this irregular way?

The CHAIRMAN. In pursuance of an order adopted by the ommittee some time ago.

Mr. BAILEY. I desire to submit that the committee has no power to proceed in this irregular way.

The CHAIRMAN. That matter has been passed upon by the Chair when the point was raised, and we have been proceeding by unanimous consent for some time.

unanimous consent for some time.

Mr. BAILEY. The fact that the committee resolved to do what it had no power to do does not prevent any member of the House from raising the question.

The CHAIRMAN. But we can not have the question raised every five minutes after it has been settled.

Mr. BAILEY. I know another way to raise it.

The CHAIRMAN. The question was raised by a gentleman, and it was disposed of; and we have been proceeding since 4 o'clock. Of course the gentleman can avail himself of his rights.

Mr. DAYTON. A parliamentary inquiry. Is it proper to move that we proceed in the consideration of these bills according to the Calendar in the regular manner? the Calendar in the regular manner?

The CHAIRMAN. Undoubtedly it is in the power of the committee at any time.

Mr. DAYTON. I make that motion.

The CHAIRMAN. But this bill must first be considered.

Mr. DAYTON. I make that motion right now.

The CHAIRMAN. After the bill has been disposed of that can be done.

DANIEL E. DE CLUTE.

Mr. MILNES. I call up for consi for the relief of Daniel E. De Clute. I call up for consideration the bill (H. R. 9689)

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll the name of Daniel E. De Clute, late a private of Company B, Forty-fourth Regiment Illinois Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $50 per month, in lieu of the pension now received by him. The pension hereby granted to date from the passage of this act.

Mr. ERDMAN. Let us have the report, Mr. Chairman. The CHAIRMAN. Let the report be read in the gentleman's Mr. ERDMAN.

The report (by Mr. THOMAS) was read, as follows:

The Charleman. Let the report be read in the gentieman's time.

The report (by Mr. Thomas) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Invalid Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 9889) for the relief of Daniel E. De Clute, having considered the facts presented, respectfully report:

Daniel E. De Clute enlisted as a private in Company B, Forty-fourth Illinois Volunteer Infantry, August 15, 1861, and was honorably discharged September 25, 1863.

He applied for pension January 21, 1888, for gunshot wound of neck and resulting spinal affection or discase of spine, the wound being received in tattle at Stone River, Tennessee, January, 1863, and again applied January 18, 1890, for chronic diarrhea, plies, and paralysis. He was pensioned at 25 from January 21, 1888, for gunshot wound of neck, and at $$ from January 18, 1890, for gunshot wound of neck and chronic diarrhea and resulting disease of rectum, which was increased to $17 for same disabilities from September 12, 1894; but his claim for resulting disease of heart, hemiparesis, and spinal irritation was rejected, as not being the result of pensioned disabilities.

The board of examining surgeons, November 18, 1891, rated him fourteeneighteenths for gunshot wound and results, four-eighteenths for chronic diarrhea and results, and six-eighteenths for disease of heart. On February 14, 1894, the board found him wholly incapacitated for manual labor.

On September 12, 1894, the board said, "He needs the constant aid and attention of another person," and also say, "He had a stroke of paralysis seven years ago; also one on 6th of June, 1894."

On September 11, 1895, the board rated him fourteen seventy-seconds for gunshot wound, and fifty seventy-seconds for spinal irritation and paralysis, making $72 per month, and say, "He needs the constant aid and attention of another person on account of paralysis and dementia."

Soldier has been pronounced insane and his pension is drawn by Seraphina De Clute, his guardian. She appealed to the Secretary of the Interior on sequela of the diarrhea. The spinal disease was well established ten years ago, and, seemingly characteristic, it has gradually progressed until at the present time he is a perfectly helpless mass of flesh—one side entirely helpless and paralyzed—with the other hand, left, he can at times automatically feed himself. The mental condition is now that of an imbecile; the urine is ammoniacal and the bladder paralyzed, necessitating the constant use of a catheter. Is constantly fed by his wife, because he has too little use of his left hand to be relied upon, if he knew enough to feed himself, which he does not. He can not stand alone, and requires the constant aid and attention of another to exist."

Dr. William Wilson testified that he examined soldier October 25, 1895, and found him a physical and mental wreck, requiring as constant attention and care as an infant, and said:

"The cause of his helpless condition is paralysis. The entire motor system is affected, the limbs, tongue, throat, muscles of face, bladder, and rectum all involved. Mentally he is an imbecile. There are two scars in the lower cervical region of the spine, where it is claimed he received a gunshot wound in the Army. I have not the least doubt but that his paralysis is the result of that injury."

Dr. Bradley Crippen testified that he and his preceptor (Dr. Littlefield) treated claimant for spinal trouble, the result of the gunshot wound, soon after his return home from the Army, and at various times up to 1888, and in his opinion the paralysis is due to the gunshot wound.

Whether the present helpless condition of soldier be due to chronic diarrhea or to the gunshot wound, about which the medical men who have treated and examined him differ, there is no other cause shown or even suggested than that one or the other, both of which are recognized and admitted to be due to his military service, is directly responsible for the present deplorable helplessness of the soldier.

The committee therefore believe the claim meritorious and recommend the ask the gentleman if there is any statement in that report except ask the gentleman if there is any statement in that report except the statement of the soldier himself?

Mr. MILNES. What was the question?

The CHAIRMAN. This is a pension bill, and not a bill to remove the charge of desertion.

Mr. STEELE. Mr. Chairman, on this bill I desire to say that I have not been opposed to any bills that have been passed this afternoon any more than I am against this bill, which I shall support. I recognize, in the first place, that there are brought into this House from the Committee on Invalid Pensions bills favoring the allowance of pensions to a great many soldiers who really need the allowance of pensions to a great many soldiers who really need special legislation; but, in my opinion, too many of the bills that are brought in here are for the relief of soldiers who are not as deserving, certainly not more deserving, than are thousands and thousands of others for whom no special legislation is asked. This procedure is very irregular and very unfair. For myself, I went to the Chairman among the very first to have my name put on the list. I went to him twice subsequently, and did not find my name on the list. This is why I have objected to this method my name on the list. This is why I have objected to this method of procedure. I do not believe it is equitable or fair.

Mr. WOOD. Mr. Chairman—

The CHAIRMAN. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

Mr. WOOD. To make a remark or two in reply to the gentleman from Indiana. I wish to say that so far as the Committee on Invalid Pensions are concerned, they have repeatedly brought in bills here for amounts which have been raised by the Committee of the Whole, and the bills have been passed here carrying very much larger rates of pension than those recommended by our committee, so that the reflections which the gentleman from Indiana makes upon the Committee on Invalid Pensions are quite uncalled for. That committee has enough to answer for without being made the subject of unjust reflections.

uncalled for. That committee has enough to answer for without being made the subject of unjust reflections.

Mr. STEELE. Mr. Chairman, I do not wish to be understood as saying that the present Committee on Invalid Pensions is any more lax or liberal than other committees have been. Ever since I have had the privilege of a seat in Congress it has always been so with the pension committees, and it always will be so, but I object to this manner of legislating. There is no better friend to the soldier than I have tried to be, and very few who have a larger soldier constituency than I have, and for that reason I am opposed

The CHAIRMAN. I will remind the gentleman from Indiana, who reflects upon the Chair, that we are proceeding under an order of this Committee of the Whole. The Chair has been endeavoring to follow out the suggestions of the Committee on Invalid Pensions, whose acting chairman stated that there were some grave cases which could not be reached to-day by following the regular order, and that the committee would therefore prefer to proceed to take up bills for unanimous consent. The Chair has been trying to carry out that suggestion of the committee, and at the same time to follow his own judgment as to giving due recognized.

nition to members on the Democratic side of the House.

Mr. STEELE. The bill that I wanted to call up is for the relief of the widow of a deceased soldier, who is utterly helpless physically, and is destitute. The CHAIRMAN.

submitted to the Chair under the suggestion of the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Mr. STEELE. Until now I was not aware that members of the committee had prepared and submitted a list to the Chairman before the present rule was adopted.

The CHAIRMAN. The amendment recommended by the committee to the pending bill was agreed to.

The bill as amended was laid aside to be reported to the House with the recommendation that it do pass.

Mr. STEELE. Mr. Chairman, I move that the committee rise.

The question being taken on the motion of Mr. STEELE, the Chairman declared the noes seemed to have it.

Mr. LOUD. Mr. Chairman, I ask for a division. The committee divided; and there were—ayes 49, noes 54. Mr. LOUD. I ask for tellers.

Tellers were ordered; and the Chair appointed Mr. Loup and Mr. Wood.

The committee divided; and the tellers reported—ayes 50, noes 39.

Mr. LOUD. No quorum, Mr. Chairman.
Mr. PAYNE. Mr. Chairman, I move that the committee proceed to take up bills in the order in which they appear on the Cal-

The question being taken on the motion of Mr. PAYNE, the Chairman declared that the ayes seemed to have it.

Mr. HEMENWAY. Mr. Chairman, I ask for a division.

The committee divided; and there were—ayes 87, noes 31.

The CHAIRMAN. The motion is agreed to, and the Clerk will report the next bill.

MARIA SOMERLAT.

The next business on the Private Calendar was the bill (S. 1823) granting a pension to Maria Somerlat, widow of Valentine Som-

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Maria Somerlat, widow of Valentine Somerlat, late a private in Company A, Twenty-ninth Regiment Indiana Volunteers, and to pay her a pension at the rate of §8 per month.

Mr. ERDMAN. Mr. Chairman, let us have the report read. The report (by Mr. Thomas) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Invalid Pensions, to whom was referred Senate bill 1323, having carefully examined the same, adopt the accompanying Senate report (No. 237) as their own, and respectfully recommend the passage of the bill, with the following amendment:

In line 8 strike out the word "eight" and insert in lieu thereof the word "twelve"

The soldier died in the prison pen of Andersonville May 5, 1864, and the bill as amended gives her the pension she would have been dawing from March 19, 1896, when the rate was increased from $8 to $12.

[Senate Report No. 237, Fifty-fourth Congress, first session.]

[Senate Report No. 237, Fifty-fourth Congress, first session.]

The beneficiary named in the bill was pensioned at $8 per month August 5, 1864, by certificate No. 75871. She subsequently remarried, and on the fact being reported to the Commissioner of Pensions, the pensioner was dropped from the rolls.

The evidence before the committee includes a certified copy of the findings in an action for divorce begun by Hiram J. Smith against Maria Smith (formerly Maria Somerlat), in which the judge of the circuit court for Steuben County, Ind., sustained the cross bill and rendered judgment for the defendant on the ground of cruel treatment, refusal and failure to support, and for driving her out of his house. It was shown that the plaintiff had never contributed for the defendant's support, and that she was obliged to work at service to obtain bread.

In view of these facts and following precedents heretofore established, the committee are of the opinion that the beneficiary should be restored to a pensionable status, the remarriage having brought her no support whatever, and that she has been entirely without a husband's support since the death of the soldier.

The amendment recommended in the second paragraph of the

The amendment recommended in the second paragraph of the report was agreed to.

Mr. TALBERT. Mr. Chairman, as I understand it, this is a bill to pension a remarried widow who, by marrying again, relinquished all claim for a pension.

Mr. LOUD. Mr. Chairman, I submit that by passing bills of this kind we assume the position of paying a bounty to widows who are not entitled to pensions under the law.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is, Shall this bill be laid aside to be reported to the House with a favorable recommendation?

Mr. TALBERT. I move that the committee rise.

The motion was rejected—aves 25 noes 59

The motion was rejected-ayes 25, noes 59.

The question being taken on laying the bill aside with a favorable recommendation, the Chairman declared that the ayes seemed to have it.

Mr. TALBERT. I ask for a division. The committee divided; and there were—ayes 50, noes 19. So the bill was laid aside to be reported to the House with the recommendation that it do pass.

FRANCES P. TRUMBULL.

The next business on the Private Calendar was the bill (H. R. The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Indiana put in his request at a time when there was a long list of names that had been M. Trumbull, widow of Matthew The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he hereby is, authorized and directed to cause to be placed upon the pension roll of the United States the name of Frances P. Trumbull, wife of Matthew M. Trumbull, late lieutenant-colonel of the Third Iowa Infantry, in the war of the rebellion, at $100 per month in lieu of pension now being drawn by her.

Mr. ERDMAN. Let us have the report read. The report (by Mr. Wood) was read, as follows:

The report (by Mr. Wood) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Invalid Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 5435) for relief of Frances P. Trumbull, widow of Matthew M. Trumbull, submitted the following report:

Petitioner is the widow of Matthew M. Trumbull, who died May 9, 1894. She was married to him June 24, 1866. She is now 56 years of age, and has no property, means, or income whatever, except a pension of $$ per month under act of June 27, 1890. Her deceased husband left no estate whatever.

Matthew M. Trumbull enlisted June 8, 1891, as captain Third Iowa Infantry. He was promoted to lieutenant-colonel of same regiment August 10, 1862, and honorably discharged November 20, 1862. He again reenlisted November 30, 1863, as colonel Ninth Iowa Cavalry, and was honorably discharged February 28, 1866. He was brevetted brigadier-general March 13, 1865, for faithful and meritorious services.

While captain Third Iowa Infantry he was wounded at the battle of Shiloh, which caused his discharge from the service November 20, 1862. The medical records of the Army show on April 16, 1862, he was "laboring under orchitis" (kidney trouble) "arising from injuries received at the battle of Pittsburg" (Shiloh).

The medical evidence examined by the committee, and which is on $$ 150.

records of the Army show on April 16, 1862, he was "laboring under crehitis" (kidney trouble) "arising from injuries received at the battle of Pittsburg" (Shiloh).

The medical evidence examined by the committee, and which is on file at the Pension Office as well as before the committee, shows that for many years prior to his death General Trumbull suffered from disease of the bladder and kidneys. On the day following his death a post-mortem examination was made by Drs. Lemuel C. and Wallace F. Grosvenor, of Chicago, Ill. That examination disclosed "an indurated, nonelastic, thickened, and ulcerated condition of the bladder, with great enlargement of the prostate gland; that there was a malignant and destructive disease of the kidneys, with a stone of considerable size in the pelvis of one of them."

Dr. L. C. Grosvenor makes affidavit that these "pathological conditions were the cause of his death." He had been General Trumbull's family physician for eight years, and had had frequent consultations with him concerning his condition, and learned of the wound, from the fragment of a shell, in the region of the bladder. He gives his opinion, under oath, that he "feels sure that said condition and death of said Trumbull resulted from, and was caused by, said wound so received."

Dr. John B. Murphy had attended General Trumbull in latter part of 1889 and 1890, and treated him "for ulcuscystis, which was due to retention of urine in the bladder." Dr. Murphy, having read the affidavit of Dr. L. O. Grosvenor, says, on oath, that "the stone in the kidneys was caused by and due to the retention of urine in the bladder; that the wound to the bladder caused traumatic obstruction to the urethra, thereby causing the retention, and results that flowed therefrom."

Your committee have no doubt but the wound received by General Trumbull at the battle of Shiloh was the cause of his death.

There is no reason why petitioner should not have been allowed a pension as widow of a captain in July, 1895. The evidence was then complete.

plicable.
A pension at $20 per month is all petitioner could get through he Pension Office, if, indeed, she can get any.
The committee, considering General Trumbull's services, and the age and destitution of petitioner, recommend the passage of the bill with the following amendments:
Strike out the words "one hundred," in lines 7 and 8, and insert in lieu thereof the word "fifty."
Strike out of title the words "the relief" and insert in lieu thereof the words "to increase the pension."
Line 7, after the word "infantry," insert "colonel of the Ninth Iowa Cavairy and brevet brigadier-general."

Mr. RICHARDSON. Mr. Chairman, I rise for a parliamentary inquiry.

The CHAIRMAN.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state it.
Mr. RICHARDSON. How much time is allowed for debate on this bill?

The CHAIRMAN. Ten minutes; five minutes for and five minutes against the bill. Mr. RICHARDSON. It is now ten minutes after 5 o'clock. I think it is time that the committee should rise. I make that Mr. THOMAS. I should like to offer a few amendments to perfect this bill and then have it acted on, after which I will myself make the motion which the gentleman from Tennessee suggests.

Mr. RICHARDSON. If the gentleman will make the motion when this bill is disposed of, all right. I do not object to this bill.

I withdraw my motion.

Mr. THOMAS. I offer the amendment which I send to the desk. The Clerk read as follows:

In line 4 strike out the words "cause to be placed" and insert "place." In line 8 strike out "at" and insert "and pay her a pension of."

The amendments were agreed to

The bill as amended was ordered to be laid aside to be reported favorably to the House.

Mr. THOMAS. I move that the committee now rise.

The motion was agreed to.

The committee accordingly rose; and the Speaker having resumed the chair, Mr. HENDERSON reported that the Committee of the Whole House had directed him to report without amendment House bills numbered respectively 5620, 5532, 7451, 7969, 1513, 1888, and 8888, and Senate bills numbered respectively 350, 1888, 1810, 638, 1017, 1694, 1787, 1811, 1949, 2183, and 1856; also that the Union.

committee had directed him to report with amendments House bills numbered respectively 4629, 6234, 7115, 6539, 3688, 3999, 3166, 6560, 2396, 6099, 1095, 1066, 6730, 1832, 6915, 3690, 4390, 5764, 6803, 4901, 7121, 5986, 7457, 7205, 6765, 3108, 9689, and 5435, and Senate bills numbered respectively 1806, 1495, 178, 2913, and 1323; also that the committee had directed him to report House bills numbered respectively 4823, 3714, 2221, and 4534, with the recommendation that they be laid on the table.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE.

By unanimous consent, leave of absence was granted as follows: To Mr. Bromwell, for four days, on account of important business

To Mr. Eddy, for ten days, on account of sickness in his family. To Mr. DINSMORE, for one week, beginning yesterday. To Mr. Stewart of New Jersey, indefinitely, on account of illness

To Mr. ALLEN of Utah, for three days, on account of illness in his family.

To Mr. Wellington, for one week, on account of illness.

CONTESTED ELECTION-YOST VS. TUCKER,

Mr. WALKER of Virginia, by unanimous consent, submitted the views of a minority of the Committee on Elections No. 3, upon the contested-election case of Yost vs. Tucker, from the Tenth district of Virginia; which were ordered to be printed.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED.

Mr. HAGER, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that they had examined and found truly enrolled bills of the following titles; when the Speaker signed the same:

A bill (H. R. 9733) to authorize the Union Railroad Company to construct and maintain a bridge across the Monongahela River;

A bill (S. 3375) authorizing the construction of a bridge across the Columbia River, in the State of Washington;

A bill (S. 3182) granting a pension to Susan E. Cunningham; A bill (S. 2008) granting a pension to Fanny Moale Gibbon; A bill (S. 637) granting a pension to George M. Brooks; A bill (S. 1320) to confirm the title to certain lands in William

Morgan and Harrison Moore and to require the issue of patents therefor; and

A bill (S. 937) granting an increase of pension to Sarah E.
Comly, widow of Maj. Clifton Comly.

SENATE BILLS REFERRED Under clause 2 of Rule XXIV, the following Senate bills were taken from the Speaker's table and referred as follows:

A bill (S. 3525) to provide for an examination and survey of a water route from the mouth of the jetties at the city of Galveston, Tex., through the ship channel and up Buffalo Bayou to the city of Houston, Tex., and appropriating money therefor—to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

A bill (S. 3477) to remove the charge of desertion from the military record of William H. Linton—to the Committee on Military

And then, on motion of Mr. PAYNE (at 5 o'clock and 15 minutes p. m.), the House adjourned.

EXECUTIVE COMMUNICATIONS.

Under clause 2 of Rule XXIV, the following executive com-munications were taken from the Speaker's table and referred as follows:

A letter from the Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting a recommendation for an increase of the limit of cost of the public building at Newark, N. J.—to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, and ordered to be printed.

A letter from the Secretary of the Interior, transmitting a reply to the resolution of the House of January 15, 1897, relating to certain lands in Utah—to the Committee on the Public Lands, and ordered to be printed.

A letter from the Acting Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting a copy of a communication from the Secretary of War recommending an appropriation for the construction of a sea wall at Sandy Hook, N. J.—to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES ON PUBLIC BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS.

Under clause 2 of rule XIII, bills and resolutions were severally reported from committees, delivered to the Clerk, and referred to the several Calendars therein named, as follows:

Mr. HULL, from the Committee on Military Affairs, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 5835) to reorganize the line

He also, from the same committee, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 3719) entitled "An act to provide for appointment by brevet of active or retired officers of the United States Army, with certain Senate amendments thereto, reported the same accompanied by a report (No. 2564); which said bill and report were referred to the House Calendar.

Mr. HILBORN, from the Committee on Naval Affairs, to which was referred House bill No. 9567, reported in lieu thereof a bill (H. R. 10066) to provide for organizing a naval reserve battalion in the District of Columbia, accompanied by a report (No. 2565); which said bill and report were referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. LESTER, from the Committee on War Claims, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 7618) authorizing the Court of Claims to adjudicate certain claims arising under the provisions of the act of March 12, 1863, entitled "An act to provide for the collection of abandoned property, and for the prevention of frands in insurrectionary districts within the United States," reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 2568); which said bill and report were referred to the Committee on Coinage, Weights, and Measures, to which was referred the joint resolution of the House (H. Res. 183) authorizing preliminary proceedings looking to the adoption of an international coin or coins, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 2569); which said bill and report were referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. JOHNSON of Indiana, from the Committee on Elections No. 2, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 9274) to amend an act making appropriations for sundry civil expenses of the Government for the year ending June 30, 1880, and for other purposes, and to repeal a certain provision therein, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 2576); which said bill and report were referred to the Committee of t

Whole House on the state of the Union.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES ON PRIVATE BILLS.

Under clause 2 of Rule XIII, private bills and resolutions were severally reported from committees, delivered to the Clerk, and referred to the Committee of the Whole House, as follows:

By Mr. PARKER, from the Committee on Military Affairs: The bill (H. R. 9970) to remove charge of desertion against James J. Fluke. (Report No. 2549.)

By Mr. GRIFFIN; from the Committee on Military Affairs: The bill (H. R. 5265) for the relief of Anson W. Gillett. (Report No. 2550)

No. 2550.)

No. 2550.)

By Mr. TRACEY, from the Committee on Military Affairs: The bill (H. R. 8716) to remove charge of "absent without leave" from military record of Abraham M. Runyon. (Report No. 2551.)

By Mr. BUCK, from the Committee on War Claims: The bill (H. R. 558) for the relief of Amelia A. H. Richards, of Fairfax

County, Va. (Report No. 2552.)

By Mr. COOPER of Texas, from the Committee on War Claims: The bill (H. R. 9789) for the relief of the Roman Catholic Church of St. Peter's, at Jackson, Miss. (Report No. 2553.)

By Mr. LESTER, from the Committee on War Claims: The bill (S. 296) entitled "An act for the relief of William H.

Atkins, formerly commissary sergeant, United States Army.

(Report No. 2554.)

The bill (H. R. 525) for the relief of Christian Ubele, administrator of Christian Ubele, deceased. (Report No. 2555.)

The bill (H. R. 532) for the relief of Margaret Geibelhouse, administratrix of Philip Geibelhouse, deceased. (Report No.

The bill (H. R. 3773) for the relief of Henry Fields, of Savannah, Ga. (Report No. 2557.)

The bill (H. R. 526) for the relief of William G. Ebbs. (Report No. 2558.)

A resolution (No. 496) to refer the bill (H. R. 9086) for the relief of the estate of Maria Gibson, deceased, late of Culpeper County, Va., with all accompanying papers, to the Court of Claims, reported in lieu of House bill No. 9086. (Report No. 2559.)

By Mr. NEILL, from the Committee on War Claims:
The bill (H. R. 1136) for the relief of Anna Hunt, administratrix of George F. Hunt, late of Jefferson County, Miss., as found due by the Court of Claims under the act of March 3, 1883. (Report No. 2560.)

ort No. 2560.)

The bill (H. R. 2455) for the relief of William Johnson, administrator of Thomas I. Johnson, deceased, of Fayette County, Tenn., as found due by the Court of Claims under the act of March 3, 1883. (Report No. 2561.)

By Mr. PUGH, from the Committee on War Claims:

The bill (H. R. 1814) for the relief of Dr. John R. Hall, of Louisville, Ky. (Report No. 2562.)

A resolution (No. 497) to refer, together with all accompanying papers, to the Court of Claims the bills (H. R. 5058) for the relief of B. J. Young; (H. R. 2093) for the relief of E. C. Oakley, administrator of W. H. Neal, deceased, late of Shelby County, Tenn.; (H. R. 2115) for the relief of estate of B. B. Neville, deceased, of Shelby County, Tenn.; (H. R. 2090) for the relief of Jacob Glenn, of Memphis, Shelby County, Tenn.; (H. R. 1574) for relief of Mary F. Pollan, administratrix of William H. Pollan, deceased, late of Crittenden County, Ark.; (H. R. 2516) for the relief of Mary N. Westmoreland, of Obion County, Tenn., formerly of Lauderdale County, Ala.; (H. R. 1765) for the relief of the estate of W. S. Hyland, deceased, of Warren County, Miss.; (H. R. 1087) for the relief of S. L. Carpenter, of Fayette County, Tenn.; (H. R. 2496) for the relief of the estate of James L. Holland, deceased, of Lauderdale County, Ala.; (H. R. 2597) for the relief of the estate of Vincent Armistead, deceased, and (H. R. 8799) for the relief of Mrs. Sarah E. Norton, of Memphis, Tenn., reported in lieu of House bills Nos. 5058, 2093, 2115, 2090, 1574, 2516, 1765, 1087, 2496, 2537, and 8799. (Report No. 2563.)

By Mr. BELL of Colorado, from the Committee on the Public Lands: The bill (H. R. 9499) authorizing and directing the Secretary of the Interior to sell certain lands to A. L. Williams, and for other purposes. (Report No. 2566.)

By Mr. Will SON of Idaho, from the Committee on the Public for other purposes. (Report No. 2566.)

By Mr. WILSON of Idaho, from the Committee on the Public Lands: The bill (H. R. 9162) for the relief of the heirs of John W. Johnson. (Report No. 2567.)

By Mr. KIRKPATRICK, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions:

The bill (H. R. 5898) granting a pension to Amanda M. Way, as army nurse. (Report No. 2570.)

The bill (H. R. 9717) granting an increase of pension to William Blades. (Report No. 2571.)

By Mr. McCLELLAN, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions: The bill (S. 2184) entitled "An act granting a pension to William F. Johnson." (Report No. 2572.)

By Mr. SULLOWAY, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions: The bill (H. R. 10020) granting a pension to Louise Van Atter. (Report No. 2573.)

By Mr. WOOD, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions: The bill (H. R. 8568) granting a pension to Florence Tate. (Report No. 2574.)

By Mr. AVERY, from the Committee on War Claims: The bill

By Mr. AVERY, from the Committee on War Claims: The bill (S. 2570) entitled "An act to authorize the readjustment of the accounts of army officers who were graduates of West Point Military Academy." (Report No. 2575.)

PUBLIC BILLS, MEMORIALS, AND RESOLUTIONS.

Under clause 3 of Rule XXII, bills, resolutions, and memorials of the following titles were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. FISCHER: A bill (H. R. 10058) in relation to the collection of revenue—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. MAHON: A bill (H. R. 10059) to authorize the readjustment of the accounts of certain army officers—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. JENKINS: A bill (H. R. 10060) making an appropria-tion for the purchase of the scale known as Fairbanks's infallible American gold and silver coin scale and counterfeit-coin detector, American gold and silver coin scale and counterfeit-coin detector, for use in the post-offices throughout the United States—to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads.

By Mr. MEIKLEJOHN: A bill (H. R. 10061) to amend an act entitled "An act granting to the Eastern Nebraska and Gulf Railway Company right of way through the Omaha and Winnebago Indian reservations, in the State of Nebraska," by extending the time for the comptruction of said railway, to the Committee the time for the construction of said railway-to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

By Mr. HYDE: A bill (H. R. 10062) to grant a right of way through the Fort Spokane Military Reservation, in the State of Washington, to the St. Paul, Minneapolis and Manitoba Railway Company—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. SCRANTON: A bill (H. R. 19983) to provide for the naturalization of certain Indians residing upon the Annete Islands, Alaska—to the Committee on the Territories.

By Mr. SAYERS: A bill (H. R. 10064) to provide for the twelfth and subsequent censuses—to the Committee on Appropriations.

By Mr. RICHARDSON: A bill (H. R. 10065) to incorporate the District of Columbia Suburban Railway Company-to the Com-

District of Columbia Suburban Railway Company—to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

By Mr. PAYNE: A bill (H. R. 10067) to amend "An act to amend "An act to amend section 4400 of Title LII of the Revised Statutes of the United States, concerning the regulation of steam vessels," approved August 7, 1882," and also to amend section 4414, Title LII, of the Revised Statutes, "Regulation of steam vessels"—to the Committee on the Merchant Marine and Fisheries.

By Mr. BEACH: A resolution (House Res. No. 498) relative to securing a uniform standard of value in trade and commerce with China, Japan, the several republics and colonies of the American Hemisphere, the Hawaiian Islands, and the Dominion of Canada—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

Also, a resolution (House Res. No. 499) directing the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce to ascertain and inform the House of Representatives whether any good reason exists for the further continuance of the bonded privilege between the Great Lakes and the Pacific Ocean—to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

PRIVATE BILLS, ETC.

PRIVATE BILLS, ETC.

Under clause 1 of Rule XXII, private bills of the following titles were presented and referred as follows:

By Mr. BOATNER: A bill (H. R. 10068) for the relief of Mrs. Ellen Yznaga—to the Committee on War Claims.

Also, a bill (H. R. 10069) for the relief of Mrs. E. R. Allen, of West Carroll Parish, La.—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. BURRELL: A bill (H. R. 10070) for relief of Phillip M. Smith—to the Committee on War Claims.

Also, a bill (H. R. 10071) for the relief of Edward Chasteen—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. CLARDY: A bill (H. R. 10072) for the relief of William A. Short—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. KIRKPATRICK: A bill (H. R. 10073) for the relief of Barr & Sanner—to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

Also, a bill (H. R. 10074) granting a pension to John Clopine—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. PICKLER: A bill (H. R. 10075) granting a pension to Martin G. Sands—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 10076) granting a pension to John W. Elliott—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. RUSSELL of Connecticut: A bill (H. R. 10077) granting a pension to Nancy D. Perkins—to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. RUSSELL of Connecticut: A bill (H. R. 10077) granting a pension to Nancy D. Perkins—to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. BUCK: A bill (H. R. 10078) to correct naval record of Charles F. Brown—to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

PETITIONS, ETC.

Under clause 1 of Rule XXII, the following petitions and papers were laid on the Clerk's desk and referred as follows:

By Mr. ADAMS: Resolutions of the Commercial Exchange of Philadelphia, favoring a mail boat in New York Harbor for expediting foreign mails—to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads.

Also, petition of Charles G. Frowert and 18 others, of Philadelphia, Pa., praying for favorable action on House bill No. 4566, relating to second-class mail matter, and Senate bill No. 1675, pro thibiting the transportation of obscene matter by any agency—to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

By Mr. BOWERS: Petition of 200 citizens of Ontario, Cal., favoring the passage of the Cameron resolution relating to Cuba—favoring the passage of the Cameron resolution relating to Cuba—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

By Mr. ELLIS: Petition of Maj. Theodore John Eckerson, United States Army, retired, in favor of the readjustment of accounts of retired officers under act of July 5, 1838—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. GROUT: Petition of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union of Addison County, Vt., Mrs. L. D. Dyer, president, for the passage of Senate bill No. 2485, to further protect the first day of the week as a day of rest in the District of Columbia—to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

Also, memorial of Jovite Pinard, late of Company C. Eighth the Committee on the District of Columbia.

Also, memorial of Jovite Pinard, late of Company C, Eighth Regiment Vermont Volunteers, in support of the petition granting a medal to those who participated in the siege of Port Hudson, June 15, 1863—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. HURLEY: Petition of macaroni manufacturers of the State of New York, for a duty of 2 cents per pound on macaroni—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. OVERSTREET: Paper to accompany House bill No. 3273, for the classification of clerks in the first and second class post-offices, and fixing the salaries of the same—to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads.

By Mr. QUIGG: Petition of members of the Tea Trade of the

By Mr. QUIGG: Petition of members of the Tea Trade of the United States, residing in New York City, relating to the importa-tion of impure and unwholesome teas—to the Committee on Ways

and Means

By Mr. TRACEWELL (by request): Petition of Samuel Reid Post, No. 87, Grand Army of the Republic, of Salem, Ind.; also petition of 92 citizens of Harrison County, Ind., requesting the recognition of Cuba as a free and independent government—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

By Mr. WOOD: Evidence in support of House bill No. 9999, to correct the military record of Charles W. Hammond—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

SENATE.

Wednesday, January 20, 1897.

Prayer by the Chaplain, Rev. W. H. MILBURN, D. D.
The Secretary proceeded to read the Journal of yesterday's proceedings, when, on motion of Mr. MITCHELL of Wisconsin, and by unanimous consent, the further reading was dispensed with.

HARBOR AT ASTORIA, OREG.

The VICE-PRESIDENT laid before the Senate a communica-tion from the Secretary of War, transmitting, in response to a resolution of December 21, 1896, a report of the Chief of Engineers relative to the harbor at Astoria, Oreg.; which, with the accom-panying papers, was referred to the Committee on Commerce, and ordered to be printed.

ST. LOUIS RIVER BRIDGE.

Mr. VILAS. I should like to have referred back to the Committee on Commerce the bill (H. R. 9752) to amend an act entitled "An act to authorize the construction of a steel bridge over the St. Louis River between the States of Wisconsin and Minnesota," approved April 24, 1894, as amended by an act approved August 4, 1894, entitled "An act to amend an act to authorize the construction of a steel bridge over the St. Louis River between the States of Minnesota and Wisconsin." The bill was reported by the Senator from Minnesota [Mr. Nelson], who is upon the floor, and with whom I have conversed in respect to it. The object of the recommittal is for a further hearing in respect to the provisions of the bill.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. In the absence of objection, it will be so ordered.

PETITIONS AND MEMORIALS.

Mr. GALLINGER. I present a petition authorized by the American Humane Association in annual convention at Cleveland, Ohio, September 26, 1896, praying for the passage of the bill for the prevention of cruelty to animals in the District of Columbia.

Iumbia.

In connection with the petition I desire to present letters from the president and vice-president and four members of the board of trust of Western Reserve University, of Cleveland, Ohio; Charles F. Meserve, president of Shaw University, Raleigh, N. C.; James R. Day, chancellor of Syracuse University, of Syracuse, N. Y.; Jesse Johnson, president of Muskingum College, New Concord, Ohio; L. L. Hobbs, president of Guilford College, Guilford, N. C.; D. H. Cochran, president of the Polytechnic Institute, of Brooklyn, N. Y.; Albert Bushnell Hart, of Harvard University, Cambridge, Mass.; John Bascom, of the faculty of Williams College, Williamstown, Mass.; Harriet Prescott Spofford, of Washington, D. C.; Hiram Corson, of Cornell University, Ithaca, N. Y.; Herbert E. Ward and his distinguished wife, Elizabeth Stuart Phelps Ward, of Newton Highlands, Newton Center, Mass., and William Rounseville Alger, of Boston, Mass., all praying for the William Rounseville Alger, of Boston, Mass., all praying for the passage of the bill.

I ask that the petition of the Humane Society and the letters I have presented be printed as a document for the use of the Senate, and that the petition and accompanying papers lie on the table.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

Mr. SHERMAN presented the memorial of Leo Wise, publisher of the American Israelite, of Cincinnati, Ohio, remonstrating against the passage of the so-called Loud bill, relating to second-class mail matter; which was referred to the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads.

Offices and Post-Roads.

Mr. ALLEN presented the memorial of Homer E. Moore, publisher of the Primitive Christian, of Panama, Nebr., remonstrating against the passage of the so-called Loud bill, relating to second-class mail matter; which was referred to the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads.

Mr. CHILTON presented the petition of John B. Bass and sundry other citizens of Smith County, Tex., praying for the establishment in the rural precincts of mail boxes for the reception of mail; which was referred to the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads.

Mr. MORRILL. I present a position of citizens of this side.

Post-Roads.

Mr. MORRILL. I present a petition of citizens of this city who are owners of several parcels of land that occupy a position in front of the Senate wing, near that occupied now by the Library building, praying that Congress will take some action in relation to the purchase of those squares and of three triangular lots corresponding to those that were purchased by the Government for the Library building, so that they may know whether the Senate will act favorably or unfavorably upon the bill authorizing the purchase of a site for the accommodation of the Supreme Court of the United States. I move that the petition be printed as a document and referred to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds. Grounds.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. THURSTON presented a petition of James A. Garfield Post, Grand Army of the Republic, of Red Cloud, Nebr., praying for the adoption of the so-called Cameron resolutions recognizing the independence of Cuba; which was ordered to lie on the

He also presented the memorial of John C. Thompson, publisher of the American, of Omaha, Nebr., and the memorial of R. B. Enslow, publisher of the Argus, of Alexandria, Nebr., remonstrating against the passage of the so-called Loud bill, relating to second-class mail matter; which was referred to the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads.

Mr. SEWELL presented a petition of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union of Camden, N. J.; praying for the enactment of legislation to protect State antigambling laws from nullification through interstate gambling by telegraph, telephone, or otherwise, etc.; which was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary. He also presented a petition of the Woman's Christian Temperated Union of Camdon, N. J. praying for the passage of the second ance Union of Camden, N. J., praying for the passage of the so-called Phillips bill, authorizing the appointment of a nonpartisan commission to collate information and to consider and recommend legislation to meet the problems presented by labor, agriculture, and capital; which was referred to the Committee on Education and Labor.

Mr. BATE presented the memorial of Bishop & Smith, publishers of the Crossville Chronicle, of Crossville, Tenn., and the memorial of W. H. Weakley, assistant editor of the Messenger, of Nashville, Tenn., remonstrating against the passage of the so-called Loud bill, relating to second-class mail matter; which were referred to the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads.

Mr. PROCTOR presented a memorial of the Master Car Builders' Association of Rutland, Vt., remonstrating against the adoption of a metric system of weights and measures; which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

CHANGE OF REFERENCE.

Mr. COCKRELL. I supposed that the bill (H. R. 8298) relating to mortgages in the Indian Territory had been referred to the Committee on the Judiciary, and, so supposing, I had referred to the Committee on the Judiciary sundry petitions, memorials, etc., to be considered in connection with that bill. I ask that the Committee on the Judiciary be discharged from the consideration of the papers, and that they be referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs for consideration with House bill 8298.

The VICE-PRESIDENT It will be so ordered.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. It will be so ordered.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

Mr. ALLEN, from the Committee on Claims, to whom was referred the bill (S. 567) for the relief of the Continental Fire Insurance Company and others, reported it without amendment, and ance Company and others, reported it without amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

Mr. GALLINGER, from the Committee on Pensions, to whom were referred the following bills, reported them severally without amendment, and submitted reports thereon:

A bill (H. R. 8683) granting a pension to Frederick Lierman;

A bill (H. R. 3231) for the relief of Bluford Reeder;

A bill (H. R. 3333) granting a pension to Thomas S. Daugherty;

A bill (H. R. 717) granting a pension to Mary Ann Lafferty; and A bill (S. 3540) granting a pension to Mirum C. Peck.

Mr. BACON, from the Committee on Claims, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 939) for the relief of Cogswell & Co., reported it without amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

Mr. WALTHALL, from the Committee on Military Affairs, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 514) to remove the charge of desertion from the military record of Wear Crawford, reported it with an amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

Mr. STEWART, from the Committee on Claims, to whom was referred the amendment submitted by Mr. Gorman on the 21st ultimo, intended to be proposed to the general deficiency appro-ultimo, intended to be proposed to the general deficiency appropriation bill, reported favorably thereon, and moved that it be referred to the Committee on Appropriations, with the accompanying report, and printed; which was agreed to.

He also, from the same committee, reported an amendment intended to be proposed to the general deficiency appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

He also, from the same committee, to whom were referred the following bills, reported them severally without amendment, and following bills, reported them severally without amendment, and submitted reports thereon:

A bill (S. 3424) for the relief of Capt. George W. Goethals;

A bill (S. 514) for the relief of Warren Hall; and

A bill (S. 881) for the relief of the administrators of Isaac P.

Tice, deceased, and others.

Mr. BURROWS, from the Committee on Claims, to whom were referred the following bills, reported them severally without amendment, and submitted reports thereon:

A bill (S. 3539) providing for the adjudication of certain claims

A bill (S. 3539) providing for the adjudication of certain claims by the Court of Claims;

A bill (H. R. 897) for the relief of James Stewart: and A bill (S. 3443) for the relief of the Globe Works, of Boston,

Mr. PEFFER, from the Committee on Pensions, to whom were referred the following bills, reported them severally without amendment, and submitted reports thereon:

A bill (H. R. 6282) to increase the pension of Alexander Mc-Bride; and

A bill (H. R. 4264) granting a pension to Mary Pelham. Mr. QUAY, from the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, to whom was referred the amendment submitted by Mr. Hoar on the 19th instant, intended to be proposed to the sundry civil appropriation bill, reported favorably thereon, and moved that it be referred to the Committee on Appropriations and printed; which was agreed to.

Mr. PROCTOR, from the Committee on Military Affairs, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 5610) for the relief of George T. Stevens, assistant surgeon Seventy-seventh New York Volunteers, reported it without amendment, and submitted a report

Mr. VEST, from the Committee on Commerce, to whom were referred the following bills, reported them severally without amendment:

A bill (H. R. 9841) to amend an act authorizing the West Braddock Bridge Company to construct a bridge over the Monongahela River from the borough of Rankin to Mifflin Township; and

A bill (H. R. 9935) to authorize the construction or acquisition of a bridge across the Rio Grande River at El Paso, in the State of Texas.

of Texas.

Mr. VEST, from the Committee on Commerce, to whom was referred the bill (S. 3519) to authorize the construction or acquisition of a bridge across the Rio Grande River at El Paso, in the State of Texas, reported adversely thereon, and the bill was postponed indefinitely.

Mr. MITCHELL of Wisconsin, from the Committee on Pensions, to whom were referred the following bills, reported them severally without amendment, and submitted reports thereon:

A bill (H. R. 6549) granting a pension to Gideon L. McGinnis; A bill (H. R. 4994) for the relief of Mrs. Sarah Martin; and A bill (H. R. 6590) granting a pension to William Greer.

Mr. CANNON, from the Committee on Pensions, to whom were referred the following bills, reported them severally without amendment, and submitted reports thereon:

A bill (H. R. 8053) granting a pension to Alice Gard;
A bill (H. R. 6900) increasing the pension of Mary T. Young; and

and
A bill (H. R. 4547) granting a pension to Silas S. White.
Mr. BRICE, from the Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 1171) to pension Hannah Yazell, reported it without amendment, and submitted a report thereon.
He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 3945) granting a pension to Thomas J. Thorp, reported it without amendment, and submitted a report thereon.
He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred the bill (S. 3397) granting a pension to Etta S. Stillson, widow of Philo B. Stillson, lieutenant-colonel One hundred and ninth Regiment New York Volunteers, reported it with an amendment, and submitted a report thereon. submitted a report thereon.

CHICAGO RAILWAY STRIKE OF 1894.

Mr. HALE, from the Committee on Printing, to whom was referred the following concurrent resolution of the House of Representatives, reported it without amendment; and it was considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to:

Resolved by the House of Representatives (the Senate concurring), That the Attorney-General be, and is hereby, authorized and instructed to print as an appendix to his last annual report full copies of all telegraphic and other correspondence between the Department of Justice and public officers, private persons, railroad companies, and their officers and agents, in the year 1894, relative to the disorders in the city of Chicago, Ill., during said year, and to the action taken by the Government of the United States in suppressing the same.

RECOGNITION OF THE INDEPENDENCE OF A FOREIGN STATE.

Mr. HALE, from the Committee on Printing, reported the following resolution; and it was considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to:

Resolved, That there be printed 2,500 additional copies of Senate Document No. 56, Fifty-fourth Congress, second session, being "Memorandum upon the power to recognize the independence of a new foreign state," 2,000 of which shall be for the use of the Senate, and sent to the Senate document room, and 500 for the use of the State Department.

COST AND PRICE OF ARMOR.

Mr. HALE, from the Committee on Printing, reported the following resolution; and it was considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to:

Resolved, That there be printed 2,500 additional copies of House Document No. 151, Fifty-fourth Congress, second session, being a report of the Secretary of the Navy on cost and price of armor, 2,000 of which shall be for the use of the Senate, and sent to the Senate document room, and 500 for the use of the Navy Department.

THE COTTON PLANT BULLETIN.

Mr. GORMAN, from the Committee on Printing, to whom was referred the concurrent resolution submitted by Mr. TILLMAN on the 18th instant, reported it without amendment; and it was considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to, as follows:

Resolved by the Senate (the House of Representatives concurring), That there be printed 20,000 extra copies of Bulletin No. 33 of the United States Department of Agriculture, entitled The Cotton Plant: Its History, Botany, Chemistry, Culture, Enemies, and Uses, of which number 6,000 copies shall be for the use of the Senate, 12,000 copies for the use of the House of Representatives, and 2,000 copies for distribution by the Secretary of Agriculture.

BILLS INTRODUCED.

Mr. WILSON introduced a bill (S. 3561) to grant a right of way through the Fort Spokane Military Reservation, in the State of Washington, to the St. Paul, Minneapolis and Manitoba Railway Company; which was read twice by its title, and, with the accompanying paper, referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

He also introduced a bill (S. 3562) for the relief of Thomas H. Burns; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

mittee on Military Affairs.

He also introduced a bill (S. 3563) granting to the Western Washington Development Company a right of way through the Quinaielt Indian Reservation, in the State of Washington; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

Mr. ALLEN introduced a bill (S. 3564) granting a pension to Joseph W. Skelton, of Nebraska; which was read twice by its title, and, with the accompanying papers, referred to the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. McMILLAN introduced a bill (S. 3565) to compel street railway companies in the District of Columbia to remove abandoned tracks, and for other purposes; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

Mr. THURSTON introduced a bill (S. 3566) for the relief of William H. Webster; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. TURPIE (for Mr. VOORHEES) introduced a bill (S. 3567) granting an increase of pension to Hugh L. English; which was read twice by its title, and, with the accompanying paper, referred to the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. BURROWS introduced a bill (S. 3568) granting thirty days of sick leaveannually, with pay, to the employees of the Government Printing Office and the Bureau of Engraving and Printing; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Printing.

Mr. BURROWS. I present, to accompany the bill, a petition of sundry employees of the Government, praying for its passage. I ask that the petition be printed as a document, and referred to the Committee on Printin

the Committee on Printing.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. In the absence of objection, it will be so ordered.

Mr. ALDRICH introduced a bill (S. 3569) to provide a life-saving station at or near Green Hill, on the coast of South Kings-ton, in the State of Rhode Island; which was read twice by its title, and, with the accompanying paper, referred to the Committee on Commerce.

Mr. PERKINS. I introduce a joint resolution, which I ask to be read and referred to the Committee on Mines and Mining.

The joint resolution (S. R. 192) to provide means for securing information relating to mines and related industries was read the first time by its title and the second time at length, and referred to the Committee on Mines and Mining, as follows:

to the Committee on Mines and Mining, as follows:

Whereas the mining interests of the United States have not a clearly defined representation in the organization of the Government; and Whereas it is desirable that there shall be gathered and published statistics and other information that will be of value to mining and related industries; and

Whereas the statistics now obtained are secured by the Geological Survey and the Director of the Mint; and

Whereas it is desirable that all statistics relating to mines and mining be collected by one organization:

Resolved, etc., That a commission be, and is hereby, formed, consisting of the Commissioner of the General Land Office, the Commissioner of Labor, and the Director of the Geological Survey, whose duty shall be to determine the best method of ascertaining all the facts of general importance relating to mines and mining within the United States, whether by a mining bureau, a secretary of mines and mining, a commissioner of mines, or a commission and to report to the Secretary of the Interior for his examination and approval a bill providing means for securing all necessary information concerning mining and related industries within the United States.

AMENDMENTS TO SUNDRY CIVIL APPROPRIATION BILL.

AMENDMENTS TO SUNDRY CIVIL APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. FRYE submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the sundry civil appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, and ordered to be printed.

Mr. ALLEN submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the sundry civil appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Claims, and ordered to be printed. by him to the sundry civil appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Claims, and ordered to be printed.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. W. J. Browning, its Chief Clerk, announced that the House had passed to the third time, and passed.

The amendment was agreed to. The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

the bill (S. 319) for the relief of telegraph operators who served in the war of the rebellion.

The message also announced that the House had agreed to the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 8551) to establish railroad bridges across the Cumberland and Tennessee rivers, in Ken-

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED.

The message further announced that the Speaker of the House had signed the following enrolled bills; and they were thereupon signed by the Vice-President:

A bill (S. 637) granting a pension to George M. Brooks;
A bill (S. 937) granting an increase of pension to Sarah E.
Comly, widow of Maj. Clifton Comly;
A bill (S. 1320) to confirm the title to certain lands in William Morgan and Harrison Moore, and to require the issue of patents therefor;

A bill (S. 2008) granting a pension to Fanny Moale Gibbon;
A bill (S. 3182) granting a pension to Sarah E. Cunningham;
A bill (S. 3375) authorizing the construction of a bridge across the Columbia River, in the State of Washington; and
A bill (H. R. 9733) to authorize the Union Railroad Company to construct and maintain a bridge across the Monongahela River.

NEW YORK CITY CUSTOM-HOUSE BUILDING.

Mr. HILL. In behalf of my colleague [Mr. MURPHY], who was called away and has not returned, I ask for the present consideration of the bill (S. 3520) to provide for the erection of a custom-house in the city of New York.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill, which had been reported from the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds with an amendment, in section 1, line 3, after the name "Post" to strike out "and," and in line 4, after the name "Kilbreth," to insert "Edward F. Brown and Hugh J. Grant," so as to make the section read: tion read:

That Charles N. Taintor, George B. Post, James T. Kilbreth, Edward F. Brown, and Hugh J. Grant, citizens of New York, are hereby appointed and constituted a board of commissioners, to be known as the United States custom-house building commissioners, and they are charged with the erection and construction of a suitable, commodious, and sufficiently fireproof building for the purposes of a custom-house, upon the present custom-house site, in the city of New York, which site is bounded by Wall, William, and Hanover streets and Exchange place.

Mr. PETTIGREW. I should like to know if the bill has been reported from a committee, and if the report is unanimous?

Mr. HILL. The report is unanimous from two committees of this body

Mr. PETTIGREW. I should like to have the Senator from New York inform me further whether it is customary to appoint a commission and name them, for the purpose of constructing these buildings, or is this a new departure?

Mr. HILL. It is customary. It has been done in a large number of instances, I will inform the Senator, and the Secretary of the Treasury approves of this form. There is no objection to it.

tion to it.

tion to it.

Mr. QUAY. I understand that the bill follows the precedent in relation to the New York public buildings, and it is a bill approved by the Treasury Department.

Mr. PETTIGREW. Do I understand the chairman of the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds to say that it is customary to appoint these commissioners in the bill itself?

Mr. QUAY. Yes; that is my understanding.

Mr. PETTIGREW. And that this designation is approved by the Secretary of the Treasury?

Mr. QUAY. Yes; these bills come from the Treasury Department. The bill makes no appropriation. It merely diverts a sum of money previously appropriated to the purchase of a site for the erection of a new building upon the old site.

Mr. PETTIGREW. It seems to me it would be a better custom to have these officers appointed by the Treasury Department rather than have us undertake to pass upon the qualifications of these people and designate them ourselves. It appears to me it these people and designate them ourselves. It appears to me it is a bad custom and that it ought not to be adopted. No such precedent ought to be established by the Senate. If it has been established-

Mr. QUAY. It has been established.
Mr. PETTIGREW. If that has been the custom, I do not know that I am prepared to undertake to change a custom already established, but it is certainly a very bad one and never ought to have been established.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment reported by the committee.

PACIFIC RAILROADS.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair lays before the Senate the resolution of the Senator from Alabama [Mr. Morgan], coming over from a previous day. The resolution will be stated.

The Secretary. A resolution directing the Committee on the Judiciary to inquire into and report as to the default of the Pacific railroads in the payment of certain bonds issued by the United States in aid of said roads.

Mr. MORGAN. I ask unanimous consent that the resolution may go over. Because of other engagements I have not been able to examine certain papers.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. In the absence of objection, the resolution will go over as indicated.

DIVISIONAL LINE BETWEEN VENEZUELA AND BRITISH GUIANA.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair lays before the Senate the resolution of the Senator from South Dakota [Mr. Pettigrew], coming over from a previous day. The resolution will be read.

The Secretary read the resolution submitted by Mr. Pettigrew on the 18th instant, as follows:

Resolved. That the Secretary of State be, and is hereby, directed to send to the Senate a statement of the proceedings of the commission appointed to investigate and report upon the true divisional line between the Republic of Venezuela and British Guiana, together with a copy of the treaty or agreement between the United States and Great Britain upon the subject of the boundary, which agreement has been submitted to the Government of Venezuela for consideration.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the resolution.

Mr. PETTIGREW. Mr. President, this is a simple resolution of inquiry, and upon a subject, I think, that should be brought to the knowledge of the people of the United States.

The controversy over the boundary between Venezuela and British Guiana has continued for seventy-five years. England has constantly encroached upon the territory of Venezuela, occupying a country more than twice as great as the original region ceded to her.

This controversy continued until 1841, when England marked the Schomburgk line, building mounds and setting posts and designating the country that she claimed. To this Venezuela protested, and her protest continued until 1887, when she withdrew her minister and refused to have further diplomatic relations with Great Britain. The good offices of this country were solicited, correspondence ensued, and the present Executive, through the Secretary of State, asked Great Britain to submit the question of boundary to arbitration. This was refused. The British prime minister, in his letter to the British ambassador, makes the follow-

It will be seen from the preceding statement that the Government of Great Britain have from the first held the same view as to the extent of territory which they are entitled to claim as a matter of right. It comprised the coast line up to the River Amacura, and the whole basin of the Essequibo River and its tributaries. A portion of that claim, however, they have always been willing to waive altogether; in regard to another portion, they have been and continue to be perfectly ready to submit the question of their title to arbitration. As regards the rest, that which lies within the so-called Schomburgk line, they do not consider that the rights of Great Britain are open to question.

In response to this letter on the part of the British prime minister, the President of the United States transmitted to the Senate a message, a message which startled the world and aroused an enthusiastic response from the patriotic citizens of this country.

enthusiastic response from the patriotic citizens of this country. It aroused also in response a cry of rage from the foreign element that has dominated this Administratior, who have their head-quarters in New York and are the gamblers of Wall street.

In response to this message, the Senate passed a bill providing for a commission to investigate and determine the true line between Venezuela and British Guiana. From this commission we have had no report, although at the time the question was dispussed as to whether we should not limit the time in which they cussed as to whether we should not limit the time in which they should report, as prompt action was deemed necessary. But no report has come. However, in the meantime the Administration itself has taken up the matter, has negotiated with Great Britain, and finally, as I understand, has agreed upon a treaty and submitted it to Venezuela for their ratification. The public prints mitted it to Venezuela for their ratification. The public prints inform us that this treaty provides that no territory shall be subject to arbitration which has been in the possession of Great Britain or British citizens for fifty years. In other words, this treaty provides that there shall be no arbitration of the territory inside the Schomburgk line. The treaty provides, then, that we shall surrender the whole contention, for the Schomburgk line was run in 1841, fifty-five years ago. The treaty provides that possession for fifty years shall be construed as conveying a title, and that territory occupied for fifty years shall not be arbitrated.

Under these circumstances, Mr. President, it seems to me the people of the United States, for they are supposed to govern this country rather than the present Executive, should be taken into the confidence of the Executive and the Government, and these facts laid before them.

I presume that Venezuela will submit, although she broke relations with Great Britain because she refused to accept arbitration which did not embrace the country within the Schomburgk line. She will accept it because, having asked our good offices, she has nothing else to do. Any other nation, any powerful nation, would have gone to war, would have attacked and driven out the encroaching settlers from British Guiana and occupied their own territory. Venezuela is weak. She hoped to find a friend and a defender in the United States. Instead of that, our Administration joined Great Britain and is now compelling them to accept that which they refused to accept and for which they dissolved relations with Great Britain.

Enrither than that Mr. President, it is a matter of hymiliation. which did not embrace the country within the Schomburgk line.

Further than that, Mr. President, it is a matter of humiliation to the people of the United States, after having responded so ardently and so earnestly to the only thing Grover Cleveland ever did that entitled him to their respect, that they should now be betrayed into the hands of this modern pirate without a full knowledge of all the facts. I say that it is due to the Administration edge of all the facts. I say that it is due to the Administration that the treaty should be laid before the country and before the Senate and that all the facts be known.

This remarkable message, in the light of the treaty which has now been made and submitted to Venezuela, reads as follows:

The course to be pursued by this Government, in view of the present condition, does not appear to admit of serious doubt.

Mr. SHERMAN. Mr. President-

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from South Dakota yield?

Mr. PETTIGREW. Certainly.
Mr. SHERMAN. I have already suggested to the Senator that I think it is not in order to comment upon a treaty pending in the Senate except in executive session. I therefore make the point, and ask that the doors be closed if the Senator wishes to go on and discuss the matter. I consider it my duty to do it, in view of the position I occupy. I think that the better way, unless the Senator will defer his remarks until an executive session.

ator will defer his remarks until an executive session.

Mr. PETTIGREW. I will say to the Senator from Ohio that I am not commenting on a treaty which has been submitted to the Senate. I introduced a resolution asking the Secretary of State to transmit to the Senate a copy of the treaty which has been submitted to Venezuela for their ratification. Under the circumstances, I think it is entirely proper that all the facts should be known to the country. However, I wish simply to read a portion of the President's message. of the President's message.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from South Dakota will rine VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from South Dakota will suspend. The Chair did not understand whether the Senator from Ohio entered a motion.

Mr. SHERMAN. I have no objection at all to the Senator reading from a public document, but reference to treaties, etc., pending can only be made, according to our rules, in executive session. I do not wish in the least to disturb the Senator in his discussion of any matter already published, and it is in order, of course, to discuss what has appeared in a public document.

Mr. PETTIGREW. This is a public document sent to the Senate on the 7th of December, 1895. This message, which the President transmitted to the Senate, which was construed as a declaration of war, so far as he is able to declare war, contains the following paragraph:

The course to be pursued by this Government in view of the present condition does not appear to admit of serious doubt. Having labored faithfully for many years to induce Great Britain to submit this dispute to impartial arbitration, and having been now finally apprised of her refusal to do so, nothing remains but to accept the situation, to recognize its plain requirements, and deal with it accordingly. Great Britain's present proposition has never, thus far, been regarded as admissible by Venezuela, though any adjustment of the boundary which that country may deem for her advantage and may enter into of her own free will can not, of course, be objected to by the United States.

Mr. President, it appears from all the knowledge we have of the treaty submitted to Venezuela that we have surrendered this very contention, and have insisted that only that territory outside of the Schomburgk line shall be submitted to arbitration, exactly what Great Britain insisted upon doing previous to the sending of this message to the Senate. I say, therefore, that the people of the United States have a right to know what this agreement or treaty is that we have submitted to Venezuela, in order that they may pass judgment upon it before the people of Venezuela act. I contention, and have insisted that only that territory outside of ask unanimous consent for the adoption of the resolution.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the resolution submitted by the Senator from South Dakota.

Mr. HILL and Mr. SHERMAN. Let it be read.

Mr. HILL and Mr. SHERMAN. Let it be read.

The Secretary again read the resolution.

Mr. SHERMAN. I think the resolution had better lie on the table. I object to its consideration to-day.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair will state to the Senator from Ohio that the resolution comes over from yearday, and that it has been reached in the regular order of business.

Mr. SHERMAN. I then suggest an executive session. I

Mr. PETTIGREW. Let it be referred.

Mr. SHERMAN. If the Senator from South Dakota will allow the resolution to be referred to the Committee on Foreign Rela-tions, I think that would be the best disposition of it. I move that the resolution be referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

Mr. PETTIGREW. I shall not object to its reference to the Committee on Foreign Relations if that is the desire of the chairman of the committee.

man of the committee.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The resolution will be referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

PRIVILEGES OF THE FLOOR TO ELECTORAL MESSENGERS.

Mr. HOAR. I desire to ask unanimous consent that the gentlemen who come to the capital as messengers from the electoral colleges of their several States, bringing the electoral vote, may be admitted upon the floor of the Senate for twenty-four hours after their arrival in Washington, on being introduced by the Senators from their State.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Massachusetts? The Chair hears none, and it will be so ordered.

ELECTRIC SUBWAYS IN THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

Mr. COCKRELL. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the joint resolution (S. R. 187) relating to the laying of electric subways in the District of Columbia.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the motion of the Senator from Missouri.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, resumed the consideration of the joint resolution.

Mr. FAULKNER. Mr. President, I regret that, by reason of the consideration of the senator of the consideration.

the position which I have held as a member of the subcommittee which investigated this entire question and as a member of the Committee on the District of Columbia, it becomes my duty to lay before the Senate the facts upon which that committee acted and the reasons that influenced it in presenting a favorable recommendation to the Senate of the joint resolution. I regret also that the Senator from New York [Mr. Hill] in the discussion of this question has deemed it proper to use language which I am satisfied he did not intend—at least I hope he did not—and which, if I believed he did. I should feel justified in characterizing in a manner which would at least vindicate my sense of indignation at the application of such terms to either the subcommittee, the Committee on the District of Columbia, or the distinguished Senator from Missouri [Mr. Cockreil] who introduced this joint resolution. When a Senator uses such language as that this is "a trick" and "a scheme," it is not only unparliamentary, but, sir, it implies that there are motives other than public motives which influence and control Senators who are responsible for the favorable report on such a resolution. It was such remarks which made me somewhat sensitive yesterday; it was that remark which should make any self-respecting Senator sensitive; but I feel that I am bound to give the Senator from New York the benefit of the disclaimer he made before he took his seat, when he said that he did not mean to imply improper action on the part of any member of the Senate or of the Committee on the District of Columbia in the reporting of the joint resolution.

There is another matter which I regret, which occurred in the discussion by the Senator from New York. He has assumed to place this question before the Senate upon the narrow basis that it involves only the interest of two electric-lighting companies operating within the District of Columbia. I can assure the Senate and the Senator from New York that if that were the question in the land by this iceit resolution. involved by this joint resolution, I should not occupy two minutes of the time of the Senate to vindicate the duty of the Senate in passing the joint resolution which has been reported favorably by the Committee on the District of Columbia. It is not a question between two electric-lighting companies. The question involved in this joint resolution is a question of public policy, inaugurated six years ago by the Congress of the United States, through its committees, and one approved at every session of Congress since by both Houses of Congress. It is a public policy applicable to this District, which has been expressed in stronger, more emphatic, and clearer language, by the distinguished Board of Commissioners now in office, than I feel competent to equal by any language which I could employ. No, sir; this is not a contest between two rival companies; this is not a controversy involving the digging a "little ditch" in the streets of Washington. The principles involved in this joint resolution embrace the control of every corporation in this city, and its purpose is to hold Congressional control over such corporations, which has been firmly held for a period of five years in carrying out this public policy. of the time of the Senate to vindicate the duty of the Senate in for a period of five years in carrying out this public policy.

I feel that I should give to the Senate a brief account of the conditions which have produced the state of affairs necessitating the passage of this joint resolution by Congress. The Potomac Lighting Company bought two plants in the District of Columbia, one at Eckington and one at Georgetown. In 1895 and 1896 they received permits from the District Commissioners to extend their lines, both overhead and underground. It proceeded to extend its lines for some considerable distance, when an injunction was filed against a further extension—whether by the United States Electric Lighting Company or by citizens of the District, I am now unable to say, and it is immaterial to this controversy by whom filed. When that injunction came on to be finally heard, Justice Bingham, of the District court, decided that under the law as it exists there was no law empowering the Commissioners of the District of Columbia to allow one feet of consioners of the District of Columbia to allow one foot of conduit or overhead wires for electric purposes to be laid, or that could authorize them to grant permits for connection with the wires already laid for house lighting. That decision of Justice Bingham applied solely to the Potomac Company, and rendered absolutely worthless the plants which they had in Eckington and Georgetown.

Mr. HILL. Will the Senator allow me to ask him a question?
The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. ALLEN in the chair). Does the Senator from West Virginia yield to the Senator from New

Mr. FAULKNER. Yes, sir.
Mr. HILL. What was the date of that decision?
Mr. FAULKNER. I can not state to the Senator the exact date, but it was in the spring of 1896. As soon as that decision was rendered, the Potomac Company came to the Committee on the District of Columbia and laid their grievances before it. The committee held that this was unjust not only to the company, but it defeated the rights of a large number of citizens who had constructed buildings based upon the existence of this plant as constituted to connect their wires. They were not within the reach of any other electric-lighting company or gas company, and therefore were driven back to the use of oil or candle lights for illuminating purposes.

Mr. HILL. I do not mean to annoy the Senator

Mr. HILL. I do not mean to annoy the Senator—Mr. FAULKNER. Not at all.
Mr. HILL. The Senator is entirely familiar with this matter, and I desire to get what information I can in regard to it. At the time of which the Senator speaks, of Justice Bingham's decision, were the wires of the other company in use into Washington?
Mr. FAULKNER. Of course.
Mr. HILL. It does not follow as of course.

Mr. FAULKNER. It does, because those wires had been put down under special laws passed year by year by Congress, and had authorized such constructions and extensions. There is nothhad authorized such constructions and extensions. There is nothing in the decision of Judge Bingham and nothing involved in the pleadings in that case which affected the company known as the United States Electric Lighting Company, but the decision did seriously affect the Potomac Company. When this company came to Congress and presented this condition of affairs, showing not only the injustice to it, but demonstrating the great injustice to the public in Geografiant and as the relief case and at the selection. to the public in Georgetown, and as the relief sought did not conflict with any general policy that Congress had established, the committee at once reported a bill, which we understood at that committee at once reported a bill, which we understood at that time was satisfactory to the company, and which would meet their full approval and give the relief asked. That bill was reported by the distinguished Senator from Tennessee [Mr. Harris] in May, 1895. When, therefore, the Senator from New York said on yesterday that he could state to the Senate what the position of the Senator from Tennessee upon this joint resolution was, I would question that assertion, unless he bases his information of the position of that Senator upon information subsequent to the reporting of the bill to which I have referred.

What did that hill provide? It demonstrated the correctness of

What did that bill provide? It demonstrated the correctness of the position which I am now maintaining, shows that it was entirely satisfactory to the company, and that it was in the interests of the public. The bill provides:

Ninth. The authority herein given for construction in public spaces shall extend territorially as follows:

(a) To all streets and roads and connecting alleys, or parts of same, situated west of Rock Creek, north of Florida avenue, and east of the Anacostia or Eastern Branch of the Potomac River, along which no existing lines of any other electric-light company may now be established.

(b) A line connecting by the shortest practicable route the power station of the Potomac Electric Power Company with the District pumping station on U street and the power house of the Rock Creek branch of the Capital Traction Company, to be used for power purposes only within the city of Washington.

(c) The Potomac Electric Power Company is further authorized to make necessary house connections with its lines.

This bill was favorably reported by the Senator from Tennessee on the 8th day of May, 1896, with, I believe, a unanimous report from the District Committee. We found that it was then too late in the session to secure the relief demanded by the Potomac Company, and feeling, therefore, that a great injustice was being done to the company as well as to the public interests in that section of the city of Washington, we appealed to the Appropriations Committee—I think I was selected by the Committee on the District of Columbia and instructed to bring the subject to the attention of the Committee on Appropriations. That committee had in conference the District appropriation bill. I appeared before that committee and called their attention to the subject and to its importance and to our inability to pass the bill and secure the relief at so late a day in the session. The result was that the subcommittee of the Senate took up this question with a view of granting the relief asked by the Potomac Company in accordance with the provisions of the bill introduced and reported favorably by the Senator from Tennessee on behalf of the District Committee; and after hearing both sides, it being understood that it was satisfactory to all interests, and yet at the same time preserving the policy which has governed that committee and the Committee on the District of Columbia for five years, they then embodied what they considered to be the language used in this bill or its equivalent in the appro-priation bill for the District of Columbia. They thought the question was satisfactorily settled, but it seems that it was not. After the adjournment of Congress the Commissioners advertised for bids for the electric lighting in all parts of the District.

Mr. GRAY. May I ask the Senator a question for information?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from West

Virginia yield to the Senator from Delaware? Mr. FAULKNER. Certainly.

Mr. GRAY. By what authority of law did the Commissioners ask for those bids?

Mr. FAULKNER. The authority upon which the right of extending the conduits is based is the authority contained by impli-cation in the appropriation act for the District of Columbia and in the sundry civil appropriation act passed on the 11th day of June, 1896, which made an appropriation for lighting and extension of service, and, as the court held, impliedly authorized the Commissioners to extend the conduits of either of these companies in carrying out this authority.

Mr. GRAY. I am very much interested in what the Senator is saying, and I ask again for information. Was there another de-saying, and I ask again for information. Was there another decision after the one to which the Senator first referred?

Mr. FAULKNER. I shall presently refer to two more.

Mr. GRAY. Then I understand there were decisions in which the Potomac Company was the plaintiff?

Mr. FAULKNER. It was the defendant.

Mr. GRAY. A case in which the Potomac Company was defendant, in which the court held that there was no power in the District Commissioners to grant licenses to anyone to lay conduits?

Mr. FAULKNER. To grant permits to the Potomac Company.

The court did not go outside of the issues made in the case in rendering its decision.

dering its decision.

Mr. GRAY. To the Potomac Company?

Mr. FAULKNER. Yes; and not only not to lay conduits or to extend overhead wires, but even that there was no authority to make connections with the conduits and wires already laid.

Mr. GRAY. And it was the hardship imposed upon them by that decision that was relieved by your committee in 1896?

Mr. FAULKNER. In 1896.

Mr. GRAY. Afterwards, the Senator says, there was a provision inserted in a general appropriation act, which, the court construed, gave the Commissioners by inference the right to do that?
Mr. FAULKNER. I will explain that.

Mr. GRAY. I only want to get at the facts.
Mr. FAULKNER. The District appropriation bill having been passed and the sundry civil bill providing for electric lighting in the streets and parksenacted, as the committee supposed, limiting these corporations geographically in the extension of their wires, the Commissioners advertised for bids, assuming that they had the right to let contracts to any company, whether existing at the time of the passage of the act or that might come into the District at any time before the bids were awarded. Before the Commissioners awarded any contract they referred the question of law to the district attorney, as to whether they had the power, under the law, to give the contract for lights east of Rock Creek to any other company than the United States Electric Lighting Company. district attorney, in his written opinion, held that they had not such a right, but the Commissioners, believing that their construction of the law was the correct one, proceeded to award the contract for certain lighting east of Rock Creek to the Potomac Com-

On the 5th of August, the Potomac Company having bid for all the electric lighting authorized by law, although it had no con-duit west of Rock Creek, 1 cent less per light per night than the other company would have received under the appropriation made by Congress, which, as usual, designated the maximum price to be paid, and as to park lighting having designated absolutely the price that should be paid per night, two of the Commissioners de-termined that, in their judgment, they had the right to grant the contract for certain lighting east of Rock Creek to the Potomac Company but decided that in all streets where the United States Company, but decided that in all streets where the United States Company were then lighting they would contract with the United States Company. I am trying to make an absolutely fair and impartial statement of the facts of this case.

When that was determined upon, the United States Electric Light Company obtained an injunction from Judge Cole, involving the question as to the legal exercise of the power claimed by the Commissioners to grant to the Potomac Company the right to extend the system east of Rock Creek. After full argument and a full review of the case, Judge Cole decided that under the terms of the two appropriation acts, by implication the Commissioners had the power, in the exercise of their discretion, to award the contract to the Potomac Company, and as a necessary result that if the Commissioners gave the contract to a company result that if the Commissioners gave the contract to a company that had no conduit in streets or parks to be lighted they would have the right to grant a permit to such company to construct proper conduits. That, in substance, was the decision of Judge Cole. The United States Electric Company attempted to appeal from this decision to the court of appeals. That court held that the right of appeal did not exist as a matter of right, as in this case it was an attempt to appeal from an interlocutory order and not from a final decree; and that as it did not affect any possessory right, or the rights of these parties, even if they had an exclusive right of easement in the streets, it did not present such a case as would take it out of the general rule and would authorize the court to grant the appeal. The court remanded the cause back to the circuit court of the District of Columbia, to be further proceeded with to a final decree. The case is now before the court, proceeding in the ordinary and usual course of chancery causes, for the purpose, I suppose, as any lawyer would infer, of enabling the complainant to get a final decree from the circuit court, and, if he deems it proper, back to the court of appeals for its final determination as to its legal rights under existing law. This is the condition of the law to-day under the decision of Judge

Cole.

What is the real question involved, admitting that, under the decision of Judge Cole, the Commissioners had a legal discretion to give to either of these companies the right to construct conduits to carry out the provisions of the act of June 11, 1896? question presented for the decision of Congress, in the exercise of that discretion with which the Commissioners were clothed, is, Was that discretion with which the Commissioners were clothed, is, was it wisely, judiciously, and properly exercised in the interest of the public? If it was, then, of course, I admit that the Senate should defeat this joint resolution. If the discretion was wisely exercised in this case by the Commissioners, then the policy heretofore adopted by Congress during the last five years has been a mistaken policy, and we should at once change and reverse it. That is the question you must pass upon, and that is the only question involved in this joint assolution. in this joint resolution.

Let it be remembered by the Senators who so kindly give me their attention that the permits granted to the Potomac Company to tear up the streets of the city involve the tearing up of 7 miles of asphalt pavement. Remember, when you come to consider the facts in passing upon the exercise of a wise and judicious discretion by the Board of Commissioners, that at most of the points where these lights were required to be put there were wires or electrical conduits established by another company.

Mr. HILL. Does the Senator say that on the same streets where the Potomac Company is now putting down its conduits another company was already doing the lighting?

Mr. FAULKNER. Not in all cases. I said that where the lights were required under the decision of the Commissioners of the District to be put, in almost every instance the electric wires were already upon those streets, New York avenue, I believe. being the only exception.

Mr. HILL. Lafayet Mr. FAULKNER. Lafayette Square has none.

Yes. To furnish lights for Lafavette Square the Potomac Company has been compelled to tear up the streets for two miles and a half in order to bring their wires to that point to furnish but seven lights to that square, when there were underground conduits already on three sides of that square.

Mr. HILL. Will the Senator give us the figures as to precisely what is the extent of this proposed 7 miles on which the United States Electric Lighting Company have already their conduits?

Mr. FAULKNER. The United States Electric Lighting Company have their conduits in the streets that come from Rock Crack, but to what extent the conduits are on the same street.

Creek, but to what extent the conduits are on the same street I am unable to answer accurately.

Mr. HILL. The Senator will allow me one moment. In case it is proposed to extend the lights to streets not occupied by the United States Electric Lighting Company, in case that company had been given the contract where there were no conduits, of course the United States Company would also have had to dig up the streets, would they not?

Mr. FAULKNER. That involves the question I am arguing as to the exercise of a wise discretion by the Commissioners.

There are but very short spaces

Mr. HILL. The point I am making is whether it makes any difference, if the streets have to be dug up, what particular company digs them up?

Mr. FAULKNER. No; and that is the very reason I am trying to get the Senator to understand the fact that it would not have been necessary to dig up the streets if the lighting contract had been given to the United States Electric Lighting Company, and for this reason the Commissioners have not exercised a wise

Mr. HILL. I ask what proportion of these 7 miles have been already occupied by the United States Electric Lighting Company? That is the point.

pany? That is the point.

Mr. FAULKNER. I do not suppose there has been a mile.

Mr. HILL. Not a mile.

Mr. FAULKNER. Perhaps not half a mile; I do not know; it might have been half a mile. I am not thoroughly familiar with the facts, but it certainly is not over a mile.

Underground electric conduits sufficient to furnish every light required would have been constructed, if the contract had been given to the old company, within a limit of a half mile, and there-fore it is a question for Congress to decide as to whether the Commissioners have exercised a wise discretion in tearing up six and a half more miles of asphalt pavement than was necessary to carry out the provisions of this act of June 11, 1896.

Let us take for illustration Mount Vernon Square. From Mount Vernon Square to Lincoln Park is about 3 miles, as these conduits are laid out. The contract provides for seven lights in Lincoln are laid out. The contract provides for seven lights in Lincoln Square. To light these seven lights 3 miles of the asphalt pavements of the District must be torn up, which never can be re-paired and put into the condition in which they were prior to the time the streets were broken—and 3 miles of underground con-duits are to be put down for the purpose of furnishing these seven

Mr. President, the committee felt that this was not an exercise of sound discretion upon the part of the Commissioners. Ido not propose to criticise the personal character or the integrity of any of the gentlemen composing this Board. I have known some of them for years, and, so far as my observation has gone, I want to say that they are gentlemen of the highest character and of sterling integrity; but when they exercise a discretion which is unwise and which is against the public interests, as I understand it, it is my duty, as one of the common council of this city, to call a halt upon their action.

Mr. MILLS. May I ask the Senator a question?
The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. BACON in the chair).

the PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. BACON in the chair). Does the Senator from West Virginia yield to the Senator from Texas? Mr. FAULKNER. Yes, sir. Mr. MILLS. Would the public interest suffer any injury by both of these companies putting up their lights on the same streets if they subsequently repair the streets and make them as good as they were before they tore them up? Would there then be any they were before they tore them up?

they were before they tore them up? Would there then be any injury to the public?

Mr. FAULKNER. I will try to answer the question in a general way when I get to the general policy that Congress has adopted. I am glad that the Senator from Texas asked me the question, and I hope Senators will ask any question as to which they desire information, because it is my duty to know the facts and equally my duty to impart them. The chairman appointed me a member of the subcommittee, and with others I investigated this subject, which enables me to answer questions bearing upon this subject, which enables me to answer questions bearing upon it, which I am anxious and willing to do.

What has been the public policy which has governed Congress for five years? Congress realized that this city was to be made the most beautiful city in the United States; that it was to be supplied with all the appliances which the demand of an advanced civilization required—water; light, both gas and electric; telegraph, telephone service, etc.; that it should have the best system that could be devised by the skill of the scientists of this country; that all might be utilized without destroying or marring its beauty. In 1891 a commission was appointed to act upon the question of subways in the District of Columbia, that we might get rid of all of the unsightly overhead wires, and looking to the adoption of a municipal system by which every wire in the city of Washington should be put under ground. When once such a system has been adopted and put into preparition it would then be within them.

should be put under ground. When once such a system has been adopted and put into operation, it would then be within the power of Congress to say to any company, "You may come here, but you must put your wires through the ducts provided for them."

The Senator from New York says this is a monopoly. I answer that it has been the policy of Congress in the District to establish a monopoly until this subway system is established. Not a monopoly, however, in the sense spoken of by the Senator from New York. What I mean by using the word "monopoly" is that it has been the policy of Congress to control absolutely the cost to the citizen of all these different agencies—telephone service, electric and gas light, railway rates, etc., by law and not by competitions. the citizen of all these different agencies—telephone service, electric and gas light, railway rates, etc., by law and not by competition. The result has proven the wisdom of that policy. As an illustration, do we not refuse to permit competing or multiplication of railways? We have said, "No; if you want to come in from the outside of the city you shall have the right to come, but over the tracks of the company that reaches the point to which you desire to come." This city is not to be gridironed by rails under franchises granted to railroad corporations. If the public demand requires that citizens shall have facilities in reference to street railways which they have not, we say, "We will make the street railways which they have not, we say, "We will make the existing corporation which is nearest to the point of connection with the line that you want to establish extend its road so as to give the public the facilities which are necessary, whether it pays the company to do so or not, but we will not allow new companies to be chartered." Why? Experience has proven that when you allow so many small corporations to be chartered the business is so divided that they soon become bankrupt, and when we seek to enforce wise regulations in the public interest, when we demand lower fares, when we demand rapid transit, when we demand improved cars that are decent to ride in, they reply. "Oh.

we demand lower lares, when we demand rapid transit, when we demand improved cars that are decent to ride in, they reply, "Oh, no, we can not do that; we are too poor; we pay no dividends."

We have therefore said we will limit the number of charters; compel these corporations to furnish the very best service, upon the principle that the traffic justifies the expenditures. That we may have full information of their condition, and be in a position to control them we require that the traffic justifies the sequence of the condition of their condition. to control them, we require that on the 1st day of January of every year each company shall report to Congress every dollar of receipts and every dollar of expenditures during the year.

This is a monopoly, but it is a monopoly which is absolutely guarded and controlled by the immediate domination and dictation of Congress in the exercise of all of its public functions under its franchise.

Will the Senator from West Virginia allow me for Mr. HILL. a moment?

Mr. FAULKNER. Certainly.
Mr. HILL. While I do not think the attitude of the committee or of Congress toward street railroads is exactly in point here, the Senator having alluded to it, I will ask him what bills have been passed, which occur to him now, compelling some of the rail-road companies to lay rails upon streets where they did not want to go?

Mr. FAULKNER. There are numerous cases. The Metropolitan Company is one. I remember that as one without pausing to reflect

Mr. HILL. I think I am somewhat familiar with the form of legislation adopted by some companies when they really want to occupy a street. The form of legislation adopted is to have a bill passed compelling them to use a certain street.

Mr. FAULKNER. There has never been any such practice to my knowledge in the nine years I have been in the Senate of the United States. Whether it is the practice in New York, I do not

Mr. HILL. What other bills are there beside the one for the Metropolitan Railroad Company?

Mr. FAULKNER. I can not remember each one. That is our policy, and let me give you a striking illustration now which oc-curred in carrying it out. We said to the Washington and Georgetown Railway Company, operating the Pennsylvania avenue line, and to the Metropolitan Company, "You must give the people of this city rapid transit." They said, "We will not do it; we can not do it. The expense is too rhey said, "We will not doit; we can not doit. The expense is too great. It will cost us millions of dollars. We can not afford it."

We said it must be done, and having been wise enough in granting these corporate rights in the District of Columbia to provide in every charter that Congress shall have the power to alter, repeal, or modify the charter, we compelled rapid transit.

Mr. HILL. There is nothing new about that. It is the usual leaves invested elements in compartion leaders.

Mr. HILL. There is nothing new about that. It is the usual clause inserted always in corporation legislation.

Mr. FAULKNER. I beg the Senator's pardon. If he will look back and study the history of this question in the District as I have, he will find many charters granted prior to that time which were passed without such a provision being in them.

Mr. HILL. Does the Senator mean to say that without that provision Congress would not have the right to repeal or modify the charter?

Mr. FAULKNER. I do. Mr. HILL. Of course not. It has that right without such a

Mr. FAULKNER. The question would then be whether a charter is not a contract to such an extent that Congress has not that right without a reservation to that effect by the insertion of a clause of that character.

Mr. HILL. It has, absolutely.
Mr. FAULKNER. I am not going to discuss that question.
We were taking no chances, and inserted that provision. When we compelled the change as to the two main street railway lines coming to the Capitol, we provided that unless that change was made ing to the Capitol, we provided that unless that change was made within a certain period, the charters would stand repealed. The companies resisted. Yet the District Committee and Congress maintained the proposition and made them obey the law.

We have within the last six years taken from the streets of this city every horse railroad except two, which are now petitioning Congress for an extension, because of the fact that they are trying a new power. They assert that because of the limited volume of their business, yielding such a small revenue, they can not afford to adopt either of the expensive systems, and that they are trying the air motor, are conducting experiments in order to carry out the views of Congress, but they have been unable yet to do it, and desire a further extension.

We have done the same in reference to the gas company. The gas company has pipes all over the city, and if I recollect aright, my friend the Senator from New York stood by us in that fight. We declared it unwise to charter another gas company, to tear up We declared it unwise to charter another gas company, to tear up every street in the city of Washington for the purpose of laying pipes, when we have the absolute power to control the price of gas, the quality of gas, and every other detail in reference to the supply of gas. We therefore refused at the last session, carrying out the same policy, to charter a new company, but we fixed a higher candle-power, imposed more stringent regulations upon the old company, and provided for a gradual reduction of the price of gas down to $1 a thousand feet. That was done in accordance with the uniform policy adopted by the District Committee and the Committee on Appropriations, with the sanction of both Houses.

It applies also to all telephone companies. I regret to say it, but this city is in a most unfortunate condition in reference to its telephone system. Is it known to Senators that not one foot of telephone system. Is it known to Senators that not one foot of conduit for telephone purposes can be laid, under the law as it exists to-day, and it was so decided by the Commissioners not two weeks ago? They are of the opinion that they have not the authority to permit a wire to be extended from an alley pole to any house not in the same square, and have not authority to grant permits to lay underground conduits. No extension of the system can be made.

Mr. HILL. Who framed the laws that create this injustice?
Mr. FAULKNER. With a view to carrying out the general policy, we have taken from the Commissioners the right to issue permits to dig up the streets to lay subways until we secure a law providing for a uniform system authorizing subways to be laid when we propose to make every company use those subways and pay a royalty to the District of Columbia for their use.

These temporary inconveniences must be obviated to some extent by the committee this year. The people must have the advantages of the telephone system, if it can be done without any great detriment or injury to the general plan which we have in view for laying the ducts under municipal control. You can extend the right, to a limited extent, by allowing a wire to be carried from the top of the pole in an alley, over houses to the next square, or something of that kind. But the policy of Congress is to have no more digging up of the streets in the laying of these subways then is absolutely precessary to meet the immediate deto have no more digging up of the streets in the laying of these subways than is absolutely necessary to meet the immediate demands of the public, until a system can be devised and put in operation, and then we will bring the wires of every one of these corporations—the electric-light company, the telephone company, and all others—into those general conduits.

Is the committee acting wisely in restricting these private subways? Are they censurable for carrying out this policy, and is the Committee on Appropriations to be condemned for being so strict in enforcing it? Do you not know that when these conduits are laid they will be the property of the parties laying them? Many of these conduits will not be serviceable as municipal subways. They are simply laid, as this one is being laid now, for public lighting, not for industrial purposes, house lighting, or to lic lighting, not for industrial purposes, house lighting, or to accommodate other interests. There are but twelve ducts in the

mr. TILLMAN, Will the Senator from West Virginia allow me to ask him a question?

Mr. FAULKNER. Certainly.

Mr. TILLMAN. Did not the Senator say a moment ago that he proposed to have a general system of conduits, with one large subway, in which all the corporations were to be forced to lay their wires, and for which they were to pay a royalty? Then he turns right around and says the conduits are private property. That would imply that you can not make the companies come into your general conduit.

Mr. FAULKNER. That is what I am afraid of, and that is why we are trying to keep down the number. If the conduits are, as I believe, private property, and we condemn them as a part of the municipal subways, we will have to pay the company the cost of construction or the value of the conduits.

Mr. TILLMAN. If that is the Senator's opinion of the importance of this question, in the name of common sense and decency why does not his committee report a scheme and act, and let us get through with the matter?

Mr. FAULKNER. That implies that the committee has done unwisely and is negligent of the public interest. If the Senator will examine the history of this matter, he will find that after a good deal of study, work, and reflection, the District Commissioners, on the 11th day of February, 1896, submitted the draft of a bill which in their judgment would carry out the plan of which I am speaking, for municipal conduits for all purposes, and sent it to the other House. It was introduced into that body on the it to the other House. It was introduced into that body on the 11th and in the Senate on the 12th of February, 1896. The Senator from Georgia now occupying the chair [Mr. BACON] is a member of the subcommittee of the District of Columbia Committee of the Senate, of which the Senator from Vermont [Mr. Proctors] is chairman (who the third Senator is I do not know), which is considering this question, and I am satisfied that upon a statement of the Senators who are members of that subcommittee, anyone will recognize that they will do this work as rapidly as in their judgment the importance of the matter will permit.

Mr. TILLMAN. Would the Senator claim that any subcommittee, however honorable and intelligent and zealous, can devote or have devoted, or ever will devote, the necessary time to give us a better scheme than that formulated by these three gentlemen, who were appointed by the President and who have nothing else

Mr. FAULKNER. All that the subcommittee is doing is to see whether those three gentlemen have wisely done their work. The Commissioners have prepared the bill; they have prepared a letter explanatory of every provision of the measure, and that is the bill and that is the letter which are now before the subcommittee. It is the Commissioners' bill.

Sir, need I do anything further, in order to show where the Commissioners ought to stand in this matter, than to read the report to Congress from the Board of Commissioners dated last February, in which they use the language I will quote as to the policy that Congress should maintain? Whether they have changed their opinion since that time I know not, but I do not believe they have. I think they unfortunately and unwisely granted this permit; but I believe that when the question is presented to them they will tell you that the statement I am going to read from them presents their true views of the policy which should control Congress in these matters.

Mr. McMILLAN. Before the Senator from West Virginia reads the letter, I should like to call his attention to one important fact. The expenditure of millions of dollars depends upon what kind of subway is laid. The cost of laying the subways would be between three and five million dollars, depending, of course, upon the manner in which they are constructed. Thereis important that the subcommittee should get all the information possible before they make any report.

Mr. HILL. If the system of subways is going to cost that amount of money, we had better let the corporations, or a couple of them, put it in at their own expense.

Mr. FAULKNER. "A couple." Why not a dozen?

Mr. STEWART. I should like to inquire of the Senator from West Virginia to what extent the Potomac Company are authorized under the present permit to lay their wires and their sub-

Mr. FAULKNER. To the extent of 7 miles. Mr. STEWART. What proportion of the work has already

Mr. FAULKNER. That is hard to tell. They are seeing if they can not beat Congress, and in my humble judgment, to be perfectly frank with the honorable Senator and with the Senate, I believe they will beat Congress.

Mr. HILL. I hope they will.

Mr. FAULKNER. But that should not affect the question. The resolution should be passed as expressive of the opinion of Congress on any future permits.

Congress on any future permits.

If the Potomac Company do finish their conduits before the joint resolution is passed, it will not apply to them. It directs the Commissioners to stop any work that is in process of construction at the time of the passage of the joint resolution, and not to give any other permit except when necessary for the public convenience. It declares a policy. If the Potomac Company completes their conduits before the joint resolution. It declares a policy. If the Potomac Company completes their conduits before the joint resolution is passed, it will not affect them. If they do not, and any part of their work is unfinished, they will be affected. But it affects the question of the enunciation of a public policy and the control of the Commissioners as to any future permit; and that is the reason why the committee is urging it.

This is the unanimous report of the Commissioners submitted last February:

The Commissioners, however, in reporting upon all similar bills proposing to grant the privilege of tearing up the streets—

This is as to a new gas company-for the purpose of laying gas pipes or conduits therein, whether for the use of a telephone company or an electric-light company—

Or an electric-light company-

Or an electric-light company—have taken the ground that it was against the public interest to grant privileges of this kind to new companies; that the business carried on by such companies was under such conditions as to make a monopoly desirable, if not necessary; that, aside from the great damage to the pavements and the inconvenience to the public occasioned by digging up miles of public streets, it is not necessary or wise to duplicate any gas pipes or conduits in the public streets, for Congress has full power to regulate the rates to be charged by such companies, as well as to correct any other evils. The same majority in Congress which determines that a new telephone company, a new gas company, or a new electric-light company must be chartered to give the public its rights can bring about the same result by controlling existing companies and with much less inconvenience to the public.

Mr. TILLMAN. Will the Senator allow me for a moment? That letter emanated from the Commissioners?

Mr. FAULKNER. Yes; in reply to a bill sent to the Commissioners, as the committee always send every bill to them.

Mr. TILLMAN. Yet the Senator quotes those gentlemen as sustaining his proposition, and they are the men who have given the permit to the new electric-light company. Is not the Senator quoting his witness against himself?

Mr. FAULKNER. I am quoting the Senator's witness against himself. That is it.

Mr. TILLMAN. The Senator is quoting the Commissioners as sustaining his proposition of a monopoly, when they themselves, in the fulfillment of their duty to the citizens and to the city, have granted this special privilege pending the magnificent subway plan which the subcommittee has under consideration.

Mr. FAULKNER. In February, 1896, they said the special privilege referred to should not be granted, and ought not to be granted, in the public interest.

Mr. TILLMAN. Then why did they grant it?

Mr. FAULKNER. Ah! Now, that is a matter for which I am not responsible. The Senator himself must ascertain why. haps it was done in the hurry and confusion of the moment, for the court decided the question on the 17th day of December, and on the 17th day of December the Commissioners executed the conon the 17th day of December the Commissioners executed the contract. Congress was then in session.

Mr. HILL. The Senator from West Virginia wants to be fair in his statement. They started last August.

Mr. FAULKNER. Oh, yes.

Mr. HILL. But the other company procured an injunction which kept them in court until December, and they could not start any earlier.

Mr. FAULKNER. But Congress was here as the absolute controlling power, and the policy which had been established in accordance with the views of the Commissioners of February, 1896, was known to them to be the policy of Congress; yet, on the 17th day of December they entered into a contract which permitted this company to tear up 7 miles of the asphalt pavement of this city against the protest which they had made to Congress in February, 1896.
Mr. HILL. The Potomac Company did not need to apply to

Mr. HILL. The Potomac Company did not need to apply to Congress when the courts had already decided in their favor.

Mr. FAULKNER. No one said they did. I said that on the 17th day of December the Commissioners executed this contract for the lighting of certain streets and parks in the city of Washington from the 1st day of July, 1896, to the 30th day of June, 1897, in violation, I will say to the Senator, of a well-established rule and regulation adopted by the Commissioners themselves, which they have enforced for years, that no company should be allowed to tear up the asphalt pavements of this city between the 1st day of December and the 28th day of February.

Mr. HILL. Was not the contract proposed to be executed and fulfilled last summer?

fulfilled last summer?

gence in the matter.

Mr. FAULKNER. Of course it was, on the 5th day of August.
Mr. HILL. Was not the delay the fault of the other company, which obtained an injunction that would not stand? That was the reason of the delay.

Mr. FAULKNER. Why speak about companies? I am not here arguing for a company. If the Senator represents a company here in the expression "this company or the other company," I do not. I am not arguing this question for one company or the other. I am arguing from the standpoint of an established public

Mr. HILL.

Mr. HILL. Oh, yes; we understand that.
Mr. FAULKNER. I hope the Senator will understand it.
Mr. HILL. But the Senator having alluded to the subject of whom he represents, which I regret, may I ask him a question which is a pertinent one? Where does the United States Electric Light Company hail from?

Mr. FAULKNER. I do not know, and neither do I care.

Mr. GALLINGER. If the Senator will permit me—

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from West Virginia yield to the Senator from New Hampshire?

Mr. FAULKNER. I have never conversed in private with any members of that company, and I know but one person connected with the United States Electric Company, and that is its president. I have never spoken to him on this subject except in the committee room. I have spoken with the president and his attorney, representing the Potomac Company, and have listened to all they had to say in favor of the position they have taken in this matter.

Mr. HILL. I did not know but that in view of the Senator's familiarity with the whole subject he might at least have heard something about where the company hails from

Mr. FAULKNER. I have not heard, I frankly say to the Sentor. I do not know where the company was incorporated.
Mr. HILL. I do not wish to charge the Senator with any negli-

Mr. FAULKNER. It is not a matter of negligence. I repudiate any such assumption on the part of the Senator from New York. It is not a question whether I am sustaining one company or the other, as the Senator seems to think. This fight stands upon a broader basis. The question is whether we will vindicate a policy adopted by Congress and enforced at every session for six years.

Mr. HILL. Will not the Senator allow the courts to determine the question as to what our statutes mean?

Mr. FAULKNER. Yes, sir; and there is not a word in the joint resolution criticising the court in any way for its decision or taking issue with the court as to its construction.

Mr. HILL. No; but the court having decided that the new company has a right to lay its conduits, the Senator is now seeking, by special act of Congress, to prevent its being done. Is not

Mr. FAULKNER. Yes, sir.
Mr. HILL. Of course. The Senator admits it.
Mr. FAULKNER. The court has never decided what the Senator asserts that it has.

Mr. HILL. It came pretty close to it.
Mr. FAULKNER. It decided that the Commissioners of the District of Columbia had a right to grant the permit, and that they could exercise that discretion by giving the contract to the Potomac Company; and, as I have said, the question involved in this resolution is whether they have exercised a wise and sound

Mr. TILLMAN. Mr. President—
The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from West

Mr. FAULKNER. Certainly.

Mr. TILLMAN. The terms under which the contract was awarded were that it should be given to the lowest bidder. That was the authority given to the Commissioners by the Appropriations Committee in the act passed last winter. The Potomac Company made their contract last summer; they had their permits to go to work, because they were the lowest bidders, and they were stopped by injunction until December. Now they are endeavoring to carry out their contract, and a special joint resolution is brought in here to stop them. Those are the facts.

Mr. HILL. That is the situation.

Mr. FAULKNER. The Senator from South Carolina is entirely mistaken. I dislike to differ with the Senator upon facts, but when the Senator is so absolutely certain of his facts would it not be well for him to read the law before he makes a necitive. be well for him to read the law before he makes so positive a statement? You will learn, sir, if you read the law—
Mr. TILLMAN. Will you read it now? I have got it here.
Mr. FAULKNER. I am not in the habit of reading the briefs of my friends on the other side. But I will be frank with the Senator, and tell him that the provision in reference to advertising was stricken out in the House of Representatives on the report of the conference committee and was not enacted into law for the reason that it might create a doubt as to the true meaning of the

Mr. HILL. Then will the Senator explain, if I do not annoy

Mr. FAULKNER. Not at all.

Mr. FAULKNER. Not at all.

Mr. HILL. That clause of the act making appropriations for the electric lighting? There was an increase of moneys appropriated, was there not, for the purpose of placing some new electric lights in the District of Columbia—arc lights?

Mr. FAULKNER. I really can not state whether that is a fact or not. I do not remember the amount that was previously appropriated and what we appropriated last year.

Mr. HILL. I have ascertained that you gave them an increase of about five or six thousand dollars upon the application of the Commissioners. It was said that in certain portions of the city there ought to be these arc lights in carrying out the rapid-transit system, and for that purpose the appropriation was placed in the act. What company was expected under that appropriation, if not the lowest bidder, to put in those extra lights?

Mr. FAULKNER. The cost was fixed by law as a maximum, which is the uniform rule. It was not more than 30 cents in one case and 28 cents for parks. It was the understanding of Congress, or at least the committee, that it would be done by this old company east of Rock Creek.

Mr. HILL. Then does the Senator mean to contend that it was intended by the provision to which I have referred to give to the United States Company the entire monopoly?

Mr. FAULKNER. No; not all, because some of those lights were to be west of Rock Creek and some east.

Mr. HILL. That has nothing to do with it.

Mr. FAULKNER. I say it was certainly the understanding of the Appropriations Committee that in carrying out this policy they should give it to that company which would tear up less of the streets in making their conduits to the point of lighting; and in reference to the parks, it would have consed the tearing up of in reference to the parks, it would have caused the tearing up of only 150 feet, for the reason that the old company had the authority to run in the Metropolitan subways there from a point on East Capitol street, where their wires were, to Lincoln Park. Mr. HILL. What price does the Senator understand was to be paid?

Mr. FAULKNER. Not to exceed 30 cents a light.
Mr. HILL. It says 24 and 30.
Mr. FAULKNER. Not to exceed 30 cents in one case, and for the lighting of public parks the price is fixed absolutely at 28 cents.
Mr. HILL. Then let us understand one another. The clause Mr. HHLL. Then let us understand one another. The clause that I have mentioned is construed by the Senator and the committee to mean that this extension, if desired to be given, should be given exclusively to the United States Electric Light Company?

Mr. FAULKNER. On the east side of Rock Creek, and on the

Mr. HILL. We are talking about this side, for here all the question arise

Mr. FAULKNER. No; it does not all arise here on the point upon which the Senator asks me, as to the number of lights. Some of them being on the west side, the Potomac Company was to have the contract for lighting, and those on the east side of Rock Creek the other company was to have for in the one case the Potomac Company had their power there, their conduits laid, and their wires up; and on this side the other company was in a similiar situation; and we proposed to hold them in statu quo until the general system to which I have referred had been adopted.

Mr. HILL. With all that elaborate explanation, still it comes right back to the question. What question was submitted to the right back to the question, What question was submitted to the court? I have the briefs here.

Mr. FAULKNER. I have told the Senator what question was

Mr. FAULKNER. Why does the Senator from New York ask me that question?

Mr. HILL. Because I understand that is the question. Mr. FAULKNER. Now, be frank and state why you ask that question.

Mr. HILL. Because I want the information.
Mr. FAULKNER. The Senator has listened to me attentively.

I am very much obliged to him for the compliment.

Mr. HILL. The compliment is mutual.

Mr. FAULKNER. The Senator heard me discuss that question fully, and I have given the decision of the court that the Commissioners were empowered to give it to either one of these companies in the exercise of their discretion.

Mr. HILL. Why do you need additional legislation, then?
Mr. FAULKNER. I have also answered that question.
Mr. HILL. The Senator need not repeat it, but I certainly failed to comprehend his point.

Mr. FAULKNER. I said that the joint resolution criticises no one-neither courts nor Commissioners

Mr. HILL. That is not an answer.

Mr. FAULKNER. But that it was to announce as the opinion of Congress a policy adopted six years ago and never departed from during that period.

Mr. HILL. How many times do you want to readopt that

Mr. FAULKNER. We find that the policy agreed to by Congress during these six years and indorsed by the Commissioners in the most solemn form in their advice to Congress last year, has now been repudiated by the Commissioners when they were invested, as the court said, with a discretion either to exercise the policy that they had indorsed or to inaugurate a policy in conflict with the judgment of Congress and their own advice.

Mr. HILL. Still, I do not think the Senator has answered my question.

Mr. FAULKNER. Ah! He who will not understand, Mr. President, can not be enlightened.

Mr. HILL. And he who will not explain does not want to enlighten anybody else.

Mr. FAULKNER. Have I not explained? Tell me a single question you have asked that I have not explained as far as my limited abilities enabled me to do so.

Mr. HILL. It does not take that amount of language to answer my simple question.

Mr. FAULKNER. Mr. President, when the Senator asks me a question, having the floor, I will be my own judge of the character of its answer, but it shall be full and complete so far as I have the information to give.

Mr. HILL. Yes; that is all very well.

Mr. STEWART. Will the Senator from West Virginia allow ginia yield? Mr. FAULKNER. To whom?

Mr. HILL. I will yield with great pleasure to the Senator from Nevada.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Nevada.
Mr. STEWART. There is one point on which I should like to hear the Senator from West Virginia. He has stated that the decision of the court was to the effect that the Commissioners had the discretion and the power to make this contract. If that be true, and the contract has been made and entered upon, would not that give some rights which Congress should not interfere with without due consideration?

Mr. FAULKNER. None whatever.
Mr. STEWART. None whatever?
Mr. FAULKNER. None whatever; and I will give the Senator the reasons. The Commissioners, doubtful, I suppose, of the attitude in which they stood with reference to this question, takattitude in which they stood with reference to this question, taking legal advice, as they should in a matter of this character, were wise enough when they granted this permit to put upon its face "subject to revocation at any time by the Congress of the United States." It is simply the permit that is affected by the pending joint resolution; and on the very face of the permit accepted by this company is a clause which protects the Government and this District from any liability whatever in withdrawing the power District from any liability whatever in withdrawing the power

Mr. STEWART. Is not that same power reserved in all the Mr. STEWART. Is not that same power reserved in all the acts we pass in regard to corporations, Congress reserving the right to repeal or modify, and does not Congress, in considering a matter of repeal or modification, take into consideration also what has been done under the law? Is not Congress bound to take into consideration what has been done under a valid contract? That brings me to the point, What has been done? I should like to ask—

Mr. FAULKNER. I suppose they have gotten two-thirds of the work through, and by to-morrow night or the night after, or some time soon, they will have the balance through, and it makes no difference. Do not let us parrow this question down to the no difference. Do not let us narrow this question down to the question of mere dollars and cents between two corporations. The members of the District Committee or the Appropriations Committee are not contending for a policy that will decide whether we shall give one company or another a few dollars. We are maintaining a policy in the interest of this magnificent and beautiful city, to guard all its rights in such a way that when we come to put a general subway system in operation we can do it without going to these corporations and paying them enormous sums for subways that they laid and which can not be used for general municipal purposes.

Mr. STEWART. But my point is, Have they acquired any equities under the contract?

Mr. FAULKNER. They have acquired no equities whatever, in my judgment, but I do not want to go into the question of equity. They did it with their eyes open. They knew the policy of Congress in reference to this matter. The revocation clause expressly gave them notice of the fact that Congress might, now being in session, repeal it the next day or the day after.

Mr. President, I see the time is coming when I shall have to close. I have not discussed, by a good deal, all the questions which are involved in this case.

Mr. HILL. Before the Senator closes, he has omitted, of course inadvertently, to inform the Senate whether there was any saving between the amount that would have to be paid for the lights to the United States Company and to this new company. Perhaps the Senator can inform me upon that point.

Mr. FAULKNER. There was a saving of $3.05 on thirty-two lights, which amounted to about $100, and a cost to the Government resulting from the tearing up of 5 miles of asphalt pavement to save $100.

Mr. GALLINGER. Will the Senator permit me a moment?
Mr. HILL. Does the Senator mean to say that only thirty lights were to be put in?

Mr. FAULKNER. No, sir; and if the Senator would only pay attention to my remarks he would not have to interrupt me so often. I spoke of the lights for the parks.

Mr. HILL. I did not ask the Senator to limit it to the parks.

Mr. FAULKNER. I chose to limit it so.

Mr. HILL. Inotice the Senator has done so. As Hamlet says: "Words, words, words!"

Mr. FAULKNER. There was a saving of $99 to the Government in park lighting, and a loss to the Government in keeping the streets which had been opened in proper repair.

Why, Mr. President, we do not even know now when this asphalt will be put down. If a cold spell comes at this time, the asphalt that has been torn up from one end of the city to the other can not be put down under the regulation and the inspection of the District until warm weather sets in. You can not lay asphalt

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from West Virlinia yield?

Mr. FAULKNER. To whom?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That is for the Senator to decide.

March. In violation of that order, on the 17th day of December they authorized 7 miles to be torn up.

Mr. GALLINGER. Will the Senator from West Virginia permit me an observation on the point raised by the Senator from

New York?
Mr. FAULKNER. Certainly.
Mr. GALLINGER. If this new company is not given lodgment in the District, has not Congress authority and power to regulate the price paid the old company and make it as low as, or lower than, the new company proposes to furnish lights? Has not that been our policy?

Mr. FAULKNER. I have stated that to the Senate. I desire to say, further, that one reason I am in favor of this general municipal system of subways is that when once constructed we can let any company or any number of companies operate in the District, renting the use of the same to the person or corporation paying the highest price for them; then we should under this system produce a fair annual income for the District of Columbia, sufficient to pay the interest on the investment.

sufficient to pay the interest on the investment.

Mr. COCKRELL. Every year the price is regulated.

Mr. FAULKNER. Every year the price of the light is regulated by the Committees on Appropriations of the two Houses of Congress, and if they have allowed too high a price during any year, they are alone responsible for it.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from West Virginia will suspend. The hour of 2 o'clock having arrived, the Chair lays before the Senate the unfinished business, which is Senate bill 3247, upon which the Senator from Indiana [Mr. Turpie] is entitled to the floor.

ARMY APPROPRIATION BILL

Mr. QUAY. With the permission of the Senator from Indiana, I rise to a question of privilege and present the report of the committee of conference on the Army appropriation bill.

The report was read, as follows:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 938) making appropriations for the support of the Army for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1898, having met, after full and free conference have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendments of the Senate numbered 1, 2, and 5, and agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 6, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: Strike out the matter inserted by said Senate amendment, and strike out, after the word "dollars," in line 15, page 23 of the bill, all down to and including the word "duty," in line 19, same page; and the Senate agree to the same.

On amendments numbered 3 and 4 the committee of conference have been unable to agree.

M. S. QUAY,
EUGENE HALE,
JO. C. S. BLACKBURN,
Managers on the part of the Senate.
J. A. T. HULL,
R. WAYNE PARKER,
GEO. B. McCLELLAN,
Managers on the part of the House.

Mr. COCKRELL. I should like to ask the Senator in charge of the bill what are the items of disagreement? What has been done in regard to the Hot Springs Hospital?

Mr. QUAY. The only disagreement is in relation to the hospital on the Hot Springs Reservation. The Senate and House conferees reached an agreement as to all other amendments in the bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on concurring in the report of the committee of conference.

The report was concurred in.

Mr. COCKRELL. I move that the Senate insist upon its amendments still in disagreement.

Mr. QUAY. I suggest that the report should go to the House.

Mr. COCKRELL. We ought to insist on our amendments before we send the bill back.

Mr. QUAY. Very well. I move that the Senate still further insist upon its amendments numbered 3 and 4.

insist upon its amendments numbered 3 and 4.

The motion was agreed to.

MARITIME CANAL COMPANY OF NICARAGUA.

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, resumed the consideration of the bill (S. 3247) to amend an act entitled "An act to incorporate the Maritime Canal Company of Nicaragua," approved February 20, 1889.

Mr. TURPIE. Mr. President, I concluded my remarks yesterday by calling the attention of the Senate to those provisions in the original treaty of cession which had for their object retaining the control of the canal and the directorate to the promoters of the corporation and their colleagues chosen by the two Republics. I think it is a serious subject for consideration when we find the Maritime Nicaragua Canal Company so willing to violate the terms of their engagement and so reckless in regard to their obligations, whether a corporation governed by such a spirit is a proper depository for the very important trust and the very large amount of funds which are sought to be placed in its treasury and custody by the passage of the pending bill.

The provisions in the original treaty of cession are not designed to exhibit any unfriendliness on the part of the two Central American Republics either to the interoceanic canal or to its com-pletion or construction. Neither does it manifest any hostility to the Government of the United States that its control of the directorate should be excluded by the terms of the cession; but it does give notice, not only to this corporation but to the Government of the United States, that when these two Republics conclude to treat with the Government about the construction of the canal they will do so directly and not through the medium of this cor-poration or any other. That is the manifest intendment and purpose of the policies so expressly declared in the articles of the treaty of cession.

Although it may be a matter of no consequence, and they have shown by their action that it is a matter of no consequence, to this corporation whether they observe these treaty provisions or not, it is a matter of great consideration to the two Republics who are parties to that treaty and to any corporation, person, or power engaged in the construction of that canal to preserve the amity of the two Republics and the friendship of the people who inhabit the land which the canal course will necessarily traverse.

I do not think it is possible, sir, to operate this canal upon any profitable terms or upon any terms whatever through the country of an unfriendly population. It must be recollected that the people of Costa Rica and Nicaragua are a very high spirited people, accurate in their definitions of right, precise in their sense of right and of justice, and very particular in regard to treaty limitations; and it would be wrong for us either directly or indirectly to offer injury, not to say insult, to the people of that country and their Governments by trespassing upon their rights, so clearly reserved in the cession to which I have alluded. So essential is the friendship of the neighborhood, of the vicinage, to the successful construction and completion of this canal that it has been noticed by every engineer and every commission which has reported upon this subject. The canal must be built with the assent and with the amity of the Governments and people of the country through which it runs, for it must be recollected that this canal, even under the most favorable conditions, will yet be a very tender subject of maintenance. It will be a work very sensitive to injury. It has been compared to the canals of Suez and Manchester, but the canal of Suez is a true maritime canal. It is filled with sea water. It has an almost imperceptible current from the Mediterranean to the Red Sea. It has no interior locks; it has no embankments, except those that have been made necessary by excavation. In order to destroy the Suez Canal an enemy would have to dig another of the same size and dimensions and divert the water from it.

The same thing may be said with respect to the Manchester The same thing may be said with respect to the Manchester Canal. The Suez and Manchester canals run through a comparatively level country. They have no semipipe lines. I do not know that there is any scientific technical term and appellation, but a great majority of the work on this projected canal by the Nicaragua route is where water is carried around and through the hills and valleys by embankments. The excavation represents the side and bottom of the pipe, and the embankment taken from the hill represents the other side of it. It is open at the top, but the work is pipe work and depends for miles simply upon the earth inclosure. According to the report made by the engineer of the Covernment, half an hour's work with a pick and shovel would be able to wreck the whole system of canal simply engineer of the Government, half an hour's work with a pick and shovel would be able to wreck the whole system of canal simply by destroying part of the embankment and allow the flood to rush through it. A very small beginning would accomplish the entire destruction of the whole scheme of improvement.

These are circumstances, sir, which I think ought to put us especially upon our guard against provoking the prejudice, possibly the hatred, of the people and the Governments whose territory is to be tranversed by this project of the Nicaragua Canal. It is a people facile in revolution, a people who easily resort to arms, who are accustomed to the conflict of war, and a people whose malice and whose ill will ought not to be provoked, especially if it be aggravated in the first instance by a violation of treaty obligations under the auspices or under the enactment of the United States, such as this company is now demanding.

But, Mr. President, it is said by the promoters of this project—I mean the project named in the pending bill, and especially the subsidy named in the bill—that although we may not, under the terms of the cession, control the directorate, or transfer the directorate.

terms of the cession, control the directorate, or transfer the directorate to any government or state, we may secure the right or interests of the United States otherwise. So as this is a pecuniary or financial transaction, they propose to secure us against loss or damage by what they term a mortgage of property, a transfer of assets, collaterals which they deem ample to guarantee us against loss by reason of this guaranty of their bonds.

Having already discussed the question and shown the impracticability of the control of the directorate and of the transfer which the bill makes possible, I now purpose, sir, to discuss the feasi-bility of the transfer of property as a financial security for this guaranty. They speak of a statutory lien and of a statutory pledge and also of a mortgage in hec verba of the whole property, real and personal, corporeal and incorporeal, of the corporation there. Now, sir, what property rights has this corporation in that country?

I ask the question, What property rights has this company there? I will ask the additional question, What property rights is it possible that this company could acquire there by the provisions of their original charter law? In order to determine that, I will ask the attention of the Senate to the original provisions of the treaty of cession with respect to their acquisition of proprietary rights. I refer to article 8.

Article 8 provides:

The present concession is transferable only to such company of execution as shall be organized by the Nicaragua Canal Association, and in no case to governments or to foreign public powers. Nor shall the company cede to any foreign government any part of the lands granted to it by this contract; but it may make transfers to private parties under the same restriction.

The Republic of Nicaragua can not transfer its rights or shares by selling them to any government.

There is the same provision in relation to the Republic of Costa Rica. Both Republics have bound themselves in this treaty of cession with the corporation not to transfer their rights or shares to any government or any power. This association is bound also in no case to transfer to governments or to foreign public powers any of the rights created by this cession. It will be seen also that the lands spoken of, the subsidy on the part of the two Republics to this corporation, can not be transferred to any government. They may be transferred to private parties, but these private parties can not transfer the lands to any government.

With respect to these lands, I wish to call the attention of the Senato to the article providing that the lands granted by the Republics to aid in the construction of the canal shall not be conveyed until the canal has made such progress as shall satisfy these signatory powers. At the present time no conveyance of any of these lands has been made by either of the two Republics. The title is wholly inchoate; it rests in equity, and the equity can not be enforced because the fact upon which it depends, the construction and progress of the canal, is not made thus far to appear satisfactorily to those Governments who have at present the title to these lands. What title, then, has this corporation in this work? Sir, it does not own the land over which the canalis to run. That is provided for in another section. It only has an easement—that is, the right to the building of the canal over such lands. It does not own the land it may get as a subsidy from the two Republics to aid in the construction of the work. They have never parted with their title. It does not have a title to the easement over the lands, a completed title, because that depends upon construction and completion.

completed title, because that depends upon construction and completion.

What real property, then, has this company? None whatever. What personal property? They have no personal property. The personal license to enter upon the lands traversed by their route and build the canal—of what value is that? When will it ripen even into an easement? Is it now the subject of mortgage? Is it now the subject of pledge or of lien? Certainly it is not. It is only a license, carefully guarded and restricted, to the person named—the Nicaragua Canal Company—and also carefully guarded and restricted against the United States and other governments—a personal, a peculiar, a restricted license to do this work—and, while doing it, not to be subject to private action, not to be treated as a public enemy. This is the only right which the canal company owns, and it is a right neither in law nor in equity transferable. It is not mortgagable to the United States nor to any other government. Their mortgage reads that all the right and title of this canal company and all the personal and real property, as well as the right to be a corporation, may be mortgaged to secure the guaranty of these bonds. I pass by the question with respect to whether they can mortgage their right to be a corporation. Take that for granted. What else have they got to mortgage? What else have they got to pledge? A mortgage is a transfer, a conveyance of real estate; a mortgage is a transfer and conveyance of real estate; a mortgage is a transfer this fer and conveyance of an interest in real property. It is an in-choate conveyance. This treaty denies the right to transfer this choate conveyance. This treaty denies the right to transfer this concession, any of the lands, any of the incidents; and as a pledge or mortgage is a transfer, a transfer sought to be made by this act of Congress is in direct violation of the treaty, and the transfer of proprietary rights provided for in the pending bill is as direct a violation of the provisions of the treaty of cession as those in the bill with respect to the directorate.

I call also the attention of the Senate to Article LIV of the same treaty, to show what the ultimate title to the canal will be.

On the expiration of the nihety-nine years stipulated in this concession, or in the event of the forfeiture contained in the preceding article, the Republic shall enter upon possession in perpetuity of the canal, of works of art, light-houses, storehouses, stations, deposits, stores, and all the establishments used in the administration of the canal, without being obliged to pay any indemnity to the company.

But the company shall have the right, at the expiration of the aforesaid term of ninety-nine years, to the full enjoyment of the free use and control of the canal in the capacity of lessee, with all the privileges and advantages granted by the said concession, and for another term of ninety-nine years, on the condition of paying 25 per cent of the annual net profits of the enterprise to the Government of the Republic, besides the dividends due to it for its shares in the capital stock.

At the expiration of this second term of ninety-nine years the Government shall enter into perpetual possession of the canal and other properties referred to in the first part of this article, including also in this possession all that which is excluded in the said first part, with the exception of the reserve and amortization funds. The failure to comply with any of the terms of the lease shall terminate it, and the State shall enter into possession of the canal and other works belonging to it, in accordance with the provisions of the preceding paragraph.

This canal corporation, if the canal were constructed and comoleted, has only an easement in it for ninety-nine years. After that they may become a lessee. Their easement terminates as such. They then obtain a lease upon the canal, but that lease is loaded with the provision that 25 per cent of the profits shall go to the Republic of Nicaragua and to the Republic of Costa Rica, respec-

This treaty of concession is one in perpetuity, at least for the term of one hundred and ninety-eight years. It lasts a very long time. They wish us to step into their shoes. I ask any Senator whether he wishes to undertake to do this for our interest, to undertake the guaranty of this enormous subsidy under the condition that during the period for which it may be occupied—the latter period for which it may be occupied—we shall pay 25 per cent of the profits to these two Republics of Central America?

The promoters of this scheme have said a great deal about its profitableness, about the rich returns which are to come from it. Sir, nobody has estimated, or can estimate with any certainty, what its profits will be; but if there be any net profits, 25 per cent of them, one-quarter of the whole amount, is already foreclosed and mortgaged during the entire second term to these two Republics. That was the provision which this corporation easily acceded to. They seem to have been anxious to procure this concession. They took very little thought about to-morrow, and especially about the remote to-morrow. But when we of the Government of the United States are to be subrogated, as it is said, to their rights, we must also consider that we shall be sub-rogated to their burthens. And I do not believe that it is for the interest of any government in the world—I am certain it is not for the interests of this Government—to be subrogated to any rights which shall entail upon us the obligation to pay one-quarter of the profits of the canal to these two Republics of Central America

As showing the very sensitive feeling with which these two Republics regard the eminent domain now held by them and never abandoned, and that they do not cede the land over which the canal is to be built, I wish to call the attention of the Senate to Article XXXVII in the treaty of cession, showing the continua-tion of sovereignty, showing the perpetuity of the dominion of the Republics upon this canal route. Article XXXVII reads:

The Government shall establish all along the line of the canal included between the two terminal ports such police stations and revenue officers as in its judgment are necessary to preserve order in the region of the canal and for the observance of the fiscal laws of the Republic. All expenses incident to this service, including those of buildings, endowments, salaries, and allowances of employees, and transportation of the forces, shall be paid to the Government by the company on such terms and conditions as may be established, taking into consideration the requirements and necessities of such service. The company, however, shall have the power to establish guards and watchmen for the service of the canal and the enforcement of its regulations.

Here is a right reserved, and a continuous right reserved, on the part of the two Republics to police this canal, to police it by military force, to police it by the erection of stations and buildings, quasi fortifications, and to charge the expenditures occasioned by this exercise of their police power to the company, and make it a charge upon the receipts. It is not only in itself a very important and expensive charge, but it shows the design, the emphatic purpose of the two Republics not to abandon their sovereignty, not to abandon their dominion, not to abandon their eminent right as owners of this land, but to keep it, to preserve it, to reserve it, to save it, to secure it, at the expense and charge of the Maritime Canal Company of Nicaragua.

What, then, is this proposition for a mortgage? Mr. President, it is a proposition to mortgage a thing which the company do not own, and never can own; it is a proposition to mortgage real estate or personal property which the company, if they did own, could not mortgage to us or to any other government. Such a mortgage would not be worth the paper it is written on.

There is another item thought to be of very great importance in this discussion—in the former discussions at least of this question—and I had almost forgotten it. It is the railroad. The company had the right to build a railroad for the purposes of construction upon the same easement which the canal is to traverse. I wish to call the attention of the Senate to the character and nature of that property, and especially to its present condition and value. I will also read in this connection a description of some other personal property down there, which the engineers seem to have regarded as the property of the company. I read from page 40 of the report made by Colonel Ludlow and his associates October 31, 1895:

A large amount of property of various kinds lay out of doors and in an advanced condition of decay—numerous steel boats and launches, hulls and machinery rusted through; a pile of 8-inch spiral riveted pipe, intended to bring water from a reservoir to the barracks and quarters; spare shears for the dredges; two or three tugs and small steamboats, past all service; several scows and lighters rotten and sunk. The five dredges bought by the company from the Panama Canal dredging contractor lay in the harbor on the bottom uncared for, with rusted marchinery and woodwork dropping. Three locomotives under cover are probably unserviceable. The machine shop, having been used to a certain extent by the river navigation company for occasional repairs to their vessels, was capable of service, but, with the exception of the large buildings, little else could be considered as representing any value.

This is a part, I suppose, of the personal property of the corporation. So the engineers regard it. Then the engineers go on to

While giving a brief account of the plant and constructions at Grey Town Harbor, where all the work connected with the actual canal building was done, it will be convenient to include the railroad which extends inland for a distance of 114 miles along the line of the canal to between the sites of Locks

Harbor, where all the work connected with the actual canal building was done, it will be convenient to include the railroad which extends inland for a distance of 11st miles along the line of the canal to between the sites of Locks 1 and 2.

The Board made a trip over the road on a hand car propelled with poles and the results were of interest and value.

The single track is standard gange, laid with 60-pound steel rails, from Pittsburg, and 2,64 ties to the mile, and was built between May, 1890, and February, 1892.

The ground covered is flat and swampy for the greater part of the distance, and across the wetter portion the roadbed was formed by first cribbing roughly, then laying a temporary track and filling with sand, most of which was brought from the canal cut at Grey Town. Most of this work was done by men working up to their waists in water.

Notwithstanding the exposure to the immense rainfall, the roadbed when examined was found in fairly good condition, and the rails gave little evidence of corrosion, but the ties were gone. Those first laid near Grey Town were of North Carolina pine, creosoted with 12 pounds of wood oil to the cubic foot, and were apparently about in the same condition as would be that of uncreosoted ties laid for three or four years in the States. Farther out, pine ties from Bluefields, not creosoted, were much decayed. The remainder, of native timber, were entirely rotten. With a few exceptions all the ties must be replaced before the road can be used.

Four and one-half miles out is a clay fill, standing well, with little indications of wash, and leading to the bridge crossing the connection between the Benard Lagoon and the San Juanillo River.

The bridge is a pile structure of ordinary type, about 125 feet long, 4 piles to the bent, braced and capped. The noticeable peculiarity of the bridge was that it had been stayed both up and down stream with wire ropes secured to trees. Upon inquiry it was learned that the piles had been driven through 70 feet of soft mud. As the locality of the lagoon through which the canal mine passes, the subsurface conditions, if continued in the lagoon, are very unfavorable features for canal building. Beyond the bridge crossing is the first clay cut, and farther on both cuts and fills are numerous.

The cuts have heights up to 20 feet, with slopes from vertical to 45 degrees, and in most cases stood with an extraordinary stability under the tropic downpour. At several the original tool marks were still visible, both pick and steam shovel. In several others there had been slides, but none of great extent. The ditches were generally clean, and in but few points had the wash reached the rail. The surface of the cuts was in some cases protected by vines, but in most was quite bare unless for a minute lichen.

As these clay cuts had been exposed for over three years to the severest rainfall of record on this continent, and were found in better condition on the whole than an exposure in the United States for a single winter would have left them, it is evident that the absence of frost more than balances the tropic downpour, and for the materials in question constructions can quite as safely be designed as in the United States.

A train of flat cars standing at siding was nearly covered with vines and creepers and the woodwork far advanced in decay. On the other hand, the natural growth in the roadbed was unexpectedly slight, although in two or three cases the camebrakes had invaded the track.

On the whole, taking into account the condition of the sand dumps at Grey Town and of the clay cuts and fills on the line of the railroad, it is evident that the heavy rainfall is not necessarily as formidable an obstacle to outdoor constructions as might be supposed, although the slight works in question must not be too confidently accepted as safe precedents for much heavier constructions, and, with work in clay, an accumulation of water must always be guarded against.

It was part of the theory often announced here of the Maritime

It was part of the theory often announced here of the Maritime Nicaraguan Canal Company that the construction of this railroad would make a very valuable feeder to business, both to the commerce of Grey Town and to the interior, without reference to the construction of the canal at all; that a town would be built up at this terminus at the foothills, and that the way travel and the way freight would be very considerable; that the rich lands adjoining the right of way of the canal would in this way be settled and colonized, for it will be recollected, sir, that a million acres in this very neighborhood of public lands belonging to the Republics of Costa Rica and Nicaragua are to be conveyed upon the progress and completion of the canal to this company as a subsidy. It is said that these acres are very fertile lands; that they will be of the value of $5 an acre, or probably more, when the canal is completed. Mr. President, this railroad has been completed since 1892. It runs right through these lands which make the subsidy. These lands are fertile; they sustain vast virgin forests of mahog-any, redwood, and other valuable timber indigenous to the forest; but there is no crop ever grown upon them; no part of them has ever been tilled; no part of them has ever been colonized or settled. They are under water; they remain under water, like the canal itself; they are submarine, and it is impossible that farms could be made there. Public lands, of course, they are. They have been public lands for one hundred and fifty years. They are open to entry at 50 cents an acre, and have been for a century and half

No corporation, no individual has ventured at any time to enter upon the problem of reducing to cultivation these public lands of the Republics situated between the Caribbean Sea and the foothills, the place of the terminal of this railroad. What is the condition of this railroad, which was to be accompanied with traffic, with commerce, with the incidents of progress and of business? Totally useless at present, the track being grown over in some parts by cane and in the other parts by vines, by undergrowth, the result of tropical vegetation. Sir, I have not seen any railroad in this country or in any other civilized country within the track of commerce on which a canebrake grew, or on which traffic has been impeded by vines or underbrush. The truth is, there is no settlement and can be none along the line of this road. No corporation, no individual has ventured at any time to enter there is no settlement and can be none along the line of this road. There is no value in the land, there never can be any, and there is There is no value in the land, there never can be any, and there is no value in the railroad which it is proposed to mortgage—less value, if possible, than in the part of this canal, a very small one, which the company claims has been completed. This railroad is situate, as I said before, upon the right of way, but the railroad is simply a parallel line of steel rails. It is not and never has been a road in actual use or profitable operation. That is one of the principal items named here and insisted upon as a guaranty the subsidy of $100,000,000.

Is it possible that this company is not aware of the condition of that road? Is it possible that this company has not heard of this extraordinary trip, without parallel, a trip on a railroad on which the car was propelled with poles? Certainly the Maritime Canal Company must be well acquainted with this species of travel (it is here in the written report, made by the Government engineers), this method of transportation, and this method of communication. by poling a railroad car upon a sunken road over rotten ties. That is the franchise which is to constitute part of the security of the United States for making this stupendous subvention.

Mr. President, it has become a part of the regular profession of operators upon public and private confidence to deal in what are called bogus mortgages, spurious mortgages. One of these operators comes to a town, sometimes even to a large city. He is a man extremely prepossessing in appearance, with great plausibility of address. He has what he claims are notes, mortgage notes, given for purchase money of land which he was obliged to sell at a great sacrifice, and consequently his paper for purchase money is gilt-edged, and it does not exceed one-half the value of the lands mentioned in his mortgage. He exhibits this mortgage and these notes to a person very credulous. That person is not in the habit of using the cantion which an attorney or other expert would in regard to such transactions, and although one can hardly conceive of a large sum of money being transferred upon such pretenses, yet every week the newspapers give an account of just such a transaction—the successful looting of some local curb broker by transaction—the successful looting of some local curb broker by means of a spurious mortgage and mortgage notes.

But that transaction differs very essentially from the one which is set out with great care in this bill. In the transaction to which I have alluded the purchaser of the spurious notes and mortgages does not become aware that the holder of them and the person who is supposed to have executed them never, either of them, had any title or interest in the mortgaged real estate, that the whole thing is a frank and en immosition. He learns that all about it. thing is a fraud and an imposition. He learns that, all about it, all the particulars, but he does not learn them until he has parted with his money.

Now, this operation proposed in the pending bill differs from the one of which I have spoken in the fact that the company advises, not on the face of the bill, but on the face of their treaty charter, upon the face of the report submitted here, that they have no title to the land—no interest in it—that they have no sort of interest, and have none which they could transfer to us or to anyone else. They ask us, with our eyes open, knowing the security is straw, knowing that the security is worthless, knowing that the security they offer us is dross, utterly valueless, to give them $100,000,000 and say, "We will guarantee the payment by a mortgage, by a lien upon securities utterly without value." That is the difference between the operations.

Now, sir, the first operation, it seems to me, has always been extremely harsh. It might depend somewhat upon the want of caution in the person who parted with his money without investigation. But the operation proposed to us here has no such excuse or justification for its acceptance, for we are advised in the same breath that the security is Peter Funk, and that the parties are nearly related to that distinguished citizen. I hardly see how anyone can read the bill seriously. It provides in all particulars, just as if it were an honest transaction, that the mortgage shall be acknowledged; that the mortgage shall be recorded; that it shall be recorded in the Office of the Secretary of State of the United States; that it shall be recorded in the capitals of the two countries, Costa Rica and Nicaragua, when the whole investment would not even pay for the original draft of it. The whole investment would not sell to-day in any market for the expenses of preparing and acknowledging the papers. At such a proposition as this, it seems to me, impudence itself would stand aghast.

Since the last discussion of this question in the Senate we have had a report by three officers especially appointed to inspect the line of the Maritime Nicaragua Canal Company with reference to its practical execution and feasibility and the cost of construction and completion. It is the first disinterested inspection and report that we have had of this line. We had in 1874, under the Administration of General Grant, quite a full and disinterested inspection of the Nicaragua route, but not of this line, and I wish to call attention for a few minutes to sections of the report made in There is a perpetual claim, utterly groundless, a claim repeated by iteration and reiteration, that the Maritime Canal Company of Nicaragua were the first to demonstrate the practicability of this work, and that as a premium for such discovery, a reward for such exploration, they must have a large sum of money, for which they have now three times asked the Congress of the United

I wish to show, sir, that this claim is wholly unfounded; that twenty-two years ago what they claim as their discovery was well known and was reported as a fact ascertained under a commission appointed by the Government. This commission was known as the Admiral Ammen commission. He was a member and president of the commission. The commission was seven in number; three of them were from naval and military life, four of them from civil life, and they were accompanied by two engineers, Colonel McFarland, of the Army, and Captain Heuer, also of the United States Engineer Corps, who had charged upon them the particular details of the inspection and survey. They went by virtue of an act of Congress under the suggestion of the President—General Grant. They made their report in December, 1875. I wish to read a portion of their report, its conclusion, because it bears upon the question of exploration and discovery to which I have alluded.

First. The general scheme is good, and the route is certainly practicable.

That is their conclusion. That is the fact which the Nicaragua Canal Company say they discovered first. That is what they claim as their patent. That is what they claim as preeminent merit, that they determined the practicability of this route. In December, 1875, twenty-one years ago, the Government commission reported as follows:

First. The general scheme is good, and the route is certainly practicable. Second. Further examinations need to be made of the country in rear of the proposed dams in the San Juan River, this question affecting not the proposed dams in the Proposed work, but the probable cost of it.

Third. Additional and extensive borings need to be made in order to determine the nature of the material to be excavated.

Fourth. The proposed harbor at Brito should be enlarged.

Fifth. The harbor at San Juan del Norte or Grey Town can not be restored, and the proposed remedy is inadequate. A harbor nust be constructed here in deep water, and the canal be led out to it.

The Maritime Canal Company of Nicaragua was born in 1889. The Maritime Canal Company of Micaragua was born in 1889. Nearly twenty years before they were born, twenty years before their eyes, or the eyes of any of their agents or engineers or subordinates, had looked upon this route, the United States Government, by a commission, reported that it was certainly practicable. But they reported also that it would cost, subject to contingencies, $140,000,000. The report was made to General Grant, and by him transmitted to the Congress of the United States

When the final estimate was submitted to the President, the cost of the work being estimated at $140,000,000, President Grant received, heard, and considered their report, and took no further steps in the matter. Was General Grant unpatriotic? Would any person claim that he was indifferent to the interests of the United States in this great improvement, this vast amendment to interoceanic communication? No, sir; he was a man thoroughly patriotic, of intense devotion to the interests of the country, not only as a citizen and a soldier, but as Chief Magistrate; a man of great patience, great persistence, gifted with silence beyond the ordinary manner of men, of great caution.

I agree with what the honorable chairman of the select committee said the other day-General Grant was the author of that phrase, now so common, that we must have at this point "an American canal under American control." He had conceived and justly conceived that if this project was in any way practical, commercially feasible, he would enter into negotiations with the two Republics and directly undertake the construction and completion of the Nicaraguan Canal. But when he had received this report, examined it, especially the cost estimate, subject to contingencies, although he was the author of the phrase spoken of, yet that policy— an American canal under American control—was dominated by that other splendid policy of silence. He never made any allusion to the project afterwards. He never made any mention of it in any message; he never took a further step toward its prosecution. The recent report to which I have alluded was made by Colonel

Ludlow, of the Army, Captain Endicott, of the Navy, and Alfred Noble, a citizen of the United States and an engineer of long and large experience in work of this character. I wish to call attention to this report and some of its principal features, comparing it with the report made by the company, as the report is confined to an inspection and estimated cost of the execution of the work upon the line which they have adopted. For it must be recollected that under the treaty of cession the Maritime Canal Company were bound after the fashion of our statutory regulations in When a railroad wishes to condemn property or run a line, either through public lands or private lands, it has as a condition precedent to file profiles and maps of the route. It is necessary in order to extinguish the right of eminent domain and subject to easement public lands, and it is still more necessary where the right of way traverses private property. For this reason the maps and profiles of the Nicaraguan Canal Company were made the basis of this examination and the estimated cost by the commission composed of the gentlemen of whom I have spoken. I wish now, in the first place, to say that there are three very important and very expensive branches of the work which are not noticed in the report of the Government commission at all, simply for the reason that they are not found upon the profile or map of the Maritime Canal Company, not because the Maritime Canal Company were not obliged to finish and execute these portions, just as they are to make the main trunk of the canal, but because they have not submitted to the Government maps and profiles of the same.

They knew that the execution of this work, the omitted work, would largely increase the expense and the estimates, and they seem to have suppressed those three works of which I have spoken. That is the reason for the litigation which is pending and may be pending for a long time and may be pending now in the courts between the corporation and the Republic of Costa Rica and the Republic of Nicaragua. The first one of the omitted or lapsed works to which I call attention is the Managua Canal. Managua is the capital of the Republic of Costa Rica, situate upon the lake of Managua, and while the two Republics were bargaining about the construction of this Nicaragua Canal they inserted in the cessionary treaty for their own exclusive benefit—and we will be bound by that provision-an obligation to build a canal between Lake Managua and Lake Nicaragua, in order to place the capital of the Republic within reach of the ocean terminus of this canal; in other words, to make substantially a seaport of the town and city of Managua, which is now only a lake port. I wish to call attention to that provision of the cession:

Within three years, to be counted from the commencement of the work upon the interoceanic canal, the company—

That is, the Maritime Canal Company-

shall, at its own expense, construct a navigable canal between Lake Managua and the navigable part of the Tipitapa River, near Pasquier, of sufficient dimensions to admit of the free passage of vessels drawing 6 feet and of 150 feet in length. When completed, this canal shall be taken possession of by the Government of Nicaragua, and will be, after that date, the property of the Republic, which, by virtue of its ownership, shall be bound to bear all expenses required in the future for the service, maintenance, repair, and operation of the canal. But the company shall have the right to make use of it for all purposes useful for the maritime-canal enterprise.

There is a canal which is to be built and handed over ready for traffic, ready for commerce, by the Maritime Canal Company as a part of the consideration for the grant of this concession. There is a provision which will be binding upon the United States. There is a provision as to which the pending bill is silent and the original act of incorporation is silent.

Mr. CAFFERY. Will the Senator from Indiana permit me to ask him whether or not any estimate has been made of the expense of digging the Managua Canal alone, to connect the city of Managua with Lake Nicaragua?

Mr. TURPIE. No, sir; there has never been any estimate.
Mr. CAFFERY. It is an obligation, however, upon the part of the Nicaragua Canal Company to construct this particular canal?
Mr. TURPIE. Yes, sir. It binds the assignees of the Maritime Canal Company also. It binds anyone who takes this contract.
It will bind the United States if we could take it, if it were possible to accept it. If it were lawful for the experiment is a second to the contract. ble to accept it. If it were lawful for the corporation to assign it or transfer it, they could not transfer it without its being subject to this obligation to construct the Managuan Canal, 21 miles long, connecting the two lakes of Managua and Nicaragua.

There has not only been no estimate, but there never has been a scientific survey of the expense of the work. The evidence in these reports will show that the Managua River—that is the name of the river connecting the two lakes, Managua and Nicaragua—is sometimes a dry bed and sometimes a wide stream containing a considerable volume of water: that a great part of it is rock bottom, and that consequently this work is going to be quite expensive, and it is just as certain that it will be as obligatory as expensive. The Republics are not going to surrender the right to have this work finished, completed, handed over to Nicaragua ready for use and occupation.

The Senate will take notice that there is a limitation of time in respect to its construction: "Within three years, to be counted from the commencement of the work." Those three years have elapsed. The Senate will take notice that in the conditions of elapsed. The Senate will take notice that in the conditions of forfeiture one condition is a failure on the part of the company to perform the work mentioned in Article XIV, to complete and construct the Managua Canal as a part of the canal system. The consequence is that by law they have already forfeited everything. In equity they have already surrendered everything. In reason they have already, either voluntarily or negligently—not by main force—given up and abandoned their contract and its principal provisions. They have not pretended to construct the Managua Canal.

Another one of these yest works, that is works which was all a surrendered to construct the surrendered t

Another one of these vast works, that is, works which we would Another one of these vast works, that is, works which we would be bound to perform under this treaty of cession, is the harbor at San Carlos and the harbor at Lajas. There are four harbors necessary for the successful operation of the canal. Two of these are external, one at Grey Town, on the Atlantic coast, and the other at Brito, on the Pacific coast. Two of them are internal, one at San Carlos, on the eastern side of Lake Nicaragua, where the canal enters the lake on its way from the Atlantic, and the other at Lajas, on the western side of Nicaragua, where it leaves the lake to enter the Pacific. I wish to read the section of the treaty of cession upon that subject:

ARTICLE XVI.

ARTICLE XVI.

The company shall construct, at its expense, and maintain in good condition two large ports, one in the Atlantic and one in the Pacific, to serve as termini of the canal, each of them to have a light-house of the first order. It shall also construct at the two points on the borders of the lake where the canal disembogues two ports of lesser size, with the respective light-houses. The company is also obliged to maintain and improve said ports by means of dredges, dikes, piers, embankments, or any other works it may deem advisable, having always in view the good service of the traffic through the

The report of the Government engineers shows no sort of estimate of the cost of the Managua Canal, the cost of the harbor at San Carlos, nor of the harbor at Lajas. I think that any estimate is purely a matter of conjecture. It is very certain, however, from the evidence given that the harbor at San Carlos will be very expensive. That is the place where the course of the proposed canal enters and leaves the River San Juan upon its way to the Pacific.

The evidence shows that from where the canal disembogues on the western side of the lake for 14 miles out into the offing the water shoals to 7 feet, and that a mud deposit, pure mud, is for that 14 miles of the varying depth of from 30 to 50 feet. So in the construction of a harbor at San Carlos, a lesser harbor than the one at the ocean ports, but certainly large enough to afford shelter and anchorage for the very largest-sized vessels, a vessel of war drawing 30 feet, with 45 or 50 feet beam, nearly 600 feet in length, the excavation of a harbor suited for the anchorage of such vestels that the programme of the programme. sels at that port will be an extremely expensive work. It will cost the excavation of the acreage whatever it may be, 40 or 50 acres of the mud deposit of which I have spoken, and then some way of securing the mud taken out from returning into the excavation and harbor. There is not a more difficult problem of engineering on the entire route. Yet it is omitted entirely in the estimate of the Nicaraguan Canal Company, and although it is mentioned, it has not been estimated by the Government report made last December.

The same thing may be said with reference to the harbor at Lajas. The difficulty there is of quite a different character, but still it exists. At Lajas the water shoals with a rock bottom, the still it exists. same as that of the Managua River, and under water 3 or 4 feet deep excavation will have to be made of the lake bottom large enough to make a harbor which, under the terms of this concession, will accommodate the traffic and commerce and the shipping of an interoceanic canal.

I will not attempt to estimate either of these items—the cost of the Managua canal and the cost of the Lajas harbor, or the cost of the harbor at San Carlos; but I do say that they are specially and expressly provided for in the treaty of cession, and that there is no act of Congress which can relieve us from the obligation to complete and construct them.

I say it is an irrational request, an unreasonable demand, a thoroughly wild proposition, that we should undertake to guarantee the performance of this work and enter upon its completion and construction without even an estimate of the cost of three of the principal items necessary in its prosecution. I say further that a corporation that will come here with such a proposition, so thoroughly devoid of its essential elements, so thoroughly bare of the things necessary to determine its prudence, its expediency, ought not to be heard or considered with reference to the granting of a subvention of this amount.

I wish now to enter into some comparison of the two reports— the report made by the Maritime Canal Company and the report made by the Government engineers, the first report made to us of the practicability and estimated cost of the work by disinterested

Grey Town Harbor is provided for in the cession not any more than the lake harbors to which I have alluded. For Grey Town Harbor the company found it impossible not to make an estimate. They seem to have been aware of the fact that before the canal would be of any use there must be a way of reaching it from the ocean. I wish to read something with reference to the description of Grey Town Harbor, from report of the Government engineers, on page 85:

1. Grey Town Harbor.—The entrance to the harbor as proposed by the company is too near the angle of the coast line, and, as is indicated on the accompanying map (Plate XVIII), should be moved eastward about a mile and a half, the present lagoon to be used as the inner harbor and connected with the entrance by a canal with a bottom width of 200 feet. The harbor throughout should be dredged to 30 feet below low water, and its depth increased to 6 fathoms at the entrance.

That is the general conclusion with respect to the dimensions and character of the harbor at Grey Town, a very important point, because it stands at the very entrance of the canal. The estimate of the board for the completion of that work, shown on page 96 of the report, is $4,480,000. The estimate of the Maritime Canal Company for the completion of the same work, the harbor at Grey Town, is $2,151,000. The item for dredging necessary in the Grey Town Harbor, under the Government estimate, is $3,000,000. The item for dredging alone, under the report by the Government engineers, exceeds the whole expense of the estimate by the Nicaragua Canal Company. The item for stone pitching is $300,000.

ragua Canal Company. The item for stone pitching is $300,000.
I should like to inquire the meaning of the term "stone pitching" or to call the attention of the Senate to it, because in the estimate of the Canal Company it was said that the dump taken out of the harbor would make embankments, docks, and sides itself sufficient to withstand the tides, the waves, the storms, and the necessary friction which follows in the wake of vessels moving in a harbor. This commission advises a large expenditure for stone pitching, and they advise us what that stone pitching is. It is a revetment of stone reaching from the top of the designed embankment down below the water, so that the embankment of earth is to be lined with stone, and they report that it is absolutely necessary not only on account of natural conditions, but to resist the action of the water disturbed by the wheels and propellers especially used in steam navigation.

I call attention to the enimus—the very manifest enimus—

I call attention to the animus—the very manifest animus—which lies concealed in the difference between these two estimates. The Nicaragua Maritime Canal Company, in estimating the amount of money necessary to make the harbor there, estimate it at $2,151,000; to be simply expended without the hope, without the chance of a harbor being constructed; to be wasted in an abortive attempt to construct a harbor.

I come now to the harbor at Brito.

Mr. VILAS. Before the Senator passes to that point, I should like to ask him if I am correct in understanding that there are five items which the Maritime Canal Company's engineer entirely omitted from consideration and which the Government engineers found absolutely necessary to include in respect to that harbor?

Mr. TURPIE. There are three. I come now to the harbor of Brito, page 102 of the Government report. That is a harbor at the Pacific terminal of the canal. It is called a harbor now by way of courtesy. There is not even a place for a harbor. It is a straight beach slightly indented in the general line of the coast. The harbor is to be made by building solid walls out into the water partly, and by excavating the land on the landward side That is the plan both of the Government engineers and of the That is the plan both of the Government engineers and of the canal company engineers. The company's estimate for this work was $1,920,000. The board's estimate is $4,398,000. The dredging provided for by the estimate of the Government engineers amounts to $1,687,000, lacking only about $300,000 of the whole sum estimated by the company. The stone estimated for in the breakwaters of this harbor, the means by which the harbor is to be made, by which the water is to be fenced, if you will allow me the expression, is estimated by the Government engineers at $2,535,000—about half a million more than the company engineers estimated for the whole work. Here is the same purpose of endless mated for the whole work. Here is the same purpose of endless expenditure without the slightest prospect of completion or return.

I come now to another large division of the work, called Lake Nicaragua, page 99. The company's estimate of that work is $1,969,000. The board's estimate is $3,907,000. The estimate of the Government engineers is very nearly twice that of the board of the Nicaragua Canal Company. These are very important works. They relate to the extension of the canal into the lake at San Carlos and Lajas. The canal proper is estimated for. The barbors are not even mentioned.

harbors are not even mentioned.

I come now to the San Juan River, on page 99 of the Government report. There are about 69 miles of this canal which are proposed to be constructed by the use of the San Juan River as a channel of navigation. There are four principal rapids in the river, and the estimate to be made and the work to be done is to remove the rapids, the stone in them, so as to admit vessels drawing 30 feet, to make the channel wide enough and deep enough for ocean vessels of the largest size. That estimate, according to the company, is $1,975,000. According to the Government board's estimate it is $14,866,000, a difference of $13,000,000. I think that is a showing which exhibits the enormity of suppression that was designed in the report and estimate of the Maritime Nicaragua Canal Company. They could not have had the slightest idea of giving to the Senate or the country any conception of the real amount of money necessary for the construction of this canal and the completion of the enterprise.

I will admit with great willingness that men may make a mistake in estimates, that men may make a serious mistake in the statement of accounts, that men, even the most skillful, may possibly make mistakes in the estimate of costs; but a mistake in such a particular of $100,000 would be a large one. It would be one, I think, that would attract everybody's attention. It would one, I think, that would attract everybody's attention. It would be one that would cause comment upon the carelessness of the engineer, and cast even suspicion on the character of his work. But this is not a mistake of $100,000. Here is no error even of one million, or two million, or three million dollars, but an error of $13,000,000 in such a plain job as taking stone from the bottom of a river, every inch and foot of which was capable of being measured with the foot, with the rule, with the level, and known. They knew what the depth of the canal would be; they knew how much water floated over the stone, and how much stone under the water must be excavated before the water could take the place where the stone was situated. There does not seem to the place where the stone was situated. There does not seem to be any demand here for engineering skill; there is no overwhelming necessity for engineering ability; but there is a demand for common honesty and conscience in making this estimate, and that demand is not supplied by anything in the history of the Nicaragua Maritime Canal Company. They have not the material to supply it. They talk about their abundant resources. It takes some conscience to make an estimate to do good work. That material is wholly lacking in this work.

I come to another principal division of the work—the Ochoa Dam, pages 98 and 99 of the Government report. The Ochoa Dam is a structure—perhaps I ought to use more guarded language—it is a proposed structure, an anticipated dream in stone of a dam across the San Juan River at Ochoa. It is wholly fanciful so far. The estimate by the company of the cost of this structure, this dam across the San Juan River at Ochoa, is $977,278. It embraces seven different items in the estimate; but that is the total. It is less than $1,000,000. The San Juan is a great river, delivers many thousand cubic feet of water every moment, has a tropical current, swift, treacherous, subject to enormous floods, having tributaries nearly as large as itself, every way difficult of control. It is one of the wildest streams—not tame, not docile. The proposition to dam it is a very bold one; the conception of retarding and delaying the delivery of its waters is a very bold one, but not impossible. Time and money will build the Ochoa Dam, but not for less than $1,000,000.

The estimate of the Government board of engineers upon the cost of the Ochoa Dam is $4,000,000—four times as much as the estimate of the Nicaraguan Canal Company. There is not an item which I have noticed so far, and there will be none in the company. tem which I have noticed so far, and there will be none in the future, in the sequel, which does not display the same animus of concealing the cost of the work and of hiding the responsibility of the United States in undertaking this guaranty for furnishing the subsidy for its construction. Every single estimate was made, as these two reports show, with that plain proposition, purpose, and intention, for no corporation could have made repeatedly these and intention, for no corporation could have made repeatedly these enormous errors without a motive, and that motive is expressed in the provision, the words, the syllables, and especially the figures, $100,000,000 of the pending bill.

I come next to what is called the La Flor Dam, and I wish to read some description of it. I read from page 74 of the report of the Government engineers. I will, in order to attract attention to this express of the report of the covernment engineers. to this perusal—I do not know whether I shall be successful in doing that—state that there is no history of engineering, no history of estimates, no report made to any government upon the surface of the planet which has such an extraordinary character in it as the report submitted upon the subject of the La Flor Dam.

the report submitted upon the subject of the La Flor Dam.

At a place called La Flor, 3.8 miles from the Pacific terminus and 13.9 miles from the lake, the valley of the Rio Grande is narrowed by two steep hills to a width, on the valley floor, of 1.600 feet, at an elevation of 40 feet above mean tide, and a width of 2,000 feet between the summit-level contours of elevation 110. The company proposes to build a dam at this point of sufficient height to raise the water to elevation 110, thus extending the summit level, as already stated, to within 3.8 miles of the Pacific, forming a capacious basin of some 4,000 acres in the valleys of the Rio Grande and Tola. This arrangement would facilitate navigation by substituting a basin for 4.6 miles of canal, and would solve the question of the disposal of the flood waters of the Tola by permitting their free discharge into the basin.

As originally designed, the La Flor or Tola Dam, as it is indifferently known, was, like the Ochoa Dam, to be a "rock fill," and to be constructed in the same way, with a weir on the crest for the discharge of the Rio Grande drainage.

drainage.

This plan has been modified more recently by providing a solid concrete core for the dam, backed with a stone and earth embankment on both sides, and locating a weir in the saddle of an adjacent hill.

This weir is to discharge the drainage of the valley, and, as the board is lately informed, about 60 per cent of the surplus discharge of the lake watershed also.

The question as to what disposition to make of the drainage during the instruction of the dam or its masonry core has not yet been fully considered construction that by the company.

The La Flor Dam, per se, is a much more formidable construction than that proposed at Ochoa, in regard both to its volume and the head of water it has to sustain.

Upon these facts the board of Government engineers deems the project of a 90-foot dam impracticable, and omits altogether the consideration of its construction. They do not submit any estimate for the construction of the La Flor Dam. They say that the design is not worthy of consideration. They do, however, submit an estimate for the cost of the work upon what they call the lower level, omitting the La Flor Dam entirely from the scheme of the improvement. I read again from page 87 upon the same

Thorough search should be made in the vicinity of the site now proposed for the Ochoa Dam for the most advantageous location of the structure, and the full nature of the foundations and the shore connections be exhaustively ascertained.

10. The Lajas-Rio Grande route, adopted by the company, to connect the lake with the Pacific, is preferable to any other that has been examined. The information with reference to the site of the proposed La Flor Damindicates that its construction is impracticable, and an alternative low-level route, which offers no special difficulties in construction, avoids any necessity for it. This alternative line may follow either the right or left bank in the Rio Grande Valley from a point 9.2 miles distant from the lake, which would constitute the western limit of the summit level. The northern or right-bank route has been located by the company. The southern or left-bank route should be fully located and bored to determine its relative merit. It has the advantage of avoiding complication with the discharge from the Tola watershed and the cost of diverting the Upper Rio Grande, and the disadvantage of requiring more diversions of the Rio Grande in the main valley.

I have read extensively from these reports for the purpose of showing that in the opinion of the board of Government engineers the project of the La Flor Dam is thoroughly impracticable and not to be considered.

I now call attention to the estimate of the Nicaraguan Canal Company for the La Flor Dam upon their scheme, which is $1,306,-Company for the La Flor Dam upon their scheme, which is $1,306,670. They propose to throw that much money away; and the report goes on to show that after it had been demonstrated that the route by the La Flor Dam is thoroughly impracticable, the company yet prefers it, and declines to abandon it. It is the map and profile of the company which will control the line upon which the work is to be executed. It will not be the directors who will have any possible control of that matter. They will have nothing to say; they will not have anything to do about it. It will not be the United States engineers who will prepare the estimates. The main line will be that which has been heretofore reported on the map and profile of the canals to the Governments of the two Republics, and approved by them, as was required by the treaty of map and profile of the canals to the Governments of the two Republics, and approved by them, as was required by the treaty of cession, to which I have alluded. The Nicaraguan Canal Company filed this map and profiles six years ago in the capitals of the two Republics, making the La Flor Dam project a part of that map and profile. It is an unchangeable thing under this bill by any act of Congress. The project of the La Flor Dam was declared by our engineers to be thoroughly impracticable, and the company is aware of that, and yet it persists in not abandoning the original line.

Four thousand acres of reservoir are to be made, by which the level limit is to be raised to 110 feet—a reservoir exceeding the largest made in the United States, protected by earthen embankments, except the stone core, which is a little wall like a stone fence covered up with earth—a reservoir exceeding in size, and immensely exceeding in the volume of water to be contained in it, Croton or any of the reservoirs in the United States, is to be protected only by this work in clay, and that is insisted upon by the company after it has been declared to be an impossibility by officers of the Government. This is another instance of the penetrating, permeating dishonesty of these estimates, the dishonesty of this enterprise as undertaken by the correction

One reason they do not go on the low-level line is, as they claim, that it will be more expensive than the La Flor Dam. Of course it will, if they build the La Flor Dam under their estimate. The Government engineers have submitted a very careful estimate of all the expense upon the low-level line, which will avoid the La Flor folly. The La Flor Dam is a perfect key to the company's map and profile of the work. The whole eastern portion of the work rests on the La Flor Dam, yet to hide the $1,306,670, to conceal, to keep out of notice, to deprive the taxpayers of the knowledge of it, they will estimate and undertake an impossible work, thrusting into ambush more than one-half of the money it would require to finish one which would be safe and feasible.

The total estimate of the board, subject to contingencies to which I shall subsequently call the attention of the Senate, I find repeated in their report—the indefiniteness of the basis upon which the estimate is made, and the uncertainty and defects in the borings and other local examinations—subject to these contingencies, the estimate of the board of Government engineers is $133,000,000 for the completion of the canal. The estimate by the Maritime Canal Company was $66,000,000.

This appears from the conclusion of a report of the Government engineers, which is as follows:

20. The official estimate by the company of $66,466,880 is insufficient for the work. In several important cases the quantities must be greatly increased, and in numerous cases the unit prices do not make proper allowance for the difference in cost of work between the United States and Nicaragna.

21. The provisional estimate by the Board is $183,472,393. It should be understood that the existing data are inadequate as a basis for estimating the cost of many of the structures; some portions of the work may cost more, others less, but in the judgment of the board the entire project can be executed for about the total amount of its estimate.

22. For obtaining the necessary data for the formation of a final project, eighteen months' time, covering two dry seasons and an expenditure of $350,000, will be required.

WILLIAM LUDLOW,

WILLIAM LUDLOW,
Lieutenant-Colonel, Corps of Engineers, U. S. A.
MORDECAI T. ENDICOTT,
Civil Engineer, U. S. N.
ALFRED NOBLE,
Civil Engineer.

Mr. VILAS. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive basiness.

Mr. COCKRELL. One moment before that is done.

Mr. VILAS. I withdraw the motion.
Mr. COCKRELL. There are quite a number of unobjected pension cases on the Calendar, the consideration of which Senators are calling for now and then, and I suggest that the Senate proceed to consider those cas

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. DANIEL in the chair). Is there objection?

Mr. MORGAN. Mr. MORGAN. I do not want the Nicaraguan bill displaced. Mr. COCKRELL. Oh, no; it will be laid aside without prejudice

I do not know when the Senator from Indiana Mr. MORGAN. [Mr. Turpie] will close his remarks. I should like to ask him when he will conclude. Will the Senator likely occupy a longer mr. TURPIE. I do not know that I shall conclude to-morrow; but at this time I remind the honorable Senator that I can not definitely say

Mr. MORGAN. My inquiry was only in reference to the fact that when the Senator gets through his speech I propose to ask the Senate to fix a time to vote on the bill. I shall not do that while the Senator from Indiana has the floor.

Mr. CULLOM. If the Senator from Indiana has concluded his speech, I ask leave to call up the legislative, executive, and judicial appropriation bill.

Mr. TURPIE. I have not concluded my speech, and said so.
I retain the floor with the liberty of resuming, by the courtesy of the Senate, to-morrow. I have concluded for the present.

Mr. CULLOM. I understood the Senator had closed his remarks for the day.

Mr. TURPIE. Yes, sir; for to-day.

Mr. CULLOM. I therefore move, as I understand there is no Senator on the floor, that we proceed to the consideration of the legislative, executive, and judicial appropriation bill.

Mr. MILLS. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business. We have some business of that kind to attend to, and we had better do it this evening.

Mr. VILAS. I withdrew the motion that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business only upon the understand-ing that the arrangement such as was asked by the Senator from Missouri [Mr. COCKRELL] would be made.

Mr. COCKRELL. That was, to consider unobjected pension cases on the Calendar.

cases on the Calendar.

Mr. VILAS. If those bills can not be proceeded with, I think I am entitled to the floor to renew my motion.

Mr. CULLOM. I hope the Senator will not insist upon that. The legislative, executive, and judicial appropriation bill was very nearly concluded yesterday evening, and I should like to get it through the Senate as early as possible. I think it will take but very little time. I should myself like to have an executive session before we adjourn, but I believe the appropriation bill will not occupy so much time as to prevent that.

Mr. VILAS. I presume the Senator from Illinois will recall the fact that yesterday when this bill was taken up and considered with great rapidity, until some 118 pages were disposed of, the with great rapidity, until some 118 pages were disposed of, the Library matter was then laid over for the reason that Senators who were likely to be interested in its disposition were not present on account of the lateness of the hour. The same objection seems to obtain at this time.

Mr. CULLOM. I agree to what the Senator says, but we passed over certain amendments for the purpose of having a greater number of Senators present than were here at that time, and for the purpose also of allowing Senators to examine the amendments. Mr. STEWART. Let the bill be taken up in the morning hour to-morrow

Mr. CULLOM. If it may be understood that I may call up the bill in the morning hour to-morrow, I am willing to yield now.
Mr. COCKRELL. Oh, no.

Mr. CULLOM. I want to get the bill through the Senate. Mr. COCKRELL. I can not agree to it coming up in the morning hour to-morrow.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. HILL in the chair). is no agreement reached by Senators, the Chair will entertain any motion that is proper.

Mr. CULLOM. The Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. VILAS] states that he made the motion for an executive session, but yielded to the suggestion of the Senator from Missouri. Mr. COCKRELL. The Senator from Wisconsin yielded to me in order that we should take up the unobjected pension cases on the Calendar, so as to save the time of the Senate in being asked by different Senators to take up this and that particular pension bill.

Mr. CULLOM. We can take up the pension cases at almost any hour when an appropriation bill is not in the way. The appropriation bills have the right of way, and I should like to conclude the legislative appropriation bill as early as possible. I do not want to be too persistent about it, however.

Mr. VILAS. I do not wish for a moment to stand in the way of the consideration of the appropriation bill, but I think the Sen ator from Illinois will recognize that the very same reason which had caused him to request that the bill should be passed over last evening is just as operative at this time.

Mr. CULLOM. I think not. I think Senators are nearly all

Mr. VILAS. There are some Senators absent who are always particularly interested in the Library. Mr. CULLOM. They ought to be here.

INTERNATIONAL MONETARY CONFERENCE.

Mr. CHANDLER. I desire to make a suggestion, and that is, that at an early day I shall ask the Senate to act upon the bill (S. 3547) to provide for the representation of the United States by commissioners at any international monetary conference hereafter to be called. I have delayed calling up that bill because of the pendency of the question in reference to the tearing up of the pavements in the District of Columbia, which has been argued at such great length by Senators, and because there are one or two other measures that I did not wish to interfere with. I would venture to ask the indulgence of the Senate, therefore, that that bill be taken up after the routine morning business on Monday next and the consideration of it proceeded with. I hope there will be no objection to unanimous consent to that request.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Chair understand the Senator from New Hampshire to make a suggestion?

Mr. CHANDLER. I ask unanimous consent that the bill (S. 3547) to provide for the representation of the United States by commissioners at any international monetary conference hereafter to be called may be taken up for consideration on Monday next at the conclusion of the routine morning business.

Mr. ALDRICH. Why not take it up now?

Mr. CHANDLER. Because there are Senators who may desire to propose amendments to it, and I do not wish to take it up in the absence of those Senators.

Mr. STEWART. Does the Senator want to antagonize the unfinished business with that bill?

Mr. CHANDLER. Unless the Senator from Nevada speaks at great length, I shall expect to pass it on Monday next before the unfinished business shall be reached.

unfinished business shall be reached.

Mr. STEWART. That was not the question. I asked the Senator if he expected to antagonize the unfinished business?

Mr. CHANDLER. I should not until I had consulted the Senator from Nevada.

Mr. STEWART. Then you will not do it. [Laughter.]
Mr. CHANDLER. I would not do it without consulting him.

Mr. QUAY. What is the question before the Senate, Mr. Presi-

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New Hamp-

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New Hampshire has made a request of the Senate.

Mr. CULLOM. If there is no motion pending, I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the legislative, executive, and judicial appropriation bill.

Mr. CHANDLER. I hope that my request will be granted.

Mr. VILAS. I should like to ask the Senator from New Hampshire if we ought not to have present when that request is made some of the Senators who desire to be present and offer amendments? ments?

Mr. CHANDLER. That is the very reason why I suggest next

Mr. CHANDLER. That is the very reason why I suggest next Monday at the close of the routine morning business.

Mr. VILAS. I do not interpose any objection to taking up the bill at any time, but I thought the request to fix a time for taking it up should be made when Senators interested in it are present.

Mr. CHANDLER. The Senator will bear in mind that I make no request that it shall be taken up and considered until it is finished, but I think it is of sufficient importance to be taken up at that the time if we can then finish it well and conduct that that time. If we can then finish it, well and good; if not, there will be delay, and there certainly will be delay in order that any Senator who desires may be here. The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from New Hampshire that the bill to which he refers shall be taken up on Monday next for consideration immediately after the close of the routine morning business?

Mr. MORGAN. I wish to suggest to the Senator from New Hampshire that he ask that the bill be taken up on Tuesday, because Monday afternoon has been assigned for eulogies on the late Speaker Crisp. Mr. CHANDLER.

Mr. CHANDLER. Tuesday will suit me just as well.
The PRESIDING OFFICER. The request of the Senator from New Hampshire is modified to Tuesday, after the routine morn-

New Hampshire is modified to Tuesday, after the routine modifing business.

Mr. CHILTON. I wish to make a parliamentary inquiry. If unanimous consent is granted to the Senator from New Hampshire, will it not interfere with the bill set for 2 o'clock on Monday next, the bankruptcy bill?

Mr. COCKRELL. Oh, no; it can not interfere with that.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The request is that the bill be taken up in the morning hour before 2 o'clock. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from New Hampshire? The Chair bears none, and it is so ordered.

hears none, and it is so ordered.

LEGISLATIVE, EXECUTIVE, AND JUDICIAL APPROPRIATION BILL

Mr. CULLOM. I ask unanimous consent that the unfinished business may be temporarily laid aside, and that the Senate pro-ceed to the consideration of the legislative, executive, and judicial appropriation bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Illinois asks unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the bill named by him, the Nicaraguan Canal bill, which is Is there pending, to be temporarily laid aside for that purpose.

objection?

Mr. QUAY. I shall object, unless there be an understanding that we shall have an executive session before adjourning this afternoon.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. With the understanding that there shall be an executive session this afternoon. The Chair hears no objection, and it is so ordered.

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, resumed the considration of the bill (H. R. 9643) making appropriations for the legislative, executive, and judicial expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1898, and for other purposes.

Mr. CULLOM. On page 19, and on three or four succeeding pages, there are some proposed amendments to the bill which, I believe, have not been read. I ask that the Secretary now read them.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendments referred to will be stated in their order.

The Secretary. On page 19, line 22, the Committee on Appropriations reported an amendment to strike out:

For Librarian, $5,000-

And to insert:

For Librarian of Congress, to be appointed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, $5,000; and the Librarian shall make rules and regulations for the government of the Library of Congress, to be approved by the Joint Committee on the Library.

Mr. CALL. The amendment which has just been stated will come up in the Senate, I take it. Am I right?
Mr. ALDRICH and Mr. MILLS. Yes.

Mr. ALDRICH and Mr. MILLS. Yes.

Mr. CULLOM. It will.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Any question in respect to the amendment can be raised when the bill reaches the Senate.

Mr. MILLS. We are now as in Committee of the Whole.

Mr. CALL. I give notice to that effect.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment reported by the Committee on Appropriations.

The amendment was agreed to.

The reading of the bill was resumed. The next amendment of the Committee on Appropriations was, on page 20, line 5, after the word "work," to strike out "and the custody and care of the new Library building, and only under such rules as the Librarian of Congress may prescribe;" so as to read:

For the following, to be selected by the Librarian of Congress, by reason of special aptitude for the work of the Library, including the copyright work, namely, etc.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 21, line 23, after the word "namely," to strike out "one assistant, $2,000" and insert.

Register of copyrights, $3,000, who shall perform all the duties relating to copyrights, except the appointment of clerks, and shall make weekly deposits with the Secretary of the Treasury, and make monthly reports to the Secretary of the Treasury and to the Librarian of Congress, and shall on and after July 1, 1897, give bond, payable to the United States in the sum of $20,000, with sureties approved by the Secretary of the Treasury, for the faithful discharge of his duties.

And on page 22, line 13, before the word "thousand," to strike out "thirty-five" and insert "thirty-six;" so as to make the clause

Copyright department: For the following, under the direction of the Librarian of Congress, necessary for the execution of the copyright law, namely: Register of copyrights, $3,000, who shall perform all the duties relating to copyrights, except the appointment of clerks, and shall make weekly deposits with the Secretary of the Treasury, and make monthly reports to the Secretary of the Treasury, and make monthly reports to the Secretary of the Treasury, and make monthly reports to the Secretary of the Treasury and to the United States, in the sum of $20,000, with sureties approved by the Secretary of the Treasury, for the faithful discharge of his duties; two clerks at $1,800 each; two clerks, at $1,800 each; three clerks, at $720 each; ten clerks, at $1,200 each; ten clerks, at $900 each; two clerks, at $720 each; in all, $30,440.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 22, after line 13, to strike out:

Custedy, care, and maintenance of new Library building: For custedin, $3.000: clerk, $1.600; messenger; captain of the watch, $1.200; twelve watchmen; chief engineer, $1.500; five assistant engineers, at $1.000 each; ten firemen; electrician, $1.200; three elevator conductors, at $720 each; three mechanics, at $900 each; ten laborers (skilled), at $720 each; thirty charwomen; in all, $49.400: Provided, That all persons employed in said Library of Congress shall be appointed solely with reference to their fitness for their peculiar duties, and without reference to their political or party affiliations, and shall be removed for cause only.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 23, after line 18, to strike out: For fuel, lights, repairs, and miscellaneous supplies, $33,000, to be immediately available.

The amendment was agreed to. The next amendment was, on page 23, after line 20, to insert:

Custody, care, and maintenance of Library building and grounds: For superintendent of the Library building and grounds, to be appointed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, $5,000; and said superintendent shall disburse all appropriations made for and on account of the Library and Library building and greunds, and shall on and after July 1, 1897, give bond, payable to the United States in the sum of $30,000, with sureties approved by the Secretary of the Treasury, for the faithful discharge of his duties; and for the employment by said superintendent of all necessary clerks, messengers, watchmen, engineers, fremen, electrician, elevator conductors, mechanics, laborers, charwomen, and others for the proper custody, care, and maintenance of said building and grounds, $6.440; in all, $51,440: Provided, That all persons employed in and about said Library building and grounds shall be appointed solely with reference to their fitness for their particular duties.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 24, after line 15, to insert:

For fuel, lights, repairs, and miscellaneous supplies, $35,000, to be immediately available.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 24, after line 17, to insert:

The next amendment was, on page 24, after line 17, to insert:

The officer now in charge of the construction of the building for the Library of Congress is hereby authorized and directed to terminate his present duty and assume the custody, care, and maintenance of the said building and grounds on and after March 4, 1897, appoint the employees under his charge, procure necessary furniture for the said building, and remove into it the Library, including the copyright collections, furniture, etc., but excluding the Law Library, and superintend the completion of such contracts pertaining to the construction of said building as may remain unfinished on March 4, 1897, the total cost of such completion not to exceed the sums stated in said contracts. The said officer shall disburse the funds pertaining to the duties and operations hereby assigned to him, and shall receive compensation therefor in full at the rate per annum provided by the joint resolution approved April 2, 1896, to be paid out of the appropriations for said Library building.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 25, line 14, after the word "expended," to insert "by said officer;" and in line 21, after the word "building," to insert "and grounds;" so as to make the clause read:

For furniture for Library reading rooms, halls, copyright offices, etc., a sum not exceeding $50,000, and for expenses of removal of Library and copyright collections to the Library building, a sum not exceeding $6,000, are hereby respectively authorized to be expended by said officer, on and after the passage of this act, out of any unexpended balance of the appropriations heretofore made for the completion of the building for the Library of Congress, and a sufficient amount of all further unexpended balance of said appropriations shall be available for the expenses, including personal services, of the custody and care of said Library building and grounds until July 1, 1897.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 26, after line 8, to insert:

The rooms and all space now occupied by the Library of Congress in the Capitol building shall not, after the removal of said Library, be occupied, either permanently or temporarily, for any purpose whatever until so ordered by Congress.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. CULLOM. That concludes all the amendments which the committee have recommended.

Mr. HAWLEY. I wish to offer an amendment.

Mr. COCKRELL. We did not finish an amendment of which

I gave notice last evening, on page 114. I move to strike out all after the word "dollars," in line 23, down to and including the word "marshals." in line 12, on page 115. Then we will have the matter in conference.

Mr. CULLOM. I am willing that the lines referred to shall be stricken out, with the understanding that we will look into the matter more carefully between now and the time when the bill goes into conference.

Mr. BATE. I ask that the matter proposed to be stricken out may be read.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The SECRETARY. It is proposed to strike out all after the word

"dollars," in line 23, page 114, down to and including the word

"marshals," in line 12, page 115, as follows:

"marshals," in line 12, page 115, as 10110WS:

Provided, That section 24 of the act of May 23, 1896, making appropriations for the legislative, executive, and judicial expenses of the Government, for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1897, and for other purposes, be and is hereby amended by striking out the words "Indian Territory or." so that said act shall apply to the Indian Territory except as herein otherwise provided: Provided further. That the provisions of sections 19, 21, and 22 of said act shall not apply to the Indian Territory: Provided further. That each of the district attorneys in the Indian Territory shall receive a salary of $4,000 per annum, and each of the marshals shall receive a salary of $4,000 per annum and give bonds as other marshals.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Missouri.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. HAWLEY. I desire to move an amendment on page 23, line 3, where it reads:

Purchase of books for the Library, $4,000.

I have been amazed, as a good many other people have been, at the way we have gone on for a good many years appropriating $5,000 for the Library to purchase books of all kinds—the expensive books relating to the sciences, philosophy, history, and all that. Five thousand dollars a year never would purchase what we ought to buy of the products of the press in America and in Europe.

Europe.

Now, in the pending bill it is only $4,000. For the purchase of law books for the Library $1,500 is to be appropriated; a similar sum is proposed to be appropriated for books of reference for the Supreme Court, and $1,500 is given for the exchange of public documents with foreign governments. You give to those comparatively limited fields more than you give to the whole of the great field of the Library. Here is the Library, I have forgotten the exact number, but with perhaps 775,000 volumes, and only $4,000 is appropriated annually to continue buying the books that absolutely ought to be bought. Of course we add a great many books to the Library every year through the process of the copyright, but a multitude of them are such as we would never buy if they did not come to us in that way, a great mass being very light trash.

I move to strike out "four" and insert "eight;" so as to read "$8,000."

Mr. CULLOM. I appreciate the fact that this is a very small sum to be provided for the purchase of books in a great library;

Mr. CULLOM. I appreciate the fact that this is a very small sum to be provided for the purchase of books in a great library; yet it seems to me, and I think the committee takes that view of it, that we had better wait until we get the Library into a building where we can see what there is, get it classified, and then we will know wherein it is lacking. We can then begin to make liberal appropriations for the purchase of books. I think the Senator, perhaps, had better wait until the Library is moved. We have an immense number of books and pamphlets piled about; we hardly know what they are, and if we did we could not get at them. But after their removal and classification we shall begin to see wherein we are lacking, and then we can make appropria-tions with intelligence and supply whatever deficiencies may exist in the Library. I appreciate the importance of the matter, and merely suggest this consideration to the Senator from Con-

Mr. HAWLEY. The brains of the Librarian are easily moved to the new building. He knows what the old Library is and what its wants will be when it gets into the new building. He will be able from time to time to attend to this without any serious interruption to his other business.

Mr. CULLOM (to Mr. HAWLEY). Suppose you make it $6,000.

Mr. HAWLEY. If $8,000 is too much, I will say $6,000. I will modify the amendment by moving to strike out "four" and inserting "six." serting "six."
Mr. CULLOM. Personally I have no objection to the amend-

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment submitted by the Senator from Connecticut as modified.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. CULLOM. Let the Secretary make the change in the total, The Secretary. In line 13, page 23, it is proposed to strike out "eleven" and insert "thirteen;" so as to read:

In all, $13,000.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, that change will be made.

Mr. GALLINGER. I offer an amendment to which I call the attention of the Senator in charge of the bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The SECRETARY. On page 34, line 11, it is proposed to strike out the word "four," before "dollars," and insert "five;" and in line 11 to strike out the words "three dollars and twenty cents" and insert "four dollars;" so as to read:

Foreman of bindery, $5 per day; four binders, at $4 per day each

Foreman of bindery, $5 per day; four binders, at $4 per day each.

Mr. GALLINGER. I will say—I feel sure that the Senator in charge of the bill will permit the amendment to be made—that a similar amendment was inserted in the last appropriation bill. It went into conference and, unfortunately, was lost there. I hope that this amendment will be allowed to go into the bill and that it will not be lost in the shuffle in conference this year.

I will state that the amendment concerns only three or four men whose salaries were reduced a few years ago, and their present pay is below that which is being paid to men occupying similar positions in other Departments of the Government who do similar work. I trust the Senator from Illinois will let the amendment go in, and he can investigate the matter in conference.

Mr. CULLOM. Such an amendment was made in the Senate last year, and it went out as the result of the work of the conference committee.

mr. GALLINGER. That is what I said.
Mr. CULLOM. And the committee thought it hardly worth while to make it again. Personally I am willing to let the amend-

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment submitted by the Senator from New Hampshire.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. GALLINGER. If the Senate will permit me, I should like to have printed in the RECORD, in connection with the simple statement I made, a letter from the men affected by the amend-

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The letter will be printed in the RECORD, if there is no objection. The Chair hears none. The letter is as follows:

WASHINGTON, D. C., January 20, 1897.

Washington, D. C., January 20, 1897.

Sir: We, the undersigned bookbinders of the stationery division, Treasury Department, petition your honorable body, the Senate, to restore to us the compensation we received prior to the Dockery Act of January 12, 1895, and invoke your favorable consideration and influence in our behalf.

The duties imposed upon us as bookbinders are such in character as to require a thorough knowledge of all branches of the trade, much of the work being difficult of execution and requiring exceptional skill in the performance thereof. Employees at the Government Printing Office are compensated at the rate of $4 per day for this class of work, and we believe that we have been unjustly discriminated against in reducing our pay. The services we perform necessitate the handling of valuable documents, often of a confidential character, such as Secret Service reports, written records of the Department, and bonds.

The former salary of the foreman of this division should also be restored. The foregoing facts are respectfully submitted and we pray that our petition will be favorably considered.

W. M. RICKETTS.

W. M. RICKETTS.
JOHN MOCONNELL.
T. D. CORNWELL.
ED. T. ECKLOFF.
JOHN V. SHEA.

Hon. J. H. GALLINGER, United States Senate.

Mr. GALLINGER. I move to amend the total as indicated on the paper I sent to the desk.

the paper I sent to the desk.

The Secretary. In line 14, page 34, it is proposed to strike out "$31,243.40" and insert "$32,558."

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. McBRIDE. I am directed by the Committee on Public Lands to offer an amendment. In line 23, page 100, I move to strike out the words "six thousand five hundred" and insert "eight thousand;" so as to read:

For surveyor-general of Oregon, $2,000; and for the clerks in his office, $8,000.

Mr. CULLOM. That is exactly according to the estimate, and I am willing to let the amendment go into the bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment submitted by the Senator from Oragon.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. McBRIDE. To complete the amendment, in line 24 I move to strike out "eight thousand five hundred" and insert "ten thou-

Mr. CULLOM. That change will be made as a matter of course.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.
The SECRETARY. In line 24, page 100, it is proposed to strike out "eight thousand five hundred" and insert "ten thousand;" so as

In all, $10,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on concurring in the amendments made as in Committee of the Whole.

Mr. HOAR. I wish to say for myself that I have not been disposed to interfere with what the Senate as in Committee of the Whole has concluded to be best in regard to dealing with the national Library, which is to be removed from the Capitol and to assume very much larger proportions as a public institution. But I am satisfied that very soon the national Library must be governed in some such way as the Smithsonian Institution is now governed, and that the present method of government will be found inadequate and unsatisfactory to the people and to Congress.

The great experience and ability of the people and to Congress.

The great experience and ability of the present Librarian make it pretty sure that any method of dealing with that institution will be reasonably satisfactory so long as his services are spared; but I expect that very soon it will be found necessary for the two Houses of Congress to provide for a permanent rearrangement for the future which will involve the imitation and expansion of the scheme now in operation in regard to the Smithsonian Insti-

Mr. CULLOM. I only wish to say that the Committee on Appropriations had the question of providing for a board of regency under consideration, and after much discussion and argument pro and con the committee concluded, I think unanimously, that we had better adopt the policy or scheme set forth in the pending bill as a somewhat tentative arrangement, hoping that we might get the way clear for a better arrangement later on if it shall seem necessary to undertake to provide for one. That is all I desire to say in reference to the matter.

Mr. CALL. Mr. President, I do not desire to interpose any objection to the passage of the bill, seeing that there seems to be somewhat general indifference to the subject of the Library. I think after the expenditure of $6,000,000 by the Government of the United States for the construction of a library building and the conduct of a great public library, there ought to be some considerable dignity attached to its operation and management.

The pending bill provides nothing. There is no objection to the Librarian—if Mr. Spofford shall be appointed—having the authority conferred in the bill. I approve of that. There is no objection to the conferred in the bill. tion to the superintendent of the building having the management and control of it, but the Congress of the United States ought not to part with the authority to create these offices and to control the management of the building and the Library. The present architect who has built the great building ought, by concurrent resolution, to be named as the superintendent of the building, and the Librarian, Mr. Spofford, ought to be named by a concurrent resolution of Congress. Who can tell whom the President may select, whether these two most appropriate mer or not and the Control whether these two most appropriate men or not; and the Senate will have only the right to object to that selection. Here are two men most prominently connected—one with the construction of this magnificent edifice, and the other with the operation of the Library, the control and care of the books—both of them left without any provision; left to the discretion of the President, without any power on the part of Congress to provide for their continuance in office.

The architect under General Casey, and now the architect and superintendent of the building, Mr. Green, has constructed the building from the foundation upward, and he has done it with an economy, with a degree of taste, with an architectural ability that is signal and will distinguish him through all time. The Librarian who has so long been in charge of the Library is another instance of eminent fitness for the position. They are both of them by this bill left to the contingency of the President's selec-

Now, more than that, Congress can not alter that condition except by the repeal of this bill, or by overcoming the action of the President by a two-thirds vote if they should attempt to repeal the act

By this bill, when enacted into law, Congress forever puts it out of their power to control the Library. It now loses its name and function of a Congressional Library, and becomes a national or Presidential Library, beyond the control of Congress, except by the President's consent. It completely separates the Library from the control of Congress

Then, again, how many distinguished men in every State of this Union would be glad to be associated in some shape with this great institution, the Library? Why not, according to the example of England in her great library associations, have the distinguished scholars, the great literary men of this country be named as regents in connection with this institution, and why have the trip to compete the property of the true House. should not the Joint Committee on the Library of the two Houses of Congress have control and be the active managers of the Library? You would then surround it with great dignity. You would attract to it the respect and the regard of the people of the

Now, we have no power over it. The mere fact that the rules and regulations shall be made with the approval of the Library Committee of the two Houses amounts to nothing, and the whole scheme mittee of the two Houses amounts to nothing, and the whole scheme is simply a divesting of all power on the part of Congress. It is done upon the idea that there is something in the Constitution of the United States which forbids the creation of an officer, even if he be an employee of Congress, except by the nomination of the President. Yet this plan is open to the objection that neither does the Constitution authorize the Librarian by statute to appoint officers or employees any more than you could do so by resolution of Congress.

The Constitution says Congress may vest the power in the head of a department. You do not make this a department, and yet you provide that these two officers shall create the offices and appoint all the officers who are necessary for the management of this building and the conduct of the Library. So, in every point of view, whether it be upon constitutional objection or in respect of the dignity which should attach to this great institution, or as a matter of policy by which we would attract to it the affections of the great masses of the people—the literary men, the scholars of the country—from every point of view it is objectionable to put this great institution under the entire control and management of two men whom I would select for those offices by joint resolu-tion of Congress, but whom I would surround with the support of the scientific and literary men of the United States.

I think the scheme is an objectionable one. There should be a regent appointed from every State. Every man who attains national eminence should participate in the honor and distinction of being connected with this great national institution, which could easily be done after the manner in which associations—library associations—are conducted in England, and the committee of the two Houses should be the operating and managing trustees, to whom all matters should be referred.

I desire to express my dissent from the provisions of the bill in

I desire to express my dissent from the provisions of the bill in regard to that matter.

Mr. CULLOM. I hope we will now proceed with the bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on concurring in the amendments made as in Committee of the Whole.

The amendments were concurred in. The amendments were ordered to be engrossed, and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time, and passed.

EXPOSITION OF GAS APPARATUS AND APPLIANCES.

Mr. BRICE. I had Senate joint resolution No. 184 referred to the Committee on the Library, but, owing to the absence from the city of members of that committee, I ask unanimous consent that the committee be discharged from its further consideration, and that it be put upon its passage.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Ohio asks unanimous consent to discharge the Committee on the Library from the consideration of a joint resolution the title of which will

The SECRETARY. A joint resolution (S. R. 184) authorizing the Smithsonian Institution to participate in the Exposition of Gas Apparatus and Appliances, to be held in Madison Square Garden, New York City, January 27 to February 6, 1897.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Ohio that the committee be discharged? Chair hears none.

Mr. BRICE. I ask for the present consideration of the joint resolution.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the joint resolution.

Mr. BRICE. I move to amend the joint resolution, in line 4, by striking out the words "and directed" after the word "authorized;" so as to read:

That the Secretary of the Smithsonian Institution is hereby authorized to participate in the Exposition of Gas Apparatus and Appliances, to be held.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. BRICE. I move further to amend the joint resolution by striking out, in line 9, after the word "authorized," the words and directed."

The amendment was agreed to.

The joint resolution was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendments were concurred in.

The joint resolution was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

YACHTS OF FOREIGN YACHT CLUBS, ETC.

Mr. QUAY. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business

Mr. FRYE. I ask the Senator from Pennsylvania to yield to me, that I may ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of a bill which will probably not take five minutes. It is House bill 8038, for the protection of yacht owners and shipbuilders of the United States—a very short bill.

Mr. QUAY. I will yield for that purpose, and for that only. The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Maine ask the unanimous consent of the Senate to proceed to the considera-tion of a bill which will be read for information.

The Secretary read the bill (H. R. 8038) for the protection of yacht owners and shipbuilders of the United States, and by unanimous consent the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to its consideration.

Mr. FRYE. It is the unanimous report of the Committee on Commerce. The Senator from Missouri [Mr. VEST] filed an amendment which he said he proposed to offer, but I saw him a few moments ago and he told me that he did not desire a vote on it and had no objection to the passage of the bill. It has been delayed now nearly a year because three contracts had been made before now nearly a year because three contracts had been made before the bill was presented for the building of yachts abroad which cost $1,500,000. The contracts having been made under existing law, I delayed the bill until those three yachts entered. So there is nobody I know of in the world who objects to the measure.

Mr. GRAY. I should like to ask the Senator from Maine whether the exemption which I heard stated in the reading of the bill smaller to give the United States who was fewering built.

bill applies to citizens of the United States who own foreign-built

Mr. FRYE. Citizens of the United States under the original law became members of foreign yacht clubs and then contracted law became members of foreign yacht clubs and then contracted for the building of very costly yachts abroad, and thus obtained the privileges of the old law. The old law was enacted simply that we might get the models of sailing yachts. We got, under the law, models of sailing yachts until we were ready to furnish them with models. But, under the law, they got into the habit of building expensive steam yachts and thus getting all the advantage of low tonnage tax and low entry and low clearance.

Mr. GRAY. Under the present state of the law, can a man go to England and have a yacht built and come to this country and escape the tariff taxes?

Mr. FRYE. All tariff taxes, all entrance fees, all clearance fees, all tonnage tax; and these big steam yachts have been escaping.

Mr. GRAY. And have an American registry? Mr. FRYE. No, s.r; the owner does not take an American registry at all.

Mr. GRAY. Why not?

Because a foreign-built vessel can not get an Mr. FRYE. American registry

Mr. GRAY. He sails under the American flag?

Mr. FRYE. He puts up any flag he wants to put up.
Mr. GRAY. I ask for information, if the Senator will excuse me, because I think it is a matter of some interest. Was there not a question about one of these foreign-built yachts being liable in some way to tariff duties? Mr. FRYE. Yes, and it was decided against the United States under this law.

Mr. GRAY. Does not the Senator think they ought to be

Mr. FRYE. They can not come in any more if the bill passes.

Mr. GRAY. They can not come in at all?

Mr. FRYE. No. Mr. GRAY. That is all right. The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. QUAY. I have agreed to yield to the Senator from Texas

Mr. CHILTON. I will not insist. I will give my place to the Senator from Indiana [Mr. Turpie]. I am much obliged to the Senator from Pennsylvania.

CAPT. JOHN W. DODD.

Mr. TURPIE. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (S. 3491) granting an increase of pension to Capt.

John W. Dodd.

John W. Dodd.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill. It proposes to place on the pension roll the name of John W. Dodd, of Indianapolis, Ind., late a member of Company A, Fourth Regiment Indiana Volunteer Infantry, and to pay him a pension of $50 per month, in lieu of the amount he is now receiving.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and reseat

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

Mr. CULLOM. I am almost inclined to ask the Senator from Pennsylvania to yield to me to have a little pension bill passed, regarding which a Representative from my State has urged me a good many times, and I have neglected to call it up.

Mr. COCKRELL. There are a great many pension bills on the Calendar. There is a way to proceed with justice and equality, and that is to take up all the pension bills and consider them.

Mr. CULLOM. I yield to the Senator from Pennsylvania to make his motion to go into executive session.

make his motion to go into executive session.

Mr. QUAY. I move that the Senate proceed to the considera-tion of executive business.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate proceeded to the consideration of executive business. After seven minutes spent in executive session the doors were reopened, and (at 5 o'clock p. m.) the Senate adjourned until to-morrow, Thursday, January 21, 1897, at 12 o'clock meridian.

CONFIRMATIONS.

Executive nominations confirmed by the Senate January 20, 1897. PROMOTIONS IN THE ARMY.

Subsistence department.

Col. Thomas C. Sullivan, assistant commissary-general of subsistence, to be Commissary-General of Subsistence, with the rank of brigadier-general.

Cavalry arm.

Capt. Louis Henry Rucker, Ninth Cavalry, to be major. Capt. Eli Lundy Huggins, Second Cavalry, to be major. First Lieut. Philip Pendleton Powell, adjutant, Ninth Cavalry, to be captain.

First Lieut. Lloyd Milton Brett, adjutant, Second Cavalry, to be captain.

Second Lieut. George Tayloe Langhorne, Third Cavalry, to be first lieutenant Second Lieut. Ulysses Grant Kemp, Eighth Cavalry, to be first lieutenant.

Second Lieut. Charles Young, Ninth Cavalry, to be first lieu-Second Lieut. Alfred Charles Merillat, Eighth Cavalry, to be first lieutenant.

Second Lieut. Robert Bruce Wallace, Second Cavalry, to be first lientenant.

Second Lieut. Francis Cutler Marshall, Eighth Cavalry, to be first lieutenant.

Infantry arm.

First Lieut. James Berryman Jackson, Seventh Infantry, to be

Second Lieut. Joseph Dugald Leitch, Twenty-fourth Infantry, to be first lieutenant.

POSTMASTERS.

William H. Healy, to be postmaster at Fonda, in the county of Pocahontas and State of Iowa.

Jacob S. Groff, to be postmaster at Newtown, in the county of Bucks and State of Pennsylvania.

John C. Jones, to be postmaster at Titusville, in the county of Brevard and State of Florida.

Joel D. Cruttenden, to be postmaster at Bayfield, in the county of Bayfield and State of Wisconsin.

John Hornstein, to be postmaster at Boone, in the county of Boone and State of Iowa.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

WEDNESDAY, January 20, 1897.

The House met at 12 o'clock m. Prayer by the Chaplain, Rev. HENRY N. COUDEN.

The Journal of the proceedings of yesterday was read and approved.

REPRINT OF A REPORT.

Mr. McCALL of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, I am informed that the report of the majority of the committee in the contested-election case of Yost vs. Tucker, from Virginia, has been exhausted, and I ask unanimous consent that a reprint be ordered for the use of the members.

There was no objection, and it was so ordered.

RAILROAD BRIDGES ACROSS THE CUMBERLAND AND TENNESSEE RIVERS.

The SPEAKER laid before the House the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 8551) to establish railroad bridges across the Cumberland and Tennessee rivers in Kentucky.

The Senate amendment was read and concurred in.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. WALKER of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the resolution I send to

Mr. BAILEY. Mr. Speaker, I am forced to object, for the reason that it is the desire of gentlemen on both sides of the Chamber to proceed at once with the regular order, so that we may reach the contested-election case.

Mr. WALKER of Massachusetts. This will only take a moment,

Mr. WALKER of Massachusetts. This will only take a moment, I will say to the gentleman from Texas.

Mr. BAILEY. We have had a dozen requests from this side of the Chamber to allow matters to be taken up this morning, but have been compelled to make objection to all of them.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will call the committees for reports. The Clerk proceeded with the call of committees.

AMERICAN REGISTER-BARK E. C. MOWATT

The Committee on the Merchant Marine and Fisheries was

Mr. PAYNE. Mr. Speaker, I desire to call up on behalf of the committee the bill (H. R. 9734) to provide an American register for the bark E. C. Mowatt, of Philadelphia, Pa.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Commissioner of Navigation is hereby authorized and directed to cause the foreign-built bark E. C. Mowatt, owned by citizens of the United States, to be registered as a vessel of the United States.

Mr. PAYNE. I ask for the reading of the report, which fully explains the bill.

The report (by Mr. PAYNE) was read, as follows:

The report (by Mr. Payne) was read, as follows:

The Committee on the Merchant Marine and Fisheries, having had under consideration the bill (H. R. 9734) to provide an American register for the bark E. C. Moveatt, report the same as follows:

This bark was dismasted and wrecked during a hurricane, abandoned at sea, and picked up by the British steamer Anerly March 9, 1896, in 32° north latitude, 91° west longitude, and towed by the Anerly into St. Thomas, West Indies. The bark left St. Thomas July 14, 1896, in tow of the tug C. W. Morse, and was towed into New York Harbor with her cargo still in, arriving July 24, 1896. The hull was sold by the underwriters to Gustavus A. Müller and John W. Mowatt, of Philadelphia, both citizens of the United States, for $3.750. The bark has been thoroughly repaired and put in a stanch and seaworthy condition in United States shippards at a cost of $12.73.09, which amount is in excess of the requirements of the general law relative to the registry of wrecked foreign-built vessels (section 4136, Rev. Stat.).

As this case conforms to the general law referred to in all respects, except that the vessel was wrecked on the high seas instead of within the waters of the United States, your committee believe she should be registered as a vessel of the United States, and accordingly report the bill favorably, with a recommendation that it pass.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

On motion of Mr. PAYNE, a motion to reconsider the last vote was laid on the table.

AMERICAN REGISTER-STEAMER MENEMSHA.

Mr. PAYNE. Mr. Speaker, I desire also to call up the bill (H. R. 8557) to provide an American register for the steamer Menemsha.

I will state that this bill is precisely similar to one that was passed last session which originated in the Senate. I move, therefore, that this be permitted to lie upon the table.

The motion was agreed to.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

The Committee on Foreign Affairs was called.
Mr. DRAPER. Mr. Speaker, on behalf of the committee, I desire to call up Senate joint resolution No. 76, authorizing Lieut. William McCarty Little to accept a decoration from the King of Spain.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will state to the gentleman that this bill does not seem to be on the House Calendar.

Mr. DRAPER. No; it is on the Private Calendar, No. 834.

The SPEAKER. Under this call only bills on the House Calendar are in order. This, the Chair will state, is practically a private bill, and does not come within the rule.

MUSTER AND PAY OF CERTAIN OFFICERS AND ENLISTED MEN

Mr. HULL (when the Committee on Military Affairs was called). Mr. Speaker, I ask to take up the bill (S. 2101) to extend the provisions of an act to provide for the muster and pay of certain officers and enlisted men of the volunteer forces.

The bill was read at length.

The SPEAKER. The Chair is informed that this bill is also on the Union Calendar, and would not be in order under the call.

Mr. HULL. Then, Mr. Speaker, I ask to take up the House bill that is on the Calendar, which is precisely the same as the Senate bill.

The SPEAKER. It ought to be on the same Calendar.

Mr. HULL. It carries no appropriation, let me say.
Mr. DOCKERY. But it ought to be on the same Calendar as the Senate bill, of course, and would not be in order under the call.

Mr. HULL. It makes no appropriation, although it may result in one finally. Mr. LOUD.

Mr. LOUD. It is subject to the point of order. The SPEAKER. The Chair has to interpose objection, because the bill does not come within the purview of the rule.

Mr. HULL. Very well; I will withdraw the bill.

RELIEF OF CERTAIN TELEGRAPH OPERATORS.

Mr. HULL. Mr. Speaker, I call up, on behalf of the committee, the bill (S. 319) for the relief of telegraph operators who served in the war of the rebellion.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of War is hereby authorized and directed to prepare a roll of all persons who served not less than ninety days in the operation of military telegraph lines during the late civil war, and to issue to each, upon application, unless it appears that his service was not creditably performed, or to the representatives of those who are dead, suitable certificates of honorable service in the military telegraph cops of the Army of the United States, stating the service rendered, the length of such service, and the dates, as near as may be, between which such service was performed: Provided. That this law shall not be construed to entitle the persons herein mentioned to any pay, pension, bounty, or rights not herein specifically provided for.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time.

Mr. TERRY. Mr. Speaker, I would like the gentleman to make some explanation of this bill.

Mr. HULL. Mr. Speaker, the only explanation for the bill is that the telegraph corps, during the war, performed very efficient and faithful services. They were civilian employees; and from General Sherman down to the present time they have been recommended for some Congressional recognition of their services. It has been the unanimous testimony of all officers that they performed services of great value to the Government; and although they were civil employees, they could not leave the field and the service, as other employees could do. They do not ask for compensation or pay of any kind, nor do they ask for pension, but ask the benefit of this legislation for their families, simply that they may have a certificate of the services rendered. It is purely an honorary matter that carries no expense. It has been recommended for fifteen years by the offic rs and by the Department.

Mr. TERRY. There is no considerable expense involved in the bill?

Mr. HULL. There is no expense whatever, or only a triffing expense for the printing of certificates to give to each man who served in the telegraph corps during the war.

Mr. TERRY. I understand that these members of the tele-

Mr. TERRY. I understand that these members of the telegraphic corps were simply employees of the Government.

Mr. HULL. Virtually that.

Mr. TERRY. But they often went into dangerous places.

Mr. HULL. They had dangerous places, went upon the field, and set up their instruments and established their lines, a service that the Generals of the Army and the War Department have continuously recommended should be recognized in this way. The bill is guarded so that it can not be made the basis for any pay or emoluments, or even for any pensions whatever.

Mr. TERRY. I have no special objection to the bill; but I suggest to the gentleman another class of employees who were frequently in very great danger, and that was the teamsters who drove the supply wagons, especially when the fellows on the other side were quite hungry. [Laughter.]

Mr. HULL. I ask for a vote, Mr. Speaker.

The bill was passed.
On motion of Mr. HULL, a motion to reconsider the last vote was laid on the table.
Mr. HULL. Mr. Speaker, I have nothing more that I am certain is on the proper Calendar for consideration in this hour.

The Committee on the Public Lands was called. FEES OF REGISTERS AND RECEIVERS.

Mr. LACEY. Mr. Speaker, I am directed by the Committee on the Public Lands to call up the bill (H. R. 9948) to amend subdi-vision 10 of section 2238 and to repeal subdivision 12 of section 2238 of the Revised Statutes of the United States.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That subdivision 10 of section 2238 of the Revised Statutes of the United States is hereby amended so as to read as follows:

"Tenth. Registers and receivers are allowed, jointly, at a rate not exceeding 10 cents per hundred words for testimony reduced by them to writing for claimants in all cases."

SEC. 2. That subdivision 13 of section 2238 of the Revised Statutes of the United States is hereby repealed.

Mr. LACEY. Mr. Speaker, I think it is due to the House that there should be a brief explanation of this bill. It is intended to take the place of a bill that was vetoed by the President some time ago. The new bill has been so drawn as to omit that part time ago. that was held in the Presidential message to be objectionable. that was held in the Presidential message to be objectionable. The bill provides for the taking of depositions and evidence in land cases at 10 cents a hundred words, and also provides for striking out that part of the law which gives 50 per cent excess in land offices west of the Rocky Mountains and in the Rocky Mountain region. The bill passed the House and the Senate, but there was a proviso in it that required registers and receivers to make contracts for the taking of testimony at less rates even than 10 cents per hundred words if persons could be found to take it at the reduced rates. This provision was objected to in the message of the President. of the President.

Mr. TERRY. Mr. LACEY.

What is the real object of the bill? The sole object of the bill is to put these fees in Mr. LACEY. The sole object of the bill is to put these fees in the land offices in the Rocky Mountain region and west thereof at the same rate as in Kansas, Nebraska, Oklahoma, and Territories and States farther east. Originally the expense of living in the far West was much greater, and the fees were made 50 per cent higher. That reason no longer exists, in the judgment of Members and Delegates living in that region, and they have asked to have the rates changed to the same figure paid in other parts of the Union. Mr. TERRY. The President did not object to that at all, did he? Mr. LACEY. Not at all. Only one point was objected to, and that is omitted from the present bill.

Mr. BRODERICK. Does it change the fees elsewhere?

Mr. LACEY. It does not, except as to the taking of testimony. It is now 15 cents a hundred words, and this bill makes it 10.

Mr. SHAFROTH. It reduces the fees from 15 cents a hundred words to 10.

Mr. TERRY. Is this a unanimous report?

Mr. LACEY. A unanimous report.
Mr. SHAFROTH. It is unanimously reported from the Committee on the Public Lands.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

On motion of Mr. LACEY, a motion to reconsider the last vote was laid on the table.

Mr. LACEY. We have nothing further on the House Calendar.

The Committee on Invalid Pensions was called.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. KIRKPATRICK. Mr. Speaker, I am authorized by the Committee on Invalid Pensions to call up the bill H. R. 9785, No. 1491 on the Private Calendar.

Mr. DOCKERY. That is not in order.

The SPEAKER. The Chair desires to say to the gentleman that that is not admissible. In order to be admissible under this call a bill must be on the House Calendar, not the Private Calendar.

Mr. KIRKPATRICK. This is on the Private Calendar.

The SPEAKER. It is not admissible.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

A message from the Senate, by Mr. Platt, one of its clerks, announced that the Senate had passed without amendment bills of the following titles:

A bill (H. R. 2941) granting increase of pension to Alfred P.

Buss; and

A bill (H. R. 8726) to provide for the payment of certain claims against the District of Columbia by drawback certificates.

The message also announced that the Senate had passed bills of the following titles; in which the concurrence of the House was requested:

A bill (S. 3355) to provide for organizing a naval battalion in the District of Columbia; and

A bill (S. 3543) for a public building at the city of Altoona, Pa., and appropriating money therefor.

The message also announced that the Senate had passed without amendment the following resolution:

Resolved by the House of Representatives (the Senate concurring), That the Attorney-General be, and is hereby, authorized and instructed to print as an appendix to his last annual report full copies of all telegraphic and officers, private persons, railroad companies, and their officers and agents in the year 1894, relative to the disorders in the city of Chicago, Ill., during said year, and to the action taken by the Government of the United States in suppressing the same

The message also announced that the Senate had agreed to the amendments of the House of Representatives to the bill (S. 1690) granting a pension to Richard Brookins.

The message also announced that the Senate had passed the following resolution; in which the concurrence of the House was

Resolved by the Senate (the House of Representatives concurring), That there be printed 20,000 extra copies of Bulletin No. 33 of the United States Department of Agriculture, entitled The Cotton Plant: Its History, Botany, Chemistry, Culture, Enemies, and Uses, of which number 6,000 copies shall be for the use of the Senate, 12,000 copies for the use of the House of Representatives, and 2,000 copies for distribution by the Secretary of Agriculture.

SENATE BILL AND RESOLUTION REFERRED.

Under clause 2 of Rule XXIV, the following Senate bill and resolution were taken from the Speaker's table and referred as

A bill (S. 3543) for a public building at the city of Altoona, Pa., and appropriating money therefor—to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

Senate concurrent resolution-

Resolved by the Senate (the House of Representatives concurring), That there be printed 20,000 extra copies of Bulletin No. 33 of the United States Department of Agriculture, entitled The Cotton Plant: Its History, Botany, Chemistry, Culture, Enemies, and Uses, of which number 6,000 copies shall be for the use of the Senate, 12,000 copies for the use of the House of Representatives, and 2,000 copies for distribution by the Secretary of Agriculture—

To the Committee on Printing.

CONTESTED-ELECTION CASE, YOST VS. TUCKER, TENTH DISTRICT, VIRGINIA.

Mr. McCALL of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, if the call of committees is complete, I call up the contested-election case of Yost vs. Tucker, from the Tenth district of Virginia.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. Mc-Call] calls up the contested-election case of Yost vs. Tucker. The resolution in connection with this case will be read by the Clerk. The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved, That Jacob Yost was not elected a Representative in the Fifty-fourth Congress from the Tenth Congressional district of the State of Virginia, and is not entitled to a seat therein.

Resolved, That H. St. George Tucker was duly elected a Representative in the Fifty-fourth Congress from the Tenth Congressional district of the State of Virginia, and is entitled to a seat therein.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Massachusetts.

Mr. WALKER of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, I desire to rise to a arl: WALKER of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, I desire to rise to a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. WALKER of Virginia. And that is, whether there should not now be offered the substitute prepared by the minority?

The SPEAKER. It is proper to offer the substitute now.

Mr. WALKER of Virginia. I offer the substitute.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the substitute.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved, That H. St. George Tucker was not elected a Representative to the Fifty-fourth Congress from the Tenth district of Virginia, and is not entitled to the seat.

Resolved, That J. Yost was duly elected as a Representative from the Tenth Congressional district of Virginia to the Fifty-fourth Congress, and is entitled to the seat.

Mr. McCALL of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, I have consulted with the minority members of the committee in regard to the division of time, and I am inclined to think that we will get along better by making no agreement at the outset as to the time when better by making no agreement at the outset as to the time when the vote shall be taken. It is desired that the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. WALKER] who makes the minority report should have control of the time for the minority and that I, who make the majority report, shall have control of the time for the majority, and I would ask that that agreement be consented to.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Massachusetts asks that he have control of the time of the majority in the debate and that the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. WALKER] have control in opposition. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

Mr. McCALL of Massachusetts. I yield to my colleague on the committee, the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. Codding].

Mr. WALKER of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, I just want to ask one more parliamentary question. The contestant in this case desires to be heard in his own behalf. I understand it requires unanimous consent; and I now make that request, that I may be permitted to yield him time out of my time of course, and that permitted to yield him time, out of my time, of course, and that he be allowed to address the House in his own behalf. I understand that this has been very frequently done in this House. The gentleman is an ex-member of the House. He is more familiar with the facts and the law in the case than anyone else in this House, and I hope it will be the pleasure of the House to allow him in my time to address the House.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Virginia asks that the contestant may be allowed to address the House in the time allotted to his side of the question. Is there objection?

Mr. BAILEY. Mr. Speaker, I have no disposition to object, but I think it would be well enough to be understood how much time is to be yielded to him.

The SPEAKER. Under that agreement, he can not exceed one

Mr. WALKER of Virginia. One hour.

The SPEAKER. With that understanding, is there objection?

[After a pause.] The Chair hears none. The gentleman from Massachusetts yields to the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

Mr. CODDING. Mr. Speaker, it is, I think, well understood that this case comes from Elections Committee No. 3, and that it is a context as the election of November 1894 held in the Tenth die.

a contest on the election of November, 1894, held in the Tenth district of Virginia, the contestant being the Hon. Jacob Yost, and the contestee the sitting member, Hon. Henry St. George Tucker. His notice of contest embraces thirty-eight specifications, covering matters in all the twelve counties and two cities comprising the district. The evidence, exhibits, and papers cover almost 600 printed pages, and have had the careful attention and scrutiny of this committee.

Two members of the committee dissent from the conclusion reached, to wit, that the contestee is entitled to retain his seat, and their views will be presented to you with vigor and ability

At the outset, I consider it my privilege to refer to the character of the parties. Mr. Yost has been, on previous occasions, a Representative from Virginia, and by virtue of the election of 1896 will soon again take his seat here. He is known to the committee as a gentleman of distinguished ability, personally worthy of the position in controversy, and far from the taint which clings to numerous cases which are brought here solely under the influence of laws far too greatly favoring such contests. That he believes in the justice of his claim will not be in question.

The contestee, Mr. Tucker, has served in three Congresses pre-ceding the present, enjoying the esteem, regard, and confidence of his associates, and I say with assurance there are few, if any, within sound of my voice who will believe him a party to any fraud or to the promotion of any irregularities. I say further that I confidently believe he would not for one instant retain that seat if he considered it acquired by any wrongful act done or encouraged by him.

The official return of the election gave the contestee a plurality of 892. Five candidates were named upon the official ballots, three of whom received altogether less than 1,000 votes out of nearly 29,000 cast. All the rest were for the parties to this contest, or in doubt.

The election of 1894 was the first trial in Virginia of the so-called Walton law, which gave to electoral boards the preparation of ballots and concealing from all others except the printer the size, style, and contents of the ballots which alone should be used at public elections. These ballots were intended to comprehend some features of what we commonly call the Australian system, giving, especially to the educated voter, a secret vote.

The electoral boards in each county and city were selected by the legislature, and these boards appointed a registrar for each voting precinct, who attended to the registration and transfer of voters. The electoral board also appointed the judges of election, three in each precinct, who are to be competent, able to read and write, and, if possible, from persons known to belong to different political parties.

Each voter appearing at election must apply to one of the judges for an official ballot, which the voter must carry into a voting booth, where "he shall then draw a line with pen or pencil through the names of candidates he does not wish to vote for, leaving the name or names of the candidate or candidates he does wish to vote for unscratched.

Further important provisions I now read from the statute:

Further important provisions I now read from the statute:

No name shall be considered scratched unless the pen or pencil mark extend through three-fourths of the length of said name; and no ballot save an official ballot above provided for shall be counted for any person. When, as to any office, more than one name remains unscratched, the ballot for that particular office shall be void, but the ballot as to any other office for which only one name remains unscratched shall be valid. He shall fold said ballot with the names of the candidates on the inside and hand the same to the judge of election, who shall place the same in the ballot box without any inspection further than to assure himself that the ballot box without any inspection further than to assure himself that the ballot is a genuine ballot, for which purpose he may, without looking at the printed inside of said ballot, inspect the official seal upon the back thereof: Provided, It shall be lawful for any voter to erase any or all names printed upon said official ballot and substitute therein in writing the name of any person or persons for any office for which he may desire to vote.

The Congressional office was the only one mentioned upon the

The Congressional office was the only one mentioned upon the ballot of 1894, and some inferences are drawn from this fact which will hereafter appear. The census population of the district was will hereafter appear. The census population of the district was 155,138. The aggregate official vote was 24,674.

After the beginning of the present contest, pursuant to orders of courts, furthered by agreements between the parties, a general examination and recount was had of all the ballots returned to the clerks' offices. This recount disclosed 28,438 votes. It leaves 1,021 votes undescribed, because they were destroyed by various election boards and were not returned. The result of this recount, or rather scrutiny, is to bring into view about 2,000 ballots not counted or computable because the voter had left two or more names unscratched upon the ballot. It further enabled this committee to pass upon a number of ballots of a character which had caused them to be rejected by some boards and counted by others. They present three general features for classification.

First. Ballots from which the voter had scratched the title to

First. Ballots from which the voter had scratched the title to First. Ballots from which the voter had scratched the title to the office voted for, which the law requires to be upon the ticket, erasing likewise everything else except the name of one candidate, which thereby stood alone upon the ballot voted. Such ballots are termed "caption marked." Section 3 of the Walton act prescribes that the ballot shall contain "the title of the office printed or written," and speaking for myself and in the belief that the rights of voters are the gift of law, and are not inherent, I regard the question as a close one. But our committee, considering the fact that but one office was voted for, and hence no error could arise that but one office was voted for, and hence no error could arise as to the intention of the voter as to the office, have computed the ballots according to the names found upon them. This adds to Yost's vote, but does not elect him.

Second. "Blotted or blurred ballots." These are such ballots as were marked or scratched with ink, and folded before the ink was dry, left a blot or blur upon the name which the voter probably intended to leave untouched. Such ballots are not numerous, and as the parties themselves agree upon these ballots, they are and as the parties themselves agree upon these ballots, they are counted according to the finding of the parties. This makes an addition to Yost's vote, but not sufficient to elect him.

Third. Ballots styled "imperfect" are brought into this case. The Walton act prescribes that "no name shall be considered scratched unless the pen or pencil mark extends through three-fourths of the length of said name."

Considerable space in the report of the minority is devoted to this question, pages 12, 13, 14, and 15 being notably presented for

The real question, however, Mr. Speaker, is not upon the wisdom of the law, but whether it is the law governing the count of such ballots, and in this the report of our chairman is concurred in as the opinion of a large majority of the committee. There must be somewhere the right to prescribe or decide what shall be a lawfully marked ballot, and any educational information or instruction for illiterate voters along this line could as well include the complete marking out of a name as the careless work presented here.

In consulting these alleged specimens, to which I have called your attention on the pages of the report mentioned, I wish no erroneous impression to arise from a careless examination. Mr. Speaker, these representations purport to be facsimile ballots cast at the election in question. They may be so, but if so, it is fortuitons and accidental.

Read, for instance, at the top of page 12 of the report:

From that description (referring to the description at the bottom of page 1) we reproduce facsimiles of the ballots and leave it to the common fairess of any man to say whether or not they should be credited to Yost.

It appears, therefore, that facsimiles are presented which are made up from description only, and not from the ballots them-selves. It is very certain that no ballots and no photographs of ballots or even facsimiles of the ballots were presented to the committee, except these which were constructed by verbal description only, as shown in the evidence. Therefore I call attention to that fact for the sake of exhibiting them in their proper relation to the case. For instance, at the bottom of page 11 is a description of one of the ballots:

Two had caption and all names except Yost's marked. But the two bottom names on these ballots were not marked clear through (insufficiently one, Tucker, Cocke, and Cowden's names well marked, and a line drawn under Grove's name, just touching the first initial and the last letter of the surname.

One, Tucker marked nearly through, given name in Grove and Cocke marked, and a line drawn diagonally through Cowden's name, just touching

From that brief description given by a witness, who possibly inspected the ballots in the evening of the day of the election or the next morning, and whose testimony was not given until perhaps months afterwards, we have constructed the facsimile which is presented on the top of page 13. It does to a certain extent correspond with the description.

I think, therefore, Mr. Speaker, that caution should be exercised in accepting that as the representation of the veritable ballots which is only manufactured to correspond with a description. As to the representation of the facsimile or the description only of the ballots, I am not aware of any judicial proceedings, certainly none in my narrow experience, where such could be presented as reliable evidence. From a credible description it is proper for anyone to draw his own conclusions, but in this regard the report of the minority far surpasses any claim brought before this committee.

Mr. HULICK. Right there, if the gentleman will pardon me, I should like to ask him a question in reference to these facsimiles—whether at the time of this investigation the original tickets as marked were accessible to the parties, either contestant or contestee, so that facsimiles of the tickets themselves as marked could have been made?

Mr. CODDING. The tickets are accessible, as I understand. Mr. HULICK. Then are we to understand that these facsim-Mr. HULICK. Then are we to understand that these facsimiles were prepared only from oral evidence before the committee—not from the tickets themselves?

Mr. CODDING. You are to understand just that. That is precisely my motive in calling attention to the matter.

The next phase of the controversy, proceeding in the order of the contestant's brief, presents the alleged failure to comply with the law in the appointment of election officers and in the neglect

Mr. HENDERSON. Before the gentleman passes from this point, I should like to ask whether these tickets represented on pages 12 and 13 were counted for Mr. Yost or for Mr. Tucker, or not counted at all?

Mr. CODDING.

Mr. CODDING. As I understand, those tickets were not counted at all, but were considered imperfect.

Mr. McCALL of Massachusetts. The tickets that were testified to by the witnesses and of which these purport to be reproductions.

Mr. CODDING. I thank the gentleman; that is correct.
Mr. WOOD. Will the gentleman allow me a question?
Mr. CODDING. With very great pleasure.
Mr. WOOD. The tickets represented on pages 12 and 13, where the title of the office is erased by a cross, were not counted?
Mr. CODDING. They were not counted in the original return,

Mr. CODDING. They were not counted?

Mr. CODDING. They were not counted in the original return, but our committee has counted all caption-marked ballots where there was no other objection against them.

Mr. WOOD. But the tickets represented on pages 14 and 15, where the name is erased by marks, which are not drawn through the name, those tickets are not counted?

Mr. CODDING. Those are not counted.
Mr. WOOD. Why should not the tickets be rejected in the one case as well as in the other?
Mr. CODDING. I will answer the gentleman somewhat at random, without being sure that I catch his point. I do not know that the cross mark was considered an obliteration of the caption. That question did not arise before us. I gave but small attention to that matter, because in the decision of the committee the caption-marked votes were counted.

Mr. OVERSTREET. Will the gentleman pardon me a moment?
According to my recollection of the law, there is a different rule governing the caption marks from the rule governing the marks on the ballots proper. For that reason the caption-marked tickets were counted by the committee.
Mr. CODDING. I thank the gentleman. That is correct.

Mr. WOOD. Then there was one rule for the caption and another for the obliteration of the name?

Mr. CODDING. That was substantially so. But allow me to add that there is nothing in the letter of the law making illegal a ballot which has the caption erased. The Walton law provides that the ballot shall have the title of the office placed upon it, but it does not say anywhere that the ballot shall be considered illegal if that title is erased.

Mr. McCALL of Massachusetts. Will the gentleman allow me to call his attention to one specific ballot on page 14 of the minority report, under the precinct of Stotswood. At this precinct 11 ballots were burned; and then there is this extract from the evidence:

Three of them were scratched with vertical lines, all names being scratched, except Yost's name, on these 3 tickets.

Now, if you will look at that facsimile, you will see there is no vertical line in it; and furthermore, the testimony does not state how many vertical lines there were. There might have been simply one. So that it seems to have been a matter purely for the judgment of the person making that alleged reproduction, to put in whatever number of lines he desired.

Mr. WOOD. The evidence does state that they were marked with vertical lines. That would imply more than one, would it

Mr. McCALL of Massachusetts. But there is no evidence as to how many vertical lines there were, and there is no vertical line in the reproduction.

Mr. DALZELL. I should like to ask my colleague [Mr. Con-

DING] a question. Mr. CODDING.

Certainly.

Mr. DALZELL. Do I understand rightly when I understand that the conclusion arrived at by the committee was arrived at by throwing out certain marked or imperfectly marked ballots?

Mr. CODDING. No, sir; you are not to understand that. You are rather to understand that the committee has counted ballots in favor of the contestant which were thrown out by the election board or destroyed. But we have in no case, so far as I remember, diminished Mr. Yost's votes by throwing out any ballots.

Mr. DALZELL. I find in a brief, which has been laid upon our desks this morning, this statement:

It is either agreed or proven that each of these imperfect ballots clearly indicates the intention of the voter. The committee concedes this, but rejects them because they do not comply with a strict technical construction of the Virginia statute, which requires that all names of candidates on the ballot, except the name of the candidate voted for, shall be erased by marking through three-fourths the length of such names.

Is that statement correct?

Mr. CODDING. It is not, as I understand. The statement to which the gentleman refers, which has been placed on the desks of members this morning, is a recent emanation. I knownothing of that statement, and I do not understand it to be correct.

I was speaking, Mr. Speaker, of the question raised by the exclusion of other parties than the Democratic party from the election machinery of that district.

There is nothing startling to the average mind in the fact that it is usual for a majority party to assume control, and it is always proper for a minority party to have representation. But even the absence of such representation does not vitiate a ballot without evidence showing resulting fraud.

On pages 24 and 25 of the minority report the report says:

In Amherst County the electoral board, in utter disregard of the plain mandatory provisions of the statute, failed and refused to appoint judges who belonged to the different political parties at the following precincts: Temperance, Magruders, Pedlar Mills, Oronoco, Chestnut, Furnace, and Millners.

How such a statement could have been made in the face of the record it is difficult to understand. The record shows that at Temperance, Campbell, Populist judge, was appointed and served; at Magruders, Wingfield, Populist judge, appointed and served; at Chestnut, White, Republican judge, did not serve, though appointed; at Millners, Burks, Republican judge, was appointed but did not serve.

There were 16 precincts in Amherst, at 3 of which there was no judge appointed in opposition to the Democratic party; at one of these, Oronoco, the vote stood, Tucker 35, Yost 48. There is no evidence in the record impeaching the returns from either place. McGinnis, page 421, puts the number of white Republicans in the county at 80, and only 25 per cent of them as capable of being election officers. Harrison, the Democratic chairman, page being election officers.
153 of the record, says:

We (meaning Mr. Allen, the Republican chairman, and himself) went over the list of judges together, and I told him that wherever he desired a change to be made and a Republican judge to be appointed that the electoral board would appoint him or them. He suggested several, and they were all ap-pointed. I asked him, as the list stood with the changes made, was he satis-fied, and he told me that he was.

This evidence of Harrison is admitted by Allen on page 127, in answer to questions 10, 11, 12, and 13. Harrison is contestant's

The evidence is insufficient to warrant a finding that judges were systematically chosen in defiance of law, or that any marked or unusual result is apparent from such choice as was made. The special constables chosen to assist illiterate voters had before them peculiar duties. In some locations they professed, indeed, to be unwilling to go beyond the strict letter of the statutes. In others the assistance was freely given. But nearly everywhere they were met by the fact that the illiterate voter had been taught to distrust them, and the impression was widespread that anyone consulting such constable was a traitor to the contestant's cause, or at least opposed to him. Under such conditions, the law was imperfectly executed, and officers so placed were easily misunderstood.

These matters are of substantial importance, which has been recognized in the committee's report, and all that can be justly claimed to the contestant's advantage has been credited in com-claimed to the contestant's advantage has been credited in computing his vote. And this question has been fully discussed relative to the vote in Staunton, found on pages 11 and 12 of the report. Still further it is claimed that the votes of Amherst and Appomattox counties should be entirely rejected as fraudulent and vicious, because the ballots were not printed in plain roman type. In the former county it is stated that the ballot was in "German taxt" and in the letter in societ. text," and in the latter in script. The counsel for contestant in text," and in the latter in script. The counsel for contestant in his brief, on page 45, presents a photographic copy of the Amherst ballot, which may be considered authentic. If any of my hearers have the brief of the contestant, they will please refer to page 45, or, for the benefit of any who wish to examine it now, here is a copy. That, being a photograph, can not be well objected to. An attempt is made in the minority report, page 27, to reproduce this. This attempt is injected into an extract from the testimony and the inference conveyed that it is correct. A comparison of the the inference conveyed that it is correct. A comparison of the two discloses the fact that the ballot printed in the minority report differs in thirteen particulars from the original, and always, I think, for the worse.

I entirely absolve the gentleman signing that report from any intention or even knowledge of this matter. It probably arises from the mixed fonts of an ignorant printer. But the type of the photograph is well known to me; was used by me as headline type, from choice, for years. It is not German, but Old English, an unimportant fact except for accuracy, and its effect is not materially different from that type at the head of our letters by which we inform our friends that we are members of this House. we inform our friends that we are members of this House.

Mr. CONNOLLY. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman allow a question?

Mr. CODDING. Certainly, with great pleasure.
Mr. CONNOLLY. I find it stated in a paper on my desk that a member of the election board for Amherst County, who was chairman of the Democratic party, admits that he had ballots printed in seventy-five different styles. Is that correct?

Mr. CODDING. I think the gentleman will find that there is such testimony in the record. I was coming to that question of alternating very soon.

Mr. CONNOLLY. I supposed the gentleman was referring to that subject now. I can not hear him very distinctly.

Mr. CODDING. I am sorry that my voice is not stronger.

Mr. CONNOLLY. There was talking going on here.

Mr. BRUMM. Will it disturb the gentleman to ask him if he knows why these tickets were printed in German type? Is there any reason assigned for it?

Mr. CODDING. Yes, a reason is given in the testimony.

Of the script from Appomattox we have no copy; and with these charges is coupled another that the names of the candidates were "alternated," printed in varying order upon the ballots, with the intent to confuse and deceive the illiterate voter.

These are serious matters, reprehensible and meriting condemnation. The intent was unlawful, and had the result corresponded, we should undoubtedly concur with the minority opinion. In Amherst, however, in a vote of 2,705, there were 349 defective ballots, a result differing little from the rest of the district. In Appomattox there were 153 defective in a total of 1,432. And I have here a statement of the vote of these counties for several years indicating for 1894 no revolutionary or remarkable changes. years, indicating for 1894 no revolutionary or remarkable change.

The following is the vote of Amherst County, Va., for the past

Year.	Office.	Total vote.	Demo- cratic ma- jority.
1884	Congress and President	3,319 2,974 2,539 3,188 2,986 1,106 2,831 1,778 2,705	505 603 181 - 858 718 509 88 499

The average Democratic majority in Amherst County for eight years is 433.

The average vote polled in the county for eight years past is Appomattox County, Va.

Year.	Office.	Total vote.	Republican majority.	Democratic majority.
1884	Congress and President Governor Congress Congress and President Governor	* 1,729 1,796 1,290 1,476 906 508	46 144 93	26
1890 1892 1893 1894	Congress and President Governor Congress	1,461 1,494 1,432	123 105	49

You will see from the vote in 1896, as was stated, that it showed a large Democratic gain over Mr. Tucker's majority in 1894, the ballots being this last year printed in roman type.

Mr. Speaker, there are numerous side questions growing out of the contest, issues which will hereafter be discussed by those following. To me was assigned the duty of presenting the leading features of the case, which I have endeavored to do, and I have endeavored to state to the House the main propositions upon which the report of the majority of the committee is based. I concurred with some hesitancy, after considerable examination, in the report with some hesitancy, after considerable examination, in the report of the majority, because my sympathy was very warmly for the contestant in the presentation of his claim. But I believe, sir, that the committee have presented their report to this House adhering to the rules which are safe for the majority in its time of victory, and proper for a minority to protect them in the time of their defeat.

Mr. HENDERSON. Mr. Speaker, before the gentleman sits down, I would like to know who got the benefit, and is it in evidence who got the benefit, of these tickets being printed in a foreign type, so to speak?

Mr. CODDING. There is no evidence which seems conclusive to the committee of any material variation, while some say they were appalled at finding these tickets so printed. The evidence as I now recollect it, after nearly a year's lapse, and dimmer than I wish it to be, is that there was no material variation.

Mr. HENDERSON. They were cast for both candidates, were

Mr. CODDING.

Mr. CODDING. Yes, sir; that was the official ballot. Mr. HENDERSON. The law, I see, does not say in what type it shall be printed. Mr. CODDING. Mr. CODDING. I believe an amendment has been passed through the legislature of Virginia requiring the printing to be done in regulation type.

Mr. HENDERSON. Referring to these ballots, on pages 12 and 13, do I understand the tickets, the actual ballots that were cast, were before the committee, or are still accessible?

Mr. CODDING. They are still accessible.

Mr. HENDERSON. But they were never brought by either the contestant or the contestee before the committee?

Mr. WALKER of Virginia. We do not agree to that,

Mr. CODDING. I would be glad to hear the statement of the

Mr. WALKER of Virginia. We do not agree to that.

Mr. CODDING. I would be glad to hear the statement of the gentleman from Virginia.

Mr. WALKER of Virginia. I will make it later.

Mr. HENDERSON. Let me ask this question—how these ballots were cast. I refer to those on pages 12 and 13.

Mr. CODDING. I would have to examine each one particularly.

Mr. HENDERSON. I refer to those on pages 12 and 13 of the minority report. Were they counted?

Mr. CODDING. Each one of those excluded from the count was in conflict with the law requiring the name to be erased over three-fourths of the entire length.

Mr. HENDERSON. But the law does not state which way the line is to be drawn, whether horizontally or vertically. It does not: I have read it.

Mr. CODDING. It is to extend three-fourths of the length of said name.

Mr. HENDERSON. But it may be extended vertically as well as horizontally?
Mr. CODDING.

Mr. CODDING. I should so construe it. Mr. WILSON of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, I desire to ask the gentleman a question.

The SPEAKER. Does the gentleman yield?

Mr. CODDING. Certainly.

Mr. WILSON of Ohio. On page 38 of the minority report, there is a summary of the count by the minority. It appears that after counting the votes to a certain point there are 12,490 for the contestant and 12,528 for the contestee. And then there are added votes proven—Cumberland 36, Jacksons River 15, Augusta and Staunton 11. By adding those votes, it gives the contestee a majority. I desire to know what is meant by "votes proven."

What kind of votes were they?
Mr. CODDING. If the gentleman will refer to the previous pages of the minority report, he will ascertain what is meant by the term of "votes proven." It is a term frequently used by the contestant in his brief, and all through the argument, assuming his evidence in his own presentation of the case, and assuming that just as soon as he had finished his testimony or argument that part was proven.

Mr. WILSON of Ohio. Were all these votes actually cast, and do they appear on the tally sheets or whatever evidence you had, or are they votes supposed to have been cast, but which do not appear in the records, and were not presented and counted by the committee or considered in arriving at their conclusions?

Mr. CODDING. So far as I know, every vote considered in this case was a vote actually deposited in the ballot box. The questions arising in this case are whether the votes were in com-questions arising in this case are whether the votes were in compliance with the law and sufficient to be computed for any purpose.

Mr. WILLIAM A. STONE. Do I understand that these sample ballots on pages 12 and 13 were excluded?

Mr. CODDING. Yes, sir.

Mr. WILLIAM A. STONE. For what reason?

Mr. CODDING. The ballot upon the bottom of page 12 has the name of Mr. Yost unmarked, and the name of C. H. Grove immediately before it is not erased in accordance with the law. The diately before it is not erased in accordance with the law. The same is true of the one at the top of page 13.

Mr. WILLIAM A. STONE. Take the one on the top of page 13. You say that the objection to that ballot is that the name of

Mr. Grove is not properly erased?

Mr. CODDING. Yes, sir.

Mr. WILLIAM A. STONE. Why not?

Mr. CODDING. The erasing mark does not pass through threefourths of the length of the name. The H and the Gro are Only three letters of the name are touched by the erasing mark.

Mr. WILLIAM A. STONE. It hits both ends, though.

Mr. CODDING. That is true.

Mr. WILLIAM A. STONE. The law under which these ballots were cast requires, does it, that three-fourths of the name of the candidate for whom the voter does not wish to vote shall be

Mr. CODDING. The law says that "no name shall be considered scratched unless the pen or pencil mark extends three-fourths of the length of said name

Mr. WILLIAM A. STONE, Now, in reference to the ballot at the top of page 12, there are five candidates for Congress on that ballot. There is no objection to that erasure, is there?

Mr. CODDING. None whatever.

Mr. WILLIAM A. STONE. In other words, in erasing three-fourths of a name the voter may erase more than three-fourths and there will be no objection to it; is that correct?

Mr. CODDING. Yes Mr. WILLIAM A. STONE. Now, the two names at the bottom, Grove and Cocke, they are held not to be erased in accordance with the law, I understand?

Mr. CODDING. The gentleman will bear in mind that these alleged sample ballots are created from the description given by a witness and found at the bottom of page 11.

Mr. WILLIAM A. STONE. Another question. The difficulty in this case arises, as I understand, out of these ballots that were not counted because the names were not properly erased.

Mr. CODDING. I think the turning point of the case is there.

Mr. WILLIAM A. STONE. There is where the pinch of the case comes, and there is a good deal of testimony on that point.

This volume is the report of the majority, is it not?

Mr. CODDING. No, sir; that is the record in the case.

Mr. WILLIAM A. STONE. Other ballots on which the name of Mr. Tucker was marked similarly to Mr. Yost's were found in the case

Mr. CODDING. That is correct.

Mr. WILLIAM A. STONE. Take the ballots on page 13—there are two of them. Whatever the committee may say or think about the intention of the voters, let me suppose that the intention of the voters who polled or attempted to poll those ballots was to erase all the names except that of Mr. Yost. Now, do you find any ballots thrown out upon which the apparent intention of the voter was to erase all the names except Mr. Tucker's?

Mr. CODDING. Yes, sir.

Mr. WILLIAM A. STONE. And the committee have waded through all this testimony in reference to these 3,797 ballots, or through such testimony as was offered in the case, and have reached the conclusion which the majority of them have reported.

Mr. CODDING. That is correct.
Mr. TAYLER. I wish to ask the gentleman a question. Referring to the 4 ballots described at the bottom of page 11 of the minority report, were those ballots counted for Mr. Yost?
Mr. CODDING. They were not.

Mr. TAYLER. Then, disregarding for the moment any statutory requirement as to the form of marking, does the majority refuse to count for Mr. Yost certain ballots which on their face show that the voter apparently intended to cast them for Mr. Yost?

Mr. JENKINS. If the gentleman will permit me, I will answer that the committee refused to count those ballots for two reasons—first, because they could not count them under the law; and second, because they did not have a particle of evidence before the committee as to the intention of the voter (if they could have been committee as to the intention of the voter (it they could have been controlled by that consideration), because the committee were simply furnished a statement of witnesses with reference to what was done with one particular ballot, which was reproduced, and then the committee were asked to infer from the description of that ballot that all that the committee call "imperfect" ballots were marked exactly like that one.

Mr. TAYLER. My question assumes that for the moment we disregard the legal effect as to intention of any statutory requirement. Disregarding that, my question is, Did the majority of the committee refuse to count for the contestant ballots that appeared to be intended to be voted for him?

Mr. JENKINS. If the gentleman will permit me, I will repeat that the committee did not have a particle of evidence before them with reference to those ballots other than the description from which the sample is made.

Mr. WILLIAM A. STONE. Did you not have the ballots?

Mr. JENKINS. No. sir.

Mr. JENKINS. No. sir.

Mr. WILLIAM A. STONE. Then how did you get these facsimiles in the report?

Mr. TAYLER. The report states that they are reproduced from the description of them given by witnesses.

Mr. WALKER of Virginia. As this seems to be a general colloquy, I will explain that those reproductions of ballots are made from a description in the testimony of witnesses of certain ballots which could not be produced because they were burned. They were which could not be produced because they were burned. destroyed and could not be produced, and therefore evidence was

Mr. TAYLER. As to one or two ballots?

Mr. WALKER of Virginia. Yes, sir; as to the ballots reproduced.

And, as I understand it, that testimony referred only to one or two ballots

Mr. WILLIAM A. STONE. Now, let us get at the facts as to these 3,797 ballots. I understand that the committee had none of those ballots before them at all.

Mr. CODDING. That is correct.

Mr. WILLIAM A. STONE. And, so far as the committee reported touching those ballots, the report is based upon information obtained from the testimony of witnesses.

Mr. CODDING. Upon the testimony of witnesses relating to only one or two ballots.

only one or two ballots.

Mr. WILLIAM A. STONE. And the evidence relates to ballots polled apparently on both sides?

Mr. JENKINS. That is correct.

Mr. WALKER of Virginia. The number is proved; it is shown how many there were for each.

Mr. DANIELS. I should like to ask this question: Whether it is contended that if the erasure goes so far as to indicate the intention of the voter, although it does not literally comply with the Virginia statutes relative to the effect of erasures, the House is tion of the voter, although it does not literally comply with the Virginia statutes relative to the effect of erasures, the House is concluded by the Virginia statute?

Mr. CODDING. The committee has based its opinion upon the Virginia statute as obligatory upon the voter.

Mr. DANIELS. In other words, my question is this: Suppose the erasure goes so far as to indicate the intention of the voter to erase a particular name, although the erasure does not go three-fourths of the way through the name: suppose the voter voted fourths of the way through the name; suppose the voter voted such a ticket, with the name of Yost entirely undisturbed; is not such a ticket, with the name of Yost entirely undisturbed; is not the House justified in such a case in assuming, such being the intention of the voter, that the vote was a legal vote for Yost, not-withstanding the erasure was defective? The Constitution of the United States, as gentlemen will recollect, provides that the action of the State shall be authoritative only as to the qualifications of the voter—not as to the effect of the ballot itself or the mode of voting the ballot or the making of erasures on the ballot. Under those circumstances is it not competent for the House mode of voting the ballot or the making of erasures on the ballot. Under those circumstances is it not competent for the House to determine what was the real intention of the voter and to give effect to his vote according to that intention?

Mr. CODDING. No doubt it is competent for the House to give any construction to it that the majority may please. At the same time, however, I am strongly of the opinion that due effect ought to be given to the ballot laws of the State.

Mr. DANIELS. We want to know whether we are concluded by the law of the State of Virginia as to the form or manner in which the erasure is to be made, where the intention of the voter is sufficiently disclosed by his act?

Mr. CODDING. That is my opinion; yes, sir.

Mr. HALL. As I understood the statement of the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. WALKER] a few moments ago, these alleged facsimile ballots were made from a description of the burned

Mr. WALKER of Virginia. Yes, sir.
Mr. HALL. Now, referring to page 38 of the minority report, count the number of burned ballots as 291.

Mr. WALKER of Virginia. One thousand and twenty-one.
Mr. HALL. I am referring to the figures as given in the minority report; and I suppose the minority has stated the number as fully and strongly as the facts would justify.
Mr. WALKER of Virginia. One thousand and twenty-one is

Mr. HALL. Adding those burned ballots together, according to my arithmetic, there were 291.

Mr. WALKER of Virginia. To what page does the gentleman

Mr. HALL. To page 38 of the minority report. Now, referring to this statement which has been placed on our desks. there ring to this statement which has been placed on our desks, there were 3,797 ballots cast at the election which were not counted at all. So that, instead of this facsimile being a facsimile of 3,797 ballots, it is, even according to the minority report, a facsimile of only 291 ballots which were alleged to have been burned.

Mr. WALKER of Virginia. I do not understand that there is any dispute that 1,021 is the number of ballots burned in the whole district. I do not know where it is proved; but I have never heard any dispute on that point.

Mr. HALL. I am referring to page 38 of the minority report, and I make the number 291.

Mr. HERMANN. Allow me to ask this question: If these

Mr. HERMANN. Allow me to ask this question: If these votes, cast for Mr. Yost and which were rejected, had been counted for him, would they have given him a majority?

Mr. CODDING. I think not, sir.

Mr. WILLIAM A. STONE. Does my colleague [Mr. CODDING] know how many of these 3,797 ballots which were not counted were cast for Yost and how many for Tucker?

Mr. CODDING. There ought to be some chance to emerge from this confusion which we are getting into as to figures. It is contended here—and the statement is put forth on every occasion—that there were 3,797 ballots which have not been counted. It should be borne in mind by the House at the very outset that a great majority of these ballots rejected by the election boards on the day of election were afterwards taken into account and computed for one party or the other by agreement between the contestant and the contestee, and the ballots in controversy which contestant and the contestee, and the ballots in controversy which were not covered by that quasi amicable arrangement are comparatively few. They are enough to affect the result of the election, I grant; but nothing like 4,000 or any such number of votes are in controversy here. The number is far less than 1,000.

Mr. HAINER of Nebraska. Allow me a single question. I understand from the report of the majority that they find Mr. Tucker has a plurality of 221 votes, and in order to hold that he has this plurality, all these imperfectly marked ballots must be thrown out.

thrown out.

Mr. CODDING. Oh, no.

Mr. HAINER of Nebraska. As I understand, in order to concur with the majority of the committee in their conclusion, we must be conclusion. throw out these imperfectly marked ballots. In other words, enough imperfectly marked ballots were cast for Mr. Yost, or intended to be cast for him, to have changed the result if they were counted. Am I correct in that?

Mr. CODDING. I suggest that the tables in the respective reports ought to settle that question.

Mr. HAINER of Nebraska. In other words, I understand the committee hold that that provision of the Virginia law is mandatory, and relying on that construction they hold that the contestee is elected?

Mr. CODDING. We have held it mandatory as to the marking

Mr. CODDING. We have held it mandatory as to the marking out of the names on the ballots; but there is no mandate respecting the so-called "caption-marked ballots," and almost thirteen hundred of them are dealt with, as it were, by a stroke of the pen.

Mr. HAINER of Nebraska. But, as I understand it, the improperly marked ballots are rejected by the committee, although the intention of the voter, as shown by them, is sufficient to have elected Yost if not estopped by the statute of Virginia.

Mr. WILLIAM A. STONE. I do not understand that.

Mr. McCALL of Massachusetts. It is not admitted, if the gentleman from Pennsylvania will permit me, that the intention of the voter is evident in the case of the imperfectly marked ballots. In most of the cases, as shown by the testimony, at least lots. In most of the cases, as shown by the testimony, at least two of the names on the ballots were apparently untouched, and the most that can be said of the position the gentleman favors is that the stipulation between the parties was that the marking had not been done on certain ballots as required by the statute. The committee therefore passed on the agreement of the parties to the contest, and decided that all of the ballots not marked as required.

by the statutes of Virginia should not be counted. But it does not appear how many ballots expressing the intention of the voter were presented, and in fact there is no way of getting at that

Mr. HAINER of Nebraska. How many ballots of the entire

Mr. HAINER of Nebraska. How many ballots of the entire number set out on pages 12 and 13 of the minority report were excluded by the committee in their count?

Mr. McCALL of Massachusetts. I will say, in my judgment, very few were. If the gentleman will read the testimony—and that is the difficulty of substituting here a picture for the evidence—but if the gentleman will read the evidence that the committee had before it, he will find that several witnesses testified that there was no ballot in the precinct concerning which they testified, and that there was no pretense of marking.

Mr. HAINER of Nebraska. What I wish to find out is, whether there were 221 of these ballots excluded.

Mr. McCALL of Massachusetts. The evidence does not show

Mr. McCALL of Massachusetts. The evidence does not show that there were 221 of these ballots excluded. There was testimony as to 4 ballots, I think, and these 4 ballots we find marked

Mr. WILLIAM A. STONE. They were the sample ballots. The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from Pennsylvania has expired.

Mr. WALKER of Virginia. I want it distinctly stated and understood, Mr. Speaker, that I do not concur in the statement of the gentleman or in the position he assumes in arguing his side of the case. I do not want my silence during the discussion to be taken for consent.

Mr. McCALL of Massachusetts. I suppose now, Mr. Speaker, that the minority will consume some portion of their time, the gentleman from Pennsylvania having exhausted his time.

Mr. WALKER of Virginia. I yield one hour to the contestant [Mr. Yost].

Mr. YOST. Mr. Speaker, I thank the House for its courtesy, which I shall endeavor not to abuse.

The questions presented in this contest are few and clearly defined. I shall undertake to go at once to the very core of the case.

After throwing out 3,797 ballots cast by honest, duly qualified electors, the judges of election returned contestee by a plurality of 892. The committee concede that 731 of this plurality, including the 60 votes which they particularly count, were either erroneous or fraudulent. They give contestee a plurality of 161, and in order to do so throw out 183 net ballots cast for contestant, designated in the record as "imperfect," upon each of which the plain intention of the voter is clearly shown. Many of these identical ballots were counted and returned for contestant by Democratic judges of election. Nay, more; contestes leading counsel, in conducting the recount, treated them as absolutely valid, and without a moment's hesitation or a word of explanation assigned them in the tabulation to the candidate entitled to them.

If these 183 net ballots are allowed, this case must be decided in favor of the contestant upon the report of the committee, without further investigation.

This net result of 183 ballots for contestant is shown by the committee's report. On page 4 the committee say: "It appears that there were 454 'imperfectly marked' ballots for Yost and 271 for Tucker." The difference between these two sums. 183, is the net result in favor of Yost. But, in addition to this, there are 89 net a net total of 272 "imperfect" ballots for Yost.

Now, from what evidence are those "imperfect" ballots tabulated? The record shows that, acting under orders of the several lated? The record shows that, acting under orders of the several courts, a recount of the ballots was had in each county. This recount was conducted by representatives of each party to the contest. The different classes of ballots were tabulated under separate headings. The "imperfect" ballots for Tucker were tabulated under this heading: "All marked except Tucker—marking imperfect;" and the "imperfect" ballots for Yost were tabulated under this heading: "All marked except Yost—marking imperfect." Each class was placed under its distinct heading by agreement of the parties who conducted the recount. This agreement is certified in each instance, or else the fact of the agreement is proven by witnesses who witnessed the count and whose testimony is not disputed. Here is a sample certificate (page 336 of record): disputed. Here is a sample certificate (page 336 of record):

We have examined the vote in the city of Buena Vista at the Congressional election of November 6, 1894.

The above tabulation, to which this is attached, shows an accurate report of the ballots cast as above stated as carefully inspected by us.

Of course, it is understood that either party to the contest may reexamine the said ballots, if either so desire. By "all marked including caption, except," etc., is meant that "for Congress" as the caption of the ballots is erased. By "imperfectly marked is meant that all the names except that of the candidate to be voted for, while marked some in one way and some in another, were not marked in strict accordance with the statute—that is to say, "scratched by pen or pencil mark extending through three-fourths of the length of said name."

This the 5th day of February, 1895.

WINBORNE & BATCHELOR,

WINBORNE & BATCHELOR, Attorneys for H. St. G. Tucker. J. YOST.

Now, remember that upon each one of these ballots the plain, undisputed, confessed intention of the voter is shown. Upon this point there is no dispute, when you come down to the record, and there can be no disagreement.

there can be no disagreement.

The question, then, is narrowed down to this: Should a ballot which, upon investigation, clearly determines the intention of a voter to vote for a particular candidate be counted for that candidate? The courts say it shall be; and in this there is such unanimity of opinion that it is crystallized into a fixed principle of law. Numerous authorities on this question are cited in the views of the minority. I ask the attention of the House only to a few of them, and I further ask members to examine these references as diven in the trapert. Indee Cooley in his work or Corporations. given in that report. Judge Cooley, in his work on Constitutional Limitations, lays down the following as the law relating to the subject (page 609):

Every ballot should be complete in itself and ought not to require extrinsic evidence to enable the election officer to determine the voter's intention. Perfect certainty is not, however, required in these cases. It is sufficient if an examination leaves no reasonable doubt upon the intention, and technical accuracy is never required in any case. The cardinal rule is to give effect to the intention of the voter whenever it is not left in uncertainty. * * *

Chief Justice Cooley, from the bench, said:

All rules of law which are applied to the expression, in constitutional form, of the popular will should aim to give effect to the intention of the electors; and any arbitrary rule which is to have any other effect, without corresponding benefit, is a wrong, both to the parties who chance to be affected by it and to the public at large. The first are deprived of their offices and the second of their choice of public servants.

McCrary, Law of Elections, section 408, says:

It may often happen that a printed ticket is changed by the voter, by erasing some part of it, * * * to make it conform to his wishes. A ballot is to be construed in the same way as any other written or printed document, and the construction must be such as to give effect to the voter's intent if that can be ascertained from the face of the ballot, or in some cases, as we have seen, from the ballot as explained by evidence aliunde.

It is not necessary to introduce evidence aliunde in this case. These "imperfect" ballots come here under the agreed statement of both parties that the intention of the voter is shown.

In passing upon this direct question within the past year, the supreme court of Illinois, in the case of Parker vs. Orr (41 N. E. Reporter), said:

It has always been held in this State that if the intention of the voter can be fairly ascertained by the ballot, though not in strict conformity with the law, effect will be given to that intention. In other words, that the voter shall not be disfranchised or deprived of his right to vote through mere inadvertence, mistake, or ignorance, if an honest intention can be ascertained from his ballot * * Ballots appear in the record on which it is clear that the voters attempted to make a cross in the proper place to indicate the choice of candidate, but succeeded more or less imperfectly. It being clear in such cases that the intention was to conform to the statute and not to distinguish the ballot, they were properly counted.

American Encyclopedia of Law, page 343:

While every ballot should be perfect and complete, it is found that there are many deviations from technical accuracy, and questions of importance arise as to how far such deviations may go without rendering the ballot void. The principle governing such cases is that the intention of the voter shall prevail, and when the ballot itself, upon examination, leaves no reasonable doubt of the intention, this intention should be carried out by counting it.

In Brown vs. McCullum (14 American State Reports, pages 232 and 233) the court says:

If the ballot expresses the intention of the voter beyond a reasonable doubt, it is sufficient without regard to technical accuracy in the form of the ballot.

So far, then, as the courts can decide this question, this contestant must be seated.

The committee reaches its conclusion, giving the contestee a plurality of 161, by construing as absolutely mandatory that provision of the Virginia statute which requires a voter in marking his ballot to erase with pen or pencil marks extending three-fourths through their length the names of all candidates he does not wish to vote for, leaving only the name of the candidate he does wish to vote for. It holds that the slightest deviation from the strictest technical accuracy in the marking shall be fatal. As if conscious of the weakness of this position, the report hastens to

It is not for the committee to decide whether the provision as to the marking of the ballot is a wise or reasonable one or not.

It gives the very strictest technical construction to a provision of the statute which it is unwilling to admit is either wise or reasonable, and fails to recognize the binding force of other provisions of the same law, mandatory in their character, the reason and wisdom of which are apparent to the plainest understanding. There are some mandatory provisions in that Virginia law, and I want to ask the attention of the House to them for a moment. The law provides that judges of election shall be chosen, whenever possible, from members of different political parties. This

The law provides that judges of election shall be chosen, whenever possible, from members of different political parties. This is a wise and reasonable provision of the law. This is a mandatory provision of the law. The committee disregard it. If you enforce that one single provision and grant all else claimed by the majority, this contestant must be seated. At the following precincts, casting the following vote, there was no Republican judge, although the testimony shows that competent Republicans could have been appointed at each precinct:

	Yost.	Tucker.
Amherst County: McGruder Pedlar Mills Chestnut Furnace Millners	18 53 15 22 30	84 176 30 28 140
Total	138	408
Appomattox County: Chap. Stonewall	33 55	39 89
Total	87	128
Finvanna County: Scottsville Center Hill Goodson	20 17 15	69 36 40
Total	52	145
Nelson County: Arlington Buffalo Ridge Grasslawn Fabers Mills Lowesville	60 20 17 53 53	179 26 28 79 65
Total	203	377
Buckingham County: Wellwater	65	110
Total	65	110
Grand total	545	1,168

If this mandatory provision of the law is enforced and all else the committee claims is granted, this contestant must be seated by 400 plurality.

Again, the Virginia election law provides an officer whose duty it is to assist illiterate voters. This officer is called a special constable. The law was mandatory upon him to mark the ballots for the illiterate when the illiterate so requested. There can be no mistake about this, for that provision of the law relating to his duties have been constanted by the supreme court of appeals of Virginia. has been construed by the supreme court of appeals of Virginia. In the case of Pearson vs. Supervisors of Brunswick County the court said:

Nothing is better established than that where a power or duty is conferred upon an official by the use of the word "may," and the public are concerned in the due performance of that duty, the word "may" will be deemed to be mandatory and the officer can be compelled to perform it. * * * Such being the case, it is the duty of the special constable to render him who is blind, or unable by defective education to read, every assistance asked for and required by the elector to aid him in preparing his ballot.

It will be observed that the law makes no distinction between the man who is blind and the man who is unable by defective education to read. If either asks the constable to mark his ballot, the constable must mark it. This mandatory provision of the law was willfully and deliberately violated at a number of precincts. At Ward No. 1, Staunton, which returns contestee a plurality of 131, the constable, West, confesses that he would not mark, as will be seen by the following evidence (page 380, question 49): tion 49):

Mr. Yost did come to me, as I heretofore stated, and urged upon me to mark out the names on these ballots, and I positively declined to do it, as I considered that that was to be done by the elector.

At Arrington precinct the constable not only refused to mark for Republicans, and aided Democrats, but openly proclaimed at the polls that he did not propose to assist men who were voting against him. See testimony of A. J. Doswell, page 315, and that against him. See testimony of A. J. Doswell, page 315, and that of eleven others of the same precinct.

The same violation of law is proven at a number of other precincts. If this mandatory provision of the law is enforced, and all else the committee claims is granted, the contestant must be

Again, the Virginia law provides for an official ballot, and the greatest secrecy is thrown around the printing of the ballot. None but members of the Democratic party have any idea what that ballot contains or how it looks until they see it when they vote.

The electoral board, who have entire control of the election The electoral board, who have entire control of the election machinery for each county or city, is composed of three partisan Democrats, and generally includes the Democratic chairman. One member of this electoral board is designated to have the official ballot printed. The printer who executes the work takes an oath not to disclose "any information as to the size, style, or contents of the ballot." The member of the electoral board who supervises the printing takes a similar oath. By the use of the words "size" and "style," each in the singular number, the law clearly commands, not only by implication but by letter, that there shall be one size and one style, and that the ballots shall be printed uniformly. Harrison, member of the electoral board of Amherst and chairman of the Democratic party, confesses on the witness stand that he printed the ballot in seventy-five different styles; that they were printed in German text type, and that he instructed the constables not to mark for illiterates.

In four other counties this alternation of names on the ballot was recorded to was resorted to.

If this mandatory provision of the law is enforced, contestant must be seated by over 200 plurality, on the report of the committee, even granting every other claim made by the committee.

Mr. DANIELS. Will you allow me to ask you one question?

Mr. YOST. Certainly.

Mr. DANIELS. Suppose that the ballots that are partially erased—the lines running through the name sufficiently so as to indicate the intention of the voter—are all allowed, then how will midicate the intention of the voter—are all allowed, then how will the majority or plurality stand?

Mr. YOST. If you allow the imperfect ballots, the ballots which you describe there, then the contestant must be seated by 22 majority. Now, let me explain this. The committee practically counts 60 votes, and then they return the contestee—

Mr. PRINCE. One question there. I understand you to say that if the inversed the labels are all the inversed the seater of the contest of the seater of the contest of the con that if the imperfectly marked ballots are allowed to the contestant and like imperfect ballots are allowed to the contestee that the contestant is clearly elected by 22 plurality?

Mr. YOST. I do not want there to be any doubt about that.

There seems to have been some confusion in the minds of the com-

Mr. PRINCE. I Mr. YOST. Yes Please answer that question, yes or no.

Mr. YOST. Yes.

Now, let me explain again. Take the report of the committee itself. The committee says there are 454 of these imperfect ballots for Yost and 271 for Tucker. The difference between that is 183 in favor of Yost. Then, in addition to that, there were 89 net "imperfect" ballots proved out of the burned ballots. But disregarding the burned ballots, if you give the contestant the "imperfect" ballots and the same and the same and the same are same as a same and the same an fect" ballots assigned to him on the recount, and give to contestee the "imperfect" ballots assigned to him on the recount, the contestent is elected by 22 plurality upon the report of the committee.

Mr. TRACEY. I would like to ask the gentleman one question right there, if he will yield.

Mr. YOST. Certainly, sir.
Mr. TRACEY. I find here what purports to be copies of seven different kinds of alleged imperfectly marked ballots.

Mr. YOST. Yes, sir.

Mr. TRACEY. Do I understand the gentleman to say that ballots of each of these kinds were rejected as imperfect, corresponding to each of them?

Mr. YOST. Yes, sir. The gentleman can get at that just as well as anybody on earth. Remember that these were burned ballots, burned without any authority of law. We got proof as to some, and these were among them. Here are some blank ballots [holding them up]. I would like my friend over there [Mr. CODDING], and especially would I like the chairman of the committee who referred to this matter just now, to take these black bellots and take that description and see what hind so black ballots and take that description and see what kind of a ballot he will make.

Mr. HERMANN. What authority existed for the burning of those ballots?

Mr. YOST. None on earth.

Mr. YOSI. None on earth.

Mr. HERMANN. What was the purpose of the burning?

Mr. YOSI. Well, sir, I believe as honestly as I believe I am standing here that it was done, in most instances, for the purpose of defrauding me of those votes which they knew were mine. Now, I hope there will not be any cloud on the mind of any member as to what the result will be if these imperfect ballots are counted. They will elect me.

To recapitulate to this point:

First. The committee undertakes to make mandatory a provision of the statute which is clearly directory. If the law as determined by the courts is permitted to prevail, the contestant must be seated, even granting every other claim made by the committee.

Second. If the mandatory provision of the law in respect to the appointment of judges who have entire charge of the conduct of elections is enforced, the contestant must be given a plurality of over 400, even granting everything else claimed by the committee. Third. If the imperative mandate upon the constable of the supreme court of Virginia, construing that section of the statute relative to his duties is aboved the contestant must be given as all relating to his duties, is obeyed, the contestant must be given a plurality of over 400, even admitting everything else the committee

Fourth. If the mandatory provision of the law in respect to the printing of ballots is enforced, the contestant must be given a plurality of over 200, even conceding every other claim made by the committee

If any single one of these mandatory provisions of the law is enforced, the contestant, upon the report of the majority, must be

But the committee, it seems to me, ignores mandatory sections of the statute, and in disregard, it appears, of precedent, law, courts, and justice, construes as mandatory a section under which there could not possibly be a corrupt violation by the voter. It holds that the technical error of an honest voter, although complying substantially with the requirements of the law, shall be fatal, and that the deliberate fraud of sworn election officers, which induced that error, shall be given full effect. It holds that a ballot such as this [exhibiting imperfect ballot] is illegal, and that a ballot such as this [exhibiting imperrect ballot] is linegal, and that a ballot such as this [exhibiting photograph], which is a photograph of the Amherst ballot, is legal. Now, I ask every member of this House to refer to page 13 of the minority report and examine this "imperfect" ballot.

My friend on the other side [Mr. Codding] did not read all the testimony in this case, or rather he overlooked a portion of it. He said that the man who testified as to these three or four ballots had seen them, probably, the next day after they were cast. No, sir. The testimony shows that he was right there on the day of election, and that he saw the ballots at that time and made a memorandum of them before they were burned. The next day they were ashes. On the night of election, at the time they were counted, after the close of the polls, he saw those ballots, made his description of them, and took a written memorandum of it, and although several witnesses from that precinct were examined, in no single solitary instance did the other side attempt to controvert any witness produced by us to show the character of the ballots that were burned. I ask every member to examine these ballots in the minority report and say whether or not, under the law, and under the decision of the high courts, and before the still higher court of conscience, those are legal, valid ballots.

Here is one of them:

For The Office Member of Congress

The Tenth Congressional District of Virginia

> N. St. Geo. Tycker. Bembod A Cooke.

> > J. Yost,

C.H. Grove.

. Tropes Selden Cowdon

Ballots such as these are the ballots which, if counted, give con-

Ballots such as these are the ballots which, if counted, give contestant the seat under the report of the committee.

And ballots of this class, although sufficient in number for the purpose, represent only a fraction of the Republican vote cast in the Tenth district and not counted. The poll books show that 3.797 ballots cast by duly qualified electors were not returned by the judges of election. This wholesale disfranchisement was the accomplished result of a conspiracy entered into by Democratic officials to defrand Republican voters. It was known that the accomplished result of a conspiracy entered into by Democratic officials to defraud Republican voters. It was known that the Republicans were seeking to prepare the voters of that party for a proper exercise of their rights under the new law. To this end circulars of instruction were issued and openly distributed, in which changes in the law were pointed out and the new method of voting explained. Tens of thousands of slips with contestant's name printed in plain roman type were scattered broadcast. Schools were organized in which those who could not read were taught to recognize the name "J. Yost." They were instructed to study the formation of the letters; to count the letters in the name, and to see that it contained only five; to compare the length of the name with other names of candidates, it being the shortest. of the name with other names of candidates, it being the shortest, and to so familiarize themselves with its appearance that they would be able to recognize it.

It was understood at the opening of the polls that an intelligent Republican would vote first, and then come out and tell those who had not voted the location of contestant's name on the ballot, Knowing this, the Democratic officials, who had absolute control of the election machinery, instituted measures not only to circumvent the educational work of the Republican party, but to make talmost impossible for an illiterate to vote the Republican ticket at all. In addition, they instructed the constables not to mark the ballots for illiterates, but when the Republican voter asked for assistance to run over the names on the ballots and then let him do his own marking. They further announced that if any man do his own marking. They further announced that if any man other than the constable undertook to aid the voter before he went into the booth he would be liable to fine and imprisonment.

And so when the illiterate Republican approached the polls, instead of finding there the aid and assistance which the law provided, he found the officers of the law leagued against him. He asked the constable to mark the ballot. The constable, in utter disregard of law, refused. He asked where Yost's name was. The constable ran over the names and told him to mark himself. The constable ran over the names and told him to mark himself. He looked for the name on the ballot with which he was familiar. He drew from his pocket the little slip with the name of J. Yost printed on it. If he depended upon his recently acquired knowledge of letters, he was lost. In one county he was confronted with names printed in German text, which was Greek to him. In another county they were printed in script type. In another county, if he depended on counting the letters in the name, he could find no name with only five letters, the name having been changed from "J. Yost" to "Jacob Yost." If he compared the length of the name to find the shortest he found the names spaced enanged from "3. Yest to "Jacob Yost. If he compared the length of the name to find the shortest, he found the names spaced out so that all were the same length. And so, like a blind man groping—he was mentally blind—he marked his ballot as best he could, and four times out of five so mutilated it that it failed to express his intention.

His path to the polls was beset with enemies upon every side.

The very guardians of the law, to whom he should have looked for protection, became the instruments of his disfranchisement. protection, became the instruments of his distranchisement. Is it a wonder that thousands of legal voters lost their votes? Could warfare against the unprotected have been more cruel and merciless? Ah, it was a brave battle in which these Democratic officials were engaged. The highwayman who assaults helpless women and children and robs them of their purse is scarcely less dauntless than these chivalrous Virginians who assaulted the mentally weak and unarmed and robbed them of their rights. [Applause.] But even the few who escaped, who ran the gauntlet and did record their will, are to be sacrificed now. The work which fraud could not thoroughly accomplish is in effect completed by the action of the committee.

the committee.

After the Light Brigade had charged into the "valley of death," and the remnant—all that was left of them, had emerged, begrimed, and battle scarred, from the "gates of hell,"—suppose at that time an inspector of Her Majesty's troops had marshaled them in review, and, forgetting all of their splendid services, ordered them under arrest for failure to appear uniformed and accountered as the tactics required. What would history have written of that inspector? And yet in a lesser degree this committee has been as exacting. They say to the remnant of those voters who triumphed over the forces of fraud with which they were surrounded—who stand out the survivors of over 2,000 of their kind: "It is true you accomplished your purpose; it is true you surrounded—who stand out the survivors of over 2,000 of their kind: "It is true you accomplished your purpose; it is true you registered your will so that no man can misunderstand it; but then you failed to mark your ballot with the neatness and precision the law expects, and therefore we disfranchise you. You might as well have perished with the others."

Ah, gentlemen, if this House sets such a precedent as that, it will be useless for Republicans in Virginia to go to the polls. It will not be necessary to transpose names on the ballot and print them in a foreign tongue. A Democratic legislature, driven by the force of public opinion, has already declared such methods infamous and provided for their punishment by fiercely declaratory definements of thelaw. But now the committee has decreed, in effect, that all our efforts in behalf of honest elections shall be nullified. You have pointed out to the tricksters a far easier way You have pointed out to the tricksters a far easier way nullified. You have pointed out to the tricksters a far easier way to accomplish their purpose, and made detection almost impossible. The officer whose duty it is to assist illiterates, if he be dishonest, or, as the committee puts it, imbued "with an excess of partisan zeal," will simply mark the ballot so that one name will not be three-fourths erased, and then throw it out in the count. If, then, we appeal for justice, we shall be confronted with the decision of a Republicant House condensate for an advantage of the state of the Republican House, condoning the fraud and making it thoroughly effective.

I want this "imperfect ballot" examined by members of this House, and I want them to answer whether or not it is right to count it; and then I want them to consider for one moment the circumstances surrounding the election, and say whether or not justice demands that it shall be counted.

Now, then, I want to take up this Amherst ballot, referred to on page 27 of minority report. Here is a photograph of it [exhibiting]. My friend over there objected to the print as made for the record. He can not object to this, for this is a photograph. Take it and see whether it looks any better than the representation you have in the record. And remember that if you throw out these ballots and grant everything else that the committee claims you must seat this contestant.

FOR MEMBER OF THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES OF* THE UNITED STATES from the Tenth Congressional District of Virginia.

Edmund R. Coche, 3. St. Geo. Incher, James Seldon Cowdon. I. Host, C. H. Grove,

Remember also, in looking at this ballot, that the Democratic chairman of the county committee of Amherst County, who was the secretary of the electoral board, and the member who had these official ballots printed, boldly confessed on the witness stand that it was printed not in one style, but in seventy-five different styles: that the names were printed in German text, so that they would not be intelligible to the man who could only read plain roman, and that he instructed the constables not to mark for illiterates.

Does any man doubt that the law was thus violated for a fraudulent purpose, and that the fraud intended was consummated? Can anyone examine a facsimile of the ballot and consider for one instant the circumstances surrounding its issuance without will anyone dare say that the issuance of such a ballot was not a corrupt and outrageous abuse of power on the part of the electoral board and a willful and deliberate violation of the express provisions of the law? If there is a man in this House who conscientionally beliaves that such a ballot was prepared and issued. scientiously believes that such a ballot was prepared and issued with an honest intent and for an honest purpose, I should like him to stand up and say so. I should like to see how he looks and where he comes from. If there is a man in this House who before his conscience and his God can say that in issuing such a ballot the plain mandate of the law was not violated with a fraudulent intent, I should like him to stand up and say so. Yet the committee, whilst mildly suggesting that the use of such a ballot was a trick which can not be defended, give full effect to the fraud and reward with the only approval they covet those whom they de-reward with the only approval they covet those whom they denounce as guilty tricksters.

They execrate the criminal and admit the crime. [Applause.] Does that in any way redress the wrong done? Those against whom these moral homilies are directed will doubtless chuckle with inward glee at the method adopted for their punishment. They were but pawns upon the board, responsive to the master hand that moved them. They were neither the originators nor the beneficiaries of the methods they employed. Their sole object was to return a member to this House who they must have believed to return a member to this House who, they must have believed, could not have been elected through the processes prescribed by law. The mild rebuke administered by the committee will be refreshing after the blistering denunciation of honest men of their own party. It will be grateful music to their ears to hear that what honest Virginians have condemned as fraud so outrageous what nonest Virginians have condemned as fraud so outrageous as to bring disgrace upon a whole people was, after all, merely "an excess of partisan zeal," and that as an evidence that it was justified and justifiable a Republican committee crowns with success the work of their hands. [Applause.]

Let me give you an idea of how honest Democrats of Virginia regard this "excess of partisan zeal." The Richmond Times, the leading Democratic paper of Virginia, whose owner and editor was at that time a member of the Democratic State committee, characterized its as "masterniece of trickery that reflects undying characterized it as a "masterpiece of trickery that reflects undying infamy upon its manipulators."

The Petersburg Index-Appeal denounced it in bitter terms, and in demanding the repeal of the law under which such foul fraud was perpetrated declares:

Oh! but an honest law can not pass the legislature, it is alleged. If this be so, then the reason is all the stronger why honest men should vote for such a law and put on record the scoundrels who are opposed to honest elections. On an issue of honesty and dishonesty there can be no middle ground. Men must either be honest or dishonest. Expediency is the argument of cowards, and to compromise with fraud is to condone it.

In writing on the same line the Lynchburg News says:

The Democratic party has honest men, and the honest and conscientious members of that party ought to assert themselves and take the management of things out of the hands of the little two-by-four schemers who haven't mind or soul enough to serve the State honestly and capably. The time has come when honest people should quit voting for charlatans.

In the same vein the Danville Register says:

Unless the legislature amends the election law so as to do all in the power of men to insure honesty in the matter of elections, the Democratic party will be driven from power by an indignant people, and we do not hesitate to say that this paper will be found cheek by jowl with the people.

And so I might quote from a score of the most influential Democratic papers in Virginia.

And if any one agency more than another contributed to this quickening of the public conscience, it was this identical Amherst ballot. When this object lesson, this physical evidence of the fraud, was brought face to face with the people, supplemented by the confession of the man who issued it, they no longer hesitated as to what their duty was, and with denunciation deep and bitter they demanded the repeal of the law under which such crimes were committed.

In the legislative canvass of 1895 this ballot played a wholesome part. I myself in public meetings have held it up before hundreds of honest Democrats and asked if there was one who doubted that it was a fraud or dared defend it. And never yet have I known a man so lost to shame that he would step from out the crowd and openly champion such a cause. So intense was public feeling that in those sections where elections are not farces no man stood that in those sections where elections are not farces no man stood the ghost of a chance of election who was not pledged to amend the law. In the white section of the State, from Harpers Ferry to the Tennessee line—300 miles—not one man was elected who did not pledge himself to fight against such methods as this ballot evidences. The author of the law, Walton, whose name is linked with it, repudiated his own child, notwithstanding which the honest Democrats crucified him politically.

honest Democrats crucified him politically.

In my own county—the county in which I was born and where I live and where this contestee lives—a county which used to give from 1,200 to 1,500 Democratic majority, the former member of the legislature, who had voted for the bill, was the Democratic nominee, and, although he begged for the opportunity to undo his work, the people would not trust him, and to-day, for the first time in its history, Augusta County is represented in the legislature by a Republican. Wherever the whites largely predominated and the elections were fair, the honesty of the people asserted itself. But in the black section, where cheating has become chronic, enough men were returned to the legislature to prevent the enactment of an honest law. But even they were forced to recognize ment of an honest law. But even they were forced to recognize the damning evidence of this Amherst ballot, and amended the law so that it in terms prescribed a special penalty for such

And now, when the moral stomach of honest Democracy has revolted against this foul concoction, the poisoned chalice is pre-revolted against this foul concoction, the poisoned chalice is presented to the lips of a Republican House of Representatives and they are bidden to drink oblivion to every rule of right.

Mr. Speaker, this contest rises above the interest of individuals; far above the narrow confines of partisanism. It involves far more than the disposal of a seat in this House. The decision you render here must stand as a precedent, and it means much, oh, so much, to the people of the South, and especially of Virginia. We are engaged in a great struggle there. Party ties have been forgotten, party lines have been obliterated, and the honest men of every political faith are standing shoulder to shoulder in a of every political faith are standing shoulder to shoulder in a common cause

For years the stigma of foul election methods has rested upon the South. It has disgraced and degraded our section. It has debauched our people. It has retarded material prosperity. It has stood as a barrier to enterprise and capital. It has sapped the manhood of our men and choked the pathway of our youth with the noxious growth of dishonesty. Its deadening influence had stupe-fied the public conscience until it had become well-nigh dormant. But now, thank God, in Virginia, at least, the reaction from the long debauch has come. The shock which this ballot produced long debauch has come. The shock which this ballot produced broke the stupor, and quickened conscience, aroused to a sense of the deadly peril which environed, took up the cry of "Honest elections!" and, starting in the mountains, where the men are white and free, pressed forward to the combat and drove before it the fell forces of fraud. In every section and in every county recruits are rallying to the standard. The mask of that miserable sophists where the section is the salfab at home terms are the salfab at home terms. istry, negro rule, has been torn from the face of the selfish schemers and their naked iniquity laid bare. Lashed by the scourge of public opinion, repudiated by honest Democrats among whom they operated, these guilty tricksters bring their ill-gotten gains to the portals of this Capitol, and here seek to find that refuge, solace, and encouragement to which they have become strangers If you adopt the report of this committee, you in effect crown them with success; you imbue them with fresh "excess of partisan zeal;" you approve their methods; you condone their frauds; you point out to them new fields for the exercise of their peculiar talent: you bid them godspeed in their work of public debauchery

And as you exalt them so do you turn your faces from the brave, true men of every party who are striving to lift the South up to a higher plane. You are making the work before them harder and harder; for if, in this high court, the simplest, plainest justice is denied, the effect will be disheartening, and the cause of right and public honesty will be dealt a blow its open enemies could not inflict.

These are the contending forces marshaled in this contest. Between them you must decide. [Prolonged applause.]

Mr. JENKINS. Mr. Speaker, I appreciate the embarrassment in speaking in an election case in the House of Representatives at any time, but it is especially embarrassing to attempt to discuss the legal aspects of this case after the splendid political argument to which we have just listened. I want to say to my colleagues in this House that I am in sympathy with all that the gentleman from Virginia, Mr. Yost, has said with reference to the condition of things down there generally; and I have listened to this same argument from many gentlemen from Virginia ever since I have been a member of this House.

If I could have been influenced by sentiment, undoubtedly I might have been on the other side of this case. But I sat down with this committee determined to discharge my full duty as a member of this House, and not merely as a member of the Republican party. I forgot, as long as I sat in that important place, that I was a Republican. I kept strictly and solely in view that a high duty had been thrust upon me, and I made up my mind that I would discharge my duty, even if I later had to be called a Massachusetts mugwump.

Now, Mr. Speaker, it was a very difficult matter for this committee to take up this case, and I was so much prejudiced, so far as I was concerned, that I asked to be excused from sitting upon the subcommittee. I took this record to myself, and alone I went through it from one end to the other in the light of what had been previously told me in reference to this case, and I came to the same conclusion that six other gentlemen of the committee had arrived at, and neither one of us knew what was in the mind of the other.

Now, Mr. Speaker, I agreed with the subcommittee, and I agreed with six of my colleagues in this committee, that the contestee in this case is entitled to retain his seat; and, as was well said by the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. Codding] this morning, that we did it reluctantly, after the consumption of much time, is true. We did not hurry the decision in this case, because we realized on every hand how much party feeling there was here, and we made up our minds that we would be right so far as we were concerned. And I want to say to my colleagues now, so far as I am con-cerned, I feel just exactly as a judge did in Wisconsin who sent a cerned, I feel just exactly as a judge did in Wisconsin who sent a man to the penitentiary for life. As the prisoner was going out of the court room he said: "I would like to talk a little further with the judge in reference to this case." The judge said: "Sir, I have done my duty; you go on and perform yours." I feel so in reference to this case. I have no personal feeling in the matter. I entered upon the discharge of my duty without any feeling of

I have not solicited a vote upon this case, and I apprehend gen-tlemen of this House will determine it as they think it ought to temen of this house will determine it as they think it ought to be determined. I want to say to gentlemen that this establishes a precedent, and I am going to call your attention to a precedent established in this very Chamber by a Democratic House—a precedent of seating a Republican here upon just exactly the same law and the same evidence as in this case. If there had been any doubt about it, the committee would have given it willingly in favor of the Republican contestant, but we could not do it. I suppose that every gentleman of this House expected every member of your Elections Committee would look over this case fairly and fully himself, and then determine each case according to the law and evidence, and not according to the sentiments that seem to impress the gentleman from Virginia who is seeking to obtain a seat in this House. I do not blame that gentleman for appealing to all the party feeling and party prejudice that may be here to-day, and we know how he stirs up the Republican heart when he refers to the conditions South. But that made no difference with any gentleman upon the Elections Committee, and I will say now. Mr. Speaker, that is all the Southern ease that have acceptant now, Mr. Speaker, that in all the Southern cases that have come before the Committee on Elections No. 3 there is nothing so disgraceful or unlawful as you read in the papers this morning as having recently occurred in the State of Pennsylvania, where I understand they are all reformers.

Now, Mr. Speaker, I know that there are a multitude of prejudices in each one of these cases. We are told that everything is fraudulent down there; that every single officer is in the employ and under the control of the Democratic party; that there is nothand under the control of the Democratic party; that there is nothing but conspiracy down there, and that no man can obtain his rights. I want to say, as a Northern Republican, that if there is no more fraud ever found in a case that shall come from the North than is found in this case it will speak volumes for that section. There is no fraud in this case, practically, compared with the cry of "fraud," Mr. Speaker.

of "fraud," Mr. Speaker.

Now, then, I want to address myself to a matter that controlled the committee. There are some facts in this case that this House ought to understand; and I want my colleagues who have to determine this case, and who I trust will determine it rightly, even if I am wrong, to look into the case as presented, divesting themselves of the sentiment that has grown up here, and let us see in a moment whether the election boards in this Congressional district have discharged their duties or not.

Now, Mr. Speaker, the minority in this case attempt to seat the contestant, as I understand it, by counting votes that could not or should not be counted under any circumstances. One gentleman from New York to-day called attention to the constitutional man from New York to-day called attention to the constitutional provision, which I understood him to say controls very largely in this case. I will read it. It is section 5, Article I, of the Constitution of the United States; that is:

Each House shall be the judge of the elections, returns, and qualifications of its own members.

It is true that is a part of the Constitution of the United States; but it does not control in this case, Mr. Speaker. There is another provision that has great power in connection with this one. But even if we shut our eyes to that very provision of the Constitution, I want to say in reference to this that when the framers gave place to it in the Constitution, and said that the House "shall be the judge of the elections, returns, and qualifications of its own members," it was to be governed by law. They meant to say that there should be no other tribunal created that could determine finally who should and who should not be entitled to a seat in the finally who should and who should not be entitled to a seat in this House. They certainly intended, when they gave this grant of power to each House of Congress that the House determining the question would be governed by the law and the evidence in each case, and that is just as strongly implied as though it had been expressed and made a part of that great instrument. But the other provision of the Constitution to which I desire to call attention is section 4 of Article I, which provides that-

The times, places and manner of holding elections for Senators and Representatives, shall be prescribed in each State by the legislature thereof; but the Congress may at any time by law make or alter such regulations, except as to the places of choosing Senators.

Under that provision of the Constitution of the United States this House is bound by the law of the State of Virginia. It takes both Houses, it takes the Congress of the United States to nullify the law of the State of Virginia which seeks to regulate the election of members of this House. Such is the construction which has been placed upon that provision of the Constitution by the Supreme Court of the United States on more than one occasion. That court has held that in the absence of Congressional legislation the law of each State prevails. See case of Siebold, 100 U.S., 371; Clark, 100 U.S., 391, and the case of Yarborough, 110 U.S., 651

Now, Mr. Speaker, it will be noticed that in this case the minority of the committee do not make any attack upon this law. On the contrary, they seek to uphold it. They approve of it in each the contrary, they seek to uphold it. They approve of it in each and every particular. I speak of this point now because this case is to be followed by another in which they entirely ignore this law; but in this case they seek to uphold it in order to give the contestant the seat. They cite this law approvingly and they speak of it as mandatory. Now, the majority of the committee has felt the force of the view which I am about to state. The State of Virginia has passed an election law regulating the election of members of this House from that State, and inasmuch as no attack has been made upon that law, we were of the cripion that the law. has been made upon that law, we were of the opinion that the law was constitutional, and we felt bound to conform to it and to regard its provisions. Further than that, Mr. Speaker, we looked into the case for the purpose of determining whether there were any questions beyond that, and I think I am safe in saying that the only other question that arises in this case is whether or not the election officers acted fairly under the provisions of the Virginia law, and the majority think they did.

I want to say, further, that my contention is that when the supreme court of a State has construed one of its laws and held it to be good, that construction is binding upon us as a part of Gentlemen on the other side have referred at various times to a decision made by the court of appeals of the State of Virginia, and they do not attack that decision at all, but seem to subscribe to it. Now, that case holds that that law of the State of Virginia is valid, and that its provisions are mandatory. The State of Virginia having seen fit to say by law what should be done in conducting elections, we looked into the record to see whether or not that law had been complied with. I say that the decision of the court of appeals of the State of Virginia has got to be respected by this House under the Constitution of the United States, because the construction given by a State court to its State constitution is binding, except when the Supreme Court of the United States is called upon to decide whether a legislative act or provision in a State constitution creates a contract. (Jefferson Branch Bank vs. Skeliey, 1 Black U. S., 436.) We looked into the case and we found that there was a charge that something over 3,000 ballots were destroyed or that the election officers had refused to count them. That was the first question that met us, and we of the majority have classified those ballots. found that in one case there was a large number of ballots burned. The number has been stated to be 1.021. We found also that there was another class of ballots that we have described as "imperfect" ballots. Those are the ballots referred to where a line was not drawn through the names of the candidates for whom the voters did not desire to vote. Then there were "blurred" the voters did not desire to vote. Then there were "hitred ballots, 68 in number, and there were 1,283 that we call "caption-marked" ballots, where the caption was entirely marked out. The election officers were furnished with these various points when they came to count the ballots.

Now, Mr. Speaker, I noticed the emphasis and force with which

Now, Mr. Speaker, I noticed the emphasis and force with which the contestant in this case, Mr. Yost, referred to the act of these election officers in burning those ballots, and some gentleman upon the floor arose and asked him by what authority they had been burned, and he said emphatically, "By no authority." Let us go back a little and examine this matter, because we ought to treat these Virginians just as fairly as we would wish them to treat us. I do not think that all the gentlemen running elections in the State of Virginia, or in the South, are scoundrels. I do not want to subscribe to any such sentiment or to have any such idea go to subscribe to any such sentiment, or to have any such idea go forth. I do want to believe that there are some honest men to be forth. I do want to believe that there are some honest men to be found, and that you can find some of them in the State of Virginia. The people of that State are a part of this great nation, and I think it is wrong to denounce by wholesale the men who are charged with official duties in Virginia, or in any other State of the South, when there is not a particle of evidence of fraudulent action on their part, when, to use a common phrase, there is not evidence enough against them to hang a dog. Yet we are told loudly about the great fraud that was perpetrated down there and the great conspiracy entered into to deprive the contestant of a seat in this House. Sir, the committee sat for weeks, and they did not have before them a particle of evidence of what has been stated in the discussion here to-day. What the Democratic papers down in that part of Virginia have said 1 do not care anything about. I have very little respect for a Democrat anyway. When two Democrats get to fighting, they are liable to say as mean things of each other as of anybody else. In this case, when they could not fight with Republicans they got to fighting among themselves. I have read the article which has been read here to-day, and I say there is nothing in the Virginia law which would justify any such statements. The law could not be repealed nor in any way amended except so as to prohibit the printing of those ballots in any particular type. the South, when there is not a particle of evidence of fraudulent ballots in any particular type.

Now, if you will look this case through you will not find enough evidence of fraud to talk about. The question is whether these men down there did their duty when they came to the disposition of these ballots. Now, let us call the number of burned ballots, for the sake of Now, let us call the number of burned ballots, for the sake of the argument, 1,021. Let us look into the evidence in this case and see what went to make up those ballots. All the election officers of this Congressional district in Virginia—I do not remember a single exception—unanimously agreed that those were such imperfect ballots that they could not be counted for anybody. That was the decision in regard to every one of those ballots.

Mr. HALL. The gentleman means the burned ballots?
Mr. JENKINS. Yes; the burned ballots. I am talking about them and nothing else for the present. I say it was agreed with practical unanimity by all the election officers that those were ballots which could not be counted under any circumstances for any body.

anybody.

Mr. POWERS. Did it appear before the committee for whom those ballots had been cast

Mr. JENKINS. No. That is one of the things that we have complained of. Now, I will call attention a little later to the evidence upon this particular point.

Mr. MILES. The gentleman intimated a while ago that he would state whether there was any authority for destroying those ballots. Mr. JENKINS. I am coming to that; I can not make my whole speech in one minute. Mr. Speaker, if you will look into the election laws of the different States and Territories of the Union you will find that they have various provisions with respect to the preservation or the destruction of all ballots that can not be counted for anybody.

remember that in my own State serious questions arose on this remember that in my own State serious questions arose on this subject, and it became necessary to provide by legislation for the preservation of imperfect ballots that could not be counted for anybody, because in some cases they were destroyed by the election boards and in other cases they were sent up. There was confusion with reference to those ballots. Now, in the State of Virginia, up to the time of the passage of what is called the Walton act, which is in controversy here, the law had provided that whenever the election board got through counting the ballots and were sending up their official returns to the superior officer, all the ballots which were called "defective" ballots—that is, ballots that could not be counted for anybody—should be burned. That was could not be counted for anybody-should be burned.

Now, it should be understood that the law under which this election was held was a new law. It was new all the way through. There had been no opportunity for the election officers to act under it and to familiarize themselves with it. A majority of the committee—seven out of nine—agreed, with reference to these ballots, that the election officers in seven had been had been ballots. that the election officers in each case had but discharged a legal duty in what they did; that is to say, there was no evidence of a conspiracy. We have been told here by the gentleman seeking the seat that these ballots were burned by reason of a great conspiracy. Mr. Speaker, there was before the committee no evidence of a conspiracy, and there is no such evidence before the House. I do not suppose those election officers had any question in their minds as to their authority in the matter, for they acted variously. In some districts they preserved the ballots which could not be counted, and in others they burned them; so that they burned, we will say, at least 1,021, and I think that in every case they honestly believed that they had a right to do so.

Mr. HALL. The gentleman says, as I understand, that there was a unanimous agreement among the election officers that those 1,021 ballots which were burned were so imperfect that they could

1,021 ballots which were burned were so imperfect that they could not be counted for anyone.

Mr. JENKINS. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALI. Were the election officers who agreed in that statement members of different political parties?

Mr. JENKINS. In many cases there was a large number of Republicans concurring in that view. And I want to state here that according to my remembrance of this entire record, where ever there was a Republican qualified to sit, he was permitted to sit; and every Republican judge who sat agreed that those ballots should not be counted for anybody, while I think one or two held that they should not have been destroyed but should have been sent up. They all agreed, however, that those ballots have been sent up. They all agreed, however, that those ballots should not be counted for anybody.

Mr. THOMAS. Who passed on the qualifications of the offi-

Who decided the question whether a Republican was qualified to sit on the election board or not?

Mr. JENKINS. In many cases it was shown that those who had been chosen as election officers could not read and write. In a great many cases where men had been appointed they refused to sit. There is nothing in the law, I will say, providing who shall determine their qualifications. But when a man presented himself who could not read or write, there was no difficulty in satisfying him that he was disqualified to sit on the election board.

Mr. THOMAS. Was not the decision made by the county electoral board?

oral board?
Mr. WALKER of Virginia. May I interrupt the gentleman?

Mr. JENKINS. Certainly.

Mr. WALKER of Virginia. I would like the gentleman to point out a case in which the judges decline to act.

Mr. THOMAS. Mr. Speaker, the gentleman has not answered my question.

Mr. MONDELL. May I ask the gentleman a question?

Mr. JENKINS. Mr. Speaker, I shall be compelled to decline to yield to three gentlemen talking at the same time. I will hear the question of the gentleman from Wyoming.

Mr. MONDELL. I believe the gentleman has stated that under the Walton law it was provided that imperfect ballots should be burned.

Mr. JENKINS. No; excuse me; not that. I say that there is no provision of the Walton act with reference to ballots that could no provision of the watton act with reference to ballots that could not be counted for anybody or that such disposition was authorized to be made of them. But prior to the adoption of that act the law provided that when they could not be counted for anybody they must be then and there destroyed.

Mr. MONDELL. But was there any provision at the time this election was held or any statute of the State of Virginia allowing their destruction?

Mr. JENKINS. I have already stated, Mr. Speaker, at least three times that there was no such provision.

Mr. MILES. If the gentleman will permit me, as I understand it, the point is this, that these gentlemen in Virginia, after the repeal of the law, were not acting from a conspiracy, but were probably acting in ignorance of the law. Mr. JENKINS. Undoubtedly. They destroyed them in each case where they were destroyed under the impression, as the testimony shows, that they had the right to do so.

Mr. MONDELL. Does the gentleman admit that the burning of the ballots was illegal?

Mr. JENKINS. Why, certainly not—
Mr. MONDELL. But you say there was no law for it.
Mr. JENKINS. Each State in the Union has seen the necessity of providing by law that the ballots should not be destroyed. there was no law in this case; and if there was no law providing against their destruction in this case, there is no penalty, especially when the parties believed that they were acting in conformity with

Mr. MONDELL. Do the committee hold that, as there was no provision against the destruction of the ballots, they had every right to destroy them?

Mr. JENKINS. It was not necessary for the committee to consider that question, and they did not have any evidence as to whom the ballots were cast for.

Mr. BRUMM. Will the gentleman yield to me for a question?

Mr. JENKINS. Certainly.

Mr. JENKINS. Certainly.
Mr. BRUMM. You say that there were 1,000 or more ballots that were destroyed—burned?

Mr. JENKINS. Yes, sir.
Mr. BRUMM. Can you give any reason why the ballots were not all burned?

I yielded to the gentleman from Pennsylvania supposed that he was going to ask me a question in good

Mr. BRUMM. I did ask a question in good faith, if the gentleman will answer it.

Mr. GROSVENOR. It is a very pertinent question.

Mr. BRUMM. If the gentleman declines to answer, of course that settles the matter.

Mr. JENKINS. I do not decline to answer. But the gentleman knows that inasmuch as we did not see any one of these gen-tlemen who acted upon the board, we could not tell their motives. It is, therefore, practically a senseless question.

Mr. BRUMM. Can the gentleman inform the House why certain ballots were selected to be burned?

Mr. JENKINS. From the fact that it was the unanimous agreement of every election officer that they could not be counted for anybody.

Mr. WALKER of Virginia. That is not an accurate statement, as I will show

Mr. BRUMM. The gentleman from Virginia says that that is

Mr. JENKINS. Very well; I must decline to be interrupted, as I want to proceed with my argument.

Mr. THOMAS. Will the gentleman yield to me for a question

Mr. JENKINS. No, sir; I decline to yield, inasmuch as the gentleman is a member of the committee and I could not convince him. I must decline to yield. I could not convert him, as I have tried for months to do it without success.

Now, some question might arise with reference to the question of fraud, and I notice that the gentleman who is seeking to obtain his seat here did not disclose to the House a very important fact, which I think, when the House becomes informed of it, will account for much that has been charged up to the question of fraud. This was a new enactment. There was not any gentleman in the State familiar with it; and I think, according to my experience, a learned gentleman, a man learned in the law, a business man, is just as liable to be fooled under the Australian system as the man who can not read at all. This, I repeat, was an enactment with which no one was familiar. It was new. The evidence discloses and the statements disclose the fact that there was a large number of ignorant people in the district, and in fact all through the State, who could not read or write and would require the help of some one to prepare the ballots; and the law provided for the appointment of a special constable who was there to aid the illiterate or ignorant voter, and whose duties are clearly defined, and a penalty attached to a failure on his part to properly discharge the duties of the office.

Now, Mr. Speaker, without waiting to know what the action of those people would be down there, the gentleman seeking a seat in this House prepared a circular, which the evidence in this case discloses was distributed all over the district, a circular which is in evidence, which came to us in a legitimate way, and has his name upon it, which is called "Instructions to precinct committeemen." I ask here to print it as a part of my remarks:

INSTRUCTIONS TO PRECINCY COMMITTEEMEN.

To precinct committeemen:

The enactment of the Walton election law by the last legislature has not, as many suppose, repealed the Anderson-McCormick election law, under which elections have been held for the past ten years. Except the printing of the tickets by the electoral boards of the respective counties, and the appointment of constables and their duties and the method of voting, the old law remains the same. The principal changes are as follows, and these apply to the voter directly on election day:

First. The voter must apply to the judges of election for his ticket. Second. After procuring the ticket, the voter goes into the voting booth and scratches the names of the persons he does not want to vote for. Third. Having completed his ticket, the voter at once takes it to the judge of election, who receives the same and deposits it in the ballot box.

It is absolutely necessary that precinct committeemen thoroughly familiarize themselves with the provisions of the new law, so that they may instruct the voters and make known to them all of their rights and duties in the premises.

To this end the voters who can not read should be organized into classes and taught to read the printed name of "J. Yost" (see inclosed slips) so that they will recognize it when they see it on the official ballot, and scratch out the names of all other candidates.

You understand that there will be no ticket holders, as heretofore, about the polls. The only ballots that can be used on the day of election are those furnished to the voter by the judge of election. On this official ballot the names of all the candidates will be printed, and the voter will scratch out the names of the parties he does not want to vote for.

When the polls are opened, the quickest, brightest, and most intelligent Republicans at the precinct should vote first. He will have two minutes and a half in the booth, and can then make the closest observation of the ticket, and afterwards describe it to the voter who can not read, explaining to him where the name of "J. Yost" is located on the ticket, and what names to scratch out.

If the committeemen have any reason at all to suspect the absolute honesting and fairness of the constable, then the illiterate voter should not ask him to assist in the preparation of his ticket. The constable is not permitted to enter the booth makes the voter requests him to do so. If unfairness is suspected, the

JOHN A. NOON, Secretary Congressional Committee.

STAUNTON, VA.

Without taking up time to read this circular, I will call the attention of the House to the material parts of it which will account for the confusion down there in this district, which did not occur in any other of the districts where they had election contests in Virginia.

This circular says that if the committeemen in each county have any reason at all to suspect the absolute honesty and fairness of the constable, then the illiterate voter should not ask him to assist in the preparation of the ticket. The constable is not permitted to enter the booth unless the voter requests him to do so.

If unfairness is suspected, therefore, let the illiterate voter be thoroughly instructed by the Republican who has already voted as to how to scratch his ballot, and after the committeeman is satisfied that he can do this, let the voter go into the booth and prepare his own ballot.

In other words, Mr. Speaker, the instructions were that they were to totally ignore the special constables.

Mr. GROSVENOR. Does the gentleman intend to argue that under a new system of balloting it is illegal or corrupt or in any wise immoral or wrong to instruct the voter how to cast the

Mr. JENKINS. Oh, I want to say to my very good friend from Ohio that he must place his own construction on my argument.

I am stating my view.

Mr. GROSVENOR. Is it not a fact that in every State in the Union these schools of instruction have been instituted?

Mr. JENKINS. That does not alter the point I am making

mr. JENKING.

In the continuing of interest and the policy of the land of the continuing of the contin that this circular of instructions which was sent throughout the district advised voters to keep away from this special constable who was appointed there to aid them, and rather than trust to the special constable they undertook to mark their ballots for them-selves, and there is where this confusion arose. Now, I want to say, and I challenge gentlemen on the other side to refute it, if they can, that you can not find in this record, from first to last, a particle of evidence from any single voter or elector in that disparticle of evidence from any single voter of elector in that that trict that will justify you in thinking for a moment that he applied, as far as he was concerned, to that special constable and that that special constable refused to aid him in any particular way. There is not a single voter in that district that is up here complaining of his own treatment; not one.

Mr. THOMAS. Will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. JENKINS. I will hear the question.

Mr. THOMAS. I should like to ask the gentleman if it is not a fact that under the Walton law the booth is placed 40 feet away from every person, and no one is allowed to go into the booth with the constable and the man? Under those circumstances how can you get evidence against the constable?

Mr. JENKINS. I will leave the gentleman to answer that when

Mr. THOMAS. I ask you to answer it. I ask you how it is possible, under that law, to get any evidence against the constable?
Mr. JENKINS. I say again, with reference to this matter, that they ignored the constables, who are presumed to be men who will Mr. THOMAS.

Mr. GROSVENOR. Are they?

There is not a particle of evidence in this case Mr. JENKINS. tending to show that the constable refused to do his duty, except in one case where a constable told an elector that he construed that law to mean that he could not scratch his ballot; that he would point out the names that he wanted to vote; and I understand from the evidence that the constable refused to mark the man's ballot, while it is clear under the law that if a man asked a constable to mark it, it should be marked by the constable.

Mr. WALKER of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, may I ask the gentleman a question?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Will the gentleman from Wisconsin yield to the gentleman from Virginia?

Mr. JENKINS. Well, I think not now, Mr. Speaker, inasmuch as the gentleman is a member of the committee and has time of his own

Mr. WALKER of Virginia. If the gentleman will allow me to state the object, I think he will yield. I want to call his attention to the fact that he is mistaken as to the record in a dozen instances. Mr. JENKINS. Never mind; we have disagreed all the way through.

Mr. WALKER of Virginia. Well, this is a matter of record which shows for itself.

Mr. JENKINS. I am saying that there was no elector who claims that he was deprived of his vote by any one of the constables. Now, Mr. Speaker, I want to invite attention to the law of the State of Virginia which has been so much talked about.

I print the different sections as a part of my remarks:

Now, Mr. Speaker, I want to invite attention to the law of the State of Virginia which has been so much talked about.

I print the different sections as a part of my remarks:

SEC. 2. Each person offering to vote shall deliver a single ballot to one of the judges of election in the presence of at least one of the other two judges.

SEC. 3. The ballot shall be a white paper ticket containing the names of the persons who have compiled with the provisions of this act, as hereinafter provided, and the title of the office printed or written as hereinafter provided, one other shall be a legal ballot.

SEC. 5. It shall be the duty of the electoral boards of the several counties and cities within the State, within thirty days preceding each election, to cause to be printed a number of ballots equal to twice the entire registered vote of the said county or city. These ballots shall contain the names of all candidates complying with the provisions as above required, printed in black ink, immediately below the office for which they have so announced their cases.

SEC. 11. Every elector qualified to vote at a precinct shall, when he so demands, be furnished with an official ballot by one of the judges of election selected for that duty by a majority of the judges present. The said elector shall then take the said official ballot and retire to said voting booth. He shall then draw a line with a pen or pencil through the names of the candidates he does not wish to vote for, leaving the name or names of the candidates or candidates he does wish to vote for unscratched. No name shall be considered scratched unless the pen or pencil mark extend through three-fourths of the length of said name; and no ballot save an official ballot above provided for shall be counted for any person. When, as to any office, more than one name remains unscratched, the ballot for that particular office shall be void, but the ballot as to any other office of which only one name remains unscratched, the ballot sis agentine ballot, for which purpose h guilty of a misdemeanor and be fined not less than $500 and be imprisoned not less than one nor more than twelve months in jail.

16. It shall not be lawful upon the day of election for persons to congregate and crowd upon the public highways within 100 feet of any of the voting places, and any person violating the provisions of this section shall, upon conviction thereof, pay a fine of $25 or be confined in jail not exceeding ten days. Any member of the electoral board, the printer who shall print the official ballots provided for by this act, any judge of election, or any other person who shall give or sell to any person whomsoever, except where it is distinctly provided by this act, any official ballot or any copy, or any facsimile of the same, or any information about the same, or shall counterfeit or attempt to counterfeit the same, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof shall be fined $500 and imprisoned in jail six months. It shall be the duty of the judges of election to see that the provisions of this act are strictly carried out.

17. The said special constable may be removed by said electoral board or by said judges of election at their pleasure, and a successor for him may be appointed immediately. And when any such constable fails to attend punctually at the opening of the polls at any precinct the judges of election at such precinct, or a majority of them, may select some qualified voter from those present, who, after taking an oath, to be administered by one of the said judges, to faithfully perform the duties of said office, shall have same powers to act and be under like penalties as said special constable appointed by said electoral board.

The secretary of said electoral board shall keep in his sole custody the seal or stamp of said board, and in a sealed package, to be opened only in the presence of the electoral board and the judge of the county or corporation court when in the discharge of their duty, as prescribed in section 7 aforesaid.

18. The cost of cond

Now, then, when the canvassing board, or the boards that sat there at the election precincts, came to count the votes on the night of this election, they found, all the way through, a very large number of ballots that were not marked in accordance with the law; and it appears from the evidence that the question arose before every board as to just exactly what their duty was. Now, then, Mr. Speaker, I think I state this accurately, and I certainly mean to. I do not remember that there is a single elector in the mean to. I do not remember that there is a single elector in the State of Virginia up here, so far as the evidence is concerned, complaining that he disagreed with the conclusions arrived at by those election officers of the State of Virginia—that there seemed to be a practical unanimity there with reference to their legal duties; only they held that where the ballot could not be counted for any person then they should be laid aside. That where the line was not drawn through three-fourths of the name that they could not count that ballot for anybody, because there was more than one name upon the ballot, and they therefore could not be counted for anyone. They, in each case, thought they were discounted for anyone. They, in each case, thought they were discharging their duty.

Now, then, when you come to discover the very large number of Republicans that were sitting on that board, and find that every single Republican official agreed in the main with the boards that they were members of, the only dissent being that the ballots should not be destroyed, I say that it disposes of all talk about conspiracies and attempts to defraud. There is no person before this committee or before the House can state as to who these 1,021 ballots were intended for. There is not a particle of evidence. But gentlemen would like us to infer from their statements here that a very large portion were intended for the contestant, be-cause of the fact that they were ballots cast by ignorant colored

Now, then, Mr. Speaker, I want to see whether they disregarded the law in this particular. I have said that the minority of this committee hold, and have called the attention of this House to the fact, that the provision of this law is mandatory; and I am satisfied, from the authorities I am going to cite to this House, that the provision of this law is not only mandatory, but that each and every election officer in the district down there did their duty when they refused to count a ballot if the line was not drawn duty when they refused to count a ballot if the line was not drawn three-fourths of the way through. I say, Mr. Speaker, that if the provisions of the statute are mandatory, no question can arise as to the intention of the voter. I want to invite the attention of my colleagues on this floor to this point, because so many have been saying to me for days past, "Why, it looks to me, when we look at that ballot, it is very plain what that man intended to do—that he intended to vote for Yost. Therefore, should not the intention of the voter prevail?" I say, Mr. Speaker, in answer to that, that when the provisions of the statute are mandatory the statute controls, and that you can not look to the intention of the voter. We are precluded from doing that by every single authority in this are precluded from doing that by every single authority in this country. Now, with those authorities which were called to the attention of this House by the contestant in this case I do not disagree. I agree with him. But the writers in each case were speaking where there was no mandatory provision in the statute. They were not speaking in reference to a case where the statute

Now, then, I have picked out one of the very best authorities on that very point here, and I want to present it to this House. The language of that authority is this:

When the statute simply provides that certain things and acts shall be done within a certain time or in a certain manner, it is a directory statute.

Now, then, if the statute is directory there is no question but what the intention of the voter prevails. But it is within the power of every legislature to make the provisions of the election law mandatory and not directory, and when mandatory they are bound, no matter what the voter intended, by the language of the statute. This authority says:

But when the performance is essential to the validity, then the statute is mandatory.

Mr. Speaker, suppose the law simply provided each ballot should be numbered, and the elector should omit to number his ballot. be numbered, and the elector should omit to number his ballot. Why, that being a directory statute, the intention of the voter would prevail and the ballot would be counted; but if, as stated in this case, it were provided that it should not be an official or legal ballot unless numbered, then, the provision of the statute being mandatory, the intention of the voter could not be inquired into, and the ballot could not be counted. Let us see if I am very far off in my statement of the law in this case. There has been much surprise expressed here in reference to this law of the State of Virginia. Gentlemen would have the House understand that its provisions are very strict and severe, and that the like of them can not be found in any other State in the Union. There are some excellent lawyers from the State of Illinois on this floor, and I ask their attention to what I am going to say, because I and I ask their attention to what I am going to say, because I would like to know from them whether I misstate the fact or not. They have in the State of Illinois, or did have in 1891, a law practically very similar to this law of Virginia, and yet we have not heard a single gentleman here denounce that law of the State of Illinois.

Now, I want to say—and I will submit it to any fair-minded gentleman on this floor—that the law of Virginia is really much gentleman on this floor—that the law of Virginia is really much less severe and much more reasonable, in my judgment, than the law of Illinois. In my opinion, the action of the election officials in Virginia in relation to counting these votes, and the action of the majority of the committee, is sustained by an unbroken line of authorities in almost every State in the Union, yet the contestant in this case told you that not an authority could be found to sustain the action of the election officers in excluding those votes, that is, practically, in upholding the law of the State. As to the Illinois law, I want further to call the attention of gentlemen to the fact that a Democratic House in the last Democratic Congress the fact that a Democratic House in the last Democratic Congress seated a Republican upon the very identical question that is involved here, although that Republican had a majority of only 17. That Illinois election law provided that at the head of the ticket there should be a circle, and it provided that if any voter wished to vote the entire ticket he could do so by putting a cross within that circle—that that would entitle him to have his vote cast for the whole of the ticket. That law also provided that (we will say) on the left of each name on the ticket, including all the names on the tickets of the various parties, there should be a square or an oblong inclosure, and that if an elector wanted to vote for any candidate on one of the other tickets, he could put a cross in that little inclosure, and that would entitle him to have his vote counted for that candidate. for that candidate. It appears from the report in the case that a great many electors did not comply with the law, and did not put a cross in the square or oblong space, but did put some other mark. The report is silent as to just what marks the evidence showed they did make; it contents itself with saying that they did not put the cross as the law directed. A recount of the ballots was had by the committee, and they refused to count for the Democrat every ballot that did not contain the cross, and they report that

Find it to be the law of the State of Illinois that ballots on which the voter undertook to express his choice by marks other than the cross placed in a circle or square, as provided by the statute, are not legal and can not be counted.

And the committee sustain their position by a very large number of cases in the States of Iowa, Michigan, Texas, Maine, Rhode Island, Pennsylvania, and Indiana, adding that at that time the State of Illinois had not passed upon the question. That committee further held under the law that inasmuch as it provided that every single officer passing out the ballot to the voter should place his initials upon the back of it, and inasmuch as some of them had placed only one letter of their names, or something short of the full initials that they should have placed upon them, those ballots could not be counted. For instance, if the man's name was John A. Thomas and he put upon the ballot "J. T." or "J. A.," the committee held that that would be fatal and that the ballot could not be counted. could not be counted.

Now, Mr. Speaker, this action was taken by a Democratic House in favor of a Republican, and it was taken under a law which I consider to be much more extreme than the one in question here. In justification of the Virginia law I may remark that I do not think there is anything very wrong about it. We all know that in practice more questions arise on marked ballots in election cases than upon almost any other point. Men are often very careless, and in some cases it becomes a serious question whether the voter meant to strike out a name or not. For that reason the legislature of Virginia has seen fit to determine that, as matter of law, if a man wishes to erase the name of a candidate, he must run a line through three-quarters of the name, and if he does not do that, the name shall not be considered erased. I can not see anything very wrong or unjust in that. Even if the law was enacted in the interest of one party as against another, I insist that this House has nothing to do with that. I insist that the law of the State of Virginia is the law of a sovereign State, and as such is conclusive and binding upon this House, and that it is the high duty of this House to respect that law and give it force and effect. As has been said here to-day, the power to decide these questions must reside somewhere. These election questions must be regulated by one tribunal or another, and the Constitution of the United States reserves to Congress the right to act upon them if law, if a man wishes to erase the name of a candidate, he must the United States reserves to Congress the right to act upon them if the United States reserves to Congress the right to act upon them it it wants to; but Congress not having acted, having left the matter to the State, and the State having passed its law, I hold that that law is binding upon us; and the committee, after long and careful consideration, reached that conclusion. They found that the provisions of this statute were mandatory, and if the provisions were mandatory, then those ballots could not be counted and the election of the provisions of the state of the counted and the election of the state of the mandatory, then those ballots could not be counted and the election officers were justified in refusing to count them.

Mr. CONNOLLY. The gentleman has referred to the law of Illinois as being somewhat similar to the Virginia law that is in question here. Is the gentleman aware of the fact that about a year ago the supreme court of Illinois put a construction upon that law and defined the duty of the voter in the case of Parker vs. Orr, from which I will read?

Mr. GROSVENOR (interposing). Will the gentleman state that that was because

Mr. JENKINS. I decline to yield. That has nothing to do with my point.

Mr. GROSVENOR. You cited the case.

Mr. JENKINS. I did not cite the case. I am simply calling attention to a construction that this House placed upon a law of Illinois. I am not talking about what was subsequently done

Mr. CONNOLLY. Will the gentleman allow me to state the construction which the supreme court of Illinois has put upon that law and to set it against the construction adopted by a Demo-that law and to set it against the construction adopted by a Democratic House of Representatives?

Mr. JENKINS. If the gentleman wants the floor by and by for that purpose, I have no objection. I do not want to be educated on that point so far as I am concerned.

Mr. CONNOLLY. Then the gentleman should not argue it.

Mr. JENKINS. Now, I want to say further, so far as the law in this case is concerned, that while there were over 3,000 ballots not counted by those election officers, that percentage was not very large when you come to consider the large vote in that district and the illiteracy of so many of the voters. While it is, of course, outside the record, I may say that I find, in conversing with various gentlemen here, that in one district in the State of Massachusetts the percentage is much larger than it was in this particular case. particular case.

Now, the minority of the committee attempt to count some of these votes; and I want to invite the attention of the House to the reasons why the majority have refused to count some of them. We did it because the evidence was, to our minds, insufficient to justify the counting of those votes. The committee in this case counted every solitary vote that they felt could be counted for the contestants; and where they had any very serious doubt they re-solved that doubt in favor of the contestant to the extent of counting caption-marked ballots, and to the extent of counting a large number of votes as to which they doubted whether the evidence was sufficient to warrant their being counted. Feeling that they ought to help the contestant so far as they conscientiously could, they counted them.

But if the gentleman will turn to page 10 of the minority re-port, I will call attention to the evidence as there stated and show port, I will call attention to the evidence as there stated and show how absolutely misleading is the report of the minority in this respect. Taking that one case of Mount Sidney, there are 12 of these burned ballots. I am addressing my remarks at this time to the evidence in support of the counting of the burned ballots. Starting at page 10 of their report, the minority say that the contestant is entitled to 12 votes there, and they call attention to the evidence of a man named Watson. After giving what he says in support of their claim, they go a little further, and on page 11 refer to another witness—Landes. They say that Mr. Landes testified that 12 of the 21 ballots which were destroyed were intended for Mr. Yost.

Now, I am not going to argue that that statement was leading; that it merely stated the conclusion of the witness, but he says:

I thought these should be counted for Yost, because Tucker's name was

I thought these should be counted for Yost, because Tucker's name was scratched and Yost's name left clear, and some of them had some of the other names scratched.

Now, if gentlemen will read the report of this case, they can determine at a glance whether the majority of the committee were in error when they refused to count those 12 votes. We did not content ourselves with the direct examination in this case. The testimony came in all ways, and, as every lawyer knows, was very leading in its character. The witnesses, two-thirds of the time, stated simply their conclusions and not the

Now, I understand the minority refer to two witnesses as supporting their statement that 12 of those burned ballots should be counted for Yost. We invited their attention in the majority report to the cross-examination of this man Landes, but they do not refer to that except to say that Landes, in his direct testimony, is supported by this man Watson.

Mr. Speaker, on page 68 of the record in this case, which was in evidence before the committee, this same witness is asked on cross-examination:

Of the 17 destroyed ballots, will you please state, were there any which had on them only the single name of any one of the five candidates for Congress?

And he replies:

In other words, he says that every one of those 17 ballots which were burned by that election board had on it more than one name as a candidate for Congress.

Now, it is very clear, Mr. Speaker, that if each of those 17 ballots bore more than one name they could not be counted for Mr. Yost. Yet two witnesses testify in a general way that those 17 ballots were counted for Yost; and the witness to whom I have just referred says that 12 of them should have been counted for Yost. Yet on cross-examination, as I have just shown, he says that each and every one of those 17 ballots had more than one mame upon it.

Mr. GROSVENOR. Oh, no.

Mr. JENKINS. Yes, sir. The question put to him was:

Of the 17 destroyed ballots, will you please state, were there any which had on them only the single name of any one of the five candidates for Congress?

And he says:

There were not.

Mr. BRUMM. To whom are those ballots credited in the

Mr. Bromm. To whom are those bands credited in the report?

Mr. JENKINS. In the report of the majority they are not credited for anybody; but the minority count them.

Mr. BRUMM. Would they change the result?

Mr. JENKINS. They would not.

Mr. BRUMM. Then they are not material.

Mr. JENKINS. Now, then, Mr. Speaker, on page 11 of the minority report, with reference to the same question, you will find that there is an extension of the illustration I am giving to the House and if you have time to follow it up all the way through I House, and if you have time to follow it up all the way through I think you will admit that we are justified in making this claim—that while the evidence of the contestant, in general terms, includes a very large number of ballots from this county, that the same testimony on cross-examination or other evidence shows that there was more than one name for Congressman left on the ballot, and was more than one name for Congressman left on the ballot, and hence that the ballots must be rejected and could not be counted. At Verona—and I wish to say this for the benefit of the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. WALKER]—and call his attention to the fact, I am informed that at two of these precincts where the greatest amount of fraud is claimed to have been committed—that is, at Verona and Mount Sidney—two of the election officers whose testimony is in the case, which largely influenced the majority of the committee in its findings, are cousins of the learned gentleman from Virginia; and I wanted to ask him when he was on the floor if he desired to include those men in the "great conspiracy" there to rob the Republican party of its rights?

Mr. WALKER of Virginia. Does the gentleman wish an answer?

Mr. JENKINS. I will yield to the gentleman for an answer. Mr. WALKER of Virginia. I do not know whether any of those gentlemen are related to me or not. I will say, however, that I have seen some relations whom I would not be entirely willing to trust [laughter]; who were not perhaps any more honest than some of the gentleman's own relations.

Another thing: So many of my Democratic friends have relations.

tions in that country that many of them stand rather badly when it comes to elections in Virginia.

Mr. JENKINS. I want to say to my brother that no reflec-

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. DALZELL). The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. CANNON. I wanted to ask the gentleman a question for information.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair is advised that the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. GROSVENOR] is to be recognized

Mr. CANNON. I wanted to ask a question, with the consent of the gentleman from Ohio. Owing to my duties in committee, it is not possible for me to be in the House to hear the argument, and I wish to make an inquiry of the gentleman for the purpose of getting information on which I may be able to make up my mind in reference to the case.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Does the gentleman from Ohio yield?

Mr. GROSVENOR. I will yield to the gentleman for two minutes. Of course, I do not propose to allow the debate to be opened up in my time.

Mr. CANNON. I will be compelled to read a sentence in order to submit my question. I have in my hand the majority report, in which I find this language:

After a careful examination of the exhibits relating to the recount throughout the whole district, it appears that there were 454 "imperfectly marked" ballots for Yost and 271 for Tucker; and 54 "blotted or blurred" ballots for Yost and 14 for Tucker. The "imperfectly marked" ballots are admitted to be ballots which were not marked, as provided in section 11 of the Walton act.

Now, I wish to ask whether these ballots for both of these parties were rejected because they were not marked through three-fourths of the name? Mr. GROSVENOR. That is just the point; that is the ground. Mr. JENKINS. I do not know whether I am to answer, or the gentleman from Ohio.

Mr. McCALL of Massachusetts. If the gentleman will permit

Mr. JENKINS. I yield to the gentleman from Massachusetts. Mr. WALKER of Virginia. I object to that. Let the gentleman answer in his own time.

Mr. McCALL of Massachusetts. I will come to that in my own time.

Mr. CANNON. I hope the gentleman will answer it when he is on the floor. For on the answer to that point, so far as I am at present advised, will depend my vote.

Mr. GROSVENOR. Mr. Speaker, I think I owe an apology, perhaps to the constituency if not to the House of Representatives, for appearing to argue at any considerable length any contested-election case, and I want to point out, on the threshold of my remarks, what I assume to be a justification for the going behind the report of the committee and looking into the facts and the law of the case itself.

It has not been very often-indeed, it has never been-that I have attempted to argue against the report of the majority of the Committee on Elections, except in the single question of law that was involved in the case from the State of Illinois—a question of law that was decided, ultimately, by the supreme court of the State of Illinois as I claimed the law to be then, and against the report of the majority of the Committee on Elections. But I have, what seems to me now, proper justification. I want to know whether it is true or false that the people of the South, the people of the Republican party, are in mass and in detail claiming here at the hands of Congress rights and wrongs that do not exist; whether there are any honest Republicans in the South who are right when they say that they can have no justice, and that no fair elections are held in a great many of the districts of the

I hold in my hand a list of fifteen contested-election cases that have come from the committee which has reported this case, all decided in the present Congress by a majority of that committee, and I find that in those fifteen cases the majority of that committee have reported in favor of seating 2 Republicans and 12 Democrats, and have turned out both sides in one case.

Now, this has had the effect upon my mind of calling on me to ascertain, if I possibly can, something of the merits of these cases; and when I hear members of the Republican party on this same and when I hear members of the Republican party on this same committee, by the logic of their arguments, if not in plain terms, charging each other with misrepresentation of the facts, and applying principles of law on the one hand that are denied utterly on the other hand, I begin to think there must be something besides a duty devolving upon me to "go it blind" any longer upon these contested election cases, and I have concluded to look into them may also listed. into them myself a little.

Now, I do not believe that 13 out of 15 Republicans have come here with a fraud and attempted to practice it upon the people of the United States. [Applause.] I have high regard for this committee in gross and in detail, every one of them, but there is such a thing as a little too much fair play. There is such a thing as standing up so perpendicular in this world that you lean a little back sematimes. a little back sometimes. And when there are social surroundings, matters of thoroughbred training, and a little of that intermixture of relationship from one side of the country to the other that sometimes permeates into cases, I am just a little afraid that some members of this committee may have made a mistake.

Statement of cases before Elections Committee No. 3, Fifty-fourth Congress of the United States.

	Contestant.		Contestee.
State.	Name.	Politics,	Name.	Politics.	Action taken by committee.
South Carolina	Joshua E. Wilson Geo. W. Murray Thos. B. Johnston A. J. Rosenthal J. C. Davis J. C. Kearby R. T. Thorp Geo. W. Cornett	do	A. C. Latimer Jno. L. McLaurin Wm. Elliott J. Wm. Stokes Miles Crowley D. B. Culberson Jo Abbott W. R. McKenney C. A. Swanson P. J. Otey H. St. G. Tucker J. M. Allen J. S. Williams J. G. Spencer J. O. Bell	do	Do. Decided in favor of contestant. Decided in favor of contestee. Do.

Now, let us look into this case; and it does not need a very great scope of examination. I do not expect, and I do not promise you,

Now, let us look into this case; and it does not need a very great scope of examination. I do not expect, and I do not promise you, that I shall go as thoroughly over the case as the members of the committee will, but I will point out the salient features of this case, those which are controlling upon my mind.

It is claimed here upon the part of the contestant that there were more men in that Congressional district at the election in 1894 who tried to vote for him than there were men who tried to vote for his antagonist, and nobody disputes it. Is it not a little strange, now, that when that fact stands here so strongly impressed upon the records of this case that a man running can not fail to read it, that we are yet to deny the seat to the Republican, and uphold the seat of the Democrat, upon the purest technicality ever argued in a court of justice or in a legislative hall? I sat and listened here for one solid hour to the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. Jenkins], and he never offered or suggested an equitable consideration in favor of the contestee. His argument was that of the skilled lawyer addressed to a technical court upon a technical construction of a technical statute, while stamped upon the whole record of this case stands the undeniable proposition that, amid all the surroundings and all the features tending to lower the ballot of the contestant, nevertheless a large majority tried to vote for him, and a large majority believed they had voted for him; and the whole question is, Will the House of Representatives deny to Mr. Yost his seat upon this floor because skillful lawyers, arguing from the basis of pure technicality, are able to lawyers, arguing from the basis of pure technicality, are able to show that a statute was not complied with, and that an organized system of electoral outrage has put it beyond the power of this contestant to secure a return of a majority of the votes? The gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. JENKINS] has argued-and I hope gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. JENKINS] has argued—and I hope members of the House of Representatives on both sides will hear my further delineation and illustration of this argument—that while the Constitution of the United States confers upon the House of Representatives the power to decide the election, qualifications, and returns of its own members, yet, inasmuch as we have no Federal election law, we have waived our constitutional right and the Constitution is repealed by the waiver of Congress. I am sure the lawyers on this floor will do me the justice to say that that is the logic force effect, alpha, and omega of the gen-that that is the logic, force, effect, alpha, and omega of the gentleman's argument on that point. Let me repeat it now, for it strikes at the bottom of the entire defense upon this question. Grant that the Constitution gives to Congress the power to judgeor not to enact laws, but to judge—of the election, qualifications, and returns of its members, yet that, inasmuch as we have not legislated upon this subject, we have waived our right and are bound by the statutes of the States. Such a claim as that was never made by the strongest adherent of States' rights in all the history of the great line of arguments pro and con on this mighty question, that once produced a great armed collision in this country.

It is left to Congress to say who was elected, gentlemen of the House of Representatives, just as much as it was when we had the force law in process of execution in the South. Suppose the legislature of a sovereign State—I will not mention a Southern State, but let us take the State of Iowa—suppose the State of Iowa should enact that, no matter who should receive the greatest number of votes, wheever secured the certificate of election should be ber of votes, whoever secured the certificate of election should be the Congressman.

Now, there is the ad absurdum of this claim; but this is a fair and just illustration of the argument. Would the House of Representatives in that case have the right to look in and say who it was that had the greatest number of votes, notwithstanding the legislation of that State said that the minority man should be seated? But the gentleman has made a most unfortunate reference to the statute of the State of Illinois. The statute is in principle, if not in verbiage, on all fours with the statute of Virginia, which he says supervenes here to prevent us from deciding who was elected in that Congressional district. It is on all fours, gentlemen of the House of Representatives. I defy—I do not do this offensively, for I shall make no offensive argument against any-body—but I defy you to show me that the legislation of the State of Virginia is different in principle, in effect, in legal operations, from the legislation of the State of Illinois.

Now let us see what the supreme court of the State of Illinois has said upon that statute. Bear in mind that the construction of the statute of Virginia in its operation and effect upon these returns settles this question for the contestant or against him. It all turns upon the question, in one instance if not in all, but in one, upon the construction that is to be given to the power and duty of this House in ascertaining what the will of the voter of Virginia was when he cast his ballot. There is the whole of this case, gentlemen. You may quibble about it. You may come with your fine facts, your fine analyses of principles of law; but the whole question turns upon the limitation or the nonlimitation of the House of Representatives in determining how far they will of the House of Representatives in detection and see what was the purpose, the expressed intention, of the voters of Virginia in that behalf. Anything short of that is to wrong a man out of a right by a quibble. I use the word "quibble" with the highest degree of respect for the able gentlemen. They are standing upon nothing else. I do not want to make light of their underpinning. [Laughter.] I remember the discussion in this House about the question of the ballot in Illinois; and you all remember how a great many of you ballot in Illinois; and you all remember how a great many of you gentlemen were carried away to do what turned out to be, if not corrected, a most rank injustice. You followed this same idea of technical construction of a statute, and you did a wrong. You perpetrated a wrong; but you set it right again later on; and you learned a lesson. Here is what the Illinois statute says. This is a mandatory law; and the principles applicable to the statutes of Illinois as mandatory and directory of the principles for the construction of the statutes of Illinois are just exactly what they are as to the construction of the statute of Virginia; no more, and no less. Here there was a peremptory statute that a certain ballot less. Here there was a peremptory statute that a certain ballot should be counted and that certain other ballots should not be counted. The supreme court of Illinois, in the case of Parker against Orr, said:

It has always been held in this State that if the intention of the voter can be fairly ascertained by the ballot, though not in strict conformity with the law, effect will be given to that intention.

That is what we claim here to-day. That is what has been held; that is the law of every civilized State of the Union; and anything short of that would foster in a technical construction of an election board the power to disfranchise a majority of a Congressional

A MEMBER. Read further. Mr. GROSVENOR (reading):

In other words, that the voter shall not be disfranchised or deprived of his right to vote through mere inadvertence, mistake, or ignorance, if an honest intention can be ascertained from his ballot. * * * Ballots appear in the record on which it is clear that the voters attempted to make a cross in the proper place to indicate the choice of candidate, but succeeded more or less imperfectly. It being clear in such cases that the intention was to conform to the statute, and not to distinguish a ballot, they were properly counted.

Gentlemen, before you decide this case against the contestant, I appeal to you, on behalf of common justice and of plain common sense, take these ballots [exhibiting sample ballot], 471 of them, and tell me and tell your conscience if you do not know what the purpose of these voters was when they put these ballots into the

Mr. JENKINS. Will the gentleman allow me to ask him a

Mr. GROSVENOR. Yes. I will not set the example that the gentleman did by refusing me.

Mr. JENKINS. I want to ask the gentleman if he does not know that these ballots that he has spoken of were never used, and that there was no evidence that they were ever used?

Mr. GROSVENOR. I understand it perfectly.

Mr. WALKER of Virginia. You will decide that if you just take the minority report.

Mr. GROSVENOR. Now, let us see what the rule of law is. Ten hundred and seventy-one ballots were burned. What says the law of the universe? The man who destroys evidence shall not be heard when he wants benefit because of its destruction. What is the proposition of the law? The will that [Applause.] conveys the real estate of a dead man, if it has been burned, may be proven by oral testimony, and it conveys as good title as though it was in existence and on record. The promissory note of my friend is just as good if it is burned up as it is in evidence if I can friend is just as good if it is burned up as it is in evidence if I can prove its contents. So the law recognizes the propriety and the validity of secondary evidence, as we call it. And it is just as binding. I said the gentleman stood upon a quibble. I said it respectfully. I may be induced to steer away from that proposition after a while. He now says to me, "I know that these ballots have been simply proven to be secondary evidence." I know it perfectly well. There is the sworn testimony that this is a reproduction of the ballots. He says, "Do not take that as evidence." We do not know whether there are reproductions or not.

Mr. JENKINS. I made no such claim, and the committee makes no such claim. You certainly do not understand this case.

Mr. GROSVENOR. I do understand it a great deal better than you do; but I am not admitting that that is a very large claim.

Mr. JENKINS. With all due respect to the gentleman's power of ridicule, the committee nor myself made any such claim as of ridicule, the committee nor myself made any such claim as that—that we could not use secondary evidence. What I said was that that ballot was never in evidence; that the ballots you are talking about were never in evidence and never used.

Mr. GROSVENOR. Let us see if this is not more technical than ever. I bring my witness into court, who is able to describe a thing. In order to illustrate his testimony I put a model, or a diagram, or a drawing of the locus in quo in proof in the case, and then the gentleman comes and says that that never was used as evidence! We have proved the existence of these ballots—

Mr. McCALL of Massachusetts. If the gentleman will permit an interruption, the point is that the exhibit which you print does not correspond with the testimony which your own witnesses introduced as to the character of the ballot—that is, there is a discrepancy between your own illustration and your own testimony.

Mr. GROSVENOR. That is an entirely different question.

There is the difference between the gentleman from Massachusetts and his comembers of the committee, and inasmuch as I find a good deal of positive evidence that the gentleman is mistaken about other things, I assume the fact to be against him upon this

Mr. HALL. Will the gentleman permit a question?
Mr. GROSVENOR. Yes, sir.
Mr. HALL. It is with regard to those 1,021 ballots that were burned. I understood the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. Jen-KINS] to say, and I have talked with other gentlemen who have said, in response to questions, that those ballots that were burned were burned under these circumstances—and if you have evidence to any other effect, I would like to have you call attention to it.

Mr. GROSVENOR (interrupting). I withdraw my consent.

I do not want an argument instead of a question, and I am not going to have it, either. The gentleman knows that I am capable of taking care of my own time without having an argument interpolated into my argument.

polated into my speech.

Mr. HALL. Well, then, will the gentleman let me ask him a plain, straight question?

Mr. GROSVENOR. I wish you would, if you can ask a plain, straight one, and I know you can.

Mr. HALL. Thank you. My question is this: Has not the statement before this House been that those 1,021 ballots were burned with the unanimous agreement, consent, and concurrence of every one of the judges—Republican, Democratic, and Popu-list—and in pursuance of a uniform custom which had prevailed nst—and in pursuance of a uniform custom which had prevaled for years under an old law, and that the Walton law contained no provision to the contrary?

Mr. GROSVENOR. The gentleman has seen fit to answer my argument before I get through, which is a most unfair way to treat a man upon the floor. I had not got to that question, and the gentleman knew it.

Mr. HALL. I thought you were discussing the burnt ballots.
Mr. GROSVENOR. I was discussing the burnt ballots for an entirely different purpose. I will come to the point which the gentleman refers to and then he may ask any questions about it that he desires. Mr. Speaker, this is what I was trying to show when I was interrupted. We have come as near to putting in evidence this scratched ballot as it is possible to do. Take page 14 of the minority report, where there is an extract from the testimony of Mr. Hess which has never been attempted to be contradicted by anybody. There was no attack made upon his testimony either by cross-examination or by calling witnesses to contradict him. At the precinct where he voted there were eleven ballots burned. Three of them were scratched with vertical lines. Here we have them illustrated in the record, all the names being ballots burned. Three of them were scratched with vertical lines, Here we have them illustrated in the record, all the names being scratched except Mr. Yost's. From the description given by the witness this illustration is made. Now, gentlemen, if you want to quibble over that question—and if you do not—take one of these ballots and take the testimony of this witness—to-night, before you go to bed, before you deny this man his right—take that ballot and scratch it as the testimony of the witnesses directs you to do, and see if you do not get a complete illustration of the ballot in this minority report. I stand upon that.

Now, let us see what is the fair inference that is to be drawn from the destruction of these ballots. In every State in the Union that I know anything about where the Australian ballot or any of these improved systems of balloting have gone into operation the doubtful ballot is the one that is saved. The questionable ballot is treasured up by the election officers; the unquestioned ballots are burned. That is the law of the State of New York; that is the law of the State of Ohio; that is the law in every State that I know anything about that attempts to have anything like a fair system of elections. I will give you an illustration. In the State of Ohio there are 2 Democratic judges and 2 Republican, 1 Democratic clerk and 1 Republican—3 election officers of each party. They count the votes. Every ballot that has about it any mark or any lack of mark which makes it uncertain they save, and when they have concluded the count those ballots about which there is no question are burned. Now, in how many places in this case were the ballots burned? In that Congressional district, in that great line of precincts, fifteen in number, I think, as shown by the evidence there were these doubtful ballots everywhere, and yet, by some sort of organized judgment, by as shown by the evidence there were these doubtful ballots everywhere, and yet, by some sort of organized judgment, by some sort of concurrence, by some sort of mental operation that ran through the minds of the election officers in all those precincts, the doubtful ballots were all burned up and the good ballots were saved.

Mr. McCALL of Massachusetts. If I may interrupt the gentleman again, I do not think he intends to misstate the testimony, but the evidence clearly shows that fully two-thirds of the so-called "imperfect" ballots were burned; that there was no general understanding throughout the district, and that in various precincts, with two or three exceptions, the district election officers unanimously burned the ballots.

Mr. GROSVENOR. Now, the gentleman is putting his innocence up against the record. [Laughter.] He is an honest man. [Renewed laughter.] Did you ever know of a set of rascals—I am only stating this by way of illustration—to get together and say: "We will agree to burn up all these ballots." That is not the way that rascals operate. They operate by a sort of consensus of judgment at the time. And it is a little strange that down in those districts, where the light of education has not been generally disseminated, as appears by this record, there should have been such a consensus of opinion that they would burn all the bad ballots and none of the good ballots.

The gentleman from Wisconsin has said that we are making a The gentleman from Wisconsin has said that we are making a wrong statement when we say that the judges of the election were packed, in the ordinary use of that term. He says it does not appear that they were all Democratic judges. I understood him to say that wherever there were intelligent and able Republicans they were always put on. Let us see what the record shows. In Amherst County there was no Republican representation at the precincts of Magruder, Pedlar Mills, Oronoco, Chestnut, Furnace, and Millners, all of which, except one, returned majorities for the contestee. In answer to the question, "Do you know whether there are qualified voters who can read and write at those precincts who are Republican in politics?" Mr. Samuel C. Allen, chairman of the Republican party in that county, answers, "Yes, cincts who are Republican in politics?" Mr. Samuel C. Allen, chairman of the Republican party in that county, answers, "Yes, sir; I know that in every precinct in Amherst County there are qualified Republicans to act as election officers." I refer to page 127 of the evidence. And this same law that has been invoked as a mandatory enactment makes it a duty to elect and put upon those election boards Republicans whenever possible. That is the manufacture of the law. Yet we find this hormonics. Republicans the requirement of the law. Yet we find this happening: Republicans left off the election boards; controverted ballots discovered; a unanimous consent to burn them up, and the evidence thereby destroyed. What is the inference? Every lawyer here knows what is the inference from the destruction or withholding of evidence. What is the law that has been written where no legislation can repeal it—in the common knowledge and judgment of mankind? Whoever destroys a matter of evidence, suppresses it, keeps it from his opponent—in any wise disables his opponent from getting possession of it—the law takes that fact and construes the unobtainable evidence against the man who is found in de-which he has been talking about Republicans were elected and refused to serve, and that in every one of those precincts a Populist was appointed and did serve?

Mr. GROSVENOR. I did not know there was any such evi-

Mr. JENKINS. That is the reason I called the gentleman's attention to it, because I believed he wanted to state the matter fairly.

Mr. GROSVENOR. But my friend here [the contestant] says there is no such evidence.

Mr. JENKINS. As a member of the committee, I say that such is the evidence, and I hold it in my hand.

Mr. GROSVENOR. Do not understand me as disputing the statement. It simply shows a condition of things which indicated to the Republicans that there was trouble ahead; and therefore, if such was the fact, they would not go upon those election boards. There was a condition created, and an advantage taken of it, in plain violation of law; and the fair inference of the law is against the men who created the condition.

The testimony is that in Appomattox County, at Spoutspring, New Court-House, Chap, Fores Store, and Stonewall there was no Republican representation on the board, although the evidence shows that competent Republicans could have been appointed at each of those points. This is not denied even by the clerk of the electoral board. I give you the page where you will find that evidence—page 445—for I am going to argue this case fairly, even if I lose it.

In Fluvanna County, at Scottsville, Center Hill, and Goodson, all of which gave pluralities for the contestee, there was no Republican representative. The uncontradicted testimony of L. O. Haden, on page 299, shows that at each of those precincts good Republicans could have been selected. In Nelson County, at Arrington, Buffalo Ridge, Grapelawn, Fabers Mills, May's store, Lowesville, Montebello, and Slaughter, there were no Republican representatives; and in each of those places they "slaughtered" the Republican vote. [Laughter.]

In answer to question 3, on page 312, P. D. Young, a member of the electoral board, testifies:

I think there might have been found qualified voters who can read and write in the Republican party who might have been appointed judges of election at Slaughter, Grapelawn, Mays Store, Montebello, and Arrington.

What have we, then, on this branch of the case? And this branch alone, decided in favor of the contestant, gives him the seat by the concurrent statement of all who have argued this case. We have the law of Virginia violated in the organization of the electoral boards. We have a ticket attempted to be voted by a sufficient number of the qualified voters of the Congressional district to seat the contestant. The tickets are brought here with the best evidence that the contestant can produce. Let me take the evidence, and I ask if any gentleman who advocates this propthe evidence, and I ask if any gentleman who advocates this proposition, presented here for our adoption by the majority of the committee, is able to answer this proposition: Suppose that there might have been Republican officers of election in certain districts and they refused to sit, and suppose that where they did sit, by concurrent agreement they burned all the ballots; how can that fact or either fact prejudice this contestant, if the votes were cast for him and if he ought to have had those votes counted? Has he been guilty of anything in that behalf? Has he stood by and waived anything or any right to which he was entitled because somebody else has done something or failed to do something and thus defrauded him of his right to a seat here, which a majority of his constituents declared that he should have? Certainly not.

Now, Mr. Speaker, I come to another proposition. I have witnessed a good many curious things in contested election cases, and in their development on the floor of this House, but I have never yet witnessed anything quite up to the standard of unique and unqualified rascality that is involved in that ballot which I now hold in my hand. [Applause.] Let an American statesman up-hold such a fraud as that, and then answer to his constituents and to his conscience if he can! For once in our lives, we have got the thing in our own hands.

It appears that there is a large number of uneducated voters in that Congressional district; it appears that nine out of ten of one class of them were thoroughly imbued with the spirit of Republicanism and wanted to vote the Republican ticket. A new law had been enacted and for the first time enforced in Virginia; a law that the State of Virginia, and I compliment her integrity and honor as a State, has repudiated and put the brand of her condemnation upon, and yet we have gentlemen here apologizing for that which the Democratic State of Virginia has condemned and spewed out of her mouth! [Applause.] It was too bad for Virginia. She could not stand it, even on the eve of a Presidential election. But it is as balm of Gilead to him who wants to be generous to his enemy instead of being just to his country. [Applause.] Look at this ticket and carry it home with you; get a facsimile of it published in the newspapers of your district; and tell the people, the intelligent, decent people, that you are willing to uphold fraud like that. [Applause.] They printed it, so that he who runs might read that it was an occasion to vote for a Representative in Congress, and they put that fact in roman letters, so that there would not be any mistake about it; and yet some of the constables appointed to help the illiterate voters, as the records show, could not even read these roman letters. I can point you to the pages in the record. Then they made seventy-five rascality. There they are, and you have got to whitewash the whole seventy-five or turn this man out. [Applause.]

What is said for that ticket? Who justifies it? Why, it will be what is said for that ticket? Who justines it? Why, it will be said for it, as has been already said in my hearing, that the evidence does not show how many votes Mr. Yost lost by reason of that ticket. But who put the ticket in motion? Who started that scheme of villiany? I will show you. The electoral board of Amherst County is composed of three persons, all of whom, in 1894, were Democrats, and one of them at least, B. R. Harrison, is shown to be a partisan. He was not only a member, but was secretary of the electoral board while at the same time he was the is shown to be a partisan. He was not only a member, but was secretary of the electoral board, while at the same time he was the acting and active chairman of the Democratic county committee in Amherst County. The impropriety of a sworn election officer, holding such an important official position and being at the same time a partisan chairman of one of the political parties contending for mastery in the county is manifest, and needs no comment at our hands. This avowed partisan, after appointing the special constable in each of the precincts of his county—and I pause here for a moment, to let the House understand that fact.

No conspiracy! Why, Mr. Speaker, there is the Democratic chairman of the Democratic county committee doing just what we have seen has been done in this case. What did he do? In the first place, a constable is provided for the alleged purpose of

we have seen has been done in this case. What did he do? In the first place, a constable is provided for the alleged purpose of "helping the ignorant voters" at each precinct, and my friend here from Wisconsin [Mr. Jenkins] has really got himself worked up about it. It shows the truth of the old maxim: Facilis descensus Averni. He has not only justified the appointment of the constables, but has worked himself up to believe that it was done to prevent fraud at the election! Here we have the whole statement in a nutshell. The chairman of the county committee, a member of the election heard himself appointed every man who member of the election board, himself appointed every man who was to help the ignorant voter, or mislead the voter, one or the other. Now I will show you exactly what they did. The "machine" is constructed by the partisan, and we have a machine constructed for the express purpose. It has two elements that are to be operative: First, the constables, who alone can aid the igno-rant or disabled voters, and second, that ticket; and thus the scheme was developed and devised to compass the outrage that was committed further on.

This avowed partisan, after appointing the special constable in each of the precincts of his county on the 1st day of November, 1894, only five days before the election, published the names of all the special constables in the Amherst New Era, a newspaper published at the county seat of Amherst County, which was signed "Beverly R. Harrison, secretary of the electoral board." At the same time, and immediately under this notice, Mr. Harrison inserts a request in these words:

The constables above named are requested to meet me at my office at Amherst Court-House on the 3d day of November next, if possible, in order that I may give them information they may desire as to their duties under the new election laws.

BEVERLY B. HARRISON,
Chairman of the Democratic Executive Committee for Amherst County.

That is signed by Mr. Harrison as chairman of the Democratic executive committee. In one breath he announces officially the appointment of the constables who are, as I will show you directly, to control this election; and in the next breath, as chairman of the county committee, he orders every mother's son of them to come and get his instructions. [Applause and laughter.] And directly I will show you what their instructions were. Now, what are these tickets, first? There are 75 varieties of them. The sheet that was let down out of heaven full of creeping things, fowls of the air and beasts of the field, did not contain as many outrageous things as that, although it contained all manner of four-footed beasts and unclean things. Old Peter, hungry though he was, when invited to slay and eat, said, "No, Lord; nothing common or unclean ever entered my mouth." But my friends from Wisconsin [Mr. Jenkins] and Massachusetts [Mr. McCall] look upon these unclean things as lovely demonstrations of the purity and becoming innocence of elections in the old Commonwealth of Virginia.

wealth of Virginia.

Now, let us see what he made those 75 tickets for. The first time I saw one of these tickets one of my friends said, "Oh, well, now, there was evidently no purpose in that." No, it was one of those innocent little things, you know; Roman letters at the top, German text at the bottom, and seventy-five varieties of them, all by accident, all to be marked, or not marked, by those constables, who had their instructions twenty-four hours before the polls opened. I read from the testimony of Mr. Harrison before the committee of the House, or, in other words, his deposition, I suppose, page 155, question No. 10:

The secretary of the Commonwealth sent to me as secretary of the electoral board a list of all the candidates for Congress in the Tenth Congressional district. They were in one order; that is, for example, Jas. Seldon Cowden, J. Yost, H. St. Geo. Tucker, C. H. Grove, and Edmund R. Cocke.

Mr. Yost's name was the second one from the top in the official

As I construed the Walton election law, and upon the advice of able law-yers, we, the electoral board, transposed these names in order, as we con-sidered it, to require the strict enforcement of this new election law.

We had been informed that circulars had been sent around, and that schools of instruction had been organized to instruct the illiterate voters to vote one name only on the ticket. We were also informed that the illiterate voters had been taught to consult some smart, shrewd politician of his party who had first voted, as to the position of the name J. Yost on the ticket, thus doing away with the educational qualification of the act.

This fellow appointed constables who could not read roman letters and then printed a ticket in German text, for the purpose of defeating the possibility of the voter reading it. And that is the purity of the ballot! [Laughter.]

Q. 11. Were any instructions given the constables of election as to whether they should mark the tickets for illiterate voters?—A. I read to some of the constables the section of the law referring to their duties, and also showed them and read to them parts of Judge Simmons's opinion in the Botetourt election case. I also, as well as I can remember, showed them an editorial from the Richmond Despatch as to their duties.

rom the Richmond Despatch as to their duties.

That paper is the organ of the State Democratic committee of Virginia, the Richmond Despatch. I have nothing to say against the paper, but you will see now the indicia of fraud. First, the voter is impeded in his effort to know whom he is going to vote for. The election board discovered that the illiterate voter of that Congressional district is struggling with his ignorance and trying to overcome it; and, following the instructions of the State committee, the chairman of the local county committee proceeds, as he admits, to put every possible obstruction in the way of the voter to make it impossible that he shall vote intelligently.

Now, when you come to analyze this testimony—for I shall not proceed further along this line—you will discover that the constables, one after the other, refused to aid these illiterate voters. If a man was disabled so he could not hold a pencil they assisted him; if he was blind they assisted him; but if he could not read they followed their instructions, and refused to aid him. Will have pushed and indorse such a scheme as that? If so, never again they followed their instructions, and refused to aid him. Will you uphold and indorse such a scheme as that? If so, never again prate of honest elections. Shut up your hypocrisy. Do not thunder from the East against the South and the West, but admit that you are incapable of discovering fraud when all of its elements you are incapable of discovering fraud when all of its elements are brought before you. [Applause on the Republican side.]

Here, then, are facts enough admitted to show, without any attempt to make any allowance for that which ought to result and flow from that ticket, that the contestant is entitled to his seat; and if he can be cheated out of it by the schemes that were operated in that Congressional district, then you are only paving the way to something new in the future. Here is a new development.

Now, then, if you will put the stamp of your disapproval on this sort of election and stamp this sort of crime you will have done a good day's work toward rendering honest and just the elections of this country. Do not let anybody get the advantage of a majority of the voters. Two things you must find affirmatively. The first is that this marked ballot ought to have been counted. The evidence of it is in the form and construction of the ballot itself, a construction which the highest court of the country has given to construction which the highest court of the country has given to that sort of legislation, and the evident purpose to make away with the best evidence of the purpose of the voter by the destruction of the ballot. In the second place, you must find that this ballot and all that appertains to it was a gross fraud upon the party in the election. I do not say that the fact that the Democratic county committee managed the appointment of these constables is alone sufficient, though it is a very bad element. I do not say that the actions of these constables alone is sufficient, though it is a very bad element; but I do say that when this ballot is produced as the result of the concurrent plan of that chairman and this constable, and these ballots were circulated as the only ballots. duced as the result of the concurrent plan of that chairman and this constable, and these ballots were circulated as the only ballots that could be voted in Amherst County, no man living ought to defend that county of Amherst for one moment. It ought to be excluded from the count; it ought to be lifted up as an impurity, as a vile thing, and taken out of its operation upon a pure and earnest constituency. What right has a man to sit in the American Congress when he has come here by the strangulation of the very principle of an honest ballot? With that ballot in every voting place in the county, it had its inspiration at the county seat, had its inspiration with the party who sought to gain by it, carried out this infamous conspiracy, so far as the evidence of actions can prove it, by the manipulation of every form of fraud and the ultimate overthrow of an honest election in that district. I am not afraid that my vote will be criticised by the mem who are afraid that there was some partisanship in a contested who are afraid that there was some partisanship in a contested election. I am not afraid that my vote will ever be questioned upon a contested-election case, the majority of which turns upon upholding that ballot and the scheme of its manipulation. [Loud applause on the Republican side.]

Mr. WALKER of Virginia. I yield to the gentleman from New York [Mr. DANIELS] as much time as he wants.

Mr. DANIELS. Mr. Speaker, I do not intend to detain the House in going through the circumstances that have been discussed with in going through the circumstances that have been discussed with so much ability. I desire to say, in the outset, that no person upon this floor can have a greater degree of respect for the gentleman who is the contestee in this controversy than I myself.

Mr. GROSVENOR. Mr. Speaker, the gentleman from New York is a very modest man, and I ask that he be heard. He ought to be heard. I do not know what side he is on.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. DALZELL). The House will be in order. Gentlemen will please be seated and cease convergetion.

sation.

sation.

Mr. DANIELS. But in the discussion and consideration of the controversy now before the House a vital principle is involved that should not be overlooked, but on the other hand should be carefully considered and sustained by the action of the House of Representatives. The Constitution of the United States has provided that so far as the qualifications of the electors for members of Congress are concerned, they shall be dependent upon the laws of the State in which the election is held. The language will be found in section 2 of Article I of the Constitution, and it is this:

The electors in each State shall have the qualifications requisite for electors of the most numerous branch of the State legislature.

That is as far as the Constitution has made concessions to the authority of the States over this important subject. It has in addition to that provided by another declaration contained in the addition to that provided by another declaration contained in the Constitution "that each House shall be the judge of the qualifications and the election of its members." These are the only provisions, according to my recollection, which are embodied in and made a part of the Constitution relating to this general subject. They, accordingly, do not adopt such arbitrary regulations as the State may see fit to adopt concerning the evidence of the intention of the voter. The intention, on the other hand, is to be one of universal and common adjudication. In the case of the State of Illinois, where the ballots were brought up, gentlemen will remember that there was no mark upon the ballots from which the intention of the voter could be surely discovered and will remember that there was no mark upon the ballots from which the intention of the voter could be surely discovered and carried into effect. It was an arbitrary mark, which under the authority of the law of the State of Illinois could be accepted or regarded as an indication of the intention of the voter.

In this case, so far as these largely controverted ballots are concerned, there is no difficulty whatever in ascertaining and determining what was the intention of the voter who put the ballot into the ballot box. It is true that the legislature of the State of Virginia has declared that no candidate's name shall be considered as "scratched" unless the pen or pencil mark extends through three-fourths of the length of said name, and the inquiry arises here whether this House is bound to give the same effect to that provision of the law of Virginia as was given to it by the election officers in the exercise of their authority. In opposition to the adoption of such a construction stand the implications of the Constitution of the United States, by which the House of Representatives is bound by the enactments of the States only so far as they declare the qualifications of the voter for the most popular branch of the bound by the enactments of the States only so far as they declare the qualifications of the voter for the most popular branch of the State legislature, who, having those qualifications, is declared to be competent to vote for the election of a member of this House.
That is as far as the Constitution has gone in recognizing the authority of the State legislatures over this subject, and by the general provision in another part of the Constitution—that the House is to be the judge of the election and qualifications of its own members—the idea is practically availed that the State of Vizis to be the judge of the election and qualifications of its own members—the idea is practically excluded that the State of Virginia, or any State, can so far legislate as to the evidence of the existence of the voter's intention as to tie us down to the observance of any special arbitrary principle or declaration. It has, on the contrary, as to this subject, left the House at liberty to look into it and to consider whether the evidence appearing before it is such as to show what the intention of the voter was, and then whether that intention has been carried out in the conclusion that has been reached by the election officers of the State. In looking at these circumstances we must of course remember that the law of the State of Virginia was made simply for that State. It was made for the direction of the State officers in the exercise of their authority and the performance of their duties, and has and can have no power or binding force beyond the limits of the State whose legislature enacted it. It certainly can not be held to be in any way peculiar that this principle should be applied in this case, because it is of general application, and no matter where the State legislature may intervene in making laws by which arbitrary evidence is to be required concerning the inten-tion of the voter in casting his ballot, no matter where such legis-lation may appear, it has no effect, no control, and can not and should not have effect or control, over the action of the House of

- 12

It is simply a State regulation, by which the Representatives. State says to its officers, and can say to no other officers—certainly can not say to the members of this House—that, unless the voter shall draw his line through three-fourths of the name of any candidate on the ballot that he desires to reject, the name shall not be rejected. On the contrary, when evidence comes here which, upon natural and reasonable consideration, satisfies the minds of upon natural and reasonable consideration, satisfies the minds of the members that the voter intended to vote, according to the evidence borne upon the face of his ballot, for one person and not for another, then this House must adopt the view that is consonant with the intention of the voter, even though it may not be in com-plete harmony with the laws of the State where the vote was cast. It is true that the States may prescribe, as they generally have prescribed, the form of the vote that is to be given, and may say that none but a certain form of ballot shall be used. That is a mode of regulating elections that necessarily is exclusive on the part of the State: but when the ballot is framed in conformity with the laws of the State and has passed through the hands of the voter, and he has indicated on the face of that ballot what his intention is as to the persons who were candidates for this office, that intention should be recognized and carried out by the House of Representa-tives more strictly, more thoroughly, more earnestly, than by any other body in existence.

Now, what is the stuation here? We have certain ballots that were burned, over 1,100 of them, I believe, and that were marked in a peculiar manner by the voters who failed to obey and carry out literally the provision of the law of the State of Virginia with reference to the marking of ballots. It is to be remembered that one great purpose and object of the laws on this subject should be to protect the illiterate voter, to enable him to express his conto protect the liliterate voter, to enable him to express his convictions by the form and manner in which he prepares his ballot and deposits it in the ballot box. He is not the man to read the laws of the State. He is not the man to read these restrictions upon the exercise of his right of franchise. Ordinarily he can know nothing about them, but he knows and believes that, as a part of the free Government of the country, when he shows by his action upon the face of his ballot what his intention is, that intention will be controlled and in preparation of his wish containing his action upon the face of his ballot what his intention is, that intention will be carried out in pursuance of his wish—certainly so when the question comes before the House of Representatives of the United States. And, Mr. Speaker, what can more clearly and unequivocally indicate the intention of the voter upon this occasion than the ballots, a facsimile of which is spread upon the minority report presented here, according to the evidence of the witnesses who describe the manner in which the ballots in question were marked?

question were marked?

The ballots themselves were not preserved. They were destroyed; and why were they destroyed, unless it was for the purpose of preventing the presentation of complete, accurate, and perfect evidence before this House, or any other body having cognizance of this subject, as to what the voter actually intended to do? Upon the face of these ballots, instead of drawing his pen through the name, in some instances the voter had made a line, or several lines, across the name of the person for whom he did not desire to vote. In other instances he has drawn a line, as nearly as a man with a tremulous hand would be able to do through the as a man with a tremulous hand would be able to do, through the name of the individual that he did not design to vote for. In other instances, under the influence of a similar disability—a tremulous hand—his line has gone above a part of a name, and in others below a part of a name. Such appears to be the evidence on which the election officers of the State of Virginia concluded that they must reject these ballots and not count them for either of the contesting candidates. They were at liberty to conform, and probably it was their duty to conform, as officers of that State, to the provisions of its law, even though it required the application of a mathematical calculation for the purpose of determining whether in point of fact the line had gone through three-fourths of the name upon the ticket. But there is no such restriction here.

Here the question is, and must be, relative to all election contests that are brought before the House, not what the State has said to its own officers shall be the peculiar form and evidence of the elec-tor's intention, but whether there is enough on the face of the ballot to show what that intention was as a reasonable construction of the act of the party who has put his vote into the ballot box. And when a ballot of this kind appears before the House, and, by the line drawn in this unequivocal manner, the voter has shown that the did not intend to vote for the person whose name is partly obliterated by the line, though he may not have drawn the line strictly through three-fourths of the name, can we have any doubt what our construction of such a vote should be? Why should the voter place this line upon the name of the candidate at all? Why should he endeavor to erase that name from the ticket? And why should he carry his intention and his efforts so far as to make the line apply to every other person except one candidate upon the ticket unless he intended his act to be unequivocal evidence to the body at liberty to consider the effect of it that he did not intend to vote for any one of these persons whose names were in this manner partially obliterated?

That is the natural supposition presenting itself to the mind of any person exercising his reason or experience upon a subject of this kind. If you place such a ticket so marked before even an illiterate person and ask what is meant when that line is drawn through all the other names except one on the face of the ticket, his answer would be unequivocal, without a moment's reflection or hesitation, that the person who made those marks upon the ticket did not intend to vote for either of those persons but intended to have it known and understood that no one of those persons whose name was affected by this act of obliteration was the candidate of his choice; but, on the other hand, when, taking the entire ticket into consideration, it is seen that he leaves one name upon the face of the ticket entirely unaffected by his act, every-one will say the voter has clearly indicated his intention to vote for that man and not for the others on the ticket. There is no man in this House who can take this ticket in hand and looking at it declare his conviction to be that any other purpose was indicated by the voter when he finished marking the ticket and had it put into the ballot box. Under these circumstances it is certainly therefore the imperative duty of this House to carry into effect what clearly appears to have been the determination of the voter himself.

You are asked here to determine who was elected; and what better evidence of an election can possibly be presented than the unequivocal circumstance that the voter has drawn his line or unequivocal circumstance that the voter has drawn his line or attempted to draw his line through every other name on the ticket except one, which he leaves entirely unaffected and undisturbed? Who can say there is any possibility of doubt of the intention of the voter when these acts were performed by him, and with their evidence the ballot was placed in the ballot box? Why, sir, the matter would seem to be beyond possible controversy. And when, as appears here, these ballots were destroyed, were burned, with these evidences upon them, the party who now objects to the insufficiency of this evidence can have no good ground to stand upon, because we are to take the best evidence of the intention of the voter that can be or has been supplied, which, in this case, is upon, because we are to take the best evidence of the intention of the voter that can be or has been supplied, which, in this case, is the description given of these burned ballots from the memory of witnesses who were familiar with them. Such evidence is spread upon the record. There is no doubt or dispute that so far as concerns the recollection of witnesses who saw these ballots and were cognizant of the disposition made of them by the officers of the election—there can be no doubt that these witnesses fully undertend whether the invent of these ballots are the invent of these ballots are such as the second of the second stood what was the import of those ballots and were able to testify when brought before the commissioner or notary as to the peculiar marks on those ballots. These witnesses have given the very best evidence that the nature of the case admits of. They have given a description of these ballots with such a degree of have given a description of these ballots with such a degree of accuracy and uniformity as to leave no substantial conflict or discrepancy in their statements. Those witnesses stand before the House giving their evidence intelligently—describing fully the appearance of these ballots—describing them so accurately that a fair representation of them has been produced from the record for the consideration of the House.

Mr. DOLLIVER. How many votes were affected by those imperfectly marked ballots?

Mr. DANIELS. Fifther 1071 or 1021. There is no dispute as

Mr. DANIELS. Either 1,071 or 1,021. There is no dispute as to the number, although those tickets have disappeared.

It is objected here that the ticket should not have that degree of effect as will change the declared result of the election, because of the inability to prove for whom the ballots were deposited in the ballot boxes. But as has been correctly stated, and I may be at liberty to repeat it here, because the principle is a correct one, where the evidence of a fact is destroyed, the parties who were engaged in it, or in whose interest the destruction takes place, are not at liberty to say that the evidence should have no effect against them or against him if it had not been destroyed in the manner it appears to have been destroyed in this case. On the contrary, where testimony has been destroyed, or where it has been obliterated, in whole or in part by the act or in the interest of a party, the presumption is that it would weigh against that party in case it was produced, in the opinion of the body who is called upon to take cognizance of it, and whose action may be controlled by the facts that such evidence should present. is a substantial and well-settled principle followed in all of the courts of the country, and one that commends itself to the common sense and reason of every individual who reflects upon it. So that we have in the fact of the destruction of 1,021 or 1,071 ballots a degree of evidence that is certainly persuasive, in this, that probably a large number of votes, and a sufficient number to have more than changed the result as the returns have been made in this election in favor of the contestant against the contestee, were destroyed and not counted. We can not close our eyes to the evidence existing in reference to this matter. We can not reject the conviction, or say that the evidence is not entirely conclusive as to the intention of the voter, but we are called upon to act with the greatest degree of consistency, and I might say of inconsistency also, to give effect to the law of the State rather than the evidence showing the intention of the voter after he had placed his ballot in the hands of those persons who deposited it in that form in the box. Is a State law more imperious or more controlling, to affect the opinion or the action of this body, than the intent of the man who marks his ballot in this manner?

Why, they say, and it seems to have been a device to entrap the ignorant voters, that unless you draw a line through three-fourths of the name, your vote shall be lost; it shall count for nothing. of the name, your vote shall be lost; it shall count for nothing. Where there is such a provision, it can only address itself to the intelligent portion of the community, and even some of the most intelligent persons could not fail to lose their ballots by a uniform application of that principle, because they, under all of the circumstances, would not probably be familiar with the exact text of the enactment. They would not all be able to understand the necessity of drawing this line through three-fourths of the name. They would ordinarly say, "I marked the ballot to indicate my intention, and that fact ought to be sufficient to give effect to it. Under all ordinary circumstances I may exercise my own authority and option as an elector with that view in mind."

Mr. HULICK. Will the gentleman allow me to ask him a question?

SiE

question?
Mr. DANIELS. Certainly.
Mr. HULICK. I understood from what you stated that as this is a contest as to who shall be entitled to a seat here, the contestant or the contestee, we should look to discover, if possible, the ant of the contestee, we should look to discover, if possible, the intention of the voter, and disregard the statute requiring that this line shall be drawn through three-fourths of the name rejected on the ballots. Now, if this were a contest in the State legislature of Virginia, and you were engaged in giving your judgment and opinion on that, would you disregard the statute of the State of Virginia and, without regard to the letter of the law, determine what was the intent of the voter, and let that have effect rather than the technical language or requirement of the statute?

Mr. DANIELS. I will say in answer to the gentleman from Mr. DANIELS. I will say in answer to the gentleman from Ohio that, severe as the language of the statute is, restrictive and unjust as it is, certainly to the ignorant voter, if I were acting in Virginia, where the law is entitled to full force and effect, notwithstanding the imposition of the restriction, at variance necessarily with the exercise of the franchise by illiterate people, I should conform to the law, because it would be the law of the State and in force there. But it is not in force here. A different system is here presented. We are possessed of power in our own right. This law has no extraterritorial effect, and when a question comes here to the House it is for it to say who was elected, because under the Constitution it has the power to judge of the election, qualifications, and returns of its own members. election, qualifications, and returns of its own members.

Mr. HULICK. Let me ask the gentleman another question. In the State of Ohio we require the voter to put a cross mark before the name of the candidate for whom he casts his vote. Now, suppose he were only to put a straight mark there, would not that indicate that he intended to vote for that candidate? And would the gentleman apply the strict rule in the State and reject the the gentleman apply the strict rule in the State and reject the vote, and in Congress here determine the true intent of the voter?

Mr. DANIELS. No; I am not prepared to say that I would apply the rule there, for the reason that the language of the statute of the State of Ohio, as is the case with the language of the statutes of many of the States upon this subject, is of an arbitrary character. There is nothing in and of itself in a mark, whether it is a cross mark or a straight line, which indicates what the intention of the voter is in placing that mark upon his ballot; and it is only because the laws of the State have given it a special significance that it becomes an important circumstance; while here in this instance the voter has placed upon his ballot a mark which has a natural and reasonable significance, and shows what his in has a natural and reasonable significance, and shows what his in-mas a natural and reasonable significance, and shows what his intention was in putting that mark there.

Mr. GROSVENOR. Will the gentleman from New York allow me? Under the legislation of Ohio the most liberal decisions have been made, the courts even going beyond the court of Illinois, basing their decisions upon the ground that it is a simple question of what the actual intent of the voter was.

Mr. DANIELS. That is what we have done in this Heree.

what the actual intent of the voter was.

Mr. DANIELS. That is what we have done in this House.

Mr. BRUMM. The decisions in Pennsylvania are the same, that of ma hieroglyphic will answer the purpose.

Mr. DANIELS. Even under the arbitrary provisions of the laws of those States; and I say if the manner in which the mark was made showed the intention of the voter, although it may not have and that he would not order a vote counted which failed to com-and that he would not order a vote counted which are ply with its requirement?

Mr. DANIELS. Probably.

Mr. McCALL of Massachusetts. I understood you to say that.

Mr. DANIELS. I say I might do that if I were acting under the laws of the State of Virginia.

Mr. ECOTE. Will my colleague allow me to ask him one ques-

Mr. FOOTE. Will my colleague allow me to ask him one ques-

Mr. DANIELS. Certainly.
Mr. FOOTE. What would have been the difference in the result of this election if these votes in which you claim the intention was clearly shown had been counted as you claim they should have een counted?

Mr. DANIELS. It is practically conceded here, as I understand the discussion before the House, and as questions which I put to gentlemen and have been answered indicate the fact to be, that then the majority would be in favor of the contestant.

Mr. TUCKER. Not at all. The gentleman is entirely mistaken

Mr. DANIELS. The contestant himself says he would have a plurality of 22; that is, depending only upon this bare circumstance as to the 1,021 or the 1,071 ballots that were destroyed, bearing these evidences of the intention of the voter; and I may say here, in reference to what the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. McCall] has asked me, that the case of the marking of the ballots by an arbitrary mark whose significance is provided only by the statute of the State, is entirely different from this case. Suppose a man, in a State where that mark is required to be placed upon the ballot, should fail to do it, but should draw a line through the name of the person that he did not intend to vote for, and them should write out, what would make the thing still more significant, the words: cant, the words:

I put this line through this name because I do not intend or desire to vote for that candidate.

The State authorities would say, "We are bound by the State law, and we must reject this ballot, as not being properly marked, not having that significant mark upon it which the State law has said shall be the only evidence of the voter's intention;" but when it comes up here, this House is not restricted or controlled by that provision of the law of the State. It is entitled to look at the evidences of the intention of the voter, and to judge and determine the election by reason and in view of that intention. If that is not to be done, then the States are furnished with a weapon by which they may require a conformation by the voter to any unreason. which they may require a conformation by the voter to any unreasonable provision contained in the State law, or else that he shall lose the benefit of his vote.

They may in this manner exclude from the ballot box, exclude from the benefit of the election, every illiterate man who may be found in a State; and certainly this House would never be willing to go so far as to sanction any provision, or the exercise of any legislative authority, of this description. On the other hand, we have always—and I hope always will continue to do so—looked at the evidence of the intention of the voter, and, where that can be disclosed, to hold that no artifice and no device of State law shall have the effect here which would have the purpose, the design, and the result and the consequence of striking from the ballot list the vote of a man who has so unequivocally indicated what his intention was. Here we are to go upon more enlarged principles, and we are not to sanction what might be the policy of the legislatures of the States. We are not to sanction the exercise of authority in such manner as to create artifices by and through which a man's intention as a voter shall be entirely destroyed and the effect of his ballot shall be wholly obliterated.

Mr. BAILEY. Will the gentleman from New York permit me lose the benefit of his vote.

Mr. BAILEY. Will the gentleman from New York permit me to interrupt him? If it be true that in this House we are not to be governed by the law of a State where an election was held, then will the gentleman from New York be good enough to tell us what law does govern?

Mr. DANIELS. I am discussing this case; and as to this case I say that the general principle of law that is tolerated by the Continuous and the general principle of law that is tolerated by the Continuous and the same an stitution, and is designed to carry into effect the intention of the voter, is the one by which we are to be governed in our conduct upon a contest of this character.

Mr. BAILEY. My understanding is that in the absence of a Federal statute regulating the election of members of this House the only law is the State law, and that unless a man be elected made showed the intention of the voter, although it may not have been a literal compliance with the requirement, yet when we could see what the intention was we have given effect to that intention in the cases that have been brought before this House.

Mr. McCALL of Massachusetts. Will the gentleman allow me to ask him one question?

Mr. DANIELS. Yes.

Mr. McCALL of Massachusetts. Do I understand the gentleman to say that if he were a judge sitting in Virginia he would hold that this particular provision of the statute was mandatory, unequivocally what that intent was upon the ballot, then I say that this House, judging of the qualification and election of its members, is in duty bound to give effect to that evidence of inten-tion rather than to a restriction which leaves it to the arbitrary requirements of a State that may be inconsistent with the exerrequirements of a State that may be inconsistent with the exercise of that benign authority. That is as far as we propose to go here. It is as far as this case requires that any member of this House shall go. And we say here, in the exercise of this overruling power given by the Constitution to the House of Representatives, that when we have unequivocal evidence of the fact of what the intention of the voter is, we shall carry that intention into effect.

What will be the consequences if we do not do so? What will be the result if any other principle be adopted? Why, it will be that any State in the Union, no matter what its disposition may be, will be entitled to throw around the exercise of this franchise such restrictions as can not possibly be complied with by any illiterate or ignorant person, and consequently the entire vote of the community, so far as these people are concerned, shall be rejected and count for nothing. This House will hesitate long before it will concede to the legislature of any State in this Union that power over the exercise of the elective franchise by the voters of a State. On the contrary, when we come to see who is to receive the majority of that exercise of the intention of the voter, when we come to see where the result is, it is our duty to give effect to that result and carry into effect the intention of the voter, and not permit the legislatures of the States to fritter this away and destroy the existence of this right of suffrage on the part of the citizen by any restriction of so unreasonable a character as is prochizen by any restriction of so unreasonable a character as is proposed by its legislature. It strikes me we have no difficulty in the way of a member that shall be sitting here to-day. But the House shall place now its condemnation upon the exercise of any such authority as shall apparently be intended to exclude the possibility of illiterate voters expressing their intentions as to their candidate at the polls in the exercise of the privilege of the elective franchise.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

A message from the Senate, by Mr. Platt, one of its clerks, announced that the Senate had agreed to the report of the committee of conference, and had further insisted upon its amendments numbered 3 and 4 to the bill (H. R. 9638) making appropriations for the support of the Army for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1898.

ARMY APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. HULL. Mr. Speaker, I desire to submit a conference report on the Army appropriation bill.

The conference report was read, as follows:

The comference report was read, as follows:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 9638) making appropriations for the support of the Army for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1898, having met, after full and free conference have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendments of the Senate numbered 1, 2, and 5, and agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 6, and agree to the same with amendments as follows: Strike out the matter inserted by said Senate amendment and strike out after the word "dollars," in line 15, page 23, of the bill, all down to and including the word "duty," in line 18, same page; and agree to the same.

On amendments numbered 3 and 4 the committee of conference has been unable to agree.

On amendmen unable to agree.

J. A. T. HULL, R. WAYNE PARKER, GEO. B. McCLELLAN, Managers on the part of the House.

M. S. QUAY,
EUGENE HALE,
JO. C. S. BLACKBURN,
Managers on the part of the Senate.

The statement of the conferees on the part of the House is as follows:

STATEMENT.

The conferees agree to the following:
No. 1. Authorizing promotions in the Signal Corps below the rank of colonel.
1. No. 2. Is a verbal correction, and leaves the bill the same.
No. 5. Increases the amount appropriated for the Signal Corps from $15,000 to $18,000.
No. 6. As amended, strikes out the entire proviso, which provides for detailing enlisted men for the Signal Corps.
We disagree as to amendments 3 and 4. These amendments relate to the Army and Navy hospitals at Hot Springs, Ark., and reverse the action of the House in this matter as decided by a vote of the House when the bill was under consideration, the Senate conferees refusing consent to any change in the Senate amendment.

J. A. T. HULL.

J. A. T. HULL. R. WAYNE PARKER.

Mr. HULL. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House adopt that part of the conference report on which there has been an agree-

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. HULL. I now move that the House insist upon its disagreement as to the other items and ask for a further conference. The motion was agreed to; and the Speaker pro tempore (Mr. | of the Union.

DALZELL) appointed as conferees on the part of the House Mr Hull, Mr. Parker, and Mr. McClellan.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE.

By unanimous consent, leave of absence was granted as follows: To Mr. DAYTON, for five days, on account of important business To Mr. Brosius, for the remainder of this week, on account of YOST VS. TUCKER.

Mr. McCALL of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, in accordance with the request of many members, I would like to try to come to an agreement as to the time when the vote shall be taken upon to an agreement as to the time when the vote shall be taken upon the pending contested-election case. I understand that the other side are willing that some hour shall be fixed for taking the vote, and I will ask my friend from Virginia [Mr. WALKER] what he is willing to agree to?

Mr. WALKER of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, I can hardly say what time would suit. I have requests from four or five gentlemen who have asymptotic as wish to speak upon the case to more what time would suit. I have requests from four or live gentlemen who have expressed a wish to speak upon the case to-morrow, and I desire to submit some remarks upon it myself. I think it is hardly probable that we shall reach a vote before 4 o'clock or possibly 5 o'clock to-morrow.

Mr. McCALL of Massachusetts. I understood from the gentlement is a first the afternoon that he would be satisfied to have the man earlier in the afternoon that he would be satisfied to have the vote taken at 3 o'clock or half past 3 to-morrow, and now, in order that members may have some definite knowledge on the subject, I will ask unanimous consent that the vote be taken at half past 4 to-morrow

Mr. WALKER of Virginia. I have no objection to that.
There was no objection, and it was so ordered.
The House then, on motion of Mr. PAYNE (at 5 o'clock and 6 minutes p. m.), adjourned.

EXECUTIVE COMMUNICATIONS.

Under clause 2 of Rule XXIV, the following executive commu-nications were taken from the Speaker's table and referred as

A letter from the Acting Secretary of the Navy, replying to the House resolution of January 14, 1897, as to the cost of repairs to the frigate Constitution—to the Committee on Naval Affairs, and ordered to be printed.

A letter from the Acting Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting a communication from the Secretary of the Interior, submitting estimate of appropriation for services of a commissioner to negotiate with the Crow, Flathead, and other Indians—to the Committee on Indian Affairs, and ordered to be printed.

A letter from the Acting Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting, with a communication from G. W. Parks, a recommendation for an appropriation for compensation of officers of election in Utah and of the Utah Commission—to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

A letter from the Acting Secretary of the Treasury, asking for an estimate of the probable amount of space required for the present and prospective needs of the House of Representatives for the storage of documents, papers, etc.—to the Committee on Accounts.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES ON PUBLIC BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS.

Under clause 2 of Rule XIII, bills and resolutions were severally reported from committees, delivered to the Clerk, and referred to the several Calendars therein named, as follows:

Mr. SHERMAN, from the Committee on Indian Affairs, sub-Mr. SHERMAN, from the Committee on Indian Affairs, submitted a supplementary report (No. 2517, part 2) on the bill of the House (H. R. 10002) making appropriations for the current and contingent expenses of the Indian Department and for fulfilling treaty stipulations with various Indian tribes for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1898, and for other purposes; which said report was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. HALL, from the Committee on Naval Affairs, to which was referred the bill of the Senate (S. 1296) entitled "An act to commission passed assistant surgeons in the United States Navy, and to provide for their examination preliminary to their promotion to the grade of surgeon," reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 2581); which said bill and report were referred to the House Calendar.

Mr. ELLIS, from the Committee on the Public Lands, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 9493) to amend an act entitled "An act to forfeit certain lands heretofore granted for entitled "An act to foriest certain lands heretorore granted for the purpose of aiding in the construction of railroads, and for other purposes," approved September 29, 1890, and the several acts amendatory thereof, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 2584); which said bill and report were referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state

Mr. McCLELLAN, from the Committee on Military Affairs, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 9822) for the recognition of the officers of the Army to whom the Congressional medal of honor has been awarded, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 2585); which said bill and report were referred to the House Calendar.

Mr. SHERMAN, from the Committee on Interestate and Foreign

Mr. SHERMAN, from the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce, to which was referred House bill No. 10022, reported in lieu thereof a bill (H. R. 10090) to amend the act entitled "An act to regulate commerce," accompanied by a report (No. 2586); which said bill and report were referred to the House Calendar.

Mr. BRODERICK, from the Committee on the Judiciary, to which was referred the veto message of the President upon the bill of the House (H. R. 9469) entitled "An act to constitute a new division of the eastern judicial district of Texas, and to provide for the holding of terms of court at Beaumont, Tex., and for the appointment of a clerk for said court," reported the same with the recommendation that said bill do pass, the objections of the President to the contrary notwithstanding, accompanied by a President to the contrary notwithstanding, accompanied by a report (No. 2587); which said veto message, bill, and report were referred to the House Calendar.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES ON PRIVATE BILLS.

Under clause 2 of Rule XIII, private bills and resolutions were referred to the Committee of the Whole House, as follows:

By Mr. GRIFFIN, from the Committee on Military Affairs:
The bill (H. R. 4846) for the relief of John W. Stevens. (Report

No. 2577.)

By Mr. BAKER of Kansas, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions: The bill (H. R. 6329) granting a pension to Charles H. Car-

Books: The bill (H. R. 6523) granting a pension to Charles H. Carlow. (Report No. 2578.)

By Mr. PICKLER, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions: The bill (H. R. 8990) increasing pension of William H. Nevitt from $12 to $30 per month. (Report No. 2579.)

By Mr. WOOD, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions: The bill (H. R. 7904) to increase the pension of John M. Robinson. (Report No. 2580.)

(Report No. 2580.)
By Mr. ANDERSON, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions:
The bill (H. R. 8117) for increase of pension of Charles B. Eades, Hopkinsville, Ky. (Report No. 2582.)
By Mr. THOMAS, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions:
The bill (H. R. 5936) granting an increase of pension to Christopher C. Bradley. (Report No. 2583.)

PUBLIC BILLS, MEMORIALS, AND RESOLUTIONS.

Under clause 3 of Rule XXII, bills, resolutions, and memorials of the following titles were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. MORSE: A bill (H. R. 10079) for the erection of a monument to Peter Charles L'Enfant in the city of Washington, D. C.—to the Committee on the Library.

By Mr. FISCHER: A bill (H. R. 10080) for appointment of commission to report on Romer Shoals, harbor of New York, as a suitable site for erection of fortification and seacoast defense-to the Committee on Appropriations.

By Mr. LIVINGSTON: A bill (H. R. 10081) for the protection of railway mail clerks while in the discharge of their official duties—to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads.

By Mr. NORTHWAY: A bill (H. R. 10082) for the development and encouragement of silk, flax, and ramie culture and their preparation and manufacture in the United States under the supervicion of the Scartery of Agriculture, to the Committee on Agriculture. sion of the Secretary of Agriculture—to the Committee on Agri-

By Mr. CORLISS: A bill (H. R. 10091) to repeal sections 2 and 3 of an act entitled "An act to provide for the purchase of a site and the erection of a public building thereon at Detroit, Mich.," approved March 2, 1885—to the Committee on Public Buildings

By Mr. LIVINGSTON: A resolution (House Res. No. 500) authorizing the printing of 5,000 copies of The Cotton Plant—to the Committee on Printing.

PRIVATE BILLS, ETC.

Under clause 1 of Rule XXII, private bills of the following titles were presented and referred as follows:
By Mr. BINGHAM: A bill (H. R. 10083) granting a pension to Henry H. K. Elliott—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.
By Mr. BURRELL: A bill (H. R. 10084) to increase the pension of Martin Schubert—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.
By Mr. CURTIS of New York: A bill (H. R. 10085) for the relief of Elnora Shuman, widow of John Shuman, deceased, and foster mother of W. E. Shuman and James F. Shuman, both deceased—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.
By Mr. HULING: A bill (H. R. 10086) for the relief of St.

John's Catholic Church, at Summersville, Nicholas County, W.

John's Catholic Church, at Summersville, Nicholas County, W. Va.—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. HULL: A bill (H. R. 10087) for the relief of James McKenzie—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. LACEY: A bill (H. R. 10088) to increase the pension of Louise A. Rice—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. MILNES: A bill (H. R. 10089) for the relief of Israel Boyer—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

PETITIONS, ETC.

Under clause 1 of Rule XXII, the following petitions and papers were laid on the Clerk's desk and referred as follows:

By Mr. BARHAM: Memorial of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union of Eagleville, Cal., urging the passage of sundry bills—to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. BINGHAM: Petition of citizens and business firms of Philadalphia December 21 of the desired billing of the passage of the desired bills.

Philadelphia, Pa., representing the advisability of putting a duty on hides—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. BROWN (by request): Petition of Albert G. Davis Post, No. 76, Grand Army of the Republic, Department of Tennessee, urging the passage of a service-pension bill—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. COUSINS: Petition of 12 citizens of Springdale, Iowa. praying for the allowance of a bounty of 15 cents per bushel on corn and 3 cents per pound on pork—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. HOWE: Resolutions of the State council of Junior Order United American Mechanics of the State of New York, requesting the recognition of Cuba as a free and independent gov-questing the recognition of Cuba as a free and independent government—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

By Mr. HURLEY: Petition of the Lehigh Valley Creosoting Company, asking that creosote coal tar or "dead oil of coal tar" be placed on the free list—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. KYLE: Petition of Harriet A. Cheairs, executrix of the estate of Thomas D. Cheairs, deceased, late of Marshall County, Miss., praying that her claim may be referred to the Court of Claims in her capacity of executrix, to correct the former reference to the Court of Claims—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. MADDOX: Petition of Sarah J. Key's estate, of Bartow County, Ga., praying that her war claim be referred to the Court of Claims under the Bowman Act—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. McCALL of Massachusetts: Resolutions of the Middlesex County (Mass.) Fourth-Class Postmasters' Association, in favor of the passage of House bills Nos. 3343 and 3351, relating to the pay of fourth-class postmasters—to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads.

By Mr. REYBURN: Petition of Mantua Lodge, No. 160, Brother-hood of Railroad Firemen, protesting against the passage of House nood of Railfoad Firemen, protesting against the passage of House bill No. 9120, amending an act relating to the use of automatic couplers and continuous brakes on railway trains—to the Commit-tee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce. By Mr. STEWART of Wisconsin: Resolution of the Wisconsin National Guard, requesting the passage of Senate bill No. 1169, authorizing the Secretary of War to issue Springfield rifles to the National Guard of each State and Territory in exchange for other rifles now held—to the Committee on the Militia.

SENATE.

THURSDAY, January 21, 1897.

Prayer by the Chaplain, Rev. W. H. MILBURN, D. D. The Journal of yesterday's proceedings was read and approved. ALLEGED VIOLATION OF THE EIGHT-HOUR LAW.

The VICE-PRESIDENT laid before the Senate a communica-The VICE-PRESIDENT laid before the Senate a communication from the Secretary of the Navy, transmitting, in response to a resolution of the 12th instant, information as to whether Isaac Walker & Sons, of Philadelphia, Pa., who are engaged in constructing additions and making repairs on the naval hospital at Brooklyn, N. Y., have violated, or are violating, or suffering violations of the act of Congress of August 1, 1892, commonly known as the "eight-hour labor law," and also whether like violations are being committed by P. J. Carlin, a contractor, of Brooklyn, N. Y., etc.; which was referred to the Committee on Education and Labor, and ordered to be printed. and Labor, and ordered to be printed.

PETITIONS AND MEMORIALS.

The VICE-PRESIDENT presented the petition of T. C. Daniel and sundry other citizens of the city of Washington, praying for the passage of Senate bill No. 1515, to incorporate the Columbia Telephone Company, of the District of Columbia; which was referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

Mr. SEWELL presented a petition of Washington Camp, No. 29, Patriotic Order Sons of America, of Merchantville, N. J., praying Congress to recognize the independence of Cuba; which was ordered to lie on the table.

was ordered to lie on the table.

He also presented petitions of the Tabernacle Baptist Church, of the Trinity Methodist Episcopal Church, of the Emanuel Baptist Church, and of the Christian Citizenship Union, all of Camden, N. J., praying for the passage of Senate bill No. 2485, to further protect the first day of the week as a day of rest in the District of Columbia; which were referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

Mr. PEFFER presented a memorial of the People's Party Club of Leavenworth, Kans., remonstrating against the enactment of legislation proposing to increase the salaries of Senators and Congressmen, and to lengthen the term of the Presidential office; which was referred to the Committee on Privileges and Elections.

He also presented a petition of a committee on moral, civil, and religious reform of Kansas, praying that peaceable relations be maintained between the United States and other nations; which was referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

Mr. McBRIDE presented a petition of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union of Oregon, praying for the enactment of legislation raising the age of consent to 18 years in the District of Columbia and the Territories; which was referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

He also presented a petition of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union of Oregon, praying for the passage of Senate bill No. 2846, to protect State antigambling laws from nullification through 2846, to protect State antigambling laws from nullification through interstate gambling by telegraph, telephone, and otherwise, etc.; which was referred to the Committee on Interstate Commerce. He also presented a petition of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union of Oregon, praying for the passage of Senate bill No. 2485, to further protect the first day of the week as a day of rest in the District of Columbia; which was referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

Mr. McMILLAN presented a memorial of the Michigan State

Mr. McMillan presented a memorial of the michigan state board of health, remonstrating against the passage of Senate bill No. 1552, for the further prevention of cruelty to animals in the District of Columbia; which was ordered to lie on the table.

He also presented a petition of the Michigan State board of health, praying for the enactment of legislation to provide a permanent census service; which was referred to the Committee on the Census.

Mr. ELKINS presented a petition of 100 citizens of Bethany, W. Va., and a petition of sundry citizens of Mercer County, W. Va., praying Congress to recognize the independence of Cuba; which were ordered to lie on the table.

Mr. GALLINGER. Yesterday I presented a petition of the National Humane Society, and, accompanying it, several letters from presidents and other officers of colleges and universities, and it was ordered to be printed as a document

it was ordered to be printed as a document.

I now desire to present letters from F. Wagner, president of Morgan College, Baltimore, Md.; Galusha Anderson, of the faculty of the University of Chicago; J. Braden, president of the Central Tennessee College, of Nashville, Tenn.; William C. Wilkinson, connected with the University of Chicago; J. W. Bissell, president of Upper Iowa University; Agnes Repplier, of Philadelphia, and Roland Hale, of Sewanee, Tenn., in behalf of the Bishop of Tennessee, praying for the passage of the bill to restrict vivisection in the District of Columbia.

I ask unanimous consent that these letters may be printed in

I ask unanimous consent that these letters may be printed in connection with the petition and letters that were yesterday ordered printed as a document.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and the letters will be printed as requested, and lie on the table.

Mr. GALLINGER presented a petition of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union of Peterboro, N. H., praying for the passage of the so-called Phillips bill, providing for the appointment of a nonpartisan commission to collate information and to consider and recommend legislation to meet the problems presented by labor, agriculture, and capital; which was referred to the Com-

He also presented a petition of the District of Columbia and the Territories; which was referred to the Committee on Education and Labor.

He also presented a petition of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union of Peterboro, N. H., praying for the passage of Senate bill No. 1498, to punish the carnal and unlawful knowing of any female under the age of 18 years in the District of Columbia and the Territories; which was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

He also presented a petition of the Woman's Christian Territories.

He also presented a petition of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union of Peterboro, N. H., praying for the passage of Senate bill No. 2485, to further protect the first day of the week as a day of rest in the District of Columbia; which was referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

He also presented a petition of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union of Peterboro, N. H., praying for the passage of Senate bill No. 2846, to protect State antigambling laws from nullifica-tion through interstate gambling by telegraph, telephone, and otherwise, etc.; which was referred to the Committee on Interstate

He also presented a petition of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, signed by Frances E. Willard, president, and Katharine L. Stevenson, corresponding secretary, praying for the enactment of legislation regulating the sale of intoxicating liquor in the District of Columbia; which was referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

Mr. CAMERON presented the petition of Mrs. Matilda S. Ellis, of Philadelphia, Pa., and six petitions of citizens of Philadelphia, Pa., praying for the passage of the so-called Loud bill, relating to second-class mail matter; which were referred to the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads.

He also presented the memorial of T. J. Ham, editor of the Wayne County (Pa.) Herald, remonstrating against the passage of the so-called Loud bill, relating to second-class mail matter; which was referred to the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads.

He also presented a petition of the Woman's National Indian Association, praying for the enactment of legislation in the inter-est of the Indians of the country; which was referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

Mr. WHITE presented sundry petitions of citizens of California, praying for the enactment of legislation prohibiting the sale of intoxicating liquors in any building owned and controlled by the Government; which were referred to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

Mr. CULLOM presented the memorial of A. N. Marquis & Co., publishers, of Chicago, Ill., remonstrating against the passage of the so-called Loud bill, relating to second-class mail matter; which was referred to the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads.

He also presented a petition of the Illinois State Teachers' Association, praying for an increase of the appropriations for the maintenance of the Bureau of Education; which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations.

He also presented a petition of the Chicago Jewelers' Associa-tion, of Chicago, Ill., praying for a restoration of the former duty of 10 per cent on polished diamonds; which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

Mr. MITCHELL of Wisconsin presented the petition of John C. Spencer, president, and H. B. Wilkins, secretary, of the Merchants and Manufacturers' Association of Milwaukee, Wis., praying for the passage of the so-called Torrey bankruptcy bill; which was ordered to lie on the table.

Mr. LODGE presented a petition of the Young Men's Baptist Social Union of Boston, Mass., praying for the ratification of the arbitration treaty; which was referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

He also presented the petition of Charles B. Blake & Co., of Lynn., Mass., praying for the passage of the so-called Torrey bankruptcy bill; which was ordered to lie on the table.

He also presented a petition of 37 members of the Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor, of Woburn, Mass., praying for the enactment of legislation prohibiting the sale of intoxicating liquors in the Capitol building; which was referred to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

He also presented the petition of Benjamin F. Trueblood, editor He also presented the petition of Benjamin F. Trueblood, editor of the Advocate of Peace, of Boston, Mass., praying for the passage of the so-called Loud bill, relating to second-class mail matter, after certain amendments have been made in regard to sample copies of legitimate monthly, weekly, and quarterly papers to be carried at the pound rate, and also praying Congress to prohibit the interstate transportation of obscene matter through the mails; which was referred to the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads.

Mr. ALLEN presented the memorial of R. B. Enslow, publisher of the Argus, of Alexandria, Nebr., remonstrating against the passage of the so-called Loud bill, relating to second-class mail matter; which was referred to the Committee on Post-Offices and

Mr. HOAR presented a petition of the Congregational ministers of Boston, Mass., praying for the enactment of legislation to prohibit the sale of intoxicating liquors in the Capitol building; which was referred to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

He also presented the petition of W. H. Brock & Co., publishers of the Healthy Home, of Athol, Mass., remonstrating against the passage of the so-called Loud bill, relating to second-class mail matter; which was referred to the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads.

He also presented a petition of the Tremont Temple Church, of Boston, Mass., praying that all churches and religious societies join in an appeal to the Senate of the United States to ratify the arbitration treaty with England; which was referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

Mr. GEAR presented the memorial of J. R. Caffyn, publisher of the Collegian, of Fayette, Iowa, remonstrating against the passage of the so-called Loud bill, relating to second-class mail matter; which was referred to the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads.

Mr. SHERMAN presented the memorial of David D. Taylor, publisher of the Guernsey Times, of Cambridge, Ohio, remonstrating against the passage of the so-called Loud bill, relating to second-class mail matter; which was referred to the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads.

Mr. BAKER presented sundry papers to accompany the bill (S. 3323) granting an increase of pension to John S. Barnhart; which were referred to the Committee on Pensions.

SENATOR FROM DELAWARE

Mr. CHANDLER. I rise to a privileged question. I present a paper connected with the vacant seat from the State of Delaware in the Senate, which I ask to have read.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read as requested.

The Secretary read as follows:

DELAWARE, 88:

Beit known that the legislature of the State of Delaware did, on the 20th day of January, in the year of our Lord 1897, at an election in due manner held according to the form of the act of the general assembly of said State in such case made and provided, choose John Edward Addicks to be a Senator from the said State in the Senate of the United States for the constitutional term from the 3d day of March, in the year of our Lord 1895.

Given under our hands in obedience to the said act of the general assembly the day and year aforesaid.

ROBERT J. HANBY,
Speaker of the Senate.
THOS. C. MOORE.
Speaker of the House of Representatives.
GEO. W. ROBERTS,
Clerk of the Senate.
CHAS. R. HASTINGS,
Clerk of the House of Representatives.

Mr. CHANDLER. Mr. President

Mr. GRAY. I should like to ask the Senator from New Hampshire from what source he procured that remarkable paper?

Mr. CHANDLER. I am perfectly willing to answer that it was handed to me by Mr. Addicks, who believes himself to have been lawfully elected a Senator from the State of Delaware and entitled to be sworn in to-day as the Senator's colleague; but in view of the fact that I presented last week the memorial of Mr. Du Pont, setting out that he still claims to be entitled to the vacant seat from Delaware, which memorial has been referred to the Com-mittee on Privileges and Elections, I will defer asking that Mr. Addicks may be sworn in until the Committee on Privileges and Elections have considered both sets of credentials. Itherefore ask that this paper may be referred to the Committee on Privileges and Election

The VICE-PRESIDENT. That order will be made, in the absence of objection.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

Mr. BATE, from the Committee on Military Affairs, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 8888) to grant an honorable discharge to Christopher C. Cummins, submitted an adverse report thereon, which was agreed to; and the bill was postponed indefinitely.

Mr. MITCHELL of Wisconsin, from the Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 7212) to increase the pension of Melita E. White, reported it without amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

submitted a report thereon.

He also, from the Committee on Military Affairs, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 8671) to remove the charge of desertion from the military record of Anthony O'Grady, alias John Davis, reported it without amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

Mr. ALLEN, from the Committee on Indian Affairs, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 280) to prohibit the sale of intoxicating drinks to Indians, providing penalties therefor, and for other processes, reported it without amendment, and submitted a report purposes, reported it without amendment, and submitted a report

Mr. ELKINS, from the Committee on Commerce, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 9865) extending the time for the completion of the bridge across the East River, between the city of New York and Long Island, now in course of construction, as authorized by the construction, as authorized by the construction, as authorized by the construction. ized by the act of Congress approved March 3, 1887, reported it without amendment.

Mr. BAKER, from the Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 6552) granting increase of pension to Alexander C. Morrison, reported it without amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred the Whole, proceeded to consider the joint resolution.

Whole, proceeded to consider the joint resolution.

The joint resolution was reported to the Senate without amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

He also, from the Committee on the District of Columbia, to whom was referred the bill (S. 3349) to enable the Commissioners of the District of Columbia to refuse a permit to erect stables on lot 43, square 358, in the city of Washington, in the District of Affairs to call the attention of the Senate to the bill (S. 539) for

Columbia, reported it without amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

Mr. PETTIGREW, from the Committee on Indian Affairs, to whom was referred the amendment submitted by Mr. Nelson December 21, 1896, intended to be proposed to the Indian appropriation bill, reported favorably thereon, and moved that it be referred to the Committee on Appropriations and printed; which was agreed to.

He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred the bill (S. 3395) to amend an act entitled "An act for the relief and civilization of the Chippewa Indians in the State of Minnesota," approved January 14, 1889, reported it without amendment.

Mr. McMILLAN, from the Committee on Commerce, to whom was referred the bill (S. 8507) to provide for light-houses and other aids to navigation, reported it without amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

Mr. HAWLEY. From the Committee on Military Affairs I report back the bill (S. 1184) for the relief of telegraph operators who served during the war of the rebellion, and ask that the committee be excused from its further consideration, and that it be indefinitely, postponed because a similar bill has passed both

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The bill will be postponed indefinitely, in the absence of objection.

Mr. HAWLEY. From the same committee I report back the bill (S. 47) to secure the efficiency of the National Guard of the different States, and ask that the committee be discharged from its further consideration. A bill on the subject has passed the Senate.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The bill will be indefinitely postponed.

Mr. GALLINGER, from the Committee on Pensions, to whom were referred the following bills, reported them severally without amendment, and submitted reports thereon:

A bill (H. R. 9306) granting a pension to Amanda Woodcock;

A bill (H. R. 1505) granting a pension to Mrs. Sarah A. Aspold;

and

A bill (H. R. 4744) to increase the pension of Adam Dennis. Mr. GALLINGER, from the Committee on Pensions, to whom

Mr. GALLINGER, from the Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (S. 3472) granting a pension to Laura Barnes, reported it with an amendment, and submitted a report thereon. Mr. NELSON, from the Committee on Commerce, to whom was referred the bill (S. 3320) to provide a life-saving station at or near Point Arena, Mendocino County, in the State of California, reported it without amendment, and submitted a report thereon. Mr. McBRIDE, from the Committee on Commerce, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 7781) to provide an American register for the harge Black Diamond, reported it without amendment.

for the barge Black Diamond, reported it without amendment.

He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred the bill (S. 2487) providing for the establishment of a quarantine station at or near Astoria, Oreg., reported it with amendments, and submitted a report thereon.

Mr. FRYE, from the Committee on Commerce, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 8190) to provide an American register for the bark Ceres, reported it without amendment.

COURTS IN MISSOURI.

Mr. HOAR. From the Committee on the Judiciary I report back favorably the bill (H. R. 9901) to detach the county of Audrain from the western district of Missouri and to attach the same to the eastern district of said State of Missouri. The bill consists of only a few lines, and both Senators from Missouri have investigated the matter and desire its passage. I ask that it be put on its passage. I call the attention of the Senator from Missouri [Mr. Cockrell] to the bill.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The bill will be read for informa-

The Secretary read the bill; and, by unanimous consent, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to its considera-

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

INDIAN TRAINING SCHOOL AT FORT BIDWELL,

Mr. PETTIGREW. I am directed by the Committee on Indian Affairs, to whom was referred the joint resolution (H. Res. 152) to authorize the Secretary of the Interior to use Fort Bidwell for an Indian training school, to report it without amendment.

Mr. PERKINS. I ask that the joint resolution just reported from the Committee on Indian Affairs be now considered. It will take but a moment.

By unanimous consent, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the joint resolution.

The joint resolution was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

the relief of John A. Lynch, which is a Senate bill that was referred to us and reported favorably. In the meantime a House bill comes over and is in our hands upon the same subject. There is a difference in the sums of money given in each case, but the claimants desire that we shall drop the Senate bill and concur with the House in the passage of the House bill. I report back the bill (H. R. 3075) for the relief of John A. Lynch, and ask that it be taken up for consideration.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill. It proposes to pay John A. Lynch $1,666.49, in full and complete satisfaction for services rendered and expenses incurred and defrayed by him to and for the United States at Cincinnati, Ohio, in 1861 and 1862.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

EASTERN NEBRASKA AND GULF RAILWAY.

Mr. ALLEN. I am directed by the Committee on Indian Affairs, to whom was referred the bill (S. 3555) to amend an act entitled "An act granting to the Eastern Nebraska and Gulf Railway Company right of way through the Omaha and Winnebago Indian reservations, in the State of Nebraska," by extending the time for the construction of said railway, to report it favorably without amendment, and as the bill is a mere formal matter I should like unanimous consent to put it on its passage now.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill. It proposes to extend the time for a period of four years from the 27th day of June, 1897.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

BILLS INTRODUCED.

Mr. McMILLAN introduced a bill (S. 8570) for the incorporation of an association for the mutual protection and benefit of Government employees; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

Mr. BAKER introduced a bill (S. 3571) for the relief of Peter Heck, alias Louis Heck; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Mr. LODGE introduced a bill (S. 3572) for the improvement of the United States Naval Hospital at Chelsea, Mass.; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

Mr. CULLOM introduced a bill (S. 3573) for the relief of John W. Arnold; which was read twice by its title, and, with the accompanying paper, referred to the Committee on Claims.

Mr. ALLISON introduced a bill (S. 3574) to increase the pension of Louise A. Rice; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. GALLINGER introduced a bill (S. 3575) to regulate the sale of poisons in the District of Columbia; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

Mr. GALLINGER. The bill just introduced is one of vast importance, as I regard it, to the people of this District. I have here a memorial or statement prepared by a committee of physicians, which is approved by the Medical Society of the District of Columbia, calling attention to the importance of this proposed legislation. I move that the paper be referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia, and that it be printed as a document for the use of the Senate.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. CHANDLER introduced a bill (S. 3576) granting a pension to Cara H. Wilson; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Pensions.

He also introduced a bill (S. 3577) providing for the use by the United States of devices invented by its naval officers while engaged in its service and covered by letters patent; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

Mr. HAWLEY introduced a bill (S. 3578) for the relief of William H. Quinn; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Claims.

Mr. LODGE introduced a joint resolution (S. R. 193) authorizing and directing the Commissioner of Labor to institute an invession tigation for the purpose of ascertaining the effect of foreign immigration upon the social, moral, economic, and industrial conditions of the country; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Immigration.

AMENDMENTS TO APPROPRIATION BILLS.

Mr. LODGE submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the general deficiency appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be

Mr. CHANDLER. I submit an amendment intended to be proposed by me to the naval appropriation bill, which I ask may be read. I invite the attention of the Senator from Maine [Mr. HALE] to the proposed amendment.

The amendment was read, as follows:

BY MR. CHANDLER.

Amendment intended to be proposed to the naval appropriation bill:

"The Secretary of the Navy is hereby directed to consider the subject of the erection in the city of Washington of a suitable statue of David D. Porter, lately the Admiral of the United States, and to report at the next session of Congress concerning the general design, reasonable cost, and appropriate location of such a statue."

Mr. CHANDLER. I move that the proposed amendment be referred to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

The motion was agreed to.

UNIFORM SYSTEM OF BANKRUPTCY.

Mr. HOAR. I desire to submit an amendment to the bill (S. 742) to establish a uniform system of bankruptcy. The amendment is the bankruptcy bill which passed the other House, with certain proposed amendments printed in an appendix, and with an index and some explanatory notes, which will be found highly convenient for the Senate when the matter comes up. I ask that tibe printed and placed upon the Calendar with no recommenda-tion one way or the other.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. In the absence of objection, the amendment will be placed on the Calendar.

PRINTING OF BULLETIN ON APICULTURE.

Mr. PERKINS. I submit a concurrent resolution and ask unanimous consent for its consideration at this time.

The concurrent resolution was read, as follows:

Resolved by the Senate (the House of Representatives concurring), That there be printed 20,000 extra copies of Bulletin No. 1, New Series, Division of Entomology, Department of Agriculture, entitled The Honey Bee: A Manual of Instruction in Apiculture, by Frank Benton, M. D., of which number 6,000 copies shall be for the use of the Senate, 12,000 copies for the use of the House of Representatives, and 2,000 copies for distribution by the Secretary of Agriculture.

Mr. GORMAN. I suggest to the Senator from California that under the rule and the law the resolution must go to the Committee on Printing.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Under the rule the concurrent resolution will be referred to the Committee on Printing.

Mr. PERKINS. I will state to the Senator from Maryland that a similar resolution was passed yesterday without reference to any committee. However, I am perfectly willing to let it be referred.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair will state to the Senator from California that he is advised the resolution he indicates was reported from the Committee on Printing.

Mr. PERKINS. Very well.

CHICAGO RAILWAY STRIKE OF 1894.

Mr. DAVIS. I submit a resolution and ask for its present consideration.

The resolution was read, as follows:

The resolution was read, as follows:

Resolved, That the Attorney-General be, and he is hereby, directed to transmit to the Senate full copies of all telegraphic and other correspondence which may have passed between him or his office and any of the officers, agents, or attorneys of the Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific Railway Company, the Illinois Central Railway Company, the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul Railway Company, the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul Railway Company, and any and all other railways entering into Chicago that were in any manner engaged in or affected by the industrial troubles in the city of Chicago, Ill., in the year 1894, as well as all telegraphic and other correspondence with the United States district attorney at the city of Chicago, and any and all special attorneys retained or taking any part in the litigation arising out of said troubles, between the 1st day of June, 1894, and the present date.

Mr. HALE. I should like to have that go over a day for the

Mr. HALE. I should like to have that go over a day, for the reason that the Senate yesterday on my motion passed a House concurrent resolution that I think covers the same subject-matter. Has the Senator from Minnesota examined the House resolution which was adopted yesterday?

Mr. DAVIS. I have not. Let the resolution go over.

Mr. HALE. Let it go over, and the Senator and I will examine that resolution. I think it covers all the ground.

Mr. DAVIS. Very well.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The resolution will go over, under the rule.

Mr. DAVIS subsequently said: I ask leave to withdraw the resolution just introduced by me. I think the resolution passed yesterday covers the entire question.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. In the absence of objection, leave will be granted to withdraw the resolution.

PRESIDENTIAL APPROVALS.

A message from the President of the United States, by Mr. O. L. PRUDEN, one of his secretaries, announced that the President had on the 18th instant approved and signed the act (S. 1646) providing for certain requirements for vessels propelled by gas, fluid, naphtha, or electric motors.

The message also announced that the President of the United States had on the 20th instant approved and signed the following

An act (S. 1448) to withdraw from the Supreme Court jurisdiction of criminal cases not capital, and confer the same on the circuit courts of appeals;

An act (S. 3050) to validate the appointments, acts, and services of certain deputy United States marshals in the Indian Territory,

and for other purposes;
An act (S. 206) to provide an American register for the steamer

Kahului:

An act (S. 1424) to amend an act entitled "An act to amend section 4178, Revised Statutes, in relation to the marking of vessels' names at bow and stern, and also to provide for marking the draft," approved February 21, 1891;

An act (S. 1726) to approve and ratify the construction of a bridge across the Red River, between the States of Arkansas and Texas, at a point above the town of Fulton, in Arkansas, on said river, built by the Texarkana Northern Railway Company, but now owned and operated by the Texarkana and Fort Smith Railway Company, and to authorize the latter company to maintain said bridge over said waterway, subject to certain stipulations

An act (S. 347) to remove the charge of desertion and grant an honorable discharge to Helmuth F. Sæckel; and An act (S. 1075) for the relief of the heirs of D. Fulford.

BILL BECOME A LAW.

The message further announced that the bill (S. 2989) to increase the pension of Caroline S. Baker, having been presented to the President on the 7th instant, and not having been returned by him to the House of Congress in which it originated within the ten days prescribed by the Constitution, it has become a law without his approval.

ADELAIDE MORRIS.

The VICE-PRESIDENT laid before the Senate the amendments of the House of Representatives to the bill (S. 757) granting an increase of pension to Adelaide Morris.

The amendments were, in line 8, before the word "dollars," to strike out "fifty" and insert "twenty-five," and, in line 9, before the word "dollars," to strike out "fifty" and insert "twenty-five."

Mr. GALLINGER. In connection with this bill I desire to

Mr. GALLINGER. In connection with this bill I desire to make a statement occupying a single moment. I think it is proper that I should call attention to the extraordinary legislation which the other branch of Congress is enacting. This bill is one of perhaps ten others that have been sent to the other House increasing the pensions of widows of soldiers, and the House amends them by reducing the amount to precisely the amount that the beneficiaries are now drawing under the general law. It would be better legislation, it strikes me, if the bills were rejected outright, and not to put us to the trouble of appointing conference committees on bills of this nature.

I move that the Senate nonconcur in the amendments made by the House of Representatives and request a conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses.

agreeing votes of the two Houses.

The motion was agreed to.

By unanimous consent, the Vice-President was authorized to appoint the conferees on the part of the Senate; and Mr. Gallinger, Mr. Roach, and Mr. Baker were appointed.

MARY W. KEEFE.

The VICE-PRESIDENT laid before the Senate the amendment of the House of Representatives to the bill (S. 905) granting a pension to Mary W. Keefe.

The amendment was, in line 8, before the word "dollars," to strike out "thirty" and insert "twenty."

Mr. GALLINGER. This is a bill of precisely the same nature, the amount being reduced to the amount the beneficiary is now drawing. I move that the Senate nonconcur in the amendment and request a conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses.

The motion was agreed to.

By unanimous consent, the Vice-President was authorized to appoint the conferees on the part of the Senate; and Mr. Cannon, Mr. Peffer, and Mr. Pritchard were appointed.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. W. J. Browning, its Chief Clerk, announced that the House had agreed to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the oili (H. R. 9638) making appropriations for the support of the Army for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1898; further insists upon its disagreement to the amendments of the Senate numbered 3 and 4 to the bill; asks a further conference with the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and had appointed Mr. HULL, Mr. PARKER, and Mr. McCLELLAN managers at the conference on the pert of the House. the part of the House.

The message also announced that the House had passed the following bills; in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate:

A bill (H. R. 9734) to provide an American register for the bark E. C. Mowatt, of Philadelphia, Pa.; and

A bill (H. R. 9948) to amend subdivision 10 of section 2238, and to repeal subdivision 12 of section 2238 of the Revised Statutes of the United States.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED.

The message also announced that the Speaker of the House had signed the following enrolled bills; and they were thereupon signed by the Vice-President:

A bill (S. 319) for the relief of telegraph operators who served in the war of the rebellion;

A bill (S. 1690) granting a pension to Richard Brookins;
A bill (S. 3071) to authorize the construction of a bridge over the Monongahela River from the borough of Braddock to the township of Mifflin, Pa.;
A bill (H. R. 596) for the relief of Ellis H. Roberts;
A bill (H. R. 4199) to correct the military record of Edward H.
Munson, late a private in Company H, Thirty-second New York Regiment Infantry;
A bill (H. R. 6883) to incorporate the Convention of American

Instructors of the Deaf; and
A bill (H. R. 8413) to confirm certain cash entries of public

TERM OF POSTMASTERS.

Mr. HILL. Mr. President—
Mr. COCKRELL. Is the morning business through?
The VICE-PRESIDENT. If there are no further concurrent or other resolutions, the morning business is concluded. The Senator from New York has addressed the Chair.
Mr. HILL. I was going to ask the Senate to take up a bill. If it leads to any debate at all, I will not press it. It is a bill which, if it is to pass at all and be of any value, of course should pass the Senate immediately, in order that it may go to the other House.
I ask the unanimous consent of the Senate to proceed to the consideration of the bill (S. 3514) to regulate the term of office of postmasters, reported from the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads unanimously.

Post-Roads unanimously. The VICE-PRESIDENT. The bill will be read for information. The Secretary read the bill, which had been reported from the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads with amendments.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill? The Chair hears none, and the bill is before the Senate as in Committee of the Whole. The first amendment reported by the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads will be stated.

The Secretary. After the word "his," in line 10, section 1, strike out "assumption of the discharge of the duties of his office, a record of which shall be kept in the office of the Postmaster-General" and insert "commission. If he shall be appointed during the recess of the Senate and be subsequently confirmed, his term shall commence from the date of his recess commission;" so as to read:

That the term of office of all postmasters hereafter appointed shall be four years, subject to the power of removal or suspension according to law. That in case of a vacancy occurring in the office of a postmaster, occasioned by death, removal, resignation, or otherwise, the same shall be filled by appointment for the remaining unexpired term.

That the term of office of a postmaster shall be deemed to commence from the date of his commission. If he shall be appointed during the recess of the Senate and be subsequently confirmed, his term shall commence from the date of his recess commission.

Mr. HOAR. Does that come from a committee?
The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from New York asked unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill. It was reported by the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the committee which has been read.

which has been read.

Mr. SHERMAN. I think we ought to have at least an opportunity to read the bill. When was it reported?

Mr. HILL. The bill was reported on Monday last. It has been on the files. It was unanimously reported from the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads, and seems to meet with general satisfaction. I suggest to the Senator that if it is not considered as a law it ought to be present on the control of the senator of become a law, it ought to be passed now, in order that it may go become a law, it ought to be passed now, in order that it may go to the other House.

Mr. SHERMAN. I understand that it makes peremptory the removal of every postmaster at the end of four years. If so, I am entirely opposed to it.

Mr. HILL. No, sir; it does not.

Mr. SHERMAN. I think we ought to have an opportunity to look at it. I know only from a casual reading what it proposes.

Mr. HILL. The bill simply fixes the term of the office at four years, and there is a general statute which provides that postmasters and certain other officials shall hold their offices until their successors are appointed, as the acting chairman of the com-their successors are appointed, as the acting chairman of the committee well knows.

Mr. SHERMAN. If this bill should become a law, it would make a fixed term, and I think unquestionably would repeal the existing law.

Mr. HILL. That part of the bill is precisely the language used in regard to officers who are appointed on the confirmation of the enate. It simply uses the same language.

Mr. SHERMAN. I think the bill should be allowed to go over until to-morrow. I may have no objection to it, but I should like

My object was simply to facilitate and aid the Post-Mr. HILL. Office Committee in a large number of very troublesome cases.

Mr. MILLS. Was the bill reported unanimously by the com-

Mr. HILL. Yes, sir; it was reported unanimously.
Mr. CHANDLER. I hope the Senate will examine this bill before the Senator from New York moves to take it up to-morrow. before the Senator from New York moves to take it up to-morrow. It was reported unanimously by the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads, was carefully scrutinized by Senators of both politics and all politics, and really no objection seemed to be suggested to it. It simply provides that the terms of all postmasters shall be understood to be for four years, subject, of course, to the power of removal, which necessarily inheres in the Executive.

There is another provision drawn with care by the Senator from New York—

Mr. HALE. May I ask the Senator whether that provision making a four-year term is intended to apply to all the small postmasters throughout the country?

New York—

It is intended to apply to the whole of them.

Mr. CHANDLER. It is intended to apply to the whole of them, the fourth-class post-offices, all the post-offices of the other classes, and to the existing postmasters now holding their terms.

Mr. HALE. That clearly would open this field, which covers sixty or seventy thousand small post-offices, to a scramble for new appointments whenever the four-year term expires. Now, many hundreds and thousands of these post-offices are filled by men who have occupied the places for years and years to the universal satisfaction of the people. I certainly should not be in favor of any change in law that opens a scramble every four years in these

Mr. CHANDLER. I call the Senator's attention to the fact that there is a universal scramble now. [Laughter.]

Mr. GALLINGER. Very universal.
Mr. CHANDLER. That is one of the troubles. Whenever politics change there is a scramble for the fourth-class post-offices, as the President of the Senate knows very well [laughter], and it is to prevent this very custom of a partisan inroad upon a new Administration, where there has been a change of politics, for the purpose of turning out of their offices all of the postmasters of the country, that it is proposed to make the term four years. The occupants of the offices may remain in after that term; there is no provision that they shall go out at the end of the term. It seems to me, if the Senator from Maine will study this subject and give to it his usual acumen and care, he will see that the evil he depicts will be less under this proposed law than it will be in March next if this bill does not pass.

Mr. HALE. I am afraid it will be more; but as the Senator from Ohio has objected to the consideration of the bill, I suppose it will

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The bill will go over.

ELECTRIC SUBWAYS IN THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

Mr. COCKRELL. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the joint resolution (S. R. 187) relating to the laying of electric subways in the District of Columbia.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the motion of the Senator from Missouri.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, resumed the consideration of the joint resolution.

Mr. HILL. I understood that the Senator from New Hamp-

Mr. HILL. I understood that the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. GALLINGER] desired to speak to-day, and I will ask him whether he does so intend?

Mr. GALLINGER. I will say, in answer to the interrogatory of the Senator from New York, that I should much rather vote on the joint resolution than to speak on it. If the Senate is ready for a vote, I will not take the valuable time of the Senate to make a single observation.

Mr. HILL. I am not ready for a vote at this particular time.
Mr. GALLINGER. If the Senator is not ready for a vote, I would suggest to him that I am not quite ready to speak, and will be glad to have him occupy the time this morning.

Mr. HILL. Mr. President, I asked the other day for some explanation of the extraordinary features of this joint resolution. I yielded the floor the day before yesterday in order that we might hear an explanation from the acting chairman of the subcommittee [Mr. Faulkner], who yesterday occupied the time of the Senate in the discussion of this joint resolution. I understood the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. Gallinger] to inform the Senate as well as myself that I would receive the benefit of his suggestions, and I anticipated that he would follow the distinguished Senator from West Virginia. He now manifests an anxiety to follow me, and it is utterly immaterial at what stage of the proceedings I shall further present my views.

Considerable light has been thrown upon this matter in the discussion which has been had, and it has not all been electric light. When the committee's report was presented, so far as the Senate knew, it was the unanimous report of the committee. so stated, but there was no dissent entered at the time. Since then I learned, and the Senate has learned, that the Senator from Georgia [Mr. Bacon] dissents from the report in fact, although not in form; the Senator from Vermont [Mr. Proctor] also dissents from this report in fact, and the Senator from Virginia [Mr. Martin], also a member of this committee, dissents from this report. Therefore we have the fact staring us in the face that three able and competent members of the Committee on the District of Columbia dissent entirely from the conclusions reached in the joint resolution. It therefore deserves most careful consideration before the Senate shall pass it. If the report was unanimous it might well be acted upon immediately, but being a divided report substantially, and three of the ablest members of the comso stated, but there was no dissent entered at the time. report substantially, and three of the ablest members of the committee—and I say that with all respect to the others—having refused their assent to the report, adds additional weight to the suggestions which have been made against the joint resolution.

Mr. President, I always like to listen to my friend the Senator from West Virginia, who speaks entertainingly and well. I regret that in some of these District of Columbia matters he is not so clear and precise as I should like to have him; but he chooses his own style and his own way, and has a right to do so. I regret that the questions I put to him yesterday were answered with a great deal of fullness of speech, but not with that directness that I think, in justice to himself, he ought to have given them. In the first place, it is difficult to understand from his argument precisely what question is here involved. He delineated the beauties of a great system that is to be perfected, not this month, not next month, but at some time in the future, "in the sweet by and by;" but he does not tell us when, and what is the precise necessity for this legislation, what is the existing law, and what is the remedy proposed to be applied.

The Senator said, I thought with some degree of regret and of complaint in his tone, that several years ago, when the question of electric lighting came up in the courts, the courts decided the of electric lighting came up in the courts, the courts decided the Potomac Company had no rights in the District of Columbia to lay down their pipes. He seemed to speak of Judge Bingham's decision as though it was possibly unfortunate. Mr. President, it was unfortunate in one view of the case, not but what the decision was right, but it was unfortunate because those who were responsible for legislation pertaining to this District had so hemmed in and hedged about the one electric light company that it was impossible for any other company legally to get an entrance into this District. I asked the simple question who was responsible for this unfortunate state of affairs—because from my standpoint it is unfortunate state of afrairs—because from my standpoint it is unfortunate, though from the Senator's standpoint it was possibly fortunate—and he simply said, in the way he brushes aside in his argument all difficulties whatever, "Why, it was an existing law." Who made the existing law? Congress. Who suggested it to Congress? The Committee on the District of Columbia or the Committee on Appropriations.

I start out with the proposition that we did find a few years ago that the legislation had been so manipulated—if I may use that expression, and if it is a harsh one I withdraw it—so arranged that no other company could possibly get into the District of Columbia without some affirmative legislation in its behalf. Of course, if without some affirmative legislation in its behalf. Of course, if the true theory is that a monopoly is beneficial, if the true theory is that the less competition in electric lighting in this city the better for the District, if it be the true theory that one company should have the exclusive right, then the situation was indeed pleasant to contemplate. That argument, however, carried to its legitimate conclusion, would vindicate every trust in the United States. That argument, carried to its legitimate conclusion, would vindicate every syndicate that ever was born. That argument, carried to its legitimate conclusion, would vindicate any monopoly, no matter how great, which applies to the internal affairs oppoly, no matter now great, which applies to the internal ariars of a great city.

Mr. President, somehow or other, by the course of public opinion or otherwise, some rights have been given the new electric-lighting company. I do not want to say that somebody has been holding back all the while; but take this legislation, fragmentary as it is, here and there a little privilege squeezed into a statute for the benefit of the new electric-lighting company, it is apparent that it has been like pulling teeth to get a particle of favorable legislation in behalf of the new company and against the existing monopoly. The legislation is fragmentary, uncertain in some of monopoly. The legislation is fragmentary, uncertain in some of its language, not a full and completed scheme, but legislation which requires the courts to spell out what is intended.

That was the situation a few years ago. Starting out upon the theory that a monopoly is beneficial to the people—when a man has worked himself up to that condition of thought—it does not require much to go further and to put into the statutes provisions which forbid competition. If legislators start out with that false and dangerous idea, of course we know what will be the result.

Until public opinion shall force them to permit competition, they will resist it, and naturally from the very best of motives on their part, if they are sincere in their views.

Some of the most respectable men in this nation are engaged in Some of the most respectable men in this nation are engaged in trusts—members in good standing in society, members of the church, high-toned men, men of large means, what is called the "better element," business men—all those you find ready advocates of trusts. Trusts, generally speaking, are nothing more nor less than monopolies. Trusts to a large extent are organized for the very purpose of preventing free competition, and, Mr. President, they always do it in the alleged interest of the people! What is the usual argument submitted year after year in behalf of trusts? The argument is that in the end they will benefit the people; in the end they will reduce prices; in the end they will save unnecessary expense in the management of business; that it is easier to run one great large monopoly of an electric-light company than it is to run two or three, and, therefore, in the end as easier to run one great targe monopoly of an electric-light company than it is to run two or three, and, therefore, in the end they will give the people cheaper light! That is the argument in behalf of all trusts; it is the stock argument of all the monopolies in the country, that in the end they are going to benefit the people, if the dear people will only have patience and wait. Somehow or other the people are an obstinate set, and refuse to wait. The people suspect the motives of men who form these combinations in their interest when they have not scaled for them. tions in their interest when they have not asked for them. people naturally look with some alarm upon these aggregations of capital which are seizing all sorts of business in the country, and so they think trusts ought not to exist; they think that these syndicates and trusts should be dealt with by vigorous legislation.

When you attempt to do that, there rises up some gentleman who says, "You are disturbing the business community; you are disturbing our streets if you want more than one lighting company."

How did my good friend from West Virginia answer the question, when I asked yesterday, substantially, whether it would be any great harm if there should be two electric-light companies in this city? Did he give me that careful and frank answer which I had a right to expect from his ability and generous nature? Oh, no. He said, "If two, why not a dozen?" That was the argument; and Senators are expected to sustain this joint resolution on that kind of argument, which, I may say, with all due respect, is evading the question, begging the question. Oh, no, Mr. President, that will not do. There is reason in all things, or there should be. A man has two ears; why should he not have a dozen? should be. A man has two ears; why should he not have a dozen? A man has two eyes; why should he not have a dozen? A man has one wife; why should he not have a dozen? To what does this argument lead? An ordinary man of limited means may afford perhaps to employ two hired girls; why should he not have a dozen hired girls? Oh, no; the argument is ridiculous, with all due respect to my friend from West Virginia. It is so absurd that it defeats itself.

it defeats itself.

Where is there a city in the United States which has 250,000 or 300,000 inhabitants which is afflicted with simply one electric-lighting company, or benefited by only one? My task would have been more difficult in this discussion if it had not been lightened by my friend from West Virginia, because he started out, and the committee started out, with the proposition that we ought to have a monopoly. "Monopoly is justifiable; therefore we should have but one company; we do not need any more." The Senator from West Virginia, wandering from the real subject, even went so far as to say that the committee had done their very best to keep out railroad companies; that they had gone as far as they could.

I should not enter upon that question, because it is not involved in this case. I spoke yesterday of some of my experience. I recollect when I was a young member of the legislature of New York I was then, as now, somewhat disposed to antagonize monopolies. A bill was introduced in the legislature to compel some large

A bill was introduced in the legislature to compel some large street railroad company in New York to extend its tracks along a certain street. I listened to the arguments of the mover of the bill, who spoke something like this: He said this old monopoly rebill, who spoke something like this: He said this old monopoly refused to build the railroad in that street, and the bill was to compel them to do it; the workingmen along this street want to use this railroad; the people would be greatly benefited by its construction, and therefore they should have it, but this company had announced that it would not do it. Mr. President, I made haste to cast my vote for that bill, of course, in order to compel the company to build their road on that street. It turned out, however, that the bill was really in the interest of the company; the bill was a blind; the bill was introduced by the member in behalf of the company, and was presented in that fashion simply to deceive green young legislators such as I then was. I have to deceive green young legislators such as I then was. I have since learned how these things are done.

The Senator said yesterday that he recollected one case where the committee had compelled the Metropolitan Railroad Company the committee had compelled the Metropolitan Railroad Company to extend their tracks on one street, in pursuance of the great, the magnificent policy they had adopted here, but when I asked if there was any other case he did not recall it, and my friend, who has a good memory, would have recalled it with avidity if there had been any other. He could not recollect any.

Therefore I start out with a different proposition from my friend. He starts out with the theory that a monopoly is beneficial; he starts out with the theory that we ought to exert all our power to keep this monopoly in power; he starts out with the proposition that no new electric-light company ought to be admitted into this city because they would tear up the streets. We are as far apart as the two poles upon this subject.

because they would tear up the streets. We are as far apart as the two poles upon this subject.

What is the next proposition involved here? My friend the Senator from West Virginia has been wrestling with this great subject of the subway and has given it great consideration, knowing all the while that the other company, the United States Electric Lighting Company, was in the city and gradually extending its wires under favored provisions put in appropriation bills and otherwise by Congress. While he has been engaged in assisting that company, and pursuing a course which, from his standpoint, was the proper course to take, he was absolutely in ignorance of the fact as to where the United States Electric Lighting Company was incorporated. He said so yesterday. Mr. President, I would have supposed that, having given this subject so much attention, having been all these years keeping the United States Electric Lighting Company in possession of this monopoly, the Senator would have known something about where it had been incorporated. I have been looking it up, and I find that it is a corporation of the State of West Virginia, and that while my friend from West Virginia has been all this time keeping this corporation of West Virginia in control of this monopoly, he did not even know that it hailed from the grand State of West Virginia. It is simply a coincidence—that is all. [Laughter.] It was appropriate that my friend should be put forward as a sort of champion, if I may use that expression, of the committee, and indirectly the champion of the other company.

Now that corporation is neither better nor worse because it was of the other company.

of the other company.

Now, that corporation is neither better nor worse because it was incorporated in West Virginia. Possibly there was a motive for it. I can conceive that the only motive, or perhaps one motive, for its incorporation in West Virginia was for the purpose of escaping taxation in the District of Columbia. But Colonel Britton said we ought to keep out outsiders. That was his argument which I read the other day—keep out the Potomac Company in order to keep in the United States Electric Lighting Company of Washington, D. C.—that is the corporate title—incorporated under the laws of the State of West Virginia.

There is another fact which I will state right here, which Colonel Britton does not even seem to know—that the Potomac Com-nel Britton does not even seem to know—that the Potomac Company is not an outsider. The Potomac Company is a corporation of the District, incorporated under the laws of the District, subject to taxation in the District, liable to be regulated by the laws of the to taxation in the District, hable to be regulated by the laws of the District in every single particular. How far Congress can regulate the lighting company of West Virginia is a different question. What will be claimed? The position has already been taken that Congress can not regulate the price which the United States Electric Lighting Company of Washington, D. C. (but in fact of West Virginia) shall charge to private consumers. Congress can regulate the price which the price of the Patomac Company, because it is a corporation. late the price of the Potomac Company, because it is a corporation of this city. It is a corporation of the District. It is subject to late the price of the Potomac Company, because it is a corporation of this city. It is a corporation of the District. It is subject to the laws of the District—subject to change and subject to amendment. But when it is sought to regulate the price as between private consumers and the United States Electric Lighting Company you are met with the proposition: "Ah, this is a foreign corporation; you can not regulate it; you can not touch it."

In the recent litigation which has been had the United States Electric Lighting Company alleged that it had, besides $150,000 worth of real estate, about $1,150,000 invested in its plant in the District. I read from the complaint, or the affidavits on which the injunction was granted originally. It appears by the answers of the Commissioners in the injunction suit that the United States Company returned its personal property under the oath of its secretary as $15,000, and instead of $1,150,000 on its personal property it pays taxes only on the $15,000, and pays not a dollar of taxation upon its stock. upon its stock.

This is the company to protect which we must resort to extraordinary legislation to give it a monopoly, to intrench it in the monopoly it has already, and to keep out of the District the little Potomac Company, which has honored the District by incorporat-

Potomac Company, which has honored the District by incorporating under its laws.

Need I tell the Senate that the general incorporation law of the District is sufficient to enable any electric-lighting company to organize under it? I stand here to protect the rights of the District and to protect the rights of the company which is in fact a home company—the Potomac Company, the company which was organized under the laws of the District, and not the outside company, which has taken "the livery of heaven to serve the devil in" by taking the title of the United States Electric Lighting Company of Washington, D. C., when in fact it should be the United States Electric Lighting Company of West Virginia. So much for the status of the parties. So much for the general situation which we are called upon to contemplate when we proceed to determine what should be done.

Yesterday my friend the Senator from Texas [Mr. Mills]

Yesterday my friend the Senator from Texas [Mr. MILLS] asked of the Senator from West Virginia [Mr. FAULKNER] what harm it could do to allow one or two companies to come in here